

The Torah

A Women's Commentary

Managing Editor Rabbi Hara E. Person
Consulting Editor in Bible Dr. Carol Meyers
Post-biblical Consulting Editor Dr. Judith R. Baskin
"Voices" Consulting Editor Rabbi Sue Levi Elwell, Ph.D.
Project Coordinator Barbara Z. Koppel

• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •

Editorial Board

| | | |
|------------------------------|-----------------------------|------------------------|
| Dr. Rachel Adler | Dr. Tikva Frymer-Kensky נ"ר | Cantor Sarah Sager |
| Dr. Judith R. Baskin | Rabbi Laura Geller | Rabbi Judith Schindler |
| Dr. Sherry Blumberg | Dr. Carol Meyers | Rabbi Ruth H. Sohn |
| Rabbi Sue Levi Elwell, Ph.D. | Dr. Carol Ochs | Dr. Ellen Umansky |
| | Dr. Judith Plaskow | |

• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •

Women of Reform Judaism

Rosanne M. Selfon, President Shelley Lindauer, Executive Director

Rabbi Tamara Cohn Eskenazi, Ph.D.
Editor

Rabbi Andrea L. Weiss, Ph.D.
Associate Editor

Women of Reform Judaism
The Federation of Temple Sisterhoods

New York • 2008

Copyright © 2008 by CCAR Press and Women of Reform Judaism

w w w . c c a r p r e s s . o r g

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted without express written permission from CCAR Press. This excludes brief quotations used only for the purpose of review. For permission to reprint, please contact CCAR Press at: CCAR Press, 355 Lexington Av, 18th Fl, New York, NY 10017; 212-972-3636 x241; info@ccarpress.org.

Translation of Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy
NJPS © 1962, 1985, 1999; CJPS © 2006. Used and adapted with permission from The Jewish Publication Society.

See also Voices Publication Credits, pp. 1319–26, which constitutes a continuation of this copyright page.

First edition published by URJ Press and Women of Reform Judaism 2008.
Reform Judaism Publishing edition 2016.

Reform Judaism Publishing is an imprint of CCAR Press.

Masoretic Hebrew Text Editor Rabbi David E. S. Stein (2005)

Translations:

Genesis Rabbi Chaim Stern ה"ר (1999)

Exodus–Deuteronomy Jewish Publication Society (1999)

Rabbi David E. S. Stein, revising translator (2005–06)

Dr. Carol Meyers, consulting editor

Dr. Adele Berlin, consulting editor

Design Rabbi David E. S. Stein

Artwork Rabbi Me'irah Iliinsky

Composition El Ot Pre Press & Computing, Ltd., Tel Aviv

Cover Design Michael Silber

Project Manager Rabbi David E. S. Stein

ISBN 978-0-88123-250-9 (alk. paper)

978-0-88123-283-7 (ebook)

Library of Congress Catalog Data can be found at <https://purl.org/ccar/wtc-2017>

Printed in China. This book is printed on acid-free paper.

6 7 8 9 10

Joanne B. Fried

IN MEMORY OF Winifred F. Fried,
Sylvia S. Fox, and Helen F. Strauss, my mother, grandmother,
and great-grandmother,
all of blessed memory.

In memory of those who came before us, and in honor of those still to come.

Let this be my legacy to them.

Alan Gover

IN GRATITUDE TO the Almighty,

B'reishit For the lives of my parents, Beatrice and Norman, and my parents-in-law, Frances and Philip and Gloria and Leonard.

Lech L'cha For the Outstretched Hand that guides me.

Vayeira For the life of my beloved wife, Ellen, of blessed memory.

Chayei Sarah For the life of my beloved wife, Janine.

V'zot Hab'rachah For the lives of my dear children, Maxwell and Mary, and Janine's, Greg, Amanda and Zac, and her grandchildren, Joshua and Julia.

• • • • • • • • • • • •

Sheila and Bill Lambert

IN MEMORY OF the women who were pioneers and in honor of the women of valor who are the future of the Jewish people.

Betty B. Golomb

In memory of my loving father, I. Mose Brenner, who, despite economic difficulties and being amidst a highly assimilated family, saw that I went to religious school and was confirmed. The joy of my early experience established a lifelong dedication to Jewish learning and a love of Torah.

Linda L. Henderson

In memory of my parents, Robert M. and Lucille R. Levin, whose legacy included tzedakah, study, and a responsibility for Tikkun Olam.

Judith and Martin Hertz

In loving tribute to Marjory Hess. It was her steadfast insistence that Jewish women use their life experiences as an interpretive lens when studying sacred Jewish texts that kindled the sparks that inspired us.

Carol and Alan LeBovidge

In honor of our children, Andrew, Larissa, Jason, and Jennifer, and our grandchildren, Audrey, Claire, Elise, Abigail, and Ethan.

Daryl Messinger, Rabbi Sarah Messinger, Alice Messinger, and Lisa Messinger

In honor of our parents and families.

Women of Reform Judaism of Temple Israel, Boston, Massachusetts

We honor and celebrate The Torah: A Women's Commentary. Thank you for bringing these blessed words into our synagogues, our homes, and our hearts.

The Women of Temple Israel Sisterhood, Minneapolis, Minnesota

In continued support of Women of Reform Judaism and in recognition of the value of women's role in Judaism.

Dolores Kosberg Wilkenfeld

In loving memory of my parents, Cy and Dorothy Kosberg, and my husband, J.H. "Buddy" Wilkenfeld. In honor of my children and grandchildren, Lewis, Serena, Melody, and Jesse Wilkenfeld.

Our Mother Rachel

Julie, Drew, Kevin, and Amy Alexander

In honor of my mother, Davna Brook.

Drs. Kenneth and Ofelia Averack

In honor of our dear children: Pamela, Peter, Kyle, and Brittany Averack.

Judy Bernstein Bunzl and Nick Bunzl

In honor of our daughters Alexandra Rachel and Natasha Hannah and all the very special teachers of Torah and Jewish life who have helped our family learn the meaning of leading a true Jewish life.

Patti and Louis Grossman

We honor and remember our parents, Barbara, Aaron, Morton, and Sylvia; our children, Joel, David, Jacob and Debra; our teachers, Rabbis Gittelsohn, Fields, Sonsino, Perlman, Markley and Lenke, who continually guide and inspire us.

Susan and William Hess

Lynn Magid Lazar and Dale Lazar

In honor of Bernice Friedland and Ethel Lazar.

Eleanor Rachel Schwartz

To honor the memory of my mother, Gertrude, an independent, compassionate, and faithful daughter of Zion; to honor her granddaughters, my nieces, Laura, Joanne, and Jane, and their daughters Carmit, Emania, Hannah, Sophie, and Molly.

Rodef Shalom Sisterhood, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

In honor of the women of Rodef Shalom Sisterhood—our past, our present, and our future.

Congregation Schaarai Zedek Sisterhood, Tampa, Florida

To those women of Congregation Schaarai Zedek who left us their legacy, and to those women whom we precede, we proudly share our love of Torah and dedicate this Commentary to them.

Women of Reform Judaism Temple Kol Emeth, Marietta, Georgia

In honor of our past, present, and future sisterhood members.

Women of Reform Judaism District 3

We honor all District 3 women and are proud to have inspired Cantor Sager at our 1992 Convention to initiate the creation of The Torah: A Women's Commentary. Generations can now celebrate the women of Torah.

Parashot

NOACH

Sigrid and Alan Belinkoff

In memory of Minna Silverglade

TOL'DOT

Helen L. Gold

In honor of Women of Reform Judaism

VAYISHLACH

Betty and Arthur Roswell

In memory of our mothers Hilda Blaustein and Florence Roswell

VAYIGASH

Judith O. Rosenkranz

In loving memory of Stanley W. Rosenkranz

VAY'CHI

*Temple Israel Sisterhood, Women of Reform Judaism
Memphis, Tennessee*

In honor of the women on whose shoulders we stand

SH'MOT

Franklin M. Fisher and Ellen Paradise Fisher

In honor of Abigail S. Fisher

VA-EIRA

The Lehman Family

Dedicated in honor of Brenda Lehman

B'SHALACH

Women of Reform Judaism Southeast District

In honor of the incredible women of the Southeast District

YITRO

Rosanne and David Seffon

To honor all those who shape our lives: past, present, and future

KI TISA

Diane and Howard Kaplan

In honor of our children and our grandchildren

Parashot

| | | |
|--------------|---|--|
| P'KUDEI | Members of Congregation Rodeph Sholom Sisterhood, New York, New York | In honor of our beloved Rabbi Lisa Grushcow |
| VAYIKRA | Women of Reform Judaism District 1 | In honor of the women of District 1 |
| K'DOSHIM | Joan and Peter Weidhorn | In honor of our Jewish future: our children and grandchildren |
| NASO | Linda Wimmer | In memory of my gentle and loving mother, Isabel Philip |
| B'HAALOT'CHA | Women of Reform Judaism Atlantic District | In honor of the consolidation of Districts 4 and 5. |
| PINCHAS | Shesley Lindauer | In honor of my children, Carly and Joshua |
| VA-ET'CHANAN | G. Leonard Teitelbaum | In honor of Bessie Teitelbaum; Dorothy Teitelbaum; Karen Teitelbaum Buckner |
| R'EIH | The Bergman Family— New York, London, and South Africa | In memory of Ruth Bergman, pioneer Reform Jewess in South Africa |
| SHOF'TIM | Sally B. Frank | In honor of and in memory of my parents, Dr. Herman I. Frank and Claire B. Frank |

Contents

Foreword • Rosanne M. Selfon xxv

Preface • Sarah Sager xxvii

Acknowledgments xxix

Introduction: About This Book • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi & Andrea L. Weiss xxxi

Women and Interpretation of the Torah • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi & Andrea L. Weiss xxxvi

Women in Ancient Israel—An Overview • Carol Meyers xli

Women and Post-biblical Commentary • Judith R. Baskin xl ix

Women and Contemporary Revelation • Ellen Umansky lvi

The Poetry of Torah and the Torah of Poetry • Sue Levi Elwell lx

GENESIS • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

I

בראשית • B'reishit 1:1–6:8

Creation and Transformation • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 3

Another View • Carol Meyers 27

Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 28

Contemporary Reflection • Rachel Adler 29

~~VOICES~~ 32

נוах • Noach 6:9–11:32

Beginning Again • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 35

Another View • Carol Meyers 53

Post-biblical Interpretations • Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein 53

Contemporary Reflection • Carol Ochs 55

~~VOICES~~ 57

לְךָ לְךָ • Lech L'cha 12:1–17:27

Covenantal Promise and Cultural Self-Definition • Susan Niditch 59

Another View • Amy-Jill Levine 78

Post-biblical Interpretations • Dvora E. Weisberg 78

Contemporary Reflection • Ruth H. Sohn 80

VOICES 82

וַיַּרְא • Vayeira 18:1–22:24

Between Laughter and Tears • Tammi J. Schneider 85

Another View • Esther Fuchs 105

Post-biblical Interpretations • Ruth H. Sohn 105

Contemporary Reflection • Judith Plaskow 107

VOICES 109

חַיִּ שָׂרָה • Chayei Sarah 23:1–25:18

From Sarah to Rebekah • Yairah Amit 111

Another View • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 127

Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 127

Contemporary Reflection • Maeera Shreiber 129

VOICES 131

תּוֹלְדָת • Tol'dot 25:19–28:9

Shaping Destiny: The Story of Rebekah • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi & Hara E. Person 133

Another View • Diane M. Sharon 150

Post-biblical Interpretations • Carol Bakhos 150

Contemporary Reflection • Valerie Lieber 152

VOICES 154

וַיֵּצֵא • Vayeitzei 28:10–32:3

The Journey Within • Rachel Havrellock 157

Another View • Tammi J. Schneider 176

Post-biblical Interpretations • Dvora E. Weisberg 176

Contemporary Reflection • Wendy Zierler 178

VOICES 180

וַיִּשְׁלַח • Vayishlach 32:4–36:43

From Jacob to Israel • Shawna Dolansky & Risa Levitt Kohn 183

Another View • Tammi J. Schneider 202

Post-biblical Interpretations • Gail Labovitz 202

Contemporary Reflection • Laura Geller 204

VOICES 206

וַיֵּשֶׁב • Vayeishev 37:1–40:23

Trials, Tribulations, and Changing Circumstances • Athalya Brenner 209

Another View • Susan Niditch 226

Post-biblical Interpretations • Carol Bakhos 226

Contemporary Reflection • Carol Selkin Wise 228

VOICES 230

מִקְצָץ • Mikeitz 41:1–44:17

When Dreams Come True • Naomi Steinberg 233

Another View • Yairah Amit 252

Post-biblical Interpretations • Deborah Green 252

Contemporary Reflection • Suzanne Singer 254

Another Contemporary Reflection • Judy Schindler 255

VOICES 257

וַיִּגְאַש • Vayigash 44:18–47:27

Reunion and Reconciliation of Joseph, Jacob, and the Brothers • Naomi Steinberg 259

Another View • Esther Fuchs 275

Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 275

Contemporary Reflection • Miriyam Glazer 277

VOICES 279

וַיַּחַזֵּי • Va-y'chi 47:28–50:26

Intimations of the Exodus: the Death of Jacob, the Birth of Israel • Adele Berlin 281

Another View • Elizabeth Bloch-Smith 297

Post-biblical Interpretations • Dvora E. Weisberg 297

Contemporary Reflection • Laura Geller 299

VOICES 301

EXODUS • Andrea L. Weiss

303

שמות • Sh'mot 1:1–6:1Giving Birth to a Nation • Adele Berlin 305Another View • Susan Niditch 324Post-biblical Interpretations • Tal Ilan 324Contemporary Reflection • Carole Balin 326

VOICES 328

וְאֶרְאָה • Va-eira 6:2–9:35Marvelous Signs and Destructive Wonders • Rachel Havrelock 331Another View • Naomi Steinberg 349Post-biblical Interpretations • Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein 349Contemporary Reflection • Sharon Koren 351

VOICES 353

בַּיִת • Bo 10:1–13:16Power, Plagues, Passover • Sharon R. Keller 355Another View • Naomi Steinberg 372Post-biblical Interpretations • Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein 372Contemporary Reflection • Suzanne Singer 374

VOICES 376

בְּשַׁלַּח • B'shalach 13:17–17:16Crossing the Sea and Crises in the Wilderness • Carol Meyers 379Another View • Rachel Havrelock 400Post-biblical Interpretations • Claudia Setzer 400Contemporary Reflection • Patricia Karlin-Neumann 402

VOICES 404

יתרו • Yitro 18:1–20:23The Birth of a Nation: Israel Becomes a Covenanted People • Elaine Goodfriend 407

- Another View • Diane M. Sharon 421
 Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 421
 Contemporary Reflection • Judith Plaskow 423
 VOICES 425

 משפטים • Mishpatim 21:1–24:18Rules for Life in a Covenant Community • Elaine Goodfriend 427

- Another View • Carol Meyers 445
 Post-biblical Interpretations • Susan Marks 445 Contemporary Reflection • Rachel Adler 447
 VOICES 449

 תרומה • T'rumah 25:1–27:19A Place for God: Instructions for Building the Tabernacle • Carol Meyers 451

- Another View • Elizabeth Bloch-Smith 467
 Post-biblical Interpretations • Ruth Gais 468 Contemporary Reflection • Denise L. Eger 469
 VOICES 471

 תצוה • T'tzaveh 27:20–30:10Further Instructions: Consecration of Priests and Tabernacle • Carol Meyers 473

- Another View • Hilary Lipka 489
 Post-biblical Interpretations • Laura Lieber 490 Contemporary Reflection • Lisa D. Grant 491
 VOICES 493

 כי תשא • Ki Tisa 30:11–34:35Tablets, Calf, and Covenant: Mediating the Relationship with God • Elsie R. Stern 495

- Another View • Carol Meyers 514
 Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 514
 Contemporary Reflection • Zoë Klein 516
 VOICES 518

ויקהל • Vayak'heil 35:1–38:20Making A Place For God: The Tabernacle's Components • Carol Meyers 521Another View • Elsie R. Stern 538Post-biblical Interpretations • Ruth H. Sohn 538Contemporary Reflection • Rachel Adler 539

VOICES 542

פקודי • P'kudei 38:21–40:38Completing and Consecrating the Tabernacle • Carol Meyers 545Another View • Lisbeth S. Fried 560Post-biblical Interpretations • Lisa J. Grushcow 560Contemporary Reflection • Noa Kushner 562

VOICES 564

LEVITICUS • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

567

ויקרא • Vayikra 1:1–5:26A Call to Approach God • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 569Another View • Carol Meyers 587Post-biblical Interpretations • Dvora E. Weisberg 587Contemporary Reflection • Janet Marder 589

VOICES 591

צָב • Tzav 6:1–8:36The Priestly Torah and the Priests' Ordination • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 593Another View • Hilary Lipka 608Post-biblical Interpretations • Rachel Anisfeld 608Contemporary Reflection • Nancy Fuchs Kreimer 610

VOICES 612

שְׁמִינִי • Sh'mini 9:1–11:47Purity and Danger in the Sanctuary and the Home • Lisbeth S. Fried 615Another View • Diane M. Sharon 630Post-biblical Interpretations • Carol Selkin Wise 630Contemporary Reflection • Blu Greenberg 632

VOICES 634

תְּזִרְעָה • Tazria 12:1–13:59Purity, Birth, and Illness • Elaine Goodfriend 637Another View • Beth Alpert Nakhai 650Post-biblical Interpretations • Charlotte Elisheva Fonrobert 650Contemporary Reflection • Pauline Bebe 652

VOICES 654

מֵצֶרֶע • M'tzora 14:1–15:33Restoring Ritual Purity • Elaine Goodfriend 657Another View • Rachel Havrelock 672Post-biblical Interpretations • Charlotte Elisheva Fonrobert 672Contemporary Reflection • Elyse Goldstein 674

VOICES 676

אַחֲרֵי מוֹת • Acharei Mot 16:1–18:30Boundaries of Rituals: The Sanctuary and the Body • Rachel Havrelock 679Another View • S. Tamar Kamionkowski 694Post-biblical Interpretations • Gail Labovitz 694Contemporary Reflection • Judith Plaskow 696

VOICES 698

קָדְשִׁים • K'doshim 19:1–20:27A Call to Holiness • S. Tamar Kamionkowski 701Another View • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 716Post-biblical Interpretations • Ruth H. Sohn 716Contemporary Reflection • Elyse Goldstein 718

VOICES 720

אמר • Emor 21:1–24:23Preserving the Holiness of Priests, Times, and Spaces • Hilary Lipka 723Another View • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 741Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith Hauptman 741Contemporary Reflection • Shulamit Reinharz 743

VOICES 745

במדבר • B'midbar 25:1–26:2Proclaiming and Protecting Liberty • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi & Jocelyn Hudson 747Another View • S. Tamar Kamionkowski 760Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith Z. Abrams 760Contemporary Reflection • Lori Lefkovitz 762

VOICES 764

בחקותי • B'chukotai 26:3–27:34Ensuring Obedience to God, and the Sanctuary's Welfare • Hilary Lipka 765Another View • Carol Meyers 780Post-biblical Interpretations • Charlotte Elisheva Fonrobert 780Contemporary Reflection • Sarah Sager 782

VOICES 784

NUMBERS • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

787

במדבר • B'midbar 1:1–4:20The Architecture of a Count and the Architecture of Account • Rachel Havrelock 789Another View • Beatrice Lawrence 808Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 809Contemporary Reflection • Rachel Stock Spilker 810

VOICES 812

אַשְׁר • Naso 4:21–7:89Suspicion and Sanctity • Amy Kalmanofsky 815Another View • Sharon Keller 836Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith Hauptman 836Contemporary Reflection • Lisa J. Grushcow 838

VOICES 840

בְּהָעֵלֶת • B'haalot'cha 8:1–12:16The Journey from Sinai Begins • Masha Turner 843Another View • Beth Alpert Nakhai 862Post-biblical Interpretations • Tal Ilan 862Contemporary Reflection • Patricia Karlin-Neumann 864

VOICES 866

שְׁלֹחַ לְךָ • Sh'lach L'cha 13:1–15:41Sending Scouts and Challenging Leaders • Nili Sacher Fox 869Another View • Rachel Havrelock 886Post-biblical Interpretations • Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein 886Contemporary Reflection • Josee Wolff 888

VOICES 890

קָרָחַ • Korach 16:1–18:32Leadership, Rebellions, and Punishments • Shawna Dolansky 893Another View • Amy Kalmanofsky 909Post-biblical Interpretations • Alyssa M. Gray 909Contemporary Reflection • Rachel Cowan 911

VOICES 913

חֻקַּת • Chukat 19:1–22:1Leadership and Loss in the Wilderness • Adriane Leveen 915Another View • Ora Horn Prouser 931Post-biblical Interpretations • Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein 931Contemporary Reflection • Carol Ochs 933

VOICES 935

• בְּלָק • Balak 22:2–25:9Dangerous Foreigners • Nili Sacher Fox 937Another View • Hilary Lipka 954Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 954Contemporary Reflection • Sue Levi Elwell 956

VOICES 958

• פִּינְחָס • Pinchas 25:10–30:1Legacy of Law, Leadership, and Land • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 961Another View • Tikva Frymer-Kensky 982Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 983Contemporary Reflection • Silvina Chemen 985

VOICES 987

• מִתּוֹת • Matot 30:2–32:42Vows and Vengeance • Elizabeth Goldstein 989Another View • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 1006Post-biblical Interpretations • Dvora E. Weisberg 1006Contemporary Reflection • Jacqueline Koch Ellenson 1008

VOICES 1010

• מַסְעֵי • Mas'ei 33:1–36:13The Journey's End • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi & Elizabeth Goldstein 1013Another View • Masha Turner 1030Post-biblical Interpretations • Dvora E. Weisberg 1030Contemporary Reflection • Lisa Edwards & Jill Berkson Zimmerman 1032

VOICES 1034

CONTENTS

DEUTERONOMY • Andrea L. Weiss

1037

דברים • D'varim 1:1–3:22

At the Threshold of Canaan • Elsie R. Stern 1039

Another View • Tammi J. Schneider 1056

Post-biblical Interpretations • Deborah Green 1056

Contemporary Reflection • Ellen Frankel 1058

VOICES 1060

וְאַתָּחַנֵּן • Va-et'chanan 3:23–7:11

The Call to Loyalty and Love • Ora Horn Prouser 1063

Another View • Amy Kalmanofsky 1082

Post-biblical Interpretations • Alyssa M. Gray 1083

Contemporary Reflection • Carol Ochs 1084

VOICES 1086

עֲקֵב • Eikev 7:12–11:25

Conditions for Life in the Land • Dalit Rom-Shiloni 1089

Another View • Lillian Klein Abensohn 1108

Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith Hauptman 1108

Contemporary Reflection • Malka Drucker 1110

VOICES 1112

רָאֵה • R'eih 11:26–16:17

Laws and Loyalty • Beth Alpert Nakhai 1115

Another View • Carol Meyers 1134

Post-biblical Interpretations • Charlotte Elisheva Fonrobert 1134

Contemporary Reflection • Ruth H. Sohn 1136

VOICES 1138

שפטים • Shof'tim 16:18–21:9

Law and Order • Adele Berlin 1141

Another View • Nili Wazana 1158Post-biblical Interpretations • Susan Marks 1158Contemporary Reflection • Beth Kissileff 1160

VOICES 1162

כִּי תֵצֵא • Ki Teitzei 21:10–25:19

Relationships and Society • Adele Berlin 1165

Another View • Diana Lipton 1185Post-biblical Interpretations • Dvora E. Weisberg 1185Contemporary Reflection • Judith Plaskow 1187

VOICES 1189

כִּי תָבוֹא • Ki Tavo 26:1–29:8

Entering the Land of Israel: Blessings and Curses • Adele Berlin 1191

Another View • Diana Lipton 1210Post-biblical Interpretations • Claudia Setzer 1210Contemporary Reflection • Alice Shalvi 1212

VOICES 1214

נְצִבִּים • Nitzavim 29:9–30:20Covenantal Choices • Dalit Rom-Shiloni 1217Another View • Elsie R. Stern 1228Post-biblical Interpretations • Gwynn Kessler 1228Contemporary Reflection • Dianne Cohler-Esses 1230

VOICES 1232

וַיֵּלֶךְ • Vayeilech 31:1–30The Oral and the Written: Words of Encouragement and Warning • Adriane Leveen 1235Another View • Talia Sutskover 1245Post-biblical Interpretations • Meira Kensky 1245Contemporary Reflection • Elaine Rose Glickman 1247

VOICES 1249

הָאָזִינוּ • Haazinu 32:1–52The Song of Moses: A Foretelling of Future Events • Andrea L. Weiss 1251Another View • Julie Galambush 1265Post-biblical Interpretations • Judith R. Baskin 1265Contemporary Reflection • Ellen M. Umansky 1267

VOICES 1269

וַזֹּאת הַבְרָכָה • V'zot Hab'rachah 33:1–34:12Moses' Last Words: A Blessing for Israel • Andrea L. Weiss 1271Another View • Tamara Cohn Eskenazi 1284Post-biblical Interpretations • Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein 1284Contemporary Reflection • Naamah Kelman 1286

VOICES 1288

Transliteration Guide 1293*Bibliography* 1295*Post-biblical Interpretations: About the Sources* 1301*About the Authors* 1303*About the Voices Contributors* 1315*Voices Publication Credits* 1319*Index of Voices Contributors* 1327*Index of Voices Titles* 1329*Index of Subjects and Cited Authors* 1333

Confidential -- for Sefaria conversion use only. May not be shared outside Sefaria.

Foreword

WOMEN OF REFORM JUDAISM (WRJ) is immensely proud to have nurtured the creation of The Torah: A Women's Commentary. This book began when one woman, Cantor Sarah Sager, challenged WRJ to produce a Torah commentary that would help women re-claim Torah by gathering together the scholarship and insights of women across the Jewish spectrum and around the world. When Cantor Sager served in 1992 as Scholar-in-Residence at the biennial convention of District 3 of the WRJ (then called NFTS, National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods), she planted a seed, claiming that women could create a Torah commentary that would incorporate women's experiences and women's history into the living memory of our people.

One year later, at the 1993 NFTS Biennial Assembly in San Francisco, Cantor Sager challenged the entire national delegate assembly to "imagine... women being permitted, for the first time, feeling able, feeling legitimate in their study of Torah... and imagine Sisterhood as the empowering agent for this transformation of what is into what should be."

The Board of Directors of Women of Reform Judaism responded enthusiastically to Cantor Sager's challenge. Then-president Judith Rosenkranz asked past-president Judith Hertz and board member Elaine Merians to chair a committee that would assess the feasibility of creating a women's Torah commentary. Dr. Sherry Blumberg and other scholars worked with various WRJ districts over the following years, leading women in Torah study and helping to spark an interest in this project. In the spring of 1995, WRJ convened a gathering in Elizabeth, New Jersey, that brought together WRJ lay leaders, scholars, and clergy to begin to envision what this sort of commentary might look like. Enthusiasm for the project was contagious. Less than one month later, WRJ Board member Davna Brook put forth a motion to the WRJ Board of Directors that WRJ should publish a Torah commentary authored by women. The motion passed unanimously amidst tears of joy and celebration.

From that point on, WRJ was committed to funding fully the publication of this commentary, which aimed to bring new insights to the Torah, hopefully engaging thousands of women and men in study. We recognized the extraordinary promise this project held, for it would be an opportunity to bring representations of women, in ancient Israel as well as in our modern world, into the public arena. It would offer a way into Torah study for women who previously felt excluded or marginalized. And it would provide an opportunity to highlight the outstanding work of Jewish women scholars and community leaders. In its distinguished 94-year history, WRJ has been involved in countless important projects; but this is certainly one of its most ambitious and most historically significant.

Many conversations and meetings followed in which the content and form of the commentary began to take shape. We explored many far-reaching questions: What would be the look and tone of the book? Who would be invited to participate? How would the commentary handle gender issues in Hebrew and English? How could we meet the high standards of scholarly integrity yet also succeed in engaging students just beginning Torah study? And, of primary importance, who could possibly gather together and lead the dynamic women who would make these critical decisions?

Understanding that leadership for the project held the key to its success, WRJ invited Dr. Tamara Cohn Eskenazi (Professor of Bible at HUC-JIR) to serve as Editor. Dr. Eskenazi, whose expertise, contacts, and academic standing are widely recognized and respected, possessed a clear vision of the book's promise; and she approached collaboration with WRJ with open arms. In an early meeting with WRJ leaders, Dr. Eskenazi commented, "Women of Reform Judaism brings a sophistication of judgment and commitment to learning.... Partnering together will allow us to put Torah back into the hands of the community, especially the women."

Dr. Eskenazi immediately went to work assembling an editorial board of leading women scholars and clergy: Dr. Rachel Adler, Dr. Judith Baskin, Dr. Sherry Blumberg, Dr. Tikva Frymer-Kensky ל"ג, Rabbi Sue Levi Elwell, Ph.D., Dr. Carol Meyers, Dr. Carol Ochs, Dr. Judith Plaskow, Cantor Sarah Sager, Rabbi Judith Schindler, Rabbi Ruth H. Sohn, Dr. Ellen Umansky, and Rabbi Andrea L. Weiss, Ph.D., who later took on the role of Associate Editor.

This volume is a testament to the generous spirit of women working together and supporting each other. Each step toward publishing the commentary was the result of determination and diligent teamwork on many different levels. Over the years, hundreds of women—lay leaders as well as Jewish professionals and scholars—collectively labored to birth The Torah: A Women's Commentary. Rabbi Emily Feigenson edited an early pilot edition entitled Beginning the Journey: Toward a Women's Commentary on Torah, which was released at the 1997 WRJ Assembly. A sample parashah, Parashat Pinchas, edited by Dr. Eskenazi, followed in 2003. Both of these early samples stimulated feedback from readers that was crucial in determining the final content and design of the book. Further refinement came in 2006 after nearly 15,000 women and men around the world took part in the opportunity to study from Parashat Chaye Sarah sample booklets.

Members of WRJ hosted commentary salons in order to raise the significant funds required to publish this book. A very special thank you is due to WRJ Board member Joanne Fried for her generous gift that initiated our successful fundraising campaign. To all the women and men whose solicitations and contributions enabled WRJ to publish The Torah: A Women's Commentary, I say a heartfelt thank you.

Special acknowledgment must be given to WRJ Honorary President Norma U. Levitt and Past Presidents Betty Benjamin, Constance Kreshtool, Dolores K. Wilkenfeld, Judith M. Hertz, Judith O. Rosenkranz, Judith Silverman, and Helene Waranch. Their commitment to the Commentary kept the project on the WRJ agenda.

Several former staff members deserve recognition for their important roles in the genesis of this project. These include Executive Director Emeritae Dr. Jane Evans ל"ג, Eleanor Schwartz, and Ellen Y. Rosenberg, under whose leadership the project began. Eve Roshevsky and Alison Lee were also instrumental in advancing the Commentary in its early days.

WRJ Executive Director Shelley Lindauer shepherded this project to its conclusion and deserves unlimited thanks. WRJ Manager of Development and Special Projects Lindsay Bellows kept accurate donor records. I leave it to the Acknowledgments (p. xxix) to formally recognize the contributions of the many individuals involved in the actual production of the present book.

May God bless us as we inaugurate a new era of Torah study.

ברוך אתה ייְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ מֶלֶךְ הָעוֹלָם,
שֶׁהַחֲנִינָה וְקִיְמָנוּ הַגִּיעָן לְזַמָּן הַזֶּה.

Praise to You, Eternal our God,

Sovereign of the universe, for giving us life, sustaining us, and enabling us to reach this season.

—Rosanne M. Selfon

President

Women of Reform Judaism

Preface

THE INVITATION CAME during the week of parashat Vayeira. At the time, I had been struggling with a d'var Torah I was preparing for the monthly board of trustees meeting at my synagogue. The central story of that portion is Akedat Yitzchak, the binding and near sacrifice of Isaac (Genesis 22:1–19). As I thought about the horrifying image of Abraham with arm uplifted against his son, I suddenly thought about Sarah. For the very first time, it occurred to me that Sarah was part of this story, that her feelings and her reactions mattered, that if she had been asked to sacrifice her child, the story might have ended right there. I realized that in her absence and her silence there was room for commentary; therefore, I accepted the invitation to be the Scholar-in-Residence for the 1992 District 3 National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods (NFTS; now Women of Reform Judaism) biennial convention as a way to further explore Sarah's experience.

As I began my research, I soon found that I was not the first to think about the silent women of our tradition. I discovered that there were women—and men—at work in diverse fields of study who were uncovering and recovering a far more complex understanding of the ancient world than the Torah narrative suggests. Their work was opening the door to restoring a sense of women's presence at the most important moments of our history and in our most sacred text. In various settings and circumstances, these individuals were beginning to add to and expand Torah.

I was awed and overwhelmed by the scholarship and creative work going on in all parts of the Jewish world. However, I realized that there was no organized, cohesive way in which to access this groundbreaking work. It occurred to me that the time had come to gather the best minds of our generation, to apply all that they had researched and discovered, all that they could now interpret and imagine, to create an egalitarian commentary to the Torah, a volume that would allow women, as well as men, to find themselves in the pages of the sacred text of our people.

I first issued the charge at the 1992 District 3 NFTS convention and repeated it at the NFTS National Biennial Assembly in San Francisco in 1993. The Commentary you now hold in your hands is WRJ's response to that challenge. What follows is an excerpt from my presentation, "Sarah's Hidden Voice: Recovering and Discovering Women's Spirituality":

"In every generation, our people have turned to the Torah to seek answers to their needs, their problems, their contemporary challenges. We are here today, in large measure, because the Torah has yielded meaning and truth to every generation that has sought its wisdom. We can do no less. It is our responsibility to make this book live for us. As men have done throughout the centuries, we must stretch the words, we must invest them with our needs and our imagination. We must struggle with the plain sense of stories, laws, and attitudes that exclude, de-value, and indict women. We must incorporate women's history and women's experience as part of the living memory of the Jewish people.

"The past fifteen years have seen an explosion of scholarship and creative work that will help us do this.... The work that feminist scholars are doing is changing our assumptions and conceptions of the world out of which Judaism emerged.... What is so important about this understanding is that it gives us a sense that there is much to uncover and recover in our history that speaks to us directly as women and restores to us a sense of our presence in and at the most important moments in our history. This insight also encourages us to proceed with this process of adding to and expanding Torah, of building upon the intimations that peek through the patriarchal gloss of the text, of prodding our communal memory and inventing what we have forgotten, of remembering and inventing together in order to recover the hidden half of Torah, reshape Jewish memory, and allow women to speak. [See Judith Plaskow, Standing Again at Sinai, 1990, p. 56, who quotes Monique Wittig's novel Les Guerillères: "You say you have lost all recollection of it, remember.... Make an effort to remember. Or, failing that, invent."] . . .

"I present this final charge to you not as a theoretical proposal of something women ideally ought to do and somehow will be accomplished 'out there' by women rabbis and scholars. I present this idea of re-claiming Torah as a very specific proposal to this great gathering of Jewish women, to this unique organization dedicated to the spiritual life and religious empowerment of Reform Jewish women. If we are really serious about women's spirituality, about re-claiming our history and our voices, about liberating the concepts of God and community, of integrating the Torah of our tradition into the Torah of our lives [a concept that I learned from Rabbi Laura Geller], then there is something very concrete that we can do. We can commission the creation of the first women's commentary to the Torah!"

Since my first encounter with Women of Reform Judaism in 1979 (when they were still NFTS), I have been awed by the power of this organization and the ability of the women who lead it. I am profoundly grateful to every member of WRJ for undertaking this project with courage and resolve, with an understanding of its potential to transform our tradition, with willingness to embrace a dream and make it a reality. Working together, women have funded, designed, researched, written, edited, and critiqued this unprecedented volume. We have done all of this in historic fashion: a woman's voice inspired a community of women to undertake this project in which women scholars, rabbis, cantors, teachers and poets bring their voices, their unique perspective to the ancient text of our overwhelmingly patriarchal tradition. This extraordinary volume, the result of the efforts of so many, is a veritable symphony of women's voices—beautiful, powerful, inspirational, transformative.

As we open these pages, with excitement and anticipation, we hear the sound of Sarah's laughter, triumphant: "My daughters have discovered me, my children have given me new life and new hope. I am reborn for a future as infinite and as radiant as the stars in the heavens of God's promise to Abraham and me, to Isaac and Rebecca, to Jacob, Rachel, and Leah, and to all of our descendants."

Kein y'hi ratzon—may this be God's desire!

—Sarah Sager

Acknowledgments

THE TORAH: A WOMEN'S COMMENTARY has been a labor of love for the many women associated with this project from its inception to publication. Those of us who are fortunate to have been a part of the process in any way know that we are indeed blessed to have had this opportunity. Special thanks must go to Rosanne Selfon, WRJ President, who has steadfastly and selflessly worked to ensure the funding for The Torah: A Women's Commentary. The dedication of all involved in this publication will leave a lasting impact on our daughters and granddaughters, sons and grandsons, and all future generations.

—Shelley Lindauer
Executive Director
Women of Reform Judaism

portions of the Commentary, and much else as well: Jean and Jay Abarbanel, Arlene and Eli Chernow, Marcia and Carl Josephy, Vicki and Arnie Kupetz, Peachy and Mark Levy, Judy and Paul Lippe, Esther Saritzky, and Ruth Temkin and Richard Schwartzberg. Finally, I thank my friend and colleague, the amazing Andrea Weiss, for being a peerless partner in this enterprise; Hara Person, for wisely, skillfully, and cheerfully navigating all of us; David Stein, for his devotion to the text and to its interpreters; Barbara Koppel, for going well beyond the call of duty; and the splendid Editorial Board for reading and re-reading (especially Carol Meyers, who helped with the large biblical entries). This remarkable team, together with the contributors to the Commentary, made this project a joyous and inspiring dialogue.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

DEDICATE THIS WORK with love to my children and grandchildren who are both the source and the reason for this Commentary: Willa Eskenazi, Kay Eskenazi, Joanne Cohn with Martin and Alex White; Naomi, Michael, Erika, and Nicole Eskenazi; Devon, David, Miranda, and Jeremy Cohn. I also dedicate the book with love and gratitude to the late David Eskenazi and Bill Whedbee, from whom I learned torah in its fullest sense; to the memory of Howie Cohn; and to my fabulous sister Sylvia Wildenstein and dear friends for their unfailing support (especially Rachel Adler, Annette Aronowicz, Eleanore Judd, Barbara Lehman, Marilyn Levy, Evelyn Shlensky, and Sheila Teitlebaum). Many thanks to my colleagues and students at Hebrew Union College, Los Angeles, who were involved (sometimes unknowingly) in this enterprise. Special thanks are extended also to my inspiring and cherished Havurah with whom I shared

MY EDITING OF THE COMMENTARY was enhanced by the feedback of many individuals who studied drafts of this material, in particular the members of the Beth David Torah study class (Susan Dein Bricklin, Dinah Engel, Lynne Glasser, Anita Lichtenberg, Francine Pearlman-Storch, Stacey Polan, Val Rossman, Roberta Ruvin, Lynn Scott, Nancy Streim) and my Fall 2006 elective at the Hebrew Union College–Jewish Institute of Religion in New York (Debra Bennet, Heather Borshof, Jesse Gallop, Shira Ginsburg, Alissa Goodkin, Zoe Jacobs, Marcy Kadin, Sharon Kunitz, Katie Oringel, Daniel Sikowitz, Jill Perlman, Jennifer Strauss-Klein). I thank all of my students and colleagues at HUC–JIR, New York, for the many ways they contributed to the completion of this volume. I am grateful to have worked with and learned from the many contributors and editors of this Commentary, especially my cherished teacher and mentor Tamara Eskenazi, as well as Carol Meyers, Hara Person, David Stein, and Barbara Koppel. Finally, I could not have devoted the time this project required without the help of three wonderful au pairs (Lisa Kornhauser, Ana Bakija, Einav Margalit) and the love and support of my husband, Alan Tauber, and our children, Rebecca and Ilan Tauber, to whom I dedicate this Commentary.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

—Andrea L. Weiss

TN ADDITION TO the individuals mentioned in the Preface and above, there are many others who are deserving of recognition and thanks. Significant early support for this project came from Rabbi Eric Yoffie and Rabbi Danny Freelander. Thanks also to the URJ Business Board, Mort Finkelstein, Jane Aronoff, Austin Beutel, Myrna Beyer, Allan Hirsh III, Bob Koppel, Anne Molloy, and Gary Weinberger, as well as URJ colleagues Rabbi Elliot Kleinman, Rabbi Sue Ann Wasserman, Emily Grotta, and Donny Cohen-Cutler. Thanks go to all the congregations who participated in the pilot Chayei Sarah Study Shabbat in November 2006. I am also indebted to my colleagues from the Women's Rabbinic Network who allowed us to study with them and provided helpful feedback at the 2007 WRN conference. Thanks also to Dr. Phil Miller at HUC-JIR in New York, Rabbi Debra Hachen, Rabbi Micky Boyden, Rabbi Bill Cutter, Jessica Greenbaum, Clare Kinberg, Chana Bloch, and Linda Zisquit.

My colleagues at the URJ Press all lent their considerable individual talents and enthusiasm to make this project a reality, including Debra Hirsch Corman, Ben Farber, Lea Barak, and Amy Nichols. In addition to the whole staff's overall support and dedication, special thanks to Victor Ney and Zack Kolstein who share my passion for this project and generously provided their financial and marketing acumen, Ron Ghatan for valiantly taking on various aspects of production, Chris Aguero for keeping on top of the printing and paper issues, Michael Silber for handling some design issues and creating a beautiful cover, and Rebecca Baer for tackling the Voices permissions and bio process started by Elizabeth Guterman. We were also helped by dedicated rabbinic interns: Jocee Hudson (Voices), Leah Berkowitz (Voices), Cari Bricklin (cross-references), Owen Gottlieb (About the Authors, and the Bibliography), and Judith Bacharach (About the Voices Contributors).

A special pleasure during the development of this book was the opportunity to study excerpts from it with the Women's Study Group of the Brooklyn Heights Synagogue, namely Jessica Brown, Susan Chadick, Fran Gottfried, Ida Guterman, Randi Jaffe, Karen Moshman, Robbin Slade, and Carol Ziegler. The encouragement of Rabbi Serge Lippe is also deeply appreciated.

Working on this book was a delight and a pleasure in no small part because of the opportunity to work closely with and learn from Tamara Eskenazi, Andrea Weiss, Sue Levi Elwell, Sherry Blumberg, Barbara Koppel, and David Stein, as well as the whole Editorial Board. I continue to be inspired by the vision and tenacity of Shelley Lindauer and Rosanne Selfon. Most of all, heartfelt thanks and love to Diane Person, Jenni Person, and Chaim Lieberperson, and especially to Yigal, Liya, and Yoni Rechtman for understanding and patience way beyond the call of duty.

—Hara E. Person

MY THANKS GO to Rabbi Me'irah Iliinsky, whose illustrations have given this book a special sparkle, and to Emily Law (proofreader), Leslie Rubin (associate copy editor, and indexer), and Joysa Winter (proofreader), as well as the first-rate team at El Ot (compositors).

—David E. S. Stein

Introduction: About This Book

THE BOOK OF PROVERBS, a collection of wisdom texts ascribed to King Solomon, instructs its audience: “Keep your father’s commandments, / And do not forsake your mother’s torah (teaching, wisdom)” (6:20; similarly 1:8). From the biblical period onward, women have played important roles in transmitting Jewish teachings, values, and practices; however, until recently, little of this wisdom has been preserved in written form. The Torah: A Women’s Commentary collects and showcases the teachings of Jewish women in the first comprehensive commentary on the Torah written entirely by women.

This Commentary examines the entirety of the Torah, yet it focuses most sharply on women in the Torah and on texts particularly relevant to women’s lives. In this volume, biblical scholars illustrate what the Torah probably meant in its own cultural milieu and literary context. Then, scholars of rabbinic Judaism, Jewish thought, and other academic disciplines, along with clergy and other Jewish professionals, augment the exegesis (interpretation) of the biblical text to show how the Torah continues to have new meanings for later generations.

Our Guiding Principles

From its inception, The Torah: A Women’s Commentary was envisioned as a contemporary Torah commentary written by Jewish women. Three words reflect our guiding principles: contemporary, Jewish, and women.

Contemporary: In this Commentary, distinguished women scholars, clergy, and poets illuminate the meanings of the Torah by using both traditional tools and innovative approaches. Our authors bring new insights and new questions to our sacred tradition, all the while placing their words within the ongoing stream of Jewish interpretation. Our scholars apply contemporary scholarly approaches—such as literary analysis, historical criticism, comparative linguistics, philology, archeology, anthropology, and sociology—to clarify and interpret the Torah, thus helping to show what the text meant to its own early audience and what it can teach us today. Particularly in the “Contemporary Reflection” and “Voices” sections, our contributors regularly address issues of concern in the 21st century and explore how this ancient text connects to our modern lives.

“Do not forsake your mother’s torah.”
—Proverbs 6:20

Jewish: Judaism can be seen as an ongoing dialogue between ever-changing circumstances and Jewish texts invested with enduring authority. This is especially true with respect to our most sacred text, the Torah. The Torah has always been central to the life of the Jewish people. It is embedded within a wide web of interpretations, written and oral, that provided guidance for how to understand it in new contexts. As the Rabbis of the Talmud wisely note, each generation produces its own interpreters (BT Avodah Zarah 5a). We have brought together interpreters for the 21st century, so that the voices of the entire Jewish people at last would be fully represented.

INTRODUCTION: ABOUT THIS BOOK

One of the many things that make this book a distinctly Jewish commentary is that it follows the centuries-old liturgical division of the Torah into 54 portions. Long before computers and the Internet, Jews were connected through a World Wide Web of sorts, based on the division of the Torah into weekly readings so that the complete Torah—Genesis through Deuteronomy—is read sequentially each year. To this day, Jews in Melbourne, Manhattan, or Marrakech share the same story by reading the same weekly Torah portion (parashah in Hebrew) in the synagogue. Jewish communities may differ as to which sections of the parashah they read or discuss, what they say about it, or how they apply the Torah to their lives, but this sacred text unites us.

One of the hallmarks of Jewish interpretation is that it embraces a range of approaches and viewpoints, preserving a diversity of voices. Our Commentary emulates the style of the Mikraot G'dolot (also called the Rabbinic Bible), a popular format for Jewish Bible commentary since the 16th century. In such a work, the text of the entire Torah is accompanied by a translation and by running commentaries from a variety of sages who interpreted the text for their own generation. In our Commentary, however, we have replaced the classic Aramaic translation with an English translation (described below), and the sages are all women.

Another feature that makes this a Jewish commentary is that our contributors represent the full spectrum of the Jewish community: in addition to Reform, we include Conservative, Orthodox, and Reconstructionist scholars as well as unaffiliated and secular ones. We invited clergy and academics from diverse streams of Jewish life so that the work can speak on behalf of klal Israel, “the entirety of the Jewish people.” Our writers span the globe, hailing from North America, South America, Europe, and Israel.

Women: The distinguishing feature of this commentary is that it is written entirely by women.

In the past, commentaries by learned men spoke on behalf of our people, even when they did not represent the insights of women. By providing commentary authored by women, we expect to represent the wider community, with qualified women interpreters who illuminate much that has been overlooked. In doing so, we are bringing women out of the shadows—the women in the text as well as the women in the Jewish world.

We deliberately sought to cast as wide a net as possible to show how women trained in various aspects of Bible and Jewish studies are thinking about the Torah on the basis of their professional training. Our commentators include academics, rabbis, cantors, educators, and poets, all of whom offer different lenses through which to view the biblical text. Their commentaries show how women’s experiences can shed light both on the text of the Torah and the torah of our lives.

This book could not have been written fifty or even twenty years ago. We are fortunate to have in the present generation, at last, hundreds of qualified women whose teaching and insights are having a profound influence on our evolving understanding of the Torah. While we bring together the work of one hundred writers (not including the Voices sections), we are fully aware of the many gifted women who are not included in this volume.

In the course of compiling and editing this Commentary, we were repeatedly asked why we include only women commentators. Even after much deliberation, we could not see a way of inviting male colleagues without having their voices be mere tokens. We concluded that this would not adequately represent men’s scholarship, and also it would detract from giving women a full representation. Although we invited only women contributors, we draw upon the work of all scholars—women and men, Jewish and non-Jewish—many of whom do not appear in these pages by name but who are indispensable to any study of the Torah.

INTRODUCTION: ABOUT THIS BOOK

Gender and the Translation of the Torah

One issue about which there was unanimous agreement from the start was the importance of including both the complete Hebrew text of the Torah and an English translation. But which translation would we use? The endeavor of translating the Bible into one's everyday language began centuries before the Common Era. Jewish communities of the time used and transmitted versions of the Torah in Greek (referred to as the Septuagint) and in Aramaic (referred to as Targum), which are still studied today. The best known early English translation of the Bible (the King James Version), which relied at times upon rabbinic commentaries, dates to the 17th century and in turn it has influenced a variety of Jewish translations. Today the most widely used translation in liberal circles is the New Jewish Publication Society (NJPS) version.

The art of translation has always been challenging. For us, gendered language posed yet an additional challenge. Although some Christian “gender sensitive” or “gender neutral” Bibles have been published since the mid-1980s, the only comparable Jewish translation first appeared in 2005, when the URJ Press published a revised edition of The Torah: A Modern Commentary (edited by W. Gunther Plaut). We have incorporated the 2006 version of that URJ translation, with some minor modifications, in The Torah: A Women’s Commentary.

The URJ translation combines the work of two translators. The late Rabbi Chaim Stern prepared a fresh translation of Genesis. Following his death in 2001, Rabbi David Stein stepped in as revising translator for Exodus through Deuteronomy, creating an updated and “gender-accurate” version of the NJPS translation.

The most innovative aspect of Stern’s translation is its gender-neutral treatment of language for God. Consider first the divine name composed of four Hebrew consonants (ה-ו-ה-ו-) and referred to as the tetragrammaton (see at Genesis 2:4 and Exodus

3:15). It has been typically translated since antiquity as forms of the word “Lord” (becoming “the LORD” in the King James Version and elsewhere, such as NJPS). In Jewish circles, God’s name has been read aloud in the synagogue using the substitution Adonai, the Hebrew word for “Lord” or “Lords”; some Jewish translations substitute the word “Hashem” (meaning “the Name”) instead. However, Stern rendered God’s name as “the Eternal,” a choice that dates back to Moses Mendelssohn’s 1783 translation of the Torah into German, and one that reflects a biblical understanding of this divine name as related to the Hebrew verb “to be.”

In the present translation, we decided not to translate God’s name at all, but to preserve it the way the Torah itself does, using the same four Hebrew letters. Every instance of the ineffable name thus poses a challenge; in this way, we encourage our readers to share in the struggle with how we address the Divine.

The Hebrew Bible typically uses masculine verb forms, adjectives, and pronouns when referring to God; and customarily such language is mechanically reproduced in English. Therefore, speaking about God in a gender-neutral way requires making adjustments not only to God’s name, but also to all related wording. In his translation, Stern resorted to a variety of techniques, such as recasting sentences to avoid the need for pronouns, replacing “He” with “[God]” and “His” with “[God’s],” and the like. Like German and French—but unlike English—Hebrew is a gender-inflected language. That is, all Hebrew nouns grammatically are either masculine or feminine; no neutral form exists. Even inanimate objects (like a chair or a table) are assigned a grammatical gender; however, there is no fixed correlation between the grammatical gender of a noun and its social gender (or biological reality). In the Bible, God is referred to in masculine language. This raises the question: Does this grammatically masculine language mean that the Torah depicts God as a male deity? While some scholars answer this question in the affirmative, others argue that the God of the Torah is implicitly beyond the biological categories that distinguish female and male; God is “beyond gender” (see at Deuteronomy 33:5).

Even if ancient Israelites imagined Israel’s God primarily as male, the Torah and the rest of the Hebrew Bible do enable readers to understand God in gender-inclusive terms. Support for thinking about God not only in masculine terms comes in part from the metaphors that depict Israel’s God. The biblical writers sometimes refer to God using male imagery: for example, as a warrior (see at Exodus 15:3), father (see at Deuteronomy 32:6), or king (see at Deuteronomy 33:5). But biblical texts also portray God with female imagery, as one who gives birth (see at Numbers 11:12; Deuteronomy 32:13, 18; Exodus 15:22–17:16; 15:26). In addition, they utilize animals and inanimate objects to characterize God as, for instance, an eagle (see at Exodus 19:4; Deuteronomy 32:11) or a rock (see at Deuteronomy 32:4)—none of which is to be taken literally. We find an even greater array of divine metaphors outside of the Torah, which suggests that the gender of a particular image does not correlate to the perceptions of Israel’s God.

Different questions emerge when translating the Torah’s references to human beings. When a verse uses masculine language, is it exclusively addressing or speaking about men? When does that grammatical form refer to women and men alike? Furthermore, when do Hebrew personal nouns like ish or adam, often rendered as “man” in older translations, refer specifically to men, or to both men and women?

As Stein set about adapting the NJPS translation of Exodus through Deuteronomy, he needed to interpret how certain grammatical forms and vocabulary were operating in each instance. Stein examined the text methodically in light of the most up-to-date conclusions about the way the Hebrew language operates in the Torah, and about the roles that women and men played in ancient Israel. He did so by drawing on published research as well as by conducting extensive correspondence with leading biblical scholars. Readers of The Torah: A Women’s Commentary will become more familiar with how the resulting translation functions when they read the Central Commentary, for numerous comments explain—and sometimes challenge—Stein’s impressive achievement in biblical translation and biblical scholarship.

The URJ calls its translation a “gender accurate” translation, not a “gender neutral” or “gender sensitive” version. In other words, it does not render all grammatically masculine language in gender-inclusive terms but instead attempts to convey what was meant in a given context. For example, it sometimes translates the word avot as “fathers” and sometimes as “ancestors,” depending whether that Hebrew noun functions inclusively or not in that particular passage (for instance, see at Deuteronomy 7:12). Likewise in regard to personal nouns such as ish: sometimes the translation construes this noun in a gender-inclusive sense (see at Exodus 21:7), but elsewhere as referring specifically to a man (see at Deuteronomy 8:5).

For more on the URJ’s Torah translation, see Stein, “Preface to the Revised Edition,” in The Torah: A Modern Commentary, 2005, p. xxv–xxx; and “Preface,” The Contemporary Torah, 2006, pp. v–xxxv.

The Five Components of the Commentary

In selecting the more than one hundred contributors for the Commentary, the Editorial Board resisted the temptation to let a single type of voice dominate the interpretation of the Torah. The editors, in turn, aimed to achieve consistency only insofar as it would facilitate readers’ use of the commentary; the particular ideas and styles remain those of the individual authors. On occasion, the editors have inserted a note in square brackets (like this: [—Ed.]) either to supplement the commentator’s work or to juxtapose a different opinion. We consider the act of preserving a multiplicity of voices not only a defining feature of the Jewish interpretive tradition, but also an explicit feminist endeavor.

INTRODUCTION: ABOUT THIS BOOK

The multi-vocal nature of this commentary is also evident from the five elements that address each Torah portion in turn:

Central Commentary. Written by a scholar of Bible, this section begins with an introduction and outline that provide an overview of the Torah portion. The commentary then accompanies the Hebrew text and the English translation, providing a running exegesis (explanation) of the parashah. Its main objective is to help readers understand the plain sense of the text in its own cultural context as well as in ours.

Another View. This short essay, also by a biblical scholar, focuses on a specific aspect of the parashah, in a way that supplements or challenges the Central Commentary.

Post-biblical Interpretations. In this section, a scholar of rabbinic literature discusses a selection of past responses to the Torah—typically, rabbinic teachings and classical commentaries. (See Women and Post-biblical Commentary, p. xl ix.)

Contemporary Reflection. In this section, an author—a scholar of contemporary Jewish thought and life, rabbi, cantor, or educator—reflects on the parashah and what meanings it holds for Jews today. (See Women and Contemporary Revelation, p. lvi.)

Voices. This section contains creative responses to the parashah, mainly in the form of poetry. (See The Poetry of Torah and the Torah of Poetry, p. lx.)

At times different parts of the Commentary treat similar topics, or they approach the same topic from divergent standpoints—just as various biblical verses interrelate. Therefore the commentary frequently includes cross-references that enable the reader to engage more deeply in the study of the Torah. By looking up a cross-reference, a reader can examine how related biblical passages compare and contrast, and explore texts in other parts of the Bible. The reader can also trace the evidence that leads an interpreter to draw a certain conclusion, and weigh the author’s opinion against divergent views elsewhere in the book. When the notation “see” precedes a biblical citation, it points to a passage in the text itself, whereas the notation “see at” refers to the commentary on that cited passage.

Another convention in the commentary similarly reflects the many levels on which it treats the text: the occasional use of a vertical line (|) between sentences. This indicates the start of a new thought that is still based on the same lemma (the biblical passage being commented upon).

For more about this book, see its Web page online via www.urjbooksandmusic.com.

Space constraints required our contributors and editors to be highly selective. In general, the Commentary focuses on three aspects of the text: that which relates to women, that which is obscure to contemporary readers (at least at first glance), and that which remains particularly significant for Jews today. Inevitably this means that not everything that flows from the inexhaustible fountain of wisdom we call Torah is included in this Commentary. We trust that what we have included will guide new as well as seasoned readers of the Torah as they explore the sacred texts of our tradition.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi
Andrea L. Weiss

Women and Interpretation of the Torah

THE WORD torah, or “teaching,” can mean different things in different contexts. In Proverbs 6:20, which states “do not forsake your mother’s torah,” the term denotes human wisdom in general. Elsewhere in the Bible, the word refers to particular divine precepts (see Exodus 13:9), certain priestly instructions (see at Leviticus 6:2), or the core of the book of Deuteronomy (see at Deuteronomy 31:9).

While in the Bible the word torah (translated variously as “Teaching,” “Instruction,” “ritual,” or “Law”) refers to a number of different kinds of teachings, in time “the Torah” came to mean the books of Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy (in Hebrew: B'reishit, Sh'mot, Vayikra, B'midbar, and D'verim). Together, those five books constitute the first of the three parts of the Jewish Scriptures, or the Hebrew Bible, namely: Torah, Prophets, and Writings (or Torah, Nviim, and K'tuvim, which combine to produce an acronym that is pronounced Tanach). A common Jewish name for any published volume of the Torah is Chumash, which is related to the Hebrew word for “five.” The term “Pentateuch” (from the Greek word for “five”) is commonly used as well, especially in scholarly circles.

The word “Torah,” then, refers to the foundation of authoritative teachings in Judaism and the repository of God’s teachings for Israel. From antiquity, Jewish (and subsequently Christian) traditions typically considered the Torah—in the sense of the first five books of the Bible—to have been written by Moses and to represent a record of God’s words to Moses; hence the customary reference to “the Five Books of Moses.” However, this title is misleading, because nothing in the Torah claims that Moses wrote the entire collection. Genesis and Exodus mention no author; and although most of Leviticus and major parts of Exodus and Numbers purport to represent God’s words to Moses or Israel, only Deuteronomy claims to quote Moses extensively and states that he wrote those sections.

Some Rabbis noted early on that certain statements in the Torah could not have been written by Moses (such as the report about his death in Deuteronomy 34). Nevertheless, a widespread presumption that Moses wrote the whole Torah at God’s dictation prevailed until the modern era.

In the modern era, academic scholars began to challenge the view of the Torah as the unified work of Moses. The theory that became most widely accepted in scholarly circles, beginning in the 19th century, claims that the Torah is composed of four major sources that were combined gradually over many centuries. In general, this “Documentary Hypothesis” (associated with the German biblical scholar Julius Wellhausen) posits that the source labeled “J” (or “Yahwist,” marked by the prominence of God’s name, YHVH) was the earliest (10th or 9th century B.C.E.) and represented the interests and traditions of the kingdom of Judah. (Prior to that time traditions were transmitted orally.) Source “E” (or “Elohist,” distinguished by its preference for referring to God as Elohim) represented northern traditions, that is, the kingdom of Israel, from about a century later. Source “D” (or “Deuteronomist”) refers primarily to the book of Deuteronomy, a work that becomes influential in the 7th century B.C.E. Finally, the “P” (or “Priestly”) source represented the concerns of the priests from the period when Israel was exiled in Babylon or shortly after, in the post-exilic period of the 6th to 5th centuries B.C.E.

WOMEN AND INTERPRETATION OF THE TORAH

Proponents of the Documentary Hypothesis describe the particular literary characteristics and concerns of each source; and some have sought to identify the actual authors as well. Harold Bloom and David Rosenberg speculated that the author of J was in fact a woman living in King David's court (The Book of J, 1990), an idea that Richard Friedman first proposed in Who Wrote the Bible? (1987, p. 86). However, the speculation that J was a woman has not been widely accepted for a number of reasons. First, while the idea that women had a role in the composition of the Torah (or other parts of the Bible) remains theoretically possible, the very notion of a single individual author of J is no longer accepted. Second, Bloom's criteria for what he identifies as a woman's voice are highly flawed (even sexist). Third, as scholars in a variety of fields demonstrate, identifying the gender of an author even in a modern setting is extremely difficult; how much more so in an ancient setting when we have no supporting evidence! Therefore, most scholars question our ability to recover such precise information about the origins of the sources.

The Documentary Hypothesis maintains that the entire Torah as we know it only came into being in the 5th century B.C.E. with the work of Ezra the priest and scribe. Nehemiah 8 depicts the dramatic moment when Ezra reads the book of the Torah (sefer ha-torah) in Jerusalem in the presence of all the people, "men and women and all who could listen with understanding" (8:2). Some regard the enthusiastic affirmation of the Torah by the entire community at the time of Ezra as a "second Sinai." For many scholars, this moment represents the time that the Torah was finally complete.

Many aspects of the Documentary Hypothesis no longer represent scholarly consensus; others remain influential. Its enduring contribution is the claim that the Torah is the fruit of a long process and contains diverse sources, often shaped by responses to new crises. This conclusion continues to be important and often guides scholarly interpretation, but along lines that differ from the Documentary Hypothesis itself. Moreover, two of the sources, J and E, no longer seem to be widely recognized. References to P, the distinctive priestly traditions, remain useful insofar as such material has a coherent world view (as in Genesis 1) and often focuses on the sanctuary and its personnel, as well as on genealogies. But some scholars now distinguish between two types of priestly writings: one priestly school labeled "P" and another whose work is referred to as "H" (for the Holiness Code; see the introduction to Leviticus 19:1–37, p. 703).

Deuteronomy seems to have a separate history. For the purpose of this Commentary the discovery of the "book of the Torah," which scholars equate with Deuteronomy, is particularly relevant. According to II Kings 22:8–20 (also II Chronicles 34:14–30), a book of the torah (sefer ha-torah) is found in the Temple during the course of renovations (at about 622 B.C.E.). When the king hears the book's messages, he instructs his highest officials: "Go, inquire of מִנְאָת... concerning the words of this scroll that has been found" (II Kings 22:13). The commissioned leaders then go to the prophet Huldah, wife of Shallum, who is sitting at the Mishneh section in Jerusalem. (The so-called Huldah Gates at the Temple's southern wall excavation in today's Jerusalem are named after her, probably because of a tradition that placed her in this location.) Huldah responds to the delegation by confirming the authenticity of the book's messages. Her authority goes unchallenged. According to II Kings, her authentication of the book leads King Josiah to undertake major reforms. Since these reforms conform to Deuteronomy's laws and not other biblical texts, many scholars maintain that the "book of the torah" found and implemented is actually a version of Deuteronomy. References in Deuteronomy to a torah written by Moses further strengthen this conclusion. If so, then this major book of the Torah assumed a prominent place in Israel's sacred tradition because Huldah affirmed its reliability.

* * *

For most of its history, Jewish interpretation of sacred texts did not represent the knowledge and insights of women, for authoritative interpretation long remained the domain of men. (See "Women and Post-biblical Commentary," p. xlvi.) A notable change—a landmark, really—can be found with the work of the English writer Grace Aguilar (1816–1847). Prior to her death at age 31, she wrote and published essays, novels, and poetry. Her magisterial book on women in the Bible and the Talmud (576 pages) was published in 1845, preceding by fifty years the celebrated Woman's Bible of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, a work usually credited as the first feminist interpretation of the Bible. The full title of Aguilar's book amply describes her goals: The Women of Israel or Characters and Sketches from the Holy Scriptures and Jewish History Illustrative of the Past History, Present Duty, and Future Destiny of the Hebrew Females, as Based on the Word of God.

An English Jew of Converso/Spanish descent, Aguilar considered it her special task to encourage Jews, especially women, to go back to the Bible for sources of Jewish identity. She explicitly wanted to counter two troublesome issues: first, the view expressed in her time that "Christianity was the sole source of female excellence"; and second, the allegations that the Hebrew Bible shows how "the law of Moses sunk the Hebrew female to the lowest state of degradation." Although Aguilar's book is not technically a commentary, it examines all the major women in the Bible and also lingers on minor characters and obscure references to women. She hardly misses a note. For instance, she discusses the female workers of the Tabernacle (Exodus 38:8), Caleb's daughter Achsah (Joshua 15:16–19; Judges 1:10–15), and laws concerning wives, widows, and female servants.

Aguilar cites the story about the Israelite slave girl who directs the foreigner Naaman to the prophet Elisha (II Kings 5) to advocate the training of Jewish women of all classes. After all, she argues, even lower-class women, such as this Israelite servant, were obviously educated religiously in ancient

In the last forty years, Jewish women have become truly visible as biblical interpreters.

Israel! In her discussion of this episode as well as others, Aguilar's attention to issues of class, religion, and gender is impressive and comports well with insights that are rediscovered today.

Aguilar was probably not the first Jewish woman to engage in the study of the Bible in a publicly influential way. From the Middle Ages, there is evidence of women scribes who copied biblical manuscripts, and some interpreters have suggested that Rashi's daughters were important transmitters of his teachings. In addition, we know that in 1288, Paula Dei Mansi of Verona translated her father's Bible commentaries from Hebrew into Italian, adding her own explanations as well (see JPS Guide to Jewish Women, 2003, p. iii). But Aguilar is the first whose work is fully preserved and boldly made an impact.

In recent years, a book in Yiddish known as Tzenah U-r'enah (alternatively transliterated as Tsenerene, "Go Out and See") has been touted as the first "feminist" Bible. The title alludes to the charge to women to go out and see (Song of Songs 3:11), thus suggesting that the intended audience was female; moreover the interpretations focus heavily on women. The book is a retelling of biblical tales. However, although the book frequently highlights stories concerning women, it cannot be claimed as an early feminist work or a “women’s Bible.” It aims to transmit and popularize selected traditional rabbinic teachings, and its author-compiler-translator was Rabbi Yaakov son of Isaac Ashkenazi, not a woman interpreter. Still, first published in the 16th century, this book became the most popular written source of Bible stories for the next two centuries, and it brought female characters in the Bible to the attention of generations of women and men who did not have access to texts in Hebrew.

WOMEN AND INTERPRETATION OF THE TORAH

Also from the Middle Ages there is evidence that Jewishly educated women in some prominent, learned families led other women in prayer and taught them songs and biblical passages; some wrote commentaries that were circulated privately among the family members but for reasons of modesty were not published.

Only since the last third of the 20th century, however, have Jewish women become truly visible in both the academic arena of biblical scholarship and in specifically Jewish circles. One need mention only Nehama Leibowitz and Sara Japhet—two Israeli scholars of unrivaled international reputation—to realize the great contribution that Jewish women have begun to make to biblical studies. The late Nehama Leibowitz, widely acclaimed as one of the foremost Bible teachers in Israel, brought together classical rabbinic sources and traditional Jewish commentaries to help her students delve into Torah study (see her Studies in Bereshit–Devarim, 1976–1993). Sara Japhet’s impeccable biblical scholarship, especially her work on Chronicles and the Restoration Period, proved a milestone in the field of biblical studies, as recognized by the prestigious Israel Prize she was awarded in 2004. The impact of their work demonstrated the unquestionable quality and value of women’s contribution to biblical studies and thereby opened the door for subsequent to women scholars.

Neither Leibowitz nor Japhet identifies herself—or her approach—explicitly as feminist. Other scholars, such as the Israeli scholar Athalya Brenner, who edited 19 volumes of the Feminist Companion to the Bible (1993–2001), write as feminists but do not typically identify a specific Jewish agenda. Some, like the late Tikva Frymer-Kensky, explicitly combine both feminist and Jewish perspectives. The contributors to this Commentary reflect these different approaches and others as well.

Feminist scholars also vary in their perception of the Bible’s presentation of women and women’s interests. The first influential feminist study of the Bible in the late 20th century was “Depatriarchalizing in Biblical Interpretation” by the Protestant scholar Phyllis Trible (1973). Trible argues that key biblical texts do not promote patriarchal subordination of women but that later (mis)interpretations of them imposed such meanings on the Bible. She uses a literary approach that has since become widespread in biblical scholarship as a whole, influencing Jewish and feminist studies. The Jewish scholar Carol Meyers has employed a different approach to feminist scholarship, using her expertise in Bible and in archeology. Her groundbreaking work (which began in 1978 with “Roots of Restriction” and includes Discovering Eve: Israelite Woman in Context, 1988) incorporates social-scientific methodologies in order to uncover the roles and status of women in ancient Israel (see her introduction “Women in Ancient Israel—An Overview,” p. xli). Her research suggests that in many respects the Bible reflects a high regard for women. Indeed, some interpreters argue that the Bible should be lauded as a resource for feminism and for women in general. In contrast, others argue that the Bible is detrimental to women and is best disregarded or opposed as a resource for women. In between these two perspectives, one finds a spectrum of views that acknowledge some problems in the Bible when it comes to the depiction and treatment of women and offer an array of responses for addressing those problems. (For a good survey of such positions, see Alice Ogden Bellis, Helpmates, Harlots, and Heroes: Women's Stories in the Hebrew Bible, 1994.)

Interpreters of the Bible for whom this text carries defining authority, Jews and non-Jews alike, have developed a number of ways of responding to the seeming tension between feminist concerns and the Bible. In facing certain problematic passages, some interpreters hold the major messages of the Bible as key for determining the text's authority; that is, central teachings are given greater weight over peripheral ones. For example, the story of the Exodus illustrates that God opposes the oppression of Israelites. Given that the Exodus story is foundational to Israel's identity, those biblical teachings that conflict with the message of the Exodus by calling for the oppression of members of society are considered less authoritative. Thus, the command to love the resident alien because of the experience of slavery in Egypt (Leviticus 19:33–34) is used to challenge teachings elsewhere that disadvantage non-Israelites.

When confronting various troubling texts, some interpreters place the Bible in its own historical context and evaluate its perspectives in light of the ancient world to which the Bible responds. This approach thus distances those teachings from contemporary circumstances in which they may no longer seem to make sense. For instance, comparisons with other ancient Near Eastern legal collections provide perspective on the numerous laws about slavery in the Bible (see at Exodus 21:2–11). Likewise, evidence about surrogate motherhood in the ancient Near East helps the reader understand Sarah's attempt to have a child through her handmaid and her subsequent treatment of Hagar (see at Genesis 16:1–6).

Others use contemporary modern or postmodern values to prioritize women's experiences as a criterion to adjudicate between teachings that deserve allegiance and those that do not. Such an approach means that the interpreter refuses to grant authority to teachings that appear to degrade women or other persons. (See, for example, how Judith Plaskow responds to certain laws about sexuality and sanctity in her Contemporary Reflection on parashat Acharei Mot, p. 696.)

In reproducing the variety of Torah interpretations, past and present, we envision our readers joining the centuries-old dialogue through their own personal and communal study. We hope that The Torah: A Women's Commentary will inspire and invigorate a lifelong exploration that will go beyond these pages and will shape women and men in our communities well into the future. In this way, all of us will rightly pay tribute, at last, to the torah of our mothers and fathers.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi
Andrea L. Weiss

Women in Ancient Israel—An Overview

BECAUSE THE TORAH—the first five books of the Bible—is the center of Jewish liturgical life, our perception of Israelite women tends to be determined largely by what we read in the synagogue.* Yet women are mentioned throughout the Bible, and many passages in Prophets and Writings provide additional information about their lives. Still, the Bible alone is not a sufficient or adequate source for recovering the lives of Israelite women in the biblical period. For one thing, it deals more with national concerns and leaders than the lives of ordinary people; and even when addressing individuals, it focuses on the responsibilities and (mis)deeds of the male heads of the households in which most people lived. Men are thus mentioned far more often than are women. Moreover, much of the Bible originated in and reflects the urban setting of Jerusalem, whereas most Israelites lived in agrarian households in small villages or walled towns that were not true cities.

Fortunately, modern scholarship has been able to overcome many of these difficulties by using extra-biblical sources in addition to the biblical text. Archeological materials from Israelite sites—including dwellings, remnants of foodstuffs, tools and implements, tombs, jewelry, and ancient art—provide important data. Ethnographic studies of traditional cultures in the Middle East and elsewhere help us relate the archeological materials to various aspects of daily life in biblical antiquity. And anthropological models dealing with gender dynamics in premodern cultures allow us to understand the interactions of Israelite men and women and also the significance of women's roles. In addition, texts from other ancient Near Eastern cultures can supplement or illuminate the information in biblical texts. All together, these sources provide a fuller and more accurate view of the women of ancient Israel than could be obtained by using the Bible alone.

Evidence negates the stereotype that women were confined to the household.

Marriage and Children

The Hebrew noun ishah means both “woman” and “wife.” This signals the fact that a woman’s identity was virtually inseparable from her status as a married woman. It was inconceivable that a woman might willingly live on her own apart from a family; widows and divorcees often led precarious lives. Marriage was the norm for both women and men, but it was not usually the kind of love-based companionate relationship that is the ideal in the modern world (and in some biblical stories such as Rachel and Jacob in Genesis 29). Rather, it was a heterosexual pairing meant to provide offspring and thus assure generational continuity in the ownership of family land. The conjugal pair with their children would also constitute a work force sufficient to meet household needs in an agrarian society. In addition, adult children would be the ones to care for aging parents. Having children was a non-negotiable necessity.

* This essay is a modified and abridged version of the biblical section of the entry “Woman,” Encyclopaedia Judaica, 2nd edition, edited by Michael Berenbaum and Fred Skolnik (2007), Volume 21, pp. 156–161.

The Bible does not have a term for “marriage” as such. The term chatan, translated “groom,” denotes a man with a father-in-law, thus indicating the conception of marriage as a union of two families. The Bible typically indicates the formation of a marital bond by saying that a man “takes” a woman. The courtship narrative of Rebekah, for example, culminates in the statement that Isaac “took Rebekah and she became his wife” (Genesis 24:67). This expression reflects the patrilocality of Israelite households. That is, a bride would move to the household of the groom, who usually continued to reside in the same household where he was raised. An extended family would thus be formed, although each constituent nuclear family might have its own abode within a family compound.

Financial arrangements generally accompanied marriage except among the poorest families. Although there are no “marriage laws” as such in the Bible, information in narratives indicates that a bride’s family typically provided a dowry, usually consisting of moveable property such as jewelry, clothing, and household utensils. In wealthier families, livestock and servants might also be included (see Genesis 24:59; 29:24, 29); and the groom and his family could supplement it (Genesis 24:53). The dowry theoretically remained the possession of the woman for the duration of the marriage, although her husband sometimes may have had access to it.

Another marital payment was made by the groom’s family to that of the bride. This betrothal gift, sometimes erroneously called “bride-price” (mohar; see Genesis 34:12; Exodus 22:15–16; I Samuel 18:25), has often been interpreted as evidence that a man purchased a woman. The fact that a word sometimes used for “husband” is baal, which can (but does not always) mean “master,” has also been adduced to claim that a woman was the property of her husband. And the use of the verb kanab, which can mean “to buy” but more generally “to acquire,” to describe Boaz’s marriage to Ruth (Ruth 4:10) has been similarly interpreted.

However, anthropological analysis of these exchanges shows that such assertions are flawed. Instead, the dowry and betrothal gift are understood to function in overlapping ways to maintain the viability of a family. The betrothal gift would provide some compensation to a woman’s family, which would lose the labor of a daughter upon her marriage. The dowry would constitute a woman’s economic safety net in the event of widowhood or divorce, especially if she had no sons or if her father was deceased. Moreover, the two payments together served to establish and solidify alliances between a woman’s natal family and her marital one. Such connections were important in agrarian communities; they increased the likelihood of mutual aid in the event of economic or other difficulties, not unusual in Israelite households living in marginal environments. Thus betrothal and dowry payments together had important economic, social, and legal functions.

To say that a husband did not own his wife is not to claim that there was equality between spouses. Perhaps the greatest gender asymmetry was in the area of sexuality. The patrilineal nature of Israelite society, with land and property transferred across generations via the male line, is likely the reason for the stringency of biblical legal precepts dealing with female sexuality. A woman’s fiancé and then her husband had exclusive rights to her sexuality; and her parents guarded it before betrothal. Her virginity at marriage was valued, at least in part, as a means of assuring the groom of his paternity of his bride’s first child. For similar reasons, women and men are treated differently in biblical adultery laws (Leviticus 20:10; Deuteronomy 22:22–28), where sex between a married man and an unmarried woman is discouraged but not proscribed. Concern for heirs is also a factor in the institution known as levirate marriage, in which a childless widow would marry her deceased husband's brother, with the first child (or son, according to some interpreters) produced by that liaison considered the dead man's heir (Deuteronomy 25:5–10; see the narrative of Tamar in Genesis 38). The case of the daughters of Zelophehad (Numbers 26:33; 27:1–11; 36:1–12) would seem to modulate the absolute nature of Israelite patrilineal inheritance; note, however, that in that case, inheritance of land by daughters is accompanied subsequently by provisions that the land would remain within the clan (Numbers 36).

WOMEN IN ANCIENT ISRAEL—AN OVERVIEW

The existence of polygyny (more than one wife) in ancient Israel, as in other Near Eastern lands, must also be understood in light of powerful communal interest in stabilizing households by transmitting property to biological heirs. The multiple wives of a monarch (such as David and Solomon) signified his high status and his ability to establish political alliances with diplomatic marriages, and wealthy individuals had several wives as a sign of affluence. But in most instances a man took a second wife or a concubine when the first wife failed to produce offspring. The Genesis narratives give the impression that polygyny was common. However, shorter life spans for women than for men, which meant a shortage of women of childbearing age, and the fact that most people probably lived near the poverty level, would have precluded polygyny for all but the wealthy. Indeed, many biblical texts, such as Genesis 2:24, the Song of Songs, several passages in wisdom literature, and even legal rulings such as Exodus 21:4–5, reflect a monogamous norm.

Although dissolution of a marriage was sometimes unavoidable, very little is known about provisions for divorce. Malachi 2:14 refers to a marriage contract, and Isaiah 50:1 mentions a bill of divorce, indicating that formal documents were used for establishing and dissolving a marriage, although probably only for people of means. The sole biblical text with divorce rulings, Deuteronomy 24:1–4, addresses a particular situation, the case of a man seeking to remarry a woman to whom he had once been married. Unfortunately, it gives the impression that only men could initiate divorce in the biblical period. However, that notion can be contested in light of the narrative of a Levite's secondary wife leaving him (Judges 19:2) and because the Elephantine papyri, which are documents from a community founded by Judeans in Egypt in the 6th century B.C.E., mention a woman divorcing her husband.

Women in Household Life

It would be incorrect to assume, on the basis of gender asymmetry in matters of sexuality, that women were subordinate to and dominated by men in all other aspects of life. Indeed, with few resources available from outside the household, the relationship between a woman and her husband was one of interdependence and complementarity in most household functions. As the primary social and economic unit, the family household was the locus of all the activities, in addition to procreation, that were necessary for the maintenance and continuity of life. Family life was task-oriented; without the labor of both women and men, and also children, survival in the marginal habitat of the Israelite highlands would not have been possible. But in meeting a household's economic, educational, and religious needs, the responsibilities of all family members were not the same. The division of labor by gender, albeit with some overlap, was the most efficient way to accomplish the myriad household tasks.

In the contemporary world we tend to think of households as private realms, distinct from the public, male-dominated arena. However, this private-public dichotomy is based on the structure of large, industrialized societies and is not an accurate characterization of small, premodern agrarian communities, where the boundaries between households and the larger communities in which they were enmeshed were blurred. Both men and women, although probably in different ways, took part in the discussions and decisions affecting community life that took place within most households. Realizing this, along with recognizing the significant household roles of women as described below, helps us understand the folly of referring to Israelite women as “only wives and mothers.”

Economic Roles. Women’s economic roles were manifold and complex. Women sometimes participated in the male-dominated tasks of growing grains and tending orchards and vineyards, especially in labor-intensive harvest periods (see Ruth 2:2–9). They also had their own agricultural activities, especially the cultivation of garden vegetables and herbs. Both genders shared in the care of livestock and of work animals. However, women’s major contributions to the household economy were the time-consuming food- and fiber-processing jobs. They transformed agricultural products into edible and wearable forms through their expertise and labor.

Cereal crops, the most important food source in the biblical period, provided an estimated 50% of a person’s daily calories. A series of arduous processes, including grinding and kneading, were necessary to make grains edible. It is estimated that three hours of work would have been required each day to produce enough bread or gruel for an average family of six. Women, with the help of older children, not only produced bread but also processed and prepared many other foodstuffs, mainly fruits, vegetables, legumes, and dairy products. Some of these were eaten raw; but many were variously churned, pressed, pickled, roasted, or dried on a seasonal basis. Meat would have been eaten rarely, probably only at festivals.

Several positive features offset the onerous nature of women’s food preparation responsibilities. Unlike male crop-growing tasks, in which yields could be drastically affected by periodic droughts or infestations of insects, food preparation always yielded a finished product. Thus, women would have experienced a consistent sense of accomplishment from their daily work. Another source of gratification lay in a woman’s mastery of the considerable technical skills required by the diverse food-processing procedures.

Social and political aspects added to the individual benefits, for women, of food preparation. Archeologists often find grinding tools in clusters in Israelite dwellings. This indicates that women from neighboring households gathered together, undoubtedly to chat and sing during the long hours spent preparing grains and other foods. The time spent together helped forge women into informal social networks in a way that the more solitary tasks performed by men did not. These networks constituted a social safety net—women would know of an illness or emergency in a neighboring household and would find ways to help. These networks also operated on a political level; women gained and shared information that influenced community decisions made by male officials. Such indirect female political power is typically unrecognized but nonetheless real.

Women had other economic roles. They concocted potions and salves from wild or homegrown herbs and plants to use in folk remedies. Although rural households did procure sophisticated terracotta vessels and metal implements from urban workshops, some village women likely produced simple ceramic pots and stone grinding tools for everyday use. However, the most important household activity besides food processing was textile production, perhaps because of its potential for commercial activity beyond the household (see Proverbs 31:13, 24).

WOMEN IN ANCIENT ISRAEL—AN OVERVIEW

Archeologists have discovered tools—spindle whorls, loom weights, weaving shuttles, and needles—that testify to the production of fabrics in Israelite households. Like the steps involved in grain processing, the procedures for making textiles were often time-consuming and tedious. It takes several hours of spinning, for example, to produce the amount of yarn or thread needed for an hour of weaving. Women in pre-modern cultures typically do textile work together; indeed, some of the tasks are done most efficiently by women working in tandem. The personal, social, and political benefits accruing to women as food-producers were intensified by their experience of working together to make garments and coverings for their families and perhaps also for barter or sale.

Educational and Managerial Roles. The primary care of young children was the mother's responsibility. Child care was integrated into a woman's daily routines, no doubt with the assistance of older children and elderly parents. Women were assisted in most household tasks by their children; and they supervised offspring of both genders until boys were old enough to accompany their fathers into the fields. Fathers surely taught sons the tasks and activities performed mainly by men. Because there were no schools in the biblical period, except perhaps for a small number of upper-class urban youth, women were the chief educators and socializers of both boys and girls in their early years, and for girls into adolescence.

Women as educators are not very visible in the Bible, where the mention of sages and elders gives the impression of a male monopoly in teaching skills and inculcating traditional practices and beliefs. However, an understanding of the dynamics of an agrarian household indicates the prominence of women in this role, which involved instruction in the technologies of household life, in appropriate behavior, and also in the transmission of culture and values more generally. The frequent parallelism of “mother” and “father” in the book of Proverbs (1:8; 4:3; 6:20; 15:20; 19:26; 20:20; 23:22, 25; 28:24; 30:11, 17) indicates that both parents taught their children. Proverbs 31:1 singles out King Lemuel's mother as the source of his instruction.

Because women had more contact hours with children, their interactions with offspring were essential for transmitting many aspects of Israelite culture from one generation to the next. The very notion of “wisdom,” which includes technical expertise as well as social sagacity, has important female aspects, arguably rooted in the broad role of women in caring for and socializing their children. Note that the wisdom is frequently personified as a woman in Proverbs (1:20–33; 3:13–18; 4:5–9; 7:4–5; 8:1–36; 9:1–6; 14:1). Also, the “strong woman” (eshet chayil) of Proverbs 31 is characterized as speaking wisdom and teaching kindness (v. 26). And two narratives feature an ishah chachamah (“wise woman”; II Samuel 14:1–20; 20:14–22).

A woman's educative role involved more than the instruction of children. In the complex, multi-generational Israelite households, older women served as household managers, instructing (depending upon the household's particular composition) daughters, daughters-in-law, nieces, slaves, servants, and other dependents in the array of women's tasks, as well as in appropriate behavior. The fifth commandment (Exodus 20:12; Deuteronomy 5:16) and the parent laws of Exodus 21:15, 17 and Leviticus 20:9, which were likely concerned with the behavior of adult children in multi-generational households, underscore the authority of both parents over both female and male offspring. In contrast, other ancient Near Eastern societies apparently favored men over women in assigning parental authority. Another indication of female authority in household life is the fact that mothers predominate in the Bible as the ones who name their children.

In light of women's extensive educative and managerial roles, the appearance of the phrase "mother's household" (beit eim) rather than the usual "father's household" (beit av) several times in the Bible is noteworthy. "Mother's household" appears in several women-centered texts (Genesis 24:28; Ruth 1:8; Songs 3:4; 8:2; see also Proverbs 14:1) and suggests that women controlled most internal household activities (as does Rebekah, Genesis 27:5–17; and the woman of Shunem, II Kings 4:8–37; 8:1–6), whereas men dealt with suprathousehold, lineage-related matters. Near Eastern documents attest to the managerial authority of royal women over certain aspects of palace life; women in ordinary households would likely have had similar control on a smaller scale, especially if there were slaves or servants in their households. Thus a senior woman would have had some authority over male servitors as well as over children, as when the woman of Shunem gives instructions to "her [male] servant" (II Kings 4:24).

Religious Roles. Women also had major roles in household religious life. Biblical texts focus on national and communal practices yet reveal that family celebrations punctuated the annual religious calendar. For example, Passover in its origins was likely a home-based spring festival involving specific kinds of food preparation; the other major festivals, similarly grounded in the agricultural calendar, no doubt involved family feasting. Household Sabbath traditions are difficult to trace back to the biblical period; but the story of the manna provisions for the seventh day (Exodus 16:21–30), as well as post-biblical sources, indicate festal meals on the seventh day. The food component of festivals and Sabbath is inconceivable without female culinary expertise and labor.

Women also participated in celebrations at shrines near their homes and even initiated cultic activity. The Hannah narrative (I Samuel 1–2) is instructive in this regard. The childless Hannah journeys regularly with her family to the cultic center of Shiloh to share in an annual sacrificial offering; she comes "before תִּנְחַזֵּק" to make a vow in the hope of ending her barrenness; and later, having given birth to Samuel, she fulfills her vow by bringing sacrificial offerings to Shiloh. Also, several passages in Deuteronomy (12:12; 16:11, 14; 31:10–12) are gender inclusive in their instructions for bringing sacrifices and celebrating at the central shrine, although in other texts (Exodus 23:17; Deuteronomy 16:16) only men are specifically required to do so. Finally, dozens of priestly passages use the common-gender term nefesh, indicating that both women and men were commanded to offer certain sacrifices (see Leviticus 2:1 and Numbers 5:6–10).

In addition to family festivals and communal celebrations and sacrifices mentioned in the Bible, certain household religious activities—carried out only by women—are known from archeological and ethnographic evidence. These practices, which are related to childbearing, may well have been the most important part of women's religious lives. Women in pre-modern cultures typically cope with the many problems related to reproduction, which today would be handled by medicine, through behaviors that might now be considered "magic" but were clearly religious in nature. Facing the possibility of barrenness, childbirth complications, difficulty in lactation, and high infant mortality rates (for as many as one in two infants did not survive to the age of five), Israelite women carried out various practices meant not only to keep away the evil spirits thought to cause problems but also to attract benevolent ones believed to bring reproductive success. Many of these practices—such as wearing amulets to avert the "evil eye," tying a red thread around the limb of a newborn, keeping a light burning in a birthing or sleeping room, salting and swaddling a newborn (see Ezekiel 16:4)—continued into the post-biblical period and are found in Jewish,

WOMEN IN ANCIENT ISRAEL—AN OVERVIEW

Christian, and Muslim families well into the 20th century.

These household religious activities, which focused on the welfare of their families and dealt with life-and-death matters, would have been empowering. Women were ritual experts in household practice much as priests were at the Temple, for they possessed the requisite knowledge to perform rituals in a prescribed and, they believed, efficacious way. Moreover, household rituals dealing with childbirth were carried out for women by women, including neighbors, relatives, and sometimes midwives (I Samuel 4:20; see also Ruth 4:13–17) in intimate settings that further contributed to female bonding and solidarity. Women's religious practices were profoundly important components of their adult lives.

Professional Women

Women in the Bible appear in nearly twenty different community roles beyond those we often associate with the household. These particular roles correspond in a large measure to what we know about women's lives from extra-biblical sources. These professional activities are noteworthy because they show that some Israelite women did hold professional positions that served their communities directly, thus negating the notion that women were confined to the household (a stereotype itself in that it often conjures the household in contemporary terms rather than a household as a pre-modern locus of economic and social power).

The role mentioned most frequently is prostitution, perhaps a recourse for marginalized women unable to support themselves in any other way. This occupation is condemned in priestly texts but viewed matter-of-factly in the narratives about Rahab, the heroic prostitute of Jericho (Joshua 2, 5), and about the two women who brought their dispute to Solomon (I Kings 3:16–28).

Other roles were much less controversial and contributed in important ways to Israelite communities. Women practiced trades or crafts, working in palace workshops to produce items (perfume, food, baked goods) for the royal family or state events (I Samuel 8:13) and to produce fabrics for religious shrines (Exodus 35:25; II Kings 23:7). Some women marketed textiles produced at home (Proverbs 31:24); and the archeological discovery of women's stamp seals, which were used for commercial transactions, attests to female activity in the business world. According to Nehemiah 3:12, women were construction workers in the post-exilic effort to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. Women served in the communication arena as couriers, usually carrying dispatches from women to other women (Proverbs 9:3–4) but occasionally bearing messages between men (II Samuel 17:17); and they were heralds, making announcements to the wider public (Isaiah 40:9; Psalm 68:12). Women served as midwives; they assist Rachel and Tamar in childbirth, and the midwives Shiphrah and Puah are heroes of the Exodus narrative. Wet-nurses are also mentioned, usually only for elites; Rebekah has one, as probably did most princesses (II Kings 11:2–3), with Moses' own mother (Jochebed) hired to nurse him.

Midwives were also religious specialists, since prayers and potions are part of the culture of childbirth in traditional societies. Other female religious specialists included minor temple servitors (Exodus 38:8; I Samuel 2:22). Some female religious specialists are condemned, as in the gender-inclusive denunciations of various kinds of divination (including consulting the dead) in Leviticus (19:31; 20:6, 27) and Deuteronomy (18:10–11), a sure sign that women's divinatory services were being utilized. Although necromancy is condemned, I Samuel 28:7–25 depicts a female medium consulting the dead Samuel for King Saul effectively and without the narrator's criticism. Women also in some cases were perceived as sorcerers and are specifically censured as such (Exodus 22:17; see also Isaiah 57:3). The prophet Ezekiel reviles women performing a Temple ritual (8:14–15) as well as a group of female prophets engaged in divination (13:17–23). But other women prophets are heroic figures. Two of the most prominent women in the Bible, Miriam and Deborah, are called prophets (Exodus 15:20; Judges 4:4), as are Huldah, the first person to rule on the authenticity of a text as God's word (II Kings 22:14–20), and Noadiah, a leader of the postexilic community (Nehemiah 6:14).

Other female professionals, less explicitly religious, include Deborah in her role as a resolver of disputes and as a charismatic military leader (“judge”), and the “wise women” of Tekoa and Abel, who help resolve national crises. The wives of kings managed palace-related tasks; and a few also exercised political power, some even bearing a title (g'virah) signifying that they were royal functionaries (see I Kings 15:13 and II Kings 10:13). Female musicians led the celebrations for military victories attributed to divine intervention (Exodus 15:21; I Samuel 18:6–7; Psalm 68:26; Jeremiah 31:4, 13); their performances reflect a women’s musical genre that involved drumming, dancing, and singing. Other women are mentioned as professional singers (II Samuel 19:36; Ezra 2:65; Nehemiah 7:67; Ecclesiastes 2:8) and perhaps even Temple singers (I Chronicles 25:5–6). Also, as in many traditional societies, women more than men were experts in mourning rituals (Jeremiah 9:16–19; Ezekiel 32:16).

Recognizing women’s community roles has important implications for understanding the lives of the women engaged in these occupations. Many of these professional specialists, including musicians and singers, mourning women, “wise women,” and even midwives and prophets, functioned in groups or were connected to each other in guild-like associations. The “daughters” learning dirges in Jeremiah 9:19 and wailing over Saul in II Samuel 1:24 are analogous to “sons” in the phrase “sons [or: company, disciples] of the prophets” (as in II Kings 5:22; 6:1); they constituted a guild (loosely speaking) of professional mourning women. The existence of other such groups can safely be assumed; informal organizations of women with technical expertise in certain areas, such as birthing or healing, are widely found in pre-modern cultures, including Israel’s neighbors. These women would have gathered occasionally to share knowledge, train new members, and, in the case of musical professions, compose songs and rehearse in preparation for performances.

Membership in such groups, which typically are organized hierarchically with senior or more talented members earning the respect of the others, provided women with opportunities to experience prestige and status. Also, whether they functioned in groups or as individuals, female professionals provided services to their communities, thereby reaping the benefits of contributing to the public weal. It is noteworthy that societies in which women have rich opportunities for extra-household association with each other are generally considered the least repressive with respect to gender.

Finally, the existence of such groups, with their own hierarchies, calls into question the very notion (held by some readers today) of ancient Israel as completely patriarchal, with women dominated by men. As in every society, there were multiple loci of power in ancient Israel. Women’s professional services and groups, along with the informal networks of women in neighboring households (described above) and the senior wife’s managerial authority within the household (described above), cut across the male-dominated hierarchies that prevailed in other aspects of family and community life. Recognizing these three aspects of ancient Israelite society allows a more nuanced reading of Israelite women’s lives.

—Carol Meyers

Women and Post-biblical Commentary

JEWS HAVE TRADITIONALLY BELIEVED that each of the books that comprise the Hebrew Bible reflects God's word in some way. As a "religion of the book," Judaism has looked to these revealed writings for guidance in every aspect of human life. Yet a religion based upon static texts, however holy, cannot easily adjust to the ever-varying conditions of human life. That Judaism has endured is due, in large part, to our traditions of biblical interpretation. In every generation, expositors of the divine message have discovered new meanings in the Hebrew Scriptures and demonstrated their relevance to an ever-evolving Jewish community.

For each parashah, The Torah: A Women's Commentary includes a section titled Post-biblical Interpretations. Rabbinic biblical commentaries, written from the 3rd through the 19th centuries, have played a central role in shaping how Jews have understood the Torah. Like The Torah: A Women's Commentary, these interpretations endeavored to keep biblical teachings alive, relevant, and compelling. The authors of our Post-biblical Interpretations have chosen from this vast treasury those passages that they believe will illuminate our contemporary understandings of biblical texts. Wherever possible, these selections focus on female characters and larger issues concerning women in Jewish law and Jewish life.

This essay presents an historical overview of the Jewish commentaries and commentators cited in the Post-biblical Interpretations sections.

Written Torah and Oral Torah

Jewish biblical interpretation is already present in the Bible, since later biblical books often (directly or indirectly) interpret earlier writings. Following the destruction of the Second Temple (70 C.E.), textual scholars and interpreters, generally referred to as "the Rabbis," emerged as Jewish spiritual leaders. During the rabbinic period (from the beginning of the Common Era to the end of the 6th century), much of their intellectual endeavors concentrated on recording, preserving, and expanding the biblical interpretations that they deemed essential for the conduct of day-to-day Jewish life.

The Rabbis adapted the Bible to their own world—a society oriented toward men.

The word "torah" can be understood broadly as "teaching" or "revelation." Rabbinic teachers enlarged the meaning of Torah itself to include the entire body of rabbinic interpretive literature. Thus, "Written Torah" came to refer to the Bible, and "Oral Torah" became a designation for the voluminous rabbinic texts that grew up around the Bible. The oral tradition of Torah interpretation assumed the sanctity and inviolability of the written word. The Rabbis taught that both components of divine revelation were delivered to the people of Israel at Mt. Sinai and subsequently passed down through later prophets and other recognized authoritative figures (Mishnah Avot 1).

Rabbinic interpretation begins with the premise that Torah in all of its parts, both written and oral, is of divine origin and authority. Sometimes God's will is evident in the plain sense of the words, what is called the p'shat. This term refers to the contextual meaning of a biblical passage that is evident through a straightforward reading of a text. More frequently, the Rabbis believed, the actual import of biblical words can be discerned only by those who know how to penetrate to the d'rash, the deeper sense that lies beneath the surface. They sought to discover and elucidate those inner meanings, and in this way they maintained continuity with the past while adapting law to the changing conditions of the present and the needs of the future.

Rabbinic Literature

The rabbinic method of biblical interpretation is called midrash, frequently translated as “exposition” or “elucidation.” There are two types of midrash, legal and non-legal. Legal midrash contains a composite of ceremonial ordinances, ritual teachings, ethical rulings, and civil, criminal, and domestic laws that generally find their origin in a biblical statement or commandment. Since biblical laws are often vague or incomplete, rabbinic elaboration provides the details to allow for their implementation in a variety of particular situations. As later generations sought to follow the laws and teaching of the Bible, many topics required elucidation, such as the proper way of keeping Shabbat or how to solemnize a marriage or write a bill of divorce. Thus, rabbinic law enlarged and clarified the biblical text, applying scriptural principles and contemporary practices to an ever-broader variety of cases, while also considering a greater number of contingencies.

The other type of rabbinic biblical interpretation is non-legal in nature and includes expansions of biblical narratives, folktales, and anecdotes about the Rabbis themselves. These rabbinic writings also contain homilies (sermons) that teach religious beliefs and ethical behavior, and that comfort the downcast of Israel with promises of future redemption. Convinced that biblical texts contained neither contradiction nor repetition, the Rabbis creatively exercised their interpretive powers to demonstrate that this was so. Most of the “Post-biblical Interpretations” in this volume focus on this second type of interpretation, known as midrash aggadah.

Eventually, the Rabbis collected what is known as the “Oral Torah” into compilations that preserve competing interpretations and opinions; while majority views are generally honored, minority opinions are recorded as well. These complex texts interweave traditions, motifs, and influences from a variety of sources, time periods, and diverse environments, reflective of the extended duration of their composition and editing. Those texts from the Land of Israel incorporated and responded to Greco-Roman and early Christian cultural influences. Other texts were shaped in the very different world of mostly pre-Islamic Iraq, known in Jewish tradition as Babylon. The main collections are the Mishnah and the Talmud (usually cited as BT or JT, see below for details).

Women in Rabbinic Writings

The shapers and expositors of rabbinic Judaism were men, and the ideal human society that they imagined was decidedly oriented towards men. Nevertheless, women were a part of these men's lives and a number of rabbinic writings address issues involving women. An entire division of the key rabbinic texts, the Mishnah and Talmuds, is entitled Nashim (“Women”), and its seven tractates deal with women in their legal relationships to men in matters of betrothal, marriage, levirate marriage, divorce, suspected adultery, and women's limited ability to make vows of various kinds. Another section, Niddah (“The Menstruating Woman”), one of the twelve tractates in the division Tohorot (“Ritual Purity”), is mainly concerned with strict definitions of female impurity during and after menstruation and following childbirth, in order to prevent communication of this ritual impurity to men.

With few exceptions, female voices are not heard in rabbinic literature. When they are, they are usually mediated through rabbinic assumptions about women's lesser intellectual, spiritual, and moral capacities, reflecting set views of women's appropriate roles in life, which were believed to differ from those of men. Rabbinic texts do not grant women a significant role in any aspect of rabbinic Judaism's communal life of leadership, study, and worship. Neither women's religious rituals—which undoubtedly existed—nor female understandings of their lives, experiences, and spirituality are retrievable in any significant way from rabbinic Judaism's androcentric writings that became so central to a millennium-and-a-half of Jewish existence. From rabbinic literature alone, a reader would never know, for example, that in various parts of the Roman Empire, some Jewish women held leadership roles in synagogue life and other public arenas. (Archeological evidence shows that such was the case in the first six or seven centuries of the Common Era. Some of the women involved, who appear to have been independent and wealthy, may have been converts to Judaism. See Bernadette Brooten, Women Leaders in the Ancient Synagogue, 1982.)

WOMEN AND POST-BIBLICAL COMMENTARY

In their interpretive writings, the Rabbis praised biblical women who played central roles in the destiny of the people of Israel, including the matriarchs (imahot). According to the Babylonian Talmud (abbreviated as BT), Sarah, Miriam, Deborah, Hannah, Abigail, Huldah, and Esther have the status of prophets (M'gillah 14a); and the midrash collection B'reishit Rabbah declared that all four mothers of Israel were prophets (67.9 and 72.6). The Rabbis also lauded the women whose supportive roles in the domestic realm enabled husbands and sons to participate in public worship and communal study. For example, they extol Rachel, wife of Rabbi Akiva, as an exemplary woman who sacrificed her own comfort for her husband's scholarship (Judith Baskin, Midrashic Women, 2002, pp. 101–3). On the other hand, the Rabbis condemned as immodest women who appeared unveiled in public or gathered in groups with other women, or those whose voices the Rabbis considered too strident. Similarly, some sages criticized women who asserted themselves as public leaders. Thus, the Babylonian Talmud goes on to denigrate the judge Deborah as a hornet and the prophet Hulda as a weasel (the meaning of their respective names), since they held powerful positions usually associated with men (M'gillah 14b; Baskin, Midrashic Women, 2002, pp. 31–32, 109–14, 140–54).

The midrash about Rahab the harlot is a good example of the creative and transformative powers of rabbinic commentary when applied positively to a biblical woman. Rahab appears in Joshua 2 as a prostitute who lived independently in the city of Jericho. She is a righteous woman who hides Joshua's two spies in her house and saves them from capture. According to Joshua 2:9–11, Rahab recognizes the overwhelming power of God and foresees the future victory of Israel.

The Rabbis taught that Rahab became a convert to Judaism; and her statement of faith in Joshua 2:11 earned her the highest place among all biblical proselytes (M'chilta Amalek 3; D'varim Rabbah 2.26–27). A midrash recounts that she became the ancestor of priests and prophets in Israel (B'midbar Rabbah 8.9). According to the Rabbis, Joshua himself married her. Thus, his illustrious descendants were also hers (BT M'gillah 14b). (On how priests and prophets could be descended from a non-Israelite prostitute, see Sifrei B'midbar 78 and the discussion in Baskin, Midrashic Women, 2002, pp. 154–60.) Her rabbinic rehabilitation as a wife and mother demonstrates how the Rabbis preferred to imagine women, even as it provides a firm precedent for our own contemporary reconstructions of biblical women and men in ways that reveal meanings from the ancient text that speak to our own lives and concerns.

Rabbinic literature also preserves anecdotes about contemporaneous admirable women. These include Imma Shalom (1st century C.E.), whose husband was Rabbi Eliezer ben Hyrcanus and whose brother was the Patriarch Gamliel II (BT Shabbat 116a, BT Bava M'tzia 59b); she mediated a bitter quarrel between those two men. Traditions associated with Beruriah (2nd century C.E.), whose father and husband were rabbis, acknowledge the possibility of a learned female. A number of passages depict Beruriah as having a profound knowledge of rabbinic biblical exegesis and outstanding intelligence (for instance, BT P'sachim 62b, BT B'rachot 10a, and BT Eiruvin 53b–54a). However, beyond one very early attribution, which is repeated nowhere else, no actual legal rulings are ever credited to her (Tosefta Keilim, Bava M'tzia 1:6). Moreover, Beruriah's reputed scholarly expertise became a problem for rabbinic Judaism. In a medieval reference, which may reflect earlier sources, she reaps the tragic consequences of the "light-mindedness" supposedly inherent in women. Rashi (see below) relates a tradition that Beruriah was seduced by one of her husband's students and subsequently committed suicide (Rashi's commentary on BT Avodah Zarah 18b; Baskin, Midrashic Women, 2002, pp. 81–83).

Seven aggadic narratives in the Babylonian Talmud discuss Yalta, an aristocratic Jewish woman of notable learning who exercised significant communal authority in the Jewish community in Babylon. Clearly, the Rabbis were aware of women like Yalta whose strong personalities, control of significant financial resources, and exalted lineage afforded them far more communal respect and power than ordinary women could imagine. While several of the stories about Yalta report her ability to act independently against Jewish rabbinic and political rulings when necessary, at least two of the anecdotes (BT Kiddushin 70a–b and BT B'rachot 51b) demonstrate a rabbinic desire to curtail such female pretensions to independence and power (Baskin, Midrashic Women, 2002, pp. 83–87).

Why Rabbinic Literature Is Included Here

The Rabbis adapted the Hebrew Bible to their own circumstances and attitudes, but always with the conviction that they were proceeding with divine authority. The traditions they established about the inappropriateness of women's presence in the communal domains of worship, study, and leadership were continued, with few exceptions, in medieval and early modern Judaism. They persist in some Jewish communities up to the present day. Although the patriarchal approach toward women that is typical of rabbinic and medieval biblical commentary was never unique to the Jewish community, the consequences of this attitude have been long lasting in stifling female intellectual, spiritual, and leadership roles in Judaism. Contemporary women may well ask what this androcentric literature, written and transmitted by men, has to offer and why they should read it. Why have we included "Post-biblical Interpretations" in this volume at all?

For one thing, this complex and multifaceted literature is a rich part of our Jewish heritage. The Rabbis and later exegetes were profoundly immersed in biblical literature and had considered deeply its wide range of meanings and possible applications. The many dimensions they read into and out of the biblical text over the centuries have shaped the course of Jewish intellectual and spiritual history—and continue to amaze and enlighten us today. Moreover, rabbinic exegesis has always been sensitive to the multilayered and multivocal qualities of the Hebrew Scriptures. While the majority of exegetical teachings about women's intellectual capacities and public roles tend to be negative, differing points of view have also been preserved. One example that acknowledges the injustice of arbitrary limitations on female roles appears in the midrash collection Sifrei Numbers 133, in a discussion of the redoubtable daughters of Zelophehad (Numbers 26): "The compassion of God is not like human compassion. Human rulers favor males over females but the One who spoke and brought the world into being is not like that. Rather, God shows mercy to every living thing" (see parashat Pinchas, p. 984). Thus, our commentary includes "Post-biblical Interpretations" because they are part of our legacy of Oral Torah, because they have a great deal to teach us about biblical writings, and because they represent the diverse points of view that have always been a part of the way Jews read the Torah.

WOMEN AND POST-BIBLICAL COMMENTARY

When thinking about women, it is especially important that we pay attention to this immense body of post-biblical interpretive literature which is a central part of Jewish tradition. Contemporary interpretations of Jewish texts have played a leading role in bringing about positive changes in women's status in Judaism and in the larger world, and in enlarging women's access to the realms of Jewish learning. Indeed, the many scholars who have contributed "Post-biblical Interpretations" to this volume demonstrate that women are now expert in rabbinic writings. As educated women and men advocate for a Judaism that is egalitarian and forward looking, it is essential that we become knowledgeable about all aspects of our heritage and build on those teachings of the past.

Documents of Rabbinic Judaism

The Mishnah is the earliest written document of rabbinic Judaism. It is a legal compilation based on biblical law, actual practice, and spiritual vision. This work, edited in the early 3rd century C.E., is written in Hebrew and is organized according to six subject divisions, which are further separated into a total of sixty-three tractates. The Tosefta, generally held to be a slightly later collection of legal rulings, follows the order of the Mishnah and supplements it. These works are attributed to the rabbinic sages from the 1st to 3rd centuries C.E. In the following centuries, rabbinic scholars in the land of Israel and in Babylonia (today's Iraq) produced extensive commentaries on the Mishnah, known as Gemara.

Much of the Gemara is written in Aramaic, a language close to Hebrew that was dominant in Western Asia in that period. In the 6th century C.E., the Mishnah and this more extensive Gemara were combined and edited by several generations of Rabbis to form the Babylonian Talmud (cited here as BT). This work became the definitive compilation of Jewish law and tradition for many centuries to come. The Talmud of the Land of Israel (cited here as JT), completed at the end of the 4th century C.E., although less comprehensive than the Babylonian Talmud, also became an important part of the larger body of rabbinic literature.

Parallel to the Mishnah, Tosefta, and Talmuds are midrash collections that either provide a running commentary on a specific biblical book or are organized according to cycles of scriptural readings. These midrash compilations, typically named after biblical books (for example, B'reishit Rabbah, also known as Genesis Rabbah), are mainly in Hebrew and share numerous interpretations and rulings in common with the Mishnah and Talmuds. The dates of composition for these midrashic documents extend from the period of the Mishnah into the early Middle Ages and are often difficult to determine with any exactitude.

Medieval Biblical Interpretation

During the medieval period (from 600 C.E. to 1500 C.E.), many important biblical commentaries were written by scholars throughout the Jewish world. Several of these exegetes are cited in the "Post-biblical Interpretations" entries in this volume. The most famous medieval commentator is Rabbi Solomon ben Isaac (known by the acronym Rashi), who lived in France between 1040 and 1105. Best known for his commentaries on both the Babylonian Talmud and most of the biblical books, Rashi's exegesis has long been admired for its clarity and for his attention to the p'shat or contextual meaning of a biblical passage. Only after he had explicated the plain sense of a text as he understood it, did Rashi turn to d'rash, using midrash aggadah to expand his readers' understanding of the Bible. Rashi had only daughters and they were apparently well educated. Most of his grandsons became important interpreters of Jewish texts.

Rabbi Abraham Ibn Ezra (died 1165), a native of Spain whose first language was Arabic, is often considered the most original of medieval Jewish biblical interpreters. He composed commentaries on all the biblical books, as well as Hebrew poetry and works on astronomy and science. As a scientist and philosopher, Ibn Ezra used his knowledge of Hebrew and Arabic grammar to demonstrate the contextual meaning (p'shat) of biblical words and phrases; he had little interest in the elaborations of midrash aggadah that appealed so much to Rashi. His approach to the Bible is in many ways a precursor to modern biblical scholarship. Another important Spanish exegete was Rabbi Moses ben Nachman (1194–1270), also known as Nachmanides or by his acronym, Ramban. He lived most of his life near Barcelona, spending his final days in the Land of Israel. He is well known for his commentary on the five books of the Torah and for the strong influence from Jewish mysticism that infuses his interpretation.

The Mikraot G'dolot ("Rabbinic Bible") became a popular repository of medieval biblical commentary for later generations. Published with the vocalized text of the Bible, an Aramaic translation, and selected Masoretic notes, the typical volume of Mikraot G'dolot contains the commentaries of Rashi; Rabbi Samuel ben Meir (1085–1158), one of Rashi's grandsons who is also known as Rashbam; Abraham ibn Ezra; Nachmanides; and Obadiah Sforno (1475–1550), an Italian rabbi, physician, and commentator.

Pre-modern Jewish Women and Hebrew Scriptures

Most Jewish women in rabbinic and medieval times lacked access to the Torah and interpretive writings, since very few women learned to read Hebrew. The greatest Jewish philosopher of the Middle Ages, Moses Maimonides (1135–1204), who was born in Spain and spent most of his life in Cairo, discouraged girls' education in traditional texts, on the grounds that women had no halachic obligation to study. He also believed that women were deficient in the mental skills required for serious Torah learning. In his famous law code the Mishneh Torah, Maimonides wrote, "Our sages said: 'Whoever teaches his daughter Torah, it is as if he taught her frivolity [or: lasciviousness]" (Mishnah Sotah 3:4). This all refers to the Oral Torah. However, regarding the Written Torah he should not set out to teach her; but, if he does teach her, it is not considered as if he taught her frivolity" (Mishneh Torah, Study of Torah 1:13). The French scholar Moses of Coucy (early 13th century) explained that although "a woman is exempt from both the commandment to learn Torah and to teach her son, even so, if she aids her son and husband in their efforts to learn [by supporting them financially], she shares their reward for the fulfillment of that commandment" (Sefer Mitzvot Gadol, Positive Commandment 12).

The invention of printing in the 15th century and the spread of printed works in vernacular languages transformed Jewish women's educational opportunities. Most rabbinic leaders agreed with Maimonides that the rabbinic injunctions against female study applied to the Talmud but not to the Bible or the legal rulings necessary for women's everyday activities. It is no accident that translations and paraphrases of portions of the Bible into Yiddish were among the first printed Jewish books intended for a female audience. (These were also important works for the large number of Jewish men who also lacked a good understanding of Hebrew.) Particularly popular were the Taytsh-khumesh ("Yiddish Five Books of Moses") by Sheftl Hurwitz of Prague and first published in 1590, and the Tsenerene (or Tzenah U'renah, "Go Out and See"), by Rabbi Yaakov son of Isaac Ashkenazi. Both of these biblical paraphrases included homilies on the weekly biblical readings from the Torah and Prophets, as well as stories, legends, and parables from rabbinic literature, the Zohar, and other mystical texts. The Tsenerene was particularly popular and appeared in more than three hundred editions. As Chava Weissler has written, “Women read it for inspiration and catharsis, often weeping over the text, as a regular part of their Sabbath afternoon activities” (Voices of the Matriarchs, 1998, p. 6). In this way, for the first time, large numbers of women became familiar with the Torah and haftarah portions of the week, a wide variety of midrash aggadah, and the teachings of the best-known commentators. Aspects of this knowledge, particularly about biblical women, was also incorporated contemporaneously into women’s vernacular supplicatory prayers (tkhines), at least some of which were composed by women (see Voices of the Matriarchs). Thus, a new technology in the larger culture (namely, printing) transformed the piety and possibilities of Jewish women, just as the technological and social changes of the past hundred years have profoundly altered the opportunities available for Jewish women at the beginning of the 21st century.

WOMEN AND POST-BIBLICAL COMMENTARY

—Judith R. Baskin

Women and Contemporary Revelation

IN THE SECTION FOR EACH PARASHAH titled “Contemporary Reflection,” Jewish thinkers, rabbis, cantors, educators, and other Jewish interpreters respond to the Torah through a personal or professional lens in order to articulate an ongoing encounter with God. In Hebrew, there is no single word for revelation. Rather, revelation is described as both matan Torah (the giving of Torah) and kabbalat Torah (the receiving of Torah). Revelation occurs when these two intersect and the voice of God is heard, directly or indirectly. Drawing on Deuteronomy 30:12 (in which Moses states that the Torah is “not in the heavens that you should say: ‘Who among us can go up can go up to the heavens and get it for us and impart it for us . . .’”), later rabbinic sages asserted that the will of God, as represented in the Torah, was no longer in Heaven but is entrusted to human interpreters (BT Bava M’tzia 59b). In the rabbinic context this meant that the community could discern God’s voice by wrestling with the text, that is, by intensely engaging with Torah. Thus, Torah study replaced prophecy as the source of revelation.

Even when women were exempt (or excluded) from Torah study, the Rabbis did not exclude women as bearers of revelation. They acknowledged that in ancient Israel, God spoke to female prophets as well as male prophets, who consequently served as divine messengers. Indeed, whereas the Bible identifies by name only four female prophets (see at Deuteronomy 13:2), the Rabbis expand this list considerably. According to one source, seven women were prophets. Acknowledging Miriam (Exodus 15:20), Deborah (Judges 4:4), and Huldah (II Kings 22:14), but ignoring Noadiah (Nehemiah 6:14), rabbinic sages add Sarah (Genesis 11–25), Hannah (I Samuel 1–2), Abigail (I Samuel 25), and Esther (BT M’gillah 14a). The Midrash also emphasizes the prophetic qualities of all four matriarchs (Sarah, Rebecca, Rachel, and Leah; B’reishit Rabbah 67.9; 72.6) and maintains that “just as sixty myriads of male prophets arose for Israel, so there arose for them sixty myriads of female prophets” (Shir HaShirim Rabbah 4.11).

God continues to speak to each generation; in this one, we hear women’s voices.

Who hears the divine voice? The rabbinic sages did not understand one’s relationship to God as connected primarily to gender, but rather, as Barry Holtz notes, to “talent, inclination and strength” (Finding Our Way, 1990, p. 102). For example, one midrash enjoins its readers, “Come and see how the voice [of God] went forth [at Sinai]—coming to each Israelite according to his individual strength—to the old, according to their strength; to the young according to their strength; to the children according to their strength; to the infants according to their strength; and to the women according to their strength” (Sh’mot Rabbah 5.9, emphasis added).

New and challenging scholarly theories in the 19th century about the historical formation of the Bible led Reform Jews, and later Conservative and Reconstructionist Jews, to rethink the concept of divine revelation and to reevaluate women’s religious roles. This created new opportunities for women to see themselves as bearers of revelation. Reform Judaism’s notion of progressive revelation particularly encouraged women and men to recognize the many ways in which one could hear God's voice. In a sermon delivered in 1918, Lily Montagu, founder of the Liberal Jewish movement in England and of the World Union for Progressive Judaism, maintained that "we [Liberal Jews] are no longer worried by the claims of tradition when these clash with our conception of truth. We have boldly enunciated our belief in progressive revelation, and this faith has quickened our hope for the future and intensified our reverence for the past" ("Kinship With God," in Ellen M. Umansky, ed., Lily H. Montagu, 1985, p. 113).

WOMEN AND CONTEMPORARY REVELATION

In line with this new understanding, Reform Judaism made religious education equally available to girls and boys, and the ceremony of confirmation, which initially replaced bar mitzvah, marked the end of one's formal Jewish studies. Unlike the celebration of one's becoming a bar or bat mitzvah, which is usually held on or soon after one's 13th birthday, confirmation is held on Shavuot, the holiday traditionally marking the revelation at Sinai. Confirmation was at first an individual or small group ceremony, with girls confirmed at a temple in Berlin as early as 1817. In the U.S., confirmation became a group or class celebration, taking place at the end of 10th grade. Becoming a confirmand on Shavuot serves as a reminder of the centrality of the Torah (whether equated with God's moral teachings or including ritual observance as well); it also reenacts symbolically for each person the receiving of the Torah and living in covenantal relationship with God. By the 20th century, the notion of continuing revelation—the idea that God continues to speak to each and every generation—was largely accepted. Indeed, for many if not most Jews today, the concept of Torah has expanded to mean Jewish learning or learning in general.

In his 1955 book God in Search of Man, Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel asked, "How did Israel know that what their eye and ear perceived in the desert of Sinai was not a phantom?" Was it truly a moment of revelation, or was such a perception only an illusion? "What we see," he concluded, "may be an illusion; that we see can never be questioned" (p. 196). Speaking before members of the Central Conference of American Rabbis in 1986, Reform rabbi Laura Geller similarly emphasized the importance of lived experience. Describing revelation as a moment of connection with God, she, like Heschel, emphasized the transformative nature of this moment. Yet moving beyond what he identified as Torah, she came to realize that although she had not noticed, God is always present. She asserted:

I wasn't looking, or perhaps I was looking in the wrong places....I needed to listen to the gentle whisper, the still small voice, the Presence one encounters by diving deep and surfacing....I suddenly realized that my experience is Jewish experience. There is a Torah of our lives as well as the Torah that was written down. Both need to be listened to and wrestled with: both unfold through interactive commentary (Four Centuries of Jewish Women's Spirituality: A Sourcebook, 1992, pp. 244–45).

Like Geller, Judith Plaskow advocates expanding our understanding of Torah to include not just the first five books of the Hebrew Bible and traditional Jewish learning, "but women's words, teachings, and actions hitherto unseen." Plaskow asserts that Jewish feminists must "reclaim Torah as our own" in order to make visible the "presence, experience, and deeds of women erased in traditional sources," telling the "stories of women's encounters with God and captur[ing] the texture of their religious experience." She also insists upon reconstructing history to include women's history, not by changing the past, but by altering the shape of Jewish memory (Standing Again at Sinai: Judaism from a Feminist Perspective, 1990, p. 28).

Rachel Adler has identified such efforts as “engendering Judaism.” She also calls for models of thinking about and practicing Judaism in a way that enables both women and men to “recreate and renew together as equals” (Engendering Judaism: An Inclusive Theology and Ethics, 1998, p. xiv). In so doing, Adler draws heavily on narrative as a tool of critique and vision, while advocating among liberal or progressive Jews the re-appropriation of halachah (the traditional authoritative legal tradition) as a source of meaning, rather than one of power. This means, among other things, retaining those laws that remain grounded in the practice of the progressive Jewish community while adding new laws, grounded in new stories, that reflect new communal practices.

In “We All Stood Together,” poet Merle Feld re-envisions both women and men at Mt. Sinai, ready to receive the words of God. In her creative remembering, her brother kept a journal of what he saw and heard while she, always holding a baby, was never able to write anything down. Consequently, she came to forget the particulars of this revelatory moment, until she was left with nothing but the feeling that something important had occurred. At the poem’s conclusion, she writes that if Jews could somehow remember that moment at Sinai as it was experienced by men and women, that sacred moment could be recreated (see Yitro, Voices, p. 425).

In this Commentary, the section called Contemporary Reflection contains responses by women who, in a variety of ways, explore the continuing meanings of the revelation of Torah. Written by Jewish professionals from a variety of fields, these pieces represent new, individual wrestlings with the biblical text. Explicitly or implicitly revealing an awareness of both biblical and post-biblical interpretations, the brief essays reflect a contemporary, often feminist, perspective. They not only focus on women’s roles and concerns, but also attempt to draw on women’s lived experiences (what Geller describes as “the Torah of our lives”) in order to create to recreate Jewish memory (as articulated by Plaskow and Feld) and, in the process, engender Judaism (as suggested by Adler).

Many of the topics explored in these reflections are identical to those found in other sections of this Commentary, including notions of covenant, peoplehood, religious leadership, free will, social justice, purity, pollution, sacrifice, forgiveness, and mercy. Yet instead of reading the text within a post-biblical or early rabbinic context, these reflections offer readings that are clearly in the present and have implications for the future. Some underscore the contemporary relevance of the Torah’s teachings, like Noa Kushner’s reflection on parashat P’kudei and God’s earthly presence, and Alice Shalvi’s on parashat Ki Tavo and the Israelites’ settling in the land of Israel. Others, like Suzanne Singer’s reflection on the hardening of Pharaoh’s heart in parashat Bo, suggest reading against the text—creating counter-narratives that provoke new theological questions and problems. Many of the pieces move beyond the text altogether, using words, phrases, or concepts within a particular parashah as a means of exploring issues and ideas that are of particular interest to contemporary readers, including women. Judith Plaskow, for example, draws on the priestly evaluation of sexual behavior in parashat Acharei Mot to discuss the persistence of homophobia as well as sexual and family violence in today’s society; in my reflection on parashat Haazinu, I reject the text’s imagery of God as Rock and Warrior, and instead offer new images that, in my view, better convey the love and justice of God. Writing more personally, Zoë Klein, in her reflection on parashat Ki Tisa, draws upon similarities to her husband’s proposing marriage to her at Mount Sinai and God’s continual revelation to Israel there, using one to view the other as moments of “eternal, loving joining,” while Blu Greenberg explores the impact of sudden loss, as she grapples with parashat Sh'mini.

WOMEN AND CONTEMPORARY REVELATION

The importance of the Contemporary Reflection sections of this Commentary is that they enable us to hear women's voices that reckon with divine revelation. The reflections in this Commentary represent different attitudes toward the Torah and the many ways in which its teachings can be appropriated into our lives. While some authors defend its teachings, others challenge them. Yet each essay shows the significance of Torah as a record of God's revelation to Israel: it is a repository of Jewish memory, however incomplete, from which we, as individuals and as members of contemporary Jewish communities, can attempt to hear and understand the voice of God.

—Ellen M. Umansky

The Poetry of Torah and the Torah of Poetry

THIS COMMENTARY INVITES the reader to meet the Torah text on new terms and to read the text through new eyes.

In addition to more traditional modes of interpretation, this Commentary includes poetry, an innovative mode of expanding and extending the Torah text. In the Voices section at the conclusion of each parashah, we have collected poetry, along with selected prose pieces, to invite you to consider how issues and themes in each Torah portion reflect and illuminate women's lives and experiences. This essay will explore the intention and the process of collecting the poems included in this volume.

Poetry and the Oral Tradition

The Torah is a living document. While some contemporary Jews may think of the Torah as a static, fixed "book," the Torah has always been read aloud or chanted as an essential part of weekly, Shabbat, and holiday synagogue ritual. This declamatory aspect of Torah reading invites response, and the rich history of Torah commentary has developed from and continues to depend upon listeners' familiarity with the oral text. Public reading brings together the intensely personal encounter with sacred text with the shared experience of hearing the text chanted or read aloud. Mirroring the communal experience of prayer, which, for Jews, always frames the public reading of Torah, each person is challenged to listen with concentrated attention: both as a member of the community and as an individual, hearing the words each time as if for the first time.

Poetry, too, demands oral recitation. By complementing each Torah portion with poetry, we are continuing the oral tradition of intentional listening and of challenging the "listener" to make connections between the text and your own life through the medium of commentary—in this case, in the form of poetry. As the poet Adrienne Rich writes, "What poetry is made of is so old, so familiar, that it's easy to forget that it's not just the words." Rather, "every poem breaks a silence that had to be overcome." Furthermore, "in the wash of poetry, the old, beaten, worn stones of language take on colors." But these "colors," or meanings, may also "disappear when you sieve them up out of the streambed and try to sort them out" (What Is Found There: Notebooks on Poetry and Politics, 1993, p. 84). This is the challenge of poetry.

We invite you to meet the Torah text on new terms and to read it through new eyes.

The Challenges and Pleasures of Poetry

For many readers, poetry is a particularly demanding medium. Whether deprived of teachers who welcomed us into the rich and exciting world of poetic language, or bored as children by memorizing poetry that seemed to have no meaning or relevance, some of us draw away from a poem that meets us on the page, hesitating, perhaps even ashamed of what we misinterpret as our lack of skills to approach or unpack the poem. Perhaps we hesitate to approach poetry because we feel the poem beckoning and we are unsure how to respond. The poet Muriel Rukeyser writes, "A poem does invite, it does require. What does it invite? A poem invites you to feel. More than that: it invites you to respond. And better than that: a poem invites a total response" (The Life of Poetry, 1996, p. ii). When we move beyond our fears, we can begin to respond to the poem—and to the Torah.

THE POETRY OF TORAH AND THE TORAH OF POETRY

The Voices section invites you to give poetry a chance, to open your heart to the invitation to feel, to hear, to respond. We invite you to read each poem once, and then again, silently and aloud. Each reading will reveal new sounds, new meanings, new insights. Share your reading, and your interpretations with others. How does the poem illuminate the Torah text? How does the Torah text illuminate the poem? How does the poem serve as midrash, providing a deeper or broader reading of the text? If a poem is not immediately clear or understood, return to it at a later point. Read it again. Discuss the poem with your study partner, your friends, your teachers. In most cases we include references to verses in the Torah that we consider relevant to the poem; elsewhere we omit these because the poem relates to the parashah as a whole. Give each poem an opportunity to speak to you, opening a powerful and fresh perspective into the timeless Torah text. You may be surprised and delighted with your response.

Poetry and Women's Experience

Since ancient times, women have collected and recorded their stories, their dreams, their fears, and their hopes. While their fathers and brothers may have bent over sacred texts, women composed songs and poems to welcome new life, to celebrate weddings, to mourn the dead. Some of these works were passed down from mother to daughter, orally or in writing. While some compositions were preserved, other writings—like many precious belongings—were lost as our people wandered from continent to continent, changing location, language, and worldview.

Women's poetry begins in the Torah, with the Song of Miriam (Exodus 15:20–21), perhaps even the Song at the Sea (see at Exodus 15:1–19). Several other biblical poems are associated with women, namely the Song of Deborah (Judges 5), the Song of Hannah (I Samuel 2) and most of Song of Songs; and women were known to compose and perform victory songs and laments (see the introduction to parashat Haazinu, p. 1251). However, we know of few writings by Jewish women between ancient times and the 16th century, when Deborah Ascarelli composed and translated liturgy for her community in Rome. In the next century, Gluckel of Hameln composed her memoirs and Sarah Copio Sullam wrote poetry for her family and friends in Venice. Another kind of poetic text that has been preserved are numerous tkhines, petitionary prayers, some of which were written by women, including Rebecca Tiktiner of Prague (16th century) and Sarah daughter of Tovim of Podolia, Ukraine (18th century). For many years, these prayers served as a primary liturgical resource for many women, particularly for those whose language skills did not include Hebrew. In the wake of the Haskalah (the so-called Jewish Enlightenment, beginning in the late 18th century), we begin to see published works and essays by women, including poetry, first by Rachel Morpurgo in Trieste (1790–1871; see Balak, Voices, p. 964), Grace Aguilar (1816–1847) in Britain, and Penina Moise (1797–1880) and Emma Lazarus (1849–1887) in the United States, among others. These poets made their voices heard by a wider audience, writing primarily in their native tongues. (See The JPS Guide to Jewish Women: 600 BCE–1900 CE, edited by Emily Taitz, Sondra Henry, and Cheryl Tallan, 2003.) Although considerably limited in quantity, women's diaries, tkhines, memoirs, and poetry form a parallel tradition to the rich body of codes, commentary, and discursive literature composed by Jewish men throughout the ages.

The poetry collected in this Commentary's Voices section reflects the writings of Jewish women across a wide chronological and geographical span. Whereas some poems date back as far as the 17th century, the majority were written in the last half century, largely by American, Israeli, and European poets. Although all the poetry in this volume appears in English, many poems have been translated from Hebrew, Yiddish, German, Russian, and other languages. The poets include both well-known, award-winning poets, as well as new, emerging poets. While a number of the poems were written as responses to specific parts of the Torah, others were not. In fact, many of the poets included in this volume were surprised and delighted to discover their work being juxtaposed as Torah commentary. A poem is the poet's gift to the world; once released from the pen, the words enter hearts and minds in ways that the poet might never have dreamed or imagined. The wide range of poetry in this volume reflects the elasticity, the expansiveness, and the timelessness of a Torah that is open to continued and continual interpretation.

THE POETRY OF TORAH AND THE TORAH OF POETRY

The Process

In keeping with the larger goals of this Commentary, the Voices section contains poems that, in some way, illuminate the experience of Jewish women as participants in, readers of, and heirs to the Torah and biblical history. The poems in Voices add depth to the four other types of commentary in each parashah by complementing, strengthening, and opening new readings of each portion. The poems fill in some of the lacunae of the biblical text by considering questions such as: Who were the women of the Bible? What might have they thought about and felt? What were the nature and the boundaries of their relationships with other women, with the men in their lives, with their children, and with their neighbors? When no women are mentioned in a story, where are the women? Who might they have been? While some of the poems give voice to the experiences and emotions of women mentioned in the Torah, others address broader topics and themes raised explicitly or implicitly in a given parashah, such as approaching the holy, sexual awakening, risk taking, creating and sustaining families and communities, pregnancy and childbirth, infertility, loss and mourning, and more.

For the other four sections that accompany each parashah, contributors were invited to write for this volume. In contrast, the Voices section was assembled by a small working group made up of the Editors (Tamara Cohn Eskenazi and Andrea L. Weiss), two members of the Editorial Board (Sherry Blumberg and Sue Levi Elwell), the Managing Editor (Hara Person), the Project Coordinator (Barbara Koppel), and our Rabbinic Student Interns (Jocelyn Hudson and Leah Berkowitz). Because our group included women who lived across the United States, we conducted our work on the telephone through conference calls, often meeting once a week for two hours at a time. This diverse group included women of different ages and diverse journeys. We discovered that we brought to our conversations a rich range of Jewish women's experiences—as daughter, sister, friend, beloved, partner, mother of children by birth and by adoption, grandmother, and widow. The poetry that we considered challenged, comforted, and changed us. We hope you will share those experiences.

As we started gathering potential Voices material, we cast a wide net. We read widely, networking with poets, writers, teachers of literature, and our own friends and colleagues, sharing favorite books and poets, and spending countless hours in the stacks of libraries and bookstores and on the Internet. We found ample material for the narrative portions of the Torah; other genres presented a greater challenge.

As we evaluated material, we asked: How might a woman's perspective enable us to ask new questions of the Torah? How are our understandings of gender and sexuality challenged by biblical texts, and how might biblical text be challenged by our growing understandings of these topics? What is the message of this poem, and how does it intersect with the biblical text? How far can we push the text, and also push each poem? What happens when we read and interpret familiar signs and symbols in new and powerfully different ways? How does an innovative reading of the text make that text more accessible and meaningful for contemporary readers?

THE POETRY OF TORAH AND THE TORAH OF POETRY

During our phone calls, we read the selections aloud and discussed whether they merited inclusion and, if so, where they might fit. As our process continued, our understanding of our task deepened. We aimed to find, or, when necessary, commission or compose, poems that could act as spotlights on different aspects of each parashah. We hoped that together, these poems would reveal several distinct points of entry into each Torah portion. Additionally, for each parashah we attempted to balance poems that readers might find more accessible with those that might prove more challenging and require greater interpretive effort.

The Torah, which weaves together narrative, law, and song, is our people's essential poetic expression. It calls to each of us, inviting attention and response. Poetry is a resource for facing challenges. As Muriel Rukeyser writes, "In this moment when we face horizons and conflicts wider than ever before, we want our resources, the ways of strength. We look again to the human wish, its faiths, the means by which the imagination leads us to surpass ourselves. If there is a feeling that something has been lost, it may be because much has not yet been used, much is still to be found and begun" (The Life of Poetry, 1996, p. 8). The time has come for all of us to hear women's songs that echo, respond to, and challenge the themes of our ancient texts: celebrating the victory of the human spirit, crying out with the pain of loss, reflecting upon the quiet joy, and feeling the ecstasy of standing in the presence of holiness. Rukeyser observes that "much is still to be found and begun." The Voices sections begin this process of restoring, renewing, and invigorating the study of—and delight in—the Torah of poetry and the poetry of Torah. May these poems open paths of insight and joy.

—Sue Levi Elwell

Confidential -- for Sefaria conversion use only. May not be shared outside Sefaria.

בראשית ♦ B'reishit

GENESIS

GENESIS IS A BOOK OF beginnings, birthings, and blessings. It depicts the origin of humankind as a family, and then it follows the development of one particular family. Genesis serves as the “prequel” to the Exodus story that the Bible repeatedly presents as Israel’s founding event. Tracing the people’s origin back to its beginning, Genesis identifies who the Israelites are and how they came to be in Egypt.

After a brief yet crucial description of how God creates an orderly world and its inhabitants (1:1–2:3), the book persistently focuses on families. The first part (Genesis 1–11) provides an overview of the human family as a whole, establishing the unity of all people while also accounting for diversity and dispersion. These early chapters depict human development as a series of transgressions and transformations in which both God and humankind discover and develop their relationship. The rest of the book focuses on Israel’s ancestors: Abraham, Sarah and Hagar (Genesis 12–23); Rebekah and Isaac (Genesis 24–26); Jacob, Leah, and Rachel (Genesis 27–35, with a genealogy of Esau in 36); Joseph, Judah, and their brothers (Genesis 37–50)—each generation with its trials, tribulations, and triumphs. In these accounts, women play an active and integral role.

Resourceful women are central to Genesis.

Although many traditional interpreters (both Jewish and non-Jewish) believe that these stories depict the actual lives of our ancestors, most contemporary scholars consider the historical information in Genesis to be more oblique. Such scholars consider Genesis to be a tapestry woven from several sources, sometimes labeled as J, E, and P (see Women and Interpretation of the Torah, p. xxxvi); they suppose that the book is the work of later generations who retroject into the past the tensions and circumstances of their own time. Thus, a careful reading of Genesis offers insights into how ancient Israel constructed its identity at different points in its history. For example, Jacob's sons apparently represent clans that at some point banded together and then sought to account for this later unity by constructing a shared genealogy. Likewise, stories such as the tale about Lot's daughters (Genesis 19) try to account for both affinity and tension with surrounding cultures.

Considering Genesis in its broader ancient Near Eastern and Mediterranean context—where stories of origin feature violent creation and heroic and semi-divine figures—highlights Genesis' distinctive worldview. Genesis begins with a peaceful creation and then concentrates on an ordinary, aged couple (Sarah and Abraham, who become extraordinary as their story unfolds), with whom God enters into a covenant, and on their somewhat fumbling offspring. Far from promoting fame and fortune through great feats of might, Genesis illustrates how persons walk with God (17:1) dialogue with God (Genesis 18), and also wrestle with God (Genesis 32) in the pursuit of blessings.

The theme of sibling rivalry runs through Genesis from beginning to end (in contrast with Greek mythology, in which intergenerational conflict often occupies center stage). Beginning with the first murder (Abel by Cain; Genesis 4), competition between siblings plagues every generation. Eventually, the persistent, murderous impulse is channeled into repentance and reconciliation when Joseph unites tearfully with his brothers (see 45:1–15 and 50:18–22). Sibling rivalry and competition also characterize the story of the book's two prominent sisters, Leah and Rachel (Genesis 29–30 and 35:16–20). Remarkably, however, their competition results in producing children, jointly building the “House of Israel” (as the community affirms in Ruth 4:11).

Beginning with daring Eve, resourceful women are central to the book of Genesis. Women are key, not merely because they give birth, but because they shape their family's destiny; there would be no “Israel” without the matriarchs. Their stories belie any claim that Genesis privileges males at the expense of females. Rather, the book privileges the ones who secure the continuity of the family and perpetuate God's blessings. In addition to Eve (Genesis 1–4), Sarah (Genesis 12–23), Hagar (Genesis 16 and 21), Rebekah (Genesis 24–28), Leah, Rachel, and their handmaids Bilhah and Zilpah (Genesis 29–31), Genesis devotes attention to the dilemma of Lot's daughters (Genesis 19), the tragic fate of Dinah (Genesis 34), the triumph of Tamar (Genesis 38), and the seductive Potiphar's wife (Genesis 39). Together, these women represent the biblical understanding of humans as God's partners in maintaining God's good world.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

בראשית ◆ B'reishit

GENESIS 1:1–6:8

Creation and Transformation

WHO ARE WE? The question is answered in the first portion of Genesis as follows: We are God's prized creation, inhabiting a good world that God has made. We are a constellation of four relationships: with the earth from whence we came and whither we return (Genesis 2), with each other as women and men equally blessed and jointly commissioned to care for the world (Genesis 1), with the animal world toward which we have responsibility (Genesis 1 and 2), and with God in whose image we are made (Genesis 1) and whose breath animates us (Genesis 2). Human disobedience complicates these relationships but does not destroy them.

Genesis 1 emphasizes the power of language and the reality of goodness. Humankind is embedded in a larger world over which God reigns supreme, but within which human beings can and do play a unique, decisive role.

A wide-angle lens that encompasses the whole world in Genesis 1 is augmented in Genesis 2–3 with a zoom lens that discloses an “up close and personal” relationship with God. This split-screen view characterizes the Torah as a whole and introduces a biblical practice of offering more than one perspective on important events.

The subsequent narratives, through Genesis 11, continue to respond to universal human questions about origins. They account for human suffering and inequality while affirming the sovereignty of a God who deeply cares for the world and its creatures.

Genesis 1–11 depicts God as still discovering the qualities of the material at hand (humankind) and (re)assessing its potential. Despite repeated disappointments, God remains faithful and hopeful, adjusting expectations and offering humankind new tools and guidance.

No biblical story has had more influence on women's lives and identity.

The parashah concludes at a nadir, with God's disappointment in humankind when violence corrupts goodness (6:6). However, the text also makes clear the possibility of renewal despite decline (a theme throughout the Bible). Goodness and connectedness persist.

No biblical story has had more influence on women's lives and identity—and none has been more often reinterpreted through later cultural biases—than the creation of woman in Genesis 2 and the expulsion from the Garden in Genesis 3. The version of creation of humankind in 1:26–28, which portrays equality between the sexes and their shared reflection of God's image, is typically overlooked in favor of the more ambiguous one in Genesis 2, which is typically read as one in which man precedes woman in time. Consequently, the first woman has been cast by later interpreters as an afterthought: second and therefore secondary in value, not essential to God's plan. She has also been held solely or at least primarily responsible for human suffering.

However, a close reading of Genesis 1–3 indicates that such (mis)readings overlook the context and nuances of the depiction of woman. Suffice it to say here that the first woman is depicted as a discerning, responsible person who despite transgression (Genesis 3) maintains a creative partnership with both God and the first man. She is rightly recognized by her man as a source of life (3:20).

Other named women make cameo appearances: Ada, Zillah, and Naamah (4:19–23). The parashah concludes with a mysterious account about the illegitimate seizing of women, a prelude to the flood story that will follow (see at 6:1–8).

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

Outline—

I. THE FIRST CREATION STORY

Creation of World, Time, and Life (1:1–2:3)

II. THE SECOND CREATION STORY

From the “Human” to “Woman and Man” (2:4–25)

- A. The first human (vv. 4–7)
- B. Humankind's first home: the Garden of Eden (vv. 8–17)
- C. The creation of human partnership (vv. 18–25)

III. TEMPTATION, TRANSGRESSION, AND TRANSFORMATION

In the Garden of Eden (3:1–24)

- A. Temptation and transgression (vv. 1–6)
- B. The transformation (vv. 7–21)
- C. The expulsion (vv. 22–24)

IV. LIFE OUTSIDE THE GARDEN (4:1–6:8)

- A. Eve and Adam reunite: childbirth and naming (4:1–2)
- B. The first sin: Cain and Abel (4:3–24)
- C. Eve and Adam reunite: childbirth and naming (4:25–26)
- D. The recapitulation of human origins, and their genealogy to Noah (5:1–32)
- E. The marriage between heavenly beings and earthly women (6:1–4)
- F. Conclusion: God's regret (6:5–8)

1:1

When God was about to create heaven and earth, ²the earth was a chaos, unformed, and on the chaotic waters' face there was darkness. Then God's spirit glided over the face of the waters, ³and God said, "Let there be light!"—and there was light. ⁴And when God saw how good the light was,

בְּרָא שָׁמֶן בְּרָא אֱלֹהִים אֵת הַשָּׁמֶן
וְאֵת הָאָרֶץ: ² וְהָאָרֶץ הִיְצָה תְּהִלָּה וְבָהּ
וְחַשְׁךְ עַל־פְנֵי תְהֻום וְרוּחַ אֱלֹהִים מְרַחְבֶת
עַל־פְנֵי הַמְּפִירִים: ³ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְהִי אוֹר
וַיְהִי אֹור: ⁴ וַיֹּרֶא אֱלֹהִים אֲתִידָאָר בַּיּ

The First Creation Story

CREATION OF WORLD, TIME,
AND LIFE (1:1–2:3)

Genesis 1 unfolds in a rhythmic, poetic fashion, depicting an orderly creation of the world and life in six days. Genesis does not offer a scientific account of creation but an interpretation and a system of values that encodes from the start three essential ideas: the power of language, especially God's word; the goodness of God's world; and the orderly nature of the world. Creating the world begins with a series of separations—from chaos to differentiated bodies—that, with one exception (day 2), are pronounced as “good.” In the first three days God creates a context for life. In the last three God creates heavenly and earthly bodies to inhabit the space. The movement of each day, from evening to morning, replicates a journey from darkness to light.

1. When God was about to create. The more familiar expression “In the beginning” has been replaced by the more accurate translation. As Rashi noted, the opening verses do not claim creation out of nothing.

2. chaotic waters’. The feminine noun t'hom, often translated as “the deep,” echoes the name of the Mesopotamian goddess Tiamat. According to the Babylonian creation myth, Tiamat was brutally killed by her rebellious offspring in the process of creating the world. See also at 7:11, “great deep.”

3. God said. God's use of language contrasts with some other ancient Near East creation stories that emphasize battles among the gods. By privileging language as a source of creative power, the Torah identifies tools for renewal in times of military defeat.

“Let there be light!” As the first of God's creative acts, light becomes not only a physical phenomenon but also a symbol of clarity and illumination that extend beyond the physical.

4. God saw how good. This phrase repeats in similar form six times in this passage, expressing the basic goodness of God's creation.

- A woman would have up to eight pregnancies to provide the optimum family size.

ANOTHER VIEW ▶ 27

- For the Rabbis, the female also shares in the divine image.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ▶ 28

- Our sexualities seem to point toward some element in the divine nature.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ▶ 29

- Your hands create my body / your mouth breathes life in me / my face shines.

VOICES ▶ 32

God divided the light from the darkness; ⁵God then called the light Day, and called the darkness Night, and there was evening and there was morning, [the] first day.

⁶God then said, “Let there be an expanse in the midst of the waters, and let it divide water from water!” ⁷So God made the expanse, separating the waters beneath the expanse from the waters above the expanse—and so it was. ⁸God then called the expanse Sky, and there was evening and there was morning, a second day.

⁹God then said, “Let the waters beneath the sky be collected in one place, so that the dry ground may be seen!”—and so it was. ¹⁰And God called the dry ground Earth, and called the collected waters Seas. And when God saw how good it was, ¹¹God said, “Let the earth grow vegetation, seed-bearing plants, fruit trees on the earth that bear fruit, each true to its type, with its seed in it!”—and so it was. ¹²The earth brought forth vegetation, seed-bearing plants, each true to its type, and trees bearing fruit, each true to its type, with its seed in it. And God saw how good it was, ¹³and there was evening and there was morning, a third day.

¹⁴God then said, “Let there be lights in the expanse of the sky, to separate day from night, to be markers for sacred seasons, for days and years, ¹⁵and to be lights in the expanse of the sky, spilling light upon the earth!”—and so it was. ¹⁶Thus God made the two great lights: the greater light to govern the day, and the lesser light to govern the night and the stars. ¹⁷God set them in the sky’s expanse to spill light upon the earth, ¹⁸to govern the day and the טֹב וַיְבָדֵל אֱלֹהִים בֵּין הָאֹר וּבֵין הַחֶשֶׁךְ:

⁵ וַיְקַרְא אֱלֹהִים לְאוֹר יוֹם וְלַחֲשֶׁךְ קְרָא
 לִילָה וַיְהִי־עָרֶב וַיְהִי־בָּקָר יוֹם אֶחָד: פ
⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְהִי רְקִיעַ בְּתוֹךְ הַמְּיֻמָּן
 וַיֹּהִי מְבָדֵל בֵּין מֵימִים לְמֵימִים: ⁷ וַיַּעֲשֶׂה
 אֱלֹהִים אֶת־הַרְקִיעַ וַיְבָדֵל בֵּין הַמְּיֻמָּן אֲשֶׁר
 מִתְחַת לְرָקִיעַ וּבֵין הַמְּיֻמָּן אֲשֶׁר מִעַל
 לְרָקִיעַ וַיֹּהִי־כֵן: ⁸ וַיֹּקְרָא אֱלֹהִים לְרָקִיעַ
 שְׁמָיִם וַיְהִי־עָרֶב וַיְהִי־בָּקָר יוֹם שְׁנִי: פ
⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְקֹוֹן הַמְּיֻמָּן מִתְחַת
 הַשְׁמִינִים אֶל־מִקְומָם אֶחָד וְתַרְאָה נִיבְשָׁה
 וַיֹּהִי־כֵן: ¹⁰ וַיֹּקְרָא אֱלֹהִים לִיבְשָׁה אֶרֶץ
 וְלִמְקוֹמָה הַמְּיֻמָּן קָרָא יְמִים וַיָּרָא אֱלֹהִים
 בִּיטּוֹב: ¹¹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים תְּرַשֵּׁא הָאָרֶץ
 דְּשָׁא עַשֵּׂב מִזְרִיעַ וְעַז פָּרַי עַשֵּׂה פָרַי
 לְמִינּוֹ אֲשֶׁר זְרוּבָו עַל־הָאָרֶץ וְעַל
¹² וְתֹצֵא הָאָרֶץ דְּשָׁא עַשֵּׂב מִזְרִיעַ זְרוּבָו
 לְמִינּוֹ וְעַז עַשְׂה־פָרַי אֲשֶׁר זְרוּבָו
 לְמִינּוֹ וַיָּרָא אֱלֹהִים בִּיטּוֹב: ¹³ וַיֹּהִי־
 עָרֶב וַיְהִי־בָּקָר יוֹם שְׁלִישִׁי: פ

¹⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְהִי מְאֹרֶת בָּרְקִיעַ
 הַשְׁמִינִים לְהַבְּדִיל בֵּין הַיּוֹם וּבֵין הַלִּילָה
 וְהִיוּ לְאַתָּת וְלִמְעוּדִים וְלִמְיֻמִּים וְשָׁנִים:
¹⁵ וְהִיוּ לְמִאוֹרֶת בָּרְקִיעַ הַשְׁמִינִים לְהָאִיר
 עַל־הָאָרֶץ וַיֹּהִי־כֵן: ¹⁶ וַיַּעֲשֶׂה אֱלֹהִים אֶת־
 שְׁנִי הַמְּאֹרֶת הַגָּדוֹלָה אֶת־הַמְּאֹור הַגָּדוֹלָה
 לְמִמְשְׁלַת הַיּוֹם וְאֶת־הַמְּאֹור הַקָּטָן
 לְמִמְשְׁלַת הַלִּילָה וְאֶת־הַבּוֹכְבִים: ¹⁷ וַיְתַּהְתַּה
 אֲתָּם אֱלֹהִים בָּרְקִיעַ הַשְׁמִינִים לְהָאִיר
 עַל־הָאָרֶץ: ¹⁸ וְלִמְשָׁל בַּיּוֹם וּבַלִּילָה

God divided. God brings order out of chaos by separating the swirling mass into coherent bodies (land, contained water, sky), which will provide a habitat and sustenance for life.

10. collected. The noun mikveh is rendered here as an adjective to suit English idiom. It is the usual word for a reservoir or other bodies of water (Exodus 7:19, Leviticus 11:36), including eventually a ritual bath. On the mikveh as ritual bath, see Tazria, Contemporary Reflection, p. 652.

night, to separate the light from the darkness; and God saw how good it was.¹⁹ And there was evening and there was morning, a fourth day.

²⁰God then said, “Let the waters bring forth swarms of living creatures, and let the birds fly over the earth, across the face of the expanse of the sky!”

²¹God then formed the great sea monsters, and every living creature that creeps, with which the waters swarm, all true to their types, and every winged bird, each true to its type; and God saw how good it was.²²God then blessed them, saying, “Be fruitful and multiply, fill the waters of the seas, and let the birds multiply in the earth!”²³And there was evening and there was morning, a fifth day.

²⁴God then said, “Let the earth bring forth living creatures of every type: domestic animals and creeping things and wild animals, each true to its type!”—and so it was.²⁵Thus God made the wild animals, each true to its type, and the domestic animals, each true to its type, and every creature that creeps on the ground, each true to its type; and God saw how good it was.²⁶God now said, “Let us make human beings in our image, after our likeness;

26–30. Day six, the most complex and detailed, first describes the emergence of land creatures from the earth (vv. 24–25). Thus far, each species has been endowed with the capacity of reproduction and renewal (vv. 12, 21, 25). The narration now dwells the most on the creation of humankind (vv. 26–27), indicating its importance in the created realm.

26. “Let us make.” God is speaking to the divine entourage; compare Genesis 6:4 and Job 1:6, which envision b'nei Elohim (literally “sons of God”) as divine beings subordinate to God.

“human beings.” Heb. adam, a singular noun, stands here for a collective, like the English words “fish” or “fowl.” It refers to humankind as a whole, including both females and males (compare 5:1–2). Older translations render it as “man,” often meant in its gender-neutral sense—a usage that is sometimes misunderstood and thereby misleading. In וְלֹהֲבֵל בֵּין הָאָרֶךְ וּבֵין הַחֲשֶׁךְ וַיַּרְא אֱלֹהִים בַּיּוֹם כִּי־טוֹב:¹⁹ וַיַּהַי־עָרָב וַיַּהַי־בָּקָר יוֹם רְבִיעִי:

²⁰וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יִשְׁרְצֻוּ הַמְּוּim שְׂרֵץ נֶפֶשׁ חַיָּה וְעוֹזָק יַעֲופֵף עַל־הָאָרֶץ עַל־פִּנְךְ רְקִיעַ הַשְׁמִינִים:

²¹וַיַּבְרָא אֱלֹהִים אֶת־הַתְּנִינִים הַגָּדְלִים וְאֶת פָּלָנֶפֶשׁ הַזְּבִיה | הַרְמִשָּׁת אֲשֶׁר שְׁרְצֻוּ הַמְּוּim לְמִינֵּהם וְאֶת פָּלָעָז בְּנֵקָע לְמִינֵּהוּ וַיַּרְא אֱלֹהִים בַּיּוֹם כִּי־טוֹב:²² וַיַּבְרָא אֱלֹהִים לְאָמֵר פָּרוּ וּרְבוּ וּמְלָאוּ אֶת־הַמְּוּim בְּנֵפֶם וְהַעֲזֹף יַרְבֵּ בָּאָרֶץ:

²³וַיַּהַי עָרָב וַיַּהַי־בָּקָר יוֹם חֲמִישִׁי:

²⁴וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים תֹּצֵא הָאָרֶץ נֶפֶשׁ חַיָּה לְמִינֵּה בְּהַמִּזְבֵּחַ וְרִמְשָׁבֵחַ וְחַיְתוֹן־אָרֶץ לְמִינֵּה וַיַּהַי־כָּן:

²⁵וַיַּעֲשֵׂה אֱלֹהִים אֶת־חַיָּה הָאָרֶץ לְמִינֵּה וְאֶת־הַבְּהָמָה לְמִינֵּה וְאֶת פָּלָרְמָשׁ הָאָרְמָה לְמִינֵּהוּ וַיַּרְא אֱלֹהִים בַּיּוֹם:

²⁶וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים נָעֲשָׂה אָדָם בָּצְלָמָנוּ בְּדִמוֹתֵנוּ וַיַּרְדוּ בְּדִילָת הַיּוֹם וּבְעֹזֶף הַשְׁמִינִים fact, the noun adam is almost always a generic term, employed when gender is not germane. Apart from the thirty references to the particular adam of the Eden story (who gives rise to the name “Adam”) and one to the progenitor of a lineage (Joshua 14:15), none of the Bible’s 530 other occurrences of adam refers to a particular individual (David Stein, “What Does It Mean to Be a ‘Man?’” 2006–7, § VI.B; “adam,” Semantic Dictionary of Biblical Hebrew, 2007; Alison Grant, “adam and ish: Man in the OT,” 1977, pp. 5, 11).

Here, the preceding verses have narrated the generic creation of other earthly creatures, a context that now evokes the correspondingly generic sense of adam. Thus, the Hebrew text unambiguously presents female and male as co-created and equal.

“our image, after our likeness.” These tantalizing attributes are uniquely bestowed upon humanand let them hold sway over the fish of the sea and the birds of the sky, over the beasts, over all the earth, over all that creeps upon the earth.”²⁷ So God created the human beings in [the divine] image, creating [them] in the image of God, creating them male and female.²⁸ God then blessed them, and God said to them, “Be fruitful and multiply; fill the earth and tame it; hold sway over the fish of the sea and the birds of the sky, and over every animal that creeps on the earth.”²⁹ And God said, “Look, I have given you all the seed-bearing plants on the face of the earth, and every tree that has in it seed-bearing fruit—these are yours to eat.³⁰ And to every land animal, and to every bird of the sky, and to all that creeps on the earth in which is the breath of life, I [give] all green

וּבְבָהָמָה וּבְכָל־הָאָרֶץ וּבְכָל־חֶרְמֶשׁ הַרְמֵשׁ
 עַל־הָאָרֶץ :²⁷ וַיֹּבֶרֶא אֱלֹהִים | אֲתִיהָאָדָם
 בְּצָלְמוֹ בָּצָלָם אֱלֹהִים בָּרָא אֹתוֹ זֶכֶר
 וַיַּקְרֵב בָּרָא אֹתָם :²⁸ וַיֹּבֶרֶא אֹתָם אֱלֹהִים
 וַיֹּאמֶר לָהֶם אֱלֹהִים פְּרוּ וּרְבוּ וְמִלְאָאוּ אֶת־
 הָאָרֶץ וּכְבָשָׂה וַיַּדַּו בְּדִגְתַּת הַיּוֹם וּבְעֵלָת
 הַשְׁמִינִים וּבְכָל־חַיָּה הַרְמֵשׁ עַל־הָאָרֶץ :²⁹
 וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים הַנֶּה נָתַתִּי לְכֶם אֶת־כָּל־
 עַשְׂבָּה | זֶרֶעׂ וּרְעֵעֶן אֲשֶׁר־בָּרַע עַל־פָּנֵי כָּל־הָאָרֶץ
 וְאֶת־כָּל־הָעֵץ אֲשֶׁר־בָּרַע פְּרִיעֵץ זֶרֶעׂ וּרְעֵעֶן
 לְכֶם יִהְיֶה לְאַכְלָה :³⁰ וְלִכְלִיתִית הָאָרֶץ
 וְלִכְלָל־עַזְפַּת הַשְׁמִינִים וְלִכְלָל רֹמֶשׁ עַל־הָאָרֶץ
 אֲשֶׁר־בָּרַע נֶפֶשׁ חַיָּה אֲתִכְלִילֶךָ עַשְׂבָּה kind as a whole. They introduce a new way for the divine to be manifested in the world through every human being. The notion that all humans are in the divine image is in sharp contrast to ancient Near East traditions where only kings represent the divine. This radical idea from the Hebrew Bible proved to be a fundamental notion in Western history.

“bold sway.” See at 1:28 and 9:1–7.

27. human beings. This translation resorts to the plural to avoid using misleading masculine pronouns later in the verse. Literally the Hebrew has: “And God created the adam. In the image of God he created him/it; male and female he created them” (shifting the object pronoun from singular to plural). By referring to adam, the text is not describing an individual but a new class of beings that comprises female and male from the start, both of them in God’s image. This idea is repeated more clearly in 5:1–2. The shift from singular to plural does not convey that man was created before woman. (That the singular pronoun is masculine can be explained as necessary for grammatical gender agreement in the Hebrew language.) Rather, it seems to say that our humanity, as adam, precedes our division into sexual categories. Our humanity comes first; our sexual identity next.

male and female. This passage explicitly proclaims the co-creation of female and male, both in God’s image. It establishes the goodness and gender balance as the foundation for all that follows. The terms male (zachar) and female (n’kevah) designate biological categories, thus relevant to fertility, a major theme in this passage. The word zachar evokes the Hebrew word for “remembering,” and n’kevah evokes the word for being pierced.

God then blessed them. Female and male receive the same blessings.

28. “Be fruitful and multiply.” The harsh conditions and the fragility of life in the ancient world make fertility a most valued gift and necessity. The plain sense of the text is that this “first commandment” is issued to both female and male.

“bold sway.” This promise surely brought comfort to early readers who lived at the mercy of the natural world, who were vulnerable to its unpredictability, and who had reason to fear becoming prey to wild beasts. It is not a mandate to exploit nature. See 9:1–7 where this dominion is altered.

29. “I have given you.” See at 9:2–4.

vegetation for food.”—and so it was.³¹ God then surveyed all that [God] had made, and look—it was very good! And there was evening and there was morning, the sixth day.

2 Completed now were heaven and earth and all their host.² On the seventh day, God had completed the work that had been done, ceasing then on the seventh day from all the work that [God] had done.³ Then God blessed the seventh day and made it holy, and ceased from all the creative work that God [had chosen] to do.

⁴This is the chronicle of heaven and earth when they were created, on the day God made earth

לְאַכְלָה וַיְהִי־כֵן: ³¹ וַיּוֹרֶא אֱלֹהִים אֶת־כָּל־אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה וְגַם־טוֹב מִאֶזְרָךְ וַיְהִי־בָּקָר יוֹם הַשְׁשִׁי: ב וַיְכַלּוּ הַשְׁמִינִים וְהַעֲרֵץ וְכָל־צְבָאָם: ² וַיְכַל אֱלֹהִים בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁבִיעִי מִלְאָכְתוֹ אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה וַיִּשְׁבַּת בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁבִיעִי מִכְלָלָתָנוּ אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה: ³ וַיְבָרֶךְ אֱלֹהִים אֶת־יּוֹם הַשְׁבִיעִי וַיִּקְדַּשׁ אֹתוֹ כִּי בָּשְׁבַת מִכְלָלִמְלָאָכְתוֹ אֲשֶׁר־בָּרָא אֱלֹהִים לְעֵשָׂות: כ

⁴ אֱלֹהִים תֹּולְדוּת הַשְׁמִינִים וְהַעֲרֵץ בְּהַפְרָאָם בַּיּוֹם עֲשָׂות יְהֹוָה אֱלֹהִים אָרֶץ וְשָׁמָיִם:

3:1. it was very good. The final survey, which affirms the goodness of all that God has created, comes only after humankind appears.

2:2. the seventh day. The number seven in the Bible signifies completeness. Only the seventh day, not yet designated as Shabbat, is holy. Time, not space, is thus consecrated, which (as A. J. Heschel notes) becomes a hallmark of Judaism. The sequence from lesser to greater, culminating with the Sabbath, is relevant to assessing the creation of woman. Last does not mean least in Genesis.

The Second Creation Story

FROM THE “HUMAN” TO “WOMAN AND MAN” (2:4–25)

Genesis 2 offers a second perspective on creation, focusing on humankind. Genesis is unique in ancient Near Eastern literature in giving special attention to the formation of woman. In Greece, however, Hesiod (8th century b.c.e.) claimed that the first woman, Pandora, was created to ensnare men to their death. In contrast, Genesis 2 envisions the creation of woman and man for mutual benefit: “It is not good for the adam to be alone” (2:18). In contrast to Genesis 1, here the gender identity of the first adam is ambiguous (see at “the man,” v. 7); therefore, the status of woman in Genesis 2 remains open to different interpretations.

Many Jews and Christians over the centuries have interpreted the early portions of Genesis to mean that woman was secondary and thus subordinate, created merely for man’s benefit. Three factors argue against such interpretations. (1) The term adam is generic, not specifically “a man,” complicating the notion of the gender identity of the first person. (2) Even if one interprets this particular adam as male, last does not mean least. (Indeed, in Genesis 1 human beings are created last, a sequence that some interpreters consider a sign of superiority.) (3) God creates human partnership, not hierarchy, in Genesis 2. (For a different interpretation, see Contemporary Reflection, p. 29.)

THE FIRST HUMAN (2:4–7)

4. This verse bridges the text’s first two units. (The present translation places it with the second one.) Its first clause concludes the first story of Creation, and its second begins the story that follows.

יְהֹוָה. The first time in the Bible that God’s name—YHVH, liturgically read as Adonai—appears. Later traditions consider this name to repre-and heaven. ⁵No shrub of the field was yet on the earth, no plant of the field had yet sprung up—for God יְהוָה had not poured rain down upon the earth, and there was not a soul to till the soil—⁶though a flow would emerge from the earth and water the surface of the soil. ⁷Then God יְהוָה fashioned the man—dust from the soil—and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, so that the man became a living being.

⁵ וְכֹל־שִׁבְעַת הַשְׁדָה טְרֵם יוֹהִיה בָּאָרֶץ וּכְלַיְלָה עַשְׂבָּה הַשְׁדָה טְרֵם יָצַמֵּח בַּיּוֹם לֹא הַמְטַר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים עַל־הָאָרֶץ וְאָדָם אֲנֵן לְעָבֵד אֶת־הָאָדָמָה: ⁶ וְאֶת־יַעַלְהָ מִן־הָאָרֶץ וְהַשְׁקָה אֶת־בְּלִפְנֵי הָאָדָמָה: ⁷ וְיִצְחַר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים אֶת־הָאָדָם עַפְרֵם מִן־הָאָדָמָה וַיַּפְחֹד בְּאָפָיו נְשָׂמַת חַיִים וַיַּחֲזִיק הָאָדָם לְנֶפֶשׁ חַיָּה:

sent specific qualities of God, such as compassion (in contrast to the term “God,” which emphasizes justice). Most translations use “the LORD” (so the New JPS) or “the Eternal” (The Torah: A Modern Commentary, revised edition). Some translations have used “Jehovah” or “Yahweh” in an attempt to capture the sound of the name. Like The Contemporary Torah (2006), we have chosen to retain the original Hebrew name. In the post-biblical period, Jews came to believe that God’s name is too sacred to be pronounced. This has led to substituting the reverential euphemism Adonai (a grander form of the word for “my Lord”) for God’s actual name. The name itself shows no marks of gender. Some scholars have understood it as a form of the verb “to be,” although this explanation is now disputed and far from certain. An abbreviated form of the name appears as “Yah” in names (Jeremiah) or words such as “Hallelujah.” (See also at Exodus 3:15.)

5. there was not a soul. Literally, “no adam”—no human being.

7. man...from the soil. Or, “soul...from the soil,” to express the word play between adamah (soil; earth) and adam (a human being, an “earthling”). In contrast to Genesis 1, adam is created before the animals and set in a fertile place to care for it.

God...breathed. The human being is infused with divine breath (literally “in-spired”).

breath. Heb. n’shamah, often translated as “soul,” is the life force that comes from God.

man. Heb. adam, which can be rendered as “human beings,” as it is translated in Genesis

1:26–27 and 5:1–2. In those verses and elsewhere in the Bible, adam designates a generic human being or a collective noun but sometimes refers also to an individual person, as here.

However, in the present case adam is ambiguous with respect to gender. On the one hand, adam may continue to convey an inclusive sense of the term (as in 1:26–27); this would imply that this second story of creation views the first human as either neuter or androgynous until the division into man and woman, at which point specific words for man (ish) and woman (ishah) appear for the first time (2:23–24). Such a gender-neutral or non-gendered progenitor of humankind was familiar to the ancient world. It appears, for example, in Plato’s Symposium, which describes humans as not gendered initially but divided later into three types of pairs: man and woman; man and man; woman and woman. The myth thus accounts for different sexual affinities as persons seek their specific “other half.”

On the other hand, ha-adam (“the adam”) in 2:7–3:30 designates a particular individual whom the early readers may have understood as male. David Stein suggests that ha-adam in this story functions as an etiology “not of human biology but rather of lineage” (The Contemporary Torah, 2006, p. 394). This presumption works well with the narrative flow—in which even after the creation of woman, the term ha-adam continues to be used to refer to the man. On those grounds, he renders ha-adam as “the Human” while using male pronouns.

⁸To the east, God יְהוָה planted a garden in Eden, setting the man there whom [God] had formed. ⁹Then, out of the soil, God יְהוָה grew trees alluring to the eye and good for fruit; and in the middle of the garden, the Tree of Life and the Tree of All Knowledge. ¹⁰A river went forth from Eden to water the garden; from there it divided and became four branches. ¹¹The first was named Pishon—that one flows around the land of Havilah, where there is gold. ¹²The gold of that land is fine; bdellium is there, and onyx stone. ¹³The second was named Gihon—that one flows around the land of Cush. ¹⁴The third was named Tigris—that one flows east of Assyria. And the fourth river is the Euphrates.

¹⁵So God יְהוָה took the man, placing him in the Garden of Eden to work it and keep it. ¹⁶God then commanded the man, saying, “You may eat all you like of every tree in the garden—

וַיִּטְعֶנָּה יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים גַּן־בְּעֵדָן מִקְדָּם וַיִּשְׁמַע
שֶׁם אֲתִיהָאָדָם אֲשֶׁר יָצַר: ⁹ וַיַּצְמַח יְהוָה
אֱלֹהִים מִן־הָאָדָם הַלְּעֵז נְחַמֵּד לְמִרְאָה
וְטוֹב לְמַאֲכֵל וְעֵץ הַתְּבוּנָה בְּתוֹךְ הַגָּן וְעֵץ
הַדִּעָת טֹוב וְרוּעָ: ¹⁰ וַיָּהִי יָצָא מִעַדְן
לְהַשְׁקוֹת אֲתִיהָגָן וּמִשְׁמָן יְפָרָה וְהַיָּה
לְאַרְבָּעָה רָאשִׁים: ¹¹ שֵׁם הַאַחֲרִי פִּישְׁׁוֹן
הַוָּא הַסְּבָב אֶת בָּلְאָרֶץ הַחוּילָה אֲשֶׁר־
שֵׁם הַזָּהָב: ¹² וַיַּחַב הָאָרֶץ הַהוּא טֹוב שֶׁם
הַבְּדָלָח וְאַבְנֵן הַשָּׂהָם: ¹³ וַיַּשְׁמַע־הַנָּהָר הַשְׁנִי
גַּיְחֹן הַוָּא הַסְּבָב אֶת בָּלְאָרֶץ בּוֹשָׁן: ¹⁴ וַיַּשְׁמַע הַנָּהָר הַשְׁלִישִׁי חַדְקָל הַוָּא הַהְלָל
קְדֻמָּת אֲשֶׁר וְהַנָּהָר הַרְבִּיעִי הַוָּא פָּרָת:

וַיַּקְרַב יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים אֲתִיהָאָדָם וַיְנַחֵהוּ
בְּגַן־עֵדָן לְעַבְדָּה וּלְשִׁמְרָה: ¹⁶ וַיֹּצֶא יְהוָה
אֱלֹהִים עַל־הָאָדָם לְאמֹר מִפְּלָעָה עַז־הָגָן

These gender ambiguities may express the writer's attempt to express complex ideas about the position of male and female in God's plan, and the tension perceived in cultural reality. Although the precise intention remains unclear, this story certainly presents—as Phyllis Bird notes—"a portrait of humankind in which the two sexes are essential to the action and are bound together in mutual dependence" ("Bone of My Bones and Flesh of My Flesh," Theology Today 50/4 [1994], p. 524).

In this verse, the immediate emphasis falls on the person's earthiness: the word adam is juxtaposed with adamah, which means "earth."

HUMANKIND'S FIRST HOME: THE GARDEN OF EDEN (2:8–17)

8. a garden in Eden. The place name eden (pleasure) evokes a moist, luxurious garden.

9. good for fruit. The Hebrew words maachal (fruit, literally "food") and achal (eat) together appear more than twenty times in the Eden narrative, evidence of an overriding concern among the text's earliest audience with procuring food.

Tree of All Knowledge. The familiar, literal translations "knowledge of good and evil" or "knowledge of good and bad" preserve an ambiguity that seems intentional. The phrase "good and bad" could stand for "everything," but it also could imply intellectual comprehension (everything from A to Z, or from good to bad), moral judgment, or—perhaps best—experience, meaning a direct encounter with good and bad. It is the latter that seems to have befallen humankind as a result of eating. Elsewhere, "to know" refers to intimate, often sexual relations (see at 4:1).

10–14. The four rivers express the superabundance of the garden. In the land of Israel, water was a scarce and precious commodity. The names recall actual rivers but the locations of some is problematic. Pishon and Gihon are small rivers in the land of Israel.

¹⁷but of the Tree of All Knowledge you may not eat, for the moment you eat of it you shall be doomed to die."

¹⁸Then God יְהוָה considered, "It is not good that the man be alone—I will make him a helpmate." ¹⁹So God יְהוָה formed the wild animals and the birds of the sky out of the soil, and brought the man to see what he would call each one; and whatever the man called it, that became the creature's name. ²⁰The man gave names to every domestic animal and to the birds of the sky, and to all the wild animals, but for [himself] Adam found no helpmate. ²¹Then, throwing the man into a profound slumber, so that he slept, God יְהוָה took one of his ribs and closed up the flesh in that place. ²²Now God יְהוָה built up the rib taken from the man into a woman, and brought her to the man, ²³and the man said, "This time— /

אַכְלֵי הַאֲכֵל: ¹⁷ וְמֵעַצְמָנֶה פִּי בַּיּוֹם אַכְלֵה מִפְנֵנוּ מוֹתָה:

¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לְאָטוֹב הַיּוֹתָה הָאָדָם לְבָדוֹ אָעַשְׂה-לָוּ עֹזֶר כְּנַגְדוֹ: ¹⁹ וַיַּצְאֵר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים מִן-הָאָדָם כָּל-חַיָּת הַשָּׁרֶדֶת וְאֶת בְּלֵעָף הַשָּׁמַיִם וַיַּבְאֶרְאֶל-הָאָדָם לְרִאּוֹת מַה-יִקְרָא-לּוּ וְכֹל אֲשֶׁר יִקְרָא-לּוּ הָאָדָם נֶפֶשׁ חַיה הוּא שְׁמוֹ: ²⁰ וַיַּקְרָא הָאָדָם שְׁמוֹת לְכָל-הַבְּהָמוֹת וּלְעֹוף הַשָּׁמַיִם וּלְכָל-חַיָּת הַשָּׂדָה וְלְאָדָם לְאַמְצָא עֹזֶר כְּנַגְדוֹ: ²¹ וַיַּפְלִי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים תְּרַדְּמָה עַל-הָאָדָם וַיֵּשֶׁן וַיַּקְחֵחַ אֶחָת מַצְלָעָתוֹ וַיַּסְגֵּר בָּשָׁר תְּחִתָּה: ²² וַיַּבְנֵן יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים | אֶת-הַצְלָעָה אֲשֶׁר-לְקֹחַ מִן-הָאָדָם לְאָשָׁה וַיַּבְאֶה אֶל-הָאָדָם: ²³ וַיֹּאמֶר

^{17.} you may not eat. The momentous prohibition concerns only the tree of knowledge.

THE CREATION OF HUMAN PARTNERSHIP (2:18–25)

^{18.} "It is not good." God proclaims (discover?) the first "not good": human isolation.

"man." Heb. adam; see at v. 7, "the man."

"helpmate." Heb. ezer k'negdo, literally "a helper as if opposite [or: in front of] him/it," that is, "a helpful counterpart." In the Bible the word ezer (helper) typically refers to God and thus lacks any overtone of inferiority. And negdo (opposite him/it) suggests a spatial and metaphorical otherness, someone whom one confronts. Psalm 16:8 envisions God in this position, illustrating the positive sense of the word.

Some scholars who assume that God seeks a remedy for human loneliness conclude that God creates woman to comfort and ease man's life. But God's solution implies that what is not good about aloneness concerns the human need for a counterpart. Since the adam both is inferior to God and superior to the animals, neither suffices as a partner. Only an equal who is both "other" and "alike" provides the necessary dialogue for human maturation, meaning, and joy.

^{20.} The first human task is naming the world. God's unsuccessful experiment to discover a partner reveals God as one who learns from experience in the interaction with humankind, not one who foresees and plans all with precision.

^{21.} ribs. The word more accurately means "sides," meaning a more substantial part of the adam. Elsewhere in the Bible, the term typically designates a side of a building, a large section necessary for stability.

^{23.} the man. Although the word ha-adam ("the adam") is still utilized here, context indicates a reference to the male. It will be used that way until 3:22, when the inclusive, generic sense—the human being—briefly resumes.

"This time." Human encounter elicits human speech. The man's exclamation is poetic, celebrating both similarity and difference.

bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh! / Let this one be called woman, / for this one is taken from man.”
 24 So it is that a man will leave his father and mother and cling to his wife, and they become one flesh.

²⁵ Now the two of them were naked, the man and his wife, and they were not ashamed. 3 Of all the wild animals that God יְהוָה made, the

הָאָדָם נִזְאַת הַפּּעַם עַצְמָם מֵעַצְמֵי וּבָשָׂר
 מַבְשָׂרֵי לֹאָזֶת יָקֹנָא אֲשָׁה כִּי מֵאָישׁ לְקֹחַה־
 נִזְאַת: 24 עַל־כֵּן יַעֲזֹב־אֲישׁ אֶת אֶבְיוֹן וְאֶת־
 אֶמוֹ וְדַבָּק בְּאֶשְׁתּוֹ וְהִיוּ לְבָשָׂר אֶחָד:

“Let this one be called.” This is not an act of naming or domination but rather an acknowledgement and interpretation of the man’s perception.

“woman... taken from man.” Only after surgery in Genesis 2 do woman (ishah) and man (ish) appear, marked by gender-specific terms. If one understands ha-adam (“the adam”) beforehand to refer to a non-gendered person, then this remark describes the division into two human categories: woman and man. Here ish designates “a (male) member of the human species,” and ishah “a (female) member of the human species.” Both are fully and equally human. The man’s proclamation indicates what the woman means to him; it also serves as an etiology to explain how women and men are related to each other. In addition, the etiology explains why ishah and ish sound so much alike.

24. a man will leave his father and mother. Typically in biblical texts, women join their husband’s household. Most likely this statement does not refer to a man’s residence but to his establishing a new alignment, with the couple as a new unity that supersedes the relation to parents. In the ancient world such a separation from a man’s parents frees the woman from the control of her husband’s family.

wife. Heb. ishah. The Hebrew word for “wife” is identical to the word for “woman” (v. 23).

25. Nakedness describes the human couple’s ease with their bodies—and sets the stage for the next scene in the garden.

²⁵ וַיְהִי שְׁנַיְמָם עֲרוֹמִים הָאָדָם וְאֶשְׁתּוֹ
 וְלֹא יַתְבִּשׂُו: ג וְגַחַשׂ הִיה עָרוּם
 מִכָּל חַיָּת הַשְׁדָה אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים

Temptation, Transgression, Transformation

IN THE GARDEN OF EDEN (3:1–24)

Genesis 3, one of the most controversial passages in the Bible, seeks to explain why a wholly good world, created by a caring God, is nonetheless rife with hardship and inequality. It resolves the problem by placing responsibility on humankind. In this drama, woman plays a leading role. Yet she and her mate are equally held responsible.

The story reflects two possible theologies about God and knowledge. God may be perceived as a protective parent, ambivalent about exposing vulnerable humans to the full range of experience that knowledge brings; but God could be understood also as a protector of divine prerogatives against the human desire to have more than is permitted. Either way, the story also cautions about the danger of “premature knowledge”—a message especially pertinent to our own day, where knowledge (as information) is easily separable from maturity.

Although most later interpreters have made this story of transgression the turning point in human events, in Genesis this is but the first of several encounters between God and human beings in which both sides learn about the perils and possibilities of the human condition. There is no mention of an original sin, perpetually present in humankind. The word “sin” does not appear here at all in this episode. Nowhere does the writer imply that humanity serpent was the most cunning. It said to the woman, “Did God really say, ‘You may not eat of any tree in the Garden?’”² The woman said to the serpent, “Of any tree in the Garden we may eat the fruit;³ but God said, ‘Of the fruit of the tree in the middle of it do not eat, and do not [even] touch it, or you will die.’”⁴ But the serpent said to the woman, “You most certainly will not die! On the contrary: God knows that when you do eat of it, your eyes will be opened and you will be like gods, knowing all things.”⁵ So when the woman saw how good to eat the tree’s fruit would be, and how alluring to the eyes it was, and how desirable the insight was that is doomed to make bad choices. There is no “Fall of Man.” Nor does God curse humankind. Rather, the story makes clear that transgression, namely disobedience, carries consequences.

~~וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהָשָׁה אָפֵק בְּיַדְמִיר אֱלֹהִים לְאַתָּאכְלֹו מִכֹּל עַץ הַגָּן:~~² וַתֹּאמֶר הָאֲשָׁה אֱלֹהָשָׁה מִפְרִי עַץ הַגָּן נָאכְלָה:³ וּמִפְרִי הַעַץ אֲשֶׁר בְּתוֹךְ הַגָּן אָמַר אֱלֹהִים לֹא תִּאכְלֶל מִמֶּנוּ וְלֹא תָגַע בּוּ פְּנִירָתָמְתָנוּ:⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר הָנַחַשׁ אֱלֹהָשָׁה לְאַדְמוֹת תִּמְרְתָּנוּ:⁵ בַּיּוֹם יִדַּע אֱלֹהִים בְּיַמִּים אֲכָלָכֶם מִמֶּנוּ וְנַפְקַחְתֶּה עִינֵיכֶם וְהִיִּתֶם בְּאֱלֹהִים יְדַעַי טֻוב וּרְעָע: ⁶ וַתִּתְرַא הָאֲשָׁה בַּיּוֹם הַעַז לְמַאֲכֵל וְכִי תָאַהֲדָהוּא לְעִינֵיכֶם וְנַחֲמַד הַעַז לְהַשְׁבֵיל וְתַקְהַ מִפְרִי

TEMPTATION AND TRANSGRESSION (3:1–6)

1. serpent. Its role here is perhaps a polemic against other traditions, where serpents—representing healing wisdom—become objects of idolatry. Compare the bronze serpent in Numbers 21:6–9 and its destruction in II Kings 18:4. (Note also the ancient roots of our modern medical symbol, the caduceus, with its intertwined serpents.)

cunning. The word (in the singular here) is the same as the one for “naked” in 2:25, one of several puns that run through the narrative.

“Did God really say...?” The Hebrew is ambiguous, but the intent is clear: a question to draw attention to the one prohibited tree.

“You may not.” The “you” is plural, including the man who (according to 3:6) is with her. Why the man remains silent is left to the reader’s imagination.

3. “God said.” The woman is the first human to speak of God and to engage in dialogue. She will invoke God in almost every one of her statements

(also 4:1, 25). In contrast, the man does not mention God in his speeches.

“do not [even] touch it.” God does not prohibit touching the tree in 2:17. If the woman adds this element herself, she anticipates the Rabbis whose rulings later create a “fence around the Torah,” meaning additional prohibitions to prevent an accidental violation of Torah laws.

4. “You...will not die!” The woman and man live long after their transgression.

5. “God knows...you will be like gods.” This new information will prove true—God confirms it in v. 22. Those who criticize the woman argue that the wish to be like God—a usurpation of divine power—prompts her to transgress God’s command. The next verse, however, debunks this claim by offering a rare biblical description of a person’s motive. Hers includes a desire for wisdom.

“all things.” Literally, “good and bad.” See at 2:9.

6. the woman saw. Genesis lists three reasons why the woman reaches for the fruit: it is good to eat (healthful); visually attractive; and a source for wisdom. (No motive is ascribed to the man. He will simply take and eat.) The desire for knowledge, rather than immortality, distinguishes this story from other ancient traditions such as Gilgamesh.

the tree would bring, she took some of its fruit and ate; and then she gave some to her man who was with her, and he ate. ⁷Then the eyes of both of them were opened, and, realizing that they were naked, they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves skirts.

⁸At the breezy time of the day, they heard the sound of God יְהוָה walking about in the Garden; and the man and his woman hid themselves from God יְהוָה among the trees. ⁹But God יְהוָה called out to the man, saying, “Where are you?” ¹⁰He said, “I heard the sound of You in the Garden; I was afraid because I was naked, so I hid myself.” ¹¹Then [God] said, “Who told you that you were naked? Did you eat the fruit of the tree that I forbade you to eat?” ¹²The man said, “The woman whom You gave me, she gave me the fruit of the tree,

וַתָּבֹל וַתִּתְعַנֵּן גַּם־לְאִישָׁה עַמֶּה וַיַּאֲכֵל:
⁷ וַתִּפְלַחַנְלָה עַיִן שְׁנֵיהם וַיַּרְאוּ פִּי עִירָמִים
 הָם וַיַּתְפֹּרוּ עַלְהָתָנָה וַיַּעֲשׂוּ לָהֶם
 חֲגַרְתָּ:
⁸ וַיִּשְׁמַעוּ אֶת־קֹול יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים מִתְהַלֵּךְ
 בְּגַן לְרוֹחַ הַיּוֹם וַיַּחֲבֹבָא הָאָדָם וְאֲשֶׁר־
 מִפְנֵי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים אֶל־הָאָדָם וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ אִיפָּה:
 יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים אֶל־הָאָדָם וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ אִיפָּה:
¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶת־קֹל שְׁמַעְתִּי בְּגַן וַיֹּאמֶר בַּיּוֹם
 עִירָם אָנוּכִי וְאָחָבָא: ¹¹ וַיֹּאמֶר מִי הָגִיד לְכֶם
 פִּי עִירָם אַתָּה הַמִּנְחָעָז אֲשֶׁר צִוִּיתִיךְ
 לְבָלְתִּי אֶכְלָמְמָנָה אֲכֵלָתָה: ¹² וַיֹּאמֶר הָאָדָם הָאֲשֶׁר נִתְּנָה עַמְּדוּ הַוָּה

its fruit. The type is not identified; the fig is the only kind of tree specified in the story (v. 7). Some later traditions championed the apple, which has since come to the fore in the popular imagination.

she gave . . . to her man who was with her. Only now does the reader learn that the man was with the woman all along (note also “her man”). The silence concerning the man’s motive is all the more problematic if he (alone) was directly warned by God in 2:17. Most earlier translations unfortunately omit “with her,” letting readers assume that the man was ignorant of the exchange and thereby innocent. Genesis, however, portrays both woman and man as culpable. The woman takes the first step toward what modern interpreters call consciousness-raising. If the tree entails “knowing all things,” then woman is bringer of civilization, not death. As for giving the fruit to the man, Carol Meyers observes that this reflects Israelite agrarian families, where women doled out the food. Note the emphasis on eating in this etiological tale. (See Discovering Eve: Ancient Israelite Woman in Context, 1988.)

THE TRANSFORMATION (3:7–21)

The four relationships that constitute the human being—with the land, the animals, each other, and God—suffer a severe blow but prove enduring nevertheless.

7. they were naked. As the serpent promised, their eyes open, leading to a new awareness.

made themselves skirts. Possibly modesty and shame resulted from eating the fruit. At any rate, knowledge discloses to them their vulnerability, exposing them to the precariousness of life and to consequent fear.

9. “Where are you?” God’s first question is more than a mere request for location; it is an opportunity to accept responsibility.

10. “I was afraid because I was naked.” The fear could imply a moral awareness stemming from transgression, an awareness of vulnerability, or both.

12. “The woman whom You gave me.” An opportunity for repentance (“I did so, and I am sorry”) is used instead for double blame: the man blames the woman and also God. As a result of his so I ate.”¹³ God יְהוָה then said to the woman, “What is this that you have done?” And the woman said, “The serpent tricked me into eating it.”

¹⁴ Then God יְהוָה said to the serpent, “Because you did this, you—out of all the beasts, all the wild animals—are under a curse: on your belly shall you crawl, eating dust all the days of your life.¹⁵ And between you and the woman, / and between her seed and your seed, / I am setting enmity: / They shall strike at your head, / and you shall strike at their heel.”¹⁶ And to the woman, [God] said, “I shall greatly increase your toil and your pregnancies; / in anguish you shall bear children. / To

נִתְנַהֲלֵי מִן־הָעֵץ וְאֶכְלֵל: ¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לְאַשָּׁה מִה־זֹּאת עָשָׂית וַתֹּאמֶר הָאֲשָׁה הַנְּחֵשׁ הַשִּׁיאָנוּ גַּאֲכֵל: ¹⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים אֶל־הַנְּחֵשׁ פִּי עָשָׂית זֹאת אָרוֹר אַתָּה מִבְּלַהֲבָדְךָ וּמְכֻלָּחַת הַשְׁדָה עַל־אֶחָדֶךָ תַּלְךְ וּפְרַת תַּאֲכֵל בְּלִימִינִי חַיִּיךְ: ¹⁵ וְאַיִּבָה אָשָׁה בֵּין וּבֵין יְשׁוֹפֵךְ רָאשׁ וְאַתָּה תִּשׁׁוֹפֵנוּ עַקְבָּךְ: ¹⁶ אֶל־הָאֲשָׁה אָמַר הָרְבָה אָרְבָּה עַצְבָּונָךְ וְהַרְגָּךְ בְּעַצְבָּךְ תַּלְדֵי בָּנִים וְאֶל־אִישׁ refusal to accept responsibility, his disobedience alienates him from both God and the woman.

13. “The serpent tricked me.” The woman likewise shifts the blame, but not to God.

14. “you . . . are under a curse.” While all three culprits pay a price for their transgression (and the humans’ unwillingness to own up to it), only the serpent is explicitly cursed. The narrator presents God as one who considers the serpent the most culpable. This emphasis is overlooked by later interpreters who focus on the woman as cause.

15. “between you and the woman.” Enmity destroys a harmony between humankind and animals.

16. God’s words to the woman have been misinterpreted in ways that disadvantaged women dramatically. The pronouncements to the woman (v. 16) and to the man (v. 17) are largely parallel, which implies parallel consequences. But for several centuries the key term has been typically rendered one way regarding the woman and another regarding the man, in a manner that intensifies the punishment for the woman, prompting the claim that her culpability must have been greater than the man’s.

“your toil and your pregnancies.” Older translations and some recent ones translate this pair of nouns differently. The New JPS version has “your pangs in childbirth,” and Chaim Stern’s translation of Genesis in The Torah: A Modern Commentary, revised edition, has “your pains of pregnancy.” (This verse and the next are the only places in this book where we have changed Stern’s translation.) The Hebrew noun itzavon (from etzev), is here translated as “toil.” In ancient Israel women regularly worked long hours—in food preparation and storage, in the manufacture of clothing, in farming alongside of men, and more. For the Torah’s original audience, this story would have brought such labors readily to mind. The word can also be rendered as either “sorrow,” “hardship,” or “anguish.” All these meanings appear elsewhere in Genesis (for example, “hard labor,” 5:29). Indeed, itzavon does not mean “pain” elsewhere in the Bible. For more details, see Another View, p. 27.

The writer in vv. 16–17 is accounting for the hardships of human existence and especially the creative aspects of life: procreation and production of food. Earlier ease is now mingled with hardship: “good” comes with “bad.”

“anguish.” The word here is etzev, a term related to itzavon in the previous line; it predominantly means “sorrow.” Those whose experience is conveyed by etzev include: God, when humankind does not meet expectations (Genesis 6:6); Jonathan, when his father humiliates him (I Samuel 20:34);

your man is your desire, / and he shall rule over you.”¹⁷ Now to the man, [God] said, “Because you hearkened to your wife and ate of the tree about which I commanded you, saying, ‘Do not eat of it,’ the soil is now cursed on your account: Only through toil shall you eat of it, as long as you live.¹⁸ It shall sprout thorns and thistles for you, when you would eat the plants of תְּשׁוּקָתֶךָ וְהִוא יַמְשֵׁל־בָּךְ: ס וְאַדְםָ

 אָמַר כִּי־שְׁמֻעָתָكְ לְקוֹל אֲשֶׁתְךָ וְתַאכְלֵ
 מִן־הָעֵץ אֲשֶׁר צִוִּיתִיךְ לֹא תַאכְלֵ
 מִמֶּנּוּ אֲרוֹרָה הָאָדָמָה בַּעֲבוּרָךְ בְּעַצְבָּוֹן
 תַּאכְלֶנָּה כֹּל יְמֵי חַיֶּיךְ: ¹⁸ וְקֹז וְדָרְדָר
 פָּצָמִית לְךָ וְאָכְלָתָ אֶת־עַשְׂבַּת הַשָּׁדָה:

and David, when his son dies (II Samuel 19:3). Most instances of this verb in narrative pertain to sorrow in connection with family members.

Our translation as “anguish” rather than “toil” (as for itzavon) aims at differentiating the nuances between two related Hebrew terms. (The King James Version of 1611, which has been authoritative for centuries in English-speaking countries, translates both etzev and itzavon as “sorrow.” Other translations, including Chaim Stern’s, substituted forms of “pain” for “sorrow,” presumably in recognition that childbirth is often painful.)

Genesis 3:16 neither imposes physical pain upon the woman nor condones it. The passage describes the hardship that often accompanies birthing and raising children. Unlike the pronouncements to the serpent, which speak of perpetual enmity, nothing suggests that this etzev is a continual condition. Thus along with her joy in being a parent (4:1), the first woman will herself experience—and express—sorrow and the need for comfort after her first-born kills his brother (4:25). On the etiological function of this pronouncement, see Another View, p. 27.

“desire.” Heb. t’shukah. The word appears only three times in the entire Bible—twice in Genesis (see also 4:7) and once in Song of Songs (7:11). Here it acknowledges woman’s desire or passion. It may seek to account for why women are able and willing to overcome (or overlook) the hardship of childbirth. It may also suggest that the woman’s desire is what places the woman under the man’s control; compare God’s warning in 4:7. (Song of Songs, which celebrates equality and mutuality between man and woman, reverses the relationship, describing in 7:11 the man’s desire for the woman.)

“he shall rule over you.” God’s words should not be read (as they have in both Jewish and Christian traditions) as an unqualified mandate for males’ general control over females. In this verse, “ruling” is confined to situations in which desire is at work. The writer may be communicating the power of desire to make one person subservient to another.

Another view is that in the ancient context the writer acknowledges a husband’s responsibility for his wife’s sexuality.

17. “Because you hearkened to your wife.” Literally, “...to your wife’s voice.” In 21:12 God will command Abraham to hearken to his wife’s voice; thus this notice is not meant as a blanket objection to obeying one’s wife. Oddly, there is no indication earlier that the woman said anything to the man.

“I commanded you.” God accuses only the man of disobedience (the “you” is singular).

“the soil is now cursed.” The land has done nothing to deserve punishment. But for Israelite farmers the etiology explained why their land was not fertile. Again, neither the woman nor the man is cursed.

“toil.” Heb. itzavon; see at 3:16. Initially, working the land was presented as creative and satisfying labor, and now it also becomes a hardship.

the field! ¹⁹By the sweat of your brow shall you eat bread, till you return to the earth—that earth you were taken from; / for dust you are, / and to dust you shall return.”

²⁰The man called his wife’s name Eve, for she would be the mother of all the living. ²¹And God made outfits out of skin for Adam and his wife, and clothed them. ²²God then said, “Look, the humans are like us, knowing all things. Now they may even reach out to take fruit from the Tree of Life and eat, and live forever.” ²³So God drove them out of the Garden of Eden to work the soil from which they had been taken, ²⁴expelling the humans and stationing Cherubim to the east of Eden, and the flaming blade of a flashing sword to guard the way to the Tree of Life.

¹⁹ בָּזְעַת אַפִּינָּל תַּאכְלֶל לְחֵם עַד שׁוֹבֵל אַלְ- הָאָדָמָה כִּי מִמֶּנָּה לְקַחְתָּ פִּיכְעַפְרָתָה אַתָּה
וְאַל-עַפְרָתָה תִּשְׁוֹבָ:

²⁰ וַיַּקְרָא הָאָדָם שְׁם אֲשֶׁר-זָהָה כִּי הוּא
הַיּוֹתָה אֶם כָּל-חַיִּים: ²¹ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים
לְאָדָם וְלִאֲשֶׁר-בְּתִנוֹת עֹזָר וַיְלַבְשֵׂם:
²² וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים הַנּוּ אֶת-הָאָדָם הַיָּה-בָּאֶחָד מִמֶּנּוּ לְדַעַת טֹוב וּרְעָה וְעַתָּה וְפָנָ- יְשַׁלֵּחַ יְדֹוֹ וְלִקְחַ גָּם מֵעַצְמַת הַחַיִּים וְאֶכְלֶל וְתַחַ-
לְעָלָם: ²³ וַיַּשְׁלַח-לְחוּדוֹ יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים מִגְן-עַדְן
לְעַבְדֵל אֶת-הָאָדָם אֲשֶׁר לְקַח מִשְׁם:
²⁴ וַיִּגְרַשׁ אֶת-הָאָדָם וַיַּשְׁכַּן מִקְדָּם לְגַן-עַדְן
אֶת-הַכְּרָבִים וְאֶת לְהָטָה הַחֶרֶב הַמִּתְהַפְּכָת לְשִׁמְרָה אֶת-דָּרְךָ עַצְמַת הַחַיִּים: ס

19. to dust. Presumably, eating from the Tree of Life would have enabled them to live forever.

20. The man called his wife’s name. In the Bible names often disclose the hopes and reality of the naming person, not the named. The man, significantly, becomes aware of the woman as a source of life precisely when the prospect of death is made comprehensible. Faced with inevitable disintegration, he recognizes—and celebrates—her life-bearing ability.

Eve. Heb. Chavah, a play on chai (life). The narrator explains the word-play and accounts for the woman’s role as child-bearer. The designation confirms the text’s positive depiction of the woman’s role in Eden and beyond.

21. God...clothed them. Far from displaying anger, God appears as a concerned protector, replacing the couple’s flimsy covering with sturdy material. Such solicitude indicates God’s continued commitment.

THE EXPULSION (3:22–24)

22. “the humans.” Literally, “the adam,” the singular generic term referring to both woman and man. Whatever the ambiguity of the term beginning with 2:7, where it could refer to “the man,” here it is an inclusive category.

“are like us.” The serpent’s words in 3:5 are confirmed. On the plural “us,” see at 1:26.

“knowing all things.” See at 2:9 and 2:17.

“they may even.” Anticipating more dire consequences, God bars human beings from the Tree of Life, the source of perpetual renewal.

24. the humans. Literally, “the adam,” referring to the woman and the man.

stationing Cherubim. These mythological creatures appear elsewhere as God’s entourage. Their sculpted form decorates the holy ark (Exodus 25:18). The gateway to the garden is closed, but the world has opened up.

4 The man now was intimate with his wife Eve; she became pregnant and gave birth to Cain, saying, “Both I and יהוה have made a man.” 2 She then continued, giving birth to his brother Abel. Abel became a shepherd, while Cain tilled the soil.

3 [One day,] in the course of time, Cain brought some of his harvest as an offering to יהוה, 4 and Abel, too, brought [an offering] from among the choice lambs of his flock and their fattest parts. God approved Abel and his offering, 5 but did

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר־יָדַע אֶת־חַיִל אֶת־חַיִל וְתַהַר
וְתַלֵּד אֶת־קִינִּין וְנִזְמַר קִנִּיתִי אֲשֶׁר
יְהוָה: 2 וַיְתַסֵּף לְלִדְתִּי אֶת־קִינִּינוֹ אֶת־הַבָּל
וַיְהִי־הַבָּל רְעוֹת צָאן וְקַיִן הַיָּה עַבְדָּם:
3 וַיְהִי מִקְצֵה יְמִים וַיָּבֹא קִינִּין מִפְּרִי הָאָדָם
מִנְחָה לְיְהוָה: 4 וְהַבָּל הַבָּיא גַּם־הִוא
מִבְּכָרוֹת צָאן וּמִחְלָבָה וַיַּשְׁעַד יְהוָה אֶל־
הַבָּל וְאֶל־מִנְחָתוֹ: 5 וְאֶל־קִינִּין וְאֶל־מִנְחָתוֹ

Life Outside the Garden (4:1–6:8)

EVE AND ADAM REUNITE: CHILDBIRTH AND NAMING (4:1–2)

Most readers pay little attention to Eve and Adam once they leave the garden. But here, in fact, the Torah gives new, important lessons. The first couple turns back—not back to the garden, but to one another and to God. The man who earlier blamed the woman now enters into an intimate relationship with her, and the woman names their first child in honor of her partnership with God. With these halting steps, they begin to repair the damage of earlier acts.

1. The man now was intimate with his wife. Literally, “the adam knew his woman/wife.” Here adam can only mean the man. In Hebrew “to know” includes sexual intercourse; fundamentally it expresses intimate knowledge of the other.

saying. The woman is the one who names the children and records the history and meaning of the family’s life, both here and again after the death of Abel (see at 4:25).

“Both I and יהוה.” Eve is the very first human being to use God’s personal name, just as she was the first human to mention God (3:3).

“made a man.” Commentators consider this “man” a reference to the son—whose name, Cain (kayin), is a pun on “made” (kaniti). If so, then Eve acknowledges here that giving birth involves God and celebrates the mystery of female creativity. However, Eve could also be referring to her husband as one who became hers with God’s help. The verb k-n-h elsewhere often means “acquired” and typically refers to a man acquiring a wife (see Ruth 4:10). In a surprising reversal here, the woman is acquiring “a man.”

2. his brother Abel. The name Abel (hevel) means “mist” or “vapor,” hinting at transience.

THE FIRST SIN: CAIN AND ABEL (4:3–24)

In the Torah, the word “sin” only enters with sibling rivalry and the murder that follows (not with Eve and Adam). Murderous conflict among brothers runs throughout Genesis as a theme that finally finds its resolution with the reconciliation between Joseph and his brothers (Genesis 50). Sisterly conflicts result in births (see 30:1–24). | In an ancient Sumerian story about the goddess Inanna, a farmer and shepherd compete for her affection; and she chooses to marry the shepherd. Competition between two modes of life may also account for this story in Genesis. The emphasis on “brother,” which appears seven times in this narrative, may be a literary ploy, a way to say that all humans are “brothers” and thus all murder is “fratricide.”

4–5. No reason is given for God’s acceptance of Abel’s offering and not Cain’s.

not approve Cain and his offering. Cain was filled with rage; his face fell.⁶ יהוה then said to Cain, “Why are you so angry? / Why your fallen face? /⁷ Would you not do well to lift it? / For if you do not do well— / sin is a demon at the door; / you are the one it craves, / and yet you can govern it.”

⁸Cain now thought about his brother Abel. Then, when they were in the field, Cain turned on his brother Abel and killed him.⁹ Then said to Cain, “Where is your brother Abel?” And he replied, “How should I know; am I my brother’s keeper?”¹⁰ And [God] said, “What have you done? Your brother’s blood is shrieking to Me from the ground!¹¹ Now you are cursed by this very soil, which has opened its mouth to receive your brother’s blood from your hands.¹² When you till the soil, no longer shall it give you its yield. You shall become a rootless wanderer on the earth.”¹³ Cain then said to יהוה, “My punishment is too heavy to bear!¹⁴ Seeing as now You have expelled me from the face of the soil and I must hide from Your face, I am become a rootless wanderer on the earth, and anyone who finds me might kill me!”¹⁵ “Not so,” said יהוה. “Should anyone kill Cain, he would לֹא שָׁעָה וַיַּחֲרֵר לְקַיּוֹן מֵאָד וַיִּפְלֹּא פָנָיו:

 6 וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-קַיּוֹן לְמִהְ קָרָה לְךָ וְלִמְהָ
 נִפְלֹּא פָנָיקָה. 7 הַלֹּא אִם-תִּתְּטִיב שָׁאת וְאַטְ
 לֹא תִּטְּבִיב לְפָתָח חַטָּאת רַבָּן וְאֶלְךָ
 תִּשְׁוֹקְתָּו וְאַתָּה תִּמְשֻׁל-בָּו:

8 וַיֹּאמֶר קַיּוֹן אֶל-הַבָּל אַתָּה וַיֹּהַל בְּהִזּוּתָם
 בְּשָׂדָה וַיַּקְם קַיּוֹן אֶל-הַבָּל אַתָּה וַיַּהַרְגֵּהוּ:
 9 וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-קַיּוֹן אַתָּה הַבָּל אָחִיךְ
 וַיֹּאמֶר לֹא יָדַעַת הַשְׁמָר אָחִיךְ אָנֹכִי:
 10 וַיֹּאמֶר מִהְעָשָׂת קָוֵל דָמֵי אָחִיךְ עַצְקִים
 אֱלֹי מִן-הָאָדָמָה: 11 וַעֲתָה אָרוּר אַתָּה מִן-
 הָאָדָמָה אֲשֶׁר פָּצַח אַתִּפְחֵה לְקַחַת אַתָּה
 דָמֵי אָחִיךְ מִזְרָח: 12 פִּי תִּעַבְּד אֶת-הָאָדָמָה
 לְאַתְּסָף תִּתְכַּחַה לְךָ נָע וְנָדָד תְּהִיא
 בָּאָרֶץ: 13 וַיֹּאמֶר קַיּוֹן אֶל-יְהוָה גָּדוֹל עַזְנֵי
 מִנְשֹׁוא: 14 הִנֵּה גָּרְשָׁת אֶתְךָ הַיּוֹם מַעַל פָנֵי
 הָאָדָמָה וּמִפְנֵיךְ אָسָתָר וְהִיִּתְיַעַן וְנָדָד
 בָּאָרֶץ וְהִיא בָּל-מַצְאֵי יְהִרְגָּנִי: 15 וַיֹּאמֶר
 לוֹ יְהוָה לְכָن בָּל-הָרָג קַיּוֹן שְׁבָעַתִים יַקְם

6. “Would you not do well to lift it?” The Hebrew is difficult. What seems clear is that God urges Cain to control the temptation to succumb to sin.

“sin is a demon.” Or “sin is crouching.” The image is of a personified evil ready to pounce; it is external to humans.

“you are the one it craves / and yet you can govern it.” The sentence echoes closely God’s pronouncement to the woman in 3:16. The idea is similar: the thing or person desired has control over the one who desires. God warns Cain about the danger of succumbing to rage. See at 3:16, “desire.”

8. thought about. Literally, “and Cain said”; however, Cain’s fatal words to Abel are missing.

killed him. The laconic statement only intensifies the horror of this first murder.

9. “am I my brother’s keeper?” Cain rejects responsibility, as did his parents before him (3:11–13).

11. “you are cursed.” This is the first curse uttered against a human being.

14. The mention of other people reminds us that this story is mythic rather than historical or realistic. On the literal side, one could conclude that Cain and Abel are not the only children of Adam and Eve. Compare v. 17.

15. The sign that God gives Cain as protection is unspecified. Like God’s protection of Eve and Adam, so too God’s actions toward Cain show an be avenged sevenfold.” And יהוה gave Cain a sign, that none who came upon him would kill him.¹⁶ Cain then went away from before יהוה, and settled in the Land of Nomads, east of Eden.

GENESIS 4:16–24

B'REISHIT

¹⁷Cain then was intimate with his wife, who became pregnant and gave birth to Enoch; he became the founder of a city, and he named the city after his son, Enoch.¹⁸To Enoch was born Irad, and Irad begot Mehya'el, and Mehya'el begot Metushael, and Metushael begot Lamech.¹⁹Lamech took two wives: one was named Adah and the other was named Zillah.²⁰Adah bore Jabal—he was the progenitor of tent dwellers and herders.²¹And his brother's name was Jubal—he was the progenitor of all who play the lute and the long flute.²²As for Zillah, she too bore: Tubal-Cain, a smith, progenitor of every artisan who makes copper and iron tools; and Naamah was Tubal-Cain's sister.²³Now Lamech said to his wives Adah and Zillah, “Hearken to me, wives of Lamech, / give ear to my speech: / because of my bruise I've slain a man, / because of my wound, a lad. / ²⁴Cain is avenged sevenfold, / and Lamech seventy-seven!”

overriding compassion toward the newly created, fallible humans.

17. Like his father, upon leaving his home, Cain turns to his wife. Where did she come from? The writer is unconcerned with the question, another clue that this is not history but a myth attempting to account for the beginning of humankind and its consequences.

17–18. The genealogy of Cain resembles that of Seth (5:1–32), perhaps preserving old traditions or attempting to suggest parallel lines.

19–24. The vignette about Lamech and his wives Adah and Zillah breaks the genealogical list to describe the origins of music and crafts in the emerging civilization. The mention of the names of

וַיָּשֶׂם יְהוָה לִקְיֹן אֹתָהּ לְבָלְתִי הַפּוֹתֵר אֹתוֹ
 בְּלִמְצָאוֹן¹⁶ וַיֵּצֵא קַיִן מִלְּפָנֵי יְהוָה וַיֵּשֶׁב
 בָּאָרֶץ נֶנוֹד קָרְמַת-עֲדָן:¹⁷
 וַיַּדַּע קַיִן אֲתִיד-אָשְׁתּוֹ וַתַּהַרְתָּ וַתַּלְדֵּד אֲתִיד-
 חַנּוּב וַיַּהַל בָּנָה עִיר וַיִּקְרַא שְׁם הַעִיר בְּשָׁם
 בְּנָוֹת חַנּוּב:¹⁸ וַיַּולְد לְחַנּוּב אֲחֵי-עִירָד וְעִירָד
 יָלֵד אֲתִיד-מְחִיאָל וְמְחִיאָל בָּל אֲתִיד-
 מְתֻושָׁאָל וְמְתֻושָׁאָל יָלֵד אֲתִיד-לְמָה:¹⁹
 וַיַּקְרַח-לּוּ לִמְךָ שְׁתִי נְשִׁים שְׁם הַאַחַת
 עָלָה וְשְׁם הַשְׁנִית צָלָה:²⁰ וַתַּלְדֵּד עָלָה
 אֲתִידָל הַוָּה אָבִי יִשְׁבָּב אֲחָל וּמְקַנָּה:²¹
 וְשְׁם אֲחָיו יִוְבָּל הַוָּה אָבִי בְּל-תְּפַשְּׁ
 בְּנָוֹר וּעֲוָגָב:²² וַצָּלָה גַּמְיָהוֹא יְלָדָה אֲתִיד-
 תּוּבָל קַיִן לִטְש בְּל-חִזְרָש נְחַשָּׁת וּבְרַזְל
 וְאַחֲוֹת תּוּבָל-קַיִן נְעַמָּה:²³ וַיֹּאמֶר לִמְךָ
 לְנֶשְׁיוֹ עָדָה וְצָלָה שְׁמַעַן קוֹלִי נְשִׁי לִמְךָ
 הָאַזְנָה אָמְרָתִי כִּי אִיש הַרְגָּתִי לְפָצְعִי
 וַיַּלְד לְחַבְרָתִי:²⁴ כִּי שְׁבָעַתִּים יַקְמִיקַיִן
 וְלִמְךָ שְׁבָעִים וְשְׁבָעָה:

Lamech's wives and daughter suggests their importance.

22. and Naamah was Tubal-Cain's sister. Naamah is the first female whose mother, Zillah, is also named. Her name may mean “tuneful” and might represent her as the muse of song (so Carol Meyers, Women in Scripture, 2000, p. 129).

23–24. Lamech addresses his boast specifically to his wives. The bravado with which Lamech flaunts his superior worth vis-à-vis his forefather suggests a tradition about a figure that in time faded from memory. (Should one call him the first “macho man”?) In a second genealogy he features as Noah's father (5:28).

²⁵Adam once again was intimate with his wife, and she bore a son and gave him the name “Seth”—“since God has given me another offspring in place of Abel”—for Cain had slain him! ²⁶As for Seth, to him too was born a son, and he named him Enosh. Then it was that people began to invoke יהוה:

5 This is the written record of the human line from the day God created human beings, making [them] in the likeness of God,² creating them male and female, blessing them, and naming them

²⁵וַיְלֹא אָדָם עוֹל אֶת־אֲשֶׁר וַתַּלְדֵּן
וַתִּקְרַא אֶת־שְׁמָוֹשָׁת כִּי שְׂתִּילִי אֱלֹהִים:
וַיָּרַע אַחֲרֵת תְּחִתַּת הַבָּل כִּי הָרְגָנוּ קִינּוֹן:
²⁶וַיָּלַשְׂתָּ גַּם־הַוָּא וַיָּלַד־בֶּן וַיִּקְרַא אֶת־שְׁמָוֹ
אֲנָוֹשׁ אֲזַוְּ הַוְּהָל לִקְרָא בְּשֵׁם יְהוָה: ס

ה זֶה סְפִיר תּוֹלְדֹת אָדָם בְּזֶה בָּרָא
אֱלֹהִים אָדָם בְּדִמוֹת אֱלֹהִים עָשָׂה אֹתוֹ:
² זָכֵר וַיִּקְרַב בָּרָא וַיָּבֹרֶךְ אֹתָם וַיִּקְרַא

EVE AND ADAM REUNITE: CHILDBIRTH AND NAMING (4:25–26)

The narrative returns to the story of Eve and Adam and their response to the tragedy that has befallen their household. Once again, the first man is intimate with (“knew”) his wife and she conceives. Nothing in these reports of life outside the garden suggests that the woman was subservient to the man. To the contrary: she is the one who speaks; she is the one who names; and she has the power to interpret and preserve the family’s history.

25. she...gave him the name. As in 4:1, the woman names the child and interprets the significance of the experience.

“given.” Heb. shat, a word play on the name shet (Seth).

“God has given me.” Once again, the woman acknowledges God. Note, in contrast, that the man has not uttered a word since leaving the garden. While affirming her unique role as mother, she nonetheless proclaims God as the bestower of the gift of a child. Later interpreters consider this formulation to be more modest than her earlier claim in 4:1, suggesting that her confidence may have been tempered by loss.

26. people began to invoke יהוה. The beginning of an ongoing relation with God is thus linked with the grandson of Eve and Adam.

THE RECAPITULATION OF HUMAN ORIGINS, AND THEIR GENEALOGY TO NOAH (5:1–32)

Like other ancient records, Genesis includes distant ancestors who lived extraordinarily long lives. (The biblical account is modest compared to the Babylonians, who recorded life spans in the tens of thousands of years.) The unrealistic numbers express the conviction that the flood constitutes a watershed in human longevity.

1. the human...human beings. In this verse, the word adam appears twice. The present translation takes both of these instances in the word’s inclusive sense (as in v. 2, where adam explicitly means both female and male). Alternatively, the first instance could refer to the first man and is often translated as the name Adam (as in v. 3).

2. creating them male and female, blessing them. The co-creation of humans as both female and male is reiterated here (as in 1:27–28).

“Humans.” Heb. adam, making it absolutely clear that this noun is generic and inclusive of both female and male.

“Humans” on the day they were created.³ Adam had lived 130 years, when he begot in his likeness, after his image; and he named him Seth.⁴ After begetting Seth, Adam lived 800 years; and he begot sons and daughters.⁵ The years of Adam’s life came to 930; then he died.

⁶Seth had lived 105 years when he begot Enosh.⁷ After begetting Enosh, Seth lived 807 years; and he begot sons and daughters.⁸ The years of Seth’s life came to 912; then he died.

⁹Enosh had lived 90 years when he begot Kenan.¹⁰ After begetting Kenan, Enosh lived 815 years; and he begot sons and daughters.¹¹ The years of Enosh’s life came to 905; then he died.

¹²Kenan had lived 70 years when he begot Mahalalel.¹³ After begetting Mahalalel, Kenan lived 840 years; and he begot sons and daughters.¹⁴ The years of Kenan’s life came to 910; then he died.

¹⁵Mahalalel had lived 65 years when he begot Jared.¹⁶ After begetting Jared, Mahalalel lived 830 years; and he begot sons and daughters.¹⁷ The years of Mahalalel’s life came to 895; then he died.

3. The divine image is now perpetuated through the line of Seth.

4. he begot sons and daughters. Those who take the story literally understand the wives of Cain, Seth, and others to come from among such unnamed daughters. This formulaic language about

אַתְּ-שֵׁם אָדָם בַּיּוֹם הַבָּרָאָם: ³ וַיְחִי אָדָם
שָׁלְשִׁים וּמֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד בְּדִמוֹתוֹ בְּצַלְמוֹ
וַיִּקְרָא אַתְּ-שֵׁמוֹ שֵׁת: ⁴ וַיְהִי יְמִינֵי-אָדָם
אַחֲרֵי הַוְּלִידֹו אַתְּ-שֵׁת שְׁמְנָה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה
וַיּוֹלֶד בָּנִים וּבָנָות: ⁵ וַיְהִי כָּל-יְמִינֵי אָדָם
אֲשֶׁר-חִי תְּשֵׁעַ מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וּשְׁלֹשִׁים שָׁנָה
וִימְתָּ: ⁶

וַיְחִי-שֵׁת חֲמִשָּׁה שָׁנִים וּמֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד
אַתְּ-אֱנוֹשׁ: ⁷ וַיְחִי-שֵׁת אַחֲרֵי הַוְּלִידֹו אַתְּ
אֱנוֹשׁ שְׁבַע שָׁנִים וּשְׁמְנָה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד
בָּנִים וּבָנָות: ⁸ וַיְהִי כָּל-יְמִינֵת שְׁתִים
עֲשָׂרֶה שָׁנָה וִתְשֵׁעַ מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וִימְתָּ: ⁹

וַיְחִי אֱנוֹשׁ תְּשִׁיעִים שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אַתְּ-קִינָן:

וַיְחִי אֱנוֹשׁ אַחֲרֵי הַוְּלִידֹו אַתְּ-קִינָן חֲמִשָּׁה
עֲשָׂרֶה שָׁנָה וּשְׁמְנָה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד
בָּנִים וּבָנָות: ¹¹ וַיְהִי כָּל-יְמִינֵי אֱנוֹשׁ חֲמִשָּׁה

שָׁנִים וִתְשֵׁעַ מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וִימְתָּ: ¹²

וַיְחִי קִינָן שְׁבֻעִים שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אַתְּ
מַהְלָלָל: ¹³ וַיְחִי קִינָן אַחֲרֵי הַוְּלִידֹו אַתְּ
מַהְלָלָל אֶרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה וּשְׁמְנָה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה
וַיּוֹלֶד בָּנִים וּבָנָות: ¹⁴ וַיְהִי כָּל-יְמִינֵי קִינָן
עֲשָׂרֶה שָׁנִים וִתְשֵׁעַ מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וִימְתָּ: ¹⁵

וַיְחִי מַהְלָלָל חֲמִשָּׁה שָׁנִים וּשְׁשִׁים שָׁנָה
וַיּוֹלֶד אַתִּירָד: ¹⁶ וַיְחִי מַהְלָלָל אַחֲרֵי
הַוְּלִידֹו אַתִּירָד שְׁלֹשִׁים שָׁנָה וּשְׁמְנָה
מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד בָּנִים וּבָנָות: ¹⁷ וַיְהִי
כָּל-יְמִינֵי מַהְלָלָל חֲמִשָּׁה וִתְשִׁיעִים שָׁנָה
וּשְׁמְנָה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וִימְתָּ: ¹⁸

sons and daughters repeats for each subsequent generation (vv. 7, 10, 13, 16, 19, 22, 26, 30). Carol Meyers observes that the “presence of daughters conveys the requisite notion of demographic increase, which depends on the reproductive role of women” (Women in Scripture, 2000, p. 176). Compare at 10:1.

¹⁸Jared had lived 162 years when he begot Enoch. ¹⁹After begetting Enoch, Jared lived 800 years; and he begot sons and daughters. ²⁰The years of Jared's life came to 962; then he died.

²¹Enoch had lived 65 years when he begot Methuselah. ²²After begetting Methuselah, Enoch walked with God 300 years; and he begot sons and daughters. ²³The years of Enoch's life came to 365. ²⁴Enoch walked with God and then was no more, for God had taken him.

²⁵Methusaleh had lived 187 years when he begot Lamech. ²⁶After begetting Lamech, Methuselah lived 782 years; and he begot sons and daughters. ²⁷The years of Methuselah's life came to 969; then he died.

²⁸When Lamech had lived 182 years he begot a son, ²⁹and he named him Noah, saying, "This one shall console us for our work, for the hard labor of our hands, and for the soil that has condemned." ³⁰After begetting Noah, Lamech lived 595 years; and he begot sons and daughters. ³¹The years of Lamech's life came to 777; then he died.

¹⁸וַיְחִי־יָרֵד שְׁתִים וּשְׁשִׁים שָׁנָה וּמֵאת
שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אֶת־חָנוֹךְ: ¹⁹וַיְחִי־יָרֵד אֶחָרָיו
הַוְלִידוֹ אֶת־חָנוֹךְ שֶׁמְגַנֵּה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה
וַיּוֹלֶד בָּנִים וּבָנָות: ²⁰וַיְהִי בְּלִימִידָּר
שְׁתִים וּשְׁשִׁים שָׁנָה וַתִּשְׁעַם מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה
וִימְתָּא:

²¹וַיְהִי חָנוֹךְ חֲמִשָּׁה וּשְׁשִׁים שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אֶת־
מִתּוֹשָׁלָח: ²²וַיִּתְהַלֵּךְ חָנוֹךְ אֶת־יְהָאָלָהִים
אֶחָרָיו הַוְלִידוֹ אֶת־מִתּוֹשָׁלָח שְׁלֹשׁ מֵאוֹת
שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד בָּנִים וּבָנָות: ²³וַיְהִי בְּלִימִי
חָנוֹךְ חֲמִשָּׁה וּשְׁשִׁים שָׁנָה וְשְׁלֹשׁ מֵאוֹת
שָׁנָה: ²⁴וַיִּתְהַלֵּךְ חָנוֹךְ אֶת־יְהָאָלָהִים
וְאַיִּגְנָה בְּלִקְקָח אֶת־וְאָלָהִים: ס

²⁵וַיְהִי מִתּוֹשָׁלָח שְׁבֻעָה וְשְׁמִינִים שָׁנָה
וּמֵאת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אֶת־לְמָךְ: ²⁶וַיְהִי
מִתּוֹשָׁלָח אֶחָרָיו הַוְלִידוֹ אֶת־לְמָךְ שְׁתִים
וְשְׁמִינִים שָׁנָה וְשְׁבֻעָה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד
בָּנִים וּבָנָות: ²⁷וַיְהִי בְּלִימִי מִתּוֹשָׁלָח
תִּשְׁעַם וּשְׁשִׁים שָׁנָה וַתִּשְׁעַם מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה
וִימְתָּא:

²⁸וַיְחִיל־לְמָךְ שְׁתִים וְשְׁמִינִים שָׁנָה וּמֵאת
שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד בָּן: ²⁹וַיִּקְרָא אֶת־שְׁמוֹ נָחַ
לְאָמֹר זֶה יְנַחֲמָנוּ מִפְּעָשָׂנוּ וּמִעָּצְבָּנוּ יְלִינוּ
מִן־הָאָדָمָה אֲשֶׁר אָרְךָ יְהֹוָה: ³⁰וַיְחִי
לְמָךְ אֶחָרָיו הַוְלִידוֹ אֶת־נָחַ חֲמִשָּׁה וְתִשְׁעַם
שָׁנָה וְחֲמִשָּׁה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד בָּנִים וּבָנָות:
³¹וַיְהִי בְּלִימִי־לְמָךְ שְׁבֻעָה וְשְׁבֻעִים שָׁנָה
וְשְׁבֻעָה מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וִימְתָּא: ס

22. Enoch walked with God. The expression denotes a special relationship with God, granted to a righteous person such as Noah (see 6:9).

24. and then was no more, for God had taken him. This report, one of the most tantalizing in the Torah, is obscure. Compare the ascent to heaven of the prophet Elijah (II Kings 2:11–18).

28–32. Noah is the tenth generation.

29. Noah's name is a pun on the word "to comfort" (n'chamah). He represents the hope of reprieve from the original cursing of the ground.

"hard labor." The word itzavon is the same one used earlier to describe the future fates of woman (3:16) and man (3:17). Here it could also mean "anguish" or "sorrow," as it does elsewhere.

³²When Noah had lived 500 years, he begot Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

6 Now as people began to multiply on the earth, daughters were born to them,² and when the divine beings saw how fair were the human women, they took wives for themselves, as they chose.³ Then said, “My spirit will not forever endure the humans, as they are but fallible flesh—their lifespan shall be [only] 120 years.”⁴ The Nephilim were on earth in those days; and afterward, too, when the divine beings mated with the human women, they bore for them those heroes who from of old enjoyed great renown.

³²וַיְהִי נֶחָם בְּנֵרֶמֶשׁ מִזְאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד נָחַ אֶת־שָׁם אֶת־חַם וְאֶת־יְפַתָּח:
1 וַיְהִי בִּיהְתָּבֵל הָאָדָם לַרְבָּעָל־פָּנָי
 הָאָרֶםָה וְבָנוֹת יָלְדוּ לְהַמָּן² וַיַּרְאוּ בְּנֵי
 הָאֱלֹהִים אֶת־בָּנוֹת הָאָדָם כִּי טָבַת הָנָהָה
 וַיַּקְרְבוּ לָהֶם נְשִׁים מִפְּלָגָה אֲשֶׁר בְּחָרוּ:
3 וַיֹּאמֶר יְהֹוָה לְאִידּוֹן רֹוחֵי בָּאָדָם
 לְעָלָם בְּשָׁגֶם הוּא בָּשָׂר וְהִיא יְמִינָה מִאָה
 וּשָׁנָה⁴ שָׁנָה: 4 הַנְּפָلִילִים הַיּוּ בְּאָרֶץ בִּימִים
 הָהֶם וְגַם אֲחִירִיכָן אֲשֶׁר יָבֹא בְּנֵי
 הָאֱלֹהִים אֶל־בָּנוֹת הָאָדָם וַיָּלֹדוּ לָהֶם הַמָּה הָגִבְרִים אֲשֶׁר מִעוּלָם אֲנָשִׁי
הַשָּׁם: פ

32. In contrast to the other genealogical references in this section, which name only one son and mention anonymous “sons and daughters,” all of Noah’s three sons are named.

Shem, Ham, and Japheth. In 10:2, Shem will be described as the ancestor of the Semitic peoples, Ham of the Africans, and Japheth of the Greeks.

THE MARRIAGE BETWEEN HEAVENLY BEINGS AND EARTHLY WOMEN (6:1–4)

The brief story about divine beings and earthly women is unique in the Bible. It reminds one of Greek mythology, which it indirectly opposes. Whereas Zeus’ marriage with women produces heroes such as the venerated Hercules, the Bible portrays such unions as a calamity to be eradicated. The penalty affects human beings alone. Far from gaining immortality, the marriage of heaven and earth reduces human life span. Tikva Frymer-Kensky notes that in the Mesopotamian tradition, the reverse takes place: “Goddesses choose powerful men, particularly kings, as lovers” (Women in Scripture, 2000, p. 177).

i. daughters were born to them. Only daughters are mentioned, not sons (who surely were born as well). This detail illustrates the terse biblical style, which focuses only on what is directly relevant to the story at hand.

2. fair. Heb. tovot. The word can describe goodness, beauty, health, a source of pleasure, or moral quality. The precise nuance here is not clear, although most interpreters presume that the divine beings were viewing the women lustfully.

they took. This is the verb used in the Bible for marriage.

3. While God’s exact meaning is obscure, the consequences are clear-cut: human lifespan is to be reduced. The purpose, Tikva Frymer-Kensky suggests, is “to keep human and divine separated” (Women in Scripture, 2000, p. 177).

4. Heavenly males continue to mate with earthly women and produce giants. (Elsewhere, the Bible equates Nephilim with giants.) Later stories refer to the early inhabitants of Canaan as Nephilim; thus this story serves to cast aspersions on Israel’s predecessors in the land. Here, the great renowned heroes meet with God’s disapproval. Their exploits are not preserved.

in those days. The writer makes clear the distance between the present account and these ancient stories, another indication that we are reading about the mythic past.

⁵When saw how great was the wickedness of human beings in the earth, that the direction of their thoughts was nothing but wicked all the time, ⁶regretted having made human beings on earth, and was heartsick. ⁷So thought: “I will wipe the humans whom I created from off the face of the earth—the humans, [and with them] the beasts, the reptiles, the birds of the sky—for I rue the day I made them.” ⁸But Noah found favor in יְהוָה's sight.

⁵ וַיֹּרֶא יְהוָה כִּי רַבָּה רְעֵת הָאָדָם בָּאָרֶץ
וְכָל־יִצְרָא מִחְשָׁבָת לְפָנָיו רַק רְעֵת פָּלָה־יְמִים:
⁶ וַיַּגְחַם יְהוָה כִּי־עֲשָׂה אָוֹת־הָאָדָם בָּאָרֶץ
וַיַּתְאַצֵּב אֶל־לְבָבוֹ: ⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אָנֹכִי
אֶת־הָאָדָם אֲשֶׁר־בָּלָא אָתָּה מַעַל פָּנַי הָאָדָם
מִאָדָם עֲדִיבָהָמוֹה עֲדִירָמָשׁ וְעַדְעֻזָּף
הַשְׁמִים כִּי נִחְמַתִּי כִּי עֲשִׂיתָם: ⁸ וְנַחַת מִצְאָת
חַן בְּעֵינֵי יְהוָה: פ

CONCLUSION: GOD'S REGRET (6:5–8)

The parashah that began with the glorious creation of light and life ends with a disappointed God who prepares to start anew. The great experiment has failed, and God has second thoughts. Once again this parashah portrays God as one who learns through interaction with humankind rather than as an all-knowing God.

5. the wickedness of human beings. The narrator does not specify here what the evil deeds were, although later they are called “violence” (6:13). The forcible taking of earthly women could be one example of such condemned acts.

human beings. Heb. adam. See at 1:26.

direction. Heb. yetzer, which also means “inclination.” Later traditions will speak of yetzer hatov and yetzer hara (usually but somewhat inadequately translated as “the good yetzer” and “the evil yetzer”) as dual or even complementary human impulses. The verbal root y-tz-r means “to create.”

their thoughts. God’s words do not imply that human beings are innately evil.

6. יְהוָה regretted. Human evil causes God to repent, grieve, and destroy. Far from being infallible and all-knowing, God confronts unexpected results and has a change of heart. (Many passages, especially in prophetic literature, illustrate God’s capacity to change in response to changing circumstances. For example, God regrets having chosen Saul to be king; I Samuel 15:11, 35.)

was heartsick. Literally, “his heart was sorrowing.” In Genesis 3:16–17, God’s pronouncements to the woman and man used noun forms of this verb, e-tz-b. Here, God’s capacity for sorrow (pathos, as A. J. Heschel has put it) mirrors the sorrow or anguish that God proclaims for the humans after they eat the forbidden fruit. This acknowledgement that God can grieve also binds human and divine experience. The Bible portrays God not as a detached figure but rather as deeply responsive to humankind.

7. Elsewhere in the Bible we find the idea that human sin contaminates the whole of creation. Here, however, God’s determination to destroy utterly seems excessive. God, again, is portrayed as one who struggles with humankind, this time losing patience with it.

8. But Noah found favor. Noah, whose name bears the hope of the people (5:29), now also becomes the hope of God—the one whom God favors. This ray of hope will provide a link to the future for both humankind and God.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

Another View

PERHAPS THE MOST DIFFICULT biblical verse for contemporary readers is Genesis 3:16. Traditional translations understand it to mandate painful pregnancies and the domination of women by men. However, that four-line poetic passage can be understood in a different way.

In Hebrew the first line of the poetry has four words: harbah arbeh itz'vonech v'heronech. The first two words constitute a double verbal form that asserts that the following two words—subjects of the verb—will be more intense, more plentiful, or more numerous than would be expected. The present translation “I shall greatly increase” is a satisfactory rendering of the double verb.

The usual translation of the two nouns itz'vonech v'heronech—“your pains in [or: of] pregnancy”—is problematic. First, as stated, both nouns are objects of the verb “increase.” That is, the Hebrew speaks about two distinct conditions that are subject to increase, joined by the Hebrew conjunction “and.” Second, the word “pain” is inaccurate. For one thing, it suggests that pregnancy itself is painful, which is not the case in most normal gestations (in contrast to giving birth, which is often painful). Furthermore, the uninflected noun itzavon otherwise often refers to the “hard work” of physical labor, which it almost certainly does in the next verse in reference to the agricultural work of men: “through toil shall you eat of it.”

For these reasons, our translation for the first line of 3:16 is “I shall greatly increase your toil and your pregnancies.” Not only does this rendering better reflect the Hebrew wording, but also it reflects the agrarian life situation of the Israelites. The highlands of the Land of Israel were not very fertile or well watered. Therefore, the hard work of both women and men was required for households to survive. Moreover, children were needed for the family labor force. With as many as one in two children dying before the age of five, a woman needed to have up to eight pregnancies to provide the optimum family size of four offspring.

The other three lines of the verse expand on the theme of procreation. The second line (“in anguish you shall bear children”) conveys the difficulty of

Perhaps the most difficult biblical verse for today's readers is Genesis 3:16.

childbirth itself, that is, the mental and also the physical anguish of giving birth. The third line (“to your man is your desire”) refers to the passion—emotional as much as sexual—that a woman feels for her husband. Such passion allows her to succumb to the dominance mentioned in the last line: “And he shall rule over you.” In keeping with the focus of this verse on childbearing, that line probably speaks about a husband’s ultimate responsibility for his wife’s sexuality and not for her entire person. Because of the risks of death in childbirth, many Israelite women would have been reluctant to have numerous pregnancies. Yet, passion toward their spouses serves to prompt women to respond to male sexual urges and thus accept the possibility of another pregnancy. Indeed, some medieval commentaries understood it this way.

The translation as “rule”—though accurate in a limited way—remains inadequate because it implies general male dominance over women—and has usually been interpreted that way for millennia. Unfortunately, no single word in English precisely conveys the meaning of the Hebrew term in this context.

Like many biblical passages, Genesis 3:16 is an etiology, helping people to accept the difficult realities of life by viewing them as having been mandated by God. For Israelite women this meant hard work and many children as well as enduring the risks of procreation. Although their sexuality may have belonged to their husbands, women in other ways were autonomous individuals who controlled important aspects of household life.

—Carol Meyers

God now said, “Let us make human beings...” (1:26). The rabbinic sages read the two quite different accounts of human beginnings in this parashah as one continuous text. They took for granted that the male and female creations of Genesis 1 were the Adam and Eve of Genesis 2–3. However, the Rabbis were skeptical that men and women were created simultaneously in the divine image as stated in 1:26; they generally insisted that the first woman was formed later, from the first human being, as in Genesis 2:4–25. In Midrash B'reishit Rabbah 8.1, Rabbi Jeremiah ben Leazar suggested the compromise position that initially God created one entity with both male and female sexual characteristics. Only afterward, as described in Genesis 2:22, did God separate the female “side” to form the first woman from an essentially male entity. This midrash makes the powerful point that man and woman were initially created as a united being to which they revert when they become one flesh (Genesis 2:24) in marriage.

“In our image, after our likeness” (1:26). Parallel comments in B'reishit Rabbah 8.9 and 22.2 maintain the precedence of the man in human creation, while stressing the crucial role of marriage and procreation in human life: “In the past, Adam was created from the ground, and Eve from Adam; but henceforth [with the birth of offspring] it shall be in our image, after our likeness. Neither man without woman, nor woman without man, nor both of them without the Shechinah.” This invocation of the Shechinah—the indwelling nurturing aspect of the Divine, designated by a feminine noun—indicates that for the Rabbis, the female also shares in the divine image when she is joined to the male in a fruitful marriage.

God then blessed them (1:28). Continuing the strong connection between Creation and marriage, B'reishit Rabbah 8.13 records the tradition that God “took up a cup of blessing and blessed them.” Then it adds: “Rabbi Judah ben Rabbi Simon said: [The angels] Michael and Gabriel were Adam’s ‘best men.’ Rabbi Simlai said: We find that the Holy One blesses bridegrooms, adorns brides, visits the sick, buries the dead, and recites the blessing for mourners. God blesses bridegrooms, as it is written: God then blessed them; and adorns brides, as it is written: Now God has built up the rib taken from the man into a woman (Genesis 2:22).

Man and woman were initially created as a united being.

Then God יְהוָה considered, “It is not good that the man be alone—I will make him a helpmate” (2:18). B'reishit Rabbah 17.2 teaches: “A man without a wife lives without good, without help, without joy, without blessing, and without atonement.... Some even say he falls short of the divine image, since immediately following For human beings were made in the image of God (Genesis 9:6) it is written, As for you, be fruitful and multiply (9:7).” For the Rabbis, humankind is like God in its ability to create human beings, yet reproduction requires both females and males. According to

B'REISHIT

BT Y'vamot 63a, women also help men in pragmatic ways; there the prophet Elijah meets Rabbi Yosi and asks him rhetorically: “If a man brings in wheat, does he chew on the wheat? If flax, does he put on the flax? [No, he must wait until his wife sees to the processing of the wheat into bread, and of the flax into clothing!] Does she not, then, bring light to his eyes and put him on his feet?”

and the man said, “This time— / bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh!” (2:23). Prompted by This time, several rabbinic passages mention a previous time—a “first Eve,” who fled from Adam and was replaced with a second female creation (B'reishit Rabbah 17.7, 18.4, 22.7). This legend was later combined with ancient folk traditions about the night spirit Lilith. In the Alphabet of Ben Sira (possibly 8th century C.E.), Lilith’s rebelliousness is attributed to her equal creation with Adam. Refusing to be subservient in sexual intercourse or in any other way, she became a demon rather than endure Adam’s domination. Jewish folklore attributed nocturnal emissions to Lilith, who was said to set upon sleeping men. She was also blamed for maternal deaths in childbirth and for infant mortality. One popular remedy was amulets bearing the names of angels. Lilith is further demonized in Jewish mystical traditions where she and her satanic husband Samael become the evil counterparts of Adam and Eve. (On Lilith, see further Judith R. Baskin, Midrashic Women, 2002, pp. 58–60.)

And to the woman, [God] said (3:16). Some Rabbis blame Eve for the expulsion from the Garden of Eden and its consequences. While Adam was punished for his participation in divine disobedience, none of the pronouncements against him in Genesis 3:17–19 apply only to males. But Eve, and through her all women, received additional gender-specific punishments—and rabbinic literature discusses them frequently. The inventory found in Avot D'Rabbi Nathan B 42 includes: menstruation, “when she is driven from her house and banned from her husband”; childbirth; nursing her children; and being subject to her husband’s authority and his jealousy. Moreover, she ages quickly and ceases to give birth, while “men never cease being able to beget children.” Also, a woman stays indoors; and when she goes out, her head must be covered like a mourner: “That is why women precede the funeral bier, saying, ‘We have brought death upon all the inhabitants of the world.’” Such harsh views permeate rabbinic commentary on Eve’s creation and her role in the Garden of Eden, and they had a long and pernicious afterlife in shaping Jewish and Christian views of women.

—Judith R. Baskin

• • • • •

Contemporary Reflection

THE ANCIENT BABYLONIAN MYTH (or foundational story) that strongly resembles Genesis 1 has one great dissimilarity from it: in that myth, creation begins with a murder. The goddess Tiamat—cognate to our word t'hom (watery chaos, 1:2)—is slain by the hero-god Marduk; and the universe is carved out of her body. Violence there is inextricable from the process of creation. In Genesis 1, however, creation entails no destruction. Even the primal watery abyss is not completely obliterated but lingers at the bottom of the sea to reappear in many a psalm or story. The drawing of distinctions and boundaries that marks both accounts is in Genesis 1 peaceful and harmonious.

God distinguishes elements of the original watery chaos by drawing boundaries between them and naming them: light and darkness, day and night. Created elements are not simple oppositions. They are both distinct and akin. Juxtaposed verses emphasize the parallels between elements. There are waters above and waters below. Between them stretch a solid expanse of earth and a solid expanse of firmament. The earth brings forth grasses and trees. The sky is strewn with lights. The sea and the air bring forth swarms of living things, schools of fish, flocks of birds, clouds of insects. The earth births its many creatures, joyously productive, mirroring the water and the air.

The creation of humankind continues these dual themes of distinction and similarity. Not one but two words underline the likeness between adam (the earthling) and its Maker. Humankind bears the tzelem (image) and d'mut (resemblance) of the divine Creator, although in contrast to God's oneness, they are several. They are also distinguished from one another: zachar (which means "male" but is also a word related to "remember"), the bearer of the male member, and n'kevah (which means "female" but is also a word related to "piercing"), the pierced one. In Genesis 3 the two will become a hierarchy, but in Genesis 1, they are presented as equals. Both bear the divine image and semblance, both are adjured to "be fruitful and multiply, fill the earth and tame it, and hold sway... over all the earth" (1:28).

Adam is the only creature whose sexuality the text notes—that is, describes as male and female. This suggests a sexuality unlike that of the animals. Moreover in both 1:27 and a summary in 5:1–3, the mention of adam's maleness and femaleness is immediately followed by the proclamation of its divine image, as if our diverse sexualities and our kinship with God were linked. Rather than our sexualities being dissimilar to God or excluded from the divine image, they seem to point toward some element in the divine nature, some divine attribute—creativity or delight, perhaps, or the longing for an Other—for which our embodied sexuality is the metaphor.

Genesis 2 and 3 tell a darker tale. Here we learn why adam is called adam. Multiple puns are evoked by the name: kinship with adamah (earth or soil) out of which adam is fashioned, association with the color red (adom) like the ruddy sunburnt skin of the worker and the red earth he was created to till, and resonance with blood (dam), the red life-fluid. Unlike in Genesis 1, however, in 2:7–3:20 the term adam refers to the man. The woman is never called adam but only ishah (woman), "for this one is taken from man" (2:23). Together they are ha-adam v'ishto, "the human and his woman," for the first man represents both the male particular and the generically human.

As the verb "built" (2:22) attests, the creation of woman differs from other creations. The dual adam of Genesis 1 is created (bara) by divine word, and the adam of Genesis 2 is fashioned or molded (yatzar) by a divine potter. The woman is constructed (banah) out of part of an existing creation. An afterthought, created when adam finds the animals unsatisfactory for mating, she is meant to be ezer k'negdo, literally "a helper over against him," that is, opposite him or corresponding to him. The ambiguity in the expression foreshadows an ambivalent relationship. Is she against him or for him? A challenger or an "other" who mirrors him and merges with him? Awakening, adam claims her as part of himself: "bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh" (2:23). He does not appear to recognize her otherness, nor does he address her. Her only recorded conversations are first with the serpent and then with God. Finally, at the end of the chapter, adam names her as he previously named the animals. It does not occur to him to ask her what she calls herself.

The world of patriarchy cries out for mending.

Genesis 1 is an account of the Creation, whereas

B'REISHIT

Genesis 2–3 is an account of the creation of patriarchy—a remarkably truthful account. The world brought about by Genesis 2–3 is one in which desire is no longer joyful but oppressive. Even before the disobedience, relations between man and woman and world are commodified and function-based. Adam is created to till the soil. Woman is created to help Adam. However lush, the garden is a workplace. Created things are good, not intrinsically as in Genesis 1, but because they are resources. The Garden is described as prime real estate, rich in water and in trees, and adjacent to lands rich in gold and gemstones. Everything is viewed extractively. The forbidden fruit is presented as the epitome of desire in terms not of intrinsic value but of what it is good for: “good to eat,” “alluring to the eyes,” “desirable for insight” (3:6).

Woman’s desire for man ensures her subjugation and her anguish (3:16). Man’s desire is not even mentioned. He is exhausted by the effort to pull from the ground what can be consumed before descending into the ground and being consumed by it. Adam and Eve are alienated from each other, from the earth, from their labors, from the rest of creation.

The world of patriarchy cries out for mending. A mending world would commit itself to equality and power-sharing, to working cooperatively in order to fill needs and solve problems. At one again with the rest of Creation, perhaps we would even learn not to resent our mortality so bitterly. Reunited also with the rest of creation, men and women could learn again to be “loving friends”—as the traditional rabbinic wedding blessing portrays them.

—Rachel Adler

Voices

Awakening

Lynn Gottlieb

Genesis 1:26–28; 2:18–24

Shekinah gazed upon the sleeping form of HeShe.

"I shall divide this being
So HeShe can find loving companionship
Like the other creatures in the garden."

HeShe lay asleep in the grass
Curled up like a snake in the warm sun
Dreaming of angels.

Shekinah thought,
"Which part of the body
Shall I take to form the woman?

Perhaps from the mouth
So she can tell stories like Serach,
The woman who smells of time.

Perhaps the eyes
So she sees the inside truth of things
Like Soft Eyes Woman Leah.
Perhaps from the neck
So she walks with pride
Like the daughters of Zelophehad

Who are Mahlah, Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

Perhaps the ears
So she hears my laughter
Like See Far Woman Sarah.
Perhaps the heart
So she flows with tender mercies
Like Soft Hearted Woman Rachel.
Perhaps the arms
So she heals and restores with touch
Like the Hebrew midwife women.

Perhaps the legs
So she goes out seeking wisdom
Like Truth Seeking Woman Dinah.
Perhaps from the flower of her passion
So she enjoys the fruits of her body
Like Shulamit."
Then Shekinah blessed every part of woman's body, saying,
"Be pure of heart and always know you are created in My image."

Then she awoke, first woman.

NOTES

Serach. The daughter of Jacob's son Asher (Genesis 46:17, Numbers 26:46). See pp. 276, 984.

Soft Eyes Woman Leah. In Genesis 29:17, Leah's eyes are called rakot, which some medieval rabbis understood to mean "soft" or "tender."

daughters of Zelophehad. They ask to inherit their father's land and receive it (Numbers 27:1–11).

laughter. Sarah laughs when she hears that she will bear a child (Genesis 18:10–15).

See Far Woman Sarah. There is a rabbinic legend that Sarah was also known as Yiscah (Genesis 11:29), from the root s-k-h (to gaze), because she was able to see the holy spirit (BT M'gillah 14a).

Rachel. She first appears in Genesis 29:10.

Hebrew midwife women. Who disobey Pharaoh's orders to kill male infants (Exodus 1:15–22).

Dinah. Leah's daughter, whose story appears in Genesis 34:1–31.

Shulamit. The name of the woman in the sensual love poems of the Song of Songs (7:1).

B'REISHIT

from Shirat Ishah

Esther Raab (transl. Harold Schimmel)

Genesis 1:26–28; 2:18–24

Blessed be the One who made me a woman—that I'm earth and Adam and a tender rib; Blessed who made me circles upon circles—like wheels of planets and like circles of fruits—who gave me a living flesh which blossoms and made me like plant of the field—that bears fruit.

In the Beginning

Shirley Kaufman

Genesis 2:18–24

When he wakes, he turns on his side. Something is missing.

already she's out in the garden smelling the lilacs, naming the pterodactyls.

Already she's claiming the strange face rippled in the pond,

a terrible eagerness, trying to scoop the pale shape into her hands.

It's only water.
she wants it to tell her who she is, or what he lost.

Genesis

Eva Tóth (transl. Peter Jay)

Genesis 1:26–28; 2:18–24

Your hands create my body your mouth breathes life in me my face shines in your eyes you call me by my name

Alone how should I shine?
Alone I am in darkness
Alone unshapely clod of earth
Alone I do not exist

A God Once Commanded Us

Lea Goldberg (transl. Robert Friend)

Genesis 3

A god once commanded us to stand strong under the terrible tree of life.
And in the black wind of the years we stood, stricken with expectation—perhaps the fruit would fall at our feet.
But nothing happened.

And on the day of secret reckoning between him and us we saw a hunched landscape, brown leaves falling, and felt on our faces
a cold wind blowing.

Then said a Voice: this is your day of freedom.
This is everything. And this is good.

Now towards the flame of cutting cold, alone,
I take a few steps only until I meet that flickering lantern at the corner of the street.

Aspects of Eve

Linda Pastan

Genesis 2:21–22

To have been one of many ribs
and to be chosen.
To grow into something quite different knocking finally as a bone knocks on the closed gates of the garden—which unexpectedly open.

Eve's Birth

Kim Chernin

Genesis 2:18–24

Was I summoned or did I rise
from my own emergency?
Dreaming of a dark and formless thing that had no eyes
and fashioned mine.
Remembering:
waters, the disquieting wind,
dark earth and dismembering fire:
a servile arc
that roared disquietude, weakened from slumber;
and breath,
ribbed with mortality.

Where Did Its Redness Come From?

Rivka Miriam (transl. Linda Stern Zisquit)

Genesis 3:6

Where did the apple's redness come from, Eve wondered—did it put on makeup to seduce me or did it blush
seeing my skin tight as a bud and no shame yet absorbed in me?

The Apple Was a Northern Invention

Elanor Wilner

Genesis 3:6

When she ate the pomegranate, it was as if every seed with its wet red shining coat of sweet flesh clinging to the dark core was one of nature's eyes. Afterward, it was nature that was blind, and she who was wild with vision, condemned to see what was before her, and behind.

NOTE

apple. The Torah does not specify that the fruit eaten in Eden was an apple; that identification comes from a later source.

נֹחַ ♦ Noach

GENESIS 6:9–11:32

Beginning Again

NARASHAT NOACH (Noah), named after the head of the household that survives the Flood, continues the basic themes of Genesis 1–11, accounting for the human condition with its possibilities and perils. The stories express a conviction that God persists—despite repeated disappointments—in (re)adjusting expectations in response to human limitations.

Two individuals, living ten generations apart, frame the parashah: Noah (6:9) and Abram/Abraham (11:27–32). Each becomes a vehicle for God’s persistence in “beginning again.” Between these two looms the devastating flood in response to human transgression, followed by God’s renewed effort to restore harmony through a covenant with Noah and all creation. The covenant redefines the relationship between God and humankind.

The tale of the Tower of Babel (Genesis 11) follows the flood story, as yet another case of human disobedience and divine response. It accounts for linguistic diversity and also demonstrates God’s covenantal restraint when humankind once again seeks to go beyond bounds. Finally, the introduction of Abram and Sarai that concludes the parashah prepares the stage for stories about the ancestral family—and about the descendants, the Israelites, who are the subject of the rest of the Bible.

Women’s presence in this parashah is more implicit than explicit until the very end, when Sarai/Sarah receives more attention than her husband Abram/Abraham (11:29–30). Her condition, that of a barren woman, introduces the challenge that propels the plot of the next several Torah portions, namely: How can God’s promises of progeny be fulfilled? Noah’s wife, the new mother of humankind, is mentioned several times but never named (though some rabbis later identify her as Naamah of Genesis 4:22). The virtual absence of women’s stories and names is all the more striking given the emphasis on women in the previous parashah and the lengthy, patrilineal genealogies in this is detected in three basic ways.*

*Feminine presence in this parashah

one. Feminine presence is detected, however, in three basic ways: the (unnamed) wives of Noah and “his” sons; the emphasis on the animals who embark the ark as male and female; and the overwhelming presence of t'hom, “the deep”—a feminine noun evoking the name of the Babylonians’ salt-water goddess, Tiamat. T'hom first appears in Genesis 1:2 as a subdued presence. Riled into action by God, t'hom in this Torah portion unleashes its waters and destroys all that lives on land (see at 7:1).

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

Outline—

I. TRANSGRESSION AND DIVINE RESPONSE

Noah and the Flood (6:9–9:29)

- A. The Flood (6:9–8:14)
- B. Transformation, covenant, and renewal (8:15–9:17)
- C. The aftermath: Noah and his sons (vv. 18–29)

II. THE TABLE OF THE NATIONS (10:1–32)

III. TRANSGRESSION AND DIVINE RESPONSE

The Tower of Babel (11:1–9)

IV. THE TEN GENERATIONS FROM NOAH TO ABRAM (11:10–26)

V. A NEW BEGINNING

Abram/Abraham and Sarai/Sarah (11:27–32)

6:9

This is Noah's chronicle. Noah was a righteous man; in his generation, he was above re-

9 אלה תולחת נח נח איש צדיק תמים
הייה בדורתו אתי־הָאֱלֹהִים הַתְּלִקְרִנֵּחַ:

Transgression and Divine Response

NOAH AND THE FLOOD (6:9–9:29)

The Flood Story draws upon other ancient Near Eastern traditions about disastrous floods, such as the Babylonian epics Gilgamesh and Atra Hasis (dated as early as the 18th century B.C.E.). The parallels between the biblical and Babylonian versions are extensive and striking. They share a basic plot: the divine anger leads to a flood aiming to eradicate humankind. Many details are strikingly similar: one individual is told to build a boat to carry a select few to safety; the instructions for the boat, including the requirement for a window, are often parallel; and a raven and a dove go out to test the conditions in the aftermath. There can be no doubt that Babylonian traditions influenced the biblical version. The most significant differences between the two lie in the cause for the flood: in the Babylonian myth, the gods unleash the flood because human noise angers them; in Genesis, human violence prompts God to unleash the flood. In the Babylonian versions, the hero receives immortality as a gift from the gods. What the biblical hero receives is a covenant from God that promises the “immortality” of humankind. According to Tikva Frymer-Kensky, the biblical flood is not primarily a punishment but “a means of getting rid of the thoroughly polluted world and starting again with a well-washed one” (“The Atrahasis Epic and Its Significance for Our Understanding of Genesis 1–9,” Studies in Bible and Feminist Criticism, 2006, p. 62). The laws that God gives Noah in Genesis 9:1–7 seek to prevent the kind of bloodshed that pollutes the land.

The description of the flood shows an interweaving of separate versions, illustrating a commitment to more than one voice in telling the story. Scholars of the Torah’s historical development identify two major strands: “J” (also called “Yahwist,” a Judean source) and “P” (Priestly source), each with its own characteristics (see the introduction to Genesis, p. 1).

THE FLOOD (6:9–8:14)

9. Noah was a righteous man. Already introduced in the previous parashah as the hope of both humankind (5:28–29) and God (6:8), Noah is the bearer of potential comfort. His father had named him as such, a bringer of n’chamah (“comfort,” a pun on the name Noach) to reverse the cursed condition of the earth (5:29).

in his generation. Whether this qualification intends to diminish his virtue (meaning, “only when compared to others in that era of utter violence”) or enhance it (meaning “even in the midst of a corrupt generation”) remains unspecified.

- The theme of barrenness is emphasized in the story of the ancestors.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 53

- One rabbi argues that Noah’s wife was Naamah, a descendant of Cain.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 53

- God’s words show us how we can use language to repair relationships.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 55

- My mother and sisters— / there would be no room for them....

VOICES ► 57

proach; Noah walked with God.¹⁰ Noah begot three sons: Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

¹¹The earth became corrupt before God; the earth was filled with violence,¹²and when God saw how corrupted the earth was, how all flesh was acting in a corrupt way upon the earth,¹³God said to Noah, “The end of all flesh has come [to mind] before Me, because the earth is full of violence on their account; look, now—I am going to wipe them off the earth.¹⁴Make yourself an ark of gopher wood; make the ark with rooms, and cover it with tar inside and out.¹⁵This is how to make it: 300 cubits long, 50 cubits wide, and 30 cubits high.¹⁶Make a roof for the ark, making it overhang from above by a cubit. Put the ark’s door

¹⁰ וַיְלֹךְ נָחַ שֶׁלֶשׁ בָנִים אֲתִישָׁם אֶת־חַם
וְאֶת־יַפְתָּח:
¹¹ וַתִּשְׁחַת הָאָרֶץ לִפְנֵי הָאֱלֹהִים וַתִּמְלֹא
הָאָרֶץ חַמֵּס: ¹² וַיַּרְא אֱלֹהִים אֶת־הָאָרֶץ
וְהִנֵּה נְשַׁחֲתָה קִיְדְשָׁה בְּלִבְשָׂר אֹתָהּ
וּרְכֹבוֹ עַל־הָאָרֶץ: ¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים
לְנָחַ קָזְבְּלִבְשָׂר בָּא לִפְנֵי פִימְלָא
הָאָרֶץ חַמֵּס מִפְנֵיכֶם וְהִנֵּן מִשְׁחִיתֶם אֶת־
הָאָרֶץ: ¹⁴ עָשָׂה לְכָתֵבָת עַצְיָגֶר קְנִים
תְּעִשָּׂה אֶת־הַתְּבָה וּכְפֹרֶת אֹתָהּ מִבֵּית
וּמִחִיצוֹן בְּכֶפֶר: ¹⁵ וְזֹה אֲשֶׁר תַּעֲשֶׂה אֶתְתָּה
שֶׁלֶשׁ מִאוֹת אַמִּה אַמִּה אַמִּה הַתְּבָה חַמְשִׁים
אַמִּה רְחַבָּה וְשֶׁלֶשׁ אַמִּה קְוֹמִתָּה:
¹⁶ צָהָר | תַּעֲשֶׂה לְתָבָה וְאֶל־אַמִּה תִּכְלֹנֶה

walked with God. The phrase indicates special intimacy. In the Bible, only Enoch (5:22) and Noah receive such a high compliment. God asks Abraham to “walk before me” (17:1), possibly an even more demanding request than walking with God.

10. Noah begot three sons. This information was first reported in 5:32. No mother is mentioned, for generational continuity and transmission of property in ancient Israel focused on the male lineage. However, in the context of lineages, it generally goes without saying that women are essential to the household and to society.

Shem, Ham, and Japheth. Each of the three sons represents a general linguistic or ethnic group in existence when the Torah was composed. According to 10:1–26, Shem is ancestor of the Semites to which Israel and the Arab peoples belong. Ham is ancestor of the African peoples and Japheth of the Greeks. Noah will later establish a hierarchy among them (9:24–27).

6:11–7:23. In the Babylonian flood stories, the gods are angry at humankind because people have become a nuisance, disturbing the peace. Genesis, instead, makes unchecked human violence the reason for God’s drastic action of wiping out all living creatures—returning the world to primeval chaos.

11. violence. Tikva Frymer-Kensky points out that this Hebrew word, chamas, “in the Bible encompasses almost the entire spectrum of evil” (“The Atrahasis Epic,” Studies in Bible, 2006, p. 61). After the flood, God gives Noah prohibitions regarding bloodshed, which suggests that bloodshed was the main concern.

13–22. The ark that God instructs Noah to build is intended to provide for the future by saving Noah, his family, and the representative animals.

13. God said... “I am going to wipe them off.” The narrator had first mentioned God’s decision to destroy humankind in 6:5–7. The report that divine beings married earthly women in what seemed like a violation of the boundary between heaven and earth (6:1–4) may also be a factor in God’s decision.

14. “Make yourself an ark.” The word tevah (ark) literally means a box. It appears again only in Exodus 2:3–5, when Moses’ mother makes one for her newborn. In both cases, the ark carries the future, as it were.

in its side, and make a bottom, a second, and a third deck.

¹⁷“As for Me, I am going to bring the flood-waters upon the earth to destroy all that lives under the heavens, [all] that has the breath of life in it. Everything on earth shall expire. ¹⁸With you, though, I will establish My covenant: go then into the ark—you, your wife, your sons, and their wives with you. ¹⁹And take two each of every living creature—of all flesh—into the ark, male and female, to keep them alive along with you: ²⁰every type of bird, every type of beast, every type of creeping thing—let two of each come to you to keep them alive, ²¹and take along edible foodstuffs of every kind; gather them up so that there is food for yourself and for them.” ²²And Noah did just as God had commanded him: that is what he did.

7 then said to Noah, “Go into the ark with all your household, for I see that you [alone] in this age are righteous before Me. ²Take seven pairs of every pure beast, a male and its mate, and two of every impure beast, a male and its mate. ³Of the birds of the sky, too, take seven pairs, male and female, to give life to offspring on the face of the earth. ⁴For in another seven days I will pour rain

מִלְמַעַלָה וּפֶתַח הַתְּבָה בָּצָעה תְּשִׁים
תְּחִתִּים שְׁנִים וּשְׁלֹשִׁים תְּעַשָּׂה:
¹⁷ וְאַנְיִ הַנְּגִי מְבֵיא אֶת־הַמְּבוֹל מִם עַל־
הָאָרֶץ לְשִׁחת בְּלִבְשָׂר אֲשֶׁר־בָּבוֹ רוח חַיִם
מִתְחַת הַשְׁמִים כֹּל אֲשֶׁר־בָּאָרֶץ יָגוּעַ:
¹⁸ וְהַקְמִתִּי אֶת־בְּרִיתִי אֶתְךָ וּבְאַתָּה אֶל־
הַתְּבָה אַתָּה וּבְנִינָּךְ וְאַשְׁתָּה וּנְשִׁיבְנִינָּךְ
אֶתְךָ: ¹⁹ וּמִכְלָל־הָחִי מִכְלָל־בָּשָׂר שְׁנִים מִכְלָל
תְּבִיא אֶל־הַתְּבָה לְהַחִית אֶתְךָ זָכָר וּנְקָבָה
יְדָיו: ²⁰ מִהְעָזָת לְמִינְיוֹן וּמִן־הַבָּהָמָה
לְמִינְהָה מִכְלָל רָמֶש הָאָדָמָה לְמִינְהָוּ שְׁנִים
מִכְלָל יָבָאו אֶלְיךָ לְהַחִיות: ²¹ וְאַתָּה קָח־
לְךָ מִכְלָל־מִאָכֵל אֲשֶׁר יִאָכֵל וְאַסְפַּת אֶלְיךָ
וְהִיא לְךָ וְלָהּם לְאַכְלָה: ²² וַיַּעֲשֵׂנָךְ בְּכָל־
אֲשֶׁר צִוָּה אֶתְךָ אֱלֹהִים כַּן עָשָׂה:
² וַיֹּאמֶר יְהָוָה לְנֵחַ בְּאִירְתֶּךָ וּכְל־בִּיתֶּךָ
אֶל־הַתְּבָה בַּיּוֹתֶךָ רְאִיתִי צְדִיק לִפְנֵי בְּדוֹר
הַזֹּהָה: ² מִכְלָל הַבָּהָמָה הַטְהוֹרָה תִּקְחֵ-לְכָךְ
שְׁבֻעָה שְׁבֻעָה אִישׁ וְאֲשֶׁתוֹ וּמִן־הַבָּהָמָה
אֲשֶׁר לֹא טְהוֹר דָוָה הוּא שְׁנִים אִישׁ וְאֲשֶׁתוֹ:
³ גַם מַעֲזָב הַשְׁמִים שְׁבֻעָה שְׁבֻעָה זָכָר
וּנְקָבָה לְחִיוֹת זָרָע עַל־פְנֵי כָּל־הָאָרֶץ: ⁴ כִּי
לִימִם עוֹד שְׁבֻעָה אָנְכִי מַמְטִיר עַל־הָאָרֶץ

18. “With you, though, I will establish My covenant.” This first mentioned covenant will encompass all of Noah’s descendants, and thus all humankind, as well as the entire natural world (see Genesis 9:8–17).

“go...you, your wife, your sons, and their wives with you.” As sole survivors, they constitute all humankind.

For the first time, Noah’s unnamed wife is mentioned, along with the wives of his sons (not her sons or their sons). The wording reflects the patrilineal nature of the ancient society; see above at v. 10.

19. “male and female.” Provision for continued procreation involves female and male creatures.

7:1. Noah’s righteousness merits the saving of his entire household, the basic unit of ancient Near Eastern society. Whereas the hero of the Babylonian flood story tries to warn his neighbors and persuade them to join him in the ark, Noah does not attempt to include or reform others.

2. God further provides for the future by ensuring the procreation of animals (rather than creating them anew). Pure animals are those fit for sacrifice.

“male and its mate.” Heb. ish v’ishto, words that are sometimes used in biblical language to designate members of a group, human or otherwise. (See further at 2:23.)

upon the earth for forty days and nights and wipe all that exists—all that I have made—off the face of the earth.”⁵ Noah then did just as God had commanded him.

⁶Noah was 600 years old when the flood came—waters upon the earth. ⁷Noah, with his sons, his wife, and his sons’ wives came into the ark on account of the deluge. ⁸Of the pure beasts and the beasts that were not pure, of the birds and all that creep on the earth,⁹ two by two they came to Noah to the ark, male and female, as God had commanded Noah.

¹⁰After seven days, the floodwaters covered the earth. ¹¹In the six hundredth year of Noah’s life, in the second month, on the seventeenth day of the month, on that day, all the springs of the great deep broke out, and the sky’s floodgates opened. ¹²Rain fell upon the earth for forty days and nights.

¹³That very day Noah and Shem and Ham and Japheth, Noah’s sons, came to the ark, with Noah’s

ארבעים יום וארבעים לילה ומחרתי את־
כל היקום אשר עשית מעל פנֵי האדמה:
ויעש נח בכל אשר צויתו יהוה:
וнач בנסע מאות שנה ומהבול דזה
ימים על הארץ: ⁷ ויבא נח זביו ואשתו
ונשיבנו אותו אל התחנה מפני מי
המבול: ⁸ מניחבמה הטהורה ומן־
הבהמה אשר איננה טהרה ומן־העף
וכל אשר רמש על הארץ: ⁹ שניים
שנים באו אלו נח אל התחנה זכר ונקבה
באשר צויה אלהיםอาทינך:
¹⁰ ויהי לשבעת הימים ומי המבול היה
על הארץ: ¹¹ בשנת ששים שנה
לחני נח בחדש השני בשבעה עשר יום
להודש ביום זה נבקעו כל מעינות תהום
רבה וארבת השמים נפתחו: ¹² ויהי
הגשם על הארץ ארבעים יום וארבעים
לייה:
¹³ בעצם היום הזה בא נח ושתותם ויפת
בני נח ואשת נח ושלשת נשיכנו אותם

7. Noah, with his sons, his wife, and his sons’ wives came into the ark. Noah’s wife and his sons’ wives are mentioned several times without names. See above at 6:18.

7:11–8:14. The Flood is more than an overflow of water; it represents a return to primeval chaos, with water breaking through the boundaries created in Genesis 1 to form and protect the earth. The floodgates open from above and below, letting the waters wipe out everything. The details of the story show inconsistencies that expose the seams where two accounts are woven together. The actual flood lasts 40 days (7:17), yet waters continue to rise for 150 days (7:24), subsiding for 40 days plus 14 (8:6).

11. the great deep. Heb. t'hom, a noun also found in 1:2, echoes the name of the Mesopota-mian goddess Tiamat. But now she bursts forth with the ferocity familiar from the Babylonian Creation story Enuma Elish. Primordial t'hom, like the awesome goddess Tiamat, has been often maligned. According to the Enuma Elish, Tiamat’s children, led by the god Marduk, provoke her wrath by killing her husband. When she tries to retaliate, they destroy her and use her body to form the world. In the Bible, t'hom is typically associated with the uncontrollable and immeasurable. Catherine Keller, however, shows the nuanced ways in which t'hom as “the deep,” infinite and fertile, also functions as a partner with God in creation (The Face of the Deep: A Theology of Becoming, 2003, pp. 213–228). See also the positive reference to t'hom in Psalm 42:8, “deep (t'hom) calls to deep (t'hom).”

wife and with his sons' three wives.¹⁴ They, and every type of animal, every type of beast, every type of creature that creeps on the earth, every type of fowl, every bird, every winged creature—¹⁵ they came to Noah, to the ark, two by two, all flesh that had in it the breath of life.¹⁶ Those who came were male and female; some of every species entered, just as God had ordered him; then יהוה shut [the door] after him.

¹⁷ Forty days the flood was upon the earth; the waters increased and lifted the ark, and so it rose over the ground.¹⁸ The waters gained in strength, increasing upon the earth, as the ark coursed on the waters' surface.¹⁹ High, high above the earth towered the waters, so that the tallest mountains that stand beneath the heavens were submerged.²⁰ Fifteen cubits higher the waters towered, as the mountains were submerged.²¹ Then all flesh that swarmed upon the earth perished—whether bird, cattle, or wild animal, or that which teemed over the earth, or human being.²² Whatever on dry land had the breath of life in its nostrils, died.²³ [God] wiped out all that existed on the face of the earth—human, beast, reptile, birds of the sky—they were wiped off the earth; there remained only Noah and those with him in the ark.

²⁴ And the waters towered over the earth a hundred and fifty days. ⁸ God then remembered Noah and all the animals and all the beasts that were with him in the ark, so God caused a wind to sweep over the earth, and the waters subsided.

21–23. The destruction of all land-based animal life on earth is vividly recorded. Words such as “perished” and “blotted out” make clear that no one survives except “Noah and those with him in the ark” (v. 23).

8:1. God then remembered Noah. God turns attention to Noah and begins to restore the world to order by reversing the direction of the waters. Remembering connotes acting, as when God remembers Rachel (Genesis 30:22) and she conceives.

wind. Heb. ruach, the same word as in 1:2 (where it was rendered “spirit”). The Flood reverses Creation, and the aftermath is a new Creation that recalls Genesis 1.

אל-התבה : ¹⁴ הַמָּה וְכָל-הַחַיִּה לְמִינָה וְכָל-הַבָּהֶם לְמִינָה לְמִינָה וְכָל-הַרְמֵשׁ הַרְמֵשׁ עַל-הָאָרֶץ לְמִינָה וְכָל-הַעֲוֹף לְמִינָה בְּלִכְפּוֹר בְּלִכְפּוֹר : ¹⁵ וַיָּבֹאוּ אֶל-נַּחַת אֶל-התבה שְׁנָים שְׁנָים מִכְלַדְבָּשָׂר אֲשֶׁר-בָּרוּ רוח חַיִּים : ¹⁶ וְהַבָּאִים זָכָר וְנָקְבָה מִכְלַבְשָׂר בָּאוּ בְּאָשָׁר צָוָה אֶתְךָ אֱלֹהִים וַיַּסְגַּר יְהוָה בְּעֵדו :

¹⁷ וַיְהִי הַמִּבּוֹל אֶרְبָּעִים יוֹם עַל-הָאָרֶץ וַיָּרַבּוּ הַמְּפִימִים וַיָּשָׂאֵל אֶת-הַתְּבָה וַיָּתַרְמֵם מִעַל-הָאָרֶץ : ¹⁸ וַיָּגַבֵּרְוּ הַמְּפִימִים וַיָּרַבּוּ מִאַד עַל-הָאָרֶץ וַתָּלַח התְּבָה עַל-פָּנֶי הַמְּפִימִים : ¹⁹ וַיהֲמִים גָּבוּרִים מִאַד עַל-הָאָרֶץ וַיַּכְטֵנוּ בְּלִכְהָרִים הַגְּבָהִים אֲשֶׁר-עַתְּחָת בְּלִכְהָרִים : ²⁰ חַמֵּשׁ עָשָׂרָה אַמָּה מִלְמַעַלָה גָּבוּרִים וַיַּכְטֵנוּ הַהָרִים : ²¹ וַיָּגַע בְּלִכְהָרִים עַל-הָאָרֶץ הַשְׁרֵץ עַל-הָאָרֶץ וְכָל-יְבָחָה וְכָל-הַחַיִּים וְכָל-הַאֲדָם : ²² כֹּל אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁמַת-רוּחַ חַיִּים בָּאָפָיו מִכֶּל אֲשֶׁר בְּחָרְבָה מָרְתוֹן : ²³ וְנַמָּח אֲשֶׁר אָתָּה בְּתִבְהָה :

²⁴ וַיָּגַבֵּר הַמְּפִים עַל-הָאָרֶץ חַמֵּשׁים וּמִאַת יָמִים : ²⁵ וַיַּזְפַּר אֶל-הָיִם אֶת-נַחַת בְּלִכְהָרִים וְאֶת-בְּלִכְהָרָה אֲשֶׁר אֶת-נַחַת בְּתִבְהָה וַיַּעֲבֵר אֱלֹהִים רְיוֹת עַל-הָאָרֶץ

²The springs of the deep and the sky's floodgates closed up, and the rain was stopped up from the sky. ³The waters diminished apace, ebbing and flowing, [draining] from the earth, and at the end of a hundred and fifty days the waters had receded. ⁴In the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, the ark came to rest atop one of the mountains of Ararat. ⁵The waters kept on ebbing away until the tenth month; on the first day of the tenth [month], the mountain peaks could be seen.

⁶Forty days later, Noah opened the ark's window that he had made ⁷and sent out the raven, who went winging to and fro waiting for the water to dry up from upon the earth. ⁸Then he sent out the dove, to see whether the water had eased from off the surface of the soil, ⁹but the dove could not find a resting-place for her foot, so she returned to the ark, for [still] there was water on the face of the earth: he reached out his hand and took her, bringing her back to him into the ark. ¹⁰He waited yet another seven days, and again sent the dove out of the ark. ¹¹Toward evening, the dove came to him, and look—a freshly-plucked olive branch in her beak! So Noah knew that the water had eased from off the earth. ¹²He waited yet another seven days and sent the dove out; this time she no longer came back to him.

¹³In [Noah's] six hundred and first year, on the first day of the first month, the water had receded from over the earth. When Noah removed the covering of the ark, he saw that the earth's surface

וַיָּשֹׁבוּ הַמְּפִימִים: ² וַיִּסְכְּרוּ מַעֲינֵת תְּהוֹם וְאֶרְבֶּת הַשָּׁמַיִם וְיִפְלָא הַגָּשָׂם מִן־הַשָּׁמַיִם: ³ וַיָּשִׁיבוּ הַמְּפִים מִעַל הָאָרֶץ הַלוֹךְ וָשׁוֹב וַיִּחְשְׁרוּ הַמְּפִים מִקְלָה חַמְשִׁים וּמִאַת יוֹם: ⁴ וַתָּנַח הַתְּבָה בְּחֹדֶשׁ הַשְׁבִּיעִי בְּשְׁבָעָה עַשֶּׂר יוֹם לְחִדּשׁ עַל הָרִי אַרְרַטִּי: ⁵ וְהַמְּפִים הַיּוֹ הַלוֹךְ וְחַטְוֹר עַד הַחֹדֶשׁ הַעֲשִׂירִי בְּעֶשֶׂרִי בְּאַחֲרֵי לְחִדּשׁ נִרְאָו רָאשֵׁי הַהָרִים:

⁶ וַיָּנוֹי מִקְזֵן אַרְבָּעִים יוֹם וַיִּפְתַּח נֹחַ אֶת־חַלּוֹן הַתְּבָה אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה: ⁷ וַיִּשְׁלַח אֶת־הָעָרָב וַיֵּצֵא יָצָא וָשׁוֹב עַד־יִבְשַׁת הַמְּפִים מִעַל הָאָרֶץ: ⁸ וַיִּשְׁלַח אֶת־הַיוֹנָה מִעַל פִּנְיֵי הָאָרְמָה: לְרֹאשׁוֹת הַקְּלָוֹת הַמְּפִים מִעַל פִּנְיֵי הָאָרְמָה: ⁹ וְלֹא־אִמְצָאָה הַיוֹנָה מִנּוֹן לְכַפְּרַגְלָה וַתִּשְׁבַּב אֶלְיוֹן אֶל־הַתְּבָה בִּירְמִים עַל־פִּנְיֵי כָּל־הָאָרֶץ וַיִּשְׁלַח יָדוֹ וַיִּקְחָה וַיָּבֹא אֶת־הַאֲלִיוֹן אֶל־הַתְּבָה: ¹⁰ וַיִּחְלֹل עַד שְׁבַעַת יְמִים אֶחָרִים וַיִּסְף שְׁלַח אֶת־הַיוֹנָה מִן־הַתְּבָה: ¹¹ וַתָּבָא אֶלְיוֹן הַיוֹנָה לְעֵת שָׁרֵב וְהַנֶּהָרָה עַל־הַיּוֹת טְרֵף בְּפִיה וַיַּדַּע נֹחַ בִּירְקָלָו הַמְּפִים מִעַל הָאָרֶץ: ¹² וַיִּחְלֹל עַד שְׁבַעַת יְמִים אֶחָרִים וַיִּשְׁלַח אֶת־הַיוֹנָה וְלֹא־יִסְפָּה שׁוּב־אֶלְיוֹן עוֹד:

¹³ זָנוֹן בְּאָנוֹת וִישְׁרִימָאֹת שָׁנָה בְּרָאשׁוֹן בְּאַחֲרֵי לְחִדּשׁ חַרְבוֹ הַמְּפִים מִעַל הָאָרֶץ וַיָּסַר נֹחַ אֶת־מִכְסָה הַתְּבָה וַיָּרָא וְהִנֵּה

4. Ararat. Tradition associates this name with a mountainous district near the intersection of Turkey and Armenia. Explorers who consider the Flood narrative to be history rather than story periodically claim (unconvincingly) to have found remnants of the ark there.

6–10. raven...dove. The same birds appear in the Mesopotamian flood stories. Their flight patterns indicate the scope of destruction—and portend renewal.

II. olive branch. Returning, the dove demonstrates that plant life is visible again. The olive branch becomes a symbol of renewal and peace in the aftermath of devastation.

12. the dove...no longer came back. A final sign that the world was habitable again.

was beginning to dry,¹⁴ and by the twenty-seventh day of the second month, the earth had dried up.

¹⁵ God then spoke to Noah, saying,¹⁶ “Go out of the ark with your wife, your sons, and their wives.

¹⁷ Take every animal that is in your care—bird and beast, and all that creep over the earth; let them swarm on the earth; let them be fruitful and multiply on the earth.”¹⁸ So Noah went out, together with his sons, his wife, and his sons’ wives.¹⁹ The animals, the reptiles, the birds, everything that teems upon the earth—all departed from the ark in family groups.

²⁰ Noah then built an altar in honor of Yahweh; taking some pure beasts and some pure birds, he offered up whole burnt-offerings on the altar.²¹ Inhaling the soothing fragrance, thought: “Never again will I bring doom upon the world on account of what people do, though the human mind inclines to evil from youth onward; never again will I destroy all living beings, as I have [just] done.²² As long as the world exists, / planting and

חרבי פָנִי הַאֲדָמָה: ¹⁴ וּבְחֶדֶשׁ הַשְׁנִי
בְשְׁבֻעָה וּשְׁנִירִים יוֹם לְחֶדֶשׁ יְבָשָׂה הָאָרֶץ: ס

¹⁵ וַיַּדְבֵּר אֱלֹהִים אֶל־נֹחַ לְאמֹר: ¹⁶ צָא מִן־
הַתְּבָה אֲפָה וְאַשְׁתָּה וְיָבִנְךָ וְנִשְׁיָבְנָךָ
אַתָּה: ¹⁷ כִּל־הַחִילָה אֲשֶׁר־אָתָּה מִכְלַבְשָׂר־
בָּעוֹף וּבְבָהָמָה וּבְכָל־הַרְמֵשׁ הַרְמִישׁ עַל־
הָאָרֶץ הַוֹּצֵא קִיצָא אַתָּה וְשָׁרַצָּו בָּאָרֶץ
וְפָרוּ וְרָבוּ עַל־הָאָרֶץ: ¹⁸ וַיַּצְא־נֹחַ וְבָנָיו
וְאַשְׁתָּו וְנִשְׁיָבְנָו אַתָּה: ¹⁹ כִּל־הַחִילָה כָּל־
הַרְמֵשׁ וּכָל־הָעוֹף כָּל רֹמֶשׁ עַל־הָאָרֶץ
לִמְשַׁפְתְּתִיכָם יִצְאֵו מִן־הַתְּבָה:

²⁰ וַיַּבְנֵן נֹחַ מִזְבֵּחַ לִיהְוָה וַיַּקְרֵב מִכְלַל
הַבָּהָמָה הַטְהָרָה וּמִכְלַל הָעוֹף הַטְהָרָה וַיַּעַל
עַלְתָּה בְּמִזְבֵּחַ: ²¹ וַיַּרְא יְהֹוָה אֶת־רִיחַ
הַנִּיחַח וַיֹּאמֶר יְהֹוָה אֶל־לְבָבוֹ לֹא־אָסֶף
לְקַלְלָה עוֹד אֶת־הָאָדָם בַּעֲבוּר הָאָדָם בַּיּ
יִצְרָא לְבַד הָאָדָם רַע מִנְעָרָיו וְלֹא־אָסֶף עוֹד
לְהַכּוֹת אֶת־בָּלְתִּי בְּאָשֶׁר עָשִׂיתִי: ²² עַד

TRANSFORMATION, COVENANT, AND RENEWAL (8:15–9:17)

15. “Go out...with your wife, your sons, and their wives.” God’s instructions imply that the world again is hospitable to living beings. Whereas the narrator groups Noah with his sons, followed by his wife with the sons’ wives (7:7 and 8:18), God pairs Noah with his wife and the sons with theirs.

18. Noah went out, together with his sons, his wife, and his sons’ wives. The writer leaves it to the reader to imagine the feelings of Noah and his family as they disembark. Compare the order in v. 15.

20–22. God reassesses humankind’s nature and accepts human limitations. The anthropomorphic description of a God who responds and recants at the pleasing smell of sacrifice makes some modern readers uneasy. More striking is the basis of God’s change of heart. The reason for not destroying life again is virtually the same as the reason for the flood: human beings incline to evil from their youth. In other words, God—not humankind—changes as a result of the flood.

21. “inclines to evil from youth onward.” God recognizes that the inclination to do evil is part of human beings. God’s observation does not claim that humans are inherently sinful but rather recognizes human limitations. God’s subsequent laws reflect God’s new awareness.

“never again will I destroy.” The promise is momentous. It will be reiterated in the covenant that follows (see especially 9:ii).

harvesting, / cold and heat, / summer and winter, / day and night / will never end.”

9 God then blessed Noah and his sons, saying to them, “Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth,² and let the awe and dread of you be upon all the land animals, and all the birds of the sky, and all that creep on the ground, and all the fish of the sea: they are given into your hands.³ Any small animal that is alive shall be food for you, like green grasses—I give you [them] all. ⁴But flesh whose lifeblood is [still] in it you may not eat.⁵ Moreover, for your own bloodguilt I will require your lives; I will require it by means of beasts or by means of human beings—by means of a fellow human being will I require a [guilty] person’s life.⁶ The shedder of human blood, / that person’s blood shall be shed by [another] human; / for human beings were made /

כָל-יְמִינֵי הָאָרֶץ נֹרֶעׁ וּקְצִיר וְקַרְבָּן וְקִיזָּץ
וְתַרְפָּה וְיוֹם וְלִילָה לֹא יִשְׁבְּתוּ:
ט וַיֹּבְרֶךְ אֱלֹהִים אֲתִינָךְ וְאַתְּבָנָיו וַיֹּאמֶר
לְהַם פָּרוּ וַיְרֻבוּ וְמִלְאָוֹ אֶת-הָאָרֶץ:
² וּמוֹרְאָכָם וְחַתְּכָם יְהִי עַל כָּל-הָרִידָה
הָאָרֶץ וְעַל כָּל-עַזְקָה הַשָּׁמְמִים בְּכָל אָשָׁר
תְּרַמֵּשׁ הָאָדָמָה וּבְכָל-דָּגַן הַיִם בִּידָכֶם
נָתַנוּ: ³ בְּלִרְמָשׁ אֲשֶׁר הוֹא-חַי לְכָם יְהִי
לְאַכְלָה בַּירְקָע שֶׁשֶׁב נִתְתַּחַת לְכָם אַת-כָּלֹ:
⁴ אַתְּבָשָׂר בְּנֶפֶשׁ דָּמוֹ לֹא תַאֲכִלוּ: ⁵ וְאֶת-
אַתְּדָמָכֶם לְנֶפֶשׁתֶיכֶם אֲדָרֶשׁ מִיד בְּלִ- חִיָּה אֲדָרְשָׂנוּ וּמִיד הָאָדָם מִיד אִישׁ אֲחִיו
אֲדָרֶשׁ אֲת-נֶפֶשׁ הָאָדָם: ⁶ שְׁפָרְ דָם הָאָדָם
בְּאַקְם דָמוֹ יִשְׁפַּר כִּי בְצָלָם אֱלֹהִים עָשָׂה

9:1–7. The transgressions that led to the Flood transform God’s expectations. They result in new rules to guide humankind and a promise of a perpetual covenant. God’s blessings and God’s new instructions signal a new beginning. Only the command to procreate unites this commissioning with the first one in Genesis 1:28.

New guidelines aim at channeling impulses and containing them. The values are inscribed in the laws: life is precious, human life especially so. Several notable elements differentiate this renewal from the earlier commissioning of humankind. Eating meat (with some qualifications) is now permitted, perhaps as a concession to human need for aggression (9:4). Bloodshed is to be controlled. In particular, the sanctity of human life is announced (9:6). The absence of women in this text contrasts with the earlier blessings in Genesis 1. In split-screen fashion, an inclusive vision is also present meanwhile in the references to adam, the generic human being who is (still) in God’s image (9:6).

Later rabbinic tradition expanded the laws in this section into seven “Noachite laws” that are binding upon all humankind.

1. “Be fruitful and multiply.” This exact repetition of the original command (1:28) takes on new poignancy in light of the destruction that preceded; now it stands for regenerating life after death-dealing disasters.

4. Eating meat appears as a concession, not a requirement. (The original diet for both humans and beasts was vegetarian in 1:29–30.)

5. “bloodguilt.” God singles out human life for special care. God demands restitution for the shedding of human blood.

6. “The shedder of human blood. . . .” The very formulation expresses parity between crime and punishment: the first six words repeat in exact mirror image: spill-blood-human / human-blood-spill. The message is both simple and profound: complete parallel between deed and consequence—no more, no less. This formulation resembles the “eye for an eye” principle (Exodus 21:24). Less clear is how such a guideline is to be carried out.

GENESIS 9:7–17

NOACH

in the image of God.⁷ As for you, be fruitful and multiply; populate the earth and increase in it.”

⁸ God then said to Noah and his sons who were with him, ⁹“As for Me, I am going to establish My covenant with you and with your descendants after you,¹⁰ and with every living being in your care—the birds, the beasts, and all the land animals in your care—all who have gone out of the ark, all earth’s animals.¹¹ I am establishing My covenant with you; never again shall all flesh be cut off by the waters of the flood; never again shall there be a flood to destroy the earth.”

¹² And God said, “Here is the sign I am giving you of the covenant between Me and you, and every living being with you, down to the last generation: ¹³I have placed My bow in the cloud—it will be a sign of the covenant between Me and the earth.¹⁴ And when I cause clouds to form over the earth, and the bow appears in the cloud,¹⁵ I will remember My covenant between Me and you and all living beings, all flesh, and never again shall the waters become a flood, to destroy all flesh.¹⁶ When the bow is in the cloud, and I see it, I will remember the everlasting covenant between God and all living beings, all that live upon the earth.”

¹⁷ And God said to Noah, “This is the sign of the covenant that I have established between Me and all that live upon the earth.”

“in the image of God.” Because humankind is made in God’s image, murder counts as a crime against God.

9:8–17. The covenant emphasizes renewal. It also offers the assurance of security to humankind. The covenant reiterates the perpetuity of its promise (9:9, 12) and its expansive scope, encompassing all living beings (9:9–10, 12, 15, 16, 17).

את־הָאָדָם :⁷ וְאַתֶּם פָּרוּ וּרְبֻוּ שָׁרֵצָו בָּאָרֶץ וִירְבֹּרְבָּה : ס
וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֶל־נֹחַ וְאֶל־בְּנֵיו אֲתָּה
לָאמֹר :⁹ וְאַנְגִּנִּי הַנֶּגֶן מִקְּרִים אֶת־כְּבָרִיטִי
אַתֶּם וְאַתֶּז־רְעָכֶם אֶחָרִיכֶם :¹⁰ וְאַתָּה בְּלַ- נֶפֶשׁ הַחַיָּה אֲשֶׁר אַתֶּם בַּעֲזָבָבָה
וּבְכָל־חַיָּת הָאָרֶץ אַתֶּם מִפְלִיצָאִי הַתְּבָה
לְכָל חַיָּת הָאָרֶץ :¹¹ וְהַקְמָתִי אֶת־כְּבָרִיטִי
אַתֶּם וּלְאַ-יְבָרָת בְּלַבְשָׂר עוֹד מִמְּנִי הַמְּבוֹל וּלְאִיהִיה עוֹד מִבּוֹל לְשַׁחַת
הָאָרֶץ :

וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים זֶאת אֶת־כְּבָרִיטִת אֲשֶׁר־
אָנָי נָתַן בּוּנֵל וּבִינִיכֶם וּבּוּנֵן בְּלַ-נֶּפֶשׁ חַיָּה
אֲשֶׁר אַתֶּם לְדוֹרֶת עוֹלָם :¹³ אֶת־קְשָׁתִי
נָתַתִּי בְּעֵנָן וְהִתְהַלֵּל לְאוֹת בְּרִית בֵּין וּבֵין
הָאָרֶץ :¹⁴ וְהַיָּה בְּעֵנָנִי עֵנָן עַל־הָאָרֶץ
וְנִרְאָתָה הַקְשָׁת בְּעֵנָן :¹⁵ וְחִכְרַתִי אֶת־
בְּרִיטִי אֲשֶׁר בֵּינוּ וּבִינִיכֶם וּבֵין בְּלַ-נֶּפֶשׁ
חַיָּה בְּכָל־בָּשָׂר וּלְאִיהִיה עוֹד הַמִּים
לִמְפָל לְשַׁחַת בְּלַבְשָׂר :¹⁶ וְהִתְהַלֵּל הַקְשָׁת
בְּעֵנָן וְרִאִיתָה לְזֹפֵר בְּרִית עוֹלָם בֵּין
אֱלֹהִים וּבֵין בְּלַ-נֶּפֶשׁ חַיָּה בְּכָל־בָּשָׂר אֲשֶׁר עַל־הָאָרֶץ :

וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֶל־נֹחַ זֶאת אֶת־כְּבָרִיטִת
אֲשֶׁר הַקְמָתִי בֵּינוּ וּבֵין בְּלַבְשָׂר אֲשֶׁר עַל־
הָאָרֶץ : פ

Only Noah and his sons are addressed (9:8). God guarantees that no flood will ever eradicate all life on earth.

13. “My bow.” A weapon is transformed into a symbol of peace.

15. God promises to never cause another global flood.

¹⁸Noah's sons who went out of the ark were Shem, Ham, and Japheth. And Ham—he was the father of Canaan.¹⁹These three were Noah's sons; from these the whole earth was populated.

²⁰Noah, a man of the soil, was the first to plant a vineyard.²¹He drank of the wine and grew drunk; and exposed himself under his tent.²²Ham—Canaan's father—saw his father's nakedness, and, outside, told his two brothers.²³Shem and Japheth took a cloak and put it on both their shoulders. They walked backward and covered their father's nakedness. Facing backward, they did not see their father's nakedness.²⁴Noah awakened from his wine and understood what his youngest son had done to him,²⁵so he said, “Damned be Canaan! / To his brothers he shall be / the basest of slaves!”²⁶And he said, “Praised be God, / God of Shem; / and Canaan shall be a slave to him. / ²⁷For Japheth, God will make ample room; / he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; / and Canaan shall be a slave to him.”

²⁸After the flood Noah lived 350 years;²⁹the years of Noah's life came to 950; then he died.

¹⁸וַיְהִי בָּנֵינָח הַיּוֹצָאִים מִן־הַתְּבָה שֶׁם וְחַם וַיַּפְתַּח וְחַם הוּא אֲבִי בָּנָעַן: ¹⁹שָׁלַשָּׁה אֶלְהָה בָּנֵינָח וּמִאלָה נִפְצָח כָּל־הָאָרֶץ: ²⁰וַיְחַל נָח אִישׁ הַאֲדֻמָּה וַיַּטְעַ כָּרְם: ²¹וַיִּשְׂתַּחַת מִן־הַיּוֹן וַיִּשְׁבַּר וַיִּתְגַּל בְּתוֹךְ אֲהָלָה אֲהָלָו: ²²וַיַּרְא חַם אֲבִי בָּנָעַן אֶת עָרוֹת אֲבִיו וַיַּגְדֵּל לְשָׁנִינָאָחוֹר בְּחוֹז: ²³וַיַּקְהֵל שֶׁם וַיַּפְתַּח אֶת־הַשְּׁמֶלֶת וַיִּשְׁמֹמֶל עַל־שְׁכָם שְׁנִינָהֶם וַיַּלְכֵל אֲחָרְנִית וַיַּכְשֵׁסֶוּ אֶת עָרוֹת אֲבִיהם וַיַּפְנִיחֶם אֲחָרְנִית וְעָרוֹת אֲבִיהם לְאָרוֹן: ²⁴וַיַּקְרַז נָח מִינָנוּ וַיַּדְעַ אֶת אָשָׁר עָשָׂה לוֹ בָּנוֹ הַקְטָן: ²⁵וַיֹּאמֶר אָרוֹן בָּנָעַן עָבֵד עֲבָדִים יְהִי לְאָחוֹר: ²⁶וַיֹּאמֶר בָּרוֹךְ יְהֹוה אֱלֹהֵי שֶׁם וַיְהִי בָּנָעַן עָבֵד לִמּוֹ: ²⁷וַיַּפְתַּח אָלְהִים לְפָתַח וַיַּשְׁבַּן בְּאַהֲלִי־שֶׁם וַיְהִי בָּנָעַן עָבֵד לִמּוֹ: ²⁸וַיַּחֲרִיןָח אֶתְנָר הַמִּפְוָל שָׁלַש מִאוֹת שָׁנָה וְחַמְשִׁים שָׁנָה: ²⁹וַיָּהִי בְּלִימִינָח תְּשָׁעַמּוֹת שָׁנָה וְחַמְשִׁים שָׁנָה וְיִמְתָּה: פ

THE AFTERMATH: NOAH AND HIS SONS (9:18–29)

The misbehavior of Noah's youngest son Ham leads to the cursing of Ham's youngest son Canaan. Unfortunately, this episode has been used by white colonizers to justify the exploitation of Africans, since Ham (in Genesis) is the ancestor of the people of Africa. However, it is not God but Noah—one might even add “under the influence”—who utters the curse; and God does not legitimate it.

9:22–25. Realizing that his son Ham saw him naked, Noah utters a curse. The story aims at asserting the dignity of the father and rewards those who cover the father's nakedness. Many details remain unexplained, leaving irresolvable problems that later interpreters attempt to excuse. Why is Canaan punished for his father's indiscretion? The story does not answer such questions. Rather, it functions as an etiology for Canaanite-Israelite tensions that will appear in later biblical accounts. Contemporary scholars hold that, historically speaking, Israel emerged mainly out of, and sought to distinguish itself from, a Canaanite population. The present story may seek to justify such a separation (compare Deuteronomy 7).

nakedness. Heb. ervah, which differs from the word for naked in Genesis 2:25 (arumim). Ervah always has sexual connotations; uncovering relatives' ervah incurs severe punishment under the Sinai covenant (see, for example Leviticus 18:6–19 and 20:10–21).

9:25–27. The curse of Canaan and his enslavement by the other two families aims to discredit Canaan, a people who posed a challenge to Israel's identity.

10 This is the line of Noah's sons Shem, Ham, and Japheth: sons were born to them after the flood.

²Japheth's sons were Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech, and Tiras. ³Gomer's sons were Ashkenaz, Riphath, and Togarmah. ⁴Javan's sons were Elishah, Tarshish, Kittim, and Dodanim. ⁵From them the nations of the coastal islands spread out, each with its own tongue, in their clan and their peoples.

⁶Ham's sons were Cush, Mitzraim, Put, and Canaan. ⁷Cush's sons were Seba, Havilah, Sabtah, Raamah, and Sabteca; and Raamah's sons were Sheba and Dedan. ⁸And Cush begot Nimrod; he was first among the earth's heroes. ⁹He was a mighty hunter before יהוה, for which reason it is said, "Like Nimrod, a mighty hunter before יהוה." ¹⁰His choice domains were Babylon, Erech, and Akkad, all of them in the land of Shinar. ¹¹From that land came Ashur, who founded Nineveh, Rechovot-ir, and Calah, ¹²and Resen, between Nineveh and Calah—the largest city. ¹³Mitzraim begot Ludim, Anamim, Lehabim, Naphtuhim, ¹⁴Pathrusim, and Casluhim, from whom descended

וְאֶלָּה תֹּולֶת בְּנֵי-נֹח שֵׁם חַם וַיַּפְתַּח
וַיּוֹלְדוּ לְהֶם בָּנִים אַחֲרֵי הַמּוֹבֵל:
2 בְּנֵי יְפַתְּח גָּמָר וּמָגָוג וּמָדָע וַיַּעֲנוּ וַתָּבֵל וּמִשְׁרָגָתָךְ
וְתִירָס: 3 וּבְנֵי גָּמָר אֲשֶׁבְנָיו וַיַּרְפַּת וַתְּגַרְמָה:
4 וּבְנֵי נָנוֹן אֲלִישָׁה וַתְּרַשֵּׁשׁ כְּתִים וּדְדִינִים:
5 מְאַלְהָה נְפָרְדוּ אֵין הָגּוֹת בָּאָרֶץ תְּמַמָּה אִישׁ
לְלִשְׁנוֹ לְמִשְׁפְּחוֹתָם בְּגֻויָּהֶם:
6 וּבְנֵי חַם כּוֹשׁ וּמִצְרָיִם וְפָטוֹת וּכְנָעָן: 7 וּבְנֵי
כּוֹשׁ סְבָא וּחוּלָה וְסְבָתָה וְרַעֲמָה וְסְבָתָכָא
וּבְנֵי רַעֲמָה שְׁבָא וּדְדָן: 8 וּכּוֹשׁ יְלָד אַתָּה
נִמְרָד הוּא הַחָל לְהִיּוֹת גָּבָר בָּאָרֶץ:
9 הַוְאִידְיָה גָּבְרָצִיד לְפָנֵי יְהֹוָה עַל-פְּנֵי
יָאָמֵר בְּנִמְרָד גָּבוֹר צִיד לְפָנֵי יְהֹוָה:
10 וְתָהִי רָאשִׁית מִמְלְכָתָךְ בְּבָל וְאֶרְךָ
וְאֶבֶד וּבְלָנָה בָּאָרֶץ שְׁנָעֵר: 11 מִן-יְהֹוָה
הַהָּוּא יָצָא אֲשֹׁור וַיַּבְנֵן אֶת-נְינֵה וְאֶת-
רְחַבְתָּ עִיר וְאֶת-קְלָחָ: 12 וְאֶת-רְסָן בֵּין
נְינֵה וּבֵין כְּלָחָ הָוּא הַעִיר הַגְּדוֹלָה:
13 וּמִצְרָיִם יְלָד אֲתִילָדִים וְאֶת-עֲנָמִים
וְאֶת-לְחָבִים וְאֶת-נְפָתִחים: 14 וְאֶת-פְּתַרְסִים וְאֶת-בְּסָלָחִים אֲשֶׁר יָצָאוּ מִשְׁמָךְ

The Table of Nations (10:1–32)

Reflecting God's command to multiply, the list charts patterns of presumed kinship, as well as a linguistic and geographical "map" of the ancient world as understood in biblical times. Some of the information corresponds to known data; some conflicts with available information; and some cannot be identified. Roughly speaking, the divisions correspond to those in Asia (Shem), Europe (Japheth), and Africa (Ham), but the pattern is inconsistent. Seventy names represent the nations of the world.

i. This is the line. Biblical genealogies presume that the head of the household stands for the household as a whole, including its women (and subordinate men)—an assumption shared throughout the Bible and the ancient Near East. Thus biblical genealogies rarely mention mothers, wives, or daughters. (Exodus 6:14–25 is one exception.) In fact, however, the women cemented relationships among patrilineally defined groups via marriage.

Women must have been integral to Israelite kinship, for biblical stories take for granted that men who are related to each other only through a woman treat each other as kin (see Genesis 19:12, 14; Judges 9:1–3; II Samuel 13:37 in light of 3:3; 21:4–8). Nor is patrilineage always sufficient to identify oneself: Rebekah and Jacob each mention female ancestry (Genesis 24:24; 29:12). As for biblical law, see at Leviticus 18:10. While female-mediated kinship ties are not recounted in standard genealogical lists, they nevertheless formed part of the social structure (David Stein, personal communication).

[the] Philistines and Cretans.¹⁵ Canaan begot Sidon his first-born and Heth,¹⁶ and the Jebusites, the Amorites, and the Gergashites,¹⁷ and the Hivites, the Arkites, and the Sinites,¹⁸ and the Arvadites, the Zemarites, and the Hamathites; afterwards the Canaanite clans spread out.¹⁹ The Canaanite border reached from Sidon, as far as Gerar, up to Gaza, as far as Sodom, and Gomorrah, and Admah, and Zeboim up to Lasha.²⁰ These are Ham's sons by their clans, their tongues, in their lands and their nations.

²¹ And Shem too had progeny; [he was] the ancestor of all the sons of Eber, brother of Japheth the Great.²² Shem's sons were Elam, Ashur, Arpachshad, Lud, and Aram.²³ Aram's sons were Utz, Hul, Gether, and Mash.²⁴ Arpachshad begot Shelah, and Shelah begot Eber.²⁵ And to Eber were born two sons; the first was named Peleg [“Division”], for in his time the earth was divided; his brother's name was Joktan,²⁶ And Joktan begot Almodad, Sheleph, Hazarmavet, Jerah,²⁷ Hadoram, Uzal, Diklah,²⁸ Obal, Abimael, Sheba,²⁹ Ophir, Havilah, and Jobab—all these were Joktan's sons.³⁰ Their dwelling was near Masha, as you come to S'phara, the eastern mountain.³¹ These are Shem's sons by their clans, their tongues, in their lands and their nations.

³² These are the clans of Noah's sons by their generations, by their peoples; from these the peoples of the earth spread out after the flood.

15–20. Canaan. The spread of Canaan is especially relevant to Israel's history, and the cities listed play a role in subsequent narratives.

19. Sodom, and Gomorrah. Genesis 19 reports that these cities were destroyed because of their inhabitants' wickedness.

פלשׁתים וְאֶת-כִּפְתָּרִים : ס וּכְנֻעַן¹⁵ יָלֵד אֶת-צִידָן בְּכָרוֹ וְאֶת-חַת: ¹⁶ וְאֶת-הַיּוֹסֵל וְאֶת-הַאֲמָרִי וְאֶת-הַגְּרָגְשִׁי:
17 וְאֶת-הַחֲנִי וְאֶת-הַעֲרָקִי וְאֶת-הַסְּרִינִי:
18 וְאֶת-הַאֲרֹוי וְאֶת-הַצְּמָרִי וְאֶת-הַחֲמֹתִי
וְאֶחָר נִפְצָעוּ מִשְׁפָחוֹת הַכְּנָעָנִי: ¹⁹ וַיְהִי
גָּבוֹל הַכְּנָעָנִי מִצְידָן בְּאַכְה גַּרְרָה עַד-
עַזָּה בְּאַכְה סְדָמָה וְעַמְרָה וְאַרְמָה וְצַבְעָם
עַד-לְשָׁעַ: ²⁰ אֶלְלה בְּנִי-חָם לְמִשְׁפָחוֹת
לְלִשְׁנוֹת בְּאֶרְצָתָם בְּגּוֹיָם: ס
וְלִשְׁם יָלֵד גַּמְיָהוּ אָבִי בָּלְבָנִי-עַבְרָ
אָחִי יִפְתָּח הַגָּדוֹל: ²² בְּנֵי שֵׁם עַילְם וְאַשּׂוֹר
וְאַרְפְּכָשֵׁד וְלֹזֹד וְאַרְם: ²³ וּבְנֵי אַרְם עַזְזָן
וְחַול וְגַתְרָ וְקָמֵשׁ: ²⁴ וְאַרְפְּכָשֵׁד יָלֵד אֶת-שָׁלָח וְשָׁלָח יָלֵד אֶת-עַבְרָ: ²⁵ וְלַעֲבָר יָלֵד
שְׁנֵי בָנִים שֵׁם הַאֲחָד פָּלָג בַּי בִּימָיו נִפְלָגָה
הָאָרֶץ וְשֵׁם אָחִיו יִקְטָן: ²⁶ וַיִּקְטָן יָלֵד אֶת-אַלְמוֹדָד וְאֶת-שָׁלָף וְאֶת-חַצְרָמוֹת וְאֶת-יִנְחָ: ²⁷ וְאֶת-הַדּוֹרָם וְאֶת-אוֹזָל וְאֶת-דִּקְלָה: ²⁸ וְאֶת-עֹזָל וְאֶת-אַבְיָמָאל וְאֶת-שָׁבָא: ²⁹ וְאֶת-אָופָר וְאֶת-חַווִּלה וְאֶת-יּוֹבֵב בָּלְאַלְה בְּנֵי יִקְטָן: ³⁰ וַיְהִי מָוֹשָׁבָם
מִמְשָׁא בְּאַכְה סְפָרָה הַר תְּקָרָם: ³¹ אֶלְלה
בְּנִי-חָם לְמִשְׁפָחוֹת לְלִשְׁנוֹת בְּאֶרְצָתָם
לְגּוֹיָם: ³² אֶלְלה מִשְׁפָחוֹת בְּנִי-נְחָ לְתוֹלְדָתָם
בְּגּוֹיָם וּמְאַלְהָ נְפָרְדוּ הַגּוֹיִם בְּאָרֶץ אַחֲרָ
הַמּוֹבֵל: פ

21–31. Shem too had progeny. Abraham—and thus Israel—belong to his line. The ancient Torah translation into Greek recorded his name as Sem (because Greek does not have a sh sound), leading to the English word “Semites.” Shem's genealogy will be recounted more fully starting at 11:10.

11 All the earth had the same language and the same words. ²As they wandered from the east, they came upon a valley in the land of Shinar and settled there. ³Then people said to one another: “Come, let us make bricks and fire them hard.” So they had bricks to build with, and tar served them as mortar. ⁴Then they said, “Come, let us build a city with a tower that reaches the sky, so that we can make a name for ourselves and not be scattered over all the earth!” ⁵Then came down to look at the city and tower the people had built, ⁶and said, “Look—these are all one people with one language, and this is just the beginning of their

אֶחָדִים: ² וַיֹּהֵי בְּנֵסֶעֶם מִקְדָּם וַיַּמְצָאוּ בְּקֻעה בָּאָרֶץ שְׁנִיאָר וַיִּשְׁבּוּ שָׁם: ³ וַיֹּאמְרוּ אִישׁ אֲלֹרֶעָהוּ הַבָּה נַלְבָנָה לְבָנִים וַיַּשְׁרַפְתָּה לְשָׁרֶפֶת וַתַּהַלֵּי לְהַם הַלְבָנָה לְאָבוֹן וְהַחֲמָר הַיָּה לְהַם לְחַמָּר: ⁴ וַיֹּאמְרוּ הַבָּה נַבְנָה־לָנוּ עִיר וּמְגֹדֵל וּרְאֶשׁוּ בְּשָׂמִים וּנְעִשָּׂה־לָנוּ שָׁם פָּנִינְפּוֹז עַל־פָּנִים כָּל־הָאָרֶץ: ⁵ וַיֹּירַד יְהוָה לְרָאַת אֶת־הָעִיר וְאֶת־הַמְּגֹדֵל אֲשֶׁר בָּנָה בְּנֵי הָאָדָם: ⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה תֹּן עַם אֶחָד וְשָׁפֶה אֶחָת לְכָלָם וְזֹה הַחֲלָם לְעֹשֹׂת וְעַתָּה לְאִיבָּצָר

Transgression and Divine Response

THE TOWER OF BABEL (11:1–9)

Oddly, this story of the nations' dispersion follows the uncontroversial spread of nations described in the previous passage. This interlude, which interrupts the genealogy of Shem, accomplishes a number of things in very few lines: it reiterates the theme of humankind trying to go too far (again), accounts for linguistic diversity, and establishes the ignominious beginning of Babylon, Israel's eventual oppressor.

Less obviously, the story also expresses a significant theological message about God's new relationship with humankind. The story's taut, concise structure depicts divine response as mirroring human action very precisely. In sharp contrast to the indiscriminating response with the Flood, God's measured retribution demonstrates a system in which the "punishment" fits the "crime" (as noted in 9:6).

The word play on "name" (shem), "sky" (shamaim), "there" (sham) cannot be reproduced in English but pinpoints the issues: humankind attempts to reach the sky (shamaim) thereby to make a name (shem) for itself, instead of spreading out as God has demanded. A contrast with the line of Shem (which also means "name") is also at work (v. 10).

Contrary to some expectations, God prefers diversity to unity and uniformity (v. 6) and, in this story, actively promotes it.

1. "language . . . words." "Language" in Hebrew is a feminine noun also meaning "lip." Contemporary discussions about the tension between the written and the oral traditions use such distinctions to differentiate between a female culture ("language" as oral) and a male one ("word" as written).

3. "let us." This language will be repeated when God responds, measure for measure.

4. "a tower that reaches the sky." The goal, to reach the sky (shamaim) and make a name (shem) for the builders, doubly offends divine prerogative: it is an incursion into God's physical domain and also usurps God's role in bestowing a name, which implies honor and legacy. The tower reflects and ridicules the Babylonian ziggurat, a massive "holy mountain" constructed of bricks that was the hallmark of Mesopotamian cities: it marked the meeting point of heaven and earth.

doings; now no scheme of theirs will be beyond their reach!⁷ Let us go down there and confuse their speech, so that no one understands what the other is saying.”⁸ So it came about that scattered them over all the earth, and they stopped building the city.⁹ That is why it was called Babel, because there יְהוָה confused the speech of all the earth; and from there יְהוָה scattered them over the face of the earth.

¹⁰This is the line of Shem: Shem was 100 years when he begot Arpachshad, 2 years after the flood.¹¹ After begetting Arpachshad, Shem lived 500 years; and he begot sons and daughters.¹² Arpachshad had lived 35 years when he begot Shelah.¹³ After begetting Shelah, Arpachshad lived 403 years; and he begot sons and daughters.¹⁴ Shelah had lived 30 years when he begot Eber.¹⁵ After begetting Eber, Shelah lived 403 years; and he begot sons and daughters.¹⁶ Eber had lived 34 years when he begot Peleg.¹⁷ After begetting Peleg, Eber lived 430 years;

מִתְּהַם כֹּל אֲשֶׁר יִזְמֹן לְעֹשֹׂות: ⁷ הַבָּה נִרְדָּה וְנִבְלָה שֶׁם שְׁפַתְּמָשׁ אֲשֶׁר לֹא יִשְׁמְעוּ אַיִשׁ שְׁפַת רֵעהוּ: ⁸ וַיַּפְצֵץ יְהוָה אֶתְכֶם מִשְׁמָעָל-פָּנֵי כָּל-הָאָרֶץ וַיִּחְדְּלֻוּ לְבִנְתָּה הָעִיר: ⁹ עַל-כִּן קָרָא שְׁמָה בְּכָל בִּישָׁם בְּכָל יְהוָה שְׁפַת כָּל-הָאָרֶץ וּמִשְׁמָה הַפִּיצָּם יְהוָה עַל-פָּנֵי כָּל-הָאָרֶץ: ¹⁰ פְּנֵי כָּל-הָאָרֶץ: ¹¹ אֶלָּה תָּולְדָת שֶׁם שֶׁם בְּנָמָאת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אֶת-אַרְפְּכָשֶׁד שְׁנָתִים אַחֲרֵי הַמִּבּוֹל: ¹² וַיַּחֲיִישָׁם אַחֲרֵי הַוְּלִידָה אֶת-אַרְפְּכָשֶׁד חַמֵּשׁ מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד בְּנִים וּבָנֹות: ס וַיַּרְפְּכָשֶׁד תְּנִי חַמֵּשׁ וְשָׁלְשִׁים שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אֶת-שְׁלָחֵח: ¹³ וַיַּחֲיִ אֶת-שְׁלָחֵח אַחֲרֵי הַוְּלִידָה אֶת-שְׁלָחֵח שָׁלֹשׁ שָׁנִים וְאֶרְבַּע מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד בְּנִים וּבָנֹות: ס ¹⁴ וְשָׁלָחֵח וַיַּחֲיִ שָׁלְשִׁים שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אֶת-עֶבֶר: ¹⁵ וַיַּחֲיִ שָׁלָחֵח אַחֲרֵי הַוְּלִידָה אֶת-עֶבֶר שָׁלֹשׁ שָׁנִים וְאֶרְבַּע מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד בְּנִים וּבָנֹות: ס ¹⁶ וַיַּחֲיִ עֶבֶר אֶרְבַּע וְשָׁלְשִׁים שָׁנָה וַיּוֹלֶד אֶת-פְּלָג: ¹⁷ וַיַּחֲיִ עֶבֶר אַחֲרֵי הַוְּלִידָה אֶת-

6. “no scheme . . . beyond their reach.” God identifies human ambition and complete unity as a dangerous mix. Diversity seems to be by divine design.

7. “Let us.” In language that closely parallels the human words in v. 3, God dismantles the human project point by point (brick by brick?). God uses the people’s words but with different meanings—most of which cannot be adequately reproduced in English, such as the use of l-b-n, which permutes as libnot (build), l’benah (brick), and n’belah (confuse). (On “us” in God’s speech, see at 1:26.) God’s point-by-point response to human action expresses a new pattern for God’s interaction with humankind, replacing the wholesale destruction by the Flood and confirming God’s covenantal promise in Genesis 9.

9. Ridicule aimed at Babylon is unmistakable, accented in the word play of “confuse” (balal) and Babel (bavel).

The Ten Generations from Noah to Abram (11:10–26)

Ten generations spanned the time from Adam and Eve to Noah (Genesis 5), and now another ten take us from Noah to Abram/Abraham. Coming immediately after another disappointing human act, this genealogy leads to the next attempt by God to “begin anew.”

Until we come to Abraham, this genealogy mentions no wives, whereas it mentions the birth of (unnamed) daughters along with sons (until v. 26).

and he begot sons and daughters. ¹⁸Peleg had lived 30 years when he begot Reu. ¹⁹After begetting Reu, Peleg lived 209 years; and he begot sons and daughters. ²⁰Reu had lived 32 years when he begot Serug. ²¹After begetting Serug, Reu lived 207 years; and he begot sons and daughters. ²²Serug had lived 30 years when he begot Nahor. ²³After begetting Nahor, Serug lived 200 years; and he begot sons and daughters. ²⁴Nahor had lived 29 years when he begot Terah. ²⁵After begetting Terah, Nahor lived 119; and he begot sons and daughters. ²⁶Terah had lived 70 years when he begot Abram, Nahor, and Haran.

²⁷This is the chronicle of Terah: Terah begot Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begot Lot. ²⁸Then Haran died in the presence of Terah his father, in the land of his birth, in Ur of the Chaldeans. ²⁹Then Abram and Nahor took wives: Abram's wife was named Sarai, and Nahor's wife

פֶלְג שָׁלְשִׁים שָׁנָה וַיָּרֶב מֵאֹת שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד
בָּנִים וּבָנוֹת: ס 18 וַיַּחַי-פֶלְג שָׁלְשִׁים
שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד אֶת-רְעוֹ: 19 וַיַּחַי-פֶלְג אֶחָרִי
הַוְלִידוֹ אֶת-רְעוֹ תְשׁׁע שָׁנִים וּמֵאֲתִים שָׁנָה
וַיָּלֹד בָּנִים וּבָנוֹת: ס 20 וַיַּחַי רְעוֹ שְׁתִים
וּשְׁלְשִׁים שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד אֶת-שְׁרוֹג: 21 וַיַּחַי רְעוֹ
אֶחָרִי הַוְלִידוֹ אֶת-שְׁרוֹג שְׁבַע שָׁנִים
וּמֵאֲתִים שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד בָּנִים וּבָנוֹת: ס
22 וַיַּחַי שְׁרוֹג שָׁלְשִׁים שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד אֶת-נְחֹור: 23 וַיַּחַי שְׁרוֹג אֶחָרִי הַוְלִידוֹ אֶת-נְחֹור
מֵאֲתִים שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד בָּנִים וּבָנוֹת: ס
24 וַיַּחַי נְחֹור תְשׁׁע וּשְׁשָׁרִים שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד
אֶת-תְּרָח: 25 וַיַּחַי נְחֹור אֶחָרִי הַוְלִידוֹ אֶת-
תְּרָח תְשׁׁע-עָשָׂרָה שָׁנָה וּמֵאָת שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד
בָּנִים וּבָנוֹת: ס 26 וַיַּחַי-תְּרָח שְׁבָיעִם
שָׁנָה וַיָּלֹד אֶת-אַבְרָם אֶת-נְחֹור וְאֶת-הָרָן:
27 וְאֶלְה תְּולִdot תְּרָח הַוְלִיד אֶת-
אַבְרָם אֶת-נְחֹור וְאֶת-הָרָן וְהָרָן הַוְלִיד
אֶת-לִלְיט: 28 וַיָּמָת הָרָן עַל-פְנֵי תְּרָח אָבִיו
בָּאָרֶץ מוֹלַדְתָו בָּאוֹר בְשָׁדִים: 29 וַיָּקַח
אַבְרָם וְנְחֹור לְהַם נְשִׁים שֶׁם אֶשְׁת-אַבְרָם

In both respects it resembles the pre-Flood genealogy of Genesis 5. Such mention of daughters is atypical of other ancient Semitic genealogies. On women and biblical genealogies, see at 5:4 and 10:1.

A New Beginning

ABRAM/ABRAHAM AND SARAI/SARAH (11:27–32)

later in Genesis, Sarai (later called Sarah) receives more attention in this introduction. Her condition of barrenness creates the challenge that will propel the rest of this couple's story.

28. Ur. Either the Mesopotamian city (in today's southeastern Iraq) with a sophisticated culture dating as early as 2500 B.C.E., or another Ur mentioned in ancient tablets from Ebla in Syria, as located near the Aramean city of Haran (mentioned in v. 31).

29. Abram's wife was named Sarai. Her name echoes the word for prince (sar) and could mean "princess." Savina Teubal (Sarah the Priestess: the First Matriarch of Genesis, 1984), who reads the text as reflecting history, speculates that Sarah was indeed

The family of Abram and Sarai represents a new beginning, and women emerge for the first time in this parashah as named individuals. Although Abram will become the chief protagonist, was named Milcah daughter of Haran father of Milcah and of Yiscah.³⁰ And Sarai was barren; she had no offspring.

³¹Then Terah took his son Abram and his grandson Lot son of Haran and his daughter-in-law Sarai, and they all left Ur of the Chaldeans to go to the land of Canaan; but they got as far as Haran and settled there.³²The years of Terah's life came to 205; then Terah died in Haran.

שָׂרִי וְשֵׁם אֲשֶׁת-נְחֹזֶר מִלְּפָה בַת-הָרָן אָבִי
מִלְּפָה וְאָבִי יִסְכָּה: ³⁰ וַתִּהְיֶה שָׂרִי עֲקָרָה
אֲין לָה וָלֶד: ³¹ וַיֵּלֶךְ תְּרָה אֶת-אֲבָרָם בֶּןּוּ וְאֶת-לֹוט בֶּןּוּ
הָרָן בֶּןְבָּנוּ וְאֶת שָׂרִי בֶּןְהוּ אֲשֶׁת אֲבָרָם
בֶּןּוּ וַיֵּצְאָו אֶתְכָם מִאָוֶר בְּשָׁדִים לְלִכְתָּבָת
אָרֶץ כְּנָעָן וַיָּבֹאוּ עַד-חֶרְן וַיֵּשְׁבוּ שֵׁם:
³² וַיְהִי יִמְיַרְחָה חִמְשׁ שָׁנִים וַיָּמָתֵם שָׁנָה וַיָּמָת תְּרָה בְּחֶרְן: ב

a princess, as well as a priestess, who continued to uphold a tradition that was both matriarchal (women as leaders) and matrilineal (genealogy traced through the mother).

Abraham claims in 20:12 that Sarah is his sister through a different wife of his father. If she were his half sister, however, one would expect that information to appear here, especially since Milcah's genealogical connection to her husband is recorded (see below).

Nabor's wife was named Milcah. Her name, like Sarai's, evokes royalty (malcah means “queen”).

daughter of Haran father of Milcah. The double identity markers for Milcah draw attention to her unique position in the ancestral lineage. It also discloses that she married her uncle. Rebekah, the second matriarch, will identify herself as Milcah's granddaughter (24:24), in the Bible's sole unambiguous mention of someone's grandmother. This reference highlights her importance.

Yiscah. Presumably a sister, not brother, of Milcah. However, we learn nothing further about her.

30. Sarai was barren. Fertility stands out as a paramount concern in biblical tales, starting with Genesis 1:28. Sarai's lack of children will become the pivot around which the stories from Genesis 12–21 revolve. | In Genesis 16:2, Sarai will attribute her condition to God. However, the narrator nowhere suggests that God afflicted her with such a condition or that it is a stigma. Fertility of the barren women becomes a symbol of God's special blessing, without implying necessarily that lack of fertility is a punishment. | Stories about barren women subordinate the role of human beings in fertility and instead highlight God's role. See further Another View, p. 53. | This first mention of Sarah/Sarai, portraying her as a barren woman, contrasts with the Bible's final mention of Sarah, invoking her as a message of hope for a “barren” people in exile: “Look back to Abraham your father / And to Sarah who brought you forth” (Isaiah 51:2).

31. his daughter-in-law Sarai. The Hebrew actually adds also “wife of Abram.” This double mention of Sarai's identity emphasizes her role in the family and prepares the reader for her continued prominence in the stories that follow. The report about the family's journey from Ur sets the stage for God's attempt to “begin anew,” this time with the family of Abram and Sarai.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

Another View

A GENEALOGY is a typical narrative strategy to account for the long passage of time and also to express the relationships among groups. In this parashah, the concluding genealogy leads to Abram and Sarai (11:27–32). It is shocking that this genealogy ends with the information that Sarai is barren, a statement that counters the very notion of genealogy, namely, family connectedness across generations.

The theme of barrenness is emphasized in the story of the ancestors, beginning with Sarah, the first matriarch; and it recurs in the next two generations, with Rebekah (25:21) and then Rachel (29:31). The idea of a barren woman giving birth highlights the importance of the offspring, calling attention to God's role in the child's birth—and thus to the significance of the child.

At the same time, the presence of the barrenness theme in matriarchal narratives signifies the values and concerns of an agrarian people. Most Israelites were self-sufficient farmers, requiring a team of people to work the land; having offspring therefore meant survival. It also meant the opportunity to raise an heir who would intimately know and maintain that parcel of land. Family lands were held as patrimonies and passed down across generations. Not surprisingly, legal precepts in the Torah aimed at helping families retain their property (see Leviticus 25:23–28).

In light of the great importance of land as inheritance, barrenness was a grave problem. Archeology has produced artifacts, such as small female figurines, that arguably were used, along with prayers, in household rituals women surely performed to deal with infertility. Also, potions and remedies to overcome barrenness are known from the texts of other ancient Near Eastern peoples and later Jewish folklore; and surely they were used by Israelite women (see the mandrake of Genesis 30:14–16).

In addition, like other ancient peoples, the Israelites solved this problem by allowing for adoption or polygyny (multiple wives). A householder could take a second wife or secondary wife (a servant or a concubine), and the resulting offspring would allow the lineage—reckoned along the male line—to continue and the land to remain in the family. For elite families, especially royalty, having multiple wives was a sign of status; in ordinary families it was a solution to the dire predicament of the barrenness of a man's initial wife.

The idea of a barren woman giving birth highlights the importance of the offspring.

—Carol Meyers

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

“your wife” (6:18). Noah’s wife is mentioned five times in the Flood story (Genesis 6:18; 7:7, 13; 8:16, 18) but she is never named. While she is not the only woman (or man) to go unnamed in Hebrew Scriptures, the Rabbis were curious about her identity. Midrash B’reishit Rabbah 23.3 preserves a dispute about her name, in which one rabbi argues that Noah’s wife was Naamah, the “sister of Tubal-Cain,” a descendant of Adam and Eve’s son Cain, who is listed in the genealogies in Genesis 4:22. He justifies his view with the explanation that the name derives from the word “pleasant” and that Noah’s wife’s actions were pleasing (n’imim) to God. However, the majority opinion in B’reishit Rabbah 23.3 rejects the identification of Noah’s wife with the Naamah of 4:22 since “her name indicates that she sang (man’emet) to the timbrel in honor of idolatry.”

Noah, with his sons, his wife, and his sons’ wives came into the ark (7:7). Noah’s family and the animals were chosen for preservation on the ark in male-female pairs, in order to ensure the continuation of their species after the Flood. However, a midrash in the Talmud (BT Sanhedrin 108b) teaches that this process of “continuation” did not begin on the ark. Careful attention to the word order shows that the genders were separated at the boarding of the ark. The midrash contrasts this with the wording of Genesis 8:16 where the instructions for disembarking are given to marriage groupings. That is, Noah was instructed that he should leave first with his wife, and then his sons with their wives. Thus, the authors of this midrash demonstrate that the sexes were segregated on board, at least enough that they did not have sexual contact on the ark. However, when they disembarked, each male, together with the appropriate female, they were to resume normal sexual relations.

Abram’s wife was named Sarai... Haran father of Milcah and of Yiscah (11:29). The text introduces us to Abraham, who at this point is still referred to by his pre-covenantal name, Abram. Similarly, his wife Sarah is also referred to here by her pre-covenantal name, Sarai. However, the Rabbis noticed that the first time Sarai is mentioned, her family is not identified.

Yet in the same verse, Milcah—the wife of Abram’s brother Nahor—is identified as the daughter of Haran; in addition and for no obvious reason, her sister Yiscah is then mentioned. The following verse (Genesis 11:30) resumes Sarai’s story once again. It is probably the juxtaposition of all of these characters, as well as the rabbinic desire to link Sarai to the larger family, that explains a midrashic tradition that Sarai and Yiscah were in fact the same person. (The idea of marrying a niece would not have seemed unusual in the biblical or rabbinic eras. It is not one of the incestuous relationships forbidden in Leviticus 18.) The Talmud explains this conflation of Sarah with Yiscah (BT M’gillah 14a) linguistically. The Hebrew letters that spell the name

*Sarai and Yiscah were in fact
the same person.*

Yiscah are similar to the Hebrew verb “to look” (s-c-h). Thus, based on midrashic traditions of Sarah’s great beauty, the Rabbis explain that Sarai was called Yiscah because everyone wanted to look at her. A second explanation offered is that Sarai was called Yiscah because she was a prophet and could look into the future.

And Sarah was barren; she had no offspring (11:30). The Talmud (BT Y’vamot 64b) understands this double description of Sarah’s infertility to have two meanings. The first phrase, was barren, means Sarah did not have children; and the second phrase, she had no offspring, indicates she was missing the vital internal organs necessary for conception and pregnancy. Thus, the later birth of Isaac was doubly miraculous.

—Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein

Contemporary Reflection

GENESIS BEGINS with God's creation of the world by word alone: God said, "Let there be light!" (1:3). At the end of Genesis 1, God surveyed all that [God] had made, and look—it was very good! With language God created the world, separated the waters above from the waters below, named, judged, and expressed great satisfaction with the results. But by the end of parashat B'reishit, we read that הַמְּהֻנָּה saw how great was the wickedness of human beings. . . . So יְהוָה thought: "I will wipe the humans whom I created from off the face of the earth" (6:5–7).

In parashat Noach, what sin had the people committed to warrant the Flood? The fact that so many different answers have been offered suggests that there is no clear answer. Some interpreters say that the wrongdoing was miscegenation: the interbreeding between the sons of God and the daughters of mankind (6:1–4). Others in traditional sources postulate that it was the sin of refusing to have children—indeed, even Noah waited until he was 500 years old to have his first child.

For all the various theories about the precise nature of the sin, it is clear that the Flood's essential purpose was to cleanse Creation of the flaw that led to its corruption. And yet, from the time of the Ark's landing on dry land, God demonstrates an awareness that some essential flaw persists. God says: Never again will I bring doom upon the world on account of what people do, though the human mind inclines to evil from youth onward (8:21). Why does the human mind incline to evil? What is the flaw in the human mind? While the questions are not explicitly answered, we can nevertheless find answers in our tradition.

Many commentators have criticized Noah for not challenging God about the planned destruction, as Abraham later does when God reveals the plan to destroy Sodom and Gomorrah (18:17–33). Readers over the ages have been puzzled by Noah's silence. But his silence is precisely the point. Nearly the entire portion of Noach is filled with God's speech and Noah's actions—but not words. From his building the ark through the entire Flood, Noah utters not a single word. When Noah finally speaks after being awakened from his wine (9:24), his words disclose the problem: he understood what his youngest son had done to him, so he said "Damned be Canaan! To his brothers he shall be the basest of slaves!" (9:24–25).

So Noah's first words neither praise God, nor express gratitude, nor ask for help, nor proclaim justice. Instead, he uses language to curse and to set up the differentiated love that will plague all the offspring of Genesis—from Ishmael and Isaac to Esau and Jacob, and to Joseph and his brothers. By “differentiated love” I mean love that is given to one person and withheld from another.

Noah's first words show what might be an essential flaw in creation.

Noah's first words show what might be an essential flaw in creation, leading to destruction in this parashah. As we read in Proverbs 18:21, death and life are in the power of the tongue. We have already seen the creative power of language in Genesis 1. Now it becomes clear that one sin causing the Flood was the abuse of language. In a way, we have always known that, as the Confession for the Day of Atonement lists many forms of language: idle talk, offensive speech, foolish talk, slander, passing judgment, plotting, tale-bearing, and swearing falsely. Each of these offenses involves some abuse of language.

In parashat Noach, the inherent flaw is made clear. Noah's words form a curse; moreover, even when he comes to bless (9:27), he does so comparatively, blessing one son at the expense of another son's son, relegateing his grandson Canaan to the role of slave. But love should not be comparative, quantifiable, or conditional.

God acknowledges the power of human language in the very next story, the episode of the Tower of Babel (Genesis 11). This time God, in order to restrain the people who are reaching out to heaven, confuses the language. God is thus undermining their capacity to use language in a destructive fashion (11:1–6).

From Noah's words and the people's words when they attempt to build their tower, we learn that the language that survives the devastation of the Flood is that of differentiated love, competition, hatred, cursing, and revenge across generations. God's action at Babel is an attempt to heal the flaw of the sin at Babel by multiplying languages: perhaps somewhere among the new tongues would emerge a vision of reality that transcends the destructive, condemning words carried forward in the ark.

Our own experience verifies the lesson of the sin of the Flood. We know how language can kill. We have seen the medical charts on which a doctor has scribbled "untreatable," thereby sealing a patient's fate. We have labeled a plant in our garden a "weed," thus sealing its fate.

Silence, then, might be a virtue. During the long days of the Flood and its aftermath, Noah did well, being silent. His silence reminds us of the better part of Job's comforters who initially sat with him on the ground seven days and seven nights. None spoke a word to him for they saw how very great was his suffering (Job 2:13). Once they began to speak, though, their words brought only discomfort, and finally God rebuked them: for you have not spoken the truth about Me as did My servant Job (42:7).

What lessons may we draw from this juxtaposition of silence and language? Is human speech invariably destructive? Where can we find the language that blesses, heals, and even creates? Again, the model is within this parashah, when God responds.

God restricts divine power, saying: Never again will I bring doom upon the world on account of what people do (Genesis 8:21); God restores blessings: God then blessed Noah and his sons saying to them, "Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth" (9:1); and God enters into covenant with all living creatures: I am going to establish My covenant with you and your descendants after you, and with every living being in your care (9:9–10).

God's words and actions in the aftermath of destruction show us how we can use language to repair relationships, instruct others, forgive, and bless.

—Carol Ochs

NOACH

Voices

Parashat Noach

Elaine Rose Glickman

Genesis 6:18; 7:1–9

I.

My mother and sisters—
there would be no room for them.
God had been very specific,
my husband said, on this point as on all the others—how long, how tall, how deep how many windows (one) how many animals (lots) and how everyone else would die.

II.

At nine, my youngest sister is brown-haired, plain, eyes quick and curious,
lips filled with laughter and secrets.
I will not go without her, I say, trying to sound fierce and certain against the darkening sky and gathering wind, but I can hear my voice betray me, high-pitched, cracking, muted by thunder not so very far away.

from The Flood

Chana Bloch

Genesis 7

The ark noisy with children, angels, birds—dim, stuffy, close, the nest of home where Noah broods, at sea.

How can one think in such a place? The world presses around, and God breathes down his neck.

Family Reunion

Shirley Blumberg

Genesis 7:1–8:19

Survivors of a storm of more than forty days
and forty nights,
we turn to each other more amazed than Noah at our safe passage and the fresh green branches alive above the flood.
In wonderment,
we touch the spreading boughs,
caress each shining leaf.

This day was only dimly dreamed when two by two we climbed aboard the leaky ark to abandon that accursed land, those standing on the shore weeping, fearing for our lives;
none of us foretelling that we would find this sanctuary, and they would perish in the storm.

How Much Water Is Inside a Tear?

Zoë Klein

How much water is inside a tear,
And how long does it take to dry them?
As long as there is misery and fear
In the people who continue to cry them.

How much water is inside a flood
And how long does it take to recede?
As long as it takes to restore hope
To the people in desperate need.

How much water is inside a storm
And how long does it take to clear?
As long as it takes to rebuild a home
And restore everything that is dear.

How much water is inside a city
When a levee suddenly breaks?
As many as are the tears that are cried
When so many million hearts break.

Noah

Rivka Miriam (transl. Linda Stern Zisquit)

Genesis 8:1–19

Noah installed wheels on his ark
dragging it after him in case the flood suddenly returned.
Grapevines, noticing fins and his temples and shiny scales at the opening of his shirt, turned into raisins, dried out their juices to ease his fear of their drowning wetness.
Noah installed wheels on his ark and when children hung from its side-poles for a ride
Noah lovingly offered them brittle clods of Ararat.

from Scatter Us in the Sea

Zoë Klein

Genesis 11:1–9

This is the generation that follows the devastating Flood. Perhaps the members of that generation were building a tower to make war upon the heavens. But didn't they deserve to be angry? They knew that in an instant the individual can be swept away. They remembered it. The blood of an entire generation cried to them from the bitter and soaking ground. The earth was a grave, and so they built a ladder out of it.

This is no tower, God! It is a lighthouse, tall as the heavens so that it cannot be drowned by Your billows and breakers, set to guide the arks that we will build ourselves next, our vain attempt to avoid your death sentence. Can you blame us?

Open Earth

Clarisse Nicoïdski (transl. Stephen Levy)

Genesis 8:13–14

open earth drinking water from clouds dry earth everywhere opening up your ancient hands torn earth like the stomach of a woman who just gave birth each stone on your roads speaks to us of the beating of your heart

לְךָ לְךָ ◆ Lech L'cha

GENESIS 12:1–17:27

Covenantal Promise and Cultural Self-Definition

PARASHAT LECH L'CHA ("Go forth!") is about relationships: relationships between God and Israel, relationships among the Israelites, and relationships between Israelites and non-Israelites. The question "Who are we?"—which the first part of Genesis answered in universal terms—now begins to be explored by focusing on one family, the subject of the rest of the Torah.

The ideas are expressed in traditional biblical forms, such as scenes of covenant-making (Genesis 15 and 17); the annunciation to the mother of a future hero (Genesis 16); and the story of the patriarch who tells the foreign ruler that his wife is his sister (12:10–13; a version of such a story recurs in Genesis 20:1–18 and again in 26:1–16). All of these tales contribute to Israelite "founding myths," that is, stories of the people's origins, and to the process of self-definition.

As for its gender orientation, on one hand this parashah seems strongly androcentric. Divine conversation is primarily with Abraham, the patriarch. He is the party to the important scenes of covenant-making so central to the people's identity. Only males can undergo circumcision, the sign of the covenant with God. Much of the parashah's interest is in the birth of male children who will carry on the line of the patriarch and fulfill divine promises.

On the other hand, the women featured in this parashah, Sarah and Hagar, exhibit a power in the household that is also critical to the identity and development of the people. It is the barren woman—Sarah—who must bear that is critical to the people's development.*

*Sarah and Hagar exhibit a power...

the child in Abraham's line. The difficulty with which such women conceive further marks their sons' importance. Sarah is Abraham's co-trickster in Genesis 12, where he enlists her help in deceiving Pharaoh, thereby saving his life and improving his lot. Sarah, like Abraham, undergoes a name change marking her participation in God's covenant.

Women are portrayed as essential for men's livelihood and for procreation, and also as keepers of their children's futures. To be sure, such roles are circumscribed and betoken a world politically dominated by men, but women do have important roles to play within the contours of this system. The tale of Hagar in Genesis 16 is particularly interesting in this respect. (On women's role in the covenant with God, see also Contemporary Reflection, p. 80.)

—Susan Niditch

Outline

I. THE FORMATION OF A RELATIONSHIP WITH GOD

Abram and Sarai Begin the Journey (12:1–9)

II. RELATIONS WITHIN THE GROUP AND OUTSIDE (12:10–14:24)

- A. Abram and Sarai as tricksters (12:10–20)
- B. Abram and Lot: dispute and separation (13:1–13)
- C. Covenant promises: land and progeny (13:14–18)
- D. Abram as a warrior hero (14:1–24)

III. A DEEPENING COVENANT (15:1–21)

IV. THE TALE OF HAGAR (16:1–16)

- A. Barrenness and surrogate motherhood (vv. 1–6)
- B. Annunciation of the birth of a son (vv. 7–16)

V. COVENANT AND CIRCUMCISION (17:1–27)

- A. Covenant and implications of circumcision (vv. 1–14)
- B. Reiteration of promises of a child by Sarah (vv. 15–22)
- C. Adoption of the sign of circumcision (vv. 23–27)

12:1

יְהוָה said to Abram, “Go forth from your land, your birthplace, your father’s house, to the land that I will show you.² I will make of you a great nation, and I will bless you; I will make your name great, and it shall be a blessing.³ I will bless those who bless you, and I will pro-

יב וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֲלֵאָבָרָם לְךָ לְקֹדֶשׁ מִצְרָאֹתךְ וּמִמּוֹלְדֹתךְ וּמִבֵּית אָבִיךְ אֲלֵהֶת הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר אָרַאְךָ: ² וְאַעֲשֶׂךָ לְגָנוֹי גָּדוֹל וְאַבְרָכֶךָ וְאַגְדָּלָה שְׁמֶךָ וְהִיה בָּרָכָה: ³ וְאַבְרָכָה מִבְּרָכֵיךְ וּמִקְלָלָךְ אָאוּר וְנִבְרָכָו

The Formation of a Relationship with God

ABRAM AND SARAI BEGIN THE JOURNEY (12:1–9)

Parashat Lech L’cha begins with a transformation in identity and status through a physical, geographical passage. Abraham, here called Abram, is instructed by God to leave the land of his birth and go to the land God shows him (12:1). Two other key players in this early Israelite foundation myth, who like Abram were introduced at the end of the previous parashah, are Sarah (Sarai), who is married to Abraham, and Lot, their nephew (12:4–5). The Deity establishes a relationship with the patriarch through blessings, grounded in covenantal promises of land and descendants (12:1–2, 7). God’s words demarcate who is inside the group versus outside (12:3), as Abraham and his household are pictured wandering and migrating, stopping to set up key markers of presence and possession: the altars that link Abraham and his descendants with God (12:7, 8). Critical aspects of Israelite identity thus emerge from this initial sketch. God reaches out to Abraham, who in turn reaches out to God.

Abraham is treated as the blessed founding father of subsequent generations. Divine blessings are also possible for non-kin who may be “blessed in/by” Abraham (v. 3). A modern appropriator might consider the notion of being blessed through Abraham to be universalistic, perhaps referring to the ethos modeled by Abraham’s life. Within its ancient Israelite setting, however, the phrase more likely affirmed the centrality and importance of Abraham as founder of Israel, covenant partner of God. As portrayed in Genesis, he is the mediator par excellence.

12:1–3. These opening verses of this critical passage are rhythmic and rhyming, with repetition on the second person. The words catch the eye and ear as demarcating an important beginning.

1. Abram. Variant of Abraham, meaning “exalted father.”

3. Blessing and curse depend upon regard for Abraham and his descendants. One thinks also of late-biblical works that imagine an ingathering to Jerusalem at the end-time, or an attempt by foreigners to latch onto Jews as a means of reaching

- The cycle of abuse can be broken if children refuse to continue the system of abuse.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 78

- Rabbi Aha claims, “...God tells Abraham to obey all of Sarah’s directives.”

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 78

- The impassioned voices of Jewish women bring forth Sarah’s voice in our own time.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 80

- Smell the fragrance / Which spreads across the land / As you roam and wander....

VOICES ► 82

nounce doom on those who curse you; through you all the families of the earth shall be blessed.”⁴ So Abram went forth as יהוה had told him, and Lot went with him. Abram was 75 years old when he left Haran.⁵ Abram took his wife Sarai, his brother’s son Lot, all the possessions they had amassed, and the people they had acquired in Haran. They set forth for the land of Canaan, and they arrived in the land of Canaan.⁶ Abram then traversed the land as far as the sacred site of Shechem, as far as the Oak of Moreh. (At that time the Canaanites were present in the land.)

⁷ יהוה now appeared to Abram and said, “I am giving this land to your descendants.” Abram then built an altar there to יהוה who had appeared to him.⁸ From there he moved on to the hill country east of Beth El. He pitched his tent between Beth El on the west and Ai on the east. There he built another altar to יהוה and called upon the Name of יהוה.⁹ And then Abram continued his journey—toward the Negev.

salvation (as in Zechariah 8:20–23). The founding myth dealing with Abraham is thus perceived to have cosmic significance, but the message is meant less to encourage or convert foreigners than to assure the group of its own importance.

4–9. In this Israelite self-portrayal, the ancestors are pictured as a family group of marginal wanderers from “elsewhere” who travel in response to a divine command and who are not native to the land. Upon arrival, Abram’s first act is to build an altar.

5. Sarai. The name means “Princess,” a variant of Sarah. It has been proposed that the name reflects her high status (see at Genesis 11:29).

6. Shechem. Located forty miles north of Jerusalem, the city is later associated with covenant renewal in Joshua 24. However, it will also be the place of the so-called rape of Dinah (see Genesis 34). Originally Shechem was a sacred city to the Canaanites. Sacred groves were an important feature of cultic sites (note the tree under which Deborah sits in בְּכָל מִשְׁפָחַת הָאֲדֹםָה: ⁴ וַיַּלֵּךְ אֶבְרָם

בְּאַשְׁר דִּבֶּר אֱלֹהִים יְהוָה וַיַּלֵּךְ אָתָּה לֹוט
וְאֶבְרָם בְּנִיחְמַשׁ שְׁנַיִם וְשֻׁבְעִים שְׁנַה
בְּצָאתְךָ מִחְרָן: ⁵ וַיַּקְרֵב אֶבְרָם אֶת-יִשְׂרָאֵל
אֲשֶׁר רָבָשׁוּ וְאֲתִיהָנִפְשׁ אֲשֶׁר-עָשָׂי בְּחָנוֹן
וַיַּצְאָוּ לְלַכְתָּ אֶרְצָה בְּנָעַן וַיַּבְאָוּ אֶרְצָה
בְּנָעַן: ⁶ וַיַּעֲבֵר אֶבְרָם בָּאָרֶץ עַד מָקוֹם
שְׁכָם עַד אַלְמַן מוֹרָה וְהַכְּנָעָנִי אֲזֹן בָּאָרֶץ:
⁷ וַיַּרְא יְהוָה אֶל-אֶבְרָם וַיֹּאמֶר לְרוּעָב אֶת-
אֶת-הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת וַיַּבְנֵן שְׁמֶן מִזְבֵּחַ לִיהְוָה
הַנְּרָא אֲלֵיכוֹ: ⁸ וַיַּעֲתֵק מִשְׁם הַחֲרֵה מִקְדָּם
לְבֵית-אֵל וַיַּט אֲהָלוֹ בֵּית-אֵל מִמֶּם
וְהָעֵמֶקֶם וַיַּבְנֵן-שֶׁמֶן מִזְבֵּחַ לִיהְוָה וַיִּקְרָא
בְּשָׁם יְהוָה: ⁹ וַיַּטְעֵב אֶבְרָם הַלּוֹהֵן וַיַּסְעוּ
הַנֶּגֶב: פ

Judges 4:5). Here the “oak of moreh” (literally, the tree “of the teacher”) is apparently a divinatory site where humans gain knowledge with help from the divine. Abraham is thus portrayed as establishing an altar at this ancient sacred space where people encountered God at a time long before Israelite kings, priests, and the great temple in Jerusalem.

Canaanites. Ancient inhabitants of the eastern Mediterranean region (modern-day Lebanon, southern Syria, Israel, and Jordan). Their sophisticated culture shared much with that of ancient Israel, although Israel’s writers attempted to distinguish themselves from Canaanites, whom the Bible portrays as the pre-Israelite population of the land.

7. A way of marking the land as God’s gift and as the future possession of the people of Israel.

8. Beth El. An ancient town north of Jerusalem and an important locus for Israelite foundation myths (see, for example, Jacob’s dream at Beth El in Genesis 28).

¹⁰There was a famine in the land, and because the famine in the land was severe, Abram went down to stay in Egypt. ¹¹When he had almost reached Egypt, he said to his wife Sarai, “Look, now—I know what a beautiful woman you are! ¹²So when the Egyptians see you, and say: ‘This is his wife,’ they may kill me; but you they shall keep alive. ¹³Please say then that you are my sister, so that on your account it may go well for me, and that my life may be spared because of you.”

¹⁴And, indeed, when Abram arrived in Egypt the Egyptians saw how exceptionally beautiful the

¹⁰ וַיְהִי רָעַב בָּאָרֶץ וַיַּרְדֵּ אֶבְרָם מִצְרַיִם
לְגֹור שֵׁם כִּי-כִּבֵּד הָרָעָב בָּאָרֶץ: ¹¹ וַיְהִי
פֶּאֲשֶׁר הָקָרֵב לִבְוא מִצְרַיִם וַיֹּאמֶר
אֶל-שְׁرֵי אֲשֶׁר הָנַה-נָּא יָדַעְתִּי בַּי אָשָׁה
יַפְתִּימָרָה אַתָּה: ¹² וְהִנֵּה כִּי-יָרַא אַתָּה
הַמִּצְרִים וְאָמַרְתָּ אֲשֶׁר זוּת וְהַרְגֵּנוּ אַתָּה
וְאַתָּה יִחְיוּ: ¹³ אָמְרִינָא אֲחַתִּי אַתָּה
לְמַעַן יַעֲבֹר-לִי בְּעַבּוֹרָה וְחִיתָה נֶפֶשִׁי
בָּגִילָךְ:

¹⁴ וַיְהִי בָּבּוֹא אֶבְרָם מִצְרַיִם וַיֹּאמֶר
הַמִּצְרִים אֲתִ-הָאָשָׁה כִּי-יִפְהָה הוּא מַאֲדָ:

Relations within the Group and Outside (12:10–14:24)

This unit continues to explain how the descendants of Abraham formed as a distinct group. The shaping of what constitutes “inside the group” entails the description of—and separation from—the “other,” as variously defined.

ABRAM AND SARAI AS TRICKSTERS (12:10–20)

This section is a variant of a tale in which the patriarch deceives a foreign ruler by telling him that his wife is his sister. A similar episode is found twice more in Genesis (Abraham and Sarah in 20:1–18; Isaac and Rebekah in 26:1–16). The deception leads to an improvement in the tricksters’ status, but the deception is uncovered and they are summarily dismissed. They depart, however, with their newly acquired goods intact. The tale portrays Pharaoh as a dupe and deals with the “us-them” theme in a humorous and thoroughly traditional way.

This passage is not a tale about unethical behavior, but a story of marginalized persons who succeed in roundabout, unorthodox ways. In both such stories that involve Abraham and Sarah, Sarah proves to be the reason for Abraham’s increased wealth.

10. famine. Departure in response to famine is a recurring biblical motif that reflects the ecological reality and agrarian concerns of the biblical writers.

11. “I know what a beautiful woman you are!” The biblical writer provides a reason for Pharaoh’s interest in Sarai. While the Song of Songs is rich in poetic expressions of admiration for the lover’s physical beauty, such overt observations about characters’ beauty are limited and terse in the rest of the Bible. Their presence calls special attention to the relationship between the husband and wife.

12. Pharaoh, the despot, has no right simply to steal a man’s wife if the woman pleases him, as he himself realizes (v. 18). Abram, as “brother,” is treated as the man in charge of Sarai’s sexuality. (Typically in the ancient Near East, a woman’s reproductive capacity was controlled by a particular man, whether father, brother, or husband.) Here as in the Dinah story (Genesis 34), a special role is envisioned for a “brother.”

13. “Please say.” The request is polite. Sarai is asked rather than ordered.

woman was;¹⁵ when Pharaoh's ministers saw her, they lauded her to Pharaoh, and the woman was taken to Pharaoh's palace.¹⁶ Through her it did go well for Abram, as he acquired sheep, cattle, and asses, male and female slaves, she-asses and camels.¹⁷ Then struck Pharaoh and his household with severe afflictions because of Sarai, Abram's wife.¹⁸ Pharaoh now summoned Abram and said, "What have you done to me? Why did you not tell me that she was your wife?¹⁹ Why did you say that she was your sister, so that I took her as a wife for myself? Look, now that it turns out that she is your wife: take [her] and begone!"²⁰ Pharaoh then issued orders and they drove him away, with his wife and all that he owned.

13 Abram went up out of Egypt into the Negev with his wife and all that he owned; and Lot accompanied him.² Abram was very rich, with livestock, silver, and gold.³ On his [continuing] march, he hiked from the Negev as far as Beth El, up to the place where earlier his tent had been, between Beth El and Ai,⁴ where he had first built an altar. There Abram called upon the Name

¹⁵ וַיַּרְא אֶתְהָ שְׁرֵי פְּרֻעָה וַיַּלְלֹג אֶתְהָ אֶל-פְּרֻעָה וַיִּקְחֵה הָאֲשָׁה בֵּית פְּרֻעָה:
¹⁶ וַיַּאֲבָרֵם הַטִּיב בְּעַבְוֹרָה וַיַּהַיּוּ צָאן וּבָקָר וְחַמְרִים וּעֲבָדִים וְשִׁפְחוֹת וְאֲתָנָתִים וְגַמְלִים: ¹⁷ וַיַּגְּלִע יְהוָה אֶת-פְּרֻעָה נְגָעִים גָּדְלִים וְאֶת-בֵּיתוּ עַל-דָּבָר שְׁרֵי אֲשָׁתָּאָבָרְם: ¹⁸ וַיַּקְרֵא פְּרֻעָה לְאֶבְרָם וַיֹּאמֶר מַה-זֶּאת עֲשִׂית לִי לְמַה לְאַיִלְתָּה כִּי אֲשֶׁתָּה הוּא: ¹⁹ לְמַה אִמְרָת אֶחָתִי הָוָא וְאָקַח אֶתְהָ לִי לְאָשָׁה וְעַתָּה הַבָּה אֲשֶׁתָּה קָח וְלֹךְ: ²⁰ וַיַּצְוֹן עַל-יוֹם פְּרֻעָה אֲנָשִׁים וַיַּשְׁלַחַם אֶתְהָ וְאֶת-אֲשֶׁתָּו וְאֶת- בְּל-אֲשֶׁר-לוּ:

יג וַיַּעַל אֶבְרָם מִמּוּצָרִים הָוָא וְאֲשֶׁתוּ וּכְל-אֲשֶׁר-לוּ וַיַּלְוַת עַמּוֹ הַנֶּגֶב: ² וְאֶבְרָם בָּבֶד מִאֶד בְּמִקְנָה בְּכֶסֶף וּבְזָהָב: ³ וַיַּלְוַל לִמְסִיעִיו מְנַגֵּב וְעַד-בֵּית-אֵל עַד-הַמְּלֹком אֲשֶׁר-הִיא שָׁם אַהֲלָה אֲהַלְוַת בְּתַחְלָה בֵּין בֵּית-אֵל וּבֵין דָעֵי: ⁴ אֶל-מִקּוֹם הַמְּזֻבָּח אֲשֶׁר-עָשָׂה שָׁם בְּרָאשָׁנָה וַיַּקְרֵא שָׁם

15–16. As Abram anticipated, beautiful Sarai is transported to Pharaoh's harem; and wealth is transferred to Abram. An exchange of a woman has taken place. The tricksters' economic status has increased, explicitly because of Sarai.

17. Although Abram and Sarai are willing to overlook her predicament for his sake, God intervenes to protect her—another sign that she is crucial to God's plans. The plagues upon the Egyptians here prefigure the plagues of the Exodus, but without the latter's world-altering significance.

18. What have you done to me. A formulaic expression of wrong-doing. (See the parallels in Genesis 20:9; 26:10.)

19. take [her] and begone. The Hebrew is even more abrupt—literally, “Take! Go!”

20. The trickster never fully succeeds in emerging from his marginal status. Revelation of the deception brings a new reduction in status.

ABRAM AND LOT: DISPUTE AND SEPARATION (13:1–13)

Abram and his nephew part ways. The writer thereby provides an explanation to the Israelite audience for the proximity of those nations that were understood to have descended from Lot (see 19:36–38). This passage alludes both to the kinship group that defines Israel and to the “Other” occupiers of land, while foreshadowing the tales of Sodom and Gomorrah that follow in Genesis 19.

of יְהוָה.⁵ Now Lot, who had gone with Abram, also had flocks and herds and tents,⁶ so that the land could not support them both; they had so much property that they could not remain together.⁷ A quarrel [now] broke out between Abram's cattle herders and Lot's cattle herders. (At that time the Canaanites and the Perizzites were inhabiting the land.)⁸ Then Abram said to Lot, “There should be no quarrel between you and me, and your herdsmen and mine, for we are close kin.⁹ The whole land lies before you! Pray part from me: if [you] go north, I will turn south; and if [you] go south, I will turn north.”¹⁰ Lot looked around and saw the whole Jordan plain; all of it was well-watered, [this being] before the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah; [it was] like a divine Garden, like the land of Egypt as you get to Zoar.¹¹ So Lot chose the whole Jordan plain for himself and moved away toward the east. They parted, then, each from the other.¹² Abram stayed in the land of Canaan, while Lot settled among the cities of the plain, pitching his tents as far as Sodom—¹³ whose people were wicked, hardened sinners against יְהוָה.

¹⁴ now said to Abram, after Lot had parted from him, “Look around from where you are, to the north and the south, to the east and the west,¹⁵ for all the land that you see I am giving to you and your descendants, forever.¹⁶ I will make your de-

אַבְרָם בְּשֵׁם יְהוָה: 5 וְגַם־לִלְוֹת הַהֲלָקָה
 אֶת־אַבְרָם הִיה צַעֲנִזְבָּקָר וְאֶחָלִים:
 6 וְלֹא־נִשְׁאָר תִּתְהִגְגָּה אֶתְּנָתְּרָה הָאָרֶץ לְשִׁבְט יְחִדָּה בֵּין
 הִיה רְכוּשָׂמֶן רַב וְלֹא יִכְלֹו לְשִׁבְט יְחִדָּה:
 7 וַיַּהַי־לִיב בֵּין רַעַי מִקְנָה־אֲבָלָם וּבֵין רַעַי
 בָּאָרֶץ: 8 וַיֹּאמֶר אַבְרָם אֶל־לִלְוֹת אֶל־נָא
 תָּהִי מְרִיבָה בֵּין וּבֵין וּבֵין וּבֵין רַעַי וּבֵין רַעַי
 כִּי־אֶנְשִׁים אֲחִים אֲנָחָנוּ: 9 הָלָא כִּל־הָאָרֶץ
 לְפָנֶיךָ הַפְּרָד נָא מַעַל אֶסְתְּרָמָל
 וְאַיִמְנָה וְאַסְתְּרָמָן וְאַשְׁמָמָילָה: 10 וַיָּשָׂא־
 לִלְוֹת אֶת־עֵינָיו וַיַּרְא אֶת־בְּלִכְפָּר הַיְרָדֵן כִּי
 כָּלָה מִשְׁקָה לְפָנֵי | שְׁחַת יְהוָה אֶת־סְדָם
 וְאֶת־עַמְרָה בְּגַנְיִיחָוָל בָּאָרֶץ מַעַרְיִים
 בָּאָכָה צָעֵר: 11 וַיַּבְחַר לִלְוֹת אֶת בְּלִכְפָּר
 הַיְרָדֵן וַיַּסְעֵל לִלְוֹת מִקְדָּם וַיַּפְרֹדוּ אִישׁ מַעַל
 אֶחָיו: 12 אַבְרָם יִשְׁבֶּה בָּאָרֶץ־בְּנָעָן וּלִלְוֹת יִשְׁבֶּה
 בְּעַרְיִי הַכְּפָר וְאֶחָל עֲדִסָּדָם: 13 וְאֶנְשִׁי
 סָדָם רְעִים וְחֶטְאִים לִיהוָה מֵאֵז: 14 וַיֹּהַי
 אָמֵר אֶל־אֶבֶן אֶחָרִי הַפְּרָד־לִלְוֹת
 מִעַמּוֹ שָׁא נָא עִינְקָל וַיָּרָא מִן־הַמְּקוֹם
 אֲשֶׁר־אַתָּה שָׁם צְפָנָה וּנְגַפָּה וּקְדָמָה וּמִמָּה:
 15 כִּי אֶת־בְּלִכְפָּר־הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר־אַתָּה רֹאשָׁה לְגַע
 אַתָּנָה וְלֹרֶעֶךְ עֲדָעוֹלָם: 16 וְשָׁמְתִּי אֶת־

13:5–13. The amicable separation between the extended household of Lot and that of Abram continues the pattern of separation, distinguishing one group from another. Abram seeks to avoid enmity between kin.

7. the Canaanites and the Perizzites. This formulaic twosome is frequently employed to refer to the “native peoples” of the land encountered by Abram and his descendants (for example, Exodus 3:8, 17; 23:3).

13. wicked, hardened sinners. An anticipation of their city’s destruction (Genesis 19).

COVENANT PROMISES: LAND AND PROGENY (13:14–18)

This passage underscores the importance of the land-promise theme in Israelite self-understanding. Whatever Israel’s actual, complex origins in the land, the tradition here insists upon both Israel’s outsider status and the land as a divine boon.

15–16. “land... descendants like the dust of the earth.” Each of the patriarchs hears similar language of promise (again Abraham in 22:17, Isaac in 26:3–4, and Jacob in 28:13–14). In this case, it rein-scendants like the dust of the earth. Only if one can count the dust of the earth will it be possible to count your descendants.¹⁷ Get up and walk about the land—its length and its breadth—for it is to you that I am giving it.”¹⁸ Moving his tent, Abram went to dwell by the oaks of Mamre, in Hebron; there he built an altar to honor יְהוָה.

14 In the time of Amraphel king of Shinar, Arioch king of Ellasar, Chedarlaomer king of Elam, and Tidal king of Goiim,² these [four] waged war against Bera king of Sodom, Birsha king of Gomorrah, Shinab king of Admah, Shemeber king of Zeboim, and the king of Bela (that is, Zoar).³ These all joined forces at the Valley of Siddim, now the Dead Sea.⁴ For twelve years they had been subject to Chedarlaomer, but in the thirteenth year they rebelled.⁵ In the fourteenth year Chedarlaomer and his allied kings came and subdued the Rephaim in Ashterot-karnaim, the Zuzim in Ham, the Emim in Shaveh-kiriata'im,⁶ and the Horites in their hill country of Seir as far as Eil Paran by the edge of the wilderness.⁷ They then returned, coming to Ein Mishpat (that is, Kadesh), where they subdued the whole country of Amalek and the Amorites who וַיַּרְא כִּי־עֲפָר הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר אָמַן־יְהוָה אֵישׁ לִמְנוֹת אֶת־עֲפָר הָאָרֶץ גַּם־זַרְעָךְ יִמְנַה:

 17 קָוָם הַתְּהִלָּךְ בְּאָרֶץ לְאַרְפָּה וּלְרִחְבָּה כִּי
 לְكָא אֶתְנָנָה:¹⁸ וַיַּאֲכַל אָבָלָם וַיַּבָּא וַיַּשְׁבַּב
 בְּאַלְמִינִי מִקְרָא אֲשֶׁר בְּחֶבְרוֹן וַיַּבְנֶה שָׁם
 מִזְבֵּחַ לִיהוָה:

יד וַיְהִי בִּימֵי אָמַרְפֵּל מֶלֶךְ־שָׂנֵעַ אֲרִיוֹן
 מֶלֶךְ אַלְסָר בְּדָרְלָעָמֶר מֶלֶךְ עִילָּם וִתְּדָעֵל
 מֶלֶךְ גּוֹיִם:² עֲשָׂו מִלְחָמָה אֶת־בְּרָעֵל מֶלֶךְ
 סָדָם וִאֶת־בְּרָשָׁע מֶלֶךְ עַמְרָה שְׁגָנָב אֲרִיוֹן
 אֲדָמָה וִשְׁמָאָבָל מֶלֶךְ צְבָוִים וּמֶלֶךְ
 בָּלָע הַיְאָצָר:³ בְּלָאָלָה חֶבְרוֹן אֶל־עַמְקָה
 הַשְׁדִּים הוּא יְמֵם הַמֶּלֶךְ:⁴ שְׁתִּים עַשְׂרֵה
 שָׁנָה עָבְדוּ אֶת־בְּדָרְלָעָמֶר וּשְׁלֹשׁ עַשְׂרֵה
 שָׁנָה מְרוּדוֹ:⁵ וּבָאָרָבָע עַשְׂרֵה שָׁנָה בָּאָ
 בְּדָרְלָעָמֶר וּהַמֶּלֶכִים אֲשֶׁר אָתוּ וַיַּכְּבוּ אֶת־
 רְפָאִים בְּעִשְׁתָּרֶת קְרָנִים וִאֶת־הַזּוֹּזִים בְּהָם
 וְאֶת הַאִמִּים בְּשֻׁוּה קְרִיתִים:⁶ וְאֶת־
 הַחֹרֵי בְּחֶרְמָם שְׁעִיר עַד אַיִל פָּאָרָן אֲשֶׁר
 עַל־הַמְּדָבָר:⁷ וּיְשָׁבּוּ וַיַּבָּאוּ אֶל־עַזְן מְשֻׁפְט הוּא קָרְשׁ וַיְבָנוּ אֶת־כְּלִישָׁה הַעֲמָלְקִי וְגַם forces the message of fullness and the predictions' certainty.

18. oaks of Mamre. See 12:6.

ABRAM AS A WARRIOR HERO (14:1–24)

Throughout the rest of Genesis, Abraham is portrayed as a peaceful patriarch, protected by God: He migrates with family and flocks, establishing ties to the land. Although he has retainers, his major tactic in confrontations is withdrawal under divine protection. This story, however, is different—more like tales in the books of Judges and Samuel than like the stories that surround it. Here Abram is portrayed as an epic hero who skillfully fights to rescue captured kin.

14:1–9. Scholars used to seek historical information in these names of kings, but they have largely abandoned the search. This detailed war description includes an intriguing and fanciful mixture of the real, the unverifiable, and the richly mythic. While none of the named kings is known from biblical or extra-biblical sources, some of the places certainly existed, such as Seir, Kadesh, Shinar, and Elam.

5. Rephaim . . . Zuzim . . . Emim. Terms applied to the legendary giants and superheroes that pre-date Israel's history in the land according to the biblical chronology (see at Genesis 6:4).

7. Amalek. A people assigned by biblical tradition to the Negev region and treated as an arch-dwell in Hazazon-tamar.⁸ Then the king of Sodom, the king of Gomorrah, the king of Admah, the king of Zeboim, and the king of Bela (that is, Zoar) went out and arrayed themselves in battle formation against the [enemy] in the Valley of Siddim—⁹ against Chedarlaomer king of Elam, Tidal king of Goiim, Amraphel king of Shinar, and Arioch king of Ellasar—four kings against five.

¹⁰ Now the Valley of Siddim was studded with tar pits, and when the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, some tumbled into them, and the rest fled to the hills. ¹¹ So they took all the possessions of [the kings of] Sodom and Gomorrah and their food, and they went off; ¹² and as they went off they took Lot, Abram's brother's son, with his possessions; he was a resident of Sodom.

¹³ A fugitive then came and told Abram the Hebrew, who was living by the oak trees of Mamre the Amorite, brother of Eshkol and Aner, who were allied to Abram by treaty. ¹⁴ Hearing that his kinsman had been taken captive, Abram mustered his retainers, born into his household, 318 of them, going in pursuit as far as Dan. ¹⁵ At night he deployed himself and his forces against them and defeated them, pursuing them as far as Hobah, north of Damascus. ¹⁶ He then brought back all the possessions; his nephew Lot, too, and his possessions; [he restored] the women, too, and the [other]

אֲתִיהָאָמְרֵי הַיּוֹשֵׁב בְּחַצְצָן תָּמָר : ⁸ וַיֵּצֵא
מֶלֶךְ־סָדָם וֶמֶלֶךְ עַמְרָה וֶמֶלֶךְ אַדְמָה וֶמֶלֶךְ
צְבָיוֹם אַבּוֹיָם וֶמֶלֶךְ בְּלֻעַ הַוְאָצָעָר וַיַּעֲרֹכוּ
אַתְּ מֶלֶחָה בְּעַמְקָק הַשְׂקִים : ⁹ אַתְּ
בְּדָרְלָעָנָה מֶלֶחָה עִילָּם וַתְּדַעַל מֶלֶחָ גּוֹיִם
וְאַמְרָפֵל מֶלֶחָ שְׁנָעָר וְאַרְיוֹן מֶלֶחָ אַלְטָר
אַרְבָּעָה מֶלֶכִים אֲתִיהָחָמָה :

¹⁰ וְעַמְקָק הַשְׂקִים בָּאָרֶת בְּאַרְתָּ חַמְרָ וַיַּגְּסֹו
מֶלֶךְ־סָדָם וְעַמְרָה וַיַּפְלוּוּ שָׂמָה וַיַּהֲנַשְׁאָרִים
הַרָּה נָסָו : ¹¹ וַיַּקְהֹו אֲתִ-בְּלִ-רְכָשׁ סָדָם
וְעַמְרָה וְאַתִּ-כְּלָ-אֲכָלָם וַיַּלְכֹּו : ¹² וַיַּקְהֹו
אֲתִ-לְוֹט וְאַתִּ-רְכָשׁוּ בֶּן-אַחִי אֲבָרָם וַיַּלְכֹּו וְהַוָּא יַשֵּׁב בְּסָדָם :

¹³ וַיָּבָא הַפְּלִיט וַיַּגַּד לְאַבָּרָם הָעָבֵרִי וְהַוָּא
שָׁבֵן בְּאַלְיָן מִקְרָא הָאָמָנוֹי אַחִי אַשְׁכָּל:
וְאַחִי עַנְרָ וְהָם בְּעַלְיָ בְּרִיתְ-אַבָּרָם:
¹⁴ וַיַּשְׁמַע אַבָּרָם כִּי נְשָׁבָה אַחִיו וַיַּרְקַּח
אֲתִ-חַנְיכָיו וַיַּלְקַדֵּשׁ בַּיְתָו שְׁמָנָה עָשָׂר וְשָׁלַשׁ
מֵאוֹת וַיַּרְקַּף עֲדִ-קָּן : ¹⁵ וַיִּחְלֹק עַלְיָהָם
לִילָּה הַוָּא וְעַבְדָיו וְנִבְמָם וַיַּרְקַּבְתָּ עַדְחוֹבָה
אֲשֶׁר מִשְׁמָאל לְדָמָשׁ : ¹⁶ וַיַּשֵּׁב אֶת בְּלָ- הַרְכָשׁ וְגַם אֲתִ-לְוֹט אַחִיו וַיַּרְכְּשׁוּ הַשִּׁיבָ enemy and rival for the land (Exodus 17:8–16; Numbers 14:43–45).

Amorites. A frequent biblical designation for the land's indigenous population (see Deuteronomy 1:4, 7).

8. Sodom...Gomorrah. Treated as two ancient kingdoms or city-states without reference to ethical breaches associated with Genesis 18–19.

Admah...Zeboim. Like Sodom and Gomorrah, these cities are places of destruction (see Deuteronomy 29:22).

13. Hebrew. In Exodus, this word—perhaps related to apiru, a Semitic-language term for stateless folk—may refer to social status rather than to ethnic identity. Here, the term may well have ethnic connotations.

oak trees of Mamre. Compare 12:6.

14. his kinsman. In biblical parlance, the head of a household stands for the entire household, including its women. (See also at 10:1.)

15–16. Quick narrative strokes cover the battle and victory. Note that the women are listed separately after the possessions, among the spoils of all-too-frequent war.

people.¹⁷ The king of Sodom came out to meet him after his return to the Valley of Shaveh (that is, the King's Valley) from fighting Chedarlaomer and his allied kings.¹⁸ Now Melchizedek king of Salem brought out bread and wine—he was a priest of God Most High—¹⁹ and blessed him, saying, “Blessed be Abram by God Most High, maker of heaven and earth,²⁰ and blessed is God Most High, who has given your foes into your hands.” Then he [Abram] gave him a tenth of everything.

²¹The king of Sodom now said to Abram, “Let me have the people and keep the goods for yourself.” ²²But Abram said to the king of Sodom, “I have raised my hand to יהוה, God Most High, maker of heaven and earth, ²³that I would take nothing of yours, not even a thread or a sandal-strap—you shall not say, ‘I enriched Abram’”—²⁴except what the troops have eaten, and the share due the leaders who went with me: Aner, Eshkol, and Mamre; let them take their share.”

15 After these things, the word of יהוה came to Abram in a vision, saying, “Have no fear, Abram; I am giving you an abundant reward as a gift.”

18. Melchizedek. This name, which associates the term for “king” with “righteousness,” becomes symbolically important in the Dead Sea Scrolls and in later Jewish literature. Melchizedek is one of the many enigmatic biblical figures—probably rooted in a richer oral tradition—who appear briefly in the written tradition, and then go on to a fuller post-biblical afterlife. Serah daughter of Asher is another such figure (see Numbers 26:46).

Salem. Perhaps to be identified with Jerusalem.

20. a tenth of everything. Abram appears to engage in an act of tithing, anticipating the Torah's later prescriptions (as in Leviticus 27:30–33).

22-24. In contrast to the usual practice of warrior heroes in Judges and I-II Samuel (see Joshua וגם את-הנשימים ואת-העומים : ¹⁷ ויצא מלך סדום ל夸ראתו אחורי שובע מהפהות את-כדרלעמר ואת-המלךים אשר אותו אל-עמק שׂוֹהה והוא עמק המלך : ¹⁸ ומבליב-צדיק מלך שלם הוציא לחם ויין והוא כהן לאל עליון : ¹⁹ ויברכחו וניאמר ברוך אברם לאל עליון קנה שמיים וארץ : ²⁰ וברוך אל עליון אשר-מנין צרייך בירכה ויתן לך מעשר מלך :

21 וַיֹּאמֶר מֶלֶךְ סָדָם אֶל־אֲבָרִם תָּן־לִי
הַנֶּפֶשׁ וְהַרְכֵשׁ קְח־לְךָ: 22 וַיֹּאמֶר אֲבָרִם
אֶל־מֶלֶךְ סָדָם הַרְמָתִי יְדֵי אֶל־יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ
עַלְיוֹן קָנֵה שְׁמָיִם וְאָرֶץ: 23 אֶסְמַחוּט
וְעַד שְׁרוֹדָנָעַל וְאֶסְמַחַ מִכְלָאָשְׁר־לָהּ
וְלֹא תֹאמֶר אָנִי הַעֲשֵׂרִתִי אֶת־אֲבָרִם:
24 בְּלֹעֲלֵי רַק אֲשֶׁר אָכַלְוּ הַגָּעָרִים וְחַלְקֵל
הָאָנָשִׁים אֲשֶׁר הָלַכְוּ אֶתְיוֹ עִנְרֵי אַשְׁפֵל
וּמְמֻרָא הַם יִקְחוּ חֲלָקָם: ס

טו אחר | הדברים האלה היה דבר
יהוה אל-אברם במחזה לאמר אל-תירא
אברם אנכי מנו לך שכבה הרבהה מאר:

8:1–3; Judges 8:24–26), Abram refuses to enjoy any of the spoil obtained through his military victory. As in the Book of Esther (9:10), battle is not for material gain but for the righteous cause.

A Deepening Covenant (15:1–21)

This passage is a version of covenant-formation (see also Genesis 9, 12, 17; Exodus 6, 12). In this literary form, God appears or speaks; the recipient of the message is promised blessings of land and progeny; the Deity self-identifies; and a sign is provided to mark and seal the relationship. Of special note in this scene are the name of the Deity

²Abram then replied, “God, יְהוָה, what can You give me, when I am going [to die] childless, and the heir to my household is Damascene Eliezer?” ³Abram added, “Look—to me You have given no offspring, and one of my slaves is my heir!” ⁴But God’s word to him was, “That one shall not be your heir; rather, one who comes from your own body—he shall be your heir!”

⁵Taking him outside, [God] said, “Turn your gaze toward the heavens and count the stars, if you can count them!” And [God] promised him: “So shall your seed be!” ⁶And he put his trust in יְהוָה, who reckoned that as loyalty in him, ⁷saying to him: “I am יְהוָה who brought you out of Ur of the Chaldeans, to give you this land as an inheritance.” ⁸He then said, “God, יְהוָה, how can I know that I shall take possession of it?”

⁹[God] answered, “Bring Me a three-year-old calf, a three-year-old kid, a three-year-old ram, and a young turtledove.” ¹⁰So he took all these and split them—all but the bird—in the middle, placing each half opposite the other. ¹¹Vultures descended upon the carcasses, but Abram chased them away.

(v. 7); the ritual (vv. 9–17); the prophecy offered (vv. 13–16); and the lack of explicit conditions laid upon the patriarch as covenant partner.

15:1–6. Twin promises of land and children are central to Israelite tales of self-definition; perhaps they reflect the importance of male lineages and patrimonies.

1. The divine communication comes in a vision, so that what is “seen” is a poetic blessing that verbally reassures Abram.

2–3. Abram confronts God, calling attention to the grand yet unfulfilled promises of progeny. Abram has not resorted to the variety of customs in ancient times that enabled householders to ensure their posterity (such as taking an additional wife). See at 16:1–3.

7–19. Known as the “covenant of the pieces,” this eerie scene testifies to the strongly experiential dimension of the numinous, as Abram encounters the Deity.

² וַיֹּאמֶר אֶבְרָם אֶתְנִי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים מֵהֶה תִּתְן־לִי וְאַنְכִּי הַוָּלֶךְ עֲרִירִי וּבְנָמְשָׁק בִּיתִי הַוָּא דְּמִשְׁק אֶלְיעֹזֶר: ³ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶבְרָם הַנָּעַד לִי לֹא נִתְּתָה זָרָע וְהַגָּה בְּנִי־בִּתִּי יוֹרֶש אֹתָיו: ⁴ וְהַגָּה דְּבָרִי־יְהוָה אֶלְיוֹן לֹא מִתְּמַמֵּר לֹא יִרְשֶׁה זֶה בִּימָם אֲשֶׁר יֵצָא מִמְּעֵינֶךָ הוּא יִרְשֶׁה:

⁵ וַיֹּצֵא אֹתוֹ הַחֹזֶה וַיֹּאמֶר הַבְּטָנָא הַשְׁמִימָה וְסִפְר הַכּוֹכָבִים אִם־תַּוְكֵל לְסִפְר אַתָּם וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ בָּה יְהוָה זְרֻעָה: ⁶ וְהַאמֵּן בְּיְהוָה וַיַּחֲשֹׁבָה לוֹ צְדָקָה: ⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹן אָנָּנוּ יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר הַזָּאת מְאוֹר בְּשָׁדִים לְתַת לְךָ אֶת־הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת לְרִשְׁתָה: ⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶתְנִי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים בְּמַה אִידְעַ בְּאַירְשָׁנָה:

⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹן קָחָה לוֹ עֲגָלָה מִשְׁלָשָׁת וְעַזְמָה מִשְׁלָשָׁת וְאַיִל מִשְׁלָשָׁת וְתַרְןָגָזָל: ¹⁰ וַיִּקְחָה לוֹ אֶת־בְּפַל־אֶלְהָה וַיַּבְתֵּר אַתָּם בְּתֻ�ָה וַיִּתְןָ אִישׁ־בְּתִירוֹ לְקַרְאָת רְעוּהוּ וְאֶת־הַצְּפֵר לְאֶתְרָה: ¹¹ וַיַּקְרֵד דְּהָעֵיט עַל־הַפְּגָרִים וַיִּשְׁבַּ

7. “יְהוָה.” God self-identifies by this name, which source critics have long considered to be a marker of a particular biblical thread or layer. See also at 2:4.

10. split them. In Hebrew idiom, to make a covenant is literally to “cut” one. Drawing parallels with ancient Near Eastern custom and Jeremiah 34:17–22, scholars have suggested that the division of the animal is an implied threat, symbolizing the result of a failure to keep the covenant. An alternate view is that the covenant’s parties belong to one unit, one body; each half is incomplete without its counterpart. Bonds are affirmed through participation in sacrificial ritual—in a common mode of cultural expression.

¹²Then, as the sun was setting, Abram fell into a deep sleep, and lo! a powerful dark dread was falling upon him!

¹³[God] said to Abram, “Know now that your descendants shall be strangers in a land not theirs; they shall be enslaved and afflicted for four hundred years. ¹⁴But then I will bring judgment upon the nation they are serving; after that they shall go out with many possessions. ¹⁵And you—you shall go to your ancestors in peace; you shall be buried in good old age. ¹⁶The fourth generation shall return here, for not until then shall the iniquity of the Amorites be repaid.”

¹⁷Now, when the sun had set and it was dark, lo—a smoking oven and a fiery torch were what passed between these pieces! ¹⁸On that day יהוה made a covenant with Abram, saying, “To your descendants I have given this land, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the Euphrates, ¹⁹[the land of] the Kenites, the Kenizzites, the Kadmonites, ²⁰the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Rephaim, ²¹the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Gergashites, and the Jebusites.”

16 Now Abram's wife Sarai, who had not borne him a child, had an Egyptian slave named Hagar. ²So Sarai said to Abram: “Seeing as יהוה has

12. deep sleep. The trance-like state signals important transformations. In Genesis 2:21, the first human being was likewise placed in deep sleep prior to the formation of woman.

13–16. A premonition of the later enslavement in Egypt and the Exodus.

16. “iniquity of the Amorites.” The indigenous peoples are declared deserving of displacement. The author apparently seeks to justify biblical tradition concerning the Israelites' later conquest of the land.

17. smoking oven...fiery torch. The Deity is often associated with fire imagery (see Exodus 3:2; 19:18). [The text's ancient audience perceived certain artifacts to be associated with a particular gender. Ovens, torches, or both may well have been linked with women in particular, as those who bake

אתם אַבְרָם: ¹² וַיֹּהִי הַשְׁמֵשׁ לְבָא
וּמְרַדְמָה נִפְלָה עַל־אַבְרָם וְהַנֶּה אִימָעָה
חַשְׁכָה גָדוֹלָה נִפְלָתָ עַלְיוֹ:

¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר לְאַבְרָם יְדֻעַ תַּךְעַ בִּירְגָר | יְהִי
זְרוּעַ בָּאָרֶץ לֹא לָהֶם וְעַבְרוּם וְעַנוּ אֲתֶם
אַרְבַּע מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה: ¹⁴ וְגַם אַתְּ הַגּוֹן אֲשֶׁר
יַעֲבֹדוּ הָنָן אֲנָכִי וְאַחֲרִיכִי יֵצְאָו בְּרֶכֶשׁ
גָדוֹל: ¹⁵ וְאַתָּה תָּבוֹא אֶל־אַבְתַּיךְ בְּשָׁלוֹם
תִּקְרֹב בְּשִׁיבָה טוֹבָה: ¹⁶ וְדוֹר רַבִּיעִי יִשּׁוּבּוּ
הַנֶּה כִּי לְאִשְׁלָמָם עַזְן הַאֲמֹנִי עַדְקָנָה:

¹⁷ וַיֹּהִי הַשְׁמֵשׁ בָּאָה וּעַלְטָה הַיִה וְהַנֶּה
תִּנְוֹר עַשְׂנָן וּלְפִיד אֲשֶׁר עַבְרַ בֵּין
הָגָרִים הָאָלָה: ¹⁸ בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא בְּרִית יְהֹוָה
אַתְּ־אַבְרָם בְּרִית לְאִמּוֹר לִזְרוּעַ נִתְתַּל אֶת־
הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת מִנְחָר מִצְוִים עַד־הַנְּפָרָא
הַגָּדָל בְּהַרְפָּרָת: ¹⁹ אַתְּ־הַקְּנִינִי וְאַתְּ־הַקְּנָנִי
וְאַתְּ הַקְּדָמָנִי: ²⁰ וְאַתְּ־הַחַתִּי וְאַתְּ־הַפְּרִזִּי
וְאַתְּ־הַרְפָּאִים: ²¹ וְאַתְּ־הַאֲמָרִיל וְאַתְּ
הַכְּנָעָנִי וְאַתְּ־הַגְּרָגְשִׁי וְאַתְּ־הַיְבָסִי: ס
¹⁷ וְשָׁלִיל אֲשֶׁת אַבְרָם לֹא יַלְהָה לוֹ וְלֹא
שְׁפָחָה מִצְרָיִת וְשָׁמָה הָגָר: ² וְתֹאמֶר שָׁרֵי bread (Leviticus 26:26), or as with Deborah, who is said to be affiliated with lapidot, “torches” (Judges 4:4). Here, such items represent the divine Presence (David Stein, personal communication). —Ed.] passed between these pieces. See at 15:10. The divine being passes between the halves, demonstrating reliability as a covenant partner.

The Tale of Hagar (16:1–16)

This passage returns to a problem mentioned earlier (11:30): the barrenness of the patriarch's wife. That topic is a recurring motif foreshadowing the birth of a hero (see the story of Hannah, mother of Samuel, in I Samuel 1–2). Here, Sarai kept me from bearing a child, have intercourse with my slave: maybe I will have a son through her."

אֶל-אֲבָרֶם הַנְּהָנָא עִצְרָנִי יְהוָה מֵלֹת
בָּאִנָּא אֶל-שְׁפָחָתִי אָוְלִי אָבָנָה מִמְנָה takes matters into her own hands by giving her husband her female slave as wife. The slave's children will belong to her mistress by adoption. The passage reveals the ethical and practical difficulties of this sort of surrogate motherhood, and the political dimensions of reproduction in a traditional patrilineal society. Nevertheless, in a world in which having children is a major source of status, Hagar is emboldened by her pregnancy (16:4). Sarai "treat(s) her harshly," and the girl runs away. The annunciation that follows is a traditional marker of the biography of a hero. Here, as in Genesis 21, the reader briefly feels immersed in a non-Israelite nation's founding myth.

BARRENNESS AND SURROGATE MOTHERHOOD (16:1–6)

The theme of the barren wife recurs throughout tales of the matriarchs and of the mothers of other heroes—including Rebekah, Rachel, Samson's unnamed mother, and Hannah. The motif implies that a boy born under such circumstances is truly sent by God, his mother's condition having received special attention by the Deity. In the Bible, reproductive problems typically concern women, whereas in other traditions either parent may be regarded as infertile. This is another of the Bible's double-edged swords regarding the status of women. On the one hand, to be infertile is to be marginal, possibly afflicted by God; on the other hand, annunciations of a child's birth account for most of the few biblical passages in which God communicates with and empowers women. Here the biblical writers deftly draw out the ways in which children connote status in this society. Implicitly, they also point to the powerlessness of slave women whose reproductive capacity belongs to another. Both women—mistress and slave—have their options expanded and yet are also constrained by their cultural roles.

16:1. an Egyptian slave. Hebrew has several terms for female servants or slaves. The term here refers to the lowest level of servitude. Slavery was an accepted part of ancient Near Eastern cultures, Israel included. Although certain biblical laws ameliorate the plight of slaves, especially male Hebrews (see at Exodus 21:2–11 and Leviticus 25:35–54), they do not overtly oppose the institution. According to the Sinai covenant, a daughter sold into slavery was normally not released in the seventh year (Exodus 21:2, 7). In addition to the usual hardships that they shared with male counterparts, women slaves were also used by males in the household for sexual or procreative purposes. Typically, their masters or mistresses had extensive control over their fate. In the story of Rachel and Leah, their father Laban gives a woman slave to each of his daughters (Genesis 29:24, 29); in turn, they assign those slaves—named Zilpah and Bilhah—to their husband, Jacob, in order to produce children (Genesis 29–30). Here, when Hagar becomes Abram's wife (v. 3), she does not cease to be Sarai's slave; when Abraham surrenders Hagar to Sarai's authority (v. 6), he acknowledges that his wife has prior claims that supersede his. (In Genesis 25:6, Hagar appears to be counted among Abraham's concubines—a status higher than that of a slave but lower than a wife.)

2. Sarai acknowledges that fertility is ultimately in the hands of the Deity (see Genesis 30:2), but nevertheless takes matters into her own hands.

"maybe I will have a son through her." The Hebrew is more ambiguous since the word "son" does not appear. Instead, Sarai is using a verb that can mean either "I will have a child" or "I will be built"—that is, established—which refers to creating a family and continuity with no reference to the offspring's gender. | Sarai's motive is not clear. Is it to ensure her own position, to fulfill Abram's dream of having a child as an heir (Genesis 15:2–3), or both? |

Abram heeded Sarai's voice.³ Ten years after Abram had settled in the land of Canaan, Abram's wife Sarai took her slave Hagar the Egyptian and gave her to her husband Abram as a wife.⁴ He came to Hagar and she became pregnant; and when she saw that she had become pregnant, her mistress became for her an object of scorn.

⁵Sarai then said to Abram, “My wrong is on your head! I put my slave in your arms; no sooner did she see that she was pregnant, I became for her an object of scorn. Let a judge between us!”⁶ So Abram said to Sarai, “Look, your slave is in your hands; do to her as you please.” Sarai then so af-

וַיִּשְׁמַע אֶבְרָם לְקוֹל שָׂרֵי: ³ וַתָּקַח שָׂרֵי אֲשֶׁת-אֶבְרָם אֶת-הַגָּר הַמִּצְרִית שְׁפָחָתָה מִקְץ עֶשֶׂר שָׁנִים לְשֵׁבֶת אֶבְרָם בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵן וַתָּתַן אֹתָהּ לְאֶבְרָם אִישָׁה לֹו לְאָשָׁה: ⁴ וַיָּבֹא אֶל-הַגָּר וַתְּהִרְאֵ בַּיּוֹתְרָה וַתְּקַל גְּבֻרָתָה בְּעִינֶיךָ:

⁵ וַתֹּאמֶר שָׂרֵי אֶל-אֶבְרָם חֲמַס עֶלְיָךְ אָנָּכִי נִתְּחִי שְׁפָחָתִ בְּחִיקָר וַתְּרִא בַּיּוֹתְרָה וְאֶקְל בְּעִינֶיךָ יִשְׁפַּט יְהוָה בֵּינוֹ וּבֵינוֹ: ⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶבְרָם אֶל-שָׂרֵי הַנִּהְרָה שְׁפָחָתָךְ בַּיּוֹד עֲשִׂילָה הַטּוֹב בְּעִינֶיךָ וְתַעֲנֵה שָׂרֵי

Modern scholars have long pointed to extra-biblical evidence for varieties of surrogate motherhood in the ancient Near East, such as was regulated in the Laws of Hammurabi (¶ 146). Sarai participates in an unspecified version of that widely practiced system and seeks to be empowered within its contours.

Abram heeded Sarai's voice. In Genesis 3:17, the first man was chastised for heeding the woman's voice. In contrast, in Genesis 21:12, God will need to explicitly instruct Abraham to obey Sarah: “Do whatever Sarah tells you”—more literally “All that Sarah tells you, heed her voice.” Here, however, Abram shows no reluctance to follow his wife's instructions. In household matters, women exercised authority.

3. gave her to her husband Abram as a wife. An ancient contract from Nuzi (Mesopotamia, 14th century B.C.E.) prescribes a similar response to barrenness: “Kelim-ninu [a woman] has been given in marriage to Shennima [a man]. . . . If Kelim-ninu does not bear, Kelim-ninu shall acquire a woman of the land of Lulu, and Kelim-ninu may not send the offspring away” (ANET, 1969, p. 220; see also at v. 1).

wife. Heb. ishah; see at 2:24.

4. became for her an object of scorn. Literally, “became lightweight in her eyes.” The status of childless women in antiquity was precarious, socially and economically. Pregnant, and as Abram's new wife, Hagar has reason to feel that her position has been elevated.

5. Sarai then said. The biblical writers are psychologically astute in describing the tension between husband and wife over difficult reproductive issues (see also Genesis 30:1–2).

6. The principal wife clearly has certain rights in these situations involving reproduction, as Abram—unquestioning—implicitly recognizes. From a much later Jewish community in Egypt (5th century B.C.E.) we have a document in which one man's slave becomes another's wife, and another document in which her master frees her. Such conflicting lines of authority create complexities of which the stories here and in Genesis 21 are a dramatic, even tragic, example. Meanwhile, from a literary perspective, one observes Abram's frustration and feelings of powerlessness, as well as his desire not to become involved in this world of women.

Sarai then so afflicted her. [Tikva Frymer-Kensky suggests that this may mean that Sarai simply starts treating her like an ordinary slave (Reading the Women of the Bible, 2002, p. 229). The verb innah (“afflicted”) refers to various forms of coercion. The same verb describes the treatment of the Israelites in Egypt (Exodus 1:11). On the long-term impact of the relationship between Sarah and Hagar, see at Genesis 21:10. —Ed.]

flicted her that she ran away,⁷ and an angel of יְהוָה found her at a spring of water in the wilderness, at the spring on the road to Shur.

⁸[The angel] said, “Hagar, slave of Sarai: Whence have you come and where are you going?” She answered, “I am running away from my mistress Sarai.” ⁹The angel of יְהוָה said to her, “Return to your mistress and submit to her ill-treatment.” ¹⁰The angel of יְהוָה went on to say to her, “I will greatly multiply your descendants; they shall be too numerous to count.” ¹¹And then the angel of יְהוָה continued: “Look—you are pregnant and shall bear a son; call him Ishmael, for יְהוָה has heard your affliction. ¹²He shall be a wild ass of a man; his hand shall be against all and the hand of all shall be against him; he shall dwell in [permanent] opposition to all his kin.”

וַתִּבְרֹךְ מִפְנֵיכָה: ⁷ וַיַּמַּצֵּא מֶלֶךְ יְהוָה עַל־עֵין הַמִּפְנֵים בַּמִּדְבָּר עַל־הַעֲזִין בְּדֶרֶךְ שׂוֹר: ⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר הָגָר שִׁפְחַת שְׂרֵי אִימָּזָה בְּאַת וְאַנְהָה תָּלִכְיָה וְתֹאמֶר מִפְנֵי שְׂרֵי גָּבְרָתִי אַנְכִּי בְּרָחוֹת: ⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר לְהָ מֶלֶךְ יְהוָה שׁוֹבֵי אֶל־גָּבְרָתְךָ וְהַתְּעַנֵּי תְּחַת יְדֵיכָה: ¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר לְהָ מֶלֶךְ יְהוָה הַרְבָּה אַרְבָּה אֶת־זָרָעָה וְלֹא יִסְפֶּר מְרֻבָּה: ¹¹ וַיֹּאמֶר לְהָ מֶלֶךְ יְהוָה הַנֶּגֶר הַרְבָּה וַיְלַدְתָּ בֵן וְקָרְאתָ שְׁמוֹ יְשֻׁמְעָאל קִרְשָׁמָע יְהוָה אֶל־עֲנִיה: ¹² וְהִוא יְהִי פָּרָא אֲדָם יָדוֹ בְּכָל וִידָּה כֹּל בָּו וְעַל־פָּנֵי כָּל־אֶחָיו יִשְׁכַּן:

ANNUNCIATION OF THE BIRTH OF A SON (16:7–16)

The “Annunciation” is a biblical literary pattern (or “type-scene”) in which a mother-to-be receives information from God or a divine messenger concerning the future birth of a male child. Often instructions or information are given about the hero’s future. The female recipient of this knowledge frequently reacts with fear or wonder (see Genesis 18:9–15 where Sarah learns indirectly about her forthcoming pregnancy, and Judges 13:1–7 where Samson’s mother-to-be learns that she shall have a son).

7. an angel of יְהוָה. This is the first report of a personal encounter between an individual woman and a divine being since Genesis 3; it is also the first time in the story that anyone addresses Hagar.

at a spring of water. Water sources in the Bible are associated with fertility.

8. For the first time, Hagar speaks and tells her story, which she does succinctly.

9. “Return.” The ethical stance in the scene is one of accommodation to the existing power structure rather than encouragement to acts of self-liberation. In this system, the reward for submission is the promise of progeny.

“I will greatly multiply your descendants.” The formulaic blessing elsewhere offered only to patriarchs such as Abraham is here also promised to the heroine Hagar (see 13:16; 15:5; 26:4; 28:14). She thus receives a promise that parallels those to the patriarchs. She is the only woman in the Torah to be informed directly that her descendants (literally “her seed”) will be numerous.

II. “Ishmael.” The name means “God will listen”; it is a good omen for the boy, and a comment on God’s attentiveness to Hagar’s plight.

12. To be equated with a virile strong male animal is usually a positive metaphor in the ancient Near East (see the references to the bull and the wild-boar in Deuteronomy 33:17). The rest of the blessing should likewise be construed as positive, although this translator understood it differently.

“he shall dwell.” Ishmael will be the father of a people neighboring Israel.

¹³So she called יהוה who had been speaking to her, “You are El Ro’i”—meaning by this, “Even here I have seen the back of the One who looks upon me!” ¹⁴That is why that well—the one located between Kadesh and Bered—is called Be’er-lachai-ro’i.

¹⁵Hagar bore to Abram a son, and Abram called his son whom Hagar had borne Ishmael. ¹⁶When Hagar bore Ishmael to Abram, Abram was 86 years old.

17 When Abram was 99 years old, יהוה appeared to Abram and said to him, “I am El Shaddai —walk along before Me and be pure of heart,² and I will set a covenant between us, and multiply you exceedingly.” ³Abram fell on his face.

God spoke with him, saying, ⁴“As for Me, here is My covenant with you: You shall be the father of a multitude of peoples. ⁵No longer are you to be called Abram: your name is to be Abraham, for I

¹³ וַתִּקְרֹא שְׁמֵיְהוָה הַבָּר אֶלְيָה אֲפָתָה אֶל־
רָאֵי כִּי אָמַרְתָּ הָגָם הַלָּם רָאִיתִי אֶחָרִי
רָאֵי: ¹⁴ עַל־פָּנָן קָרָא לְבָאָר בָּאָר לְחַי רָאֵי
הַנֶּה בֵּין־קָדֵשׁ וּבֵין בָּרוּךְ:

¹⁵ וַתַּלְדֵּת הָגָר לְאָבָרָם בֶּן וַיַּקְרֹא אָבָרָם שֵׁם־
בֶּן־אָשְׁר־יְלִדָּה הָגָר יְשֻׁמְעָל: ¹⁶ וְאָבָרָם
בֶּן־שְׁמַנִּים שָׁנָה וְשָׁשׁ שָׁנִים בְּלִדְתֵּה־הָגָר אֲתִי־שְׁמַעְעָל לְאָבָרָם: ס

וַיְהִי אָבָרָם בֶּן־תַּשְׁעִים שָׁנָה וַיְתַשְּׁעַ
שָׁנִים וַיַּרְא יהֹה אֶל־אָבָרָם וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹ
אָנָּי־אֶל שְׂדֵי הַתְּהִלָּה לִפְנֵי וְהִיא תְּמִימִים:
² וְאַתָּה נָהָרָא בְּרִיתִי בֵּין וּבֵין וְאַרְבָּה אֶתְכֶּךָ
בְּמַמְּדָמָד: ³ וַיַּפְלֵל אָבָרָם עַל־פָּנָיו
וַיֹּדַבֵּר אָתָּה אֱלֹהִים לִאמּוֹר: ⁴ אֲנִי הָנֶה
בְּרִיתִי אֶתְכֶּךָ וְהִיא תְּהִיא לְאָבֵבָה גּוֹיִם:
⁵ וְלֹא־יָקֹרְא עוֹד אֲתִי־שְׁמַךְ אָבָרָם וְהִיא

13. “El Ro’i.” Literally, “God of my seeing.”

“Even here... who looks upon me.” The clause is difficult to parse precisely. It seems to mean that Hagar feels lucky to be alive after a direct encounter with the Deity.

14. Be’er-lachai-ro’i. Literally, “the well of the living one of my seeing.” The naming of a place after a theophany is a common biblical motif (cf. 28:19). However, Hagar is the only woman whose experience is enshrined in a place name. None of the matriarchs receive this honor. Such a privilege for the marginalized slave-woman—the outsider—is striking; the narrative views Hagar with sympathy and as having value.

Covenant and Circumcision (17:1–27)

The Abrahamic covenant (Genesis 15) is now sealed by the rite of circumcision. The incising of the covenant on male bodies is a critical feature of Israelite self-identification and may perhaps be linked with the importance of male lineages in this ancient culture.

COVENANT AND IMPLICATIONS OF CIRCUMCISION (17:1–14)

Motifs of progeny and land appear as the patriarch’s transformation is effected by a name change and bodily marking.

1. “El Shaddai.” An ancient name of the Deity, apparently meaning “God of the mountains” or “God of my breasts.” Ancient Near Eastern and other deities are frequently associated with the mountains. The alternate meaning of shaddai as “breasts” perhaps hints at aspects of the feminine contained in the Deity. This name of God often appears in the Bible in a context where fertility is an issue. For example, Naomi uses this name in Ruth 1:20.

5. “Abram... Abraham.” The name change marks a change in status. Abram and Abraham are variants, meaning “exalted father.”

am making you the father of a multitude of nations. ⁶I am making you exceedingly fruitful, and turning you into nations; kings shall come forth from you; ⁷I will establish My covenant with you, and with your descendants after you, for all their generations, an everlasting covenant: to be God to you and to your descendants after you. ⁸I will give you and your descendants after you the land where you have sojourned, the whole land of Canaan, as an everlasting possession, and I will be their God.”

⁹God then said to Abraham, “As for you, observe My covenant—you and your descendants after you—in all your generations. ¹⁰This is My covenant that you and your descendants after you are to observe: let every male among you be circumcised. ¹¹When the flesh of your foreskin has been circumcised, it shall become a sign of the covenant between us. ¹²And in all your generations let every eight-day-old boy among you be circumcised, [whether it be] a homeborn slave or bought from foreigners, not of your own descent. ¹³Let your homeborn slave and the one you buy be circumcised, so that My covenant may be in your flesh as an everlasting covenant. ¹⁴An uncircumcised male who has not circumcised the flesh of his foreskin—that person shall be cut off from his people; he has broken My covenant.”

שָׁמֶל אֶבְרָהָם פִּי אֲבִיכֶם גּוֹיִם נִתְקַיֵּךְ:
 6 וְהַפְּרָתִי אֶתְכֶּךָ בְּמִזְרָח מִאָדָם וַנִּתְקַיֵּךְ לְגּוֹיִם
 וּמְלָכִים מִמֶּךָּ וַיֵּצְאוּ: 7 וְהַקְמֹתִי אֶת־בְּרִיתִי
 בֵּין וּבֵין וּבֵין זָרָעָךְ אֶחָרִיךְ לְדוֹרֹתֶם
 לְבָרִית עָולָם לְהִזְוֹת לְכָל לְאֱלֹהִים וּלְזָרָעָךְ
 אֶחָרִיךְ: 8 וַנִּתְקַיֵּךְ לְכָל וּלְזָרָעָךְ אֶחָרִיךְ אֶת אָרֶץ מְגֻלִּיךְ אֶת בְּלָאָרֶץ בְּנָעַן לְאַחֲזֹת
 עָולָם וְהִיִּתְיַיְּהָ לְהַם לְאֱלֹהִים:
 9 וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֶל־אֶבְרָהָם וְאַתָּה אֶת־
 בְּרִיתִי תִּשְׁמֹר אַתָּה וְזָרָעָךְ אֶחָרִיךְ
 לְדוֹרֹתֶם: 10 זֹאת בְּרִיתִי אֲשֶׁר תִּשְׁמֹר בֵּין
 יְבִינִיכֶם וּבֵין זָרָעָךְ אֶחָרִיךְ הַמּוֹל לְכָם בְּלִזְבָּרָךְ:
 11 וְנִמְלְתָם אֶת בְּשָׂר עַרְלָתֶם וְהִיא
 לְאוֹת בְּרִית בֵּין יְבִינִיכֶם: 12 וּבְנִשְׁמַנְתִּים
 יָמִים יִמּוֹל לְכָם בְּלִזְבָּרָךְ לְדוֹרֹתֶיכֶם יְלִיד
 בֵּית וּמִקְנֶת־בְּסֶף מִבְּלִזְבָּרָךְ אֲשֶׁר לֹא
 מִזְרָעָךְ הוּא: 13 הַמּוֹל | יִמּוֹל יְלִיד בִּיתְךָ
 וּמִקְנֶת בְּסֶף וְהִיא בְּרִיתִי בְּבָשָׂרְכֶם
 לְבָרִית עָולָם: 14 וּעֶרֶל | זָבֵר אֲשֶׁר לֹא־
 יִמּוֹל אֶת־בְּשָׂר עַרְלָתוֹ וּנְכִרְתָּה הַנֶּפֶשׁ
 הַהּוּא מְעִמָּה אֶת־בְּרִיתִי הַפָּרָךְ: ס

7–10. Five times in this passage, God refers to the covenant's other party as “you and your descendants” (literally “seed”); this indicates that membership in the covenant is not limited to males, although every male is to bear circumcision as a mark of the covenant. This covenant is with Abraham and Sarah's offspring regardless of gender. Likewise the entire Israelite people is a party to the Covenant at Sinai, where Shabbat—not circumcision—is the covenantal ot (sign or mark), a sign that explicitly applies to all members of the community (Exodus 31:12–17).

11. “the flesh of your foreskin.” That the key ritual for inclusion involves the male procreative organ reflects the male-oriented bent of the material and the worldview behind it. (See also Contemporary Reflection, p. 80.)

12. “slave.” As in v. 27, circumcision marks a man as being inside the group, which includes slaves. (On slavery in Israelite culture, see at Exodus 21:1–11 and Leviticus 25:39–46.)

14. cut off. See at Leviticus 7:20.

people. Heb. ammim. On the gender-inclusive sense of this term, see at Genesis 25:8.

¹⁵God then said to Abraham, “Sarah your wife—call her Sarah no more, for her name is [now] Sarah. ¹⁶I will bless her and, too, I will give you a son through her; I will bless her and she shall become nations; rulers of peoples shall come from her.”

¹⁷Abraham fell flat on his face and laughed, thinking: “Can a child be born to a man of 100? Can 90-year-old Sarah bear a child?” ¹⁸Abraham then said to God: If only You would let Ishmael live [happily] before You! ¹⁹But God said, “Nonetheless, your wife Sarah shall bear you a son, whom you shall call Isaac, and I will establish My covenant with him and his descendants after him as an everlasting covenant. ²⁰As for Ishmael, I have heard you. See, I have blessed him and made him fruitful and made him exceedingly numerous—he will father twelve princes; I will make him into a great nation. ²¹But it is with Isaac, whom Sarah will bear for you at this time next year, that I will establish My covenant.” ²²Done speaking with him, God ascended, away from Abraham.

²³Abraham then took Ishmael his son and all his homeborn slaves and those who had been bought,

¹⁵וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֶל־אַבְרָהָם שְׁרֵי אֲשֶׁתֶךָ לְאַתְקֹרֵא אֶת־שְׂמֹחָה שְׁרֵי כִּי שְׁרָה שְׂמֹחָה:
¹⁶וּבְרָכַתִּי אֶתְהָ וְגַם בְּתָתִי מִפְנֵה לְكָ בָּן וּבְרָכַתִּיתִי וְהִתְהַלֵּג לְגּוּיִם מִלְכִי עַמִּים מִפְנֵה יְהִיוּ:

¹⁷וַיַּפְלֵל אַבְרָהָם עַל־פָּנָיו וַיַּצְחַק וַיֹּאמֶר בְּלֹפֶן הַלְּבָן מֵאָה־שָׁנָה יוֹלֵד וְאַס־שְׁרָה הַבְּתִ-תְשִׁיעִים שָׁנָה תַּלְדֵ: ¹⁸וַיֹּאמֶר אַבְרָהָם אֶל־הָאֱלֹהִים לוֹ יְשֻׁמְעָל יְחִינָה לִפְנֵיךְ: ¹⁹וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־לְדִים אֶבְלָ שְׂרָה אֲשֶׁתֶךָ יַלְדַת לְכָ בָּן וְקָרְאתָ אֶת־שְׁמוֹ יְצָחָק וְהַקְמָתִי אֶת־בְּרִיתִי אֵתָנוּ לְבָרִית עֲזָלָם לְזָרוּעָו אַחֲרָיו: ²⁰וְלִשְׁמַעַאל שְׁמַעְתִּיקָה הַנָּהָר וּבְרָכַתִּי אֵתָנוּ וְהַפְּרִירִתִי אֵתָנוּ וְהַרְבִּיתִי אֵתָנוּ בְּמַאֲדָן שְׁנַיִם־עָשָׂר נְשִׁיאָם יוֹלֵיד וּנְתַתִּיו לְגַוִּי גָּדוֹל: ²¹וְאֶת־בְּרִיתִי אֲקִים אֶת־יְצָחָק אֲשֶׁר תַּלְדֵ לְךָ שְׁרָה לְמֹועֵד הַזֶּה בְּשָׁנָה הַאַחֲרָתָה: ²²וַיַּכְלֵל לְדִבֶּר אֵתָנוּ וַיַּעֲלֵ אֲלֹהִים מַעַל אַבְרָהָם:
²³וַיַּקְרַח אַבְרָהָם אֶת־שְׁמַעַאל בָּנוֹ וְאֵת בְּלִילִיקִי בֵּיתוֹ וְאֵת בְּלִמְקָנָת בְּסַפּוֹ בָּלָ

REITERATION OF PROMISES OF A CHILD BY SARAH (17:15–22)

God's power over life is emphasized by the divine capacity to allow a ninety-year-old woman to bear a child. God's blessing of Sarah parallels that of Abraham, since both will be parents of many significant descendants. However, there are two striking differences. First, the promise is addressed directly to Abraham and not to Sarah. Second, only Sarah's son is the legitimate heir of the covenant, not any of Abraham's other sons. (See 25:1–5 for Abraham's additional sons.)

15. “Sarah.” Sarai too receives a name change that marks an alteration in status. She is included in the covenant through her capacity to procreate.

16. “I will bless her.” The blessing of Sarah is repeated twice in this verse. Like Abraham, she will be the founder of many nations and kings.

17. Like Abraham here, Sarah will laugh when she receives the promise of a son (see 18:12).

18. Abraham seems content with his son Ishmael as heir. It is God who insists that only Sarah's child will become the vehicle for God's covenant.

19, 22. The repetition of Sarah's unique role in both of these verses leaves no doubt that she is necessary for the covenant and its blessings. [In other words, the Torah conceives of the Israelite lineage not only in male terms. On women and lineage, see at 10:1 and the introduction to 22:20–24. —Ed.]

every male among Abraham's slaves, and on that very day Abraham circumcised the flesh of their foreskins as God had instructed him.²⁴ Abraham was 99 years old when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin,²⁵ and Ishmael his son was 13 years old when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.²⁶ That very day both Abraham and Ishmael his son were circumcised.²⁷ And all the people of his household—the homeborn slaves and those bought from foreigners—were circumcised with him.

זָכֵר בְּאֶנְשִׁי בֵּית אַבְרָהָם וְמֶלֶךְ אֶת-בָּשָׂר
עֲרָלֶתֶם בְּעֹצֶם הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה כַּאֲשֶׁר דִּבֶּר אֱלֹהִים: ²⁴ וְאַבְרָהָם בֶּן-תְּשֻׁעים וְתְשֻׁעָה
שָׁנָה בְּהַמְלֹוּ בָּשָׂר עֲרָלֶתוֹ: ²⁵ וַיֵּשֶׁם עַל
בֶּןּוּ בָּנָן-שְׁלֹשׁ עֲשֶׂרֶת שָׁנָה בְּהַמְלֹוּ אֶת
בָּשָׂר עֲרָלֶתוֹ: ²⁶ בְּעֹצֶם הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה נִמְלֹא
אַבְרָהָם וַיֵּשֶׁם עַל בָּנוֹ: ²⁷ וְכֹל-אֶנְשִׁי בִּיתוֹ
יָלִד בֵּית וּמִקְנֶת-כֹּסֶף מֵאַת בָּנִים נִמְלֹא
אֶתְוֹ: פ

ADOPTION OF THE SIGN OF CIRCUMCISION (17:23–27)

The parashah concludes with membership in the group defined in terms of male circumcision. This should be read in light of the just-stated promise that the covenant will be bestowed only on Sarah's child, which makes it clear how significant she is in God's plan.

—Susan Niditch

Another View

SARAH AND HAGAR neither speak to each other nor refer to each other by name, but their intertwined lives reflect both the systemic abuse women face and the combination of personal struggle and divine aid required to survive.

So that “it may go well for” him in Egypt, Abram asks Sarai to say she is his sister, and so the wife is taken into Pharaoh’s house (Genesis 12). So that she may “have a son [or: child] through her” (16:2), Sarai places Hagar in Abram’s bed. What the patriarch does to his wife, so the mistress does to her slave.

Like Sarai, the Egyptian Hagar—whose name echoes the word ger (“stranger”)—is taken from her home to Canaan. This cycle of displacement and enslavement will continue: Hagar’s descendants (the Ishmaelites) will sell Joseph into Egyptian slavery (37:27–28), and Hagar’s people (the Egyptians) will “afflict” Sarah’s descendants (Exodus 1:11–12) as Sarah “afflicted” Hagar (Genesis 16:6).

In Canaan, the women become rivals rather than companions. Rather than be “built up” through Hagar (see at 16:2), the post-menopausal Sarai “became light” (16:4) in the slave’s eyes; Hagar grows weightier—both physically through pregnancy and emotionally as she recognizes her opportunity for advancement in Abram’s household.

Abused by Sarai and ignored by Abram, Hagar flees to the wilderness. There an angel attends not to the Hebrew patriarch, but to the Egyptian slave: although sent back to her mistress, Hagar goes with the knowledge that “הָמָר has heard (shama)” her affliction (16:11).

Similarly, Sarai herself—a foreign female trapped (enslaved?) in Pharaoh’s house—receives divine aid. Her parallels to Hagar suggest that God acts not simply “because of Sarai” but specifically “upon Sarai’s word” (al d’var Sarai, 12:17). Her crying out when

In Canaan, the women become rivals rather than companions.

Abram fails to act—for it is unclear how, or even if, Abram would extricate his wife—is what prompts God to send the plague (another Exodus foreshadowing) upon Pharaoh.

We later learn that the sons of Sarai and Hagar, although destined to be at odds (16:12), unite to bury their father (25:9): the cycle of abuse can be broken if children refuse to continue the system of abuse that entrapped their parents.

—Amy-Jill Levine

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

“I will make your name great” (12:2). Some midrashim describe the matriarchs as equal partners in God’s covenant with Israel. Midrash B’reishit Rabbah 39.11 reports that “Abraham’s coinage was widely distributed.... And what was on his coinage?

An old man and an old woman (Abraham and Sarah) on one side, and a young man and a young woman (Isaac and Rebekah) on the other.” This midrash also explained the repeated use of the words for “greatness” and “blessing”: “greatness” refers to the patriarchs and “blessing” to the matriarchs.

LECH L'CHA

and the people [nefesh] they had acquired [asu, literally “made”] in Haran (12:5). According to B'reishit Rabbah 39.14, Sarah was an active agent of God's work in the world even when she and Abraham were still in Haran. Commenting on the literal sense, Rabbi Eleazar said in the name of Rabbi Yosi ben Zimra: “If all the inhabitants of the world got together to create [a living being], they would be unable to animate even a mosquito, but the Torah says the people they had made! These are the proselytes they converted.” [The Midrash then asks:] If the verse refers to conversion, why does it employ the verb “made”? To teach you that when a person converts another, it is as if the one created the other. [The Midrash then points out a problem:] It should say, he had made—why does it say, they had made? Rav Huna said: “Abraham converted men and Sarah converted women.”

וְהַיָּה then struck Pharaoh and his household with severe afflictions because of Sarai, Abram's wife (12:17). B'reishit Rabbah 41.2 imagines that when Sarai was trapped in Pharaoh's house, she prostrated herself “and said, ‘Ruler of the Universe, Abram left [Haran] on the strength of promises, and I left on the strength of my faith. Now, Abram is outside this prison and I am inside!’ The blessed Holy One said, ‘All that I do, I do for you.’” This midrash suggests that Sarai's belief that she would share in Abram's blessings was called into question when she was trapped in Pharaoh's house while Abram walked free; however, she is reassured that it is precisely because of Sarai, Abram's wife, that Pharaoh is punished. Even more remarkably, Sarai reminds God that her willingness to leave Haran for an unknown destination is more praiseworthy than Abram's precisely because God has promised her nothing. Sarai serves here as a paradigm of a faithful follower of God, one who responds to God's call without the promise of reward.

Now Abram's wife Sarai, who had not borne him a child, had an Egyptian slave named Hagar (16:1). The Rabbis gave Hagar an exalted lineage, identifying her as the daughter of Pharaoh. This tradition underscores Sarai's piety since it claims that when Pharaoh sees the wonders performed on her behalf, he exclaims, “Better my daughter be a servant in this household than mistress in another”; and later on, Sarai gives Hagar to Abram as a second wife, not as a concubine (B'reishit Rabbah 45.1). She also encourages Hagar to have sexual relations with Abram by emphasizing her husband's holiness (B'reishit Rabbah 45.3). According to B'reishit Rabbah 45.2, Sarai's decision that Abram should take Hagar as a wife is seen as an instance of her prophetic powers.

Still, the Rabbis are troubled by both Hagar's and Sarah's behavior. B'reishit Rabbah 45.4 relates that once Hagar became pregnant, she told other women that Sarah was clearly not the righteous woman she

The blessed Holy One said to Sarai, “All that I do, I do for you.”

pretended to be, as evidenced by her infertility. Sarah, in turn, is criticized for harassing Hagar and for forcing Abram to mediate between his wife and the mother of his unborn child (B'reishit Rabbah 45.5–6). While Hagar is criticized for treating her mistress disrespectfully, she is also worthy of divine protection. Five of God's messengers appear to Hagar as she flees Sarah's anger (B'reishit Rabbah 45.7). In naming God as the One who looks upon me (16:13), Hagar recognizes God as the One who sees the pain of the injured.

“Sarai your wife—call her Sarai no more, for her name is [now] Sarah” (17:15). B'reishit Rabbah 47.1 argues that Abram and Sarah's relationship was unique. Rabbi Aha claims, “Abraham was crowned by Sarah rather than the reverse.... In most marriages, the husband commands, but in this case, God tells Abraham to obey all of Sarah's directives.” At the age of ninety, Sarah is blessed with fertility—and, according to one tradition, God restored her youthful appearance (B'reishit Rabbah 47.2).

—Dvora E. Weisberg

Contemporary Reflection

Is SARAH PART OF the b'rit (the covenant) that God establishes with Abraham? While our impulse might well be: “How can you ask such a question? Of course Sarah was part of the covenant,” the details of the text force the question upon us. From the opening words calling Abraham to leave his homeland, and throughout this parashah, God speaks directly with Abraham, not with Sarah. Most dramatically, the sign of the b'rit in Genesis 17 is circumcision, clearly a male-only ritual.

One could argue that this ritual established a covenant only between God and Abraham, and Abraham's male descendants, and that women stood outside this religious cult altogether. Perhaps Sarah and the other matriarchs had their own religious practices and traditions, their own way of relating to God. Or, perhaps, they were passive members of this covenant between God and the men, valued as child-bearers, but otherwise on the periphery.

Let us consider another way to read the text. The critical element of the b'rit is the promise that Abraham will be fruitful and become the father of nations. Women's role as childbearers is therefore not ancillary but central to meaning of the covenant. And, while God does not address Sarah directly in Genesis 17, God refers to her and changes Sarah's name just like Abraham's—with the addition of the letter heh and with a parallel explanation: “she shall give rise to nations; rulers of peoples shall issue from her” (17:16).

Even when Abraham doubts Sarah's ability to bear children and suggests that God's covenant continue through Ishmael, God reassures him that the covenant will pass through Sarah's son, Isaac. Thus, God makes it clear that not all of Abraham's descendants are part of this covenant, only the ones of Sarah. This underscores Sarah's crucial role; it makes Sarah and Abraham, physically speaking, equal partners in the covenant.

In a sense, the greatest “sign” of this covenant is the fulfillment of God's promise that Sarah will bear a child. Sarah's pregnancy and Isaac's birth are tangible proof that God fulfills promises—and will similarly fulfill the other promises. Perhaps women after Sarah, as the ones bearing life, carry on the covenant between God and Abraham and Sarah's descendants in the most basic, physical way. Maybe circumcision is a male ritual to include men in a physical way in the covenant that women make real in their flesh when they bear the next generation.

This view has its own problems. Women of every nation bear children; how can childbearing be an essential characteristic or sign of a particular covenant?

Was Sarah part of the covenant?

And what about women who will not bear children? Are they excluded from the covenant?

We need to look further. Scholars such as Savina Teubal argue that the world described in the Torah was preceded by a matriarchal system in which women held significant power, perhaps as priestesses. The decisive role of the matriarchs in determining the transmission of this male covenant (through Isaac and later Jacob) might be a trace from a time of greater female power (Sarah the Priestess: The First Matriarch of Genesis, 1984). Such intriguing possibilities open up different ways of understanding the Torah and our earliest history.

But regardless of its origins, Jews today understand the b'rit to include boys and girls, men and women. Numerous rituals have evolved to welcome baby girls into the covenant. Today, many Jews would not consider not having a b'rit bat ritual to welcome their daughter into the covenant. In some communities, a particular ritual provides the norm. In others, parents decide on the ritual, often together with the rabbi.

LECH L'CHA

One covenant ceremony for girls is a simple foot-washing ritual often referred to as B'rit R'chitzah (the Covenant of Washing) or B'rit N'tilat Raglayim (the Covenant of Washing Feet). This ritual was first imagined into being by a small group of female rabbis and rabbinical students I participated in, at a retreat in Princeton in 1981. Eventually, this group crafted a ritual that continues to be used by individuals and communities in the United States, Israel, and other countries.

This idea—of washing a baby girl's feet to welcome her into the covenant between the Jewish people and God—grew out of our reading of Genesis 17–18. Immediately after the covenant in Genesis 17, when Abraham is circumcised, Abraham invites three visitors passing by for a meal (18:1–15). He washes their feet, a sign of welcome in his own day. Abraham's guests, who prove to be God's messengers, announce the future birth of Isaac.

Abraham's act of washing his guests' feet, as a sign of welcome, therefore, is closely associated with the original establishment of the b'rit in Genesis 17. Washing the baby's feet allows us to introduce water into the ritual, and to make the association with Miriam's Well, mikveh (ritual bath), and the healing, nurturing power of its mayim chayim (fresh water, literally “living waters”). The ritual includes readings and music that bring out these motifs and involves the parents as well. Usually the formal naming of the baby follows, with blessings over wine, as at a male circumcision. This ritual, simple and gentle, lends itself to individual adaptation and creativity (see “The Covenant of Washing: A Ceremony to Welcome Baby Girls Into the Covenant of Israel,” Menorah, IV/3–4, May 1983).

Was Sarah part of the covenant? For centuries, Jews have looked to Sarah as the first of our foremothers. Women's tekhines (petitionary prayers) have called upon the God of Sarah, and pleaded in Sarah's name on women's behalf. As the covenant continues to be fulfilled by the commitment of every new generation of Jews, the impassioned voices of Jewish women bring forth Sarah's voice in our own time, with new clarity. Today we can celebrate a rediscovered Sarah as the mother of the covenant we the Jewish people share with God.

Even if b'rit bat rituals have not always been part of Jewish tradition, they are so today. Mothers who were welcomed into the covenant with such ceremonies now perform these same rituals with their own babies. Generations from now, Jews may be surprised to learn that baby girls were not always welcomed into the covenant with a ritual b'rit bat. As contemporary men and women today, we can look forward to seeing such rituals flourish and evolve in the years ahead.

—Ruth H. Sohn

Voices

L'chi Lach

Debbie Friedman

Genesis 12:1

L'chi lach to a land that I will show you
Lech l'cha to a place you do not know
L'chi lach on your journey I will bless you
And you shall be a blessing
You shall be a blessing l'chi lach

L'chi lach and I shall make your name great Lech l'cha and all shall praise your name
L'chi lach to the place that I will show you L'simchat chayim l'chi lach

NOTES

L'chi lach. “Go forth” or “go forth to yourself,” in a feminine address. These are the words of the male lover to the female lover in Song of Songs 2:10 and 13.

Lech l'cha. “Go forth” or “go forth for yourself,” in a masculine address. These are God’s first words to Abram (Genesis 12:1).

Lech L'cha

Andrea L. Weiss

Genesis 12:1

Go forth on a journey.

Go by yourself:
Standing at a crossroads
You venture from the known to the unknown.
Some journeys must be made alone.

Go to yourself:
Spiral inward and unwrap your past
And your potential.
Remember that the soul which you have made
Is unique and holy.

Go for yourself:
Smell the fragrance
Which spreads across the land
As you roam and wander.
Refresh yourself
Under the tree which grows by a spring
At the side of the road.
Make your name great and Make your life a blessing.

LECH L'CHA

Sarai

Sherry Blumberg

Genesis 12:5

Leave my home?
My father, my mother?
Go with him
To this place unknown?

Follow this man
Who will cause me tears
Who may bring me laughter
Who says it's God's plan

So God, speak to me
That I may hear
Not just to him.
This is my plea!

My Freedom

Else Lasker-Schüler (transl. Janine Canan)

Genesis 16

No one shall rob me of my freedom.

If I die somewhere along the way,
you will come, dear Mother, and lift me on your wing to Heaven.

I know you were touched by my lonely wandering,

the playful tick-tock of my childlike heart.

At the Crossroads

Hannah Senesh (transl. Ziva Shapiro)

Genesis 12:1-5

A voice called. I went.
I went, for it called.
I went, lest I fall.

At the crossroads
I blocked both ears with white frost
And cried
For what I had lost.

Fleeing

Nelly Sachs (transl. Ruth and Matthew Mead)

Genesis 16

Fleeing,
what a reception on the way—

Wrapped in the wind's shawl feet in the prayer of sand which can never say amen compelled from fin to wing and further—

The sick butterfly will soon learn again of the sea—
This stone with the fly's inscription gave itself into my hand—

I hold instead of a homeland the metamorphoses of the world—

Hagar

Yocheved Bat-Miriam (transl. Zvi Jagendorf)

Genesis 16

Hanging her corals on the night she leaves silent, possessing nothing.
A moon dives, a splash extinguished in a wall of water.

Alone, just herself, the path blown clean with white godhead twists like a scrawled tattoo trailing away from child and isolation.

—I won't come back, my country, like Sphinx at the sun's door
I'll stay here to face the fate and mystery of the desert land.

Branches rustle in imagined trees,
absent, a well bubbles, their mind-bound tranquility seeks shelter in the moist shade of my eye, and for him who stayed behind who strayed and crossed the line of a single love starred with silence, parting and light.

With me, with me from far away with myself bereft but free
I will be cloaked in make believe in the drunken error of fantasy.

Wanderer, pursued by restlessness, in love with impossible splendor, he will gather us up forcefully to realize the kingdom of his promised dream.

Stretch out the bow my son, let the echo speak to the shaft,
so a quavering sound of welcome may crown my diminishing path.

"And These Are Hagar's Poems to This Very Day"

Anda Pinkerfeld-Amir (transl. Wendy Zierler)

Genesis 16

There in your tent, carpets are spread out, caressed by the palms of your feet.
Every cord and thread, I wove myself, every blossom raised from the mass of threads—
my song of fingers for you.
Every flower, made magic by my love to gladden your soul.

And how can these carpets soften for you, how can your eyes drink the bounty of their colors?

How is it that the petals don't burst into blazing flame,
consuming your legs?
How can you walk complacently on the blessing of my hands, sent to you in my carpet,
your tranquility unconsumed by the wailing of leaves,
weeping over my disgrace?

וַיְרָא ◆ Vayeira

GENESIS 18:1–22:24

Between Laughter and Tears

PARASHAT VAYEIRA (“[he] appeared”) describes several encounters between God and members of Abraham’s household. In one sense, this parashah recounts the birth and survival of the next generation, Isaac and Rebekah: it begins with the announcement of Sarah’s forthcoming pregnancy and Isaac’s forthcoming birth (Genesis 18), continues with the challenges that stand in the way of the future, and concludes with Rebekah, Isaac’s future wife (22:20–24).

Questions of identity and self-definition continue, as covenantal blessings demarcate the distinction between Sarah and Isaac on the one hand, and Hagar and Ishmael on the other. A subtext concerns Abraham’s role in fulfilling God’s plan. But the individual episodes do more than chart the hazards and successes that follow God’s promises of progeny and land (see the previous parashah). Rather, they vividly depict the challenges, anguish, and joy that human beings experience as they create families and discover the complexities of multiple commitments.

The most famous of these episodes is the “Binding of Isaac,” where Abraham is asked to sacrifice his beloved son (Genesis 22). This story has its counterpart in that of a mother with an imperiled child: the heart-wrenching story of Hagar and Ishmael in the wilderness (Genesis 21), in which Hagar despairs of her son’s survival. Women are prominent throughout. At long last Sarah learns that she shall have a son (Genesis 18), and finally becomes a mother (Genesis 21). Tension between two mothers—Sarah and Hagar—each one seeking the welfare of her child, frames the story of Lot’s daughters, who act together (Genesis 19). These tales offer glimpses into women’s world and presumed concerns. The closing report about Rebekah’s birth far from the land of Canaan sets the stage for when she becomes Isaac’s wife (in the next parashah).

These tales offer glimpses into women’s world and presumed concerns.

—Tammi J. Schneider

Outline—

I. SARAH BECOMES A MOTHER

Announcement of Isaac's Birth; Threats to Conception, Birth, and Survival (18:1–21:7)

- A. Divine messengers visit Abraham and Sarah, announcing that Sarah will become a mother (18:1–33)
- B. Divine messengers visit Sodom and Lot, and Lot's daughters become mothers of nations (19:1–38)
- C. Abraham and Sarah “visit” Abimelech (20:1–18)
- D. Sarah becomes a mother (21:1–7)

II. FIRST THREAT TO ISAAC

Two Mothers Clash Protecting Their Sons (21:8–21)

- A. Sarah seeks to protect Isaac: the expulsion of Hagar and Ishmael (vv. 8–13)
- B. The rescue of Hagar and Ishmael in the wilderness (vv. 14–21)

III. SECOND THREAT TO ISAAC

Abraham's “Binding of Isaac,” or “The Akedah” (21:22–22:19)

- A. Abraham settles in Beersheba (21:22–34)
- B. Abraham's “test”: the binding of Isaac (22:1–19)

IV. PREPARATION FOR THE FUTURE

Rebekah's Birth (22:20–24)

18:1

יְהוָה appeared to him by the oaks of Mamre as he was sitting at the entrance of the tent at about the hottest time of the day.² Looking up, he saw: lo—three men standing opposite him! Seeing [them], he ran from the entrance of the tent to meet them, and, bowing down to the ground,³ he said, “My lords, if I have found favor in your sight, please do not pass your servant by.⁴ Let a little water be brought; then wash your feet and recline under a tree,⁵ and let me bring a bit of bread and you can restore yourselves. Then you can go on—now that you have come across your servant.” And they responded: “Very well, do as you propose.”

⁶ Abraham then hurried toward the tent, to Sarah, and said, “Hurry, knead three measures of

ים וירא אליו יהוה באלני ממרא והוא ישב פתחה האهل בחום היום: ² ווישא עיניו וירא והנה שלשה אנשים נצבים עליו וירא וירץ לקראתם מפתח האهل וישתחו הארץ: ³ ויאמר אדני אם־נא מצאתי חן בעיניך אל־נא תעבור מעל עברך: ⁴ יקח־נא מעתומים ורוחזו רגילים והשענו תחת העץ: ⁵ ואקחה פתח־כם וסעדו לבכם אחר תעבור כי־על־פניכם עברתם על עבדכם ויאמרו כן תעשה באשר דברת: ⁶ וימחר אברם האלה אל־שרה ויאמר מהרי שלש סאים קמח סלת לושי ועשוי

Sarah Becomes a Mother

ANNOUNCEMENT OF ISAAC'S BIRTH; THREATS TO CONCEPTION, BIRTH, AND SURVIVAL (18:1–21:7)

Isaac's future was announced in Genesis 17 but only in this next section does Sarah learn that conception will soon occur (18:10).

DIVINE MESSENGERS VISIT ABRAHAM AND SARAH, ANNOUNCING THAT SARAH WILL BECOME A MOTHER (18:1–33)

Because most of the angels' visit concerns the birth of Isaac—something Abraham knows about but Sarah does not—informing Sarah is likely the reason for the angels' appearance.

1. Iyohoh appeared to him. The text does not explicitly connect the events of this passage to the previous one where God tells Abraham that he and Sarah will have a child together (17:16), and where Abraham and his household are circumcised (17:23).

bim. [That is, Abraham; see 17:26. —Ed.]

2. three men. The reader knows that these are supernatural messengers. It is unclear whether Abraham recognizes this.

6. Abraham then hurried . . . to Sarah, and said, “Hurry, . . .” Sarah is 90 years old. It is the hottest part of the day and she is expected to do the baking. Is this because Abraham recognizes the

► The theme is threatened survival; and women ensure the safety of the next generation.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 105

► The Torah provides us with opportunities to look honestly at ourselves.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 107

► . . . the only woman to whom God spoke directly, on account of her righteousness.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 105

► But it was right that she / looked back. Not to be / curious . . .

VOICES ► 109

wheat flour and bake some [bread-]cakes!” ⁷Abraham then ran to the herd and took a young calf, tender and sound, and gave it to the servant lad, who quickly prepared it. ⁸He took sour milk and [sweet] milk and the calf he had prepared and set [it all] before them; and as he stood over them under the tree, they ate.

⁹They then said to him, “Where is your wife Sarah?” “There, in the tent,” he replied. ¹⁰One of them then said, “Rest assured that I will return to you at this time next year, and your wife Sarah shall have a son.”

Now Sarah was listening at the entrance of the tent, behind him. ¹¹Abraham and Sarah were old, well advanced in years; the way of women had ceased for Sarah—¹²so Sarah laughed inwardly, thinking: “Now that I am withered, will I have pleasure, with my lord so old!” ¹³But יהוה said to

עֲגֹת: ⁷ וְאֶל־הַבָּקָר רֵץ אֶבְרָהָם וַיַּקְרֵב
בָּקָר כֶּבֶשׂ וְטוֹב וַיִּתְן אֶל־הַנָּעֶר וַיִּמְהַר־
לְעֹשֹׂת אֲתֹוֹ: ⁸ וַיַּקְרֵב חַמְאָה וְחַלְבָּן
הַבָּקָר אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה וַיִּתְן לְפָנֵיכֶם וְהַוְעֵדָה
עַלְיהֶם תִּתְחַת הָעֵץ וַיַּאֲכְלוּ
⁹ וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֲלֵיכֶם אֵיכָה שָׁרָה אֲשֶׁר וַיֹּאמֶר הַנָּה בְּאַחֲלָה: ¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר שׂוֹב אֲשֶׁר
בְּעֵת חִיָּה וְהַנָּהָבֵן לְשָׁרָה אֲשֶׁר
וְשָׁרָה שְׁמֻעָת פִּתְחָה דְּאַחֲלָה וְהַוְא אַחֲרֵיו:
¹¹ וְאֶבְרָהָם וְשָׁרָה זְקִנִּים בְּאַיִם בְּיָמָיו
חַלְלָה לְהִיוֹת לְשָׁרָה אָרֶח בְּנָשִׁים:
¹² וַתְּצַחַק שָׁרָה בְּקָרְבָּה לְאָמָר אַחֲרֵי
בָּלְתִּי הִתְהַלֵּיל עַדְנָה וְאַדְנִי זָקָן: ¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר importance of these visitors and Sarah’s involvement raises the level of the meal? (On women as bakers, see at Exodus 16:3 and Leviticus 26:26.)

9–10. “Where is your wife Sarah?” “There, in the tent.” The visitor knows of Abraham’s wife Sarah, asks where she is, and continues speaking in her hearing.

10. “at this time next year...your wife Sarah shall have a son.” Since Abraham already knows that Sarah will have a son (17:16–19), the announcement seems to be primarily for her benefit.

Sarah was listening. For the first time, Sarah learns about her forthcoming pregnancy. Some use this verse to criticize Sarah for listening to other people’s conversations. But the speaker has asked specifically about Sarah, speaks knowing her proximity, and has information specifically designated for her. Clearly she is his audience.

11. the way of women had ceased for Sarah. Sarah no longer menstruates, also meaning that she can no longer conceive. The reference highlights for the reader why she will be surprised by what she hears. [Rachel also refers to menstruation as “the way of women” (Genesis 31:35). See at Leviticus 15:19–24 for details about menstruation. —Ed.]

12. Sarah laughed inwardly. Sarah, alone in the tent, responds with no outward sign—as opposed to Abraham, who fell on his face, laughing aloud, while he was in conversation with the Deity (17:17).

“pleasure.” The word ednah is related to the word “Eden” (as in the Garden of Eden), alluding to a sense of “delight,” with a sexual connotation. Sarah is excited by the thought of an impending sexual encounter.

“with my lord so old!” Sarah’s reaction reflects her delighted surprise in her husband’s abilities. God suggests a different reason (v. 13). This implies that Abraham and Sarah had stopped sexual relations, highlighting why the visitors inform her that the couple should renew them. Sarah does not doubt the Deity’s abilities, but rather Abraham’s.

Abraham, “Why is Sarah laughing so, thinking: ‘Am I really going to bear a child, when I have grown so old?’”¹⁴ Is any wonder too difficult for יהוה? At this fixed time, next year, I will return to you, and Sarah shall have a son.”¹⁵ Sarah, then denied it, for she was afraid, and said, “I did not laugh”; but [God] said, “Ah, but you did laugh!”

¹⁶The men went up from there and gazed down upon Sodom, Abraham going along with them to send them off.¹⁷ יהוה then thought: “Should I hide from Abraham what I am doing?¹⁸ Yet Abraham is certain to become a great and populous nation, and through him all the nations of the earth shall be blessed!¹⁹ For I have selected him, so that he may teach his children and those who come after him to יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לִפְנֵה וְאַחֲרֵה שָׂרָה

לְאֹמֶר הַאֲפִךְ אָמַנָּם אָלֵד וְאַנְּנִי זָקִינְתִּי:
¹⁴ הַיְפֵלָא מִיהוָה דָּבָר לְמוֹעֵד אֲשֶׁר אָלֵיךְ
בְּעֵת חִיָּה וְלִשְׁרָה בָּן: ¹⁵ וְתַכְּחַשׁ שָׂרָה
לְאֹמֶר לֹא צְחַקְתִּי בַּי יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר לֹא
בַּי צְחַקְתִּי:

¹⁶ וַיָּקְמוּ מִשְׁמֶת הָאֲנָשִׁים וַיִּשְׁקְפוּ עַל-פָּנֵי
סָדָם וְאַבָּרָהָם הַלְּבָרָעַ עַפְמָם לְשִׁלְחוֹם:
¹⁷ וַיֹּהֵה אָמֶר הַמִּבְשָׁה אָנָּי מִאֲבָרָהָם
אֲשֶׁר אַנְּנִי עָשָׂה: ¹⁸ וְאַבָּרָהָם הִיוֹ יְהוָה לְגַוֵּי
גָּדוֹל וְעָצָום וּבְרָכוֹבוֹ בְּלַ גּוֹיִי הָאָרֶץ:
¹⁹ בַּי יַדְעַתִּיו לְמַעַן אֲשֶׁר יַעֲזֹה אֶת-בְּנֵי
וְאֶת-בִּתְהוֹ אֶחָרוֹ וְשִׁמְרוּ דָּרָךְ יְהוָה

13. “Why is Sarah laughing so?” Some interpreters have concluded, erroneously, that Sarah’s laughter was derisive. When Abraham heard that he would have a child with Sarah, he “fell flat on his face and laughed, thinking: ‘Can a child be born to a man of 100? Can 90-year-old Sarah bear a child?’” (17:17). Thus Sarah is actually now accused of Abraham’s earlier actions. Since Sarah is alone in the tent when she laughs, is the Deity testing Abraham to determine if he will admit his own actions and protect Sarah? | [Tikva Frymer-Kensky, who considers Sarah’s laughter as an expression of doubt, interprets God’s response to Sarah this way: “God ignores Abraham’s laughter but reacts to Sarah’s. After all, Sarah should understand how important she is. . . . Sarah’s importance in God’s scheme means that God will have zero tolerance for skepticism from her” (Women in Scripture, 2000, p. 151). —Ed.]

15. Sarah...was afraid. Whom does Sarah fear? Most interpreters assume that Sarah is afraid of God. I contend that she fears Abraham. Sarah has no reason to fear God—who apparently comes to her rescue (in the house of the pharaoh, 12:10–18), blesses her and promises that she shall have a child (17:15–16), and has now sent messengers to tell her that she shall soon have her desired son. However, she does have reasons for fearing Abraham. He does not seem to object when she is taken to Pharaoh’s palace (12:14–16); he allows Hagar to treat her with disrespect (16:3–4); and—insofar as the reader knows—has not informed her that they will be having a child.

[God] said, “Ah, but you did laugh!” The present translation adds “God” in brackets because the speaker is unnamed. The grammar supports the interpretation that the speaker is not God but Abraham (for details, see Tammi J. Schneider, Sarah: Mother of Nations, 2004, pp. 70–74). Another reason for doubting that God speaks here is that the Deity never speaks with Sarah before or after. And throughout 18:1–14 she is hidden from the visitors’ sight, but not from Abraham’s. Thus it is likely that it is Abraham who speaks these words, even though he has not heard her laugh.

18:16–33. The story of Abraham’s attempted defense of Sodom follows directly the one in which he accuses his wife of his own actions.

keep the way of יְהוָה, doing what is right and just, so that may fulfill for Abraham all that has been promised him.”

²⁰ יְהוָה then said, “The outcry in Sodom and Gomorrah—how great it is; and their crime—how grave it is! ²¹ Let Me go down and determine whether they are wreaking havoc in equal measure to the shrieking that is coming to Me. If not, I will know.”

²² The men now turned away and went toward Sodom, while Abraham remained standing before יְהוָה. ²³ Abraham then came forward and said, “Will You indeed sweep away the innocent along with the wicked? ²⁴ Suppose there are fifty innocent in the city—will You indeed sweep away the place, and not spare it for the sake of the fifty innocent who are in its midst? ²⁵ Far be it from You to do such a thing, killing innocent and wicked alike, so that the innocent and the wicked suffer the same fate. Far be it from You! Must not the Judge of all the earth do justly?” ²⁶ said, “If I find fifty innocent people in Sodom, I will pardon the whole place for their sake.”

²⁷ Again Abraham spoke: “Look now—let me undertake to speak up to my lord, though I am but dust and ashes: ²⁸ What if the fifty innocent are five short; will you destroy the whole city because of five?” [God] answered, “If I find forty-five there, I will not destroy it.”

²⁹ Once more Abraham spoke up: “What if forty are found there?” And [God] answered, “For the sake of the forty, I will not do it.”

³⁰ Then he said, “Do not be angry, my lord, and let me speak: What if thirty are found there?” “If I find thirty there,” said [God], “I will not do it.”

³¹ And Abraham said, “Look now—let me undertake to speak up before my lord: What if twenty are found there?” And [God] said, “For the sake of the twenty, I will not destroy it.”

לעשות צדקה ומשפט למן הביא יהוה
על-אברהם את אשר דבר עליו:
²⁰ ויאמר יהוה ועתק סדם ועمرה כירבה
וחטאתם כי כבדה מאד: ²¹ ארדה-נא
ואראה הצעקהה הבאה אליו עשו כל
ואסילא אדע:
²² ויפנו משם האנשים וילכו סדמה
ואברהם עוזנו עמד לפניו יהוה: ²³ ויגש
אברהם ויאמר האף תספה צדיק עם-רשע: ²⁴ אולי יש חמשים צדיקים בתורה
העיר האף תספה ולא-יתשא למוקום
למן חמשים הצדיקים אשר בקרבה:
²⁵ חלילה לר' מעשה | דבר הזה להמית
צדיק עם-רשע והיה בצדיק ברשע חלילה
לה השפט כל-הארץ לא יעשה משפט:
²⁶ ויאמר יהוה אם-אמצא בסdem חמשים
צדיקים בתורה העיר ונשאתי לכל-המוקום
בעורום:
²⁷ ומן אברהם ויאמר הנה-נא הואלתי
לדבר אל-אנו ואני עפר ואפר: ²⁸ אולי
יחסלון חמשים הצדיקם חמשה התשחית
בחמשה אתה-כל-העיר ויאמר לא אשחית
אם-אמצא שם ארבעים וחמשה:
²⁹ וילסף עוד לדבר אליו ויאמר אולי
ימצאון שם ארבעים ויאמר לא עשה
בעור הארבעים:
³⁰ ויאמר אל-נא יחר לאנו ואברהם אולי
ימצאון שם שלשים ויאמר לא עשה
אם-אמצא שם שלשים:
³¹ ויאמר הנה-נא הואלתי לדבר אל-אדני
אולי ימצאון שם עשרים ויאמר לא
אשחית בעור העשרים:

23. Abraham asks a daring question of God.

³²Then Abraham said, “Let not my lord be angry, and let me speak up one last time: What if ten are found there?” And [God] said, “For the sake of the ten, I will not destroy it.” ³³Then, done speaking to Abraham, יהוה departed; and Abraham returned to his place.

19 That evening, the two [divine] emissaries came to Sodom, where Lot was sitting at the Sodom gate; seeing [them], Lot got up to greet them and, bowing all the way to the ground, ²he said, “Come now, my lords, turn to your servant’s house; stay there overnight and wash your feet; when you get up you can go on your way!” “No,” said they, “we’ll stay the night in the open.” ³He so pressed them, however, that they followed him and entered his house, where he made them a festive meal, baked unleavened bread, and they ate.

⁴They had yet to lie down when the townspeople, the people of Sodom, young and old alike, all the people, from every side, gathered around the house ⁵and called to Lot, saying, “Where are the men who came to you tonight? Bring them out so we can have them.” ⁶Lot went out to them at the entrance and shut the door behind him. ⁷He said, “Please, brothers, do no evil! ⁸Look—I have two daughters who have never been intimate with a

³² וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְחִיר לְאָדָם וְאָדָם בָּרוּךְ אָתָּה הָפֻמְעַם אֲוֹלֵן יְמִצְאֹן שֵׁם עֶשֶׂרֶת וַיֹּאמֶר לְאָדָם אַשְׁחִית בַּעֲבוּר הָעֶשֶׂרֶת: ³³ וַיָּלֹךְ יְהֹוָה בְּאָשֶׁר כֹּלָה לְדִבָּר אֱלֹהִים וְאֶבְרָהָם שֶׁב לִמְקָמוֹ:

יט וַיָּבֹאוּ שְׁנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ סָלְמָה בְּעֶרֶב וּלְוֹט יָשַׁב בַּשְׁעָרֵסְדָּם וַיַּרְא־לְוֹט וַיָּקָם לְקַרְאָתָם וַיִּשְׁתַּחַז אֶפְרַיִם אֶרְצָה: ² וַיֹּאמֶר הַנָּה נָא־אָדָם סָרוּ נָא אַל־בֵּית עֲבָדָכֶם וְלִנְךְ וְרַחֲצָו רְגִלְיכֶם וְהַשְׁבִּמְתָתֶם וְהַלְבִּתָתֶם לְדֶרֶךְכֶם וַיֹּאמְרוּ לֹא כִּי בָּרוּךְ גָּלִין: ³ וַיַּפְצַרְבָּם מִאָד וַיָּסְרוּ אַלְיוֹ וַיָּבֹאוּ אַל־בֵּיתוֹ וַיַּעֲשָׂו לְהָם מִשְׁתָּה וּמִצּוֹת אֲפָה וַיַּאֲכָלוּ:

ט טָרֵם יָשַׁבָּוּ וְאַנְשֵׁי הָעִיר אֲנָשֵׁי סָדָם נִסְבּוּ עַל־הַבִּית מִגְעָר וְעַד־זָקָן בְּלַהֲעֵם מִקְצָה: ⁵ וַיִּקְרָא אַל־לְוֹט וַיֹּאמְרוּ לוּ אַיִה האנָשִׁים אֲשֶׁר־בָּאוּ אֶלְيָךְ הַלִּילָה הַזְׁכִּיאָם אַלְיָנוּ וְנִדְעָה אָתָּם: ⁶ וַיֵּצֵא אֶלְيָם לְוֹט הַפְּתַחַה וְהַקְּלַת סָגָר אַחֲרָיו: ⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר אַל־נָא אֲחִי תָּרֻעוּ: ⁸ הַנָּה־נָא לִי שָׁתִי בְּנֹות אֲשֶׁר לְאִידְעָו אִישׁ אֲזִיאָה־נָא אֶתְחָן:

33. his place. Either his dwelling-place (see v. 16), or his proper place of obeying—rather than debating with—the Deity.

DIVINE MESSENGERS VISIT SODOM AND LOT, AND LOT'S DAUGHTERS BECOME MOTHERS OF NATIONS (19:1–38)

The visit to Sodom is a “test” of sorts (note Genesis 22) to determine the worthiness of the city and of Lot. Sodom has been mentioned several times already, and never positively (Genesis 13–14). Lot and his family are a major focus of this section. Since the parashah concerns establishing the next generation, and Lot is the nephew of Abraham and potential heir, then an evaluation of Lot is critical. [The story of Lot’s daughters and their incestuous intercourse with their father (19:30–38) possibly seeks to account for why Isaac does not marry one of them, who as his nearby cousins would otherwise be prime candidates. —Ed.]

5. “so we can have them.” Literally, “so we can know them,” which carries a sexual connotation (see at 4:1).

8. Lot offers his daughters instead of the men. His effort to protect the visitors reflects his belief that male rape is worse than female rape, even of his own daughters. | Here, angels will save the women; in a similar incident in Judges 19, another woman is not so fortunate when she and her hus-man; let me bring them out for you, and do to them as you please. But do nothing to these men, for they have come under the shelter of my roof.” “But they said, “Get out of the way!” And they said, “This fellow comes here to stay a while, and now he wants to act the judge! Well, we will make it worse for you than for them!” They pressed the man Lot hard as they advanced to break down the door,¹⁰ but the men reached out and pulled Lot toward them into the house and shut the door,¹¹ striking every one of the men, large and small, who were near the entrance of the house, with a blinding light, so that they were unable to find the entrance.

¹²The men said to Lot, “Whoever is still with you here—son-in-law, your sons and daughters, all your property in the city—get them out of here,¹³because we are going to destroy this place; the outcry to יהוה against the people in it is so great, that יהוה has sent us to destroy it.”¹⁴So Lot went out and spoke to his sons-in-law, his daughters’ husbands, saying, “Up! Get out of this place, because יהוה is destroying the city”; but to his sons-in-law he appeared to be joking.

¹⁵Just as dawn was rising the [divine] emissaries rushed Lot, saying, “Up! Take your wife and your two daughters who are here, or you will be caught up in the city’s punishment.”¹⁶As he vacillated, the men, in יהוה’s pity for him, seized his hand, his wife’s, and those of his two daughters, and took them out, setting them down outside the city.

¹⁷Having taken them outside, one said, “Flee for your life! Do not look behind you and do not stand anywhere on the plain; flee to the hills or you

אֲלֵיכֶם וְעַשׂו לְהָן בִּטּוֹב בְּעִינֵיכֶם רַק
לְאָנָשִׁים הָאָלָל אֶל-תַּעֲשׂו דָּבָר כִּי-עַל-כֵּן
בָּאוּ בְּצַל קָרְתִּי: ⁹ וַיֹּאמְרוּ | גַּש-דָּלָא
וַיֹּאמְרוּ הָאָחָד בְּאַלְגָּוּר וַיַּשְׁפַּט שְׁפָטוֹ
עַתָּה נְרֻעַ לְקַמְּהָם וַיַּפְצַרְוּ בְּאִישׁ בְּלוּט
מָאָר וַיַּגְשַׁׁׂו לְשָׁבָר הַקְּלָת: ¹⁰ וַיַּשְׁלַׁחוּ
הָאָנָשִׁים אֶת-יָדָם וַיַּבְאְוּ אֶת-לְלוֹז אֲלֵיכֶם
הַבִּתָּה וְאֶת-הַדָּלָת סְגָרוּ: ¹¹ וְאֶת-הָאָנָשִׁים אֲשֶׁר-פָּתַח הַבַּיִת הַפּוֹ בְּסִנְוָרִים
מִקְטָן וְעַד-גָּדוֹל וַיַּלְאֹו לְמַצָּא הַפְּתַח:
¹² וַיֹּאמְרוּ הָאָנָשִׁים אֶל-לְלוֹז עַד מִילָּקְ פָּה
חַתָּן וּבְנִיאָה וּבְנִתִּיר וְכָל אֲשֶׁר-לָקְ בְּעִיר
הַוֹּצָא מִן-הַמָּקוֹם: ¹³ כִּי-מִשְׁחָתִים אֲנָחָנוּ
אֶת-הַמָּקוֹם הַזֶּה כִּי-גָרְלָה צַעְקָתָם אֶת-פָּנֵי הַדָּהָה וַיַּשְׁלַׁחֲנוּ יְהוָה לְשִׁחְרָתָה: ¹⁴ וַיִּצְאָ
לְלוֹז וַיַּדְבֵּר אֶל-חַתָּנוֹ וְלִקְתֵּי בְּנִתָּיו וַיֹּאמֶר
קוּמוּ צָאוּ מִן-הַמָּקוֹם הַזֶּה כִּי-מִשְׁחָתִ יְהוָה אֶת-הָעִיר וַיַּהַי בְּמַצָּח בְּעִינֵי
חַתָּנוֹ:

¹⁵ וּבְמִן הַשְׁׁחָר עַלְהָה וַיַּאַיצֵּז הַמְּלָאכִים
בְּלֹוט לְאֹמֵר קוֹם קָח אֶת-אַשְׁתָּךְ וְאֶת-
שְׁתִּי בְּנִתִּיךְ הַנִּמְצָאת פָּנִיתְסָפָה בְּעַזְן
הָעִיר: ¹⁶ וַיַּחֲמִידֵהָה וַיִּחְזֹיקֵה הָאָנָשִׁים
בָּיוּ וַיִּדְרֹא-אָשָׁתוֹ וַיַּדְלֵל שְׁתִּי בְּנִתִּיךְ בְּחִמְלָת יְהוָה עַלְיוֹ וַיַּצְאֵהוּ וַיַּנְחֹזֵה מִחוֹזָץ לְעִיר:
¹⁷ וַיַּהַי כִּיהּוּצִיאָם אֶתְם הַחֲזָה וַיֹּאמֶר
הַמְּלָט עַל-נְפָשָׁךְ אֶל-תַּבְּיט אֲחָרְיךָ וְאֶל-תַּעֲמֹד בְּכָל-הַבָּרֶר הַהְרָה הַמְּלָט פָּנִים band visit and she is offered in lieu of him to a mob. She is repeatedly molested by the mob and dies soon after. The incident triggers a civil war in retaliation.

17–23. After the city is destroyed, Lot—as leader of his family—appears overwhelmed by the enormity of the situation and unable to guide and protect his family. This seems to be what leads to his wife’s immobilization and his daughters’ risky actions.

17. “Do not look behind you.” These words are addressed in masculine singular language; it may be construed that they were spoken only to Lot.

will be swept away!" ¹⁸But Lot said to them, "No, please, my lords! ¹⁹Look—your servant has found favor in your sight; the kindness with which you have treated me by keeping me alive has been great—but I cannot flee to the hills; the evil may take hold of me and I shall die. ²⁰Look—yonder town is near enough to escape to, and it is tiny; let me flee there and save my life—it is tiny." ²¹He replied to him, "See, now, I am showing you favor in this matter too, not overthrowing the town you have spoken of. ²²Flee there quickly, for I can do nothing until you get there." (That is why the city is called Zoar.)

²³The sun was rising over the land as Lot was going down to Zoar, ²⁴and rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah brimstone and fire—from heaven—out of the heavens, ²⁵overthrowing these cities and the entire plain, all the cities' inhabitants and what grew in the soil. ²⁶And his wife looked behind him and became a pillar of salt.

²⁷Abraham rose early in the morning and [went] to the place where he had previously stood before ²⁸Iyohoh. ²⁸As he gazed down upon Sodom and Gomorrah and upon the whole face of the plain, lo—fumes were rising from the earth like fumes from a furnace. ²⁹But when God destroyed the cities of the plain, God remembered Abraham and, when overthrowing the cities in which Lot had lived, sent Lot away from the upheaval. ³⁰Together with his two daughters, Lot then went up from Zoar to live in

תפסה: ¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר לֹוט אֱלֹהִים אֶל־נָא אֲדֹנִי:
¹⁹ הַגְּה־נָא מֵצָא עַבְדָּךְ חַן בְּעִינֶיךְ וַתִּגְדַּל
 חַסְדְּךָ אֲשֶׁר עָשִׂית עַמְּדֵי לְהַחֲיוֹת אֶת־
 נְפָשִׁי וְאַנְבֵּי לֹא אָוֶל לְהַמְּלָט דָּרְרָה פָּנָי
 תַּדְּבֻקְנִי הָרָעָה וְמַתָּיו: ²⁰ הַגְּה־נָא הָעִיר
 הַזֹּאת קָרְבָּה לְנוּס שְׁמָה וְהָוָא מַצְעָר
 אַמְלָתָה נָא שְׁמָה הַלָּא מַצְעָר הוּא וְתַחַי
 נְפָשִׁי: ²¹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים גַּהֲנָה נְשָׁאַתִּי פְּנֵיךְ
 גַּם לְדָבָר הַזֶּה לְבָלְתִּי הַפְּנֵי אֶת־הָעִיר
 אֲשֶׁר דִּבְרָתָה: ²² מַהְרָה הַמְּלָט שְׁמָה כִּי לֹא
 אָוֶל לְעַשּׂוֹת דָּבָר עַד־בָּאָה שְׁמָה עַל־פָּנָי
 קָרְאָה שְׁמִי־הָעִיר צֹעַר:
²³ הַשְׁמָשׁ יַצֵּא עַל־הָאָרֶץ וְלֹוט בָּא צָעַרָה:
²⁴ וַיַּהֲיוּ הַמְּטִיר עַל־סְדָם וְעַל־עַמְרָה
 גְּפֻרִית וְאַשׁ מֵאַת יְהוָה מִן־הַשָּׁמָיִם:
²⁵ וַיַּהֲפַךְ אֶת־הָעִירִים הָאָל וְאֶת בֶּל־הַכְּבָר
 וְאֶת בְּלִיְשָׁבִי הָעָרִים וְצַמְחָה הָאָדָמָה:
²⁶ וַתִּתְבַּט אֲשֶׁר־הוּא מַאֲחָרוֹ וְתַהַי נְצִיב מַלְחָח:
²⁷ וַיַּשְׁכַּם אַבְרָהָם בַּבְּקָר אֶל־הַמִּקְדָּשׁ
 אֲשֶׁר־עָמַד שֶׁם אֶת־פָּנָי יְהוָה: ²⁸ וַיַּשְׁקַט
 עַל־פָּנָי סְדָם וְעַמְרָה וְעַל בֶּל־פָּנָי אָרֶץ
 הַכְּבָר וַיַּרְא וְהַנָּהָע עַל־הָקִיטָּר הָאָרֶץ בְּקִיטָּר
 הַכְּבָשָׁן: ²⁹ וַיַּהַי בְּשַׁחַת אֱלֹהִים אֶת־עַרִי
 הַכְּבָר וַיַּזְכֵּר אֱלֹהִים אֶת־אַבְרָהָם וַיַּשְׁלַח
 אֶת־לֹוט מִתְזֹעַה תְּחִפָּה בְּחִפָּה אֶת־דָּעָרִים
 אֲשֶׁר־יִשְׁבֶּב בָּהּן לֹוט: ³⁰ וַיַּעַל לֹוט מַצְעָר

26. his wife looked behind him. This is precisely what Lot is warned against. Nowhere does the text indicate that he passes this information to his wife and daughters. The question remains: Does Lot's wife not know about the warning—or does she look back in spite of it?

and became a pillar of salt. She is reluctant to ignore what happens to those she leaves behind, and this concern costs her life.

30–38. Lot's daughters become mothers of nations that—through him—are related to the line of Abraham. Fearful that humankind has been annihilated, the daughters (the same ones whom Lot offered to the town's men earlier?) take drastic measures to perpetuate life. Like Tamar (see Genesis 38), they break taboos. Their sons produce the nations Moab and Ammon, Israel's eastern neighbors.

the hill country, for he was afraid to live in Zoar; so he lived in a cave, he and his two daughters.

³¹The first-born now said to the younger, “Our father is old, and there is no man left on earth to couple with us in the way of all the earth. ³²Let us give our father wine to drink and lie with him, and give life to offspring through our father.” ³³So that night they gave their father wine to drink; the first-born then went and lay with her father, who had no awareness of her lying down and getting up.

³⁴On the morrow the first-born said to the younger, “Seeing that last night I lay with my father, let us give him wine to drink tonight as well; then you go and lie with him, so that we can give life to offspring through our father.” ³⁵So that night too they gave their father wine to drink; the younger got up and lay with him, and he had no awareness of her lying down and getting up.

³⁶Lot’s two daughters became pregnant through their father. ³⁷The first-born bore a son and named him Moab; he is the ancestor of the present-day Moabites. ³⁸The younger, too, bore a son and named him Ben-ammi; he is the ancestor of the present-day Ammonites.

31. The daughters are living in a cave and think they are the only ones on earth. It also means they do not know their great-uncle Abraham’s family is nearby. The motive for what follows: ensure that life on earth continues.

33–34. lay with her father. Oddly, incest laws in Leviticus and Deuteronomy do not explicitly prohibit sexual relations between a father and his daughter (see at Leviticus 18:6–24). Technically speaking, the daughters break no biblical law. Nonetheless, the daughters do seem to break a taboo (which explains why they first get their father drunk), yet the text does not condemn their actions.

“so that we can give life to offspring through our father.” The motive of the older daughter is clear:

וַיֵּשֶׁב בְּהָר וִשְׁתִּי בָּנָתָיו עַמּוֹ כִּי יִרְאָ לְשִׁבְתָּה
בָּצֹעַר וַיֵּשֶׁב בְּמִעַרָּה הַוָּא וִשְׁתִּי בָּנָתָיו:
³¹ וַיְתַאמֵּר הַבְּכִירָה אֲלֵהֶצְעִירָה אֲבִינוּ זָקָן
וְאִישׁ אֵין בָּאָרֶץ לְבוֹא עַלְיָנוּ כְּדָרָה
בְּלִדְחָרָץ: ³² לְבָה נִשְׁקָה אֶת-אֲבִינוּ יוֹן
וְנִשְׁבָּה עַמּוֹ וְנִחְיָה מִאֲבִינוּ זָרָעָ
³³ וַתְּשִׁקְעַנְןָ אֶת-אֲבִיהֶן יָן בְּלִילָה הַוָּא
וְתַבָּא הַבְּכִירָה וַתְּשַׁבַּב אֶת-אֲבִיהָ וְלֹא-יָדַע בְּשִׁבְבָּה וּבְקָמָה:

³⁴ וַיְהִי מִמְּחֻרָת וַיְתַאמֵּר הַבְּכִירָה אֲלֵהֶ
הַצְעִירָה הַזְּנִשְׁכְּבָתִי אֲמַש אֶת-אֲבִי נְשָׁקָנָ
יָן גַּם-הַלִּילָה וּבָאי שְׁכָבִי עַמּוֹ וְנִחְיָה
מִאֲבִינוּ זָרָעָ³⁵ וַתְּשִׁקְעַנְןָ גַּם בְּלִילָה הַוָּא
אֶת-אֲבִיהֶן יָן וַתְּקַם הַצְעִירָה וַתְּשַׁבַּב עַמּוֹ
וְלֹא-יָדַע בְּשִׁבְבָּה וּבְקָמָה:

³⁶ וַתְּהִרְגַּן שְׁתִּי בָּנֹות-לֹוט מִאֲבִיהֶן:
³⁷ וַתֵּלֶד הַבְּכִירָה בֶּן וַתִּקְרַא שְׁמוֹ מוֹאָב
הַוָּא אֲבִי-מוֹאָב עַד-הַיּוֹם: ³⁸ וְהַצְעִירָה
גַּם-הַוָּא יָלַדה בֶּן וַתִּקְרַא שְׁמוֹ בְּנִ-עֲמִי הַוָּא אֲבִי בְּנֵי-עַמּוֹן עַד-הַיּוֹם: ס perpetuate life in a world that seems to them to have no other men.

34. The older daughter ensures that her younger sister is not without the opportunity to conceive a child. Their cooperation contrasts with the competition between Rachel and Leah (Genesis 29–30).

37–38. Moabites...Ammonites. Two nations that according to this story are related to Israel. Deuteronomy 23:4 excludes Ammonites and Moabites from joining the Israelite community. The Book of Ruth, however, offers a different perspective in that it portrays Ruth the Moabite as the ancestress of King David.

20 Abraham then journeyed from there toward the Negev and dwelt between Kadesh and Shur, settling in Gerar. ² Abraham said of his wife Sarah, “She is my sister,” and Abimelech king of Gerar sent [men] to seize Sarah.

³ God now came to Abimelech in a dream of the night, saying to him, “Look—you are a dead man because of the woman you have taken; she is a married woman!” ⁴ Abimelech had not touched her and he said, “My lord, will you slay a completely innocent folk? ⁵ Did he not tell me, ‘She is my sister?’ And she too said, ‘He is my brother.’ I did this with a pure heart and clean hands!” ⁶ In the dream God said to him, “I do indeed know that you did this with a pure heart, and it is I who held you back from sinning against Me; therefore I did not let you touch her. ⁷ Now return the man’s wife—he is a prophet and will intercede for you, so that you may live. But if you do not return [her], know that you will most certainly die, you and yours.”

⁸ When Abimelech woke up early in the morning he summoned all his retainers and drummed the whole story into their ears, and they became filled with fear. ⁹ He then summoned Abraham and said to him, “What have you done to us? How had I sinned against you that you brought a great sin upon me and my kingdom? You did things to me that should not be done!” ¹⁰ Abimelech said to Abraham, “What were you thinking of, that you

כ וַיְשַׁב אֶבְרָהָם בֵּין קֹדֶשׁ וּבֵין שׂוֹר וִינְגָּר בְּגַרְגָּרָה:
² וַיֹּאמֶר אֶבְרָהָם אֶל־שָׂרָה אֲשֶׁתָּו אָחֹתִי
 הַוֹּא וַיְשַׁלַּח אֶבְיָמְלָךְ מֶלֶךְ גֵּרָר וַיַּקְהֵל
 אֶת־שָׂרָה:

³ וַיָּבֹא אֱלֹהִים אֶל־אֶבְיָמְלָךְ בְּחַלּוֹם
 הַלִּילָה וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ הַנֶּקֶת מִתְּעַלְּמָה אֶשְׁתָּה
 אֲשֶׁר־לְקַחְתִּי וְהַוֹּא בָּעֵל: ⁴ וְאֶבְיָמְלָךְ
 לֹא קָרַב אֲלֵיכָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֲדֹנִי הָג֔וֹן גַּם־צְדִיקָּ
 תִּהְרֹג: ⁵ הַלֹּא הַוֹּא אָמַר לִי אֲחֹתִי הַוֹּא
 וְהִיא־אִגְּמָה־הַוֹּא אִמְרָה אֲחֹתִי הַוֹּא בְּתַמְּלָכִי
 וּבְנְקִינֵּן כַּפֵּי עֲשִׂיתִי זוֹאת: ⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיכָה
 הָאֱלֹהִים בְּחַלּוֹם גַּם אָנֹכִי יַדְעַתִּי בְּיַדְתִּ
 לְבָבֶךָ עֲשִׂיתْ זֹאת וְאַחֲשָׁתْ גַּם־אָנֹכִי אָוֹתָךְ
 מְחֻטּוֹלִי עַל־כֵּן לְאַנְתָּתִיךְ לְגַנְעַת אֱלֹהִים:
⁷ וְעַתָּה חַשְׁבֵּה אֲשֶׁת־הָאִישׁ כִּי־נְבָיא הַוֹּא
 וַיַּתְפְּלַל בְּעֵדֶךָ וְחִיה וְאַמְּדִינָךְ מִשְׁבֵּדָךְ

בִּימּוֹת תָּמוֹת אַתָּה וּכְלֵאָשְׁר־לָךְ:

⁸ וַיַּשְׁכַּם אֶבְיָמְלָךְ בְּבָקָר וַיִּקְרָא לְכָל־עֲבָדָיו
 וַיֹּדְבֵּר אֶת־כָּל־הַקְּבָרִים הָאֶלְהָה בְּאָנוֹנִים
 וַיַּרְא אֲוֹתָם הָאָנָשִׁים מִזֶּדֶה: ⁹ וַיִּקְרָא אֶבְיָמְלָךְ
 לְאֶבְרָהָם וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ מַה־עֲשִׂיתْ לִנְךָ וּמַה־
 חַטָּאתִ לְךָ בַּיְהָבָתִךְ עַלְיָהוּ וְעַל־מֶמְלָכָתִךְ
 חַטָּאתִ הַגְּדוֹלָה מִעֲשָׂים אֲשֶׁר לְאַיִשְׁׁוֹ
 עֲשִׂיתْ עַמְּךָ: ¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶבְיָמְלָךְ אֶל־
 אֶבְרָהָם מַה רָּאִיתْ בַּי עֲשִׂיתْ אֶת־הַדָּבָר

ABRAHAM AND SARAH “VISIT” ABIMELECH (20:1–18)

For a second time, Abraham hands over his wife to a king (see 12:10–20; compare 26:1–11). His actions here are more problematic both because he has done it before, and because his wife is supposed to bear him a child soon.

2. Abraham said of his wife Sarah, “She is my sister.” In the earlier case, Abraham had been propelled by hunger, and by fear for his life on account of Sarah’s beauty (12:10–13). Here the text provides no reason for Abraham’s movements or for deceiving the king of Gerar, until vv. 11–13.

4. Abimelech had not touched her. Presumably sexually. But clearly that is his intention.

did this?”¹¹ Abraham replied, “I thought, ‘There is no fear of God at all in this place, and they will kill me for my wife.’¹² And, as a matter of fact, she is my sister, my father’s daughter, though not my mother’s daughter, so she became my wife.¹³ And when God made me wander from my father’s house, I said to her: Do this kindness for me—wherever we go, say of me, ‘He is my brother.’”

¹⁴ Abimelech then took sheep and oxen, male and female slaves, and gave [them] to Abraham; he also restored his wife Sarah to him.¹⁵ And Abimelech said, “Look, my land is before you; settle wherever you please.”¹⁶ And to Sarah he said, “Look, I have given your brother a thousand pieces of silver; thus it testifies to your unblemished virtue to all who are with you; you are in the right with [them] all.”¹⁷ Abraham then prayed to God and God restored Abimelech, his wife, and his female slaves, and they bore children—¹⁸ for had completely shut every womb of Abimelech’s household on account of Abraham’s wife Sarah.

הזה: ¹¹ וַיֹּאמֶר אַבְרָהָם כִּי אָמַרְתִּי רַק
אִינְיָרָאת אֱלֹהִים בָּمָקוֹם הַזֶּה וְהַגּוֹנִי-עַל-דָּבָר אֲשֶׁר: ¹² וְגַם-אָמַנָּה אֲחָתִי בַת-אָבִי הַוָּא אָרֵךְ לֹא בַת-אָמִי וְתַהְיֵי-
לְאַשָּׁה: ¹³ וַיְהִי בָּאַשְׁר הָתַעַו אָתִי אֱלֹהִים
מִבֵּית אָבִי וְאָמַר לָהּ וְהַחֲסִיךְ אֲשֶׁר תַּעֲשֵׂי
עַמְּדֵי אָל בָּל-הַמִּקְומָט אֲשֶׁר נִבְזָא שְׁמָה
אָמְרִי-לִי אָחִי הוּא:
¹⁴ וַיַּקְרֵב אַבְימֶלֶךְ צָאן וּבָקָר וּעֲבָדִים
וּשְׁפֹחות וַיִּתְּנוּ לְאַבְרָהָם וַיֵּשֶׁב לוֹ אֶת שְׁרָה
אֲשֶׁר: ¹⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר אַבְימֶלֶךְ הַנָּה אֶרְצִי
לְפִנֵּיכְךָ בְּטוּב עַיִּינִיךְ שָׁב: ¹⁶ וַיַּלְשַׂרְהָ אָמָר
הַנָּה נִתְחַתִּי אֶלָּפֶכֶסֶף לְאָחִיךְ הַנָּה הוֹא-לְךָ
בְּסָות עִינִים לְכָל אֲשֶׁר אַתָּה וְאֶת בָּל
וּנְכָחות: ¹⁷ וַיַּתְפְּלִלְךָ אַבְרָהָם אֶל-הָאֱלֹהִים
וַיַּרְפֵּא אֱלֹהִים אֶת-אַבְימֶלֶךְ וְאֶת-אֲשֶׁר
וְאַמְּהָתָתוּ וַיָּלֹדו: ¹⁸ קִידְעָצָר עַצְר יְהָה
בְּעֵד בָּל-אַבְרָהָם לְבֵית אַבְימֶלֶךְ עַל-דָּבָר
שְׁרָה אֲשֶׁת אַבְרָהָם: ס

II. “There is no fear of God at all in this place.” In the previous story, Abraham had argued with God to save a city for the sake of the righteous individuals that he wrongly thought it contained. Here, Abraham believes that a city contains no God-fearing persons, and he is wrong again. This time, however, his error almost causes “a great sin” (v. 9) to be committed.

12. “she is my sister.” Abraham’s statement is not confirmed either by the narrator, other dialogue, or genealogical source. Both Sarah’s and Abraham’s genealogy appear in 11:27–30, where this fact is not mentioned; see the comment there. The earlier episode (12:10–18) contains no reference to a real brother/sister relationship; if Abraham and Sarah were truly brother and sister, the perfect opportunity to mention it would have been then, before they entered Egypt. Yet unlike Isaac, who claims that his wife and first cousin Rebekah is his sister (26:1–III), Abraham here provides plausible specifics: he and Sarah are related through their father. Note that Deuteronomy 27:22 condemns a sexual relationship between such siblings.

16. “it testifies to your unblemished virtue.” Despite Sarah and Abimelech’s innocence, her reputation still needs to be cleared.

18. “Yahweh had completely shut every womb of Abimelech’s household.” Paradoxically, this information is imparted only after Abraham prays to the Deity—who heals Abimelech, his wife, and his slave girls so that they bear children. It raises questions: Did Abraham pray earlier for his own wife to conceive? Did she now benefit too from this prayer of Abraham’s? (See the episode that follows.) The next matriarch, Rebekah, will be barren until Isaac pleads on her behalf (25:21).

on account of Abraham’s wife Sarah. Sarah—not Abraham—is God’s primary concern.

21 now remembered Sarah; יְהוָה did for Sarah as promised,² so that she became pregnant and bore a son to Abraham in his old age, at the exact time God had told him.³ Abraham named his newborn son, whom Sarah had borne to him, Isaac.⁴ When his son Isaac was eight days old, Abraham circumcised him, as God had commanded him.⁵ Abraham was 100 years old when his son Isaac was born.

Sarah said, “God has brought me laughter; all who hear will laugh with me.”⁶ And she added, “Who would have dared say to Abraham, ‘Sarah shall nurse children?’ Yet I have borne a son in his old age!”⁷ The child grew and was weaned, and on Isaac’s weaning day, Abraham held a great feast.

וַיִּזְרֹעֶל יְהוָה לְשָׁרָה בְּאֵשֶׁר דָּבָר: ² וַיְתַהַר
וַתֵּלֶד שָׂרָה לְאַבְרָהָם בֶּן לְזָקְנִיוּ לְמַוְעֵד
אֲשֶׁר־דִּבֶּר אֱלֹהִים: ³ וַיְקָרָא אַבְרָהָם
אֶת־שְׁמֵבָנָיו הַגּוֹלְדָלֶךָ אֲשֶׁר־יַלְדָה־לָוֹ
שָׂרָה יִצְחָק: ⁴ וַיִּמְלֹא אַבְרָהָם אֶת־יִצְחָק
בֶּן־שְׁמֵנֶת יָמִים כַּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה אֱלֹהִים:⁵ וְאַבְרָהָם בֶּן־מֵאָת שָׁנָה בְּהַולְד
לוֹ אֶת יִצְחָק בֶּן־⁶ וַיְתַאמֵּר שָׂרָה צִחְקָעָשָׁה לְיַעֲלֹהִים בְּלַ
הַשְּׁמָעַ יִצְחָק־לִי: ⁷ וַיְתַאמֵּר מִי מְלָלָ
לְאַבְרָהָם הַיּוֹנִיקָה בְּנֵים שָׂרָה פִּי־יַלְדָתִי בֶן
לְזָקְנִיו: ⁸ וַיִּגְדֶּל הַיּוֹלֵד וַיִּגְמַל וַיִּعַש אַבְרָהָם
מִשְׁתַּחַת גָּדוֹל בַּיּוֹם הַגָּמֵל אֶת־יִצְחָק:

SARAH BECOMES A MOTHER (21:1–7)

1. now remembered Sarah. God had spoken with Abraham (17:16, 21; 18:10) and, through the “messengers,” with Sarah (18:10) about the forthcoming child; but God remembers only Sarah here.

2. she became pregnant and bore a son. After much discussion about this event (15:4; 17:16–19, 21; 18:9–15), Isaac’s conception and delivery are reported in just three Hebrew words.

to Abraham. The text is explicit here that the father is Abraham because the preceding episode with Abimelech might raise a doubt about the father’s identity.

3. Abraham names the child “Isaac,” a name that means “he laughs.” Usually in the Bible it is the mother who names her son.

6. “all who bear will laugh with me.” Sarah responds to maternity with laughter. Earlier the laughter was private (18:12). Now it embraces everyone else.

7. “Sarah shall nurse.” Sarah is celebrating her capacity to nurture her child. (For details about the practice of nursing babies in the ancient world and in the Bible, see at Exodus 2:9.)

“I have borne a son.” In the book of Isaiah, the prophet urges the people to look “to Sarah who brought you forth” (Isaiah 51:2) as a source of hope and renewal. After the exile to Babylon in the 6th century B.C.E., Sarah’s giving birth apparently exemplified the potential for renewal.

“in his old age.” Abraham’s age seems to be more of a miracle to Sarah than her own, as she celebrates her capacity to bring forth life.

First Threat to Isaac

TWO MOTHERS CLASH PROTECTING THEIR SONS (21:8–21)

The tension in the family does not end with Isaac’s birth, since there are potential threats to his longevity and success from both his brother and his father.

One of the most poignant parts of the parashah is the story of two mothers, each of whom desires the well-being of her son. Mother Sarah seeks to ⁹Now Sarah saw the son that Hagar the Egyptian had borne to Abraham, playing.¹⁰She said to Abraham, “Throw this slave girl and her son out. The son of this slave girl is not going to share in the inheritance with my son Isaac!”¹¹This grieved secure her infant’s future (a future that she will probably not live to see, given her age) by expelling a rival. Hagar then faces the near death of her son. The Torah is sympathetic to both mothers caught in the cross-currents.

וַתִּתְּרָא שָׂרָה אֶת-בֶּן-הָגָר הַמִּצְרִית אֲשֶׁר-יָלְדָה לְאַבְרָהָם מֵצָחָק: ¹⁰ וַתֹּאמֶר לְאַבְרָהָם גַּרְשֵׁנָה הָאִמָּה הַזֹּאת וְאֶת-בָּנָה כִּי لֹא יִרְשֶׁ בֶּן-הָאִמָּה הַזֹּאת עַמִּצָּק עַמִּצָּק: ¹¹ וַיַּרְא הָדָבָר מְאֹד בַּעֲינֵי

The plight here of mother Hagar and son Ishmael will be mirrored by that of father Abraham and his son Isaac in the story immediately following. Certain details connect the stories: In both, the parent rises early, a child is imperiled; and a divine messenger intervenes at the last moment. (Both stories are read on Rosh HaShanah in traditional synagogues.)

SARAH SEEKS TO PROTECT ISAAC: THE EXPULSION OF HAGAR AND ISHMAEL (21:8–13)

8. on Isaac’s weaning day. I Samuel 1:23 and II Maccabees 7:27 indicate that in ancient Israel, children were weaned at about three years of age.

great feast. Weaning apparently was marked by a ritual, the details of which have not been preserved. This life-passage is obviously significant to mother and child.

9. Sarah saw the son . . . playing. Ishmael’s precise action is at issue. All we know for sure is that it triggers a severe reaction in Sarah. The word m’tzachek (“playing”) puns on the name Isaac (yitzchak). It can also mean “mocking,” “fooling around,” and toying with him sexually.

10. “Throw this slave girl and her son out.” [From a feminist perspective, the call for the expulsion of Hagar raises troubling questions. The story portrays the oppression of one woman by another; it also places responsibility for the enmity between two peoples—the descendants of Isaac and those of Ishmael—upon women, especially Sarah. As a story about domestic relations, the narrative builds sympathy for Hagar at Sarah’s expense. Some scholars respond by pointing out that Sarah’s concern is legitimate. As an old woman she anticipates her young son’s vulnerable position in the event of her death. She takes steps to protect him by removing the competition for Abraham’s possessions—and possibly also for his affection. Rather than casting a human drama in simplistic terms, the story of Sarah, Hagar, and Abraham poignantly illustrates the dilemma of multiple commitments. Among other things, this passage may seek to sensitize the reader to the plight of the outsider. —Ed.]

“The son of this slave girl is not going to share in the inheritance.” Sarah raises inheritance as the issue, stressing meanwhile that Hagar is a slave. In 17:19, God had earmarked Isaac to receive the covenantal promise, and perhaps Sarah is acting with that knowledge. Ancient law collections from Mesopotamia address inheritance in similar cases, illustrating ancient customs that may lie in the background of this story. In the collection of Lipit Ishtar, the status of the second wife determines whether or not her son inherits. In the collection of Hammurabi, a child of a slave inherits only if the father claims him. The sons of Zilpah and Bilhah—women of a status similar to Hagar—do later inherit along with the children of the primary wives, Leah and Rachel. Perhaps Sarah objects to such an arrangement because her son is so young and she may not be around to protect him.

11. This grieved Abraham greatly, on account of his son. The text does not clarify what “this” is, or specify which son he refers to; therefore what bothers Abraham is open to interpretation. One might suppose here that Abraham is not concerned

Abraham greatly, on account of his son.¹² But God said to Abraham, “Do not be grieved over the boy or your slave. Do whatever Sarah tells you, for it is through Isaac that offspring shall be called yours. ¹³ Yet I will also make a nation out of the children of the slave’s son, for he, too, is your offspring.”

¹⁴ Early next morning, Abraham got up and took bread and a waterskin and handed them to Hagar, placing them and the boy on her shoulder. Then he cast her out; trudging away, she wandered aimlessly in the wilderness of Beersheba. ¹⁵ When the water in the skin was all gone, she cast the child away under a bush; ¹⁶ she walked away and sat down on the other side at a remove of about a bowshot, thinking: “Let me not see the child’s death.” There, on the other side, she sat and wept in a loud voice.

אַבְרָהָם עַל אֹודֶת בָּנוֹ: ¹² וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵהֶם
אֶל־אַבְרָהָם אֱלֹהִים בְּעִינֵיכֶם עַל־הַנְּגָר
וְעַל־אִמְתָּךְ כֹּל אֲשֶׁר תֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיכֶם שָׂרָה
שָׁמַע בְּקָلָה כִּי בִּצְחָק יַקְרָא לְךָ זָרָע:
¹³ וְגַם אֶת־בָּנֵיךְ אַמְתָּה לְגַ�י אֲשִׁימָנוּ כִּי
וַיַּעֲשֵׂה הוּא:

¹⁴ וַיַּשְׁבַּם אַבְרָהָם בְּבָקָר וַיַּחַלְחַל
וְחַמֶּת מִים וַיִּתְן אֶל־הַגָּר שֶׁם עַל־שְׁבָמָה
וְאֶת־הַיּוֹלֵד וַיְשַׁלַּחַ וַתַּלְךְ וַתֵּתַע בַּمְדֻבָּר
בָּאָר שְׁבָע: ¹⁵ וַיַּכְלוּ הַמִּינִים מִן־הַחֲמָת
וַתִּשְׁלַׁךְ אֶת־הַיּוֹלֵד תְּחִת אֶחָד הַשְׁיכָם:
¹⁶ וַתָּתַלְךְ וַתִּשְׁבַּלְךְ לְה מִנְגָּד הַרְחָק בַּמְתוּחוֹ
קָשַׁת כִּי אָמָרָה אֶל־אֶרְךָ בְּמוֹת הַיּוֹלֵד וַתִּשְׁבַּמִּנְגָּד וַתִּשְׁאַל־קָלָה וַתִּבְרַךְ:

about Hagar, but God’s response in the next verse (“do not be grieved . . . over your slave”) implies otherwise.

12. “Do whatever Sarah tells you.” Abraham is instructed to obey his wife, literally “whatever Sarah says to you, listen to her voice.” In 3:17 the man was chastised for listening to his wife’s voice. [God’s rebuke in 3:17 might lead readers to conclude that listening to a wife’s voice is wrong. God’s instruction in the present passage illustrates that this is not the case. —Ed.] | God supports Sarah’s concern about inheritance. Abraham’s distrust that the Deity will care for both his sons may be the background for the Deity’s decision to test Abraham in the episode that follows this story of Ishmael.

THE RESCUE OF HAGAR AND ISHMAEL IN THE DESERT (21:14–21)

Once again, Hagar is in the wilderness (compare 16:7–14). Earlier, she had been pregnant with Ishmael and had left of her own accord. This time she has her son on her back and is sent away.

14. Early next morning, Abraham got up. Though not translated identically here, these words in Hebrew are the same as in 22:3, where Abraham rises to sacrifice Isaac. The common phrasing connects the two episodes, both of which deal with the potential death of a son of Abraham.

took bread and a waterskin and handed them to Hagar, placing them and the boy on her shoulder. Placing the child on Hagar’s back hints that Ishmael is a small child, though, according to the preceding notices (17:23–25; 21:5, 8), Ishmael at this point is at least fifteen years of age. The narrator uses poetic license to depict Ishmael as younger and more vulnerable to make the scene more poignant.

cast her out. [The verb is used for divorce but more literally means “sent her out.” It will be used when Pharaoh lets the Israelites go from slavery (Exodus 13:17). Tikva Frymer-Kensky points out that Hagar and Ishmael are not sold and suggests that they are freed. They leave Abraham’s household as emancipated slaves (Reading the Women of the Bible, 2002, p. 235). See, however, at v. 10. —Ed.]

16. “Let me not see the child’s death.” The scene is heartrending. Watching one’s child die must be horrible; what might be worse is leaving one’s child to die alone.

she sat and wept in a loud voice. The verse

¹⁷God heard the boy's cry, and from heaven an angel of God called to Hagar and said, "What is troubling you, Hagar? Have no fear, for God has heard the cry of the lad where he is. ¹⁸Get up, lift the boy, and hold him with your hand, for I am going to make of him a great nation." ¹⁹God then opened her eyes, and she saw a well. She went and filled the skin with water and gave the boy to drink.

²⁰God was with the boy, and he grew up; he lived in the wilderness and became a bowman. ²¹He lived in the wilderness of Paran, and his mother took him a wife from the land of Egypt.

²²At that time Abimelech and Pichol the commander of his army said to Abraham, "God is with you in all that you do. ²³Swear to me now that you will not be false to me, my progeny, or my posterity; do me and the land in which you have been staying as much kindness as I have done to you." ²⁴Abraham replied, "I will swear."

²⁵But Abraham rebuked Abimelech on account of the water well that Abimelech's servants had

¹⁷וַיִּשְׁמַע אֱלֹהִים אֶת־קֹול הַנֶּגֶר וַיָּקֹרֵא מֶלֶךְ אֱלֹהִים אֶל־הַגָּר מִן־הַשָּׂמִים וַיֹּאמֶר לְהָ מַה־לְךָ הַגָּר אֶל־תִּירְאִי כִּי־שָׁמַע אֱלֹהִים אֶל־קֹול הַנֶּגֶר בְּאֶשְׁר הוֹא־שָׁם:

¹⁸קוֹמִי שָׁאֵי אֶת־הַנֶּגֶר וְהַחֲנִיקִי אֶת־יִזְרָאֵל בָּו כִּי־לְגֹוי גָּדוֹל אֲשִׁימָנוּ: ¹⁹וַיִּפְקַד אֱלֹהִים אֶת־עִינָּה וַיַּרְא בָּאָר מִים וְתַלְכֵד וְתַמְלֵא אֶת־הַחֹמֶת מִים וְתַשְׁק אֶת־הַנֶּגֶר:

²⁰וַיָּהִי אֱלֹהִים אֶת־הַנֶּגֶר וַיַּגְדֵּל וַיִּשְׁבֶּ בַּמִּקְדָּשׁ וַיָּהִי רַבָּה קַשְׁתָּה: ²¹וַיִּשְׁבֶּ בַּמִּקְדָּשׁ פָּאָרָן וַתַּחַח־לֹו אָמוֹר אֲשֶׁר מִארֵץ מצִרְיָם: פ

²²וַיָּהִי בָּעֵת דַּהְוָא וַיֹּאמֶר אֶבְיָמֶלֶךָ וַיִּכְלֶל שְׁרִצְבָּאוֹ אֶל־אַבְרָהָם לְאָמֶר אֱלֹהִים עַמְּךָ בְּכָל אֲשֶׁר־אַתָּה עֲשָׂה: ²³וְעַתָּה הַשְׁבָּעָה לִי בְּאֱלֹהִים הַנֶּה אִם־תַּשְׁקַר לִי וְלַנְּגַנְּנִי וְלַנְּכַדִּי בְּחַסְד אֲשֶׁר־עָשָׂיתִי עַמְּךָ תַּعֲשָׂה עַמְּדִי וְעַמְּדָה אָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר־גַּרְתָּ בָּהּ: ²⁴וַיֹּאמֶר אַבְרָהָם אָנֹכִי אֲשֶׁבָּע וְהַזְכֵּחַ אַבְרָהָם אֶת־אַבְיָמֶלֶךָ עַל־אֶזְזָה בָּאָר הַמִּים אֲשֶׁר גָּזַל עַבְדִּי אֶבְיָמֶלֶךָ:

states that she placed her child at some distance, implying that they could not hear each other.

17. God heard the boy's cry, and from heaven an angel of God called to Hagar. Hagar weeps—but the Deity focuses on the boy's cry. The message of assurance comes to her, however, because she herself has moved so far from him that she cannot hear him.

18. "I am going to make of him a great nation." This statement reiterates the earlier divine promise that her "seed" will be numerous (16:10).

21. Unlike most biblical women, Hagar herself finds her son a wife. Ishmael's wife is from Egypt, like Hagar herself (16:1).

Second Threat to Isaac

ABRAHAM'S "BINDING OF ISAAC,"
OR "THE AKEDAH" (21:22–22:21)

ABRAHAM SETTLES IN BEERSHEBA
(21:22–34)

22. At that time. Abraham's negotiations over wells near Beersheba seemingly have little to do with Ishmael or Isaac; yet this new residence is on the edge of the desert, not far from where the text just left Hagar and Ishmael (v. 21). Meanwhile, it is the same town to which Abraham will go (22:19) at the end of the next episode, which features Isaac.

stolen,²⁶ and Abimelech replied, “I do not know who did this; you certainly never told me, nor did I ever hear of it until today.”²⁷ Abraham then took sheep and oxen and gave them to Abimelech, and the two of them forged a treaty.²⁸ Abraham then set aside seven lambs of the flock.²⁹ When Abimelech said, “What do these seven lambs that you have set aside signify?”³⁰ Abraham replied, “So that you take the seven lambs from me as my testimony that I dug this well.”³¹ That is why that place is called Beersheba, for there the two of them took an oath.

³²They forged a treaty in Beersheba; then Abimelech and Pichol the commander of his army got up and returned to the land of the Philistines,³³ while Abraham planted a tamarisk and called upon the Name of the Lord, Yahweh, the everlasting God;³⁴ he stayed in the land of the Philistines a long time.

22 After these things, God tested Abraham, saying to him, “Abraham!” And he said, “Here I am.”²[God] said, “Take your son, your only one, the one you love, Isaac, and go forth to the land of Moriah. Offer him there as a burnt-offering, on one of the mountains that I will show you.”

ABRAHAM'S “TEST”: THE BINDING OF ISAAC (22:1–19)

In this episode, one of the most famous in Genesis, Sarah the mother is completely absent—a striking absence given that her only son is the subject of God's instructions. Apparently she does not need to be tested.

1. After these things. What are “these things”: Isaac's birth? Banishing Ishmael? The expulsion of Hagar? Settling near Ishmael?

God tested Abraham. The text never explains why Abraham needs to be tested. Perhaps his ac-

26 וַיֹּאמֶר אֲבִימֶלֶךְ לֹא יָדַעֲתִי מַי עֲשָׂה
אֶת־הָكָרְבָּן הַזֶּה וְגַם־אַתָּה לְאֵידָגָתְךָ לִי
וְגַם אַנְבֵּי לֹא שְׁמַעְתִּי בְּלֹתִי הַיּוֹם: 27 וַיַּקְרֵב
אֶבְרָהָם צָאן וּבָקָר וַיִּתְן לְאֲבִימֶלֶךְ וַיִּכְרְטוּ
שְׁנֵיהֶם בְּרִית: 28 וַיַּצַּב אֶבְרָהָם אֶת־שְׁבָע
בְּבִשְׁתַּחַת הַצָּאן לְבִדְחָנָה: 29 וַיֹּאמֶר אֲבִימֶלֶךְ
אֶל־אֶבְרָהָם מַה הַנֶּה שְׁבָע בְּבִשְׁתַּחַת הָאֱלֹהָה
אֲשֶׁר הָעָבָת לְבִדְחָנָה: 30 וַיֹּאמֶר בְּיַאֲתָה
שְׁבָע בְּבִשְׁתַּחַת תְּקַח מִידֵּי בְּעֵבֶור תְּהִיה־לְךָ
לְעָדָה בְּיַחֲפֹרְתִּי אֶת־הַבְּאָרֶת הַזֹּאת:
31 עַל־בָּן קָרְאַ לִמְקוֹם הַהוּא בָּאָרֶת שְׁבָע
בְּיַשְׁמָן נְשָׁבָע שְׁנֵיהֶם:
32 וַיִּכְרְטוּ בְּרִית בָּאָרֶת שְׁבָע וַיִּקְרֵב אֲבִימֶלֶךְ
וַיִּכְלֵל שְׁרַעַבָּאוֹ וַיִּשְׁבַּבְוּ אֶל־אָרֶץ פָּלָשְׁתִּים:
33 וַיַּטְעַ אָשֶׁל בָּאָרֶת שְׁבָע וַיִּקְרֵב שְׁמָן בְּשֵׁם
יְהוָה אֱלֹהָל עַזְלָם: 34 וַיִּגְרֵב אֶבְרָהָם בָּאָרֶץ
פָּלָשְׁתִּים יָמִים רַבִּים: כ

כ ב וַיְהִי אַחֲרַ הַדְּבָרִים הָאֱלֹהָה וְהָאֱלֹהִים
נֶסֶת אֶת־אֶבְרָהָם וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־יוֹאָב אֶבְרָהָם
וַיֹּאמֶר הַנֵּנִי: 2 וַיֹּאמֶר קָח־נָא אֶת־בָּנֶךָ אֶת־
יְחִידָךְ אֲשֶׁר־אָהָבָת אֶת־יִצְחָק וְלֹא־לְכָא
אָרֶץ הַמְּרִיאָה וְהַעֲלִילָה שָׁמֶן לְעַלְהָ עַל אֶחָד הַחֲרִים אֲשֶׁר אָמַר אֶלְיךָ:

tions thus far have somehow not been adequate.

2. “your only one, the one you love.” These touching words to describe Isaac can be challenged. Isaac is not Abraham's only son. [They might be explained as a recognition that Isaac is now the only legal son because Abraham has banished Ishmael.—Ed.] Nor have we been told that Abraham has expressed any feelings toward Isaac.

Offer him there as a burnt-offering. Abraham, the man who advocates for Ishmael (17:18) and actively negotiates with the Deity for the people of Sodom (18:23–33), is surprisingly silent after receiving the command.

³ Abraham rose early, saddled his donkey, chopped wood for the burnt-offering, took Isaac his son and his two lads, and set out for the place that God had spoken of to him. ⁴On the third day, Abraham lifted up his eyes and saw the place from afar. ⁵Abraham said to his servant lads, “Stay here with the donkey; the lad and I will go yonder. We will worship and return to you.” ⁶Abraham then took the wood for the burnt-offering and laid it on Isaac his son; in his own hand he held the fire-stone and the knife. And the two of them went on together.

⁷ Isaac then said to Abraham his father, “Father!” He answered: “Here I am, my son.” And Isaac said, “Here is the firestone and the wood, but where is the lamb for the burnt-offering?” ⁸ Abraham replied, “God will see to the lamb for the burnt-offering, my son.” And the two of them went on together.

⁹ They came to the place that God had shown him. There Abraham built the altar and arranged the wood and bound Isaac his son and laid him on the altar, upon the wood. ¹⁰ Abraham now reached out and took the knife to slay his son, ¹¹but out of heaven an angel of YHWH called to him, saying, “Abraham, Abraham!” He replied: “Here I am.” ¹²[The angel] then said, “Do not lay your hand on the lad; do nothing to him; for now I know that you are one who fears God, as you did not withhold your son, your only one, from Me.”

וַיֵּשֶׁב אֶבְרָהָם בַּבְּקָר וַיִּחְבֹּשׁ אֶת-חָמָר
וַיַּקְרֹחַ אֶת-שְׂנִי נְעָרָיו אֶתְוֹ וְאַתְּ יַצְחָק בֶּןְוּ
וַיַּבְקֻל עַצְיָה עַלְהָ וַיָּקַם וַיָּלֹךְ אֶל-הַמִּקְדָּשׁ
אֲשֶׁר-אָמַר לָנוּ הָאֱלֹהִים: ⁴ בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁלִישִׁי
וַיֵּשֶׁא אֶבְרָהָם אֶת-עֵינָיו וַיַּרְא אֶת-הַמִּקְדָּשׁ
מְרַחְקָה: ⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶבְרָהָם אֶל-נְعָרָיו שָׁבְרֵ
לְכֶם פָּה עַמְּדָה חָמָר וְאַנְיָה וְהַפְּעָר גַּלְכָּה
עַד-כָּה וְגַשְׁתָּחֹה וְגַשְׁוָבָה אֶלְיכֶם: ⁶ וַיַּקְרֹחַ
אֶבְרָהָם אֶת-עַצְיָה הַעַלְהָ וַיָּשַׁט עַל-יִצְחָק
בֶּןְוּ וַיַּקְרֹחַ בַּיָּדָוּ אֶת-חָמָר וְאֶת-הַמִּקְדָּשׁ
וַיָּלֹכְדוּ שְׁנִיהם יְחִזְקוּ: ⁷
וַיֹּאמֶר יִצְחָק אֶל-אֶבְרָהָם אָבִיו וַיֹּאמֶר
אָבִי וַיֹּאמֶר הַפְּנֵי בְנִי וַיֹּאמֶר הַנֵּה הַאֲשָׁר
וְהַעֲלִים וְאֵיתָה הַשָּׁה לְעַלְהָ: ⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר
אֶבְרָהָם אֶל-לְהִלּוּ הַשָּׁה לְעַלְהָ בְנִי
וַיָּלֹכְדוּ שְׁנִיהם יְחִזְקוּ: ⁹
וַיָּבֹאוּ אֶל-הַמִּקְדָּשׁ אָשֶׁר אָמַר לְ
הָאֱלֹהִים וּבָנֵן שָׁם אֶבְרָהָם אֶת-הַמִּזְבֵּחַ
וַיַּעֲלֶר אֶת-הַעֲצִים וַיַּעֲקֹל אֶת-יִצְחָק בֶּןְוּ
וַיָּשַׁם אֶתְוֹ עַל-הַמִּזְבֵּחַ מִפְעָל לְעַצִּים: ¹⁰
וַיַּשְׁלַח אֶבְרָהָם אֶת-יִצְחָק וַיַּקְרֹחַ אֶת-הַמִּקְדָּשׁ לְשַׁחַט אֶת-בֶּןְוּ: ¹¹ וַיִּקְרֹא אֱלֹהִים
מֶלֶךְ יְהוָה מִן-הַשָּׁמִים וַיֹּאמֶר אֶבְרָהָם אֶל-אֶבְרָהָם וַיֹּאמֶר הַנֵּנִי: ¹² וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-תִּשְׁלַח
יְזַק אֶל-הַנְּעָר וְאֶל-תַּעֲשֵׂה לוֹ מְאֹמהָ כִּי
עַתָּה יַדְעַתְּךָ כִּי-יְרִא אֱלֹהִים אֶתְּךָ וְלֹא
חִשְׁכַּת אֶת-בֶּנוּ אֶת-יְחִידָךְ מִמְּנִי:

3. Abraham rose early. See at 21:14.

5. “We will . . . return to you.” Is Abraham afraid that the servants will try to stop him? Or does he know the Deity will not let him carry out the instructions?

7. “Father!” This is Isaac’s first word in the Torah.

“Here I am, my son.” Abraham’s response—the first time in the Torah that he calls Isaac his son—are words of comfort.

“but where is the lamb for the burnt-offering?”

Isaac is old enough to know what is necessary for a burnt-offering and that they do not have it. Does he sense how much is amiss? Commentators debate whether or not Isaac is aware of what is going to happen.

9–10. Abraham carries out his actions methodically, with no reported words or emotion—unlike when he lost Ishmael (21:11). Isaac, too, is silent.

¹³ Abraham lifted his eyes: he now could see a ram [just] after it was caught by its horns in a thicket. Abraham went and took the ram and offered it as a burnt-offering in place of his son.

¹⁴ Abraham named that place YHVH Yir'eh; to this day people say: “On the mount of YHWH, [God] will be seen.”

¹⁵ Then out of heaven an angel of YHWH called to Abraham a second time, ¹⁶saying, “By Myself I swear, says YHWH, that because you did this thing, and did not withhold your son, your only one, ¹⁷I will bless you greatly, and make your descendants as numerous as the stars of heaven and the sands of the seashore, and your descendants shall take possession of the gates of their foes. ¹⁸And through your descendants the nations of the earth shall be blessed, because you hearkened to My voice.”

¹⁹ Abraham then returned to his servant lads; they got up and traveled together to Beersheba, and Abraham settled in Beersheba.

²⁰ And after all these things, Abraham was told the following: Milcah, she too has borne sons, to

¹³ וַיִּשְׁאָלָבָרָהּ אֶת־עֵינָיו וַיַּרְאָוְהָנָה־אֵילָן־אַחֲרָנָאָתָן בְּסֶבֶב בְּקָרְנוֹיו וַיַּלְךְ אֶבְרָהָם וַיַּקְרַח אֶת־הָאֵיל וַיַּעַלְהֵוּ לְעַלְלה תְּחִתָּה בְּנָוֹן: ¹⁴ וַיַּקְרַא אֶבְרָהָם שְׁמַיְנָמָקוּם הַהָוֹא יְהֹוָה וַיַּרְאָה אֲשֶׁר יָאמַר הַיּוֹם בָּנָר יְהֹוָה יְרֹאָה:

¹⁵ וַיַּקְרַא מֶלֶךְ יְהֹוָה אֶל־אֶבְרָהָם שְׁנִיתָה מִן־הַשָּׁמִים: ¹⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר בְּיַי נְשָׁבָעְתִּי נָאָמֵר יְהֹוָה בַּי יַعֲנֵן אֲשֶׁר עָשִׂית אֶת־הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה וְלֹא חַשְׁכַּת אֶת־בְּנָךְ אֶת־יְחִידָךְ: ¹⁷ כִּי־בָּרוּ אֶבְרָקָבָן וְהַרְבָּה אַרְבָּה אֶת־זָרָעָל בְּכֻכְבֵּי הַשָּׁמִים וּבְחוֹל אֲשֶׁר עַל־שְׁפָת הַיּוֹם וַיַּרְשֵׁן זָרָעָל אֶת שַׁעַר אַיִּזְבּוֹ: ¹⁸ וְהַתְּבָרְכוּ בְּזָרָעָל כֹּל גּוֹיִי הָאָרֶץ עַקְבָּאָשֶׁר שְׁמַעְתִּי בְּכָל: ¹⁹ וַיַּשְׁבַּט אֶבְרָהָם אֶל־בָּרוּא וַיַּקְרַב וַיַּלְכֵד יְחִידָוֹ אֶל־בָּאָר שְׁבָע וַיַּשְׁבַּט אֶבְרָהָם בְּבָאָר שְׁבָע: פ

²⁰ וַיַּהַי אַחֲרֵי הַדָּבָרִים הָאָלוֹהִים וַיַּגְּדֵל אֶבְרָהָם לְאָמֵר הָנָה יְלָה מֶלֶךְ גָּמַד

16–17. “because you . . . did not withhold your son . . . I will . . . make your descendants . . . numerous.” God had promised Abraham numerous progeny even before this test (12:2; 13:16; 15:5; 17:5). What then would have happened had Abraham not attempted to sacrifice Isaac?

19. The text mentions Abraham and his servants, but not Isaac. Isaac and Abraham are never represented together again. When Isaac reappears in the text, he is near Be'er-lachai-ro'i (24:62), where pregnant Hagar had gone when she ran away from Sarah (16:14).

Preparation for the Future REBEKAH'S BIRTH (22:20–24)

*S*andwiched between the binding of Isaac and Sarah's death (in the next parashah) is a paragraph concerning Rebekah's family. This parashah ends with Isaac safe, and with his future wife born to the right woman from the right lineage. Rebekah, the matriarch for the next generation, appears immediately before the previous one, Sarah, dies. This passage emphasizes the women in the lineage and highlights the importance of women in the “patriarchal” line of the people of Israel. On the role of women in the Israelite lineage, see also at 17:19, 22.

20. Milcah. We were told of her marriage to Nahor when she was first introduced with Sarai (11:29), before Abram's household left the city of Haran for Canaan. Now she is mentioned again—and once more in verse 23—just before Sarah dies (23:1–2). Rebekah will also mention her grandmother Milcah when she identifies herself (24:24, 47). It is not clear why Milcah merits her relative prominence.

your brother Nahor—²¹Uz his first-born, his brother Buz, Kemuel father of Aram, ²²Chesed, Hazo, Pildash, Jidlaph, and Bethuel. ²³(Bethuel fathered Rebekah.) These eight did Milcah bear to Nahor, Abraham's brother. ²⁴And his concubine —her name was Reumah—she too bore: Tebah, Gaham, Tahash, and Maacah.

הוּא בָנִים לְנֹחַר אֶחָיו: ²¹ אֶת־עֵזֶב בֶּכֶר
וְאֶת־יְפֹז אֶחָיו וְאֶת־קְמוֹאָל אֲבִי אַרְם:
²² וְאֶת־בְּשֶׁד וְאֶת־חֹזֶז וְאֶת־פְּלַדְשָׁה וְאֶת־
יְדָלָף וְאֶת בְּתוּאֵל: ²³ וּבְתוּאָל יָלֵד אֶת־
רְבָקָה שְׁמֵנָה אֱלֹה יְלֻה מִלְבָה לְנֹחַר
אֶתְיִ אֲבָרָהָם: ²⁴ וּפִילְגָשׂו וְשֵׁמֶה רְאוּמָה
וּתְלִד גַם־הָוָא אֶת־טְבַח וְאֶת־גָּחָם וְאֶת־
תְּחַשׁ וְאֶת־מַעֲכָה: פ

23. Bethuel fathered Rebekah. The text highlights only Rebekah in her generation. Rebekah is important not only because she will marry Isaac (Genesis 24) but also because she proves to be decisive in arranging for the transfer of the covenantal blessing in the next generation (27:6–13). Although we know the name of Rebekah's grandmother, Milcah, we never learn the name of her mother.

Milcab. See at v. 20.

24. Maacah. [Probably referring to a daughter rather than a son. In the Bible, this name is borne by at least eight other individuals—all of whom are, or might be, women. Biblical genealogies do occasionally identify a lineage by a woman's name. Here it seems to represent an Aramean people who lived east of the Jordan (see Deuteronomy 3:14; The Contemporary Torah, 2006, pp. xxii–xxiv). Maacah's mention perhaps further anticipates the forthcoming union between Isaac and Rebekah in Genesis. —Ed.]

—Tammi J. Schneider

Another View

LIKE THE PRECEDING PARASHAH, this one frames the theme of generational and genealogical continuity as a male affair. Women are constructed largely as sexual objects and procreative instruments with mostly a physical and corporeal relationship to the story of threatened birth and threatened survival. The two wife-sister episodes—in Genesis 12:10–20 and (in our parashah) 20:2–18—present Sarai/Sarah as a silent object of desire. Sarah is taken by Abimelech, king of Gerar, and later returned to her husband—as, one may say, a possession—while her husband is amply compensated for the king’s error. In her role as barren wife, she is a figure discussed by, rather than addressed directly by, God, who questions her skeptical laughter (18:12–14). The announcement of a male child is not transmitted by God to Sarah, but rather to Abraham, as she eavesdrops on the conversation at the entrance of the tent (18:10). As a mother, however, Sarah is validated by God, who advises Abraham to obey her demand that her rival, Hagar, and Hagar’s son, Ishmael, be removed from the household (21:12). Yet, beyond her protective role as mother, Sarah is neither consulted nor even mentioned in the story of the great test of faith that Abraham endures when God asks him to sacrifice his one and only remaining son at the altar (22:1–19).

It can be argued, then, that in this parashah the mother’s role is limited to procreation, nurturance, and physical protectiveness. Sarah, in fact, disappears from the story as soon as Abraham is rewarded for the successful test and blessed with future progeny (22:16–19).

Women have mostly a corporeal relationship to the story of threatened survival.

Still, as God makes clear, it is Sarah’s son, not merely Abraham’s, who is God’s chosen. Stories about Hagar and Ishmael, and about Lot’s daughters, continue the theme of threatened survival in which women ensure the safety of the next generation: God responds to Hagar’s cry for help (21:15–21); Lot’s daughters, who first appear as silent sexual objects, and whose procreative role is temporarily threatened (19:1–8), daringly initiate incestuous sexual relations with their father and secure generational continuity (19:30–38).

—Esther Fuchs

Post-biblical Interpretations

“Why is Sarah laughing so...?” (18:13). In Genesis 18:12, Sarah’s laughter at the prediction that she would soon bear a child was prompted as much by her husband’s advanced age as her own. According to Midrash B’reishit Rabbah 48.18 and BT Bava M’tzia 87a, however, God’s query omitted Sarah’s reference to Abraham’s age so as to preserve good will between husband and wife, demonstrating that truth may be compromised for the sake of peace. The Rabbis also noted that Sarah was the only woman to whom God spoke directly, on account of her righteousness. When God spoke to Hagar or Rebekah, it was through an angel or an intermediary (B’reishit Rabbah 48.20).

his wife looked behind him and became a pillar of salt (19:26). According to one midrashic tradition, Lot’s wife turned around to ensure that her daughters were still following—and inadvertently beheld the Shechinah, who had descended to rain fire and brimstone on Sodom (Pirkei D'Rabbi Eliezer 25).

God restored Abimelech, his wife, and his female slaves, and they bore children (20:17). The Rabbis appreciated Sarah's discomfort after Abimelech's wife and even his slave girls gave birth. The angels cried out to God on Sarah's behalf, claiming that it was only just that she too bear a child (P'sikta Rabbati 42). In other texts, the conception of Isaac is attributed to Sarah's enduring trust in God during this painful episode (B'reishit Rabbah 53.3).

וַיְהִי now remembered Sarah (21:1). According to B'reishit Rabbah 53.8 and P'sikta Rabbati 42, God rejoiced in Isaac's birth by showering gifts on the whole of Creation: infertile women gave birth; the blind were granted sight; the deaf could now hear; and the insane became sane. God was so exultant that the sun shone forth with a full radiant splendor not seen since Creation.

Sarah shall nurse children (21:7). [The plural noun is surprising, given that Sarah has only one son. Rabbi Levi read this rhetorical flourish as a sign that Sarah had surplus milk and nursed others' children as well (BT Bava M'tzia 87a). —Ed.]

Now Sarah saw the son... playing (21:9). Citing a series of verses linked by multiple usages of m'tzachek ("playing"), the Rabbis defend Sarah's culpability in the expulsions of Hagar and Ishmael by suggesting that Ishmael was actually "making sport" by seducing women, engaging in idolatrous practices, and even threatening Isaac by shooting arrows in his direction. These activities border on the three most serious public offenses in Jewish law: idolatry, rape, and murder. The Rabbis explained that God told Abraham to listen to Sarah's demand to expel Hagar and Ishmael because her perceptions were inspired by prophecy (BT M'gilah 14a; BT Sanhedrin 69b; Seder Olam Rabbah 2).

God heard the boy's cry (21:17). The midrash notes that God answered Ishmael although it was Hagar who cried out. This is because "sick persons' prayers on their own behalf are more efficacious than those of anyone else" (B'reishit Rabbah 53.14).

God then opened her eyes, and she saw a well (21:19). This was said to be Miriam's Well, created on the eve of the first Shabbat of Creation (Pirkei D'Rabbi Eliezer 30). Rabbi Benjamin suggested that the phraseology of the text teaches that "All are blind until God brings light to their eyes" (B'reishit Rabbah 53.19).

After these things (22:1). Sefer HaYashar, parashat Vayeira, suggests that when God commanded Abraham to offer up his son, Abraham masked his intentions and informed Sarah that he was taking Isaac to study with the sages. Sarah agreed but begged Abraham to protect Isaac on the journey and not to keep him away for long, "for his soul is bound up with mine."

Sick persons' prayers on their own behalf are more efficacious than those of anyone else.

after all these things (22:20). Strikingly, Sarah is never mentioned in Genesis 22, but Genesis 23 will begin with her death. This juxtaposition led to the tradition that when Sarah learned that Abraham planned to offer Isaac as a sacrifice to God, she died of grief, thinking her son dead (B'reishit Rabbah 58.5). Other versions suggest that when Satan (or the demon Samael) told Sarah that Isaac had been sacrificed, she began to weep and cried aloud three times, corresponding to the shofar's three sustained notes (t'kiyah) on Rosh HaShanah, followed by three laments corresponding to the three disconnected short notes (t'ruah). Her soul then fled and she died (Pirkei D'Rabbi Eliezer 32). According to others, Sarah died of shock when she learned that Isaac had actually survived (Tanchuma on Vayeira 23; Midrash HaGadol).

—Ruth H. Sohn

Contemporary Reflection

THIS EXTRAORDINARILY RICH PARASHAH is filled with violence—not just the obvious and dramatic violence of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah and the incipient violence of the binding of Isaac, but also various, more ordinary, forms of violence against women. Half-buried in the vivid description of the people of Sodom gathering around Lot's house and demanding the strangers staying with him is Lot's reply, "Look—I have two daughters who have never been intimate with a man; let me bring them out for you, and do to them as you please. But do nothing to these men, for they have come under the shelter of my roof" (19:8). While a later midrash will see Lot's offer as evidence that he was infected by the wickedness of Sodom and picture him as having been punished (Tanchuma Vayeira 12), the biblical text offers no explicit judgment on his behavior. The violence of the people of Sodom merits the destruction of the city, but the willingness of Lot to see his daughters assaulted and raped is apparently unworthy of comment.

At the beginning of Genesis 20, we have another form of violence: the second of two stories (or two versions of the same story; see 12:10–20) in which Abraham seeks to pass off his wife Sarah as his sister in order to protect himself. In this passage, Abimelech, king of Gerar, seizes Sarah, but her potential rape is averted when God keeps Abimelech from touching her. The similar tale will be repeated once again in relation to Isaac and Rebekah (26:6–11). The three-fold reiteration of the narrative suggests that it might serve as a paradigm of the situation of Jewish women. The first two male ancestors of the Jews, perceiving themselves as “other” and therefore endangered in foreign lands, use their wives as buffers between themselves and the larger culture. The women become the “others’ other,” the ones whose safety and well-being can be sacrificed in order to save the patriarchs’ skins. The story names a pattern that becomes a recurring part of Jewish history: male Jews, subordinated by the dominant culture, in turn subordinate women within their own cultures, doubling the otherness that partly mirrors their own. As in the case of Lot’s offering his daughters to the people of Sodom, the biblical text offers no comment on or protest against this situation. Unlike when God appears to Abimelech in a dream and threatens him with death unless he releases Sarah (Genesis 12), God does not explicitly chastise Abraham or Lot.

Then, in Genesis 21, we meet still another form of violence—this time Sarah’s violence against Hagar.

Can we strengthen our resolve to hold both ourselves and God accountable?

After Sarah bears Isaac in her old age, she tells Abraham to throw the slave girl Hagar and her son Ishmael out of the house, so that Ishmael will not share in his father’s inheritance along with Isaac. The violence that is practiced by Abraham against Sarah, she now recapitulates in relation to the most vulnerable person in her own household. Thus, the cycle of abuse goes on. In this context, not only does the text not judge Sarah, but God is explicitly on her side, telling Abraham to listen to Sarah because her son Isaac will be the bearer of the covenantal line.

This Torah portion makes clear that our ancestors are by no means always models of ethical behavior that edify and inspire us. On the contrary, often the Torah holds up a mirror to the ugliest aspects of human nature and human society. It provides us with opportunities to look honestly at ourselves and the world we have created, to reflect on destructive patterns of human relating, and to ask how we might address and change them. In Lot’s treatment of his daughters—and in the Torah's lack of comment on that treatment—can we see the casual acceptance, indeed the invisibility, of violence against women that is so ubiquitous in many cultures, including our own? In Abraham's seeming lack of concern about the fate of Sarah, can we see the ways in which marginalized peoples are all too liable to duplicate patterns of subordination from which they themselves have suffered? In Sarah's banishment of Hagar, can we see the horizontal violence that oppressed people visit on each other as they jockey for what seems to them limited resources, rather than making common cause against the forces that suppress them? And what do we do when we see ourselves enacting these patterns in our own personal and political lives? How do we respond to and interrupt them?

It is striking that throughout the portion, God is implicated in the violence in the text. Except in the case of Lot's willingness to sacrifice his daughters, God carries out or commands the violence (Sodom and Gomorrah; Isaac) or supports it (Abraham and Sarah; Sarah and Hagar). The representations of violence that the text holds up to us are ones on which the human and divine levels mirror each other. There is no cosmic relief, so to speak, from the reality of violence. Abraham's challenge to God over the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah can thus be seen as a question to both God and ourselves. "Must not the Judge of all the earth do justly?" Abraham asks God. "Will You indeed sweep away the innocent along with the wicked?" (18:23). The implication of these questions is that it is the judge of all the earth who creates the ethical norms that Abraham reflects back to God and to which he holds God answerable. But the moral voice in this passage is Abraham's voice. What happens to that moral vision two chapters later when Abraham betrays his wife Sarah? Can we read these narratives in ways that strengthen our resolve to hold both ourselves and God accountable to standards of justice that we recognize and value—and yet continually violate?

—Judith Plaskow

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

His Wife

Shirley Kaufman (transl. Myra Glazer)

Genesis 19:26

But it was right that she looked back. Not to be curious, some lumpy reaching of the mind that turns all shapes to pillars.
But to be only who she was apart from them, the place exploding, and herself defined. Seeing them melt to slag heaps and the flames slide into their mouths.
Testing her own lips then,
the coolness, till
she could taste the salt.

A Meditation in Seven Days

Alicia Suskin Ostriker

Genesis 21:1–21

The lines of another story, inscribed
And reinscribed like an endless chain

A proud old woman, her face desert-bitten
Has named her son: laughter

Laughter for bodily pleasure, laughter for old age triumph
Hagar the rival stumbles away

In the hot sand, along with her son Ishmael
They nearly die of thirst, God pities them

But among us each son and daughter
Is the child of Sarah, whom God made to laugh.

Sarah

Edna Aphek (transl. Yishai Tobin)

Genesis 21:1–21

1

Sarah was a woman
soft and pliant
like a furrowed field and he with Hagar.

2

Sarah was soft and pliant quiet and kind a woman and he with Hagar.

3

Sarah was a woman
quiet and kind crushed and cruel
and he with Hagar.

4

Sarah was crushed and cruel
a woman
when her womb was soft with son call her the laughing one.

from Sarah and Hagar

Linda Hirschhorn

Genesis 21:1–21

I am calling you, O Sarah;
This is your sister, Hagar, calling through the centuries to reach you from afar....

Oh yes, I am your Sarah.
I remember you, Hagar.
Your voice comes through the distance,
a cry upon my heart.

With My Grandfather

Zelda (transl. Marcia Falk)

Genesis 22:1–19

Like our father Abraham who counted stars at night, who called out to his Creator from the furnace, who bound his son
on the altar—
so was my grandfather.
The same perfect faith
in the midst of the flames, the same dewy gaze
and soft-curling beard.
Outside, it snowed;
outside, they roared:
“There is no justice, no judge.”
And in the shambles of his room, cherubs sang of the Heavenly Jerusalem.

from The Sacrifice

Chana Bloch

Genesis 22:1–19

2
The patriarch in black takes candle and knife
like cutlery, rehearsing under his breath
the Benediction on the Death of an Only Son.

Isaac stoops under the raw wood, carries his father on his back, candle, velvet and all.

3

On the woodpile
Isaac's body waits
as women wait, fever trilling under his skin.

He will remember the blade's white silence, the waiting under his father's eyes.

I Will Not Offer

Ra'aya Harnik (transl. Ruth Kartun-Blum)

Genesis 22:1–19

I will not offer
My first born for sacrifice
Not I
At night God and I
Make reckonings
Who can claim what
I know and am Grateful
But not my son
And not for sacrifice

חַיִּי שָׁרָה ◆ Chayei Sarah

GENESIS 23:1–25:18

From Sarah to Rebekah

PARASHAT CHAYEI SARAH (“the life of Sarah”) opens with the death and burial of Sarah. It centers on the introduction of Rebekah as a wife to Isaac and concludes with the deaths of Abraham and of Ishmael. Within this framework, the Torah relates two incidents in detail: how Sarah’s death prompts Abraham’s purchase of a burial plot in the promised land; and how Rebekah agrees to leave her homeland and family in Aram-naharaim in order to marry Isaac.

With these two incidents, Abraham begins to realize the divine promises of land and progeny. It becomes evident that these divine promises are deeply connected to the lives of women, in particular to the matriarchs. To guarantee that Sarah has a permanent resting spot, Abraham purchases the cave of Machpelah. This purchase marks Abraham’s first concrete step toward realizing the divine promise of land, for he acquires legitimate title to the field containing the cave. Second, Abraham achieves his goal that Isaac marry a woman from the land of his birth when Rebekah emerges as a more-than-suitable wife for Isaac. Through that marriage to Isaac, the future of the patriarch’s family will be assured and, by extension, the covenant with God will be renewed.

The longest unit in the parashah, Genesis 24, is devoted to what has been called the Courting of Rebekah. It introduces Rebekah as an energetic young woman who, like Abraham (Genesis 12), embarks on a journey to a distant land.

These divine promises are deeply connected to the lives of women.

The closing unit accentuates Isaac’s special standing. Abraham sends away the sons who were born to him through his subsequent wife, Keturah, and through the concubines he had taken (25:1–6). Isaac thus remains his sole heir. This accords both with God’s promise that “My covenant I will maintain with Isaac” (Genesis 17:21) and with Sarah’s demand that Ishmael (and presumably other of Abraham’s sons) not inherit with her son, Isaac (21:10). This separation from Ishmael highlights the continuing question of identity formation in relation to other peoples.

—Yairah Amit

Outline—

I. SARAH'S DEATH LEADS ABRAHAM TO ACQUIRE LAND

The Purchase of the Field of Machpelah (23:1–20)

- A. Sarah's death (vv. 1–2)
- B. Abraham negotiates for a burial ground (vv. 3–18)
- C. Conclusion: Sarah's burial (vv. 19–20)

II. ABRAHAM ENSURES THE COVENANT'S CONTINUITY

Rebekah Becomes Isaac's Wife (24:1–67)

- A. Exposition: Abraham as blessed (v. 1)
- B. Abraham commissions his servant to bring a wife for Isaac (vv. 2–10a)
- C. The servant meets Rebekah at the well (vv. 10b–27)
- D. The servant meets Laban (vv. 28–31)
- E. Rebekah's betrothal (vv. 32–54a)
- F. Rebekah agrees to go (vv. 54b–58)
- G. Rebekah departs (vv. 59–61)
- H. Rebekah meets Isaac (vv. 62–66)
- I. Conclusion: Rebekah moves into Sarah's tent (v. 67)

III. ABRAHAM'S DESCENDANTS AND HIS DEATH (25:1–18)

- A. The descendants of Keturah (vv. 1–4)
- B. Isaac's status (vv. 5–6)
- C. Abraham's death and burial (vv. 7–11)
- D. Hagar's descendants (vv. 12–18)

23:1

Sarah lived to be 127 years old—such was the span of Sarah's life.² Sarah died in Kiriath-arba (that is, Hebron) in the land of Canaan, and

כג וַיָּחִי חִי שָׂרָה מֵאָה שָׁנָה וְעֶשֶׂרִים
שָׁנָה וְשָׁבָע שָׁנִים שְׁנִי חִי שָׂרָה:
² וַתָּמֻת שָׂרָה בְּקָרִית אַרְבָּעָה הוּא חֶבְרוֹן

Sarah's Death Leads Abraham to Acquire Land

THE PURCHASE OF THE FIELD OF MACHPELAH (23:1–20)

Why does the Torah present such a lengthy description of the purchase of the cave of Machpelah? Biblical narrative is usually sparing of details about realia and daily life, yet the negotiations over the purchase of the field containing the cave of Machpelah are reported fully. It seems that the purchase of the field symbolizes Abraham and his family's legal ownership of the entire promised land.

Abraham does not wish to purchase just a cave, but rather a whole burial site. He is particularly interested in Ephron's plot since it is apparently located on the outskirts of the town (23:9 and 17). All this would limit potential friction with Hebron's residents and ensure him free access to the cave. Abraham struggles to find a resting place not only for Sarah, but also for the generations he hopes would descend from him. This reflects the tension between his presently temporary status (no land and no assurance of descendants in his central line) and the promise that God has repeatedly made to him (a divine promise of land and progeny).

According to the Bible, this site will also become the burial place of Abraham, Isaac, Rebekah, Jacob, and Leah (Genesis 25:9–10, 35:27–29, 49:29–32, 50:13); hundreds of years later, the nearby city of Hebron will also serve as capital of David's kingdom until he conquers Jerusalem.

SARAH'S DEATH (23:1–2)

1. Sarah lived. Though beginning with her life, the chapter actually focuses on her death and burial. However, the notice that the marriage of Isaac and Rebekah is consummated in Sarah's tent (24:67) suggests that her life continues through the next matriarch.

127 years old. Sarah is the only matriarch whose age at death is reported. Her age surpasses the ideal 120 with the sacred number of 7.

2. Sarah died. No explanation is given as a cause of her death. It is reasonable to assume that it was her age, but as Abraham was last seen in Beersheba (22:19), some distance from where Sarah died, one may ask: Did Sarah know about Abraham's binding of Isaac (Genesis 22)? Was that a factor in her death? Perhaps Sarah had been living apart from Abraham.

Kiriath-arba. Another name for Hebron.

- Isaac's love for Rebekah is the first mention of spousal love in the Bible.

ANOTHER VIEW ► I27

- “The heart of her husband trusts in her” (Proverbs 31:11)—this is Sarah.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► I27

- Consider the history of a significant yet often obscured tradition in women's discourse, namely, mourning.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► I29

- I remember the music... in the firelight....

VOICES ► I31

Abraham proceeded to mourn for Sarah and to bewail her.

³Then Abraham rose up from upon his dead [wife], and spoke to the Hittites, saying, ⁴“I am a foreigner living for a time among you; sell me a gravesite among you, that I may bury my dead here.” ⁵The Hittites answered Abraham, saying, “Hear us, my lord; you are a mighty prince in our midst; bury your dead in any of our choicest graves. Not one of us will keep you from burying your dead by withholding a gravesite from you.”

⁷Abraham then got up and bowed low to the people of the land, the Hittites, ⁸pressing them: “If you [really] are willing to let me bury my dead here, listen to me and entreat Ephron son of Zoar for me, ⁹and let him sell me the cave of Machpelah. He owns it—it is at the edge of his land. Let him sell it to me as an inalienable gravesite in your midst at the market price.” ¹⁰Ephron [himself] was sitting among the Hittites, and, in the hearing of all the בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן וִיבָּא אֲבָרָהָם לְסַפֵּד לְשֹׁרֶה

וְלְבִּפְתָּחָה:

³וַיַּקְרֵם אֲבָרָהָם מֵעַל פָּנֶיו מִתּוֹן וַיְדַבֵּר אֶל-
בְּנֵי-חַת לְאמֹר: ⁴גָּרְיוֹתָו שָׁב אָנוּכִי עַמְּכָם
הַנּוּ לִי אֲחֹזֶת קְבָּר עַמְּכָם וְאַקְבָּר מִתּוֹן
מִלְּפָנֵי: ⁵וַיַּעֲנֵנוּ בְּנֵי-חַת אֶת-אֲבָרָהָם
לְאמֹר לוֹ: ⁶שְׁמַעַנוּ אָדָנִי נְשִׂיא אַלְהִים-
אַתָּה בְּתוֹכֵנוּ בְּמִבְּחָר קְבָּרֵינוּ קְבָּר אַתָּה-מַתָּךְ אִישׁ מִמְּנוּ אַתָּקְבָּרוּ לְאִיכְלָה מִמְּךָ
מִקְבָּר מִתְּחָ:

⁷וַיַּקְרֵם אֲבָרָהָם וַיִּשְׁתַּחַוו לְעַמִּי-הָאָרֶץ לְבָנֵי-חַת: ⁸וַיְדַבֵּר אֶתְּנָם לְאמֹר אִם-יִשְׁאָתֵ- נְפָשָׁתָם לְקַבֵּר אֶת-מִתְּחָי מִלְּפָנֵי שְׁמַעֲנִי
וּפְגֻּעוּלִי בְּעִפְרוֹן בְּנֵצֶחָר: ⁹וַיִּתְּחַלֵּי אֶת-
מִעֵרָת הַמַּכְפֵּלָה אֲשֶׁר-לוֹ אֲשֶׁר בְּקָצָה
שְׂדָהוּ בְּכֶסֶף מְלָא יִתְּנַנֵּה לִי בְּתוֹךְכֶם
לְאֲחֹזֶת-קְבָּר: ¹⁰וְעִפְרוֹן יִשְׁבֶּב בְּתוֹךְ בָּנֵי-
חַת וַיַּעֲנֵן עִפְרוֹן הַחַתִּי אֶת-אֲבָרָהָם בְּאָזְנֵי

Abraham proceeded to mourn for Sarah and to bewail her. This verse marks one of only two instances where the Torah uses the root s-p-d, to mourn. (The other is in Genesis 50:10, when Joseph mourns the passing of his father Jacob.) This is also the only place where the text mentions details of mourning in connection with a woman’s death. Even Jacob’s mourning over his beloved Rachel is not recorded (Genesis 35:19–20).

ABRAHAM NEGOTIATES FOR A BURIAL GROUND (23:3–18)

As soon as Abraham rises from beside Sarah’s body, he seeks out her burial place. Abraham addresses a representative body of town citizens that is called “the Hittites” but also “the people of the land” (v. 7) and “the town leaders” (literally “those who entered the gate of the city”; v. 10). Hittites are associated with an ancient empire that was centered in today’s Turkey.

As Abraham declares at the outset, he is a resident alien (a “foreigner living for a time” among the native population) and thus dependent upon the good will of the local landowners. He makes it clear that he wishes to acquire an entire burial site, including field, cave and trees—not only a cave. This language reflects Abraham’s attempt to realize God’s first promise to him, of land. It also foreshadows his steps to realize God’s second promise, of progeny (Genesis 24).

6. “a mighty prince in our midst.” The Hittites address Abraham with a respectful title.

7–9. The courtesy, respect, and ready response of the Hittites allow Abraham to specify that he is particularly interested in the cave within the plot of Ephron, and that he wishes to purchase it at whatever price they require.

Hittites and all the town leaders, Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham, saying,¹¹ “No, my lord; listen to me. I am giving you the field, and the cave that is in it I give to you; in the sight of my people I give it to you; go ahead—bury your dead.”

¹² But Abraham bowed low before the landowning citizens,¹³ and in their hearing he addressed Ephron the Hittite: “Oh, if only you would listen to me! I will pay the field’s price; take it from me, and let me bury my dead there.”¹⁴ Ephron then made this reply to Abraham: ¹⁵ “My lord, hear me: land worth 400 shekels of silver—what is that between you and me? Go bury your dead!”

¹⁶ Abraham listened to Ephron, and Abraham weighed out for Ephron the [amount of] silver he had named in the hearing of the Hittites—400 shekels of silver, [using weights] standard among traders.^{17–18} So Ephron’s land in Machpelah, looking out on Mamre—the field, its cave, and all the trees in the field within its boundaries—passed to Abraham by purchase, in the sight of the Hittites and of all the town leaders.

¹⁹ Afterward, Abraham buried his wife Sarah in the cave of the field of Machpelah—facing Mamre (that is, Hebron)—in the land of Canaan.²⁰ Thus was confirmed Abraham’s acquisition from the Hittites of the field and its cave as a fully owned gravesite.

12–13. Abraham makes it clear that he does not want a grant or gift; rather, he desires legal rights to the entire field through full purchase of the property.

14–15. Ephron takes advantage of the situation and demands an exorbitant sum.

16–18. Abraham does not haggle, but hastens to pay the required sum, high as it might be. The purchase is made according to legal custom in the presence of the town’s leaders, at the city gate, which is the traditional seat of justice and place to notarize

בְּנִיהַת לְכָל בְּאֵי שֹׁעֲרַעִירּוֹ לִאמֶר: ¹¹ לֹא-אָדָנִי שְׁמֻעַנִי הַשְׂדָה נִתְתִּי לְךָ וְהַמְּעֵרֶה אֲשֶׁר-בָּוְלָה נִתְתִּיתָ לְעִינִי בְּנִי עַמִּי נִתְתִּיתָ לְךָ קָבֵר מִתְחָ:

¹² וַיֵּשְׁתַחַוו אֲבָדָם לִפְנֵי עַם הָאָרֶץ: ¹³ וַיַּדְבֵּר אֶל-עֲפָרוֹן בְּאֹזְנֵי עַם-הָאָרֶץ לִאמֶר אָרָךְ אַמְּתָה לֹו שְׁמֻעַנִי נִתְתִּי בְּסֶף הַשְׂדָה קָח מִמֶּנִּי וְאַקְבָּרָה אַת-מִתְּחָ שְׁמָה: ¹⁴ וַיַּעֲנֵן עֲפָרוֹן אַת-אֲבָדָם לְאָמָר לֹו: ¹⁵ אָדָנִי שְׁמֻעַנִי אָרָץ אֶרְבָּע מֵאוֹת שְׁקָל-בְּסֶף בֵּין וּבֵין מְה-הָוֹא וְאַת-מִתְּחָ קָבֵר:

¹⁶ וַיִּשְׁמַע אֲבָדָם אֶל-עֲפָרוֹן וַיִּשְׁקַל אֲבָדָם לַעֲפָרוֹן אַת-הַבָּסֶף אֲשֶׁר דָּבַר בְּאֹזְנֵי בְּנִיהַת אֶרְבָּע מֵאוֹת שְׁקָל בְּסֶף עַבְרָל לְסֶחר: ¹⁷ וַיָּקֹם | שְׂדָה עֲפָרוֹן אֲשֶׁר בְּמִכְפָּלָה אֲשֶׁר לִפְנֵי מִמְּרָא הַשְׂדָה וְהַמְּעֵרֶה אֲשֶׁר-בָּוְלָה כָּל-הָעָז אֲשֶׁר בְּשְׂדָה אֲשֶׁר בְּכָל-גְּבָלוֹ סְבִיב: ¹⁸ לְאַבָּדָם לְמִקְנָה לְעִינִי בְּנִיהַת בְּכָל בְּאֵי שֹׁעֲרַעִירּוֹ:

¹⁹ וְאַחֲרֵיכֶן קָבֵר אֲבָדָם אַת-שְׁרָה אֲשֶׁתָּו אֶל-מִעֲרָת שְׂדָה הַמִּכְפָּלָה עַל-פְּנֵי מִמְּרָא הוּא חֶבְרוֹן בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן: ²⁰ וַיָּקֹם הַשְׂדָה וְהַמְּעֵרֶה אֲשֶׁר-בָּוְלָה לְאַבָּדָם לְאַחֲזָת-קָבֵר מֵאת בְּנִיהַת: ס transactions. The text emphasizes that the purchase includes the field and all it contains. Similar declarations recur afterward (25:9–10, 49:29–32, 50:13), indicating the importance of the purchase.

CONCLUSION: SARAH’S BURIAL (23:19–20)

More time is devoted to the negotiations than to the burial itself (on burial customs, see Va-y’chi, Another View, p. 297). After Sarah is buried, the text reiterates that the field and all within it became 24 Abraham was old, well advanced in years, and יהוה had blessed Abraham in every way.² Abraham now said to his slave, the elder of his household, who had oversight of all that was his, “Put your hand under my thigh,³ so that I may have you

כד וְאַבְרָהָם זָקֵן בָּאָבִים וַיֹּהֶה בָּנָה אֶת-אַבְרָהָם בְּפָלָל: ² וַיֹּאמֶר אַבְרָהָם אֶל-עֲבָדָיו זָקֵן בֵּיתוֹ הַמֶּשֶׁל בְּכָל-אֶשְׁר-לוּ שָׁים-נָא יָרַךְ תַּחַת יְרֻכִּי: ³ וְאַשְׁבִּיעָךְ בַּיְהֹוָה

Abraham's rightful possession. Thus Sarah's grave is the first permanent, legal presence in the land promised to Abraham and to their descendants.

Abraham Ensures the Covenant's Continuity

REBEKAH BECOMES ISAAC'S WIFE (24:1–67)

The major factor that motivates the story of Rebekah's betrothal is Abraham's concern with preventing his son Isaac, his designated heir to the divine promise, from establishing blood ties with the Canaanites in the land. The story turns upon divine providence and God's covert intervention. God is present behind the scenes, planning and directing the course of events.

Concerns with group identity and its relation to the surroundings continue throughout the patriarchal and matriarchal narratives, which repeatedly stress ties with the land of Israel. Thus Abraham takes pains to obtain his servant's promise not to allow Isaac to return to the land Abraham left behind. At the same time, Abraham sends his servant to bring a wife for Isaac from his extended family in the distant homeland, preferring family ties over those with the natives of the land. In contrast to this attitude, the story of Joseph will later report, with no hint of criticism, that he marries the Egyptian daughter of an Egyptian priest (Genesis 41:45). In other words, Genesis integrates apparently conflicting positions alongside each other—as is found throughout the Bible. One tendency calls for keeping separate from the other nations (see Deuteronomy 7:1–4, 23:4–9; Ezra 9–11), while the other outlook is universalistic and open to the stranger (see Exodus 12:38; Ruth 1–4).

This story also reflects the seemingly dual (even contradictory) positions that women hold throughout the Tanach: at times as passive characters, and at others as decision makers who assert their will on others. The text introduces Rebekah to the reader through a narrative account (24:15–16); but Rebekah introduces herself to the servant using her own words (24:24). At first, Rebekah's brother and father, Laban and Bethuel, give Rebekah to the servant so that she might marry Isaac (24:51). However, Rebekah is the one whose consent is needed before the caravan can depart (24:58). When Isaac wanders into the vicinity of Rebekah's camels (24:63), the story again focuses on Rebekah. At this point, she acts of her own volition.

This chapter, with 67 verses, is the longest in the book of Genesis. Its length is a direct result of the artistic use of repetition. Verses 15–20 report how all that the servant prayed for in vv. 13–14 actually transpired, and vv. 35–48 reiterate all that happened to the servant in vv. 2–26. The repetitions are not verbatim; rather, they display considerable alterations that shed light on the character of the servant, Rebekah, and the members of her family.

EXPOSITION: ABRAHAM AS BLESSED (24:1)

This verse emphasizes Abraham's wealth.

ABRAHAM COMMISSIONS HIS SERVANT TO BRING A WIFE FOR ISAAC (24:2–10a)

2–3. The thigh represents the male organ. Apparently, one who touches this member when swear by, יהוה, God of heaven and God of earth, that you will not take a wife for my son from among the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose midst I dwell. ⁴Rather, you shall go to my land, my birthplace, and get a wife for my son Isaac.” ⁵The slave replied, “Suppose the woman does not care to follow me to this land—should I then bring your son back to the land you came from?”

⁶Abraham then answered him, “Take great care not to bring my son back there! ⁷יהוה, the God of heaven—who took me from my father’s house, from the land of my birth, who spoke to me and promised me, saying, ‘To your descendants will I give this land’—will send a [divine] emissary before you, and you shall take a wife for my son from there. ⁸But if the woman does not care to follow you, you are released from this oath of mine—only do not bring my son back there!” ⁹The slave placed his hand under his master Abraham’s thigh and swore to him concerning this matter.

¹⁰The slave then took ten of his master’s camels and, laden with an abundant store of his master’s goods, got up and went to Aram-naharaim, to the city of Nahor. ¹¹He made the camels kneel down outside the city at the water-well, at eventide, at the time when the girls who draw water go forth, ¹²and he prayed: “יהוה, God of my master Abraham, please bring me luck today, and do a kind-swearing an oath is obliged to uphold that oath on pain of either sterility or death of offspring. That Abraham insists on such a grave oath illustrates the importance of the “right” wife for Isaac.

3. “daughters of the Canaanites.” See at 28:1.

4. “a wife for my son.” The word for “wife,” ishah, also means “woman.” It recurs frequently in these verses, emphasizing Abraham’s fear that Isaac will marry the “wrong” woman.

5. “Suppose the woman does not care to.” Literally, “perhaps the woman will be unwilling.” The servant’s question implies that the woman can legally

אלֹהִי הַשָּׁמְיִם וְאֶלֹּהִי הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר לֹא־
תֵּקֶח אֲשֶׁר לְבָנֵי מִבְנֹות הַפְּנֵנָיו אֲשֶׁר
אָנֹכִי יוֹשֵׁב בְּקֶרְבָּו: ⁴ כִּי אֶל־אֶרְצִי וְאֶל־
מוֹלְדָתִי תַּלְךְ וְלִקְחָתְךָ אֲשֶׁר לְבָנֵי לִיְצָחָק:
⁵ וְלֹאָמַר אֵלֵינוּ הַעֲבָד אָוֶל לְאִתְּתָאָבָה
הָאֲשֶׁר לְלִכְתָּת אָחָרִי אֶל־הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת
הַחַשֵּׁב אֲשִׁיב אַתְּ-בָנֶךָ אֶל־הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר־
יָצָאת מִשְׁם:

⁶ וְלֹאָמַר אֵלֵינוּ אַבְרָהָם הַשְׁמָר לְךָ פָּנָ
תְּשִׁיב אַתְּ-בָנֶךָ שָׁמֶה: ⁷ יְהוָה | אֶלֹּהִי
הַשָּׁמְיִם אֲשֶׁר לְקֹחָנִי מִבֵּית אָבִי וּמִאֶרְצִ
מוֹלְדָתִי וְאֲשֶׁר דָּבָר-לִי וְאֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּע-לִ
לְאָמַר לְזֹרֻעָךְ אַתְּ-הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת הוּא
יִשְׁלַח מַלְאָכָן לְפָנֶיךָ וְלִקְחָתְךָ אֲשֶׁר לְבָנֶ
מִשְׁם: ⁸ וְאַמְתָּא תָּאָבָה הָאֲשֶׁר לְלִכְתָּ
אָחָרִיךְ וְנִקְיַת מִשְׁבָּעַתִּי זֹאת רָק אַתְּ-בָנֶ
לֹא תִשְׁבַּ שָׁמֶה: ⁹ וַיִּשְׁם הַעֲבָד אַתְּ-יָדוֹ
תְּחִתְּ יָרָךְ אַבְרָהָם אֶדְנָיו וַיִּשְׁבַּע לוֹ עַל־
הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה:

¹⁰ וַיַּקְרֵחַ הַעֲבָד עַשְׂלָה גִּמְלִים מְגַמְּלִים אֶדְנָיו
וַיָּלֶךְ וּכְלַטְוֵב אֶדְנָיו בַּיּוֹם וַיָּקָם וַיָּלֶךְ
אֶל-אֶרְם נְהָרִים אֶל-עִיר נְחוֹר: ¹¹ וַיַּבְרֶךְ
הַגִּמְלִים מְחוֹזָן לְעִיר אֶל-בָּאָר הַמִּים לְעַת
עַרְבָּה לְעַת צָאת הַשָּׁאָבָת: ¹² וַיֹּאמֶר | יְהוָה
אֶלֹּהִי אֶדְנָי אַבְרָהָם הַקּוֹדֶשׁ נָא לְפָנֵי הַיּוֹם

choose to refuse. A woman cannot simply be “taken.”

6–8. Abraham’s response introduces a key biblical concept: the special bond between the family of the patriarchs and the land of Israel.

8. does not care to follow. See at v. 5 above.

THE SERVANT MEETS REBEKAH AT THE WELL (24:10b–27)

12. “יהוה, God of my master Abraham, please bring me luck today.” The turn of events is even better than the servant has reason to expect. The ness for my master Abraham.¹³ Here I am standing at the water-fount, and the daughters of the townspeople are going forth to draw water;¹⁴ the girl to whom I say, ‘Tip your pitcher and let me drink,’ and who replies, ‘Drink; and let me water your camels, too’—let her be the one You have designated for Your servant Isaac; that is how I shall know that You have done a kindness for my master.”

¹⁵ Before he was done praying, Rebekah, who had been born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, wife of Abraham’s brother Nahor, was going forth with her pitcher on her shoulder. ¹⁶ She was an exceedingly beautiful girl, of marriageable age, whom no man had yet known. She went down to the spring, filled her pitcher, and went up.

¹⁷ The slave ran toward her and said, “Let me sip a little water from your pitcher.” ¹⁸ And she replied, “Drink, sir!” Quickly she lowered

וְעַשְׂתָּה־חֶסֶד עִם אֲדֹנֵי אֶבְרָהָם : ¹³ הַנָּה
אָנֹכִי נִצְבֵּעַ עַל־עֵין הַמִּים וּבְנוֹתָן אֲנָשֵׁי הָעִיר
יֵצְאֹת לְשַׁאֲבָב מִים : ¹⁴ וְהִיא הַנֵּרֶת הַגְּעוּרָה
אֲשֶׁר אָמַר אֱלֹהִים תְּשִׁיבָא כִּדְלָה וְאַשְׁתָּה
וְאָמְרָה שְׁתָּה וְגַם־גַּמְלִיק אַשְׁקָה אַתָּה
הַכְּבָחָת לְעַבְדָּה לִיצָּחָק וּבָה אָדָע בִּירֻעָשִׁית
חֶסֶד עַמְּ-אָדָנִי :

¹⁵ וַיְהִי־הִוא טָרֵם בְּלָה לְדִבָּר וְהַנָּה רְבָקָה
יֵצֵאת אֲשֶׁר יַלְדָה לְבַתוּלָל בֶּן־מַלְכָה:
אִשְׁתָּחָזָר אֲחִי אֶבְרָהָם וּבָקָה עַל־שְׁכָמוֹה:
¹⁶ וְהַנֵּרֶת הַגְּעוּרָה טַבַּת מְרָאָה מִאָד בְּתוּלָה
וְאִישׁ לֹא יִדְעָה וַתַּרְדֵּד הַעִינָה וַתִּמְלָא כְּדָה וַתַּעַל :

¹⁷ וַיַּרְא חֶנְן הַעֲבָד לְקַרְאָתָה וַיֹּאמֶר הַגְּמִיאִנִי
נָא מַעֲט־מִים מִפְקָדָה : ¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר שְׁתָּה

developments appear to be the result of chance, but actually the reader has enough signs to understand that they are directed by God.

13. “the daughters of the townspeople are going forth to draw water.” A well figures in two other biblical stories as the meeting place where the hero encounters the woman he will marry (Jacob meets Rachel in Genesis 29:1–14; Moses meets Zipporah in Exodus 2:15–22). It is likely that this motif is rooted in ancient social reality, in which the well served as a place of meeting and assembly (Judges 5:11). In the framework of this motif, the characters’ behavior by the well is tested. In the present story, the girl’s hospitality surpasses the servant’s expectations. [Drawing well water appears to be the task specifically of the households’ daughters, who proceed unchaperoned (see also v. 11; I Samuel 9:11). —Ed.]

15. Milcah. See at 11:29 and 22:20.

going forth. As soon as Rebekah is introduced, she is an active character.

16. Rebekah possesses three virtues that neither Abraham nor the servant had stipulated.

marriageable age. The word b’tulah is often translated as “virgin” but has a broader meaning than a biological one. In the ancient world, women often married shortly after puberty; therefore, one can assume that Rebekah is very young. Isaac, her future husband, is forty years old (25:20).

whom no man had yet known. To “know” in the Bible often refers to sexual relationships. This phrase indicates that Rebekah is a virgin (see at 4:1).

18–19. Once the servant asks Rebekah for “a little water” from her jar (v. 17), she assumes the role of primary actor. Rebekah’s response portrays her as an energetic and resourceful woman, one ready to engage in conversation with a total stranger rather than retreat from such an encounter. Nothing suggests that Rebekah, or other women, were expected to be in seclusion, away from men’s gaze or contact, as would become customary later in the Middle East (see also 29:1–10).

18. “Drink, sir!” Rebekah instructs him gently.

her pitcher on her hand and let him drink.
¹⁹The drinking done, she said, “I will draw some for your camels, too, till they are done drinking.”
²⁰Quickly she emptied her pitcher in the trough and she again ran to the well to draw water, drawing water for all his camels.

²¹The man stood staring at her, silent, in order to learn whether or not יהוה had cleared the way for him. ²²When the camels were done drinking, the man took a gold nose-ring, a half-shekel in weight, and two bracelets for her wrists, ten gold shekels in weight, ²³and said, “Please tell me: whose daughter are you? Is there a place in your father’s house for us to lodge?” ²⁴She said to him, “I am Bethuel’s daughter; [he is] the son of Milcah, whom she bore to Nahor.” ²⁵And she added, “We have straw and fodder in abundance, as well as room for lodging.”

²⁶The man kneeled and bowed down to יהוה, ²⁷saying, “Blessed is יהוה, God of my master Abraham, whose faithful kindness has not deserted my master; as for me, יהוה led me straightaway to my master’s brother’s house!” ²⁸The girl then ran and related these things to her mother’s household.

²⁹Now Rebekah had a brother named Laban, and Laban ran outside to the man at the spring.

אָרְנִי וַתִּמְהַר וַתִּזְרֹד בְּךָה עַל־יְדֶךָה וַתִּשְׁקַחַהוּ:
¹⁹וַתִּכְלֵל לְהַשְׁקָתוֹ וַתֹּאמֶר גַּם לְגַמְלִיקָה
אֲשֶׁר עַד אַסְ-בָּלוּ לְשִׁתָּתָה: ²⁰וַתִּמְהַר
וַתֵּעֶר בְּךָה אֶל־הַשְׁקָתָה וַתַּרְצֵץ עוֹד אֶל־
הַבָּאָר לְשָׁאָב וַתִּשְׁאָב לְכָל־גַּמְלִיוֹ:

²¹וְהַאִישׁ מִשְׁתָּאָה לְהַמְּחִירִשׁ לְדַעַת
הַחֲצִילִית יְהוָה דָּרְבוֹ אַמְ-לָא: ²²וַיֹּהִי
בְּאָשֶׁר בְּלֹו הַגַּמְלִים לְשִׁתָּות וַיַּקְהֵל הָאִישׁ
גַּם זָהָב בְּקֻעַמְשָׁקָלוּ וְשָׁנִי צְמִידִים עַל־
יְדֵיה עֲשָׂרָה זָהָב מַשְׁקָלִים: ²³וַיֹּאמֶר בְּתָ
מַיִּתְהֵא תְּגִידֵי נָא לִי הַיּוֹשֵׁב בֵּית־אָבִיךָ מִקּוֹם
לְנוּ לְלִזְן: ²⁴וַתֹּאמֶר אַלְיוֹ בְּתִבְתְּחַואֵל
אָנֹכִי בֶּן־מַלְפָה אֲשֶׁר יָלְדָה לְנָחוֹר:
²⁵וַתֹּאמֶר אַלְיוֹ גַּם־תַּבְּנֵן גַּם־מַטְפּוֹא רַב
עַמְּנוּ גַּם־מִקּוֹם לְלִזְן:

²⁶וַיַּקְרֵד הָאִישׁ וַיְשַׁתְּחַווּ לְיְהוָה: ²⁷וַיֹּאמֶר
בָּרוּךְ יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי אָדָנִי אֶבְרָהָם אֲשֶׁר
לְאַעֲזֵב חַסְדָּו וְאַמְתָּנוּ מִעֵם אָדָנִי אָנֹכִי
בְּלֹרֶר נָחָנִי יְהוָה בֵּית אָחִי אָדָנִי: ²⁸וַתִּרְאֵן
הַנָּעֶר הַנָּעָרָה וַתַּגְּדֵל בֵּית אָמָה בְּדָבָרִים
הָאֶלָּה:

²⁹וַיַּרְבֵּקָה אָח וְשָׁמוֹ לְבָנָו וַיַּרְאֵן לְבָנָו אֶל־

19. “I will draw some for your camels, too.”
Given the amount of water a camel drinks, this is no easy task.

22–27. Based on this impressive display of character, the servant presents Rebekah with adornments even before she informs him that she is the granddaughter of Abraham’s brother. Her lineage is additional and decisive proof of divine intervention.

24. “I am Bethuel’s daughter; [he is] the son of Milcah, whom she bore to Nahor.” Rebekah introduces herself by naming her grandmother Milcah (compare v. 15). Rebekah’s mother remains unnamed in the story, even though she plays a role in the marriage negotiations (24:53).

THE SERVANT MEETS LABAN (24:28–31)

Rebekah’s brother Laban is the negative counterpart to Rebekah’s character. While she displays gracious hospitality toward the stranger, Laban is impressed first and foremost with the adornments she received from the stranger. Only then does Laban hasten to greet him.

28. her mother’s household. Although the servant asked about her father’s house (24:23), Rebekah goes to her mother’s house. At the end of this chapter she will move into Sarah’s tent (24:67). The mention of women’s domain (tent or house) occurs only in Genesis 24, the book of Ruth (1:8), ³⁰When Laban saw the nose-ring and the bracelets on his sister's wrists, and heard his sister Rebekah say, "This is what the man told me," he went to the man, who was still standing by his camels at the spring. ³¹"Come in, O blessed of יְהוָה!" said he. "Why stand outside when I have cleared the house, and [also made] space for the camels?" ³²So he ushered the man into the house, unsaddled the camels and gave them straw and fodder and brought water in to wash his feet and those of the men with him.

³³But when food was put in front of him, the man said, "I will not eat until I have had my say." He [Laban] said, "Speak!" ³⁴"I am the slave of Abraham," said he, ³⁵"and has blessed my master exceedingly and made him rich, giving him sheep and cattle, silver and gold, male and female slaves, camels and donkeys. ³⁶Sarah, my master's wife, bore him a son in her old age, and my master has given him everything he owns. ³⁷My master adjured me, saying, 'You must not choose a wife for my son from among the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I now live. ³⁸Go, rather, to my father's people, to my relations, and take a wife for my son.' ³⁹I said to my master, 'What if the woman will not follow me?' ⁴⁰He answered, 'Yahweh, before whom I have walked, will send an angel with you who will clear the way for you. You

הָאִישׁ הַחֲזִיכָה אֶל-הָעֵין: ³⁰ וַיֹּהִי | בְּרָאֹתֶ
אֶת-הַנְּצָרָם וְאֶת-הַצְמָדִים עַל-יְדֵי אֲחָתָוּ
וְכַשְׁמָעוּ אֶת-דְּבָרֵי רַבָּקָה אֲחָתָוּ לְאָמָר
בְּהַדְבֵּר אֱלֹהִי הָאִישׁ וַיָּבֹא אֶל-הָאִישׁ וְהַנְּהָ
עַמְדָה עַל-הַגְּמָלִים עַל-הָעֵין: ³¹ וַיֹּאמֶר בָּזָא
בָּרוּךְ יְהוָה לְמַה תַּעֲמֹד בְּחַיִץ וְאַנְכִי פְּנִיתִי
הַפִּתְחָה וּמִקּוּם לְגַמְלִים: ³² וַיָּבֹא הָאִישׁ
לְגַמְלִים וּמִמְּלֵים לְרַחֵץ רְגָלָיו וְרַגְלֵי הָאָנָשִׁים
אֲשֶׁר אָתָּוּ:

³³ וַיָּשָׂם וַיּוֹשֵׂם לִפְנֵיו לְאָכֵל וַיֹּאמֶר לֹא
אָכֵל עַד אִם-דְּבָרַתִּי דְּבָרִי וַיֹּאמֶר דְּבָרִ:
³⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר עַבְדָּךְ אָבָרָהָם אַנְכִי: ³⁵ וַיֹּהִי
בָּרוּךְ אֶת-אָדָנִי מֵאָדָן וַיָּגַדְלֵו וַיִּתְנַלֵּו צָאן
וּבָקָר וּכְסֵף וּזְהָבָב וּעֲבָדָת וּשְׁפָחוֹת וּגַמְלִים
וּחַמְרִים: ³⁶ וַיָּתַלֵּד שָׁרָה אֲשֶׁת אָדָנִי בָּן
לְאָדָנִי אָחָרִי זָקְנָתָה וַיִּתְנַלֵּו אֶת-כְּפָלָ
אֲשֶׁר-לָלו: ³⁷ וַיִּשְׁבַּעַנִי אָדָנִי לְאָמָר לֹא-
תַּקְחֵח אֲשֶׁר לְבָנֵי מִבְּנֹות הַכְּנָעָנִי אֲשֶׁר
אַנְכִי יִשְׁבַּב בָּאָרֶצָו: ³⁸ אֶם-לֹא אֶל-בֵּית-
אָבִי תַּלְךְ וְאֶל-מִשְׁפָּחָתִי וְלִקְחָתָ אֲשֶׁר
לְבָנֵי: ³⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-אָדָנִי אֱלֹהִי לְאַתְּהָךְ
הָאֲשֶׁר אָחָרִי: ⁴⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִי יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר-הַתְּהִלְכָתִי לִפְנֵיו יִשְׁלַח מֶלֶאכָו אֶתָּךְ and Song of Songs (3:4, 8:2)—texts in which we find women of strong character. The expression “mother's household” (beit em) emphasizes that the household is associated with women's activities. (For details about women's roles and households, see further Women in Ancient Israel—An Overview, p. xli.)

REBEKAH'S BETROTHAL (24:32–54a)

All the members of Rebekah's family take part in this encounter.

35–49. The servant emphasizes divine intervention in order to convince his hosts that his mission is in accordance with divine will—so that they will entrust Rebekah to him. The servant is also aware of the human weaknesses of his hosts; he therefore expands his description of Abraham's wealth (v. 35) and stresses that Isaac is his master's sole heir (v. 36). He also reverses the order in which he asked the name of the girl and presented her with ornaments so they would not say, “How could you give her [the jewelry] when you did not yet know who she was?” (Rashi).

will take a wife for my son from my clan, from my father's family.⁴¹ You will be free from your obligation only if you go to my relations and they refuse you. In that case, you will be free from your obligation.'

⁴²"When I came to the well today, I prayed, 'Yahweh, God of my master Abraham, if You truly intend to clear the way on which I am going,⁴³here I am at the water-fount. When a young woman comes out to get water, I will say to her, 'Please give me a drink of water from your pitcher.'⁴⁴If she answers, 'Go ahead and drink, and I will draw water for your camels, too'—let her be the one You have designated as the wife for my master's son.'⁴⁵Before I had finished rehearsing my thought, Rebekah came with a water pitcher on her shoulder and went down to the well to get water. I said to her: 'Please give me a drink.'⁴⁶She quickly lowered her pitcher and said, 'Drink, and I will water your camels, too.' So I drank, and she gave water to the camels, too.⁴⁷I asked her, 'Whose daughter are you?' And she answered, 'I am the daughter of Bethuel son of Nahor and Milcah.' Then I put the ring on her nose and the bracelets on her wrists.⁴⁸I knelt down in worship of Yahweh, and I praised the God of my master Abraham, who had led me on the right path to get the daughter of my master's brother for his son.⁴⁹And now, if you mean to treat my master with faithful kindness, tell me; if not, tell me, and I will turn in another direction."

⁵⁰Laban and Bethuel responded by saying, "This matter has emanated from Yahweh; we cannot answer you one way or another.⁵¹Look—Rebekah is before you; take [her] and go, and let her be your master's son's wife as Yahweh has decreed!"

50–51. After the servant's speech, it is wholly fitting that those present admit that the matter is in accordance with divine will, and that they therefore agree to place Rebekah in the servant's care.

והצליח דרך ולקחת אשה לבני ממשפחתי ומגיט אבוי:⁴¹ אֹז תִּנְקַה מְאֻלָּתִי כִּי תָבוֹא אֶל-מְשִׁפְחָתִי וְאַם-לֵא יִתְנַלֵּךְ וְהִנֵּת נְקֵי מְאֻלָּתִי:

⁴²וְאָבָא הַיּוֹם אֶל-הָעֵין וְאָמַר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִי אֲדֹנִי אֲבָרָהָם אֲמִישָׁכְבָא מִצְלִיחַ דָּרְבִּי אֲשֶׁר אֲנָכִי הַלְּךָ עַלְיהָ: ⁴³הַנָּה אֲנָכִי נָצַב עַל-עֵין הַמְּפִים וְהִנֵּה הַעֲלָמָה הַיְצָאת לְשָׁאָב וְאָמְרָתִי אֲלֵיכָה הַשְׁקִינִינָא מַעַט-מִים מַפְקָה: ⁴⁴וְאָמְרָה אֶל-גַּם-אַתָּה שְׁתָה וְגַם לְגַמְלִיךְ אֲשֶׁב הַוָּא הָאָשָׁה אֲשֶׁר הַכִּיחַ יְהוָה לְבָנְאָדָונִי: ⁴⁵אַנְיָ טָרָם אֲכַלָּה לְדָבָר אֶל-לְבִי וְהַנָּה רַבָּה יֵצַא וְכַדָּה עַל-שְׁכָמָה וְתַרְדֵּד הַעֲנִנה וְתַשְּׂאָב וְאָמַר אֲלֵיכָה הַשְׁקִינִי נָא: ⁴⁶וְתַמְהֹר וְתוֹרֵד בְּדָה מַעַלְיהָ וְתַאמְרֵ שְׁתָה וְגַם-גַּמְלִיךְ אֲשָׁקָה וְאַשְׁתָּה וְגַם הַגָּמְלִים הַשְׁקָתָה: ⁴⁷וְאַשְׁאַל אַתָּה וְאָמַר בַּת-יְמִינִי אַתָּה וְתַאמְרֵ בַּת-בְּתוּאֵל בְּנִנְחֹור אֲשֶׁר יַלְדָה-לָו מִלְכָה וְאַשְׁם הַנָּוֹט עַל-אַפָּה וְחַצְמִידִים עַל-יְדֵיכָה: ⁴⁸וְאַקְד וְאַשְׁתַחַווּ לְיְהוָה וְאָבָרָה אֲתִיהָ אֱלֹהִי אֲדֹנִי אֲבָרָהָם אֲשֶׁר הַנְּחִנִּי בְּדָרָךְ אַמְתָה לְקַחַת אֲתִיבַת-אַתִּי אֲדֹנִי לְבָנָו: ⁴⁹וְעַתָּה אֲמִישָׁלָם עֲשִׂים חֶסֶד וְאַמְתָה אֲתִיאָדָנִי הַגִּזּוּ לִי וְאַמְלֵא אַתָּה הַגִּזּוּ לִי וְאַפְנֵה עַל-יְמִינִין אוֹ עַל-שְׁמָאל:

⁵⁰וְלֹעֵן לְבָנָן וּבְתוּאֵל וְיִאָמְרוּ מִיהוּנָה יֵצֵא הַדָּבָר לֹא נַוְכֵל דָּבָר אֲלֵיכָה רֹע אָז-טוֹב: ⁵¹הַנָּה-רַבְקָה לְפָנֵיכָה קָח וְלֹךְ וְתַהֵי אַשָּׁה לְבָנְ-אָדָנִיךְ בְּאַשְׁר דָּבָר יְהוָה:

50. Laban and Bethuel. [The father and brother consent to Rebekah's marriage. The father's rare appearance here highlights his absence from what follows. —Ed.]

⁵²When Abraham's slave heard their words he bowed low to יְהוָה, ⁵³and brought out silver and gold objects, and articles of clothing, and gave them to Rebekah; and to her brother and mother he gave precious gifts. ⁵⁴So he and the men with him ate and drank and stayed overnight.

When they got up in the morning he said, "Send me off to my master." ⁵⁵Her brother and mother said, "Let the girl stay with us another few days—ten, perhaps—afterward she may go." ⁵⁶But he said to them, "Do not delay me, now that יְהוָה has cleared the way for me; send me off and let me go to my master." ⁵⁷They answered, "Let us call the girl and see what she has to say." ⁵⁸So they called Rebekah and asked her, "Will you go with this man?" And she said, "I will go."

⁵⁹They then sent their sister Rebekah off with

⁵²וַיֹּהִי כַּאֲשֶׁר שָׁמַע עָבֵד אֶבְרָהָם אֶת־
דְּבָרָיו וַיֵּשֶׁתּוּ אֶרְצָה לְיְהוָה : ⁵³וַיֹּצֵא
הָעָבֵד פְּלִיאָסָף וַיָּכֹל זָהָב וּבְגָנְדִים וַיִּתְן:
לִרְבָּקָה וּמְגַדְנָת נָתַן לְאַחִיה וּלְאַמְתָּא:
⁵⁴וַיָּאֶכְלֻוּ וַיֵּשְׁתּוּ הָוָא וְהָאָנָשִׁים אֲשֶׁר
עָמָו וַיָּלִינוּ
וַיִּקְרְמוּ בְּבָקָר וַיֹּאמֶר שְׁלַחֲנִי לְאַדְנִי:
⁵⁵וַיֹּאמֶר אָחִיךְ וְאַמְתָּא תִּשְׁבַּח הַנְּعָר הַנְּعָרָה
אָתָּנוּ יָמִים אָז עַשְׂור אַחֲר תִּלְךָ : ⁵⁶וַיֹּאמֶר
אַלְהָט אֶל־תָּאָחָרָו אָתָּי וְיְהוָה הַצְּלָיחָה
דָּרְכִּי שְׁלַחֲנִי וְאַלְכָה לְאַדְנִי : ⁵⁷וַיֹּאמֶר
נִקְרָא לְנָעָר לְנָעָרָה וּנְשָׁאָלָה אֶת־פִּיכָּה:
⁵⁸וַיִּקְרָא לִרְבָּקָה וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֶלְيָה הַתְּלִכְיָה
עִמְּהָאִישׁ הָאֵה וַתֹּאמֶר אֶלְךָ :
⁵⁹וַיִּשְׁלַחֲוּ אֶת־רִבְקָה אֶחָתָם וְאֶת־מִנְקָתָה

REBEKAH AGREES TO GO (24:54b-58)

55. Her brother and mother. [These two family members conduct the negotiations regarding the marriage that was approved in vv. 50-51. —Ed.]

58. "I will go." Rebekah's decision to leave her homeland and her family, go to a new place, and live with a man unknown to her, is reminiscent of Abraham, who left everything behind him in order to fulfill a divine command (12:1). Women's contribution to the fulfillment of national destiny finds its expression not only in their role as childbearers but also in their ability to take bold and vital action at critical moments. Rebekah's actions will later find an echo in Ruth's leaving her father, mother, and land of her own accord. When Ruth joins her fate with that of her mother-in-law, Naomi, and subsequently marries Naomi's kinsman Boaz, Ruth too contributes to fulfilling the national destiny, in that King David would be the future offspring of that union.

The apparent role of chance in both stories, as expressed by the Hebrew root k-r-h, links the book of Ruth and the story of Rebekah. The servant requests of God "please bring me luck today" (24:12), while of Ruth it is written "as luck would have it, it was the piece of land belonging to Boaz" (Ruth 2:3). Divine providence seems to direct the fate of both these women. Moreover, when the servant learns Rebekah's identity, he blesses God, saying, "Blessed is יְהוָה, God of my master Abraham, whose faithful kindness has not deserted my master" (Genesis 24:27). Likewise, when Naomi learns where Ruth gleaned, she pronounces a similar blessing, "Blessed be he of יְהוָה, who has not failed in kindness . . .!" (Ruth 2:20).

REBEKAH DEPARTS (24:59-61)

The family's blessing of Rebekah serves to reinforce her role in fulfilling the divine promises God made to Abraham—not only the blessing of progeny, but also a continued blessing of land.

her nurse, with Abraham's slave, and with his men,⁶⁰ bestowing this blessing upon Rebekah: "Sister, may you become thousands of myriads; may your descendants take possession of the gates of their foes!"⁶¹ Rebekah and her servant girls got up and mounted the camels and followed the man, as the slave took Rebekah and went off.

⁶²Now Isaac was coming from the approach to Be'er-lachai-ro'i, for he was living in the area of the Negev.⁶³ Going out toward evening to stroll in the field, Isaac looked up and saw—camels coming!⁶⁴ And Rebekah looked up: seeing Isaac, she got off the camel⁶⁵ and said to the slave: "Who is this man striding in the field coming to meet us?" "He is my master," said the slave. Taking a veil, she covered herself.⁶⁶ The slave then told Isaac all that he had

אֲתִ-עָבֵד אֶבְרָהָם וְאֶת-אֶנְשָׁיו:⁶⁰ וַיַּברְכֵו אֲתִ-רְבָּקָה וַיֹּאמְרוּ לָהּ אֲחַתָּנוּ אֶת הַיּוֹם לְאַלְפִי רַבָּה וַיִּרְשֵׁ וַיָּרֶךְ אֶת שַׁעַר שְׂנָאוֹ: ⁶¹ וַיָּקָם רַבָּה וַיַּעֲרַתָּה וַיַּרְכְּבָנָה עַל-הַגּוֹמְלִים וַיַּלְכְּבָנָה אַחֲרֵי הָאִישׁ וַיַּקְהֵל הַעֲבָד אֲתִ-רְבָּקָה וַיָּלֶךְ:

⁶² וַיַּצְחַק בָּא מִבּוֹא בָּאָר לְחֵי רָאֵי וְהָוָה יוֹשֵׁב בָּאָרֶץ הַנֶּגֶב: ⁶³ וַיֵּצֵא יְצָחָק לְשֻׁוֹחַ בָּשְׁדָה לְפָנָות עָרֵב וַיֵּשֶׁא עַיְנָיו וַיָּרֶא וְהָנָה גִּמְלִים בָּאִים: ⁶⁴ וַתֵּשֶׁא רַבָּה אֲתִ-עִינָה וַתֵּרֶא אֲתִ-יְצָחָק וַתִּפְלֶל מִעַל הַגּוֹמֵל: ⁶⁵ וַתֹּאמֶר אֶל-הַעֲבָד מִי-הָאִישׁ הַלְּחֵל הַהָּלֵר בָּשְׁדָה לְקַרְא-תָנוּ וַיֹּאמֶר הַעֲבָד הוּא אָדָן וַתִּקְחֵה הַצְּעִיף וַתִּתְכַּסֵּס: ⁶⁶ וַיָּסַר הַעֲבָד לְיְצָחָק אֶת בֶּל-הַדְּבָרִים אֲשֶׁר

59. her nurse. [Heb. menekta (her wet nurse). From Exodus 2—where Moses' mother is hired to nurse him for Pharaoh's daughter—we learn that wet nurses were sometimes paid (see at Exodus 2:9–10). Carol Meyers points out that most Israelite women (and their ancestors) probably nursed their own children, except perhaps for women in elite classes (Exodus, 2005, p. 41). | In this account, the nurse apparently has remained in the household long after Rebekah was weaned, implying that they have a special bond; she might function as a surrogate mother or companion for young Rebekah in a foreign land. Genesis 35:8 will mention this nurse again by name, with a notice of her death and burial in Beth El; see comment there. —Ed.]

60. "may you become thousands of myriads." Jews traditionally use this first part of the blessing in the bedeken ceremony before a wedding, when the groom places the veil upon the bride's face.

"may your descendants." [The family blesses Rebekah with the identical blessing that God's messenger used for Abraham in 22:17. —Ed.]

61. servant girls. [Their mention, like that of a wet nurse, implies that Rebekah's family is affluent. —Ed.]

REBEKAH MEETS ISAAC (24:62–66)

The text reintroduces Isaac by explaining that he had returned from the vicinity of Be'er-lachai-ro'i, the place where God has been revealed to Hagar (16:13–14). Yet as soon as Isaac sees the approaching camels (24:63), it is she who becomes the subject of the verbs (24:64).

65. "my master." This is the first time that the servant calls Isaac "my master" and not "my master's son."

Taking a veil, she covered herself. Rebekah's action may signal modesty. Is it because of her new status as a married woman? Not enough is known about the role of veils in ancient Israel.

66. As if the presence of Rebekah as wife elevates Isaac to the role of master, the servant tells Isaac (not Abraham) all that had occurred. Isaac is now fully established as the legitimate successor to his father.

done.⁶⁷ And Isaac brought her into the tent of his mother Sarah; he took Rebekah, and she became his wife and he loved her. Thus did Isaac take comfort after [the death of] his mother.

25 Abraham went on and took a wife named Keturah.² She bore to him Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak, and Shuah.³ Jokshan begot Sheba and Dedan, and Dedan's sons were Ashurim, Letushim, and Leummim.⁴ Midian's

עֲשָׂה: ⁶⁷ וַיִּבְאֶה יִצְחָק הָאֲהָלָה שָׂרָה אֲמֹר
וַיִּקְחֵח אֶת־רְבָקָה וַתִּהְיוֹ לְאִשָּׁה וַיִּאֱהֵב
וַיִּנְחַם יִצְחָק אֶחָדִי אֲמֹר: פ
כִּה וַיִּסְפֶּר אֶבְרָהָם וַיִּקְחֵח אִשָּׁה וַיִּשְׁמַע
קְטוּרָה: ² וַתַּלְדֵּד לוֹ אֶת־זִמְרָן וְאֶת־יְקָשָׁן
וְאֶת־מִדְּן וְאֶת־מִדְּן וְאֶת־יִשְׁבָּק וְאֶת־שָׁוֹחֵן
³ וַיִּקְשַׁן יָלֵד אֶת־שָׁבָא וְאֶת־דְּדוֹן וּבְנֵי דְּדוֹן
הַיּוּ אֲשֻׁורִים וְלְטוּשִׁים וְלְאַמִּים: ⁴ וּבְנֵי מִדְּן

CONCLUSION: REBEKAH MOVES INTO SARAH'S TENT (24:67)

The appearance of Rebekah, who is brought to his mother's tent, comforts Isaac for the death of his mother and hints to the reader to expect the continued fulfillment of the divine promises to the line of Abraham, through Isaac and Rebekah. This final verse, which focuses on Isaac's emotional connections to his mother and to his new wife, reasserts the central role that women play in realizing God's covenantal promises. Sarah's death had inspired Abraham to purchase the field of Machpelah as a burial site (chapter 23), while Rebekah's marriage to Isaac will soon allow the family to be blessed with more children.

tent of his mother. The combination of "tent" with "mother" appears only here. (On the similar combination of "household" with "mother," see at 24:28.)

she became his wife and he loved her. This is the first time that we read about a man's love for a woman. Biblical literature only twice mentions women's love of men (Michal's love for David in I Samuel 18:20 and 28; and the Song of Songs). Men's love appears more frequently, as for example Jacob's love for Rachel (Genesis 29:18), Shechem's love of Dinah (34:3), and Jonathan's love for David (I Samuel 18:1, 3). In many of those cases, as in ours, the use of the verb "love" implies a sexual relationship.

Abraham's Descendants and His Death (25:1–18)

The final unit reports Abraham's additional marriage to Keturah, his additional offspring by Keturah, and their settling in the land of the East (vv. 1–4); Isaac's favored position (vv. 5–6); the length of Abraham's life, his death, and his burial (vv. 7–11); and finally the genealogy of Ishmael's descendants, their dwelling-place, the length of Ishmael's life, and his death (vv. 12–18).

In the previous story, Abraham's concern was providing Isaac with a wife. In this unit, he takes steps to ensure that his other sons shall have no portion in the inheritance of the land of Canaan, which is destined for Isaac's hands alone. In this manner, he fulfills Sarah's demand that others will not inherit with her son Isaac (21:10).

THE DESCENDANTS OF KETURAH (25:1–4)

Some interpreters see Keturah as one of Abraham's concubines, since v. 6 mentions "the sons of Abraham's concubines." Such is in fact stated in I Chronicles 1:32. The name Keturah is connected in Hebrew to incense and fragrant spices (see Song of Songs 3:6). The Bible gives no further information about her (but see Post-biblical Interpretations, p. 127).

2–4. The names of the sons of Keturah are those of nomadic desert tribes.

sons were Ephah, Epher, Hanoch, Abida, and El-daaah. All these were Keturah's sons.⁵ Abraham gave all that he owned to Isaac,⁶ but to the sons of Abraham's concubines, Abraham gave gifts; while he was still alive, he sent them away from Isaac, eastward to the land of Kedem.

⁷These are the days of the years of Abraham's life: he lived 175 years. ⁸Abraham breathed his last and died in good old age, full of age, and was gathered to his people. ⁹His sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the cave of Machpelah, facing Mamre, in the field of Ephron son of Zoar the Hittite,¹⁰ the field that Abraham had bought from the Hittites; there Abraham and his wife Sarah were buried. ¹¹After the death of Abraham, God blessed his son Isaac, and Isaac lived near Be'er-lachai-ro'i.

ISAAC'S STATUS (25:5–6)

The fact that Abraham wills what he owns to Isaac, while only leaving gifts to the sons he had with his concubines, further asserts Rebekah's central role as replacing Sarah (see 24:67).

6. Abraham's grant of gifts to his sons is reported before his death is, indicating that he took care to dispose of the inheritance in his lifetime.

concubines. [The reference seems to be to Hagar and Keturah. Hagar is also described as Sarah's slave (25:12). The Hebrew word pilegesh (concubine) may derive from Greek. It refers to women with a status between a wife and a slave: technically independent, with sustenance coming from the man or men in the household, yet free to leave (compare Judges 19:1–3). A 3rd-century-B.C.E. Greek source (Demosthenes) observes that men have concubines “for the care of the body,” namely, for sexual relations. Often the children of concubines were excluded from inheriting, as here. —Ed.]

עִפָּה וְעַפָּר וְחַנֶּה וְאֲבִיקָע וְאַלְדָּעָה כָּל־
אֱלֹה בָּנֵי קָטוּרָה: ⁵ וַיְתִן אֶבְרָהָם אֶת־כָּל־
אֲשֶׁר־לְלוּ לִיצָּחָק: ⁶ וְלִבְנֵי הַפִּילְגְּשִׁים אֲשֶׁר
לְאֶבְרָהָם נָתַן אֶבְרָהָם מִתְנַת וַיְשַׁלַּחַם
מַעַל יְצָקָן בֶּן־בְּעֹזָרָה לְיִקְרָבָה אֶל־אֶרְץ
קָדְםָה:
⁷ וְאֱלֹה יְמִי שְׁנִינִיתִי אֶבְרָהָם אֲשֶׁר־חִי
מֵאַת שָׁנָה וְשָׁבָעִים שָׁנָה וְחִמְשׁ שָׁנִים:
וְיָגוּע וַיָּמָת אֶבְרָהָם בַּשִּׁבְעָה טוֹבָה זָקָן
וְשָׁבָע וַיַּאֲסֵף אֶל־עַמּוֹ: ⁸ וַיַּקְרְבֶּר אָתוֹ
יְצָקָן וַיַּשְׁמַעַל בְּנֵיו אֶל־מִעֵדָה הַמִּכְפָּלה
אֶל־שְׂדָה עַפְרָן בֶּן־צָחָר הַחַתִּי אֲשֶׁר עָל־
פָּנֵי מִמְּרָא: ¹⁰ הַשְׁדָּה אֲשֶׁר־קָנָה אֶבְרָהָם
מֵאַת בְּנִיחַת שָׁמָה קָבֵר אֶבְרָהָם וְשָׁרָה
אֲשֶׁר־תָּנוּ: ¹¹ וְלֹא אַחֲרֵי מוֹת אֶבְרָהָם וַיַּבְרָךְ
אֱלֹהִים אֶת־יְצָקָן בֶּן־וַיַּשְׁבַּט יְצָקָן עַמִּים
בָּאָרֶל חַתִּי רָאֵי: פ

ABRAHAM'S DEATH AND BURIAL (25:7–11)

7–10. The description of Abraham's burial emphasizes the cooperation between Isaac and Ishmael. If the two half-brothers had felt some emotional distance from each other beforehand, we can presume that they reconciled at this point.

8. gathered to his people. [In this expression the text's original audience would have understood the kinship term ammim in a gender-inclusive sense, as the translation here reflects (“people”). Despite the Bible's reliance on patrilineal genealogies and on patronymics, female relatives counted as kin. See at Genesis 10:1 and Numbers 31:2; see also The Contemporary Torah, 2006, s.v. “predecessors,” p. 408. —Ed.]

10. there Abraham and his wife Sarah were buried. The reiterated note about the legitimate purchase of the cave of Machpelah emphasizes the importance of acquiring property through purchase ¹²This is the line of Ishmael son of Abraham, borne by Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's slave, to Abraham: ¹³Here are the names of Ishmael's sons in their birth order: Ishmael's first-born Nebaioth, Kedar, Adbeel, and Mibsam; ¹⁴Mishma, Duma, and Massa; ¹⁵Hadad and Tema; Jetur, Naphish, and Kedmah. ¹⁶These then are Ishmael's sons, and these are their names, by their villages and encampments—twelve princes by their tribes. ¹⁷and these are the years of Ishmael's life: 137; he then expired and died and was gathered to his people. ¹⁸They occupied the area from Havilah to Shur, which is near Egypt on the way to Ashur. He settled in the presence of all his kin.

וְאֵלֶּה תַּלְמִידָה יְשֻׁמּוּאֵל בֶּן־אַבְרָהָם אֲשֶׁר יָלֹדָה הָגָר הַמִּצְרִית שִׁפְחַת שָׂרָה לְאַבְרָהָם: ¹³וְאֵלֶּה שְׁמוֹת בְּנֵי יְשֻׁמּוּאֵל בְּשֶׁמֶתְתֵיכֶם לְתוֹלְדוֹתָם בֶּכֶר יְשֻׁמּוּאֵל נְבָרָה וּקְדָרָה וּאַדְבָּאֵל וּמְבָשָׂם: ¹⁴וּמְשָׁמָעָה וּדְוָמָה וּמְשָׁא: ¹⁵חֲרֵד וּמִימָּא יְטֻוָּר נְפִישׁ וּקְדָמָה: ¹⁶אֵלֶּה هֵם בְּנֵי יְשֻׁמּוּאֵל וְאֵלֶּה שְׁמֹתָם בְּחַצְרֵיהֶם וּבְטִירֵיהֶם שְׁנִים־עָשָׂר נְשִׁיאָם לְאַמְתָּם: ¹⁷וְאֵלֶּה שְׁנִי חַיִּי יְשֻׁמּוּאֵל מֵאַת שָׁנָה וּשְׁלֹשִׁים שָׁנָה וּשְׁבַע שָׁנִים וַיָּגֹעַ וַיָּמָת וַיָּסַף אַל־עַמְּיוֹ: ¹⁸וַיֵּשְׁבָּנוּ מִחְווִילָה עַד־שָׁוֹר אֲשֶׁר עַל־פְּנֵי מִצְרָיִם בְּאַכְּהָ אֲשֹׁורָה עַל־פְּנֵי כָּל־אַחִיו נְפָל:

in the land of Israel. The mention of Sarah's burial is a reminder of the critical role that she played not only in Abraham's life, but also in his realization of the divine promise of land.

HAGAR'S DESCENDANTS (25:12–18)

12. borne by Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's slave. Ishmael's line is credited to his mother, whose identity is fully recalled. The sons of Ishmael are nomadic tribal peoples who dwelt on the southwest and southeast fringes of the land of Israel.

—Yairah Amit

Another View

ISAAC'S LOVE FOR REBEKAH (24:67) is the first mention of spousal love in the Bible. Like other ancient Near Eastern sources, the Bible shows a concern with preserving family possessions, both tangible (land) and intangible (blessings and identity). Arranged marriages serve this purpose. Love, however, is also mentioned as a motive for marriage: Jacob loves Rachel (Genesis 29:30), and Michal loves David (I Samuel 18:20). With Isaac, love follows rather than precedes marriage. We do not know whether Rebekah loves Isaac. Reports of a woman's love for a man are rare, found only with Princess Michal (I Samuel 18:20 and 48) and in sensual terms in Song of Songs (see, for example, 1:7).

The Bible is largely silent about marriage procedures. In fact, Genesis 24 remains the most detailed biblical source on this subject. The customs it describes largely correspond to information from ancient Mesopotamian texts. According to both sources, parents usually arrange the marriage (as when Shechem's father negotiates a marriage with Dinah in Genesis 34, or when Samson asks his father and mother to get him a wife in Judges 14:2–3). Brothers sometimes act in this role (see Laban in Genesis 24). The groom or his family brings gifts for the bride's family. In the Bible these gifts are called mohar, a term without the misleading commercial overtones of its usual English translation as "bride-price." The servant's gifts in Genesis 24 may represent the mohar. In some Babylonian documents, the bride's father also gives gifts. (See Women in Ancient Israel—An Overview, p. xli.)

Genesis 24 emphasizes Rebekah's role in the marriage negotiations. The servant bestows expensive gifts mostly on Rebekah herself ("objects of silver and gold, and garments"), with only some for her brother and mother (24:53; note the silence about the father). Moreover, she chooses when to go to her husband (24:55–58). In contrast, the groom, Isaac, plays no role in the arrangements. These details emphasize the union of Rebekah and Isaac as one in which the woman is assertive and the man compliant. This depiction sets the stage for Rebekah's prominence in subsequent episodes (25:22–23, 28; 27:1–28:5).

Genesis 24 remains the most detailed biblical source on marriage procedures.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

Post-biblical Interpretations

Sarah died (23:2). A 13th-century Yemenite Midrash collection begins its interpretations of this parashah with an extended commentary on Proverbs 31, the description of a "woman of valor." The midrash connects the various exemplary qualities of the outstanding wife of Proverbs 31 to twenty-three biblical women, in order of their scriptural appearance. The second woman discussed (after Noah's wife) is Sarah: "'The heart of her husband trusts in her' (Proverbs 31:11)—this is Sarah, in whom Abraham's heart trusted. 'And lacks no good thing' (same verse)—for she used to bring guests [converts] under the wings of the Shechinah" (Midrash HaGadol). | Commenting on “the sun rises, and the sun sets” (Ecclesiastes 1:5), another midrash notes the Torah’s juxtaposition of the mention of Rebekah’s lineage at the end of Genesis 22 and the death of Sarah at the beginning of Genesis 23; that midrash praises the divine omniscience that plans for all things: “Before allowing Sarah’s sun to set, the Holy One caused Rebekah’s sun to rise” (Midrash B’reishit Rabbah 58.2).

Abraham was old, well advanced in years (24:1). Abraham was profoundly affected by Sarah’s death, according to the Rabbis. While she was alive, he felt the Holy One caused Rebekah's sun to rise.*

*Before allowing Sarah's sun to set,

himself young and vigorous, but after she had passed away, old age suddenly overtook him (Tanchuma 4). | According to the Talmud, “Until Abraham there was no physical aging; people would confuse Abraham with his son Isaac because they looked so similar. Thereupon Abraham prayed and the physical manifestations of old age came into existence” (BT Bava M’tzia 87a).

So they called Rebekah and asked her. . . . And she said, “I will go” (24:58). One midrash connects this episode with “She is good to him, never bad” (Proverbs 31:12) and comments, “It was customary in the world that when a man would wed his daughter to someone . . . she would be too embarrassed to say anything [either in affirmation or rejection]” (Midrash HaGadol). Rebekah, however, made clear that she was willing to go with a stranger to become Isaac’s wife. | Another midrash derives from this narrative the legal ruling that “a fatherless maiden may not be given in marriage without her consent” (B’reishit Rabbah 60.12).

Sister, may you become thousands of myriads (24:60). Rabbinic tradition harbors great suspicion toward Rebekah’s brother, Laban, as an enemy of the people of Israel. Therefore, some rabbis strongly denied that his blessing could have had any positive effect: “Why was Rebekah not remembered [with children] until Isaac prayed for her (Genesis 25:21)? So that the heathen should not say, ‘Our prayer bore fruit’” (B’reishit Rabbah 60.13).

Isaac brought her into the tent of his mother Sarah (24:67). One midrash claims that this verse proves that “Rebekah’s deeds were [praiseworthy] like Sarah’s” (Midrash HaGadol). A cloud signifying the divine Presence had hovered over Sarah’s tent throughout her lifetime. It disappeared when she died—“but when Rebekah came, it returned” (B’reishit Rabbah 60.16). Similarly, Rebekah continued all the positive activities that Sarah had initiated, “separating her challah in ritual purity” (see Numbers 15:18–21) and keeping the Sabbath lamp kindled.

Abraham went on and took a wife named Keturah (25:1). This marriage is mentioned following Isaac’s marriage to Rebekah. One midrash learns from this that “if a man has grown-up sons, he must first see that they marry, and only then take a wife himself” (B’reishit Rabbah 60.16). | The Rabbis wondered who Keturah was, since no information is given about her origins or lineage. Some of the sages insisted she was actually Hagar, who, they argued, had returned to Abraham after Sarah’s death (Pirkei D’Rabbi Eliezer 30, among others). And lest anyone be concerned about Hagar’s chastity during her absence from Abraham’s household, another midrash explains, based on the linguistic similarities between the Hebrew root k-t-r (to “tie up” or “seal”) and the name Keturah, “that she was like one who seals up a treasure and produces it with its seal” (B’reishit Rabbah 61.4). An alternate and late midrashic tradition understands Keturah to be a separate individual from Hagar. This midrash relates that Abraham married three wives and that each was a descendant of one of the sons of Noah: Sarah was of the line of Shem, Keturah descended from Japheth, and Hagar was from the family of Ham (Yalkut Reuveni, Genesis 26.2, 36c).

—Judith R. Baskin

Contemporary Reflection

“AND ABRAHAM PROCEEDED to mourn for Sarah and to bewail her” (Genesis 23:2). With this verse, our parashah invites us to consider the history of a significant yet often obscured tradition in women’s discourse, namely, mourning.

In this parashah we have the first account of mourning (even though death has figured prominently earlier). Here a woman, Sarah, is mourned, and the mourner is a man, Abraham her husband. Yet sources disclose that in the ancient world the act of mourning was typically associated with women. Margaret Alexiou’s landmark study, The Ritual Lament in Greek Tradition (1974), calls attention to the gendered characteristics of mourning practices and language. Throughout antiquity, in both Greek and Middle Eastern cultures, the lament—a standard feature of ritual life—belonged largely to women who gathered to lead the community in the rites of grief. In the Bible, just as in the Classical tradition, the lament was associated with the feminine. The book of Jeremiah lets us hear the bitter weeping of Rachel, mourning over her absent children (Jeremiah 31:15). That book also conspicuously presents songs of communal loss as a maternal legacy; because of disaster, the prophet instructs the women thus: “Teach your daughters wailing, and one another lamentation” (Jeremiah 9:19). When the world splits open, when history fails, the feminine voice is made audible.

The Bible does not preserve actual descriptions of mourning rituals or women’s laments. What we do have is the book of Lamentations, a national lament, in which—as is common in laments—the poet repeatedly appropriates a female persona, singing as if a woman: “My children are forlorn, / For the foe has prevailed” (1:16). Composed in response to the destruction of Jerusalem (586 B.C.E.) at the hands of the Neo-Babylonian army, Lamentations chronicles a nation’s effort to know itself in the aftermath of a profound severing of its relation to God—the divine principle that confers meaning upon the social order. And in this book, catastrophe is repeatedly gendered. The female is the subject reciting the lament; she is also the object of exploitation, since to the poet the feminine body represents the site of social disrepair. In this way, Lamentations provides yet another textual example of the widespread symbol of nation-as-woman, ever vulnerable to foreign invasion. Women are cast as the ideal speakers of loss and rupture, for that is a condition which they embody.

Lamentations opens with a cluster of images figuring Jerusalem as an abandoned woman; she is likened variously to a slave, a fallen princess, and a widow—an almanah, a term Alan Mintz points out “designates not so much a woman who has lost her husband as the social status of a woman who has no legal protector and who may thus be abused with impunity” (Reading Hebrew Literature, 2002, p. 24). Indeed, almanah may be etymologically linked to the Hebrew verb that means to be mute or dumb (with the letters aleph, lamed, and mem). This association deepens our sense of the widow as one who cannot speak on her own behalf. Focusing on the structures of meaning in the Hebrew Bible, Elaine Scarry identifies a crucial division between God manifested as a voice and humanity as embodied: “To have a body is to be creatable, . . . and woundable. To have no body, to have only a voice, is to be none of these things; it is to be the wounding but not oneself woundable” (The Body in Pain, 1985, p. 206). The distinction is central to Lamentations, where “daughter Zion” is represented, especially in the first chapters, as virtually all body, broken and disabled.

Women poets explore the power of mourning.

Turning to the post-biblical period, women continue to dominate in the mention of laments. Rabbinic tractates include a few such references. For example, in Mishnah K'tubot (4:4), Rabbi Yehuda rules that even the poorest husband must provide one lament-singing woman for his wife's funeral, as a minimum display of honor. In the Talmud, we find a suite of poetic fragments which suggest that the lament, as a standard feature of ritual life, belonged largely to the women who gathered to lead the community in the rites. Attributed to the sage Raba, we read: "The women of Shkanziv say: 'Woe for his leaving / woe for our grieving'" (BT Moed Katan 28b). To this day, Yemenite and Kurdish women living in Israel continue to assume a large role in mourning the dead in their communities. (See Susan Sered, Women as Ritual Experts, 1992.)

In Western culture, meanwhile, the genre of lament has become a useful frame for women poets. Dahlia Ravikovitch, who emerged as an important Israeli poet during the 1950s, has been described as a "lamenting poetess in the ancient biblical tradition" (Shirley Kaufman et al., eds., Hebrew Feminist Poems, 1999, p. 13). A particularly beautiful and haunting example of Ravikovitch's contribution to the genre may be found in her poem "They Required a Song of Us." The poem begins with a line from another well-known Israeli poet, Lea Goldberg, who asks: "How shall we sing a song of Zion / when we have not even begun to hear?" Like Goldberg's query, Ravikovitch's poem meditates on Psalm 137, a famous expression of exilic despair in the Bible, where the speaker asks: "How can we sing a song of בָּהָרִי on alien soil?" Ravikovitch answers this ancient query by recognizing the need for a new kind of utterance: "Sing intimate songs / that the soul shies away from singing . . ." (Tal Nizan, ed., With an Iron Pen: Hebrew Protest Poetry 1984–2004, 2005).

Turning to twentieth-century Jewish American poetry, we find new variations on the lament in the work of Adrienne Rich. Wrestling with the expressive limitations of other forms of poetic mourning, Rich writes of her frustration in "A Woman Dead In Her Forties." Here the speaker first confronts the genre of lament's potential inadequacy, feeling "half-afraid" to write a lament for one who did not "read it much"—and then gropes for an alternative: "from here on I want," she writes, "more crazy mourning, more howl, more keen-ing" (Facts on a Doorframe, 2002, p. 255). This discontent compels Rich to reactivate the lament in her 1991 volume An Atlas of the Difficult World. In a later collection, written in the aftermath of the Gulf War crisis (1991–92), Rich longs to convey what she knows to be true: that poetry can be a powerful, socially constitutive force for reconfiguring community (What is Found There, 1993, p. xiv). Poets such as Merle Feld, Esther Broner, and Penina Adelman also explore the power of mourning. Their versions of lament, along with Rich's, alert us to the reconstructive possibilities of an ancient biblical form.

—Maeera Shreiber

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

Undo It, Take It Back

Nessa Rapoport

Genesis 23:1–2

Undo it, take it back, make every day the previous one until I am returned to the day before the one that made you gone. Or set me on an airplane traveling west, crossing the date line again and again, losing this day, then that, until the day of loss still lies ahead, and you are here instead of sorrow.

Isaac

Rivka Miriam (transl. Linda Stern Zisquit)

Genesis 24:62–67

Rebecca has married the dusks that are the essence of in-betweens, a gray so sensitive it easily forgives.
On a noble camel she rode toward her dusks and seeing them across from her so restrained, serious as jasmine severed from its fragrance,
she fell off the camel
like a joyous vat of wine whose hoops have been loosened.

Rebecca

Amy Blank

Genesis 24

I left home easily
(as when the ready seed drops from the tree), Carefree—for I knew not what . . .

I stuffed my toys into the saddle-bag braided my hair and for that dusty journey wore my broidered gown.
I chose my camel and set out, light-hearted, to enjoy adventure—scarcely a pang as tents and trees of home faded into wilderness.

But this I wondered:
how would it befit to ask that awesome man, Abraham's servant, what manner was he to whom I was betrothed?
Better to hold the question, I decided.
Isaac, after all was also kinsman—one more—fabulous Abraham's son—and I,
I would be his daughter . . . daughter? sister?
wife?
Hardly a difference in my young mind.

Chayei Sarah

Laurie Patton

Genesis 25:9

ISHMAEL:

I was thirteen,
and I remember the music
and my mother whispering, “Why such a party, when it is only a weaning?”
And the smell of lamb
and the hand-drums;
and the involuntary sound coming from my own throat—half laughter, half-sob—after I saw my mother’s face in the firelight;
and I knew my little brother was now my rival.
But God was still good to us—

ISAAC:

—and I was three,
and I remember staring out in the dark of the morning and seeing two shadows and then the clear outline of your mother
clutching a water bottle, and watching her wave

in the air, as if she were talking to Someone.
But God was still good to us—

ISHMAEL:

—and now we stare together into the cave
that holds our father—

ISAAC:

—our father’s bones
and his memory,
in the place before Mamre—

ISHMAEL:

—and yet I fear
for the future—

ISAAC:

—since perhaps the only thing
we can do together

ISHMAEL AND ISAAC:

is to bury and to mourn our dead.

תולדות ◆ Tol'dot

GENESIS 25:19–28:9

Shaping Destiny: The Story of Rebekah

PARASHAT TOL'DOT ("generations") begins with Isaac but focuses heavily on Rebekah as the more active member of this family. Rebekah runs the family and undertakes the task of determining the destiny of God's blessings. As the one who blesses, Isaac has authority; but in determining who gets blessed—seemingly against Isaac's intentions—Rebekah has the power. She independently seeks God and alone receives God's answer about the future.

This parashah recounts a family story. A mother gives birth to twins, Esau and Jacob; and from the beginning, the brothers vie for prominence and their parents' favor. Like other biblical narratives in Genesis, this parashah is also concerned with self-definition—with the identity of the Israelite community in relation to surrounding peoples and cultures. Rebekah's twins represent two distinct nations: Israel and Edom.

Rebekah occupies center stage in several key scenes. Energetically, Rebekah ensures that the covenantal blessings will be bestowed on the more suitable son. Isaac, eclipsed by his parents, wife, and offspring, simply goes along—passively and gently surviving.

As Alice Bellis observes, interpreters often object to Rebekah's manipulations of her husband, comparing her unfavorably with Sarah's treatment of Hagar in Genesis 16 and 21, as if

Rebekah occupies center stage in several key scenes.

"[abusing] a woman servant is acceptable; deceiving a man, even to achieve God's mission, is not" (Helpmates, Harlots, and Heroes: Women's Stories in the Hebrew Bible, 1994, p. 83). The Torah, however, presents Rebekah as a figure without whom the covenant will not continue properly, the necessary link between Abraham's blessing and Jacob's.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi
Hara E. Person

Outline—

I. REBEKAH BECOMES THE MOTHER OF TWINS (25:19–26)

II. FAVORITISM AND THE SELLING OF THE BIRTHRIGHT (25:27–34)

III. ISAAC AND REBEKAH “VISIT” ABIMELECH

Isaac at the Center (26:1–33)

- A. Isaac receives the covenant promise (vv. 1–5)
- B. Isaac passes his wife off as his sister (vv. 6–11)
- C. Isaac digs wells, loses them, persists, and prospers (vv. 12–33)

IV. ESAU MARRIES CANAANITE WIVES (26:34–35)

V. REBEKAH ENSURES THE TRANSMISSION OF THE COVENANTAL BLESSINGS TO JACOB (27:1–28:9)

- A. Isaac prepares to bless Esau (27:1–4)
- B. Rebekah arranges for Jacob to receive Isaac’s blessing instead (27:5–17)
- C. Jacob steals Esau’s blessing (27:18–29)
- D. Esau discovers the deception (27:30–40)
- E. Rebekah convinces Isaac to send Jacob away (27:41–28:9)

25:19

This is the line of Isaac son of Abraham: Abraham begot Isaac.²⁰ Isaac was 40 years old when he took as his wife Rebekah daughter of Bethuel the Aramean of Paddan-aram, the sister of Laban the Aramean.²¹ Isaac pleaded with יְהוָה on behalf of his wife, for she was childless, and acceded to his entreaty, so his wife Rebekah became pregnant.

כִּי וְאֶלְهָ תֹּולֶדֶת יַצְחָק בֶּן־אַבְרָהָם אַבְרָהָם הַוְּלִיד אֲתִיכְצָחָק: ²⁰ וַיַּהַי יַצְחָק בֶּן־אַרְבָּעִים שָׁנָה בָּקַחַתוּ אֲתִיכְרַבְקָה בַּת־בְּתוּאֵל הָאֲרָמִי מִפְּדָנָן אֶרְם אֲחוֹת לְבָנָה הָאֲרָמִי לוֹ לְאִשָּׁה: ²¹ וַיַּעֲתַר יַצְחָק לְיְהוָה לִנְכָח אֲשֶׁר כִּי עֲקָרָה הוּא וַיַּעֲתַר לוֹ לְיְהוָה וַתֵּהֶר רַבְקָה אֲשֶׁר:

Rebekah Becomes the Mother of Twins (25:19–26)

The opening unit focuses on Rebekah's pregnancy: how it came about, what was its nature, what steps she took, and what was the result. Twenty years after we first meet her in Genesis 24, Rebekah again proves resourceful and energetic, as she seeks God to inquire about her distressing situation.

19. Abraham begot Isaac. The last mention of Isaac highlighted his bond with his mother (24:67), yet the formulaic genealogical note here does not reflect Sarah's importance in Isaac's life.

20. he took as his wife Rebekah daughter of Bethuel the Aramean of Paddan-Aram, the sister of Laban the Aramean. Rebekah has been identified several times in Genesis 24. By adding place names, her personal lineage emphasizes that she is now far from home. Absent from this list is Milcah, Rebekah's grandmother, whom Rebekah herself mentions when she first identifies herself (24:24; see also 24:15).

21. Isaac pleaded. We do not learn about Rebekah's feelings concerning her childlessness, nor are we told that she does anything to try to change the situation. Isaac could have taken other wives to solve the problem of continuity (see at "childless," below), but he apparently does not. Isaac's sensitivity to Rebekah stands out in contrast to Jacob, who chastises his barren wife Rachel when she asks for children (30:2).

on behalf of his wife. Literally, "in front of his wife," implying that Rebekah is present. Why does she not pray herself? Hannah is the exemplar of a woman who prays to have a child (I Samuel 1).

childless. Heb. akarah, the same word translated as "barren" in describing Sarah's condition (11:30) and Rachel's (29:31). In contrast to stories about these other matriarchs or Hannah, we are not told that Rebekah resorts to "extreme measures" to ensure fertility. Ancient Near Eastern documents describe adoption as one of the strategies for handling the social and economic problems resulting from lack of progeny. Another potential solution is reflected in Genesis 16, where Sarah gives Abraham

- Rebekah... pays a very high price for her determination.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 150

- The emotional reaction to infertility has remained largely unchanged.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 152

- The Rabbis... observe that Rebekah experienced divine revelation twice.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 150

- Jacob is Isaac's son in tenderness... / And Esau in lustiness is mine....

VOICES ► 154

²²The children pressed against each other inside her. She thought: “If this is so, why do I exist?” So she went to inquire of Yahweh.²³ said to her:

Two peoples are in your belly;
two nations shall branch off from each other [as they emerge] from your womb.
One people shall prevail over the other;
the elder shall serve the younger.

²⁴When the time came for her to give birth, lo—she had twins in her belly!²⁵The first came out

²²וַיִּתְרַצֵּצוּ הַבָּנִים בְּקֶרֶבֶת וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים
לְמִהּ זֶה אָנֹכִי וַתָּלֶךְ לְדָרְשׁ אֶת־יְהוָה:
²³וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה לְהָ
שְׁנִי גָּיִם גָּוִים בְּבִטְןֶךָ
וְשְׁנִי לְאָמִים מִמּעִיר יִפְרֹדוּ
וְלְאָמִים מִלְּאָמִים
וְרַב יַעֲבֹד צָעִיר:
²⁴וַיִּמְלֹאוּ יְמִינָה לְלִידָת וְהַנֶּה תָּוָסֵם
בְּבִטְנֶה:²⁵וַיֵּצֵא הַרְאָשׁוֹן אֶרְמוֹנִי בְּלֹן

her handmaid Hagar in order to produce an offspring. Elsewhere in the Bible, women resort to prayer (Hannah in I Samuel 1) or a presumed fertility plant (see Rachel bargaining with Leah for mandrakes in Genesis 30:14). For more on barrenness, see Noach, Another View, p. 53.

22. The children pressed...She thought. Although there is no mention that Rebekah turned to God when she could not conceive, she does so in response to her pregnancy.

“why do I exist?” Literally, “why am I?” Interpreters often say that Rebekah is bemoaning her physical pain. However, the text mentions only that the pregnancy is unsettling, not that it is painful. Instead, what prompts her question may be the prospect of multiple children, which in the Bible typically signals a special destiny. Far from complaining about her condition, Rebekah is wondering about her role in such destiny. God’s answer (v. 23) confirms such a reading, since it refers to the children’s future.

inquire. Heb. lidrosh, a verb that usually designates a formal consultation, in this case with God. The text pointedly omits any mention of mediated communication, which suggests that Rebekah addresses God directly, and that God responds to her with equal directness (v. 23). The earlier picture of Rebekah as gutsy, independent, and resourceful (Genesis 24) thus continues. Yet many interpreters both ancient and modern have distanced Rebekah from a direct contact with God. One rabbinic commentator claimed, for example, that she went to a house of study (see Post-biblical Interpretations, p. 150). Some modern feminist commentators have speculated that she receives the information in a dream (see citations in Alice Bellis, Helpmates, Harlots, and Heroes, 1994, pp. 82–83).

23. God replies to Rebekah. God replies to Rebekah directly, informing her—not Isaac—about their sons’ future. Two other biblical mothers to whom God discloses their son’s future are Hagar (16:10–12, 21:17–18) and Samson’s mother (Judges 13:3–5).

the elder shall serve the younger. The poetic Hebrew is more ambiguous than the translation indicates—literally “elder serve younger,” which could also mean that the younger shall serve the elder. The text may seek to suggest that Jacob’s subsequent preeminence results from Rebekah’s interpretation. | The election of the younger over the elder is a theme that pervades Genesis. It may reflect a conflict relating to the audience’s national identity and the formation of a people in which newer traditions are integrated with older ones.

24. When the time came for her to give birth. The focus remains on Rebekah’s experience. The description of Isaac’s role in the conception has been limited to pleading.

lo—she had twins in her belly! A nearly identical expression appears again with the birth of Tamar’s twins (38:27). Each of these women eventually uses subterfuge in order to ensure what she believes is the right outcome: Tamar, in order to have reddish all over, as though covered with a hairy mantle, so they named him Esau;²⁶ his brother, following, came out holding Esau's heel, so they named him Jacob. Isaac was 60 years old when they were born.²⁷ When the boys grew up, Esau became a skillful hunter, a man of the outdoors; but Jacob was a homespun man, keeping to the tents.²⁸ Isaac favored Esau, because he [Esau] put game in his mouth, but Rebekah favored Jacob.

²⁹[One day,] when Jacob was cooking a stew, Esau came in from the [hunting] field. He was famished,³⁰ and he said to Jacob, “I'm famished; let me gulp down some of that red stuff!” (That is

פָּאָדָרְתָּ שַׁעַר וַיִּקְרָאוּ שְׁמָמוֹ עַשְׂוֹ :²⁶ וְאַחֲרֵי
כֶּן יָצָא אָחִיו וַיַּדַּו אֲחֹזֶת בַּעֲקָב עַשְׂוֹ וַיִּקְרָא
שְׁמָמוֹ יַעֲקֹב וַיִּצְחַק בְּנֵנֶשֶׁשִׁים שָׁנָה בְּלִדְתָּ
אֶתְּם :²⁷ וַיִּגְדְּלוּ הַגָּעֲרִים וַיַּהַי עַשְׂוֹ אִישׁ
יָדַע צַד אִישׁ שָׂדָה וַיַּעֲקֹב אִישׁ תְּמִימָה יָשַׁב
אֲחָלִים :²⁸ וַיַּאֲהַב יִצְחָק אֶת־עַשְׂוֹ פִּי־צִדְקָה
בְּפִיו וַיַּרְבֵּקָה אֲהַבָּת אֶת־יַעֲקֹב :

²⁹ וַיַּזְדַּקֵּד יַעֲקֹב נַזְדֵּק וַיַּבְאֵא עַשְׂוֹ מִן־הַשְׂדָה
וְהַזָּהָר עַיִּיף :³⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר עַשְׂוֹ אֶל־יַעֲקֹב
הַלְּעִיטָנֵנִי נָא מִן־הָאָדָם הָאָדָם הַזֶּה פִּי עַיִּיף אָנְבֵי עַל־בָּן קָרְא־שְׁמוֹ אָדוֹם :

a child (Genesis 38); Rebekah, to secure the future of the son she considers most worthy (Genesis 27).

25. Esau. The etymology of this name is unclear. Esau is also known as Edom (25:30, 36:8), which relates to “red” (adom). He will become the ancestor of the Edomites (36:9), a nation with which Israel has frequent conflict, according to later books of the Bible.

26. Jacob. Heb. Yaakov, which echoes the word “heel” (akev) and can also be translated as “he will act crookedly.”

Favoritism and the Selling of the Birthright (25:27–34)

Beginning with the story of Cain and Abel (Genesis 4), favoritism plagues the subsequent generations (see Noah's sons, 9:18–27; Isaac and Ishmael, 21:9–14; Joseph and his brothers, 37:3–35).

28. favored. Literally, “loved” (ahav). We are told why Isaac loves Esau: His son the hunter brings Isaac his favored meal of fresh game.

Rebekah favored Jacob. Rebekah's love is left unexplained. Her favoritism of Jacob does not appear to depend on any self-gratification. Possibly her love serves as a compensation for Isaac's preference of Esau, or perhaps is a response to Jacob's nature as a “homespun man” who apparently stays close to home (v. 27). Her preference may also be related to how she interprets God's words in 25:23; she favors the son she thinks has been selected by God.

There is only one other biblical narrative that mentions a woman's love. In I Samuel 18, we read, “Michal, daughter of Saul, loved David” (I Samuel 18:20, 28). In both instances, the women eventually resort to deception to protect the one they love. (Michal rescues David from her father's wrath and lies to her father about it; see I Samuel 19.) Love will soon spur Rebekah into deceiving Isaac in order to secure Jacob's destiny (see Genesis 27).

30–33. Jacob's manipulation of his short-sighted brother reflects poorly on both characters. Of the two, Jacob places value on what endures—a quality that may, in part, account for Rebekah's machinations on his behalf. | Possessing the birthright, Jacob is now entitled to Isaac's special blessings. The Hebrew term b'chorah (“birthright”) usually refers to the status of successor as head of the corporate household, which entails special economic and religious responsibilities as well as privileges. Normally in the ancient Near East, a first-born son possessed this status automatically, although he could barter it away or be stripped of it by the paterfamilias. Deuteronomy 21:15–17 presumes that the first-born son receives a disproportionate share of the inheritance.

why he was named Edom.)³¹Jacob said, “Sell me your birthright here and now.”³²And Esau said, “Here I am going to die; what good is the birthright to me?”³³But Jacob said, “Confirm it to me by oath here and now.” So he swore it to him, and sold his birthright to Jacob.³⁴Jacob then gave Esau bread and lentil stew. He ate, drank, got up, and left. Thus did Esau disdain his birthright.

³¹ וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב מִכְרָה כֵּי־וּמָאֵן אֶת־בְּכָרָתְךָ לֵי: ³² וַיֹּאמֶר עֲשֵׂו הַנָּה אָנֹכִי הַוָּלֶךָ לְמוֹתָה וְלִפְמַה־זֶה לֵי בְּכָרָה: ³³ וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב הַשְׁבֻעָה לֵי בַּיּוֹם וַיִּשְׁבַּע לוֹ וַיִּמְכַר אֶת־בְּכָרָתוֹ לְיעָקֹב: ³⁴ וַיַּעֲקֹב נָתַן לְעָשָׂוֹ לְחַם וְגַנְדִּיד עֲדָשִׂים וְיַאֲכָל וַיִּשְׁתַּת וַיִּקְם וַיָּלֶךָ וַיַּבּוּ עֲשָׂוֹ אֶת־הַבְּכָרָה: פ

26 There was a famine in the land, apart from the earlier famine that had occurred in the time of Abraham; Isaac therefore traveled to Abimelech king of the Philistines, to Gerar.² Then appeared to him, saying, “Do not go down to Egypt; reside in the land that I will point out to you.³Stay in this land and I will be with you and bless you; for to you and your descendants will I give all these lands, fulfilling the oath that I swore to your father Abraham.⁴I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, giving your descendants all these lands; and through your seed all the peoples of the earth shall be blessed—⁵because Abraham

כו וַיְהִי רָעַב בָּאָרֶץ מִלְבָד הָרָעַב הָרָאשׁוֹן אֲשֶׁר דָּעָה בַּיּוֹם אֶבְרָהָם וַיָּלֹךְ יִצְחָק אֶל־אַבְיַמְלָךְ מֶלֶךְ־פְּלֶשְׁתִּים גָּדוֹרָה: ² וַיַּרְא אֶלְיוֹן יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־תְּרַדְּ מִצְרַיִם שָׁכֵן בָּאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת וְאַתָּה עַמְקָה וְאֶבְרָהָם ³ גּוֹר בָּאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת וְאַתָּה עַמְקָה כִּי־לְךָ וְלִזְרָעָךְ אַתָּן אֶת־בְּבִל־הָאָרֶץ הַאֲלֵהָה וְהַקְמָתְךָ אֶת־הַשְׁבֻעָה אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבָּעְתָּ לְאֶבְרָהָם אֱבִיךָ: ⁴ וְהַרְבִּיתִי אֶת־זְרָעָךָ בְּכָוֹכְבֵי הַשָּׁמַיִם וְנִתְתַּתִּי לִזְרָעָךָ אֶת־כָּל־הָאָרֶץ הַאֲלֵהָה וְהַתְּבִרְכָּו בְּזָרָעָךָ כָּל־גּוֹיִי הָאָרֶץ: ⁵ יַעֲקֹב אֲשֶׁר־שָׁמַע אֶבְרָהָם בְּקָלִי

Isaac and Rebekah “Visit” Abimelech

ISAAC AT THE CENTER (26:1–33)

The Torah repeatedly portrays Isaac as a passive figure; he is largely overshadowed by other members of his family. Only in this passage does Isaac appear as the chief actor. Even here, however, his father looms large. In all these episodes Isaac walks in his father’s footsteps, performing deeds similar to his father’s but with different results. First, God’s blessings are bestowed upon him due solely to his father’s merit. Second, his lie that Rebekah is his sister (repeating Abraham’s “wife-sister” deceptions in Genesis 12 and 21) backfires. Third, the wells he digs are repeatedly taken away (Genesis 26:15; contrast with Abraham who stands his ground in Genesis 21). And yet, Isaac gains a moral victory and comes away blessed (see 26:29). In this fashion, he represents another mode of Jewish survival: compliance rather than confrontation.

ISAAC RECEIVES THE COVENANT PROMISE (26:1–5)

Isaac receives the covenant only on account of his father’s merit.

i. Abimelech. This is the name also of the king whom Abraham had deceived with the “wife-sister” ruse in Genesis 20.

3–5. “I will be with you . . . because Abraham hearkened to My voice and kept My charge.” God bestows blessings upon Isaac because of Abraham’s (not Isaac’s) merit, further underscoring his stature vis-à-vis his more distinguished father.

hearkened to My voice and kept My charge, My commands, My statutes, and My laws.”⁶ Isaac [therefore] settled in Gerar.⁷ And when the people of that place asked about his wife, he answered, “She is my sister,” because he was afraid to say: “My wife,” [thinking,] “Lest the local people kill me on account of Rebekah, since she is so good-looking.”

⁸ As his days there stretched out, Abimelech king of the Philistines happened [one day] to look out of a window and he saw—Isaac fondling his wife Rebekah! ⁹ So Abimelech summoned Isaac and said, “Look—she must be your wife; why then did you say, ‘She is my sister?’” Isaac said to him, “I spoke that way for fear of dying on her account.”¹⁰ But Abimelech said, “What is this that you have done to us? One of the people nearly lay with your wife; you would have brought [suffering] upon us for our guilt!”¹¹ The king thereupon instructed all the people: Anyone who touches this man or his wife will be put to death!

ISAAC PASSES HIS WIFE OFF
AS HIS SISTER (26:6–11)

This “wife-sister” episode, like those of Abraham and Sarah (Genesis 12 and 20), portrays a patriarch fearful for his life, protecting himself by posing his wife as his sister. The difference from Abraham and Sarah’s story is that Isaac thinks his wife is irresistibly attractive, but apparently no one else does. Nonetheless, Isaac and Rebekah receive royal protection.

⁷. Like his father (20:11), Isaac pretends—out of fear—that Rebekah is his sister in order to protect himself.

“she is so good-looking.” The same description of Rebekah appears when the narrator introduces her in 24:16 (translated there as “exceedingly beautiful”). Narrative sequence implies that this visit takes place decades later. Apparently Isaac still considers Rebekah alluringly beautiful.

וַיִּשְׁמֶר מִשְׁמָרָתִי מִצְוֹתִי חֲקֹותִי וַתּוֹרְתִּי:
⁶ וַיֵּשֶׁב יַצְחָק בָּגָרָר: ⁷ וַיִּשְׁאַלְוּ אֱנֹשִׁי הַמּוֹקָם לְאֶשְׁתּוֹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֲחֹתִי הַוָּא כִּי
יַרְאָל אָמַר אֲשֶׁתִּי פָנִים־הָרָגַנִּי אֱנֹשִׁי הַמּוֹקָם
עַל־רְבָקָה כִּי־טוֹבָת מִרְאָה הוּא:
⁸ וַיֹּהֵי כִּי אַרְכּוֹלְוּ שֵׁם הַיּוֹם וַיִּשְׁקַע
אַבִימֶלֶךְ מִלְּפָנֵי פָלָשָׁתִים בְּعַד הַחֲלוֹן וַיַּרְא
וְהַנָּהָר יַצְחָק מִצְחָק אֶת רְבָקָה אֶשְׁתּוֹ:
⁹ וַיִּקְרָא אַבִימֶלֶךְ לַיַּצְחָק וַיֹּאמֶר אֶתְנָה
אֶשְׁתָּךְ הַוָּא וְאֵיךְ אָמַרְתָּ אֲחֹתִי הַוָּא
וַיֹּאמֶר אַלְיוֹ יַצְחָק כִּי אָמְרָתִי פָנִים־אֲמֹות
עַלְיהָ: ¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר אַבִימֶלֶךְ מִהָּזָאת עֲשִׂית
לְנוּ בָמַעַט שְׁכָב אֶחָד דָּעַם אֶת־אֶשְׁתָּךְ
וְהַבָּאַת עַלְינוּ אֲשָׁם: ¹¹ וַיַּצְוָ אַבִימֶלֶךְ אֶת־
כָּל־הָעָם לְאִמְרָה הַנְּגָעַ בְּאִישׁ הַזֶּה וּבְאֶשְׁתּוֹ
מוֹת יוֹמָת:

^{8.} his days there stretched out. Sarah’s beauty prompted kings to take her to their palace (12:14–15; 20:2). However, in this episode, contrary to Isaac’s fears, no one takes Rebekah. Is it because she is not as attractive as Isaac supposes, or because King Abimelech learned his lesson with Abraham and Sarah? What follows indicates that Isaac continues to find his wife appealing and cannot keep himself away from her as time passes.

Isaac fondling. In an ironic twist, Isaac is caught “playing” with his wife. The verb m’tzachek is a pun on his name, Yitzchak. Here the term connotes laughter and playfulness of the sort that spouses engage in. It is identical with the verb used of Ishmael with Isaac in 21:9, where the connotations were less clear (see there).

^{11.} Rebekah’s position is not compromised. Isaac’s wealth results from his efforts and from God’s blessings.

¹²In that area Isaac sowed seed, and in that year he received a hundredfold, for יהוה blessed him.

¹³The man grew rich, and he went on growing all the richer until he was exceedingly rich. ¹⁴He had herds of sheep and herds of cattle, and a large body of servants, so that the Philistines envied him, ¹⁵and the Philistines stopped up all the wells that his father's servants had dug in the time of his father Abraham, filling them with rubble. ¹⁶Abimelech now said to Isaac, “Leave us; you have become much too numerous for us.” ¹⁷So Isaac went away from there, encamping in the wadi of Gerar. There he settled.

¹⁸Isaac then turned to digging anew the water-wells they had dug in the time of his father Abraham—which the Philistines had stopped up after Abraham's death—and he gave them the same names as his father had given them. ¹⁹And when Isaac's servants dug in the wadi, they discovered there a well of living waters, ²⁰and the shepherds of Gerar quarreled with Isaac's shepherds, saying, “The water is ours!” So he named the well Wrangle, for they had wrangled with him. ²¹They then dug another well, but they quarreled over this one, too, so he named it Animosity. ²²He then moved from there and dug another well, and over this one they did not quarrel, so he named it Rehoboth, meaning: Now יהוה has granted us ample room and will make us fruitful in the land. ²³And from there he went up to Beersheba.

²⁴That very night appeared to him, saying, “I am the God of your father Abraham; have no fear, for I am with you! I will bless you and make your descendants numerous for the sake of My ser-

¹²וַיְהִי יָצַח בָּאָרֶץ הַהּוּא וַיִּמְצֵא בְּשָׁנָה
הַהּוּא מֵאָה שָׂעֻרִים וַיַּבְרְכֵהוּ יְהֹוָה:
¹³וַיִּגְדַּל הָאִישׁ וַיָּלֹךְ הַלּוֹק וַיִּגְדַּל עַד בִּינְגָדָל
מֵאָד: ¹⁴וַיַּהֲיוּ מִקְנָה־עַצָּן וַיִּקְנֵה בְּקָרָב
וְעַבְדָה רַבָּה וַיִּקְנֵהוּ אֹתוֹ פָּלְשָׁתִים: ¹⁵וְכֹל־
הַבָּאָרֶת אֲשֶׁר חָפְרוּ עֲבָדָיו אֲבִיו בִּימֵי
אֶבְרָהָם אָבִיו סִתְמָוּם פָּלְשָׁתִים וַיִּמְלָאוּם
עַפְרָה: ¹⁶וַיֹּאמֶר אָבִימֶלֶךְ אֶל־יִצְחָק לֵךְ
מִעַמְנוּ בִּירָצְמָתְךָ מִמְנוּ מֵאָד: ¹⁷וַיָּלֹךְ
מִשְׁם יִצְחָק וַיַּחַן בְּנַחַל גָּגָר וַיִּשְׁבַּע שָׁם:
¹⁸וַיִּשְׁבַּע יִצְחָק וַיִּחְפַּר | אֶת־בָּאָרֶת הַמִּים
אֲשֶׁר חָפְרוּ בִּימֵי אֶבְרָהָם אָבִיו וַיִּסְתְּמוּם
פָּلְשָׁתִים אַחֲרֵי מוֹת אֶבְרָהָם וַיִּקְרֵא לְהַזְּנָן
שְׁמוֹת בְּשֵ׀מָת אֶשְׁר־קְרָא לְהַזְּנָן אָבִיו:
¹⁹וַיִּחְפַּר עֲבָדֵי־יִצְחָק בְּנַחַל וַיִּמְצָאוּ
שֵׁם בָּאָר מִים תַּיִם: ²⁰וַיִּרְאֶבוּ רְאֵי גָּגָר
עַמְרְעֵי יִצְחָק לְאָמֹר לְנוּ הַפִּים וַיִּקְרֵא
שֵׁם־הַבָּאָר עַשְׁק כִּי הַתַּעֲשָׂק עָמֹן:
²¹וַיִּחְפַּר בָּאָר אַחֲרָת וַיִּרְאֶבוּ גַּם־עָלִיה
וַיִּקְרֵא שְׁמָה שְׁטָנָה: ²²וַיִּעֲתַק מִשְׁם וַיִּחְפַּר
בָּאָר אַחֲרָת וְלֹא רַבּוּ עָלָיה וַיִּקְרֵא שְׁמָה
רְחַבּוֹת וַיֹּאמֶר בִּירָצְתָּה הַרְחִיב יְהֹוָה לְנוּ
וַפְּרִינוּ בָּאָרֶץ: ²³וַיַּעַל מִשְׁם בָּאָר שְׁבָע:
²⁴וַיַּלְאֵלֵיו יְהֹוָה בְּלִילָה הַהּוּא וַיֹּאמֶר
אָנֹכִי אֱלֹהִי אֶבְרָהָם אָבִיךָ אֶל־תִּרְאֵל כִּי
אַתָּךְ אָנֹכִי וַبְּרָכָתִיךָ וַהֲרֵבֵיתִיךָ אֶת־זָרָעָךְ

ISAAC DIGS WELLS, LOSES THEM, PERSISTS, AND PROSPERS (26:12–33)

Isaac's peaceful disposition is apparent in the patience with which he digs and re-digs wells. When his ownership of wells is challenged, he relinquishes them, whereas Abraham had stood his ground (Genesis 21). Later, Isaac's passivity and persistence pay off when Abimelech recognizes his merit and concludes a treaty with him (26:29).

vant Abraham.”²⁵ So there he built an altar and called upon the Name of יהוה; there he pitched his tent and there Isaac’s servants dug out a well.

²⁶ Abimelech now went to him from Gerar with Ahuzzath his confidant, and Pichol, commander of his troops.²⁷ Isaac said to them, “Why have you come to me, when you hate me and drove me away from your midst?”²⁸ They replied, “We see clearly now that has been with you, so we thought: Pray let there be a sworn treaty between us—between you and us; we will make a compact with you.²⁹ Would you ill-treat us, seeing that we never did you an injury and did only good to you and sent you away in peace? You are now the blessed of יהוה?”³⁰ So he made them a [covenantal] feast; they ate and drank.

³¹ When they got up in the morning they made a vow, each to the other; then Isaac sent them away and they parted from him in harmony.³² That same day Isaac’s servants came and told him about the well they had dug, saying to him, “We have found water!”³³ So he called it Shiba, which is why the town is called Beersheba to this day.

³⁴ When Esau was 40 years old he took to wife Judith daughter of Beeri the Hittite and Basemath daughter of Elon the Hittite.³⁵ They were a bitterness of spirit to Isaac and Rebekah.

בעבור אברם עבדי:²⁵ ויבן שם מזבח
ויקרא בשם יהוה ויטשם אלהו ויכרו
שם עבדי יצחק באך:

²⁶ ואבימלך הלה אליו מגרר ואחות
מרעהו ופיקל שרי-צבאו:²⁷ ויאמר אליהם
יצחק מךועבתם אליו ואתם שנאתם
אתני ותשלוחני מאתכם:²⁸ ויאמרו ראו
ראינו כי-היה יהוה | עמל ונאמר תהי
נא אלה בינו-ינו ביןנו וביןך ונכרצה
ברית עמל:²⁹ אם-תעשה עמנו רעה
באשר לא נגענו וכאשר שעננו עמל
ר��-טוב ופשלח בשלום אתה עתה ברוך
יהוה:³⁰ ויעש להם משטה ויאכלו
וישתו:

³¹ וישבמו בבלקן ונשבעו איש לאחיו
וישלחם יצחק וילכו מאותו בשלום:
³² ויהי ביום ההוא ויבאו עבדי יצחק
ויגדו לו על-אדות הבאר אשר חפרו
ויאמרו לו מצאנו מים:³³ ויקרא אתה
שבעה על-כן שם-העיר באך שבע עד היום הזה:^ס

³⁴ ויהי עשו בן-ארבעים שנה ויקחacha
את-יהודית בת-בاري החתוי ואת-יבשמה
בת-אלון החתי:³⁵ ותהיין מרתה רוח
לי יצחק ולרבקה:^ס

Esau Marries Canaanite Wives

(26:34–35)

The marriage of Esau brings consternation to both his parents. In 27:46, Rebekah claims that Esau’s marriages cause her despair. Isaac does nothing. One gathers that the fact the women are Canaanite is problematic (see at 28:1). Is this marriage one of the reasons why Rebekah chooses the drastic measures to pass the blessings to Jacob? Is it Isaac’s passivity in the face of what both consider a problem that moves her to take action?

34. Judith. This name’s debut in Esau’s family is surprising in light of its subsequent use: The masculine form, Judah, will come to designate the main tribe in Israelite history, becoming the basis of the Hebrew word for “Jew.” (The enduring popularity among Jews of the name Judith comes from a different source: the heroic central character in an ancient Jewish post-biblical book of the same name.)

27 When Isaac had grown old and his eyesight had dimmed, he called his elder son Esau, saying to him, “My son!” “Here I am,” he answered. ²“Look now,” said he. “I have grown old, [and] for all I know I may die any day. ³So pick up your weapons—your quiver and your bow—and go out to the countryside and hunt me some game. ⁴Then you can make me tasty dishes such as I like and bring [them] to me and I will eat, so that I can give you my heartfelt blessing before I die.”

⁵As Isaac was speaking to his son Esau, Rebekah was listening; and when Esau went to the countryside to hunt for some game to bring [him], כז ויהי פירזקן יצחק ותכהין עינוי

מראת ויקרא את-עשו בנו הגדל ויאמר
אללו בני ויאמר אליו הני: ² ויאמר הנה-נא זקנתי לא ידעתי يوم מותי: ³ ועתה
שא-נא כליך תליך וקשתך יצא השדה
וצדקה לי צידה ציד: ⁴ ועשה-לי מטעמים
באשר אהבתה והבאה לי ואכלת בעבר
תברך נפשי בטרם אמות:
⁵ ורבקה שמעת בדבר יצחק אל-עשו בנו
וילך עשו השדה לצד עיד להביא:

Rebekah Ensures the Transmission of the Covenantal Blessings to Jacob

(27:1–28:9)

Rebekah appears to be in charge of the events in this episode, actively putting her plan into action. In order to implement what she understands as the divine plan, she must ensure that it is Jacob who receives the blessing from Isaac. Not being the head of the household, she lacks the authority to give Jacob the blessing directly. Rebekah thus works through Isaac, albeit without his explicit knowledge or consent. She creates a way to usurp his authority and use it for her own ends. If Rebekah had possessed the authority to work through the formal structures of inheritance, she would not have needed to use subterfuge and to pit brother against brother, son against father. Subterfuge is what women and men in positions of powerlessness, or of limited power, use to meet their rightful needs. See, for example, Tamar’s daring encounter with Judah (Genesis 38), and young David’s deception of King Achish (I Samuel 21:11–16). Because women generally lack certain authority in biblical narrative, they sometimes work out unusual tactics to resolve problems and achieve results. They take on the daring plots that dramatically alter the course of events. In biblical narratives, their acts are usually recognized as beneficial: lives are saved, the right side wins, the right son inherits, the family line continues.

Although the rabbinic sages primarily praise Rebekah for her actions, modern biblical scholars are more mixed in their readings of her actions. Some see her as a laudable trickster who must use stratagems to bend the male power structure to her purpose. Others see her as a manipulating schemer whose actions here fit into stereotyped expectations of female behavior, and who is punished for her behavior by never seeing her favorite child again. Adrien Bledstein offers an alternate reading of the episode, suggesting that Isaac is in fact the trickster: he is not deceived by Rebekah but rather has her do his dirty work for him (“Binder, Trickster, Heel . . .,” 1993). (For a range of opinions on Rebekah, see Bellis, Helpmates, Harlots, and Heroes, 1994, pp. 80–84.)

ISAAC PREPARES TO BLESS ESAU (27:1–4)

i. Isaac had grown old. Isaac’s growing incapacity may play a role in Rebekah’s decision to shape the course of events.

his elder son. Throughout this episode, Esau is repeatedly identified in relation to his father and brother, and less so to his mother (see 27:6, 11, 42, 44).

⁶Rebekah said this to her son Jacob, “Look—I heard your father speaking to your brother Esau, saying, ⁷“Bring me game and make me tasty dishes, that I may eat—and [then] bless you before my death.”

⁸“Now, son, listen to me, to what I am instructing you: ⁹Go to the flock and bring me two tender kids, and I will make them into tasty dishes for your father, such as he likes. ¹⁰You will bring them to your father and he will eat, so that he may bless you before his death.” ¹¹But Jacob said to his mother Rebekah, “Look—my brother Esau is a hairy man and I am a smooth-skinned man; ¹²should my father feel me I will seem to him like a cheat, and I will bring a curse on myself, not a blessing!”

⁶וַיֹּאמֶר רֵבְקָה אֶל־יַעֲקֹב בָּנָה לִאמְרָה הַנִּהְךְ שְׁמֻעַתִּי אֶת־אָבִיךְ מִדְבָּר אֶל־עַשְׂוֹ אֲחִיךְ לִאמְרָה: ⁷הַבִּיאָה לִי צִדְקָה וְעַשְׂה־לִי מַטְעָמִים וְאָכְלָה וְאָבְרָכָה לִפְנֵי יְהוָה לִפְנֵי מוֹתִי:

⁸וְעַתָּה בְּנִי שְׁמַע בְּקָלִי לְאַשְׁר אָנִי מִצְוָה אֶתְּחָתָה: ⁹לְקָדְנָא אֶל־הַצָּאן וְקַח־לִי מִשְׁם שְׁנִי גְּדִיעִי עַזְזִים טְבִים וְאָעַשָּׂה אֶתְּמַטְעָמִים לְאָבִיךְ בְּאַשְׁר אָהָב: ¹⁰וְהַבָּאת מַוּתוֹ: ¹¹וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב אֶל־רֵבְקָה אָמוֹן הַן עָשָׂו אֲחֵי אִישׁ שַׁעַר וְאָנֹכִי אִישׁ חָלֵק: ¹²אוּלֵי יִמְשְׁנֵי אָבִי וְהִיִּתְּ בְּעִינָיו בְּמַתְעָתָע וְהַבָּאתִי עַלְיִ קָלָלה וְלֹא בָּרְכָה:

REBEKAH ARRANGES FOR JACOB TO RECEIVE ISAAC'S BLESSING INSTEAD (27:5–17)

6. her son. In contrast to Esau, Jacob is referred to several times as “her son” (see also v. 17). The language used here seems to exclude Esau from the kind of close relationship that Jacob has with Rebekah.

“your father.” In this chapter Isaac is never referred to in relation to Rebekah; he is called “father” (vv. 6, 9, 10, 14), but not Rebekah’s husband. Isaac’s importance to Rebekah seems to recede into the background, and her most primary relationship is with Jacob her son. Rebekah and Isaac converse only at the very end of the tale, when Rebekah intervenes (again) for Jacob’s sake (27:46). While Isaac is reported to have loved Rebekah upon seeing her (24:67), the narrative never states that Rebekah returns this love. The language in this section of the text connects her directly to her son Jacob, but not to Isaac.

8. “listen to me.” Rebekah will tell Jacob twice more to listen to her (vv. 13 and 43). She repeats herself to make sure that she has his attention. Carol Meyers notes that authority is the ability to control situations and decision-making through official channels and systems, whereas power involves doing so through more informal and unofficial avenues (Discovering Eve: Ancient Israelite Women in Context, 1988, p. 41). Here, Rebekah does not have the proper authority, but she has power. She cannot formally bestow the blessing upon Jacob, but she can ensure he listens to her.

“instructing.” Heb. m’tzavah, literally “command.” Because of their close relationship, Jacob is one person over whom Rebekah can exert some limited power—and, as his mother, also authority. She commands him to do as she directs.

9. “likes.” Heb. ahav, literally “loves”; compare 25:28.

12. In going along with Rebekah’s plan, Jacob knowingly takes on the role of trickster vis-à-vis Isaac; in the process, Jacob learns from his mother how to achieve a goal by the use of subterfuge. Later, he himself will be tricked by Laban, his father-in-law, who will again use the ploy of covering up the truth to manipulate Jacob into marrying not his ¹³His mother then said to him, “Any curse that you get will be on me, son—just listen to me and go get [them] for me!” ¹⁴So he went and got them and brought [them] to his mother, and his mother made tasty dishes, such as his father liked.

¹⁵Rebekah now took the finest of her elder son Esau’s garments that she had in the house, and dressed up her younger son Jacob. ¹⁶The skins of the kids she wrapped on his hands and over the smooth part of his neck, ¹⁷and she put the tasty food and the bread that she had made into her son Jacob’s hand.

¹³וַתֹּאמֶר לוֹ אָמוֹעַלְיָ קָלְלָתֶךָ בְּנֵי אֶחָד שָׁמַע בְּקָלְיִ וְלֹא קָחָלִי: ¹⁴וַיֵּלֶךְ וַיִּקְחֶה וַיַּבְאֶ לְאָמוֹת וַתַּעֲשֶׂ אָמוֹת מְטֻעָמִים כַּאֲשֶׁר אָהָב אָבָיו:

¹⁵וַתִּקְחֶה רְבָקָה אֶת־בְּגָדֵי עִשּׂוֹ בְּנֵה הַגָּדֶל הַחֲמִידָת אֲשֶׁר אָתָה בְּבֵית וַתִּלבְשׁ אֶת־יַעֲקֹב בְּנֵה הַקָּטָן: ¹⁶וְאַתָּה עַרְתָּ גְּדִי הָעָזִים הַלְּבִישָׁה עַל־יָדֶיךָ וְעַל חֶלְקָת צְנוּאָרִיו: ¹⁷וַתִּתְּנַצֵּן אֶת־הַמְּטֻעָמִים וְאֶת־הַלְּחֵם אֲשֶׁר עִשְׂתָּה בֵּין יַעֲקֹב בְּנֵה:

beloved Rachel, but her sister Leah (29:25). In turn, Jacob will refine his trickster status by convincing Laban to agree to an arrangement by which Jacob will depart with a significant percentage of Laban’s flock (Genesis 30).

13. ‘Any curse that you get will be on me, son.’

Rebekah assures Jacob that if anyone is blamed or punished for what he is about to do, it will be she and not he. Her readiness to take responsibility can be seen as her understanding that what she is doing is not deception for personal gain, but the fulfillment of God’s plan as revealed to her during her pregnancy (25:23). The deception they are about to carry out is for the greater good, a case of “the ends justifies the means.”

15. that she had in the house. Images of domesticity fill Rebekah’s story. As Carol Meyers notes, women in ancient Israel held major roles within the household. They had the primary responsibility for educating the young as well as for transforming unprocessed ingredients into cooked, consumable food (Discovering Eve, 1988, pp. 145–146). Rebekah moves confidently throughout her family’s domain. She is in control of its clothing and of the preparation of its food. She decides when its livestock is to be slaughtered. Her tools for survival are the items immediately and easily available to her. Such things mark this as a woman’s story.

dressed up her younger son Jacob. The covering up of Jacob is the central element of Rebekah’s act of subterfuge. Like Tamar in Genesis 38, who covers herself with a veil, Rebekah can be successful only through the act of covering up, not by acting directly and out in the open.

16. she wrapped. The narrator repeatedly emphasizes Rebekah’s actions.

17. she put the tasty food and the bread that she had made. As with the clothing in v. 15, Rebekah uses what is on hand in the female sphere. The seemingly harmless domestic items of food or bread become the tools she uses to influence the course of events. The verse is clear that these are items whose preparation Rebekah has personally directed (and perhaps has undertaken herself), emphasizing her purposefulness in executing the plan.

JACOB STEALS ESAU’S BLESSING (27:18–29)

The climax of this episode occurs when Jacob goes to Isaac posing as Esau and receives the blessing intended for his brother. In a dramatic scene between father and son, Isaac asks several times for reassurance that this is indeed Esau before him. Isaac, who cannot see well, uses all his other senses in trying to make sure this is the right son: he touches Jacob (vv. 22, 26), he listens to his voice (v. 22), he tastes his food (v. 25), and he smells him (v. 27). Isaac’s blessing of Jacob in this scene establishes Jacob as the heir to the covenantal promises. Although Isaac is depicted as a weak and passive ¹⁸Going then to his father, he said, “Father!” and he replied: “Here I am; which son of mine are you?”

¹⁹Jacob said to his father, “I am Esau your first-born; I have done as you told me; pray get up and sit and eat of my game so that you can give me your heartfelt blessing.” ²⁰Isaac then said to his son: “How is it that you were able to find [game] so quickly, my son?” And he replied, “Your God made it happen for me.” ²¹“Pray come near me,” said Isaac to Jacob, “so that I can feel you, son. Are you really my son Esau, or are you not?”

²²Jacob approached his father Isaac, who felt him and said, “The voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hands are the hands of Esau!” ²³He did not recognize him, however, because his hands were hairy, like the hands of his brother Esau—and as he was [preparing to] bless him, ²⁴he said, “Are you really my son Esau?” “I am,” he answered. ²⁵He said, “Bring [it] near me and I will eat of my son’s game, so that I can give you my heartfelt blessing.” He brought [it] to him and he ate; he brought him wine and he drank. ²⁶His father Isaac then said to him, “Pray come near and kiss me, son.”

²⁷As he came near and kissed him, [Isaac] smelled the scent of his clothes and blessed him, saying:

dupe, the overly exaggerated and repetitive details presented here beg the question of how complicit Isaac is in the ruse.

18. “which son of mine are you?” Isaac asks the critical question. Rebekah has worked hard to cover up Jacob’s identity, dressing him in Esau’s clothes and putting in his hands the food made under her supervision (vv. 15–17).

21. “Are you really my son Esau?” Isaac is not only physically blind, but on a deeper level he refuses to recognize what would be clear to any parent. Can his knowledge of his children truly be so superficial that he can only distinguish between them visually? His question indicates doubt, yet he

¹⁸ וַיָּבֹא אֶל־אָבִיו וַיֹּאמֶר אֲבִי וַיֹּאמֶר חָנָנִי
מַי אַתָּה בְּנִי :

¹⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב אֶל־אָבִיו אָנֹכִי עֹשׂוּ בְּכֶרֶךְ
עֲשִׂיתִי כַּאֲשֶׁר דִּבְרָת אלִי קְוֹם־יָא שְׁבָה
וְאָכְלָה מֵצִיְּנִי בַּעֲבוּר תְּבָרְכִּנִּי נְפָשָׁה:
²⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר יִצְחָק אֶל־בֶּןְךָ מִה־זֶּה מִתְרַת
לְמַצָּא בְּנִי וַיֹּאמֶר בַּי הַקְרָה יְהוָה אֱלֹהִיךְ
לִפְנֵי: ²¹ וַיֹּאמֶר יִצְחָק אֶל־יַעֲקֹב גַּשְׁה־נָא
וְאִמְשָׁךְ בְּנִי הַאֲתָה זֶה בְּנִי עֹשֶׂוּ אָמִילָא:

²² וַיָּגַשׁ יַעֲקֹב אֶל־יִצְחָק אָבִיו וַיְמַשְׁהָה
וַיֹּאמֶר הַקְלָל קֹול יַעֲקֹב וְהִקְרִים יְדֵי
שְׁעָרָת וְיִבְרָכְהוּ: ²⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר אַתָּה זֶה בְּנִי
עֹשֶׂוּ וַיֹּאמֶר אָנִי: ²⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר הַגְּשָׁה לֵי
וְאָכְלָה מִצִּיד בְּנִי לְמַעַן תְּבָרְכָה נְפָשִׁי
וַיָּגַשׁ־לֵךְ וַיָּאֶכְל וַיָּבֹא לוּ יָין וַיְשַׁתָּה:
²⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹן יִצְחָק אָבִיו גַּשְׁה־נָא וְשַׁקְדָּה לֵי בְּנִי:

²⁷ וַיָּגַשׁ וַיִּשְׁקַׁלְוּ וַיִּרְחַח אֶת־רִיחַ בְּגָדָיו וַיִּבְרָכְהוּ וַיֹּאמֶר

seems to want to believe this son before him.

25. and he ate. Although a lover of Esau’s hunt and cooking (25:28; 27:4, 9), Isaac seems unable to distinguish Esau’s cooking from Rebekah’s.

26. “Pray come near and kiss me, son.” For the third time, Isaac wants to make sure this is the right son. Is he really being fooled by the costume, as he was fooled by the food in the previous verse, or is he willingly allowing himself to be led through a charade? Perhaps Isaac is allowing himself to be misled; he is blind to what he chooses not to see.

27. scent of his clothes. Isaac smells not the son before him, but the clothes in which Jacob has disguised himself.

“See, my son’s scent is like the scent of a field blessed by יהוה.

²⁸God give you of heaven’s dew, of earth’s bounty; abundant grain and new wine.

²⁹Let peoples serve you, nations bow down to you.

Be a ruler to your brothers, and let your mother’s sons bow down to you. May those who curse you be cursed; may those who bless you be blessed.”

³⁰Just as Isaac finished blessing Jacob, at the very moment that Jacob was in the act of leaving his father Isaac’s presence, his brother Esau came in from his hunt. ³¹He too made tasty dishes that he brought to his father and he said to his father, “Let my father get ready to eat of his son’s game, so that you can give me your heartfelt blessing.” ³²But his father Isaac said to him, “Who are you?” So he replied, “I am your son, your first-born, Esau!” ³³Isaac now began to shudder—a shuddering exceedingly great—and he said, “Who then hunted game and brought [it] to me and I ate of it all before you came? I blessed him—and blessed he will remain!”

³⁴When Esau heard his father’s words, he broke into an exceedingly loud and bitter howl and said to his father, “Bless me! Me too, Father!”

28–29. Isaac’s blessing to Jacob fulfills the prophecy given to Rebekah during her pregnancy (25:23), in accord with her apparent earlier interpretation of it: Jacob will be the primary son.

The manner in which the story is narrated up to this moment leaves open the possibility that Isaac not only knows that Jacob has the qualities needed for proceeding with the covenantal plan but also lets Rebekah arrange for Jacob to receive his blessing. He could, however, be genuinely deceived.

רָאָה רִיחַ בְּנֵי בְּרִיחַ שָׂדָה
אֲשֶׁר בָּרַכְוּ יְהוָה:
²⁸ וַיַּתְחַלֵּל הָאֱלֹהִים מַטֵּל הַשְׁמִים
וּמִשְׁמַנֵּי הָאָרֶץ
וְלֹבֶן דָּגָן וְתִירְשׁ:
²⁹ יַעֲבֹדוּךְ עָמִים
וַיִּשְׁתַּחֲנוּ לְךָ לְאָמִים
הַוָּה גָּבֵיל לְאָחִיךְ
וַיִּשְׁתַּחֲנוּ לְךָ בְּנֵי אַמְּרָק
אוֹרְבִּיךְ אַרְזָרָן
וּמְבָרְכִּיךְ בָּרוּךְ:

³⁰ וַיְהִי כַּאֲשֶׁר בֵּלָה יִצְחָק לְבָרָךְ אֶת־יַעֲקֹב
וַיְהִי אֶתְךָ יֵצֵא יַעֲקֹב מִאַת פָּנֵי יִצְחָק
אֲבִיו וַיַּעֲשׂוּ אֲחֵי בָּא מִצְקָדוֹ: ³¹ וַיַּעֲשֶׂה גָּמָ-
הוּא מְטֻעָמִים וַיָּבֹא לְאָבִיו וַיֹּאמֶר לְאָבִיו
יְקֻם אָבִי וַיַּאֲכַל מִצִּד בָּנוֹ בַּעֲבָר תְּבִרְכִּנִּי
נַפְשָׁךְ: ³² וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ יִצְחָק אָבִיו מִי־אַתָּה
וַיֹּאמֶר אָנִי בֶּןְךָ בְּכָרָךְ עַשְׂוֹ: ³³ וַיִּחַרְדֵּן יִצְחָק
חֲרֵדָה גְּדֹלָה עַד־מָאֹד וַיֹּאמֶר מִי־אַפּוֹ
הָוּא חָצֶר־צָדֶן וַיָּבֹא לֵי וַיַּאֲכַל מִבְּלָט בְּטֻרָם
תָּבוֹא וְאַבְרָכָהוּ גַּמְבָּרוּךְ יְהִי:

³⁴ כִּשְׁמַע עָשָׂו אֶת־דְּבָרַי אָבִיו וַיַּצְעַק
צָעַקָּה גְּדֹלָה וּמְרָה עַד־מָאֹד וַיֹּאמֶר לְאָבִיו

ESAU DISCOVERS THE DECEPTION (27:30–40)

The narration spotlights Esau’s heartbreakingly bitter cry as he begs his father for a blessing, which evokes the reader’s sympathy for the eldest son’s plight.

34. “Me too, Father!” Esau’s cry here echoes Jacob’s answer to Isaac in v. 18. They are both his sons; they both deserve his blessing.

³⁵But he said, “Your brother came with deceit and took away your blessing!”

³⁶He replied, “Is he not named Jacob? Twice now he has cheated me—he took my birthright and now, look, he has taken my blessing!” And he added, “Did you not reserve a blessing for me?”

³⁷Isaac responded by saying to Esau, “Look—I have appointed him your master, and given him all his kin to be his servants, and have supported him with grain and new wine; come, now, what am I to do, my son?”

³⁸“Do you have but one blessing, Father?” said Esau to his father. “Bless me! Me too, Father!” And Esau cried out and wept. ³⁹His father Isaac then responded and said to him:

“Lo, among the fat places of the earth shall your dwelling be,

and with heaven’s dew from above.

⁴⁰By your sword shall you live, your brother shall you serve.

But when you move away,

You shall break his yoke off your neck.”

⁴¹Esau now bore a grudge against Jacob because of the blessing his father had conferred upon him, and Esau formed this resolve: “The days of mourning for my father are approaching; then I will kill my brother Jacob.” ⁴²When Rebekah was told her ברכני גַּם־אָנִי אָבִי: ³⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר בָּא אָחִיךְ בְּמִרְמָה וַיַּקְחֵ בְּרָכָתְךָ: ³⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר הַכֵּן קָרָא שָׁמוֹ יַעֲקֹב וַיַּעֲקֹבָנִי הַה פְּעָמִים אֶת־בְּכָרָתִי לְקָח וְהַנֶּה עַתָּה לְקָח בְּרָכָתִי וַיֹּאמֶר הַלְא־אָצַלְתָּ לִי בְּרָכָה: ³⁷ וַיֹּעֶן יִצְחָק וַיֹּאמֶר לְעַשְׂוֹ הַן גָּבִיר שְׁמַתְיוֹ לְךָ וְאֶת־כְּלָא־אָחִיו נְתַתְּ לְךָ לְעָבָדִים וְדָגָן וְתִירְשׁ סְמִכְתְּיוֹ וְלִכְהָ אֲפּוֹזָ מה אָשָׁה בְּנִי:

³⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר עַשְׂוֹ אֶל־אָבִיו הַבְּרָכָה אֶחָת הַוְא־לְךָ אָבִי בְּרָכַנִּי גַּם־אָנִי אָבִי וַיֹּשֶׁא עַשְׂוֹ קָלָו וַיְבַךְ: ³⁹ וַיֹּעֶן יִצְחָק אָבִיו וַיֹּאמֶר אַלְיוֹ

הַנֶּה מִשְׁמַנֵּי הָאָרֶץ יְהִי מִזְשָׁבֵךְ וּמִטְלֵה הַשְׁמִינִים מִעַל:

⁴⁰ וְעַל־חֲרֵבֶךָ תִּחְיָה וְאֶת־אָחִיךְ תַּעֲבֹד וְהַנֶּה כַּאֲשֶׁר תַּרְדִּיד וּפְרֻקָת עַלְוֹ מִעַל צְוָאָרָךְ:

⁴¹ וַיִּשְׁתַּם עַשְׂוֹ אֶת־יַעֲקֹב עַל־הַבְּרָכָה אֲשֶׁר בָּרַכוּ אָבִיו וַיֹּאמֶר עַשְׂוֹ בְּלִבְךָ יוּקְרַבְךָ יְמִינְךָ אָבֵל אָבִי וְאַהֲרֹגָה אֶת־יַעֲקֹב אָחִי: ⁴² וַיַּגְדֵּל לְרָבָקָה אֶת־דְּבָרַי עַשְׂוֹ בְּנֶה הַגָּדָל וְתִשְׁלַח

35. Although Rebekah had assured Jacob that any blame would be on her (v. 12), Isaac holds Jacob responsible for his actions. Adrien Bledstein reads this as Isaac’s acknowledgement that Jacob is, like himself, a fellow trickster (“Binder, Trickster, Heel . . .,” 1993, p. 288).

“deceit.” Heb. mirmah, which appears only once more in the Torah, when Jacob’s sons deceive Shechem and Hamor in Dinah’s story (34:13).

36. “Jacob . . . cheated.” Heb. yaakov . . . va-yakveini, an obvious play on Jacob’s name (Yaakov). In using this specific word, Esau, too, places the blame squarely on Jacob’s shoulders. According to Esau, his sibling has not merely tricked him; Jacob is—as his name implies—a cheater by nature.

REBEKAH CONVINCES ISAAC TO SEND JACOB AWAY (27:41–28:9)

The immediate consequences of the theft include Esau’s hatred of Jacob, Rebekah’s clever rescue of Jacob, and Esau’s marriage to an Ishmaelite woman. This will also be the only time in this episode that Rebekah addresses Isaac directly.

elder son Esau's words, she sent for her younger son Jacob and said to him, "Look—your brother Esau is plotting to avenge himself by killing you.⁴³ Now, son, listen to me: get going and flee to my brother Laban in Haran.⁴⁴ You can stay there a while until your brother's rage cools down;⁴⁵ when your brother's anger turns away from you and he forgets what you did to him, I will send to bring you back from there—why should I be bereft of the two of you in a single day?"

⁴⁶So Rebekah said to Isaac, "I abhor my life because of the daughters of the Hittites; if Jacob takes a wife from the daughters of the Hittites—like these from among the daughters of the land—what would my life be worth?" 28 Isaac then summoned Jacob and blessed him and gave him this instruction: "Do not take a wife from among the daughters of Canaan.² Get ready, go to Paddan-aram, to the house of Bethuel your mother's father, and take yourself a wife from among the daughters of Laban your mother's brother.³ And may God Almighty bless you, and make you fruitful and numerous, so that you become a host of peoples,

וַתִּקְרָא לֵיעַקְבּוֹ בְּנֵה הַקָּטָן וַתֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים
הָנֶה עֲשֵׂנו אֲחִיךְ מִתְנַחֵם לְךָ לְהַרְגָּג:
⁴³ וְעַתָּה בְּנֵי שָׁמָע בְּקֹלִי וְקוּם בְּרַחַלְךָ
אַל-לְבָנָן אֲחִי חֲרָנָה:⁴⁴ וַיִּשְׁבַּת עַמּוֹ יָמִים
אֲחֶרִים עַד אֲשֶׁר-תִּשְׁׁבוּ חַמִּת אֲחִיךְ:
⁴⁵ עַד-שׁוֹב אַפְ-אֲחִיךְ מִפְּנֵךְ וְשָׁבָת אַתָּה
אֲשֶׁר-עָשָׂית לוֹ וְשַׁלְחָתִי וְלַקְחָתִיךְ מִשְׁמָךְ
לִמְהָא אֲשֶׁר גַּם-שְׁנֵיכֶם יוֹם אֶחָד:
⁴⁶ וַתֹּאמֶר רַבָּה אַל-יִצְחָק קָצְתִּי בְּחִינִּי
מִפְּנֵי בְּנֹות הָתָת אַסְלָקָח יוֹעַכְבּ אַשְׁדֵי
מִבְּנֹות-חִתָּה בְּאֶלְהָ מִבְּנֹות הָאָרֶץ לִמְהָא לִ
חִים: כח וַיִּקְרָא יִצְחָק אַל-יִעַקְבּ
וַיַּבְרֵךְ אֹתוֹ וַיַּצְוֹהֵר וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ לְאִתְקַח
אֲשֶׁר מִבְּנֹות כָּנְעָן: ² קָוָם לְלִבְ פְּדָנָה אֲרָם
בִּינָה בְּתוֹאֵל אָבִי אַמְּמָךְ וְקַחְלֵךְ מִשְׁטֵ
אֲשֶׁר מִבְּנֹות לְבָנָן אֲחִי אַמְּמָךְ: ³ וְאֶל שְׁדֵי
יִבְרֵךְ אֹתְךָ וַיַּפְרַח וַיַּרְבֶּה וְהִיָּת לְקַהְלָ

43. "get going." Rebekah gives up what she loves most, her son Jacob. Like so many mothers, she sacrifices her own desires to ensure her child a future.

45. "I will... bring you back from there." As this episode comes to a close, Rebekah remains a woman with a plan. Her hope is that Jacob leaves only temporarily, until it is safe to return. Yet once Jacob leaves home, they never meet again.

"why should I be bereft of the two of you...?" Rebekah encourages her son to leave by saying that it is better for her if he does, a statement calculated to release Jacob from the fear that he is abandoning her.

46. Rebekah addresses her words to Isaac, providing a reason to for him to send Jacob away. This way, Jacob is able to leave with Isaac's blessing and permission. Once again, Rebekah has created a situation in which it seems that Isaac is in control, while she pulls the strings. She has done what had to be done, but now her beloved Jacob will be gone.

28:1. As the people of Israel formulates its own identity in tension with surrounding cultures, its traditions frequently express anxiety about Israelite men marrying Canaanite women. Thus with regard to Isaac, Genesis 24 strongly advocated endogamy—that is, marriage within the family's kinship group. In this parashah, Esau's marriage to Canaanite women upsets his parents (26:35, 27:46, 28:8). The concern seems less when the foreign woman comes from a non-Canaanite family (see, for example, Deuteronomy 21:10–14).

2. "your mother's father . . . your mother's brother." Isaac's way of referring to Jacob's destination further highlights the bond between mother and son.

⁴and give you the blessing of Abraham—you along with your descendants—to possess the land in which you have sojourned, that God gave to Abraham!” ⁵Thus did Isaac send Jacob away; he went to Paddan-aram, to Laban son of Bethuel the Aramean, brother of Rebekah, mother of Jacob and Esau.

⁶When Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob and sent him away to Paddan-aram, there to take a wife for himself, blessing him and instructing him: Do not take a wife from among the daughters of Canaan,⁷ and that Jacob had heeded his father and mother and gone to Paddan-aram,⁸ Esau understood that his father Isaac looked with disfavor at the daughters of Canaan,⁹ so he went to Ishmael and took as his wife Mahalath daughter of Ishmael, Abraham’s son, sister of Nebaioth, adding her to his [other] wives.

עַמִּים: ⁴ וַיַּתֵּן־לְךָ אֶת־בְּרִית אֲבָרָהָם לְעַזְרָעָה אֶתְכָּה לְרֹשְׁתָּךְ אֶת־אָרֶץ מִגְּרִיךְ אֲשֶׁר־נָתַן אֱלֹהִים לְאֲבָרָהָם: ⁵ וַיַּשְׁלַח יִצְחָק אֶת־יַעֲקֹב וַיַּלְךְ פְּנֵיה אֶרְם אֶל־לְבָנָן בָּנוֹבְתוֹאֵל הָאֲרֵמִי אֶחָיו רַבָּה אִם יַעֲקֹב וְעַשֹּׂו:

⁶ וַיַּרְא עַשֹּׂו כִּי־בָרָךְ יִצְחָק אֶת־יַעֲקֹב וְשָׁלַח אֹתוֹ פְּנֵיה אֶרְם לְקֹחַת־לְוֹ מִשְׁם אֲשֶׁר בָּבְרִיכוּ אֹתוֹ וַיַּצְאֵן עַלְיוֹ לִאמְרָה לְאִתְקַח אֲשֶׁר מִבְּנֹות בְּנָעַן: ⁷ וַיַּשְׁמַע יַעֲקֹב אֶל־אָבָיו וְאֶל־אָמָּנוֹ וַיַּלְךְ פְּנֵיה אֶרְם: ⁸ וַיַּרְא עַשֹּׂו כִּי רַעֲוֹת בְּנֹות בְּנָעַן בְּעִינֵי יִצְחָק אָבָיו: ⁹ וַיַּלְךְ עַשֹּׂו אֶל־יִשְׂמָעָל וַיָּקַח אֶת־מִקְלַת | בְּתִישְׁמָעָל בְּנִ-אֲבָרָהָם אֶחָות נְבִיאוֹת עַל־נְשָׂיו לוֹ לְאֲשֶׂה: ^ס

6–9. When Esau saw. The text portrays Esau as one who still wants parental approval. Whereas Jacob leaves on the advice of his mother and his father (28:7), Esau seeks only his father’s approval (28:8) in choosing a non-Canaanite wife. At the end of this parashah, Rebekah recedes to the shadows, now that she has seen to the continuation of the Covenant.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi
Hara E. Person

Another View

IN THIS TORAH PORTION, our foremother Rebekah takes matters into her own hands in order to secure Isaac's blessing for her favorite son, Jacob. She is encouraged to do so by the prophecy she receives when she inquires of God during her pregnancy (25:23). God answers Rebekah's inquiry about her pregnancy with the ambiguity inherent in every oracle. The oracle specifies that Rebekah is carrying twins and that each child will develop into a nation. Their future relationships, however, remain ambiguous (see at v. 23). Which of the two peoples shall overcome the other? Who will serve whom?

What if Rebekah misinterprets the prophecy? What if its ambiguity is part of the divine purpose? What if, by eliminating the ambiguity—by urging Jacob to steal the blessing meant for his brother—Rebekah is not acting in harmony with the will of God?

In that case we would expect the text to show dire consequences. Indeed, such consequences ensue. First, the fruits of the stolen blessing do not come easily to Jacob. The blessing that he gains by guile refers to material benefits (27:28–29). He later secures his wealth—the promise in this stolen blessing—in an environment of stealth (Genesis 29–31). Second, he soon loses something far more precious than material abundance: his beloved wife dies in childbirth (35:19). Third, there is consequently Rebekah's pain. She sends

What if the ambiguity of the oracle is part of the divine purpose?

Jacob away for his protection (27:43–44) and dies without seeing him again. Rebekah must have suffered deeply in separating from her beloved son Jacob. She pays a very high price for her determination to ignore the ambiguity of God's word.

The outcome of Rebekah's story may, perhaps, teach us to allow the divine process to unfold for a while, before we decide to take action on God's behalf. Perhaps the gift from our biblical mother Rebekah in this parashah is her prompting us to sense ambiguity, to appreciate nuance—and to have the wisdom and patience to let divine intention blossom in its own time.

—Diane M. Sharon

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

This is the line of Isaac (25:19). In parashat Tol'dot the reader is re-introduced to Rebekah, the second of the matriarchs, whom the Rabbis extolled for resisting the temptations of idolatry and unrighteous behavior that characterized her childhood home. Moreover, when God's intention to maintain the covenant through Jacob was made known to her, she single-mindedly fulfilled the divine will, even when it meant deceiving her husband and disinher-iting her older son. The Rabbis' high regard for her reminds us that this portion is as much about Rebekah as it is about her husband. According to the Rabbis, her virtuous behavior merited that the twelve tribes would spring directly from her through her son Jacob (Midrash Breishit Rabbah 63.6).

daughter of...the Aramean (25:20). This verse describes Rebekah as the daughter of Bethuel “the Aramean,” of Paddan Aram, and as the sister of Laban “the Aramean.” Given the name of the city, both mentions of “the Aramean” (ha-arami) appear superfluous. By means of word play, B'reishit Rabbah 63.4 explains that the first “Aramean” comes to teach us that her father was a ram'ai—a deceiver. Her brother was also a deceiver, as were all her neighbors. Rebekah was surrounded by deception, living among bad influences on her behavior. But she set herself apart and stood out like “a lily among the thorns” (Song of Songs 2:2).

TOL'DOT

Isaac pleaded with יהוה on behalf of his wife, for she was childless (25:21). According to rabbinic tradition, there were seven infertile biblical women for whom prayer was efficacious. P'sikta D'Rav Kahana 20.1 lists the first six as Sarah, Rebekah, Leah, Rachel, the wife of Manoah (Samson’s mother in Judges 13), and Hannah. The seventh is personified Israel, based on the characterization of Zion as a childless woman whose hopes for offspring will be fulfilled by God at the time of redemption (Isaiah 54).

The children pressed against each other inside her (25:22). B'reishit Rabbah 63.6 relates that whenever Rebekah stood near synagogues or schools, Jacob struggled to come out; and when she passed idolatrous temples, Esau eagerly endeavored to emerge.

יהוה said to her: “Two peoples are in your belly” (25:22). The Rabbis dignified both Sarah and Rebekah with the title of prophet. They further observed that Rebekah experienced divine revelation twice, once when God informed her that she was pregnant with twins, and again when Rebekah learned about Esau’s decision to kill Jacob (27:42). In the first instance, she learns of the two nations struggling in her womb when she visits the study house of Shem and Eber (see Genesis 11:10–26; B'reishit Rabbah 63.6). Here, the Rabbis reaffirmed the need for intercession between the Divine and humans, a notion found also in B'reishit Rabbah 82.3 with reference to Jacob. Thus gender does not seem to be the issue as much as the notion of how one makes contact with God. Similarly, in the second case, the Rabbis stated that the matriarchs were prophets—and Rebekah was a matriarch. Thus, despite her less than reputable pedigree, Rebekah joins her husband in meriting prophetic status; in fact, it is Rebekah rather than Isaac who executes the divine will in ensuring that Jacob receive the status of first-born son (B'reishit Rabbah 63.7; 67.9).

but Rebekah favored Jacob (25:28). According to B'reishit Rabbah 63.10, “The more she heard his voice [engaged in study, reciting his lessons aloud], the stronger grew her love for him.”

They were a bitterness of spirit to Isaac and Rebekah (26:34–35). The Rabbis invoked Rebekah’s idolatrous pedigree when they considered this reference to Isaac’s and Rebekah’s unhappiness over Esau’s choice of wives. They concluded that Isaac is mentioned first

It is Rebekah rather than Isaac who executes the divine will.

in this verse because he was far more disturbed over Esau’s marriages to idolators than Rebekah. This is because, “as the daughter of idolatrous priests, Rebekah was more accustomed to the pollution of idolatry and did not object—but Isaac, the son of holy parents, did object” (B'reishit Rabbah 65.4). The Rabbis were also struck by the focus on Isaac in a passage concerned with domestic matters. Ordinarily one would have expected Rebekah to be more aware of what went on in her household than her husband. The Rabbis extrapolated this assumption to women in general, positing “another reason why Isaac is mentioned first: It is a woman’s habit to stay at home [and do productive work], and a man’s to go out in public and learn understanding from people; but as Isaac’s eyes were dim he stayed at home; therefore [the matter was disturbing] to Isaac first” (B'reishit Rabbah 65.4).

—Carol Bakhos

Contemporary Reflection

THIS TORAH PORTION PRESENTS the second of three matriarchs who suffer barrenness. In this episode Rebekah and Isaac are unable to conceive for the first twenty years of their marriage (25:20, 26). The Torah uses barren couples as a literary device to demonstrate the miraculous nature of the conception of the patriarchs and the beneficence of God. Infertility in the twenty-first century tells a different story: overworked and overstressed women, late marriage, and perhaps environmental toxins that inhibit reproduction.

The economy and culture of Rebekah's Canaan and our society are worlds apart, yet the emotional reaction to infertility has remained largely unchanged. While suffering from her difficult pregnancy, Rebekah cries out, "Im ken lamah zeh anochi? (If this is so, why do I exist?)" Rebekah herself utters these words after she becomes pregnant. But many Jews ask such a question earlier, when they face difficulty conceiving and bringing a pregnancy to term. Aspiring parents today often suffer a crisis of meaning. Women and men who face infertility may experience devastating depression, anger, jealousy, and deep existential angst. It might seem that feminism would have liberated women from expectations of motherhood. After all, feminists of our age take pride that we are not limited by the narrow definitions of womanhood that characterized Rebekah's milieu. Yet even in our liberated modern age, women and men usually see biological parenthood as a necessary rite of passage without which they are not considered full adults. Generating a child is a signifier of "true womanhood" and "real manhood" to many. Barrenness remains a social stigma—particularly in the Jewish community, which holds that the first mitzvah in the Torah is p'ru u-rvu (be fruitful and multiply).

Full integration and acceptance in the Jewish community often revolve around family life. The Jewish community has grown more open to gay and lesbian families in recent years largely because many such couples have been able to become parents—some through adoption or prior heterosexual reproduction, and more recently through artificial insemination. Yet adults in their thirties, forties, and fifties without children—regardless of their marital status and sexual orientation—remain outsiders in all but the most avant-garde synagogues and activist Jewish organizations. Childless adults treated as full participants in Rebekah's question continues to bedevil Jewish adults who hope to parent.

Jewish life remain the exception, and thus the Jewish community tends to lose these people from the rolls of temple membership.

What of the Jewish championing of classic feminist ideas that a woman is much more than a baby machine; that anatomy is not destiny; that a woman defines herself not primarily through her family but through her deeds and ideas? Even today, motherhood and fatherhood in the Jewish community are both idealized and romanticized. Now as much as ever, family and parenthood are the primary cultural institution where individuals look to find personal fulfillment, happiness, and love. Most contemporary Jews cannot imagine finding such rewards without children; many find it difficult to consider doing so without their own genetic children to realize the wish to pass Judaism, love, and genes mi-dor l'dor (from generation to generation).

Our community has done only an adequate job providing support for the infertile. Chapters on infertility in mainstream Jewish parenting books remain either absent or in the non-normative category even though infertility is rife. Nina Beth Cardin has written Tears of Sorrow, Seeds of Hope (second edition, 2007), a spiritual companion for those grieving infertility, pregnancy loss, or stillbirth. This book belongs in every Jewish library, and in time, its messages will perhaps pervade Jewish culture. Yet even in this book adoption is discussed only as a last and unfavorable alternative.

TOL'DOT

Meanwhile, responsa literature and halachic interpretations have strongly supported artificial insemination and in vitro fertilization for heterosexual couples facing infertility because of the strong drive for Jewish continuity. Such a notion of Jewish continuity is not only religious, but also biological. There is more support in the Jewish institutional world than in Christian communities for reproductive technologies, apparently because many Jews believe Judaism is inherited as much as taught.

The definition of family in the Jewish world, it seems, clings to a model of parents who have genetic offspring. For example, in a study reported in 1991, researchers who surveyed a sample of male college students found that the Jews considered it more important than did the Christians that children be conceived by themselves and their spouse, rather than adopted.

Bonnie Ellen Baron and Lawrence Baron refer to that survey in the ground-breaking book Lifecycles, edited by Rabbi Debra Orenstein (1994). In their article “On Adoption” they explain that while there are some biblical precedents for adoption (Mordecai was guardian of Esther; Sarah initially seeks to adopt Hagar’s son), Judaism never has strongly encouraged it. They speculate that “Jewish law lacks a formal procedure for adoption because of the primacy it accords biological kinship in determining a child’s inheritance rights and religious and tribal status” (p. 28). This is true in spite of the primacy of tikkun olam as a deeply embedded value among Jews. How can we identify ourselves as a community of tikkun (repair) without a commitment to adopt children who languish around the world without loving parents?

Adoption support is rarely modeled by Jewish leaders. A remarkable exception is Yosef Abramowitz and Rabbi Susan Silverman, a couple who direct Jewish Family and Life! and began a family with biological offspring but also fulfilled a dream to adopt two children born in Ethiopia.

“Im ken lamah zeh anochi? (If this is so, why do I exist?)” was Rebekah’s question that continues to bedevil Jewish adults who hope to parent but are unable to carry a pregnancy to term. Has feminism not brought us better questions and better answers? Have modern, forward-thinking Jewish communities failed to provide real alternatives to a dilemma of meaninglessness in the absence of genetic heirs?

Tol'dot poses the question of meaning. If we answer that we exist only to fulfill impulses through our children, we have failed Judaism and feminism. If we answer that we exist for tikkun, to nurture children—biological, adoptive, and those we teach, mentor and support—then we will have succeeded far more in realizing the sacred goal of mi-dor l'dor, from generation to generation.

—Valerie Lieber

• • • • • • •

Voices

• • • • • • •

from I Know Four

Amy Blank

III.

Now that I am big with child
—so big, I think with twins—
I chuckle: will our silence be maintained?
Womanhood is set on me, I have grown strong,
and I will hold two tumbling sons in check whilst Isaac dreams—
Yes, and sometimes shrieks in dream.
(What was done to him?
He does not say...) When he wakes he goes into the fields listens to the bubbling well the ewe calling from the hill,
the wind... and he is comforted.
I will be mother—and father too—
to those hotheaded sons.
(I feel them kicking, struggling in the womb.) They will be silent before Isaac.

IV.

Jacob and Esau grown...
Jacob is Isaac's son in tenderness;
for this I love him.
And Esau in lustiness is mine;
Isaac loves him for this.
Isaac, blind and patient is fulfilled in blessing.

I stole the blessing,
I sent Jacob to Haran,
I saved Esau from Cain's sin.

Though I yearn for Jacob and tremble for his return
I am still strong enough to draw this house together.
The tent cords must not slacken;
I will hold taut.

Dear Descartes: Creativity

Ada Aharoni

Genesis 25:22–26

Dear Descartes,
Not only "I think, therefore I am,"
but mostly:
I create, therefore I am.

I am me for having given birth to them, this, and you.

I gaze intently at my offspring,
my oeuvre,
launched for life, for death?
Vibrating sharp soft sparks of magnetic birth, marvelously quenching my desire and thirst—pure essence of fresh vitality.

Enwombed

Edna Aphek (transl. Yishai Tobin)

Genesis 25:22–23

Not to be enwombed,
Not to touch from within
To know That
We are embryos
In the uterus of death.

The children of Jacob and Esau
Keep killing the dead
From death to death.

Jacob and Esau

Edna Aphek (transl. Yishai Tobin)

Genesis 25:27–28

I hear the smell of your garments
Esau coming from the field
The yelling of your eyes
A kneeling
And Jacob keeps reading the book

from Comfort Me

Rahel (transl. Maurice Samuel)

Genesis 27:42–45

Comfort my tears with words, my only one;
My heart is dark with pain.
You know and I know that the wandering son
Will never see his mother's door again.

Rebecca

Shirley Kaufman

It's the duplicity that sticks—that I would trick my husband when he couldn't see. Rocking, he hugged his knees and heard the meat already ticking in its grease.

Oh
we were quick about it then,
though Jacob was slow to move.
He used to squat all day in the tent, feeding the fire with me. I watched the blood run when he stripped the goats, and helped him carry the skins behind the trees. I wound the pelts around his wrists, his smooth girl's neck, and dressed him in his brother's clothes, smelling of woods and wind, the wild grass after a rain.

I plotted merely for a gift. Like any clever woman at her stew. A pot of deer, salt and fresh herbs.
It wasn't easy pacing inside my flesh while Isaac ate, sucking my breath between the cracks of my small teeth, hotness climbing over my face, the way
I waited for him as a bride.
I listened still to water at the well,
an arm uplifted to the jug.

Clumsy at noontime in his night, he wiped his mouth and shook the light outside him, touching the wrong one.
His fingers, delicate as leaves, dropped in the false skin.

Let people serve and nations bow to thee.

and all the rest. It stays in my ear like cramps. Blessed, Blessed.

there is the river

Ona Siporin

Genesis 25:21–24

every day
i go to the river to gather the smooth stones

i run through the forest dropping them one by one down my breasts over my belly
i chant
these stones fall easily make the child fall like these stones

i stroke myself
my hand the stream
over my belly
let the child come like this i let small eels chips of wood berries fall over me

i know there are those who will help me

A Prayer for My Sons

Elaine Feinstein

Genesis 27:43–45

Forgive me bright sons if I have hobbled you, put my fear into you, I will suck it out with my lips

spit it out look I will stop hiding, see without dreaming, take the nag of that into my spirit, live without miracles, humbly.

I want you to puzzle this planet out, this brown planet, so you can move with your eyes open, without lying

Please be free of me you will lose nothing, the dark trees will be there at the garden's end for you still, and many songs.

וַיֵּצֵא ◆ Vayeitzei

GENESIS 28:10–32:3

The Journey Within

PARASHAT VAYEITZEI (“he went out”) is the Torah’s greatest love story. In it the lovers—Rachel and Jacob—figure as doubles. Their lives are in many ways parallel. Each of them works as a shepherd, flees from home, steals a father’s legacy, contends with sibling and God alike, tricks others and is in turn tricked, and bargains for the blessing of having children. The stories of Rachel and Jacob illustrate the distinct but intersecting male and female journey cycles that characterize Genesis 12–35. In the male journey cycle a hero departs from home, gains intimacy with God by wandering promised and unpromised lands, has visions while exposed in the outdoors, and struggles to fulfill God’s blessing by engendering children.

For their part, the matriarchal heroines also wander across external terrain. However, their journey toward intimacy with God takes place in the internal terrain of the body. Three of the four matriarchs experience a state of barrenness; two of them (Sarah and Rachel) reverse it by articulating their discontent or taking direct action in order to signal their intentions to create life. The often extreme measures they take in order to give birth alert God to their drive. This leads to a divine encounter that results in conception.

Genesis acknowledges that conception ensues from sexual relations. But the subtext of the female journey cycle indicates that its success requires intimacy not only between a man

She encodes the memory of her journey in the name she bestows on her child.

and a woman but also between a woman and God. Following the birth of a child, the mother encodes the memory of her specific path from barrenness to fertility in the name that she bestows as a legacy to her child. This paradigm is apparent as Rachel and her sister, Leah, compete for the love of both Jacob and God while simultaneously birthing the people of Israel. Their achievement is celebrated in the book of Ruth when the people praise “Rachel and Leah, both of whom built the house of Israel” (Ruth 4:11).

—Rachel Havrelock

Outline—

I. DEPARTURE OF THE HERO JACOB (28:10–22)

II. TEMPORARY HOME FOR JACOB, LEAH, AND RACHEL (29:1–30)

- A. Jacob at the well (vv. 1–8)
- B. Meeting Rachel (vv. 9–21)
- C. Jacob’s marriage to Leah and Rachel (vv. 22–30)

III. FROM BARRENNESS TO FERTILITY

Leah and Rachel Birth the People of Israel (29:31–30:24)

- A. Competition between sisters (29:31–30:13)
- B. Exchange between sisters (30:14–24)

IV. LEAVING LABAN

Jacob, Leah, and Rachel Journey Toward a Home in Canaan (30:25–31:42)

- A. Competition between men (30:25–31:3)
- B. Sisterly collaboration (31:4–16)
- C. Flight, theft, and pursuit (31:17–42)

V. RECONCILIATION AND SEPARATION OF JACOB AND LABAN (31:43–32:3)

28:10

And Jacob left Beersheba and set out for Haran. ¹¹Coming upon a [certain] place, he passed the night there, for the sun was setting; taking one of the stones of the place, he made it his head-rest as he lay down in that place. ¹²He dreamed, and lo—a ladder was set on the ground, with its top reaching to heaven, and lo—angels of God going up and coming down on it. ¹³And lo—יהוה stood

כח

חרנה: ¹¹ וַיֵּלֶךְ יַעֲקֹב מִבָּאָר שְׁבֻע וַיַּלֵּךְ
הַשְׁמֵשׁ וַיַּקְרֵב מִזְבֵּחַ מִזְבֵּחַ הַמִּקְדָּשׁ וַיִּשְׁמַע
מֶרְאֵשְׁתָיו וַיֵּשֶׁב בַּمִּקְדָּשׁ הַהוּא: ¹² וַיְחִלֵּם
וְהִנֵּה סַלֵּם מִצְבֵּחַ אֶרְצָה וְרָאשׁוֹ מְגִיעָה
הַשְׁמִימָה וְהַנֶּה מַלְאָכִי אֱלֹהִים עַלִּים
וַיַּרְדֵּם בָּו: ¹³ וְהִנֵּה יְהֹוָה נִצְבֵּעַ לְפָנָיו וַיֹּאמֶר

Departure of the Hero Jacob

(28:10–22)

Jacob's flight and return serve as the frame of this parashah, which recounts how the people of Israel were built up through the intersecting struggles and wills of Rachel, Leah, and Jacob. When Jacob departs from home with the intangible gifts of the blessing and the birthright, he exhibits his youthful adaptability by using a stone for a pillow and sleeping alone in the mountains blanketed in darkness. These mountains—which form the western boundary of the Jordan River Valley—serve as a threshold to the realm of the Divine that Jacob recognizes as he sleeps. As he awakes and speaks, the confidence and self-certainty of the young Jacob become apparent. This vision where Jacob sees the angels of God will be balanced and extended by his nocturnal wrestling with a divine being on the east side of the Jordan prior to his eventual return home (32:4–33). The transformation that he undergoes is evident in the change of tone in which he speaks to God on either side of the Jordan. The youthful Jacob stipulates a list of terms (28:20–21) while the older Jacob pleads to God to save his family despite his unworthiness (32:10–13). A parallel transformation is evident in Rachel and Leah, who initially employ language as the means of their competition, but ultimately speak with one voice when deciding to embark on a journey away from home.

10–11. The journey begins. Previously, Jacob's mother, Rebekah, had secured his father's blessing for him through a stratagem; then she had ensured her son's safe passage from home. In so doing, Rebekah had voiced two intentions for Jacob's departure: safety and a wife (27:4–28:4). Thus he now journeys with the dual intent of finding safety in his uncle Laban's house and finding a suitable wife. On his way from Beersheba to his uncle's in Haran, Jacob stops at an unidentified place.

12–15. Scholars have noted that the ladder in Jacob's dream is most likely a ziggurat, a tower known from the temples of Mesopotamia. This "ladder" serves as a bridge between heaven and earth upon which angels ascend and descend—thus

- The Deity sympathized with Leah.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 176

- Leah's prayer was powerful enough to alter her fate.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 176

- What are these t'rafim that Rachel risks so much to steal?

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 178

- ... I swim raging / against the stream.

VOICES ► 180

up above it, and said, “I, יהוה, am the God of your father Abraham and God of Isaac: the land on which you are lying I will give to you and to your descendants.¹⁴ And your descendants shall be like the dust of the earth, and you shall spread out to the west and the east and the north and the south. Through you and your descendants all the families of the earth shall find blessing.¹⁵ And here I am, with you: I will watch over you wherever you go, and I will bring you back to this soil. I will not let go of you as long as I have yet to do what I have promised you.”

¹⁶ Waking from his sleep, Jacob said, “Truly, יהוה is in this place, and I did not know it!”¹⁷ He was awestruck, and said, “How awe-inspiring is this place! This is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven!”

¹⁸ Rising early that morning, Jacob took the stone that he had put under his head and set it up as a monument. He then poured oil on its top.¹⁹ He named that place Beth El. (But originally the town’s name was Luz.)²⁰ Jacob then made this vow: “If God is with me and watches over me on this path that I am taking and gives me bread to eat and clothes to wear,²¹ and if I return safely to my

אָנָי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִי אֲבָרָהָם אֶבְיוֹק וְאֱלֹהִי יִצְחָק הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר אַתָּה שֵׁבֶב עַלְيָה לְהָאֲתַנְגָּה וְלִזְעָרֶךָ: ¹⁴ וְהִיא זְרֻעָר בְּעֵפֶר הָאָרֶץ וּפְרָצָת יִמְהָ וּקְדָמָה וּצְפָנָה וּנוּגָבָה: וְנוּבָרְכָו בְּקָר בְּלִמְשָׁפְחוֹת הָאָדָמָה וּבְזָעָרֶךָ: ¹⁵ וְהַגָּה אַנְכִי עַמְּךָ וּשְׁמַרְתִּיךָ בְּכָל אֲשֶׁר תַּלְךְ וְהַשְּׁבָתִיךָ אֶל-הָאָדָמָה הַזֹּאת בַּי לְאָזְעָבָךְ עַד אֲשֶׁר אִסְמָעֵשְׂתִּי אֶת אֲשֶׁר-הַבְּרָתִי לְךָ:

¹⁶ וַיַּקְרַב יַעֲקֹב מִשְׁנְתוֹ וַיֹּאמֶר אַכְן יְשִׁיָּהוּ וְאַנְכִי לֹא יִדְעָתִי: ¹⁷ וַיִּרְאֶל וַיֹּאמֶר מִה-נִוְרָא הַמָּקוֹם הַזֶּה אֵין זֶה כִּי אִסְמֵבֵית אֱלֹהִים וְזֶה שַׁעַר הַשָּׁמְוּם:

¹⁸ וַיִּשְׁבַּט יַעֲקֹב בְּבָקָר וַיִּקְחֶת אֶת-הַאֲבָנָן אֲשֶׁר-שָׁם מִרְאָשָׁתוֹ וַיִּשְׁמַע אֶת-הַמִּצְבָּה וַיַּצְאֶק שְׁמַן עַל-רָאשָׁה: ¹⁹ וַיִּקְרַא אֶת-שְׁמֵה-הַמָּקוֹם הַהּוּא בֵּית-אֵל וְאַוְלָם לְזֹה שְׁמֵם-הַعִיר לִרְאשָׁנָה: ²⁰ וַיִּקְרַב יַעֲקֹב נִנְרָא לְאָמֹר אִסְמִיחָה אֱלֹהִים עַמְּךָ וּשְׁמָרָנִי בְּדָרָה הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר אַנְכִי הוֹלֵךְ וּנְתַנְּצָלֵי לְחַם לְאָכֵל וּבָגֵד לְלִבָּשָׁה: ²¹ וַיַּשְׁבַּתִּי בְּשָׁלוֹם indicating the dialogic nature of communication between the two realms. Thus Jacob has begun a double journey: a dream journey toward increasing proximity to God parallels his physical wanderings across the horizontal plane of space. Jacob encounters his angels while traveling. The stations between home and exile have a corollary in the rungs between heaven and earth.

16–22. Jacob’s deal with God follows his dream.

19. He named that place Beth El. The vision results in a new perception of his environment as “the house of God” and “the gate of heaven.” Accordingly, Jacob names it Beth El (House of God). Beth El—as it is known in English—later became the national sanctuary of the Northern Kingdom of Israel, although one that some prophets maligned (Amos 3:14; 4:4; 5:5–6; Hosea 10:15). In ancient Israel the account of Jacob’s vision likely justified and sanctified the Beth El temple.

20–21. Jacob drives a hard bargain with God. Jacob wants real-life indicators that God will watch over him wherever he goes, and will return him to his native soil. He pledges that if he meets with success on his journey, then the God of his father’s household will be his God, his pillow will become the cornerstone of a temple, and he will sacrifice a tenth of his bounty.

father's house, then will יהוה be my God;²²and this stone that I have set up as a monument shall be a house of God. And [of] all that You give me, I will dedicate a tenth to You."

29 Jacob then moved on and headed for the land of the people of Kedem.²He looked and lo—a well in the field, with three flocks of sheep lying at rest by it, because this was the well from which they watered the flocks; a good-sized rock lay on the mouth of the well.³When all the flocks were gathered there, they [the shepherds] would roll the stone off the well's mouth and water the flocks. Then they would put the stone back in place over the well's mouth.

⁴Jacob said to them, "My friends, where are you from?" "We are from Haran," they said.⁵He said to them, "Do you know Laban son of Nahor?" And they said, "We do know [him]."⁶"Is he well?" said he to them. "He is well," said they, "and there is his daughter Rachel, coming with the flock."⁷He said, "Since the day is still young, [and] not yet the time for rounding up the livestock, why don't you water the flock and then take them out to pasture?"⁸But they said, "We can't do that until all the flocks are rounded up and they [the shepherds] roll the stone off the well's mouth; then we water the sheep."

אֶל-בַּיִת אֲבִי וְהִיא יְהוָה לֵי לְאֱלֹהִים:
 22 וְהַאֲבָן הַזֹּאת אֲשֶׁר-שְׁמַתִּי מִצְבָּה יְהוָה
 בֵּית אֱלֹהִים וּכֹל אֲשֶׁר תַּתְנַלְּי עִשָּׂר
 אַעֲשֶׂרְנוּ לָךְ:

כט וַיֵּשֶׁא יַעֲקֹב רְגָלָיו וַיָּלֶךְ אֶרְצָה בְּנֵיר
 קָדָם: ² וַיַּרְא וְהִנֵּה בָּאָר בְּשָׂדָה וְהַגָּה-שָׁם
 שֶׁלְשָׁה עֲדָרִי-צָאן רְבָצִים עַלְיָה כִּי מִן-
 הַבָּאָר הַהְוָא יַשְׁקוּ הַעֲדָרִים וְהַאֲבָן גָּדְלָה
 עַל-פִּי הַבָּאָר: ³ וְנַאֲסִפּוּ שָׁמָה כָּל-הַעֲדָרִים
 וְגַלְלוּ אֶת-הָאָבָן מֵעֶל פִּי הַבָּאָר וְהַשְׁקוּ
 אֶת-הַצָּאן וְהַשִּׁיבוּ אֶת-הָאָבָן עַל-פִּי
 הַבָּאָר לְמִקְמָה:

⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר לְהָם יַעֲקֹב אֲחֵי מַאיִן אַתֶּם
 וַיֹּאמְרוּ מַחְנָן אַנְחָנוּ: ⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר לְהָם
 הַיּוּצָם אֶת-לְבָנֵן בָּנֵנְחוֹר וַיֹּאמְרוּ יִקְעָנוּ:
⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר לְהָם הַשְׁלָום לוֹ וַיֹּאמְרוּ שְׁלָום
 וְהִנֵּה רְחֵל בְּתוֹךְ אֶת-הַצָּאן: ⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר
 הַנּוּ עֹזֶל הַיּוֹם גָּדוֹל לְאַעֲתָה הַאֲסָף הַמְּקַנֵּה
 הַשְׁקוּ הַצָּאן וְלִכְבוּ רָעוֹ: ⁸ וַיֹּאמְרוּ לֹא נַכְלָל
 עַד אֲשֶׁר יִאֱסֹפוּ כָּל-הַעֲדָרִים וְגַלְלוּ אֶת-הָאָבָן מֵעֶל פִּי הַבָּאָר וְהַשְׁקִינוּ הַצָּאן:

Temporary Home for Jacob, Leah, and Rachel (29:1–30)

Tis one of the Torah's great paradoxes that the divine imperative to engender descendants and produce a great nation reaches fruition first in the land of Aram (Syria) and later in Egypt. In this episode, Jacob finds refuge in his uncle's home and meets his counterpart, Rachel, thereby satisfying the wishes of his mother. In a foreign land he also engenders a family and becomes wealthy, thereby bringing God's promises into being.

JACOB AT THE WELL (29:1–8)

The well is the Torah's famed meeting place, a romantic topos. Here Abraham's servant finds Isaac's bride, Rachel and Jacob meet, and Moses first encounters his future wife, Zipporah. (On wells as symbols of fertility, see at 16:7 and 24:11.) It is also the place where Jacob goes to seek information about his relatives.

6. In the midst of Jacob's inquiry, Rachel appears guiding the flock.

⁹While he was still talking with them, Rachel arrived with her father's sheep—she was a shepherd. ¹⁰When Jacob saw Rachel daughter of Laban, his mother's brother, with his uncle Laban's flock, Jacob went over, rolled the stone off the well's mouth, and watered his uncle Laban's flock. ¹¹Now Jacob kissed Rachel, and began to cry in a loud voice. ¹²Jacob then told Rachel that he was her father's kinsman, that he was Rebekah's son, and she ran and told her father.

¹³Upon hearing the news of his sister's son Jacob, Laban ran to greet him; hugging and kissing him, he brought him into his house. Then [Jacob] told Laban everything that had happened, ¹⁴and Laban said to him, “Truly, you are my bone and my flesh!” So he stayed with him a whole month.

¹⁵Laban then said to Jacob, “Just because you are my kin, should you serve me for nothing? Tell me what you want to be paid.” ¹⁶Now Laban had two daughters; the elder was named Leah, and the

⁹עָזְרָנוּ מִדְבָּר עַמּוּ וַחֲלֵל | בָּאָה עַמְּ-הַצָּאן
אֲשֶׁר לְאָבִיהָ כִּי רֹעָה הֵוא: ¹⁰וַיְהִי בְּאַשְׁר
רָאָה יַעֲקֹב אֶת-רְחֵל בְּת-לְבָן אֲחֵי אַמְּמוֹ
וְאַתְּ-צָאן לְבָנָן אֲחֵי אַמְּמוֹ וַיַּגֵּשׁ וַיַּקְבֵּב וַיָּגַל
אֶת-דָּאָבָן מַעַל פִּי הַבָּאָר וַיַּשְׁקֵךְ אֶת-צָאן
לְבָנָן אֲחֵי אַמְּמוֹ: ¹¹וַיַּשְׁקֵךְ יַעֲקֹב לְרְחֵל וַיַּשְׁאַל
אֶת-קָלָוּ וַיָּבֹךְ: ¹²וַיָּגַד יַעֲקֹב לְרְחֵל כִּי אֲחֵי
אָבִיהָ הֵוא וְכִי בְּנֵרְבָּקָה הֵוא וַתְּרַץ וַתַּגְּדַל
לְאָבִיהָ:

¹³וַיְהִי בָּשְׁמָעַ לְבָנָן אֶת-שְׁמָעַ | יַעֲקֹב בֶּן
אָחָתוֹ וַיַּרְא לְקָרְאָתוֹ וַיַּחֲקִיק-לוֹ וַיַּנְשַׁק-לְיוֹ
וַיַּבְיאָהוּ אֶל-בֵּיתוֹ וַיִּסְפֶּר לְלְבָנָן אֶת כָּל-הַדְּבָרִים הָאַלְּהָ: ¹⁴וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ לְבָנָן אָרָ
עַצְמֵי וּבְשֻׁרְיוֹ אַתָּה וַיִּשְׁבַּע עָמָנוּ חֲדָשׁ יָמִים:
¹⁵וַיֹּאמֶר לְבָנָן לְיַעֲקֹב הַכִּיר-אֲחֵי אַתָּה
וְעַבְדָּתִנִּי חַנֵּם הַגִּידָה לִי מִה-מִשְׁבְּרָתָךְ:
¹⁶וְלֹא-בָן שְׂתִּי בְּנוֹת שֵׁם הַגְּדוֹלָה לְאָהָ

MEETING RACHEL (29:9–21)

9. she was a shepherd. The first description of Rachel does not emphasize her beauty—as is sometimes the case when a female character is introduced (Rebekah, Genesis 24:16; Abigail, I Samuel 25:3; Bathsheba, II Samuel 11:2). Rather, it declares her occupation. Rachel's very name means “ewe.”

10. rolled the stone off the well's mouth. In this occasion of biblical humor, Jacob is so overwhelmed when Rachel appears that—in superhero fashion—he single-handedly rolls the stone cover off the mouth of the well. The reader is particularly impressed with this, having just been informed that the act required the efforts of all Haran's shepherds.

11. One cannot help but wonder about Rachel's response to the stranger who kisses her, weeps, and then declares that he is her cousin.

12. he was Rebekah's son. Jacob identifies himself only as Rebekah's son, not Isaac's. (On the place of women in the kinship ties of Israelite social structure, see at 10:1.)

she ran. The text, tending toward silence about emotions, speaks only of her acts of running and announcing the arrival, as did Rebekah when Abraham's servant revealed his identity at the same well (24:28). Rebekah, however, ran to her mother's house.

14. “Truly, you are my bone and my flesh!” Laban's effusive statement of recognition and solidarity will soon become ironic as uncle and nephew prove equal in chicanery.

16. Now Laban had two daughters. In the pasture Rachel had been identified as a shepherd, but at home she is marked as the younger of two sisters. When Leah is introduced, Rachel's beauty becomes a cause for further distinction in the face of Leah's “weak eyes” (v. 17). Jacob has fallen in love with Rachel and soon attests to his willingness to sustain the love for seven years (v. 18). In the younger was named Rachel.¹⁷ Leah's eyes were weak, but Rachel was beautiful of form and of face.¹⁸ Jacob was in love with Rachel, so he said, "I will work for you seven years for your younger daughter Rachel."

¹⁹ Laban answered, "I would rather give her to you than to any other man; stay [here] with me."²⁰ So Jacob labored seven years for Rachel; yet in his love for her they seemed to him but a few days.²¹ Jacob then said to Laban, "Let me have my wife; I have filled my term; now I want to make love to her."

²² So Laban invited all the people of the place and made a feast.²³ In the evening, he took his daughter Leah and brought her to [Jacob], who made love to her.²⁴ (And Laban gave his maid Zilpah to his daughter Leah to be her maid.)²⁵ In the morning, look—it was Leah! and [Jacob] said

וַיִּשְׁם הַקְטָנָה רָחֵל: ¹⁷ וַיַּעֲנֵי לֵאֶה רְכֹות
וּרְחֵל הִיְתָה יִפְתַּחְתָּאָר וַיִּפְתַּח מִרְאָה:
¹⁸ וַיַּאֱהַב יַעֲקֹב אֶת־רָחֵל וַיֹּאמֶר אָעַבְדָּךְ
שְׁבֻעָה שְׁנָים בְּרָחֵל בְּתַךְ הַקְטָנָה:

¹⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר לְבָנָן טֹוב תַּתִּין אֶתְתָּה לְךָ מִתְתַּנֵּי
אֶתְתָּה לְאִישׁ אַחֲרֶשׁ שְׁבָה עַמְּדִי: ²⁰ וַיַּעֲבֹד
יַעֲקֹב בְּרָחֵל שְׁבֻעָה שְׁנָים וַיַּהַי בְּעִינָיו
בְּיָמִים אֲחָדִים בְּאֶהָרְנוֹ אֶתְתָּה: ²¹ וַיֹּאמֶר
יַעֲקֹב אֶל־לְבָנָן הַבָּה אַתִּאֲשָׁתִי בַּיּוֹם
יְמִי וְאַבּוֹתָה אֲלֵיכָה:

²² וַיִּאָסֶף לְבָנָן אֶת־כָּל־אֲנָשֵׁי הַמִּקְוָם וַיַּעֲשֶׂה
מִשְׁתָּחָה: ²³ וַיְהִי בְּעֶרֶב וַיָּקֹח אֶת־לְאָה בָּתוֹ
וַיִּבְאֶא אֶתְתָּה אֶלְיוֹ וַיִּבְאֶא אֲלֵיכָה: ²⁴ וַיִּתְּנַן לְבָנָן
לָה אֶת־זִלְפָה שִׁפְחָתוֹ לִילָּאָה בָּתוֹ שִׁפְחָה:
²⁵ וַיְהִי בְּבֹקֶר וְהַנְּהָדוֹא לְאָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־ ensuing scenes, the focus falls on Rachel and Leah; Laban's sons are not mentioned until they voice their resentment at Jacob's success (31:1).

17. Leah and Rachel are described as different in appearance. Earlier, the text had contrasted Jacob and Esau also on the basis of their respective occupations (25:27, where yoshev ohelim seems to mean "raising livestock"; compare 4:20).

18. "seven years for your younger daughter." In the social world of the Bible, a bridegroom or his family needed to compensate his bride's household. Apparently, part of this payment would normally accrue to the bride herself. (See Chayei Sarah, Another View, p. 127, and at 31:15.)

Two biblical motifs are evident here: of love directed to a younger child (Rachel), and of seven (years) as a number of wholeness.

19. Laban speaks of Rachel as a gift that he will bestow on his nephew and says nothing about the work extracted from Jacob. Laban's manipulation of Jacob begins with his appeal to familial bonds, asserting that it is within his power to "give" Rachel to whomever he desires.

20. a few days. Heb. ke-yamim achadim. Jacob's perception of his seven years of labor as "a few days" recalls the yamim achadim ("a while," literally "a few days") that his mother, Rebekah, had recommended that he spend with Laban (27:44).

JACOB'S MARRIAGE TO LEAH AND RACHEL (29:22–30)

In Jacob's mind the marital relationship with Rachel will be enacted by his initiation of the sexual act. Where Jacob imagines an act of intimacy, Laban plans a public feast.

Laban substitutes his older daughter for the younger. The provocative question that arises from this bed-trick is the same as that raised by Rebekah and Jacob's earlier deception of Isaac: does human subterfuge disrupt the divine plan—or advance it? In this case Laban's trick enables the building of the house of Israel through the combined efforts of the two sisters and their two maids. It is precisely the interfamilial competition that renders the household productive.

to Laban, “What have you done to me? Wasn’t it for Rachel that I [agreed to] serve you? Why did you deceive me?”

²⁶And Laban replied, “This is not done in our region, to give the younger before the first-born.

²⁷Fulfill this [additional] seven-year term, and that one, too, will be given you in exchange for the additional seven years of work that you will do for me.” ²⁸Jacob did so; he fulfilled this [additional] term of seven years; whereupon [Laban] gave him his daughter Rachel as a wife.

²⁹Laban then gave his maid Bilhah to his daughter Rachel to be her maid. ³⁰[Jacob] made love with Rachel, too; he loved Rachel—for whom he had served [Laban] yet another seven years—so much more than Leah.

26–29. The unfolding scenario—in which Jacob weds two sisters—is an instance where a biblical law (the prohibition against marrying a woman’s sister during her lifetime, Leviticus 18:18) is contradicted by an episode in biblical narrative.

30. [Jacob] made love with Rachel, too. Literally, “he also came into Rachel,” which is a biblical way of indicating a sexual intercourse. At long last Jacob is united with his beloved Rachel.

he loved Rachel . . . so much more than Leah. The preference of one wife over the other reintroduces the theme of favoritism that begins with Cain and Abel (Genesis 4) and continues as sibling rivalry throughout Genesis. Such preference, while promoting strife within the family, leads in the sisters’ case to productivity and the realization of the divine blessing in the human realm.

From Barrenness to Fertility

LEAH AND RACHEL BIRTH THE PEOPLE OF ISRAEL (29:31–30:24)

The narrative focuses on how each matriarch negotiates the terrain between barrenness and fertility, which offers cherished insight into the individual characters of these biblical women. Where the male heroes seek to conquer, claim, and sanctify land, the female heroes strive to inscribe their memory on the bodies of their heirs; the acts of birthing and naming function as the counterpart to those of inaugurating and settling territory. The matriarchs go to extreme lengths in order to initiate and improvise their own Covenant. The female journey spans the poles from barrenness to fertility and affords the matriarch the opportunity to wrestle with other persons, God, and social position. The steps of this journey are: barrenness, statement of protest, direct action, encounter with God, conception, birth, and naming.

COMPETITION BETWEEN SISTERS (29:31–30:13)

Whereas Jacob has split from his brother, Rachel must live alongside her sister as co-wife. Previously, the narrator has emphasized that Jacob “loves” Rachel by mentioning it three times (29:18, 20, 30). In this section, according to the narrator, God infers that Leah is in contrast “disfavored” (in Hebrew, literally “hated”; v. 31) and intervenes by making Leah fertile.

³¹Now, seeing that Leah was disfavored, יְהוָה opened her womb, while Rachel was childless.

³²Leah thus became pregnant and bore a son and named him Reuben, for she said, “יְהוָה saw my plight; yes, now my husband will love me.” ³³Again she became pregnant and bore a son and said, “יְהוָה heard that I am despised and has given me this one too”; so she named him Simeon. ³⁴Again she became pregnant and bore a son and said, “Now, this time, my husband will be attached to me, for I have borne to him three sons.” She therefore named him Levi. ³⁵Again she became pregnant and bore a son and said, “This time I give thanks to יְהוָה.” She therefore named him Judah. Then she stopped bearing.

30 When Rachel saw that she was not bearing [children] to Jacob, Rachel came to envy her sister. She said to Jacob, “Let me have children; otherwise I am a dead woman!” ²Jacob grew angry with Rachel and said, “Am I in place of God who 32. bore. As the translation reflects, the directness of the Hebrew root y-l-d points to the action of birthing. It thus emphasizes the agency and volition of the matriarchs. In contrast, the usual English idiom “to give birth” focuses more on the outcome of birthing, namely, the child.

32–35. Rachel’s infertility becomes doubly bitter in the shadow of Leah’s celebrations of the births of her first four sons. Through the names, Leah exults that “יְהוָה saw my plight” (Reuben, a pun on “See, a son!”) and “יְהוָה heard that I am despised and has given me this one too” (Simeon, a pun on “hearing”); she speculates that “this time my husband will be attached to me” (Levi, a pun on “Accompany”), and resolves that “this time I give thanks to יְהוָה” (Judah, a pun on “thanks”). While marking her triumphs and articulating her desire for marital love in the names of her sons, Leah bequeaths them sibling rivalry, an inheritance that drives the story of Joseph and his brothers.

30:1. “me . . . I.” Heb. li . . . anochi. Rachel

³¹ וַיֹּרֶא יְהוָה פִּירְשָׁנוֹאָה לֵאָה וַיִּפְתַּח אֶת־
רְחִמָּה וּרְחִלָּעֲקָרָה: ³² וַתַּהַרְךְּ לֵאָה וַתַּלְדֵּ
בֵּן וַתִּקְרַא שְׁמוֹ רְאוּבֵן כִּי אִמְרָה כִּירָא
יְהוָה בָּעֵנִי כִּי עֲתָה יִאָהָבַנִּי אִישִׁי:
³³ וַתַּהַרְךְּ עוֹד וַתַּלְדֵּ בֶּן וַתֹּאמֶר כִּי־שָׁמַע
יְהוָה פִּירְשָׁנוֹאָה אַنְכִי וַיִּתְּנַלְּקֵל גַּם־אַתִּזָּה
וַתִּקְרַא שְׁמוֹ שְׁמֻעוֹן: ³⁴ וַתַּהַרְךְּ עוֹד וַתַּלְדֵּ
בֶּן וַתֹּאמֶר עֲתָה הַפְּעָם יְלֹוּה אִישֵׁל אַלְיָ
כִּי־יַלְדָתִי לוֹ שֶׁלְשָׁה בָּנִים עַל־פָּנֵן קָרָא־
שְׁמוֹ לִקְיָה: ³⁵ וַתַּהַרְךְּ עוֹד וַתַּלְדֵּ בֶּן וַתֹּאמֶר
הַפְּעָם אָזָה אֲתִי־יְהוָה עַל־פָּנֵן קָרָא שְׁמוֹ
יְהוָה וַתַּעֲמֹד מַלְדָת:

ל וַתִּרְאֵ רְחִלָּל כִּי לֹא יָלֹדֶה לְיעָקֹב וַתִּקְנַא
רְחִלָּל בְּאַחֲתָה וַתֹּאמֶר אֶל־יְעָקֹב הַבָּהָלִי
בָּנִים וְאַמְּצִין מִתְּהָ אַנְכִי: ² וַיִּחַרְאֵף
יְעָקֹב בְּרָחָל וַיֹּאמֶר הַתְּחַת אֶלְהִים אַנְכִי emphasizes her personal need for children through first person pronouns (see also at v. 3); she is concerned with her vitality and her own lineage. Let Jacob have his sons with Leah, but he must—at the same time—preserve Rachel’s individual legacy.

“otherwise I am a dead woman!” Rachel equates her inability to give birth with death, implying that her story will never be told if not condensed in the name of a child; ironically, she will eventually die giving birth to her second child (35:18). In effect she protests not only the state of barrenness, but also the limits that her society sets on female autonomy. In this case, Rachel speaks to the threat of her negation should she not reproduce. Perceiving the limits of her own authority, she turns to a person with immediate authority over her—her husband, Jacob.

2. Jacob deflects responsibility and in fury directs Rachel’s protest toward God. However, had Rachel not spoken out, her journey would have had no beginning and no fulfillment.

has withheld from you the fruit of the womb?”³ But she said, “Here is my maid Bilhah; couple with her and let her give birth on my knees, so that I too may have a son, through her.”⁴ So she gave him her maid Bilhah as a wife, and Jacob coupled with her.⁵ Bilhah became pregnant and bore a son to Jacob.⁶ Rachel said, “God has judged me and has also listened to my plea and given me a son.” She therefore named him Dan.⁷ Again Rachel’s maid Bilhah became pregnant; she bore a second son to Jacob.⁸ Rachel then said, “A mighty rivalry have I waged with my sister; moreover, I have prevailed.” She therefore named him Naphtali.

אֲשֶׁר־מִנְעָמָךְ פְּרִיבְטָן: ³ וַתֹּאמֶר הַנָּה
אָמַתִּי בְּלֹהָה בָּא אֶלְيָהָה וַתֵּלֶד עַל־בְּרַכְיָה
וְאָבָנָה גַּמְ-אָנוֹכִי מִפְנָה: ⁴ וַתִּתְמַנְּלֶוּ אֶת־
בְּלֹהָה שְׁפָחָתָה לְאָשָׁה וַיָּבֹא אֶלְיָהָה יַעֲקֹב:
⁵ וַתִּתְהַרְבֵּר בְּלֹהָה וַתֵּלֶד לְיַעֲקֹב בֶּן: ⁶ וַתֹּאמֶר
רְחִילָה דְּנַנִּי אֱלֹהִים וְגַם שָׁמָעַ בְּקָלִי וַיִּתְהַנֵּן
לִי בֶן עַל־פָּנָיו קָרְאָה שָׁמוֹ דָן: ⁷ וַתִּתְהַרְבֵּר
עוֹד וַתֵּלֶד בְּלֹהָה שְׁפָחָתָה רְחִילָה בֶן שְׁנִי
לְיַעֲקֹב: ⁸ וַתֹּאמֶר רְחִילָה נִפְתּוֹלֵי אֱלֹהִים
נִפְתּוֹלֵתי עִם־אֶחָתִי גַּמְ-יִכְלֵלִי וַתִּקְרַא שָׁמוֹ
נִפְתּוֹלֵל:

3. But she said, “Here is my maid Bilhah.” That is, her slave; see at 16:1. The space between barrenness and fertility is a gap in the relationship between Rachel and God that she must bridge through symbolic acts. By employing her slave, Bilhah, as a surrogate, Rachel performs a kind of imitative magic in which she plays the Deity—causing a woman to conceive in the hopes that the Creator will likewise fertilize her. Like Sarah (16:1–3) and Leah (below, v. 9), Rachel relies on surrogacy also to bypass the obstacles to conception more directly. She achieves her goal by claiming the body of another woman as an extension of her own. In biblical narrative, birth is a moment of female collaboration when the boundaries between distinct bodies collapse, an occasion in which multiple female bodies operate in tandem. All females on the narrative stage at the moment of birth function as a collective body absorbed in the process and implication of birthing. This is evident in the surrogacy scenes, as well as in the birth scenes of Rachel and of Tamar—in which midwives take part in the naming of the child (35:17–18; 38:29; see also I Samuel 4:19–22). It is also clear when the midwives defy Pharaoh in order to save the lives of Hebrew babies (Exodus 1). Birth as a collective female action even transcends ethnic difference, as in the book of Ruth. There, Ruth the Moabite pledges to bind her body and her fate to her Israelite mother-in-law, Naomi—who has declared herself “too old to be married” (Ruth 1:12). Following the birth of Ruth’s son, a chorus of women blesses Naomi with the pronouncement that “a son is born to Naomi” (4:17). (On surrogacy see also at Genesis 16:2.) | Viewed from a more individualistic perspective, it is deeply problematic that the matriarchs potentially force their servants into undesired sexual relations.

“my... I too.” Heb. gam anochi. Rachel emphasizes her personal volition when spelling out the surrogacy procedure to Jacob, adding an extra first-person singular pronoun.

“I... may have a son.” Heb. ibaneh, the same term that Sarah had used (16:2); on its meaning, see there.

6–8. As Bilhah twice gives birth, Rachel has the opportunity to thrust her own jabs at her sister through the names of sons: Dan (a pun on “judge”) because “God has judged me and has also listened to my plea”; and Naphtali (a pun on “struggle”) because “a mighty rivalry have I waged with my sister.”

8. “I have prevailed.” Heb. yacholti. As she engages in sibling rivalry, Rachel also struggles with God in order to win the ability to give birth. Her naming of Naphtali is verbally linked with God’s later renaming of Jacob as Israel: “for you have ⁹When Leah saw that she was no longer bearing children, she took her maid Zilpah and gave her to Jacob as a wife.¹⁰And Zilpah, Leah's maid, bore a son to Jacob.¹¹Leah said, "Fortune has come!" She therefore named him Gad.¹²And Zilpah, Leah's maid, bore a second son to Jacob.¹³Leah then said, "How happy I am—yes, women will call me happy!" She therefore named him Asher.

¹⁴In the time of the wheat harvest, Reuben went out and found mandrakes in the field. When he brought them to his mother Leah, Rachel said to Leah, "Pray give me some of your son's mandrakes."¹⁵She replied, "Isn't it enough that you took my husband, and now you want to take my son's mandrakes?" And Rachel said, "Very well, let him sleep with you tonight in exchange for your son's mandrakes."¹⁶When Jacob came in from the field [that] evening, Leah went out to meet him and said, "I am the one you will bed [tonight], for I have bought you with my son's mandrakes." That night he slept with her,¹⁷and God now listened to Leah; she became pregnant and bore a fifth son to Jacob.¹⁸Leah said, "God has given me my reward for struggled with God and with human beings, and you have prevailed (vatuchal)"¹⁹ (32:29). Both Rachel and Jacob prevail in contests doubly waged with people and with God.

9. Leah saw that she was no longer bearing children. Leah is never called barren, but she does experience a period of infertility.

10–13. Leah stresses her good fortune as she names the sons of Zilpah. Gad means literally "good fortune" and Asher is a name based on a verb form ("Fortunate is...") that anticipates that other women will declare Leah fortunate.

EXCHANGE BETWEEN SISTERS (30:14–24)

The turning point in the sisters' relationship comes with their readiness to enter into an exchange—to give each what the other lacks. Symbolically, Leah is willing to give fertility (via man-

9 וַתָּתֵר אֶלְאָה כִּי עַמְדָה מְלֻכָּה וַתַּקְחַת אֶת־זִלְפָה שִׁפְחָתָה וַתִּתְגַּנֵּן אֶתְהָ לְיעַקֹּב לְאָשָׂה: ¹⁰ וַתַּלְדֵּד זִלְפָה שִׁפְחָת לְאָה לְיעַקֹּב בֶּן: ¹¹ וַתֹּאמֶר לְאָה בַּגְד בָּא גָד וַתַּקְרַא אֶת־שְׁמוֹ גָד: ¹² וַתַּלְדֵּד זִלְפָה שִׁפְחָת לְאָה בֶּן שְׁנִי לְיעַקֹּב: ¹³ וַתֹּאמֶר לְאָה בָּא־שְׁרֵרִי כִּי אֲשֶׁר־וָנוּ בְּנֹות וַתַּקְרַא אֶת־שְׁמוֹ אֲשֶׁר:

¹⁴ וַיָּלַךְ רָאוּבֵן בַּיּוֹם קָצִיר־חַטִּים וַיִּמְצָא דְּזֹדְאִים בְּשָׂדָה וַיָּבֹא אֹתָם אֶל־לְאָה אֱמוֹן וַתֹּאמֶר רְחֵל אֶל־לְאָה תְּנִינֵּן לִי מִדּוֹדָאִי בְּנֶה: ¹⁵ וַתֹּאמֶר לְהָה הַמְעַט קָחַתְּךָ אַתְּ אִישִׁי וְלַקְחַת גַּם אֶת־דְּדוֹדָאִי בְּנֵי וַתֹּאמֶר רְחֵל לְבֶן יִשְׂכַּב עַמְּלֵל הַלִּילָה תְּחַת דְּדוֹדָאִי בְּנֶה: ¹⁶ וַיָּבֹא יְעַקֹּב מִן־הַשָּׂדָה בַּעֲרָב וַתֵּצֶא לְאָה לְקָרְאָתוֹ וַתֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹתְּבָא בַּיּוֹם שְׁכָר שְׁכָרְתִּיךְ בְּדְדוֹדָאִי בְּנֵי וַיִּשְׂכַּב עַמְּלֵל בְּלִילָה הוּא: ¹⁷ וַיִּשְׁמַע אֶלְהִים אֶל־לְאָה וַתֵּהֶר וַתַּלְדֵּד לְיעַקֹּב בֶּן חִמְישֵׁי: ¹⁸ וַתֹּאמֶר לְאָה

drakes) to her barren sister and, in turn, Rachel gives Jacob to Leah, who longs for his love. | Whereas Jacob will first draw a truce with God (32:25–31) and then negotiate an icy peace with his brother (33:1–17), Rachel first strikes a deal with her sister and then wins the ability to create from God.

14. mandrakes. Or "love fruits," known as an aphrodisiac as well as an aid to conception.

15. Leah's acerbic response exposes her pain. Rachel turns her sister's complaint into terms of negotiation by giving Leah "back" her husband for one night in exchange for the mandrakes. In the meantime, she increases her request for a portion of the mandrakes to a demand for all of them.

18. As she names her fifth biological son, Leah attests that she is rewarded by God: Issachar (a pun on "reward" or "hire"), saying, "God has given me my reward because I gave my maidservant to my husband" (30:18). The name also puns on Leah's giving my maid to my husband.” She therefore named him Issachar.¹⁹ Again Leah became pregnant; she bore a sixth son to Jacob.²⁰ Leah then said, “God has given me a fine gift. Now my husband will [finally] give me the [wedding] gift due me, for I have borne him six sons.” She therefore named him Zebulun.²¹ Afterward she bore a daughter and named her Dinah.

²²God now remembered Rachel; God listened to her and opened her womb,²³ so she became pregnant and bore a son. She said, “God has removed my disgrace.”²⁴ She therefore named him Joseph, saying, “May יהוה add on another son for me.”

²⁵Now, after Rachel bore Joseph, Jacob said to Laban, “Release me; let me go to my [own] place, my [own] land.²⁶ Let me have my wives and children for whom I toiled under you, and let me go, for you know the service I have rendered you.”

pre-coital statement to Jacob, “I have bought (or: hired) you with my son’s mandrakes” (30:16).

20. In this naming ceremony, Leah utters a pious word of thanks, which hints at the name Zebed. But then she expresses her true wish. The name Zebulun reflects her focus on improving her marriage.

21. The exchange (v. 15) results not only in the birth of Leah’s fifth and sixth sons but also in her first daughter, Dinah. The phrase “she conceived and she bore” associated with the birth of each son is absent here. Also absent is a naming declaration for Dinah, although her name means “judgment that leads to justice.”

22. The mandrakes (vv. 14–15) do not cure Rachel’s barrenness, but they do alert God to her desperation—and the lengths to which she will go in order to conceive. In other words, the actions that Rachel takes to reverse her situation function as self-initiation into a relationship with God. They also prove her to be an ambitious mother worthy of a heroic son. Rachel has followed a three-part course in protesting her infertility: articulation of discontent, surrogacy, and medicinal aid. God like-

נתן אֱלֹהִים שָׁבֵר אֲשֶׁר-נְתַתִּי שְׁפַחַתִּי
לְאִישִׁי וְתִקְרָא שְׁמוֹ יְשָׁכֵר יְשָׁכֵר:¹⁹ וְתַהְרָא
עוֹד לְאָהָה וְתַלְדֵ בָּנִ-שָׁשִׁי לְיעַקְבָּ: ²⁰ וְתָאָמַר
לְאָהָה זָבְדִי אֱלֹהִים אָתְזִי זָבְדֵ טוֹב הַפְּעַם
זָבְלָנִי אִישִׁי קִיְלְדָתִי לוֹ שְׁשָׁה בָּנִים
וְתִקְרָא אֶת-שְׁמָנוֹ זָבְלוֹן:²¹ וְאֶתְרָא יְלָדָה בָּת
וְתִקְרָא אֶת-שְׁמָה דִינָה:

22. וַיַּזְכֵר אֱלֹהִים אֶת-רְחָל וַיָּשָׁמַע אֱלֹהִים
אֱלֹהִים וַיַּפְתַח אֶת-רְחָמָה:²³ וְתַהְרָא וְתַלְדֵ
בָּן וְתָאָמַר אַסְף אֱלֹהִים אֶת-חַרְפָתִי:

24. וְתִקְרָא אֶת-שְׁמָנוֹ יוֹסֵף לְאמֹר יְסֻף יְהֹוָה
לִי גַּן אֶחָר:

25. וַיְהִי כַּאֲשֶׁר יְלָדָה רְחָל אֶת-יוֹסֵף וַיֹּאמֶר
יְעַקְבָּ אֶל-לִבְנֵךְ שְׁלַחְנִי וְאַל-מִקְומִי
וְלֹא-צִעֵּד:²⁶ תִּנְהַא אֶת-יְשִׁיעִי וְאֶת-יְלָדִי אֲשֶׁר
עָבְרָתִי אֶתְךָ בְּהַן וְאַל-כָּה בַּיְתָה יְדַעַת

wise responds with three actions: “God now remembered...listened...and opened her womb.” Her struggle results in a response from God—such that her memory is assured, her voice heeded, and the barrier to conception lifted.

God...remembered. The same idea appeared (in different Hebrew terms) when God “remembered” Sarah and she became pregnant (21:1). In the biblical accounts of the nation of Israel’s loss or suffering, acts of memory (whether human or divine) are the first step toward redemption. In the stories of barren women, the occasion of divine remembrance signals that their actions have led to acknowledgment—and the reversal of their situation.

24. The giving of a name affords the new mother an opportunity to tell her story of movement from barrenness to fertility, and to perpetuate her experience through the child’s ascribed identity. Although Rachel uses a pious statement that “God has removed (Heb. asaf) my disgrace,” she calls her son Joseph (yosef), meaning “may God add on (yosef) another child for me.” Celebrating her victory, Rachel already begins strategizing for another.

GENESIS 30:27–37

VAYEITZEI

²⁷Laban then said to him, “Please [hear this]: I have prospered and has blessed me on your account.” ²⁸He added, “Indicate your wages to me, and I will pay them.”

²⁹[Jacob] said to him, “You know [the result] of my labors for you and how your livestock fared with me: ³⁰What little you had before I came along has increased greatly; יְהוָה has blessed you at my every step; but now, when shall I provide for myself, for my own household?” ³¹[Laban] said, “What should I pay you?”

Jacob replied: “Do not pay me a thing; if you do this for me, I shall return to shepherding, to keeping your flock. ³²Let me pass by all your flock today, removing from it every spotted and speckled kid and every dark lamb among the rams and every speckled and spotted goat; that will be my payment. ³³My honesty shall answer for me on the morrow. When you give me my wages, in your presence [I affirm] that any animal that is not either spotted among the goats or speckled or dark among the young rams is stolen if found in my possession.” ³⁴“Agreed,” said Laban, “let it but be as you have said.”

³⁵But that day he [Laban] removed the streaked and speckled he-goats, and all the spotted and speckled she-goats, every one that had white on it and every one of the young rams that was dark, and handed them over to his sons; ³⁶he then set a distance of three days’ journey between himself and Jacob, and Jacob tended what remained of Laban’s flock.

³⁷Jacob now took fresh rods of poplar, almond, and plane, and peeled off white strips of bark,

את־עֲבֹדֶתִי אֲשֶׁר עֲבֹדֶתִךְ: ²⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיו
לְבָנָם מִצְאָתִי חַן בְּעִינֵיכֶם נְחַשְׁתִּי
וַיִּבְרְכֵנִי יְהוָה בְּגַלְלְךָ: ²⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר נְקֻבָּה
שָׁבֵךְ עַלְיָה וְאַתָּה:

²⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיו אַתָּה יְדַעַת אֲשֶׁר
עֲבֹדֶתְךָ וְאַתָּה אֲשֶׁר־הָיָה מִקְנֶה אַתָּה: ³⁰ בַּיּ
מַעַט אֲשֶׁר־הָיָה לְךָ לִפְנֵי וַיַּפְרַץ לְרַב וַיִּבְרֶךְ
יְהוָה אַתָּה לְرַגְלֵי וְעַתָּה מַתִּי אַעֲשֶׂה גַּם־
אַנְכִּי לִבְרִיתִי: ³¹ וַיֹּאמֶר מָה אַתָּה־לָךְ
וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב לְאִתְתַּנוּלִי מִאוֹתָה אַם־

תַּעֲשֵׂה־לְלִי הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה אֲשֹׁוֹבָה אֲרֻעָה
צָאָנָךְ אֲשֶׁר־מָר: ³² אַעֲבָר בְּכָל־צָאָנָךְ הַיּוֹם
הַסֶּר מִשֵּׁם בְּלִשְׁהָה | נְקֻדָּה וְטַלְוָה וּבְלִשְׁהָה־
חוֹם בְּכָשְׁבִּים וְטַלְוָה וּנְקֻדָּה בְּעָזִים וְהָיָה
שְׁבָרִי: ³³ וְעַנְנָתָה־בְּבִי צְדָקָתִי בַּיּוֹם מִזְרָחָ בַּיּ
תָּבוֹא עַל־שְׁבָרִי לִפְנֵיךְ בְּלֹא אֲשֶׁר־אִינְנוּ נְקֻדָּה
וְטַלְוָה בְּעָזִים וְחוֹם בְּכָשְׁבִּים גָּנוּבָה הוּא
אַתָּה: ³⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר לְבָנָה לֵו יְהִי כְּדָבָרֶךָ

³⁵ וַיִּסְרֶר בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא אֶת־הַתְּשִׁישִׁים הַעֲקָדִים
וְהַטְּלָאִים וְאַתָּה בְּלִדְעָית הַנְּקֻדּוֹת
וְהַטְּלָאִים בְּלֹא אֲשֶׁר־לְבָנָה בֹּו וּבְלִחוֹם
בְּכָשְׁבִּים וַיִּתְּנֵן בַּיּוֹם: ³⁶ וַיַּשֵּׂם דָּרָךְ
שֶׁלְשֶׁת יְמִים בֵּינוֹ וּבֵין יַעֲקֹב וַיַּעֲקֹב רֶעוֹת
אֶת־עָזָן לְבָנָה הַנּוֹתְרָת:

³⁷ וַיַּקְרַב־לֵו יַעֲקֹב מִקֶּל לְבָנָה לְחַזְקָה וְלוֹא
וַיַּרְמֹן וַיַּפְאֵל בְּהַזְכָּרָה לְבָנָה מִחְשָׁךְ

Leaving Laban

JACOB, LEAH, AND RACHEL JOURNEY TOWARD A HOME IN CANAAN
(30:25–31:42)

COMPETITION BETWEEN MEN (30:25–31:3)

³². “speckled and spotted goat.” These animals are worth less than solid-colored goats. Jacob makes a modest request—although his intentions, along with Laban’s, are surreptitious throughout this negotiation. The completion of Rachel’s internal journey motivates Jacob to prepare for his return home.

^{37–39}. How peeled rods can determine the color of sheep is anyone’s guess, but Jacob later explains to Rachel and Leah that the technique was revealed to him during a dream communication with an angel (31:10–13).

stripping the white on the surface of the rods.³⁸ He set the rods he had just peeled by the water troughs, by the trenches filled with water where the flock was wont to drink, opposite the sheep; and they went into heat as they approached to drink.³⁹ When the flocks conceived in front of the rods, [they] brought forth young that were striped, speckled, and spotted.⁴⁰ And the young rams Jacob kept for himself, turning the faces of the flocks toward all those sheep of Laban's that were streaked or dark; he set apart herds for himself and did not join them to Laban's flocks.⁴¹ So when the hardy among the flocks went into heat, Jacob placed the rods in the direct view of the sheep at the water troughs, to bring them into heat by virtue of the rods.⁴² But he did not put them among the sickly of the flocks, so that the sickly ones became Laban's and the hardy, Jacob's.⁴³ Thus the man prospered more and more; he had abundant flocks, female slaves and male slaves, camels and donkeys.

31 [Jacob] now heard the words of Laban's sons. They were saying, "Jacob has taken all that belongs to our father; it is from our father's possessions that he has gained all this wealth!"² And Jacob saw Laban's countenance—plainly, it was no longer [favorable] to him as before.³ So said to Jacob, "Return to the land of your ancestors, to your birthplace, and I will be with you."

⁴Jacob therefore summoned Rachel and Leah to the field, to his flocks,⁵ and said to them, "When I look at your father's countenance, it no longer is [favorable] to me as in days gone by; but the God of my father has been with me.⁶ Now, you are aware

הַלְבָן אֲשֶׁר עַל-הַמְקֻלּוֹת: ³⁸ וַיִּצְגֵּג אֶת-הַמְקֻלּוֹת אֲשֶׁר פָּאֵל בְּרָהָטִים בְּשִׁקְתּוֹת הַצָּאן וַיִּחְמֹנֵה בְּבָאָן לְשִׁקְתּוֹת: ³⁹ וַיִּחְמֹנֵה הַצָּאן אֶל-הַמְקֻלּוֹת וַתַּלְדוּן הַצָּאן עֲקָדִים נָקָדִים וַתַּלְאִים: ⁴⁰ וַיַּפְּשַׂבֵּט הַפְּרִיד יַעֲקֹב וַיִּתְּנוּ פָנֵי הַצָּאן אֶל-עֲקָד וּכְלִיחָם בְּצָאן לְבָנָן וַיִּשְׂתַּלֵּז עֲדָרִים לְבָבוֹ וְלֹא שָׂתַם עַל-עַצָּאן לְבָנָן: ⁴¹ וְהִיא בְּכָל-יִחְםֹת הַצָּאן הַמְקֻשְׂרוֹת בְּשָׁם יַעֲקֹב אֶת-הַמְקֻלּוֹת לְעֵינֵי הַצָּאן בְּרָהָטִים לַיְיחֹנָה בְּמִקְלּוֹת: ⁴² וּבְהַעֲטִיף הַצָּאן לֹא יִשְׁים וְהִיא הָעֲטָפִים לְלַבָּן וְהַקְשָׁרִים לִיעָקֹב: ⁴³ וַיַּפְּרַץ הָאִישׁ מִאָד וַיַּהַיְלֹן צָאן רַבּוֹת וִשְׁפָחוֹת וּעֲבָדִים וְגַמְלִים וְחַמְרִים:

לֹא וַיִּשְׁמַע אֶת-דְּבָרֵי בְּנֵי-לְבָנָן לְאמֹר לְקַח יַעֲקֹב אֶת בֶּל-אֲשֶׁר לְאָבִינוּ וּמְאַשֶּׁר לְאָבִינוּ עָשָׂה אֶת בֶּל-הַכְּבֵד הַזֶּה: ² וַיַּרְא יַעֲקֹב אֶת-פָנֵי לְבָנָן וְהַנָּהָא אִינְנוּ עָמוֹ בְּתִמְולֵל שְׁלָשִׁים: ³ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהֹוָה אֶל-יַעֲקֹב שׂוֹב אֶל-אָרֶץ אֶבְוֹתֶיךָ וְלִמְלֹדֶתךָ וְאַהֲרֹן עַמְךָ:

⁴ וַיַּשְׁלַח יַעֲקֹב וַיַּקְרֵא לְרָחֵל וְלִילָה הַשְׁׁדָה אֶל-צָאנָן: ⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר לְפָנָן רָאָה אָנְכִי אֶת-פָנֵי אֲבִיכָן פִּידְאִינְגָנוּ אֶלְיָהָר תְּמָלֵשׁ וְאֶלְעָזִיר אָבִי דִין עַמְקִי: ⁶ וְאַתְּנָה יַדְעַתְּנָה בַּכְּלִיפָחִי עַבְרָתִי אֶת-אֲבִיכָן:

31:1. "Jacob has taken all that belongs to our father." In fact, Jacob has acquired his wealth by usurping his own brother's blessing. Resentment on the part of the host culture toward Hebrew successes is likewise evident at the start of Exodus and later comprises a familiar trope in Jewish history.

4. Rachel and Leah. Here and in v. 14, the narrator places Rachel before Leah, consistent with the larger theme of the displaced first-born in Genesis. As with Jacob, Rachel's preeminent position in the family implies that hierarchies can be unsettled by action. Ruth 4:11 also lists Rachel prior to Leah, suggesting that Ruth's mode of contending with barrenness most closely parallels Rachel's journey to fertility.

that I have labored with all my strength for your father; ⁷but your father has deceived me, changing my pay ten times—though God has not let him harm me: ⁸so that if he said, ‘The spotted shall be your pay,’ the flocks bore spotted; and if he said, ‘The streaked shall be your pay,’ the flocks bore streaked. ⁹God has taken away your father’s livestock and given them to me. ¹⁰One time, when the flocks were in heat, in a dream I looked up and saw that the male goats mounting the flock were streaked, spotted, and dappled. ¹¹In that dream an angel of God said to me: ‘Jacob!’ ‘Here I am!’ said I. ¹²[The angel] said, ‘Pray look up; see how the male goats mounting the flocks are striped, spotted, and mottled, for I have seen all that Laban has done to you. ¹³I am the God of Beth El, where you anointed a monument, where you made Me a vow; now get up, leave this land and return to your native land.’”

¹⁴Rachel and Leah made this response to him, “Have we any longer a portion or inheritance in our father’s house? ¹⁵Are we not like foreigners to him? He sold us and has completely eaten up our money! ¹⁶Since all the wealth that God has taken away from our father is ours and our children’s, so now do just what God has commanded you!”

¹⁷Jacob then got up and mounted his sons and his wives on camels. ¹⁸He drove all his livestock and all his possessions that he had acquired—the live-

⁷ וְאַבִיכָן הָתַל בֵי וְהַחֲלָפֶת מִשְׁבְּרֹתִי
⁸ עַשְׂרַת מִנִּים וְלֹא־נִתְנַנוּ אֱלֹהִים לְהַרְעָםְדִי: אִם־כֵה יִאָמֶר נִקְדִים יְהִי
⁹ שְׁבָרֶךְ וַיְלַדו בְּלַ-הַצָּאן נִקְדִים וְאִם־כֵה
¹⁰ יִאָמֶר עֲקָדִים יְהִי שְׁבָרֶךְ וַיְלַדו בְּלַ-
¹¹ הַצָּאן עֲקָדִים: וַיַּצְלֵל אֱלֹהִים אֶת־מִקְנָה
¹² אֲבִיכָם וַיַּתְנַדְלֵי: וַיְהִי בַעַת יְחִים הַצָּאן
¹³ וְאַשְׁא עִינִי וְאָרָא בְּחִלּוֹם וְהַגָּה הַעֲתָדִים
¹⁴ הָעָלִים עַל־הַצָּאן עֲקָדִים נִקְדִים וּבְרָקִים:
¹⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר אֵלֵי מִלְאָךְ הָאֱלֹהִים בְּחִלּוֹם
¹⁶ יַעֲקֹב וַיֹּאמֶר הַנָּנוּ: וַיֹּאמֶר שָׁאַנְא עִינִיק
¹⁷ וַיַּרְא בְּלַ-הַעֲתָדִים הָעָלִים עַל־הַצָּאן
¹⁸ עֲקָדִים נִקְדִים וּבְרָקִים כִּי רָאִיתִי אֶת בְּלַ-
¹⁹ אֲשֶׁר לִבְנֵנָה קָרָ: אָנַבְנֵי הָאָלָל בֵּית־אָלָל
²⁰ אֲשֶׁר מְשֻׁחָת שֶׁט מַזְבָּה אֲשֶׁר נִנְרַת לֵי
²¹ שֵׁם נִנְרַת עַפְתָּה קַוִם צָא מִנְיָה אָרֶץ הַזֹּאת
²² רְשֻׁוב אֶל־אָרֶץ מוֹלְדַתְךָ:

¹⁴ וַתַּעֲנֹן רְחִיל וְלֹאָה וְתַאֲמִרְנָה לוֹ הוּא עוֹד לְנוּ
¹⁵ חָלֵק וְנִחְלָה בְּבֵית אֲבִינוּ: הָלוּא נִכְרִיוֹת
¹⁶ נִחְשְׁבָנוּ לוֹ כִּי מִכְרָנוּ וַיַּאֲכַל גַּם־אֲכַל
¹⁷ אֶת־בְּסֶפֶןּוּ: כִּי בְּלַ-הַשְׁעָר אֲשֶׁר הָאַיִל
¹⁸ אֱלֹהִים מִאֲבִינוּ לְנוּ הוּא וְלִבְנֵינוּ וְעַפְתָּה בְּלַ-

¹⁹ אֲשֶׁר אָמַר אֱלֹהִים אַלְיךָ עֲשֵׂה:
²⁰ וַיָּקָם יַעֲקֹב וַיִּשְׁאָא אֶת־בְּנֵיו וְאֶת־נְשָׁיו
²¹ עַל־הַגְּמַלִּים: וַיִּנְתַּג אֶת־בְּלִ-מִקְנָה
²² וְאֶת־בְּלִ-רְכָשׁוּ אֲשֶׁר רָכַשׁ מִקְנָה קְנִינוּ

SISTERLY COLLABORATION (31:4–16)

13. Jacob determines Rachel and Leah’s readiness to depart from their home by introducing them to the divine voice that guides him.

14. Rachel and Leah made this response. Previously the sisters have employed language as a mode of competition; but here they speak with one voice, indicating their common desire and alliance with Jacob—and, implicitly, with each other. (Rachel continues to display her individual will in v. 19.)

15. “Are we not like foreigners to him?” By acknowledging their outsider status in the household, Leah and Rachel prepare themselves to journey to an unknown land. They distinguish themselves from their father, citing the egregious manner in which he married them off and then denied them their due; see at 29:18.

stock in his possession that he had acquired in Paddan-aram—to go to his father Isaac in the land of Canaan. (¹⁹While Laban had gone to shear his sheep, Rachel had stolen her father's household gods, ²⁰and Jacob had deceived Laban the Aramean, by not informing him that he was fleeing.) ²¹[Jacob] fled with all that was his, going up and crossing the river and setting his face toward the hill country of Gilead.

²²[Not until] the third day was Laban told that Jacob had fled. ²³He then took his kin with him and pursued [Jacob], a seven-day trek, and caught up with him in the hill country of Gilead. ²⁴God then came to Laban the Aramean in a dream of the night, saying to him, “Beware lest you speak to Jacob, beginning well but ending ill.”

²⁵When Laban caught up to Jacob, Jacob had pitched his tent by the mountain. Laban then drove in his tent-pegs among his kinsmen near Mount Gilead. ²⁶Laban said to Jacob, “What have you done, deceiving me and driving my daughters off like prisoners of war? ²⁷Why did you flee by stealth and deceive me by not informing me? I would have sent you off with festive songs, with hand-drum and lyre! ²⁸Nor did you give me a chance to kiss my sons and daughters—how fool-

אֲשֶׁר רָכַשׁ בְּפִזְנָן אֲרָם לְבֹוא אֶל-יַצְחָק
אֲבִיו אֶרְצָה כְּנֻעַן: ¹⁹ וְלִבְנֵן הַלְּבָד לְגַזּוֹ אַתְּ
צָאָנוּ וְתַגְנֵבְנָה רְחֵל אֶת-הַתְּרִפְפִים אֲשֶׁר
לְאַבְיכָה: ²⁰ וַיַּגְנֵב יַעֲקֹב אֶת-לְבָבָ לְבָנָן
הַאֲרָמִי עַל-בְּלִי הָגִיד לוֹ כִּי בְּרֵחַ הוּא:
²¹ וַיַּבְרַח הוּא וְכָל-אֲשֶׁר-לוֹ וַיָּקָם וַיַּעֲבֵר
אֶת-הַנָּהָר וַיָּשֶׂם אֶת-פְּנֵיו תַּר הַגָּלְעָד:
²² וַיַּגְרֵר לְבָנָן בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁלִישִׁי כִּי בְּרֵחַ יַעֲקֹב:
²³ וַיַּקְרֵחַ אֶת-אֲחֵיוֹ עָמוֹ וַיַּרְאֵךְ אֶחָדוֹ דָּרָר
שְׁבֻעַת יָמִים וַיַּדְבֵּק אָתוֹ בְּהַר הַגָּלְעָד:
²⁴ וַיַּבְאֵא אֶל-לְבָנָן הַאֲרָמִי בְּחַלְמָם
הַלִּילָה וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ הַשְׁמֵר לְךָ פָּנִיתְרוּבָּר עַמָּךְ
יַעֲקֹב מְטוּב עַד-רָע:
²⁵ וַיִּשְׁגַּג לְבָנָן אֶת-יַעֲקֹב וַיַּעֲקֵב תַּקְעֵעַ אֶת-
אֲהָלָן בְּנָר וְלִבְנֵן תַּקְעֵעַ אֶת-אֲחֵיוֹ בְּהַר
הַגָּלְעָד: ²⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר לְבָנָן לַיַּעֲקֹב מֵה עֲשִׂיתָ
וְתַגְנֵב אֶת-לְבָבֵי וְתַנְהַל אֶת-בְּנָתֵי שְׁבִיוֹת
חָרָב: ²⁷ לְפָה נַחֲבָאת לְבָרָחַ וְתַגְנֵב אֶת-וְלִא-הַגְּדָתָ לְיִי וְאַשְׁלַחַ בְּשִׁמְחָה וּבְשִׁירָם
בְּהַרְךְ וּבְכָנּוֹר: ²⁸ וְלֹא נִטְשַׁתְנִי לְנַשְּׁקֵל בָּנָנִי

FLIGHT, THEFT, AND PURSUIT (31:17–42)

19. Rachel had stolen her father's household gods. We can gain a hint of Rachel's presumed motive from the 14th-century-B.C.E. tablets of Nuzi, an ancient city in Iraq. Evidence from there suggests that possession of the household gods was associated with clan leadership or inheritance rights. Thus Rachel, like Jacob before her, deceives the father in order to gain tokens of power and authority. Once again, Rachel is a counterpart to Jacob (Ilana Pardes, Countertraditions in the Bible, 1992, p. 61). She may also have sought the t'rafim to serve as fertility gods, hoping for a second child (see Contemporary Reflection, p. 178). | The Torah includes a number of trickster stories like this, showing how marginalized men and women outwit the powerful in order to survive or safeguard justice (for example, Genesis 12:10–20; 38:1–30).

24. God then came to Laban the Aramean in a dream. This is the third in a series of dreams where God guides and protects Jacob.

26. “driving my daughters off like prisoners of war.” After Rachel and Leah have voiced their desire to extricate themselves from their father and his manipulations (vv. 14–16), Laban's claim of concern for his daughters' well-being strikes the reader as hollow.

28. “sons and daughters.” That is, his grandchildren and his daughters.

GENESIS 31:29–38

VAYEITZEI

ishly you acted! ²⁹It is well within my power to do you an injury, but the God of your fathers said to me last night: Beware lest you speak to Jacob, beginning well but ending ill. ³⁰Now, then—you have gone away because you yearn so desperately for your father's house, but why did you steal my gods?"

³¹Jacob responded by saying to Laban, "Because I was afraid—because I said [to myself]—suppose you steal your daughters from me. ³²But the one with whom you find your gods shall not live; see for yourself—in front of our kin—what I have with me and take it back!" Jacob did not know that Rachel had stolen them.

³³Laban then entered Jacob's tent and Leah's tent and the tent of the two maids and found nothing. He then left Leah's tent and entered Rachel's tent. ³⁴Rachel had taken the household gods and put them in the camel's saddlebag and was sitting on them as Laban rummaged through everything in the tent and found nothing. ³⁵She now said to her father, "May my lord not take offense that I cannot get up in your presence, for the way of women is upon me." He searched but did not find the household gods.

³⁶Jacob then grew angry and berated Laban; Jacob spoke up by saying to Laban, "What is my transgression? What is my sin, that you pursued me so hotly, ³⁷that you felt all my goods? What did you find of all your household goods? Put it here before my kin and yours, and let them decide between us! ³⁸These twenty years that I have been with you

ולבנתי עתה הסכלה עשו: ²⁹ישילאל ידי לעשות עמכם רע ואלהי אביכם אמש אمر אליו לאמר השמר לך מדבר עמי יעקב מ טוב עדך: ³⁰ועתה הלו הלבת בירנבלך נקספהה לבית אביך למה גנבת את אלהי:

³¹ויען יעקב ויאמר לבן כי יראתי כי אמרתי פנדתגוזל את-בנوتיך מעמי: ³²עם אשר תמצא את-אללהיך לא יחיה נגד אחותינו הכהר לך מה עמי וקח-לה ולא ידע יעקב כי רחל גנבתם:

³³ויבא לבן באهل יעקב ובאהל לאה יבאהל שני האמהות ולא מצא ויצא מאהله לאה ויבא באهل רחל: ³⁴ורחאל לקחה את-התרפים ותשימים בכר הגמל ותשב עליהם וימשש לבן את-כל-האהל ולא מצא: ³⁵וთאמר אל-אביה אל-יחור בעינך אדני כי לו אוכלי ליקום מפניך כי ררה נשים לי ויחפש ולא מצא את התרפים:

³⁶ויחר ליעקב וירב בלבן ויען יעקב ויאמר לבן מה-פשי מה חטאתי כי דלקת אחרי: ³⁷כימשחת את-כל-כל מה-מצלאת מפל כל-יבירתם שים בה נגד אחיך ואחותך ויזקחו בין שנינו: זה ושרים שנה אנכי עפר רחליך ועניך לא

32. "the one with whom you find your gods shall not live." Through law and story alike, the Torah as well as later Jewish tradition warns against oath-taking. Jacob's oath here is often cited by commentators as the reason for Rachel's untimely death (35:18). (For a different perspective, see Contemporary Reflection, p. 178.) | This verse provides further evidence of Rachel's concern for her own status and survival.

35. "the way of women is upon me." With poetic euphemism, Rachel staves off her father by playing on masculine fears about menstruation. The irony is that these same fears result in the type of purity laws and prohibitions concerning menstruating women that would categorize bleeding on gods as an act of contamination (Leviticus 15:20). The ruse displays Rachel's cleverness. (On menstruation, see at Leviticus 15:19–32.)

your ewes and your she-goats never miscarried, and I never ate the rams of your flocks;³⁹ I never brought you an animal torn up by wild beasts; I made good the loss from my own possessions, when you demanded it [for] a sheep stolen by day or by night.⁴⁰ For me it was: by day the heat consumed me, and the cold by night—and sleep fled from my eyes.⁴¹ Thus it was for me: twenty years I served you in your house—fourteen years for your two daughters, and six years for your flocks; and you changed my pay ten times!⁴² Had not the God of my father—the God of Abraham, the Fear of Isaac—been for me, you would right now be driving me away empty-handed; but God saw my affliction and hard labor and warned [you] last night!"

⁴³Laban then responded by saying to Jacob, "The daughters are my daughters and the sons are my sons and the flocks are my flocks; everything that you see is really mine! But as for my daughters, what can I now do about them or the sons that they have borne?⁴⁴ So now, come, let us make a pact, you and I, and let it be a witness between us!"

⁴⁵Jacob then took a stone and raised it up as a monument. ⁴⁶And Jacob said to his kin, "Gather stones"; so they took stones and made a mound; they then ate there by the mound. ⁴⁷Laban called it Yegar-sahadutha, while Jacob called it Galeid.

⁴⁸Laban said, "This mound is a witness between us today"; therefore he [Jacob] had named it Galeid, ⁴⁹and [this is] the Mitzpah about which he [Laban] said, "May יְהוָה keep watch between you and me, when we are hidden one from the other!⁵⁰ Should you mistreat my daughters or take wives in addition to my daughters, [though] no one else is

שָׁבֵלוּ וְאִילֵי צָאנֶךָ לֹא אֲכַלְתִּי: ³⁹ טְרִפָּה
לְאַ-הֲבָאתִי אֶלְיךָ אָנְכִי אֲחַטְנָה מִידִי:
תִּבְקַשְׁנָה גַּנְבָּתִי יוֹם וְגַנְבָּתִי לִילָה:
⁴⁰ הַיּוֹתִי בַּיּוֹם אֲכַלְנִי חֶרֶב וְקַרְחָ בְּלִילָה
וַתַּדַּד שְׁנָתִי מַעֲינִי: ⁴¹ וְהִלְלִי עֲשָׂרִים שָׁנָה
בְּבִיתְךָ עֲבָדְתִיךָ אַרְבָּע עָשָׂרָה שָׁנָה בְּשְׁתִּי
בְּנַתְךָ וְשָׁשׁ שָׁנִים בְּצָאנָךָ וְתַחְלָף אַתָּה
מִשְׁבְּרָתִיךָ עֲשָׂרָת מַנִּים: ⁴² לוֹלִי אֱלֹהִי אָבִי
אֱלֹהִי אָבָרָהָם וּפַחַד יִצְחָק הִיה לִי פִי
עֲתָה רַיקָם שְׁלִיחָתָנִי אֶת-עֲנֵנִי וְאֶת-יִגְיָעִשִּׁי
פִּי רָאה אֱלֹהִים וַיַּכְחַ אָמֵשׁ:
⁴³ וַיַּעֲן לְבָנָן וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-יַעֲקֹב הַבָּנוֹת בְּנָתִי
וְהַבָּנִים בְּנִי וְהַצָּאן צָאנִי וּכְל אֲשֶׁר-אַתָּה
רָאה לִיהְיוֹא וְלִבְנָתִי מִה-אָשָׁה לְאַלְהָה
הַזֹּם אָוּ לְבִנֵּתְךָ אֲשֶׁר יַלְדוֹ: ⁴⁴ וְעֲתָה לְכָה
נִכְרַתָּה בְּרִית אַנְיָה וְאַתָּה וְהִיה לְעֵד בֵּין
וּבֵין:
⁴⁵ וַיַּקְרַח יַעֲקֹב אָבִן וַיַּרְמִמָה מִצְבָּה:
⁴⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב לְאַחֲיו לְקֹטוֹ אֲבָנִים וַיַּקְרַח
אֲבָנִים וַיַּעֲשֵׂר גָּל וַיַּאֲכַלְוּ שָׁם עַל-הַגָּל:
⁴⁷ וַיַּקְרַא אֶלְיוֹן לְבָנָן יִגְרֵשׁ שְׁהָרוֹתָא וַיַּעֲקֹב
קָרָא לוּ גָלָעֵד:
⁴⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר לְבָנָן הַגָּל הַזֶּה עַד בֵּין וּבֵין הַיּוֹם
עַל-בָּנָן קָרָא-שָׁמוֹ גָלָעֵד: ⁴⁹ וְהַמִּצְפָּה אֲשֶׁר
אָמַר יִצְחָק יְהוָה בֵּין וּבֵין כִּי נִסְתַּחַר אִיש
מְרֻעָהוּ: ⁵⁰ אִם-תַּעֲנֵה אֶת-בְּנָתִי וְאִם-תַּחֲקֵח
נָשִׁים עַל-בְּנָתִי אֵין אִיש עָמַנוּ רָאה אֱלֹהִים

Reconciliation and Separation of Jacob and Laban (31:43–32:3)

In the parashah's concluding scene, Jacob sets a border between himself and his Syrian relative and thereby ratifies a peace treaty. The tension that suffuses their dialogue will erupt into future hostilities between the nations of Israel and of Aram, but this first treaty makes them equal partners. The scene itself is composed of doublets: two stones, two meals, two maps, two Gods, and two levels to the treaty—one familial and one political.

with us, consider! God is witness between you and me.”⁵¹ And Laban said [additionally] to Jacob, “Behold this mound and behold this monument that I have raised between us.⁵² This mound is a witness, this monument is a witness, that I shall never pass this mound toward you [intending harm], and that you shall never pass this mound and this monument toward me, intending harm.⁵³ Let [both] the god of Abraham and the god of Nahor—the god of each one’s father—judge between us!” And Jacob swore by the Fear of his father Isaac.⁵⁴ Jacob then offered a sacrifice by the mountain, inviting his kin to eat bread. They ate bread and stayed the night by the mountain.

32 In the morning Laban got up early, kissed his sons and his daughters and blessed them; then he went home. So Laban returned to his place.² Now Jacob went on his way and angels of God met him.³ And when he saw them, Jacob said, “This is the camp of God!” So he named that place Mahanaim.

52. “This mound is a witness.” That is, to the treaty that stipulates that Jacob must not mistreat Rachel or Leah, and that neither Jacob nor Laban will cross the border to attack the other. The stone monument of Rachel’s tomb (Genesis 35:20) will likewise mark the boundary of the territory of Benjamin (I Samuel 10:2). Rachel and Jacob are both figures associated with borders.

54. Peacefully camping side by side affords Laban the good-bye kisses that he claimed he was denied (v. 28).

עד ביני ובינך :⁵¹ וַיֹּאמֶר לְבָנָן לִיעַקְבֵּן הַגָּל הַזֶּה וְהַגָּל הַמִּצְבָּה אֲשֶׁר יָרַתִּי בֵּין
ובינך :⁵² עַד הַגָּל הַזֶּה וְעַד הַמִּצְבָּה אֲשֶׁר
אָנִי לֹא-עֲבָר אֶלָּךְ אֶת-הַגָּל הַזֶּה וְאָמַר
אָתָּה לֹא-תִּעַבֵּר אֶלָּי אֶת-הַגָּל הַזֶּה וְאַתָּה
הַמִּצְבָּה הַזֶּה תַּرְעַח :⁵³ אֶלְהֵי אֶבְרָהָם
וְאֶלְהֵי נֹחַול יִשְׁפְּטו בְּיִנְיָנוּ אֶלְהֵי אֶבְרָהָם
וַיִּשְׁבַּע יַעֲקֹב בְּפִיחַד אֶבְיוֹן יִצְחָק :⁵⁴ וַיַּזְבַּח
יַעֲקֹב בְּכָח בְּהָר וַיָּקָרָא לְאַחֲיו לְאַכְל-לְחֵם
וַיִּאֱכַלוּ לְחֵם וַיְלִינוּ בָּהָר :

לב וַיִּשְׁבַּם לְבָנָן בְּבָקָר וַיִּנְשַׁק לְבָנָיו
וְלְבָנָתוֹי וַיִּבְרַךְ אֹתָהָם וַיַּלְךְ וַיִּשְׁבַּב לְבָנָן
לִמְקָמוֹ :² וַיַּעֲקֹב הַלְּךָ לְדֶרֶפֶת וַיִּפְגַּע-וּבוּר
מַלְאָכִי אֱלֹהִים :³ וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב כַּא-שֶׁאָשֶׁר
רָאָם מִחְנָה אֱלֹהִים זֶה וַיָּקָרָא שְׁם-הַמָּקוֹם
הַהוּא מִחְנָים : פ

32:2–3. Now Jacob went on his way and angels of God met him. As Jacob retreats from the border and heads homeward, he crosses an additional boundary guarded by angels.

Mahanaim. In the company of angels, Jacob recognizes the place as “the camp of God” and himself as the dweller in Mahanaim, “Two Camps.” This encounter with angels indicates that he crosses the threshold between home and exile, as well as that between heaven and earth.

—Rachel Havrelock

Another View

FOR MANY, the love story between Rachel and Jacob shows the text's preference for Rachel over Leah. If one reads the story through modern eyes, where love conquers all, then Rachel seems to be more important than Leah. However, if one reads this parashah with an eye toward its own biblical concerns, then Rachel and Leah look very different.

The love story begins with Jacob seeing Rachel (29:10). The text notes that Rachel is "beautiful of form and of face" (v. 17). To modern readers beauty is positive, but in the Hebrew Bible it is dangerous for women. Abram charges that Sarai's beauty threatens his life (12:11–12), and Amnon rapes Tamar, supposedly because of her beauty (II Samuel 13). In other places in the Bible, when people make choices because of what they see, those choices prove to be misguided. For example, Lot chooses to live in the Jordan plain because it looks nicer than Canaan (Genesis 13:10–11). Samson marries a Philistine woman because of her appearance (Judges 14:1–3), and the results are disastrous. Clearly the Bible does not recommend judging a book by its cover.

The text notes that "seeing Leah was disfavored, תָּאַחַת opened her womb" (Genesis 29:31). This clearly means that the Deity sympathized with Leah. Leah names her first child Reuben because of a play on words that the Deity saw her plight, but she adds what she hopes it will bring her: the love of her husband (v. 32). The second child follows the same pattern;

In the Hebrew Bible, beauty is dangerous for women.

Simeon is so named because God "heard" of her plight (v. 33). The third son, Levi, is named in the hope that her husband will be attached to her (v. 34). All three names reflect not only thankfulness but also a need for more—namely, Jacob's love. With her fourth son, something finally changes and she names him Judah because, "This time I give thanks to תָּאַחַת" (v. 35). Thus Judah, who becomes the forefather of most of the Jewish people, is so named because his mother was simply thankful to the Deity to have him.

—Tammi J. Schneider

Post-biblical Interpretations

Now Laban had two daughters (29:16). Midrash B'reishit Rabbah 70.15 portrays the sisters Rachel and Leah as equal partners in building the Jewish people: "Both produced chieftains and kings.... Both produced prophets and judges." Leah was "greater in gifts," in that her sons were the ancestors of the priests and the Davidic kings.

Leah's eyes were weak (29:16). In B'reishit Rabbah 70.16, Rabbi Yohanan explains that Leah's eyes had grown weak from weeping. It had been expected that Rebekah's two sons would marry Laban's two daughters—and Esau was intended for Leah. Hearing negative reports about Esau's conduct, Leah had wept, praying that her destiny would change. Rabbi Hunu observes that Leah's prayer had been powerful enough to alter her fate, but in the process her eyes were permanently affected.

In the morning (29:25). The commentators are amazed that Leah fooled Jacob. After living in Laban's house for seven years, surely Jacob could tell Rachel and Leah apart! Furthermore, how did Laban prevent Rachel from warning Jacob of the deception? Midrash Eichah Rabbah, proem 24, explains that Rachel was a willing—albeit unhappy—partner to Laban’s plan. In this midrash, Rachel recounts her version of the events of Genesis 29. Aware that her father was plotting to deceive Jacob, she warned her future husband of Laban’s plans. Jacob and Rachel agreed upon a sign to allow Jacob to distinguish between the sisters. But then, Rachel changed her mind, realizing that if Laban’s plan failed, Leah would be shamed. Instead of thwarting her father’s plot, Rachel aided her sister in the deception: “That evening, my sister took my place with Jacob and I taught her the signs I had given him so that he would think she was Rachel. I also hid under the bed upon which they lay, and when Jacob spoke to my sister, I responded while she was silent so that he would not recognize her voice. In this way, I showed kindness to my sister; I did not act on my jealousy and saved her from disgrace.”

VAYEITZEI

*“I showed kindness to my sister;
I saved her from disgrace.”*

Laban then gave his maid Bilhah (29:29). According to the 11th-century commentator Rashi, the slaves Bilhah and Zilpah were Laban’s daughters by his concubine, thus suitable mothers of four of the tribes of Israel (on 31:50). The childless Rachel’s use of Bilhah parallels Sarah’s earlier use of Hagar in 16:1–3 (B’reishit Rabbah 71.7). Leah’s motives in giving Zilpah to Jacob are less clear; some commentators suggest that Leah acted to ensure that Jacob would father twelve sons. The Midrash Tanna D’Vei Eliyahu Rabbah 25 (Ish-Shalom edn., p. 138) counts Rachel’s and Leah’s willingness to offer their maid-servants to Jacob as among the righteous acts of the matriarchs that led to Israel’s redemption from Egypt. Some traditions include Bilhah and Zilpah among the matriarchs (B’midbar Rabbah 12; Shir HaShirim Rabbah 6; P’sikta D’Rav Kahana 1.10).

“Let me have children” (30:1). Rachel’s demand is understood by rabbinic tradition as a complaint against Jacob. She expects him to pray on her behalf, as his father Isaac did for Rebekah. Jacob was criticized by some rabbis for his harsh reply (B’reishit Rabbah 71.7). Isaac Arama, a 15th-century commentator in Spain, attributed Jacob’s frustration to Rachel’s insistence that a childless woman is worthless. He argues that women have two functions: like men, they can develop their intellectual and spiritual qualities, and they can also bear and raise children. Jacob wants Rachel to recognize that she can have a meaningful life even if she has no children (Akedat Yitzchak on Genesis 3:20).

Afterwards she bore a daughter (30:21). The power of Leah’s prayers is again emphasized in BT B’rachot 60a. Commenting on “afterwards,” Rav suggests that after she discovered she was pregnant, “Leah reasoned, ‘Jacob is destined to father twelve tribes. I have given birth to six sons, and the handmaids have borne four. If this child is a son, my sister Rachel won’t be equal even to the handmaids.’ Immediately, the child [in her womb] was transformed to a female.” In other versions of this miraculous demonstration of the efficacy of prayer, the handmaids, Bilhah and Zilpah, join Leah in prayers on Rachel’s behalf (B’reishit Rabbah 72.6).

Reuben went and found mandrakes (30:14). In B’reishit Rabbah 72.5, the sages explain that through these mandrakes two additional tribes came into being, Issachar and Zebulun. Leah’s willingness to barter with her sister allowed her to attain precedence as the mother of six tribes and to merit burial at Jacob’s side (B’reishit Rabbah 72.3).

—Dvora E. Weisberg

Contemporary Reflection

IN GENESIS 31, Jacob calls his wives Rachel and Leah out to the field and confidentially expresses his desire to return to Canaan. Vataan Rachel v'Leah (31:14): Rachel and Leah respond in one voice—as indicated by the singular verb form—expressing a shared anger against their father and a willingness to leave Haran. Jacob then gets up, places his wives and sons on camels, carries off his cattle and other property, and departs.

At first, Jacob appears as the central actor in this narrative. Everything is said and done in relation to him, stated in masculine possessive terms. In 31:19, however, Rachel seizes the opportunity afforded by Laban's going off to shear his sheep to steal her father's t'rafim. Until this point, Rachel and Leah have followed a course initiated by Jacob and his concerns. Here, however, Rachel initiates and plots her own destiny. So much so that in the next verse Jacob is seen as following Rachel's lead: Rachel stole the t'rafim (v. 19) and Jacob “stole the mind (literally: heart) of Laban the Aramean” (v. 20).

Jacob re-assumes center stage in the narrative when Laban overtakes him on his journey and the two men begin to air their respective grievances. But from the moment Rachel steals the t'rafim, Jacob ceases to control the action or facts. It is in a condition of ironic ignorance that Jacob makes his rash pronouncement (v. 32): “But the one with whom you find your gods shall not live.” (Compare Jephthah’s vow in Judges 11:30 to sacrifice the first to come out to meet him, a vow that leads him to sacrifice his daughter.)

Several midrashic sources contend that Jacob’s death sentence for the theft of Laban’s t'rafim is borne out in Rachel’s tragic death after giving birth to Benjamin (for example, B’reishit Rabbah 74:32). According to a plain reading of Genesis 31, however, Rachel emerges from the episode victorious and unscathed.

After all, Jacob’s curse is conditioned upon Laban actually finding the t'rafim in someone’s possession—something that Laban never accomplishes.

Laban conducts a thorough search of Jacob’s camp: Jacob’s tent, Leah’s, the two maidservants’, and Rachel’s—v’lo matza (and he finds nothing), a verb construction that appears three times (31:33, 34, 35). What has Rachel done to elude her father? She has placed the t'rafim in a camel’s saddle (echoing how Jacob put his wives and sons onto camels in v. 17) and conceals them by sitting on this same saddle. She then shrewdly

The theft is a story about women’s potential to use and craft language.

apologizes to her father for not obeying usual custom and rising before him as he searches her tent. “The way of women is upon me” (31:35), Rachel claims, cunningly manipulating the (male) menstruation taboo to her own advantage.

What are these t'rafim that Rachel risks so much to steal? What did they stand for in Rachel’s time, and what do they mean for us today?

According to Rashi, the 11th-century commentator, the t'rafim were household idols that Rachel steals from her father for pious, monotheistic reasons: “in order to distance him from the practice of idol worship.” This interpretation clearly stems from rabbinic discomfort with the idea of Rachel as idol worshipper. But if Rachel were so angry with her father as to be willing to leave his house forever without so much as a goodbye, would she really care about his spiritual fate?

Based on other instances in the Bible where the same word appears, other traditional exegetes identify the t'rafim with the practice of divination. Thus, Rachel steals the t'rafim, which were used by ancient magicians as a means of telling the future, in order to prevent Laban from knowing Jacob's plans or whereabouts. If that were the case, however, Rachel should have simply broken them. Why does she go to the trouble of stealing them, hiding them in a saddle, and tricking her father?

VAYEITZEI

Several contemporary biblical scholars have argued that possession of the "household gods" was related to issues of clan leadership or inheritance. Accordingly, the t'rafim are symbolic tokens that indicate Rachel's right to take her children and possessions away from her father and hand them over to her husband. And yet, Rachel's decision not to inform Jacob of her theft of the t'rafim suggests that she acts for her own sake, not Jacob's.

Along these lines, feminist biblical scholar J. E. Lapsley argues that Rachel steals the t'rafim because her status as a woman in a patriarchal household prevents her from confronting her father with her own grievances about her rightful inheritance. "Therefore, she goes about getting justice from her father through devious and extra-legal means" ("The Voice of Rachel," Genesis: A Feminist Companion to the Bible (Second Series), ed. Athalya Brenner, 1998, p. 238). In telling her father that she cannot "rise before" him because the "way of women is upon her," Rachel is "speaking two languages simultaneously." Laban hears Rachel as saying that she cannot honor him by standing because she is menstruating. But Rachel's speech also reads as a complaint that she has no forum for rising before her father and pleading her case for inheritance; the social "way of women" constrains her possibilities for speech, advocacy, and direct action. According to Lapsley, Rachel's "subversive action in stealing the t'rafim is matched by her equally subversive undermining of male definitions of women and her creation of new meanings out of male-generated language" (p. 242). According to this interpretation, Rachel steals not only the t'rafim but also the language that has been used by this patriarchy to define her as woman and limit her access to culture and law.

Rachel thus emerges from this story as an archetypal feminist writer, who dares to steal across the border of masculine culture, seize control of her cultural inheritance, and make it her own. Understood this way, the theft of the t'rafim becomes a story about women's potential to use and craft language, both holy and mundane, in all of its many meanings, to speak potently—and cause others to listen.

—Wendy Zierler

Voices

Posit

Linda Stern Zisquit

Genesis 29:30

Had Rachel not looked up
Jacob would not have seen her.
There would have been no water,
no winding dream,
no tribe or unrelenting portion of sadness dispersed on his land, his Jerusalem, and I would not have promised to gather them home. But Rachel saw him and he loved her.
She was barren and she suffered and she followed him.
So I have this heaviness to bear. Her life before him had also the dailiness of lives, an hour at which she would rise and go to the well. Then out of the blue her future came crashing against her lids when she looked up, those hours changed, and I was moved to his, another well.

The Tune to Jacob Who Removed the Stone from the Mouth of the Well

Rivka Miriam (transl. Linda Stern Zisquit)

Genesis 29

He didn't know I was Leah and I—I was Leah.
Rachel, he said, Rachel, like a lamb
the grass becomes part of, stems are part of you.
Flocks of sheep hummed between our blankets, tent-flies were pulled to the wind.

Rachel, he said, Rachel—and my eyes, they were weak
the bottom of a dark swamp.
The whites of his eyes melted to the whites of my eyes.
The cords of his tent held fast to the ground while the wind was blowing from the palms of my hands.

And he didn't know I was Leah and flocks of sons broke through my womb to his hands.

At the Well

Malka Heifetz Tussman (transl. Marcia Falk)

Genesis 29:1–8

My whole life straining—and but a crack
I've moved the stone from the well where in darkness
the water is clear.
And now, when a star
blinks there,
at once
I taste tomorrow's tears.

VAYEITZEI

Leah

Shirley Kaufman

Genesis 29

I do what I have to like an obedient daughter or a dog. Not for your fingers in my flesh. I watch you every day as you watch her.
Since I'm the ugly one,
the one pushed into your bed at night when you can't tell the difference.

I've got another son inside me, and still you watch her. She doesn't sag as I do after each birth until you fill me again.

Why can't you look at me in daylight, or take my hand and press it against your mouth?
I'm not a stone, a shell your foot rolls over in the sand. The life gone out of it.
Maybe I am.
Your sons have sucked me empty and dull.

I leave your tent at dawn and walk to the river where I throw my clothes off, and the water shows me
my body floating on the surface. It shivers when I touch the blue dome of your unborn child.

I touch my unwanted self where the smooth skin stretches over my breasts, the silver veins. I'm cold.

I enter the water
as you enter me. Quick.
Like insects doing it while they fly. The shock of it lifts me,
and I swim raging against the stream.

from Leah to Her Sister

Sherry Blumberg

Genesis 29:17

My eyes are weak
But my body is strong
I'm not afraid to work
I have worked and will work
And someday will bear children

My eyes are weak
But my resolve is strong
I shall have my due
First to be married
First to bear children
Yet I'll not be as loved as you

My eyes are weak
But my love is strong
For I have loved you
You shall become a legend
I will always be second
Even in memory and in prayer

Zilpah

Jill Hammer

Genesis 30:9–13

Rachel called me your friend;
we both hated that. We were more than girls giggling at shepherds.
We were two hours in a day.
Night yielding to the sun.
Two voices twining to make song.

Laban found us once, my hair falling over your body like leaves swept into the stream. Afraid he could never get rid of you, he made you lie with Jacob on Rachel's wedding night.
You threatening you'd tell everything unless he brought me to you.
So we were together
while you bore child after child.

I was jealous. Maybe you were jealous too, that I was still high-breasted.
One night you braided my hair and took me to him.
When the blood burst out of me,
you squeezed my hand and wept:
“Here I am; I am sorry.” Then you went back to him and bore a daughter.

Now I have my own tent: not what we wanted.
Our hair is grayer. On rare mornings we slide, infant-laden, onto the same pillow and touch each other's faces. Sun yielding to night.

Rachel Solo

Alicia Suskin Ostriker

Genesis 31:19, 31–35

Not getting mad, just getting even,
Papa, I'll say goodbye to you,
I'll load my camel with my goods
And take your household idols too,
And should you come in search of them
With indignation red and blue,
I'll sit upon your statuettes
And make good use of a bad taboo.
Papa, I'll say, forgive me but
My monthly's here; don't misconstrue
This failure to get up.... And you'll Back off in dread. That's what you'll do.

Sorrow Song

Rahel (transl. Wendy Zierler)

Genesis 29:20–28

Will you hear my voice, my distant one, will you hear my voice, wherever you are—a voice calling strong, a voice crying silently and above time, commanding blessing?

This world is wide with many paths.
They meet narrowly, part forever.
A man seeks, but his feet fail,
he cannot find what he has lost.

Maybe my last day is already near,
already near, the day of tearful parting,
I shall wait for you until my life dims,
as Rachel awaited her lover.

וַיִשְׁלַח ◆ Vayishlach

GENESIS 32:4–36:43

From Jacob to Israel

PARASHAT VAYISHLACH (“And he sent”) features Jacob—the third and final patriarch—as he becomes the last individual to receive a personal covenant with God. In a life-transforming event, Jacob meets God face to face, and his name is changed to “Israel,” which may reflect his own struggles with God. After Jacob, all future covenant renewals will be made between God and B’nei Yisrael (literally “the children of [the patriarch] Israel”—the Israelites as a whole, who will continue the struggle).

All of the women in this parashah (except for those in the genealogy of Esau in Genesis 36) are members of Jacob’s immediate family. What stands out is the troubling story of Dinah and Shechem (Genesis 34), although Dinah’s role in the narrative is revealingly minor. While she functions as a trigger for the event, the tale focuses on the relations between the men of the family of Jacob and the Canaanites among whom they have settled. The major concern in the story as told is not the personal fate of an individual woman (or man) but the political relationship between Israel and the other inhabitants in the land. Dinah becomes a symbol in the exploration of the theme of identity—of self and of other—that began with the story of Abraham.

The other women in Jacob’s household appear in passing in this parashah, with Rachel’s death as a poignant conclusion. In general, Dinah becomes a symbol in the exploration of the theme of identity.

these passages enable us to view the women of the story as intermediaries linking together groups of men, while moving about in the social world of the male characters—who have the authority to represent both the women and the subordinate men in their households.

—Shawna Dolansky
Risa Levitt Kohn

Outline—

I. SETTLING ACCOUNTS

Jacob's Struggles with God and Men (32:4–33:20)

- A. Jacob sets out to meet Esau (32:4–16)
- B. Jacob struggles with God (32:17–33)
- C. The brothers reconcile (33:1–20)

II. DINAH AND SHECHEM

Sex and Social Status (34:1–31)

- A. Rape? (vv. 1–4)
- B. Brothers' interpretation: An outrage against Israel (vv. 5–24)
- C. Brothers' revenge (vv. 25–31)

III. ISRAEL AND B'NEI YISRAEL

Covenant Renewal, Death, and Life (35:1–36:43)

- A. Beth El and the renaming of Jacob/Israel (35:1–15)
- B. Rachel's second son and her death (35:16–21)
- C. Jacob's wives and children (35:22–26)
- D. Isaac's death (35:27–29)
- E. The line of Esau (36:1–43)

32:4

Jacob now sent messengers ahead of him to his brother Esau in the land of Seir, in the countryside of Edom.⁵ He instructed them as follows: “Say this to my lord Esau: ‘Thus says your servant Jacob: With Laban have I stayed and have lingered until just now. ⁶I came to own cattle, donkeys, sheep, and male and female slaves, and I am sending my lord this message [in the hope] of pleasing you.’”⁷ When the messengers came back to Jacob, they said, “We went to your brother Esau, and he, too—accompanied by four hundred men—is marching to meet you.”

לֹב⁴ וַיִּשְׁלַח יַעֲקֹב מֶלֶאכִים לִפְנֵיו אֶל־עִשּׂו אָחִיו אֶרְצָה שְׁעִיר שְׁדָה אֲדֹם:⁵ וַיַּצֹּו אַתֶּם לְאמֹר בָּהּ תָּמְרוֹן לְאַדְנִי לְעַשֵּׂו בָּהּ אָמָר עֲבָדָךְ יַעֲקֹב עַמְלָבָן גָּרְתִּי וְאַחֲרָעַד עֲתָה:⁶ וַיַּהַי־לְלֹבֶשׂ שׂוֹר וְחַמּוֹר צָאן וְעַבְדָּוֹת וְשְׁפָחָה וְאַשְׁלָחָה לְהַגִּיד לְאַדְנִי לְמַצְאָהָן בְּעִינֵיכֶם:⁷ וַיִּשְׁבֹּו הַמֶּלֶאכִים אֶל־יַעֲקֹב לְאָמָר בָּאָנוּ אֶל־אֲחִיךָ אֶל־עִשּׂו וְגַם הַלְּבָבָךְ וְאַרְבָּע־מֵאוֹת אִישׁ עָמוֹ:

Settling Accounts

JACOB'S STRUGGLES WITH GOD AND MEN (32:4–33:20)

En before birth, Jacob was portrayed as a character who struggles. He struggled in the womb (25:22). He struggled with Esau for birthright and blessing (Genesis 25 and 27). After twenty years of living in Aram he struggled with Laban (Genesis 31) and, ever since he has headed back toward the land of Canaan, he has been facing a potentially dangerous encounter with his estranged brother Esau. Now, on the way home, Jacob endures a physical confrontation with God—and as a result, has his name changed to Israel. The struggle between humans and God is a prevalent theme in the Hebrew Bible that culminates not with Jacob/Israel, but with B'nei Yisrael, his descendants—who continually engage in either avoidance of, or confrontation with, their God.

JACOB SETS OUT TO MEET ESAU (32:4–16)

According to the preceding narrative, Jacob had wronged his brother, Esau, and then left home (27:1–28:5). Now Esau comes to meet Jacob with four hundred men, and Jacob is terrified. Jacob responds by making use of his two greatest assets: a wily mind, and God's covenant with his ancestors.

4. messengers. Heb. malach, the same word as in v. 2 (just before this parashah begins), where it was translated “angels.”

- How to account for Jacob's prominence over Esau? It begins with their mother's decision.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 202

- Because Rebekah's life ended in such a lonely way, the Torah only hints at her passing.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 202

- Dinah's story challenges us to be also the voices for all of our sisters.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 204

- Dinah tried to imagine having a story of her own to tell, of connections she had made.

VOICES ► 206

⁸Jacob was terrified. So anxious was he, that he divided the people who were with him—and the flocks, the herds, and the camels—into two camps. ⁹He thought: “If Esau advances on the first camp and strikes it, the remaining camp will be able to escape.” ¹⁰Then Jacob said, “God of my father Abraham and God of my father Isaac, יהוה who says to me, ‘Return to your native land and I will make things go well with you!’ ¹¹I am unworthy of all the proofs of mercy and all the faithfulness that You have shown Your servant. For I crossed this Jordan with [nothing but] my walking stick, and now I have become [these] two camps! ¹²Save me, I pray, from my brother’s hand, from Esau’s hand! I am afraid of him, lest he advance on me and strike me, mother [falling] on child. ¹³Yet You said, ‘I will make things go well with you and make your descendants like the grains of sand along the seashore, which are too many to be counted.’”

¹⁴After spending the night there, he chose an offering for his brother Esau from what was at hand—¹⁵200 goats and 20 he-goats, 200 ewes and 20 rams, ¹⁶30 milch camels and their young, 40 cows and 10 bulls, 20 she-asses and 10 he-asses. ¹⁷He put his slaves in charge of each drove separately, saying to his slaves, “Pass before me and leave some distance between one drove and the next.” ¹⁸He instructed the first as follows, “If my brother Esau meets you and asks you, ‘To whom do

⁸וַיִּירָא יַעֲקֹב מִזֶּד וַיֵּצֶר לוֹ וַיְחַז אֶת־
הָעַם אֲשֶׁר־אָתָּו וְאֶת־הָצָאן וְאֶת־הַבָּקָר
וְהַגְּמֻלִים לְשִׁנֵּי מִחְנּוֹת: ⁹וַיֹּאמֶר אֱמִינְבָּא
עֲשֹׂו אֶל־הַמִּחְנָה הַאֲחָת וְהַבָּהּוּ וְהַהָּ
הַמִּחְנָה הַנְּשָׁאָר לְפָלְטָה: ¹⁰וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב
אֶלְהָי אֲבִי אֲבָרָהָם וְאֶלְהָי אֲבִי יְצָחָק יְהָוָה
הָאָמֵר אֵלִי שׁוּב לְאֶרְצָךְ וְלִמְוֹלְדָתְךָ
וְאִיטִּיבָה עָמָךְ: ¹¹קָטוֹנָתִי מִכֶּל הַחֲסָדִים
וּמִכֶּל־הָאָמֵת אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂית אֶת־עֲבָדָךְ כִּי
בָמְקָלֵי עֲבָרָתִי אֶת־דִּיןְךָ הַזֶּה וְעַתָּה
הִיִּתְיַי לְשִׁנֵּי מִחְנּוֹת: ¹²הַצִּילָנִי נָא מִינָּךְ
אֲחֵי מֵיד עָשָׂו כִּירָא אָנָכִי אָתָּו פָּנִי־בָּא
וְהַכְּנִי אֶם עַל־בָּנִים: ¹³וְאַתָּה אָמְרָתָ הַיּוֹב
אִיטִּיב עָמָךְ וְשִׁמְתִּי אֶת־זָרָעָל בְּחֹל הַיּוֹם
אֲשֶׁר לְאִיסְפָּר מִركָב:

¹⁴וַיָּלֶן שֵׁם בְּלִילָה הַהְוָא וַיַּקְחַ מִזְחָבָא
בְּיָדוֹ מִנְחָה לְעַשְׂוֹ אֲחֵיו: ¹⁵עַזְמָם מַאֲתִים
וַתִּשְׁוִים עָשָׂרִים רְחִלִּים מַאֲתִים וְאַילִים
עָשָׂרִים: ¹⁶גִּמְלִים מִינְיקּוֹת וּבְנִיהָם
שְׁלֹשִׁים פָּרוֹת אֶרְבָּעִיט וּפְרִים עַשְׂרָה:¹⁷וַיַּתְּנֵן
אֶתְנָתָעָשָׂרִים וּבָרִים וּבָרִים עַשְׂרָה
בְּיַד־עֲבָדָיו עַדְר עַדְר לְבָדוֹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־
עֲבָדָיו עֲבָרוּ לִפְנֵי וּרְוחַ תְּשִׁימָו בֵּין עַדְר
וּבֵין עַדְר: ¹⁸וַיַּצְוֹ אֶת־הָרָאשָׁון לְאָמֶר כִּי
יַפְגַּשְׁךְ עָשָׂו אָחִי וְשָׁאַלְכָה לְאָמֹר לְמַיְּאַתָּה

12. “Save me, I pray, from my brother’s hand.”

Jacob’s prayer (vv. 10–13) is one of the few prayers recorded in the narrative books of the Bible. (Another is Hannah’s prayer of victory; I Samuel 2.) The prayer opens and closes with direct allusions to God’s covenant with Abraham (vv. 10 and 13).

JACOB STRUGGLES WITH GOD (32:17–33)

Separated from all his recent acquisitions and now alone, Jacob wrestles with a mysterious being. This is a life-altering event for him. He demands a blessing, and receives a name change that signifies a permanent change in Jacob’s character.

17–22. Forms of the word “face” (Heb. panim) occur seven times in this passage (at times translated as “in front of” or “ahead of”), providing a verbal link to the life-altering theme in the events that are about to occur. The repetition conveys the force of this moment in Jacob’s life and of all that he must face—including his brother. Two encounters, first with his God and then with his brother, will be united when he eventually says to Esau, “I’ve seen your face—like seeing God’s face!” (33:10).

you belong, where are you going, and whose are these ahead of you?’¹⁹ say, ‘These are your servant’s, Jacob’s; it is an offering sent to my lord Esau; and in fact he is following close behind us.’”²⁰ He instructed the second, too, and third as well, and all [the others] who were to follow the droves, saying, “This is what you shall tell Esau when you find him.²¹ And say as well, ‘And in fact your servant Jacob is [coming] behind us.’” For he reasoned, “I will win him over with an offering in advance; then, when I face him, he may pardon me.”²² And so the offering went on ahead, while he remained in camp that night.

²³That same night, he got up, took his two wives, his two maidservants, and his eleven children, and crossed at a ford of the Jabbok [river].²⁴ After taking them across the stream, he sent across all that he owned.

²⁵Now Jacob was left alone, and a man wrestled with him until the rise of dawn.²⁶ When [the man] saw that he could not overcome him, he struck Jacob’s hip-socket, so that Jacob’s hip-socket was wrenched as [the man] wrestled with him.²⁷ Then he said, “Let me go; dawn is breaking!” But [Jacob] said, “I will not let you go unless you bless me!”

²⁸The other said to him, “What is your name?” and he said, “Jacob.”²⁹ “No more shall you be called Jacob, but Israel,” said the other, “for you

וְאַנְהָ תַּלְךְ וְלִמְיָ אֱלֹהָ לְפָנֶיךָ: ¹⁹ וְאָמַרְתָּ
לְעֵבֶדְךָ לְיַעֲקֹב מִנְחָ הָוָא שְׁלוֹחָ לְאָדָם
לְעֵשָׂו וְהַנֶּה גַּסְיָהוָא אַחֲרֵינוּ: ²⁰ וַיַּצְאַ גַּם
אַתְּ-הַשְׁנִי גַּם אַתְּ-הַשְׁלִישִׁי גַּם אַתְּ-כָּל-
הַהֲלָכִים אַחֲרֵי הַעֲדָרִים לְאָמַר בְּדָבָר:
הַזָּה תַּדְבְּרוּן אַל-עֵשָׂו בְּמַצְאָכֶם אַתָּה:
²¹ וְאָמַרְתָּם גַּם הַנֶּה עֵבֶדְךָ יַעֲקֹב אַחֲרֵינוּ
פִּירָאָמֵר אַכְפְּרָה פָּנֵיו בְּמִנְחָ הַהֲלָכָת
לְפָנֵי וְאַחֲרֵיכֶן אַרְאָה פָּנֵיו אוֹלֵי יְשֻׁאָ
פָּנֵי: ²² וְתַעֲבֵר הַמִּנְחָה עַל-פָּנֵי וְהַוָּא לְ
בְּלִילָה-הַהֲוָא בְּמַחְנָה:

²³ וַיַּקְם וּבְלִילָה הָוָא וַיַּקְחַ אַתְּ-שְׁתִּי נְשָׁיו
וְאַתְּ-שְׁתִּי שִׁפְחוֹתָיו וְאַתְּ-אַחֲרֵי עַשְׂרֵה יְלִדיָּו
וַיַּעֲבֵר אֹתְ מַעֲבֵר יְבָקָ: ²⁴ וַיַּקְהָם וַיַּעֲבָרָם
אַתְּ-הַנְּחָל וַיַּעֲבֵר אַתְּ-אַשְׁרָלָל:

²⁵ וַיַּוְתַּר יַעֲקֹב לְבָדוֹ וַיַּאֲבַק אִישׁ עַמּוֹ עַד
עַלוֹת הַשָּׁחָר: ²⁶ וַיַּرְא כִּי לֹא יִכְלֶל לוֹ וַיַּגְעַ
בְּכַפְּרִירָכוֹ וַתַּקְעַ פְּפִירָרָק יַעֲקֹב בְּהַאֲבָקוֹ
עַמוֹּ: ²⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר שְׁלַחְנִי כִּי עַלְהָה הַשָּׁחָר
וַיֹּאמֶר לֹא אַשְׁלַחָכָי אִם-בְּרָכַתְנוּ:

²⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר אַלְיוֹ מַה-שְׁמָךְ וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב:
²⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר לֹא יַעֲקֹב יַאֲמֵר עוֹל שְׁמָךְ כִּי
אִם-יִשְׂרָאֵל כִּי-שְׁרִית עַם-אֱלֹהִים וְעַם-

23. eleven children. Heb. y’ladim here must actually refer to “boys” only, because the narrator specifies eleven of them. Dinah, Jacob’s daughter (30:21), is not included in this count. [Apparently the narrator here relates to Jacob’s children in genealogical terms, their being the ancestors of the future tribes of Israel. On women and biblical genealogies, see at 10:1. —Ed.]

25. a man wrestled with him. In Hosea 12:5–6, the prophet states specifically that Jacob “strode with a divine being (elohim); he strode with an angel (malach) and prevailed.” However, here the mysterious being that appears suddenly as Jacob’s adversary is described only as an ish, translated here as “a man,” as is conventional. However, given the flexibility in biblical Hebrew of the term ish, it can mean a challenging figure that need not be human but could be divine.

27. “I will not let you go unless you bless me!” Jacob insists that the struggle lead to blessing.

29. “Israel.” The original meaning of this two-part name cannot be stated definitively. In most cases, el is a noun meaning “God,” but sometimes it has a more general sense of “divine” or “superlative.” Also unclear is whether el is subject or object of the name’s verbal portion, which itself is ambigu-have struggled with God and with human beings, and you have prevailed.”³⁰ Then Jacob asked, “Pray tell me now your name.” But he said, “Why do you ask my name?” And then he took his leave of him.

³¹Jacob therefore named that place Peni’el—“For I have seen God face-to-face, yet my life has been spared.”³²The sun shone on him as he was leaving Penu’el, and he was limping on account of his thigh.³³To this day that is why the people of Israel do not eat the thigh muscle that is in the socket of the hip, because he struck Jacob’s hip-socket at the thigh muscle.

33 When Jacob was looking into the distance, he beheld Esau coming with his four hundred men, so he divided the children among Leah, Rachel, and the two maids.²He placed the maids

ous. Thus this name can be construed as “he struggles with God,” or “God struggles,” or “God rules,” or “his struggle is mighty,” and more. The present story turns on the first of those possible meanings.

A name change often signifies a change in character. Jacob is no longer simply the “deceiver/supplanter” (27:36). Abraham and Sarah have their names changed permanently and consistently (Genesis 17); Jacob, on the other hand, will be called both Jacob and Israel after this name change.

“struggled with God.” Or “...with divine beings” (compare Judges 13:22). It is not clear whether this statement is intended literally to describe the recent wrestling match, or figuratively in reference to Jacob’s general life circumstances.

31. Peniel—“For I have seen God face-to-face.” Explaining the place name as if it meant “face of God” (p’nei-el), suggesting that Jacob understands his overnight struggle as a direct encounter with God. [Because the Bible—as in the ancient Near East generally—considers the actions of messengers to be largely inseparable from the principal who sent them, Jacob may perhaps be referring to an encounter with a divine messenger as agent. —Ed.]

32. Jacob leaves the encounter with a serious

עֲנָשִׂים וַתֹּוֹכֶל: ³⁰ וַיְשַׁאַל יַעֲקֹב וַיֹּאמֶר
הָגִיד-הִנֵּא שְׁמְךָ וַיֹּאמֶר לִפְנֵה זוּה תְּשַׁאֲל
לִשְׁמֵי וַיֹּברֶךְ אֶת-זֶה שֵׁם:

31 וַיֹּקְרַא יַעֲקֹב שֵׁם הַמָּקוֹם פְּנַיָּל בַּיּ
רָאִיתִי אֱלֹהִים פָּנָים אֶל-פָּנָים וַתִּנְצַל
נֶפֶשִׁי: ³² וַיַּרְחַלְלֵוּ הַשְׁמָשׁ בְּאַשְׁר עָבָר
אַת-פָּנוֹאֵל וְהַוָּא צָלָע עַל-יְרֻכּוֹ: ³³ עַל-בְּן
לְאִיָּאָבְלוּ בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל אַת-גִּיד הַנְּשָׁה
אֲשֶׁר עַל-כַּף הַיְרָךְ עַד הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה כִּי נִגְעָ
בְּכַף-יְרָךְ יַעֲקֹב עַל-כַּף הַנְּשָׁה:

לג וַיָּשַׁאַל יַעֲקֹב עַיְנָיו וַיֹּרֶא וְהַנֶּה עָשָׂו בָּא
וְעַמּוֹ אֶרֶבֶע מִאּוֹת אִישׁ וַיַּחַז אֶת-הַיּוֹלְדִים:
עַל-לְאָה וְעַל-רְחֵל וְעַל שְׁתֵּי הַשְׁפָחוֹת:
² וַיִּשְׁם אַת-הַשְׁפָחוֹת וְאַת-יְלִידֶיהָן רָאשָׁה injury. He thus sets out to meet his brother while physically limping and vulnerable, but with new internal strength.

33. the people of Israel do not eat the thigh muscle. This dietary restriction is not mentioned in the laws of kashrut in either Leviticus 11 or Deuteronomy 14:3–21. It is presented as a matter of ethnic identification rather than of ritual purity.

THE BROTHERS RECONCILE (33:1–20)

1–2. After his encounter with God, Jacob turns back to the confrontation with his brother, Esau. He divides the women and children, situating the women most likely according to personal preference: maids and their children first, then Leah and her children, and then, Rachel and Joseph—his favorites—in back. The status of Jacob’s sons depends apparently upon their mothers’ favor with Jacob, not their birth order or even their personalities. Joseph is the only child specifically cited. These spatial and narrative details spotlight Jacob’s preference of Rachel, an attitude that later proves to undermine harmony within the household.

and their children in front, Leah and her children next, with Rachel and Joseph last.³ He himself went on ahead of them and bowed down to the ground seven times as he approached his brother.

⁴Esau, though, ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck and kissed him. And they burst into tears.

⁵When Esau looked around and saw the women and the children, he said, “Who are these? Yours?” [Jacob] answered, “The children with whom God has favored your servant.” ⁶Then the lesser wives with their children approached and bowed down; ⁷Leah, too, approached with her children and bowed down; afterward, Joseph and Rachel approached and bowed down.

⁸Esau said, “What, is all this camp that I came across yours? ” And Jacob replied, “Yes, [it is all meant] to find favor in the sight of my lord.” ⁹Esau said, “I have an abundance, my brother; let what is yours be yours.” ¹⁰Jacob said, “No, please, if I have truly found favor in your sight, take the offering from my hand; for to see your face is like seeing the face of God; and you have [already] shown me favor. ¹¹Please accept my gift of blessing that has been presented to you; God has been gracious to me, and I have all [that I need].” [Jacob] kept on pressing him until [Esau] accepted.

¹²[Esau] then said, “Let us start on our way. I will go at your side.” ¹³But [Jacob] answered, “My lord knows that the children are delicate, and that I have to think about the sheep and cattle that are nursing. If they drive them hard a single day, the small cattle will perish! ¹⁴Let my lord go on ahead of his servant; as for myself, let me proceed on my way at my own pace, [following] the footsteps of וְאַתִּלֵּאָה וַיְלֹאֵה אֶחָרִים וְאַתִּרְחָל

וְאַתִּיוֹסֶף אֶחָרִים: ³ וְהִוא עֹבֵר לִפְנֵיכֶם
וַיִּשְׁתַּחַוו אֶרְצָה שְׁבֻע פְּעָמִים עַד־גַּשְׁתָּו:
עֲד־אֲחָיו:

⁴וַיַּרְא עַשְׂוֹ לְקַרְאָתוֹ וַיַּחֲבֹלְהוּ וַיַּפְלֵל עַל־
צְוָאוֹ צְוָאוֹ וַיַּשְׁקַׁחַו וַיַּבְכּוּ:

⁵וַיִּשְׁאַל־עִזִּינוֹ וַיַּרְא אֶת־הַנְּשִׁים וְאַתִּ
הַילְּדִים וַיֹּאמֶר מֵי־אֱלֹהָה לְךָ וַיֹּאמֶר
הַילְּדִים אֲשֶׁר־חִנַּן אֱלֹהִים אֶת־עֲבָדָךְ:
⁶וַתִּגְשַׁן הַשְּׁפָרוֹת הַנָּה וַיְלִיחַ
וַתִּתְחַזֵּן: ⁷וַתִּגְשַׁן גַּמְלָאָה וַיְלֹאֵה
וַיִּשְׁתַּחַוו וְאַחֲרֵ גַּשְׁיָה יוֹסֵף וְרָחֵל וַיִּשְׁתַּחַוו:

⁸וַיֹּאמֶר מַי לְךָ בֶּל־הַמְּחַנָּה הַזֹּה אֲשֶׁר
פָּגַשְׁתִּי וַיֹּאמֶר לִמְצָא־חַן בְּעִינֵי אֲדֹנֵי:
⁹וַיֹּאמֶר עַשׂו יְשָׁלֵי רָב אָדוֹן וְהִי לְךָ אֲשֶׁר־
לְךָ: ¹⁰וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב אֶל־נָא אֶמְדָּא מִצְאָתִי
חָן בְּעִינֵיךְ וְלִקְחָתִ מִנְחָתִי מִידִי כִּי עַל־פָּנֶיךְ
רָאִיתִ פָּנֵיךְ בְּרֹאָת פָּנֵי אֱלֹהִים וּתְרַצְּנִי:
¹¹קָח־נָא אֶת־בְּרָכָתִי אֲשֶׁר הָבָאת לְךָ
בְּיַחַנְנִי אֱלֹהִים וְקִי יְשָׁלֵי־כָּל וַיַּפְצַרְבָּו
וַיַּקְחָ:

¹²וַיֹּאמֶר נִסְעָה וְגַלְכָה וְאַלְכָה לְגַגָּה:
¹³וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹ אֲדֹנֵי יְדַע בִּיהִילְדִים רַבִּים
וְהַצְאָן וְהַבְּקָר עַלוֹת עַלְיָה וְדַפְקּוֹת יוֹם אֶחָד
וּמְרָתוֹ בֶּל־הַצְאָן: ¹⁴וַיַּעֲבֹרְנָא אֲדֹנֵי לִפְנֵי
עַבְדוֹ וְאַנְיָ אַתְּנַהֲלָה לְאַפִּי לְרַגֵּל הַמְּלָאָכה

5. The narrator pointedly relates that Esau asks, “Who are these with you?” only after he has noticed “the women and the children.” Yet Jacob’s reply mentions only “the children,” not the women.

11. “Please accept my gift of blessing.” Literally, “please take my blessing,” which suggests that Jacob is attempting to compensate for having appropriated Esau’s blessing twenty years earlier.

14–15. Jacob wants reconciliation, but not closeness. He tells Esau that he will meet him in one place—but travels to another.

the livestock in front of me and [following] the footsteps of the children, until I catch up to my lord near Seir.”

¹⁵Esau said, “Pray let me then leave behind with you a portion of the force that accompanies me.” But [Jacob] said, “Why should my lord show me such favor?” ¹⁶So that day Esau started back on his way to Seir, ¹⁷while Jacob went on to Succoth, where he built a house for himself and shelters for his livestock; that is why the place was called Succoth.

¹⁸Thus Jacob, in his journey from Paddan-aram, arrived safely in the city of Shechem, in the land of Canaan; he made camp facing the city. ¹⁹He bought the portion of the field where he had pitched his tent from the sons of Hamor, Shechem’s father, for a hundredweight. ²⁰He then set up an altar, calling it El-Elohei-Yisrael.

34 [One day] Dinah, Leah’s daughter whom she had borne to Jacob, went out to see the women of the locality, ²and Shechem son of Hamor the

אֲשֶׁר־לִפְנֵי וּלְרַגֵּל הַיָּלָדִים עַד אֲשֶׁר־אָבָא
אֶל־אָדָן שְׁעִירָה:

¹⁵וַיֹּאמֶר עֲשֵׂו אֲצִינָה־גָּא עַמְּךָ מִן־הָעָם
אֲשֶׁר אָתִי וַיֹּאמֶר לִמְהָה זוּ אֶמְצָא־חַן
בְּעִינֵי אָדָן: ¹⁶וַיֵּשֶׁב בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא עַשְׂו
לְדִרְכּוֹ שְׁעִירָה: ¹⁷וַיַּעֲקֹב נָסַע סְפֻתָּה וַיַּבְנֵן
לֹו בֵּית וּלְמִקְנָהוּ עֲשָׂה סְפִתָּה עַל־בֵּן קָרָא שֶׁם־הַמָּקוֹם סְפּוֹת: ס

¹⁸וַיָּבֹא יַעֲקֹב שָׁלֵם עִיר שָׁכֵם אֲשֶׁר בָּאָרֶץ
בָּנָעַן בְּבָאוֹ מִפְּדוֹן אָרָם וַיַּחַן אֶת־פְּנֵי הָעִיר:
¹⁹וַיַּקְרֵן אֶת־חַלְקַת הַשָּׂדָה אֲשֶׁר נִטְהַשָּׁם
אֲהַלְוֹ מִיקְרָב בְּנֵי־חַמּוֹר אֲבִי שָׁכֵם בָּמָה
קָשִׁיטה: ²⁰וַיַּצְבִּישָׁם מִזְבֵּחַ וַיַּקְרָא־לֹו אֱלֹהִי יִשְׂרָאֵל: ס

לְד וַתֵּצֵא דִינָה בֶּת־לְאָה אֲשֶׁר יָלְדָה
לְיַעֲקֹב לְרֹאות בְּבּוֹנוֹת הָאָרֶץ: ²וַיַּרְא אָתָה

Dinah and Shechem

SEX AND SOCIAL STATUS (34:1–31)

Dinah, acting independently and of her own initiative, goes out to visit “the women of the locality.” In the span of just two verses, the local Hivite prince, Shechem, spots Dinah, has sex with her, falls in love with her, and wants to marry her. Her brothers react violently and destroy Shechem and his city.

Dinah’s status and her standing in society steadily decline as the story progresses. She moves from fulfilling the proper role in the proper place (virgin-daughter in father’s house) to a socially ambiguous role with no proper corresponding physical place. Her story serves as a warning in the larger—and probably overriding—issue of the political and ethnic identity of the Israelites in relation to the other people in the land.

Throughout the story, Dinah’s location corresponds directly to her perceived position in society and illustrates the precarious state of the daughter in biblical Israel. Though she seems free to move about, she is not secure anywhere. One need only consider the plight of Jephthah’s daughter in Judges 11, the concubine in Judges 19, and the daughters of Shiloh in Judges 21, to get the message that women, or at least daughters, are vulnerable to calamity when they “go out.”

RAPE? (34:1–4)

A crucial question for modern interpreters is whether or not Dinah was raped. When considering the modern concept of rape—characterized by an aggressive act and lack of mutual consent—there

Hivite, the local prince, saw her; he took her and lay her down and raped her.³ He was then capti-

שָׁבֵם בֶּן-חִמּוֹר הַחֲנִי נְשִׂיא הָאָרֶץ וַיַּקְרֹב
אֶתְּה וַיַּשְׁכַּב אֶתְּה וַיַּעֲבֹד :³ וַתַּדְּבֹק נְפָשָׁו is little question as to what happens to Dinah; the author tells us that Shechem saw her, took her, lay with her, and humiliated her. To us, this string of verbs screams “rape” (and is in fact even translated that way in v. 2). The assumption made by most interpreters is that Dinah did not consent to the sexual act. However, the question of consent, so central to the modern notion of rape and of women’s rights in general, is entirely ignored in this text. Dinah’s consent is not the issue. The ambiguity of the Hebrew verbs describing Shechem’s actions toward Dinah compounds the difficulty of interpretation.

If we contemporary interpreters are sensitive to the ancient context in which the story was recorded, we need to entertain the possibility that there is a fundamental difference between our modern concept of rape and what may represent rape in the biblical text. In our society, forcing a woman to have sex against her will is seen as terrible both for its emotional and psychological consequences, and for the humiliation and debasement suffered by the woman as an individual. The Bible, even in its rape laws, was primarily concerned with the juridical and social-status consequences of the tort involved in sleeping with a virgin without either marrying her or compensating her father. As with adultery, the problem was not treated as an emotional or psychological one. When Amnon rapes Tamar in II Samuel 13, the violation that has taken place is made clear when Tamar begs Amnon not to reject her but to request her for his wife. It is his rejection subsequent to the sexual act that damages Tamar’s life the most, because as an unmarried non-virgin princess, she has completely lost status in her society. In contrast to Tamar, Dinah is not granted a voice in the story; instead, her body and life form a site for settling issues between men.

If Shechem marries Dinah after having sex with her, she would have full status as a wife in his household. The story, however, aims at excluding such a union with the other peoples in the land. Thus Jacob ignores his obligation to protect the women of his household when he does not subsequently negotiate Dinah’s marriage to Shechem. (For a different perspective on this episode, see Another View, p. 202.)

1. Dinah, Leah’s daughter. Dinah is introduced as the daughter of Leah, the wife that Jacob did not want. (On the status of offspring as a function of Jacob’s favoring Rachel, see at 33:1–2.)

Dinah is referred to as “daughter” seven times in this story. See also at v. 4, s.v. “girl.”

went out to see the women of the locality. Dinah goes out of her father’s house to a public space, literally “to see the daughters of the land.” Dinah seems free to leave, but she does so at her own risk. She is going out to “see” her peers, but she is ultimately “seen”—with dramatic consequences. Nowhere in the text is she criticized for her action.

2. Shechem. The name both of the prince and of the settlement (today’s Nablus). In the book of Joshua, this locale becomes the site of a special covenant ceremony for the Israelites (Joshua 24). Later it rivaled Jerusalem; this rivalry may account for the hostility with which the city is portrayed in the present story.

he took her and lay her down and raped her. Interpretive debates about the story and its import revolve around the meaning of the word innah, here rendered as “rape.” The meaning of the other verbs as well is both affected by, and in turn influences, how one interprets the actions involved in this episode.

Deuteronomy 22 contains several laws about sexual offenses with terminology similar to what appears here. From the usage in Deuteronomy one can conclude that innah means “violate,” not vated by Jacob's daughter Dinah and, falling in love with the young woman, spoke tenderly to the young woman.⁴ So Shechem said to his father Hamor, "Obtain this girl for me as [my] wife."

⁵ At the time that Jacob heard that his daughter Dinah had been defiled, his sons were in the field with his livestock, so he kept quiet until they came back. ⁶ Shechem's father Hamor now went to Jacob to speak with him,⁷ and meanwhile Jacob's sons had returned from the field. When they heard, the men were grieved and became extremely angry, for he had committed an outrage against Israel by ברִינָה בְּתִיְעַקְבָּן וַיַּאֲהַב אֶת־הַנֵּר הַפְּעֻרָה וַיֹּדְבֵּר עַל־לֵב הַנֵּר הַגְּעֻרָה: ⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר שָׁבָם אֶל־חַמּוֹר אֶבְיוֹ לְאמֹר קָח־לִי אֶת־הַיִלְדָּה הַזֹּאת לְאִשָּׁה:

⁵ וַיַּעֲקֹב שָׁמַע כִּי טָמֵא אֶת־דִינָה בָּתוֹ וּבָנָיו הַיּוּ אֶת־מִקְנָהוּ בְּשָׂדָה וְהַחֲרֵשׁ יַעֲקֹב עָדָי בָּאָם: ⁶ וַיֵּצֵא חַמּוֹר אֶבְיוֹשָׁבָם אֶל־יַעֲקֹב לְדָבָר אֹתוֹ: ⁷ וּבָנָיו יַעֲקֹב בָּאוּ מִן־הַשָּׂדָה כְּשֶׁמְעַם וַיַּתְעַצְּבוּ הָאָנָשִׁים וַיִּחַר לָהֶם

"rape" (22:23–24). The expression "he took hold of her" is apparently the one used for rape in Deuteronomy (22:25) as well in the Tamar/Amnon story (II Samuel 13:14)—and it is not used here in the present verse. Consequently, the word innah should not be translated as rape, and what happened to Dinah certainly should not be understood as an act of rape in the modern sense of the word. Rather, the term demonstrates in this passage, as elsewhere, a downward movement in a social sense, meaning to "debase" or "humiliate" (Genesis 16:6). Though an affront to the woman's family, the term does not carry with it the psychological and emotional implications for the woman that the contemporary notion of rape suggests. In this particular text, the woman has no voice, and the narrator has no interest in whether or not she consented to the sexual act. Bear in mind that according to ancient Near Eastern mores, Dinah would have been considered to have been disgraced even if she had consented.

4. "girl." Heb. yaldah; literally, "a (female) child," which suggests that she is rather young. Similar terms such as bat (daughter) and naara (girl or young woman) appear repeatedly in this passage (see at v. 1). Taken together, these descriptors suggest that Dinah's youth was relevant to the events that follow.

"girl...wife." Heb. yaldah...ishah. The transition from childhood to adulthood (for ishah can also mean "woman") is brought on by a change in status involving sexual relations.

BROTHERS' INTERPRETATION: AN OUTRAGE AGAINST ISRAEL (34:5–24)

Jacob hears what has happened to Dinah and, somewhat uncharacteristically, waits until the return of his sons. There is irony here in that on the Canaanite side the son (Shechem) goes to his father (Hamor) to negotiate on his behalf, while Jacob remains silent throughout the entire story until v. 30, when he chastises his sons for having made trouble for him in his new land.

5. defiled. Heb. timei, indicating that Dinah's status has changed for the worse. Other forms of this word are used in Leviticus for "pollution" or "impure," a condition that can be temporary (as in 11:44; 15:31; 18:20). Something defiled can often be rendered pure with proper ritual purification. In the case of Dinah, it appears that marriage to Shechem could potentially change her status from "defiled" to "pure."

7. an outrage against Israel. The sons are angry because of the "outrage against Israel." The only "Israel" in this story is Jacob himself; but he is not the one outraged. Rather, it is his sons, the B'nei Yisrael, who are affected and who take action in response.

lying with Jacob's daughter—such things were not done.

⁸Hamor now spoke with them, saying, “My son Shechem has set his heart on your daughter; pray give her to him to be [his] wife. ⁹Make marriages with us—give us your daughters and you yourselves take our daughters. ¹⁰Live among us and the land will be before you; settle and trade here and acquire property here.” ¹¹And Shechem said to [Dinah’s] father and brothers, “Let me but find favor in your sight, and I will give you whatever you ask. ¹²Exact from me bridal money and gifts to excess, yet I will pay whatever you demand of me; only give me the girl to be [my] wife!”

¹³The sons of Jacob answered Shechem and his father Hamor deceptively, speaking thus because he had defiled their sister Dinah. ¹⁴They said to them, “We cannot do this thing, giving our sister to a man who has a foreskin, for this is a shame to us. ¹⁵Only on this condition will we consent to you: if you become like us by having every one of your males circumcised. ¹⁶Then we would give you our daughters and would take your daughters and settle among you and become one people. ¹⁷But if you do not listen to us [and consent] to be circumcised, we shall take our daughter and leave.”

lying with Jacob's daughter—such things were not done. The reason Jacob's sons give for their rage is clearly expressed. The “thing not to be done” is to have sex with Jacob's daughter.

8–17. Hamor now spoke with them. The negotiation occurs only among men. They alone discuss the details involved in changing Dinah's status from unmarried virgin in her father's house to married wife and future mother in her husband's house. The negotiations as stated do not convey Dinah's consent or desire. It is Shechem's wish that was expressed (v. 4), and it is his father's negotiation that now takes place on his behalf.

12. “girl.” Shechem here refers to Dinah as a naara rather than as yaldah (child, girl); see at v. 4.

מִאֵד כִּי־נִבְלָה עֲשָׂה בַּיְשָׁרָאֵל לְשַׁבֵּב אֶת־
בַּת־יְעָקֹב וְכֹן לֹא יִعָשָׂה:

וַיַּדְבֵּר חִמּוֹר אֶתְם לְאָמֵר שָׁכַם בְּנֵי
חִשְׁקָה נִפְשֹׁל בְּבִתְלָם תָּנוּ נָא אָתָה לוֹ
לְאָשָׂה: ⁹ וְהַתְּחִתָּנוּ אָתָנוּ בְּנֹתֵיכֶם תְּתַנְנוּ
לְנָנוּ וְאַתְּבָנְתָנוּ תְּקַחוּ לְכֶם: ¹⁰ וְאָתָנוּ
תְּשַׁבּוּ וְהָאָרֶץ תְּהִי לְפָנֵיכֶם שָׁבּוּ וְסִחְרוּ
וְהָאָחֹזוּ בָּה: ¹¹ וַיֹּאמֶר שָׁכַם אֶל־אָבִיךָ
וְאֶל־אָחִיךָ אָמֵצָא־חַן בְּעִינֵיכֶם וְאַשְׁר
תְּאִמְרֹו אֵלִי אַתָּה: ¹² הַרְבּוּ עַלִי מַאַל מַהְרָה
וַיִּמְתַּן וְאַתָּה נָאשֵׁר תְּאִמְרֹו אֵלִי וְתִנְרַלִי
אֶת־הַנְּעָר הַגְּנֻרָה לְאָשָׂה:

¹³ וַיַּעֲנוּ בְּנֵי־יְעָקֹב אֶת־שָׁכַם וְאַתְּ־חִמּוֹר
אָבִיו בְּמִרְמָה וַיַּדְבֵּרוּ אֲשֶׁר טָמֵא אֶת דִּינָה
אֲחֹתֶם: ¹⁴ וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֲלֵיכֶם לֹא נָכַל
לְעַשׂוֹת הַקָּבָר הַזֶּה לְתֵת אֶת־אֲחֹתֶנוּ
לְאִישׁ אֲשֶׁר־לֹא עָרֵל בְּיִחְרָפָה הוּא לְנוּ:
¹⁵ אַךְ־בָּזָאת נִאוֹת לְכֶם אִם תְּהִיוּ כְּמַנוּ
לְהַמְלֵל לְכֶם כָּל־זָכָר: ¹⁶ וְנִתְנָנוּ אֶת־בָּנָתֵינוּ
לְכֶם וְאַתְּבָנְתָנוּ תְּקַח־לְנוּ וְיִשְׁבְּנוּ אֶתְכֶם
וְהִיָּנוּ לְעַם אֶחָד: ¹⁷ וְאַסְמַלֵּא תְּשִׁמְעֹו
אַלְיָנוּ לְהַמּוֹל וְלִקְחָנוּ אֶת־בָּתֵּנוּ וְהַלְבָנוּ:

13. deceptively. Heb. b'mirmah; here this word is applied to “Jacob's sons,” a reminder that earlier it referred to Jacob himself (see at 27:35). On subterfuge as a recourse for both women and men who face abuses of authority, see at 27:1–28:9 (introduction).

14–24. Entering into a binding marriage requires both negotiation and sex (not necessarily in that order); so Dinah and Shechem are already halfway there. For their part of the negotiation, the brothers tell Shechem that they cannot give Dinah to him in marriage until he is circumcised. In a surprising move, Shechem is able to convince the males of the town to become circumcised in order to benefit from contact with Jacob's family.

¹⁸Their words seemed good to Hamor and Hamor's son Shechem, ¹⁹and the youth did not delay doing this thing, for he yearned for Jacob's daughter, and he was preeminent in his father's household. ²⁰So Hamor and his son Shechem went to the gate of their city and spoke to their fellow-citizens, saying, ²¹"These people are peaceably disposed toward us; they will settle in the land and trade here; plainly, the land is open wide on every side before them. We will take to wife their daughters and give our daughters to them. ²²But only on this condition have these people agreed to settle among us and become one people: every male among us must be circumcised as they are circumcised. ²³Their livestock and their possessions—all their animals—will be ours; let us consent to them, that they may settle among us." ²⁴All who went out of the city gate listened to Hamor and his son Shechem; and every male, every able-bodied man, was circumcised.

²⁵On the third day, when they were in [the greatest] pain, the two sons of Jacob Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brothers, each took his sword; they went undisturbed into the city and killed every male. ²⁶And they also killed Hamor and his son Shechem by the sword; then, taking Dinah from Shechem's house, they left. ²⁷Jacob's [other] sons went over the slain and plundered the city, whose inhabitants had defiled their sister, ²⁸taking their sheep, their cattle, and their donkeys, and all that

¹⁸ וַיִּטְבּוּ דָבְרֵיכֶם בְּעֵינֵי חָמֹר וּבְעֵינֵי שָׁכֶם בְּנֵי-חָמֹר: ¹⁹ וְלֹא-אַחֲרֵ הַגּוֹעַל לְעַשׂוֹת חָדָבָר כִּי חָפֵץ בְּבַת-יַעֲקֹב וְהַוָּא נְכַבֵּד מִכֶּל בֵּית אָבִיו: ²⁰ וַיָּבֹא חָמֹר וּשְׁכֶם בֶּןּוּ אֶל- שַׁעַר עִירָם וַיַּדְבְּרוּ אֶל-אֲנָשִׁי עִירָם לְאמֹר:

²¹ הָאָנָשִׁים הָאֶלְهָ שְׁלֹמִים הֵם אָתָנוּ וַיִּשְׁבּוּ בָּאָרֶץ וַיִּסְתְּחֻווּ אֹתָהּ וְהָאָרֶץ הַגָּהָה רְחַבְתִּיךְ יְדֵיכֶם לְפִנֵּיכֶם אֶת-בְּנֹתֶם נַקְחָלְנוּ לְנָשִׁים וְאֶת-בְּנֹתֶינוּ נַתְנָן לְהֶם: ²² אֲרָ בָּזָאת יַאֲתָו לְנוּ הָאָנָשִׁים לְשַׁבֵּת אָתָנוּ לְהַיּוֹת לְעֵם אֶחָד בְּהַמּוֹלֵן לְנוּ בְּלִיזָּבָר בְּאֵשֶׁר הֵם נְמַלִּים: ²³ מִקְנָהֶם וּקְנִינֶם וּכְלָם בְּהַמְתַמֵּת הַלּוֹא לְנוּ הֵם אֶךְ גָּנוֹתָה לְהֶם וַיִּשְׁבּוּ אָתָנוּ: ²⁴ וַיִּשְׁמַעַו אֶל-חָמֹר וְאֶל- שָׁכֶם בֶּןּוּ בְּלִיזָּבָר עִירָוּ וַיָּמֻלוּ בְּלִיזָּבָר כָּל-יִצְאֵי שַׁעַר עִירָוּ:

²⁵ וַיְהִי בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁלִישִׁי בְּהַיּוֹתָם בְּאָבִים וַיִּקְחָו שְׁנֵי-בְנֵי-יַעֲקֹב שְׁמַעוֹן וְלֹוי אֲחֵי דִינָה אֲיַשׁ חָרְבָו וַיַּבְאוּ עַל-הָעִיר בָּطָח וַיַּהֲרֹגו בְּלִיזָּבָר: ²⁶ וְאֶת-חָמֹר וְאֶת-שָׁכֶם בֶּןּוּ הָרְגוּ לְפִיהָרָב וַיִּקְחָו אֶת-דִינָה מִבֵּית שָׁכֶם וַיַּצְאָו: ²⁷ בְּנֵי יַעֲקֹב בָּאוּ עַל-הַחַלְלִים וַיַּבְאוּ הָעִיר אֲשֶׁר טָמֵאוּ אֶחָותָם: ²⁸ אֶת-עַצְנָם וְאֶת-בְּקָרָם וְאֶת-חַמְרֵיכֶם וְאֶת-בָּעֵיר

BROTHERS' REVENGE (34:25–31)

Rather than framing their sister's loss of virginity in the context of marriage, "Jacob's sons" had arranged marriage deceptively (v. 13). Rather than following through with the terms they had negotiated, Simeon and Levi—now also identified as "Dinah's brothers" (v. 25)—exact revenge.

26. taking Dinah from Shechem's house. After her initial encounter with Shechem, Dinah does not return to her father's house. But in Shechem's house, her status is equally problematic as she is not officially his wife. An alien in a foreign household, lacking a negotiated marriage and children, Dinah is literally on the social fringe. Her removal from Shechem's house at this point in the story does nothing to improve the situation. With a voided marriage but the sexual status of wife, there is no acceptable place for her in society.

28–29. The brothers kill all the men but spare women and children, taking them captive instead.

was in the city and in the countryside.²⁹ And all their wealth, their little ones, and their wives, and all that was in the houses, they seized as captives and as spoil.

³⁰Jacob then said to Simeon and Levi, “You have made trouble for me by making me odious to the land’s inhabitants—the Canaanites and the Perizzites. Since I am few in number, they will gather themselves against me and strike at me, and I and my household will be destroyed.”³¹ But they said, “Should he then have been allowed to treat our sister like a whore?”

35 God now said to Jacob, “Get up, go up to Beth El and settle there; erect an altar there to the God who appeared to you when you fled from the presence of your brother Esau.”²Jacob thereupon said to his household and all who were with him, “Get rid of the foreign gods in your midst; purify yourselves and change your clothing.³Let us get moving and go up to Beth El, that I may build an altar there to the God who responds to me in my time of distress, who has been with me on the road that I have traveled.”⁴So they gave Jacob all the foreign gods they were holding and the rings in

וְאַתִּי אֲשֶׁר בְּשָׂרָה לְקֹחָו:²⁹ וְאַתִּכְלִיחֵילָם
וְאַתִּכְלִטְפָּמָל וְאַתִּנְשִׁיחָם שְׁבוֹ וַיְבֹזֵז וְאַתִּכְלִיחֵילָם
כָּל-אֲשֶׁר בְּבַיִת:

³⁰וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב אֱלֹהִים שְׁמֻעוֹן וְאֱלֹהִים
עֲכָרָתָם אֶתְּנִי לְהַבָּאֵשָׁנִי בַּיּוֹם הַחֶרֶב
בְּפָנָעַנִי וּבְפָרָעַנִי וְאַנְיִ מְתִי מִסְפָּר וּנוֹאַסְפָּר
עַלְיִ וְהַבּוֹנִי וּנְשַׁמְדָתִי אַנְיִ וּבִקְתִּי:³¹ וַיֹּאמֶר
הַכְּזֹונָה יִעַשָּׂה אַתִּ אַחֲתָנוּ: פ

לֹה וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֱלֹהִים יַעֲקֹב קְוֹם עַלְיהָ
בֵּית-אָלָה וְשַׁבְּ-שָׁם וְעַשְׂה-שָׁם מִזְבֵּחַ לְאָלָה
הַגְּרָאָה אֲלֵיכָ בְּבָרְחָה מִפְנֵי עָשָׂו אָחִיךָ:²
וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב אֱלֹהִים בֵּית-אָלָה וְאַל כָּל-אֲשֶׁר עָמֹד
הַסְּרוֹר אַתִּ אֱלֹהִי הַגָּנְכָר אֲשֶׁר בַּתְכָלָם
וְהַתְּהָרוֹ וְהַחְלִילָו שְׁמַלְתִּיכֶם:³ וּנְקֻומָה
וּנְעַלָה בֵּית-אָלָה וְעַשְׂה-שָׁם מִזְבֵּחַ לְאָלָה
הַעֲנָה אֶתְּנִי בַּיּוֹם צְרָתִי וַיְהִי עַמְדִי בְּדַרְךָ
אֲשֶׁר חִלְכָתִי:⁴ וַיִּתְנַן אֱלֹהִים יַעֲקֹב אֶת כָּל-אֱלֹהִים הַגָּנְכָר אֲשֶׁר בַּיָּדָם וְאַתִּ הַגּוֹמָם אֲשֶׁר

30. “You have made trouble for me.” Jacob chastises his sons for their violent response (compare 49:5–6), predicting the destruction of his own household as a result.

31. “Should he then have been allowed to treat our sister like a whore?” The brothers choose to view the offer of money in compensation for Dinah’s virginity not as an elevation of her status, but rather as a statement about Dinah’s availability as a prostitute. Their explanation for their behavior makes clear that Dinah herself is not culpable. This position stands in stark contrast to tendencies in the ancient (and modern) world to blame the woman for the family’s shame.

Israel and B’nei Yisrael

COVENANT RENEWAL, DEATH,
AND LIFE (35:1–36:43)

This unit begins with the covenant renewal at Beth El, and then it takes the reader through a transition in Jacob’s life and character. Jacob now plays a more passive role than before, and his sons slowly take over the limelight.

BETH EL AND THE RENAMING OF JACOB/ISRAEL (35:1–15)

4. Jacob’s household buries all the foreign gods and the earrings from their ears—presumably also their ears, and Jacob hid them under the Oak near Shechem.⁵ As they journeyed, the dread of God fell upon the cities around them, so they did not pursue Jacob's clan.

⁶ And Jacob came to Luz in the land of Canaan—that is, Beth El—he and all the folk with him.⁷ There he build an altar, and called that sacred site El of Beth El, for there, in his flight from his brother, God had been revealed to him.⁸ And Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, died and was buried below Beth El under the Oak, so he named it the Oak of Weeping.

⁹ God appeared to Jacob again on his return from Paddan-aram, and blessed him.¹⁰ God said to him, “Jacob is your name; but Jacob are you called no more, for Israel is your name!” Thus [God] named him Israel.¹¹ And God said to him, “I am El Shaddai; be fruitful and multiply. A people and a host of peoples shall come from you, and kings shall go forth from your loins.¹² And the land that I gave to Abraham and to Isaac I will give to you; and to your descendants after you will I give the land.”¹³ And [the presence of God] ascended from him, at that sacred site where [God] had spoken to him.

¹⁴ Jacob set up a monument in that sacred site where [God] had spoken to him, a pillar of stone; he then poured out a libation upon it and anointed it with oil.¹⁵ Jacob named the place where God had spoken to him Beth El.

the t'rafim (household gods) that Rachel stole from her father (31:19). The reason for specifying earrings is not clear. In Exodus 32 (the Golden Calf story) and Judges 8:24–27, earrings are used to fashion an idol.

8. Deborah, Rebekah's nurse. See at 24:59.

died. Rebekah's own death is never mentioned, so it is strange that her nurse's death is worth noting.

the Oak. Presumably a tree near Beth El that served as a landmark. A more famous Deborah—

בְּאֹנוֹנִים וַיַּטְמֵן אֲתֶם יַעֲקֹב תְּחַת הָאָלָה
אֲשֶׁר עַמְּשָׂכֶם: ⁵ וַיָּשַׁעַו וַיַּחֲתַת
אֱלֹהִים עַל־הַעֲרִים אֲשֶׁר סְבִיבָתֵיכֶם וְלֹא
רַדְפּוּ אֶחָרִי בְּנֵי יַעֲקֹב:

⁶ וַיָּבֹא יַעֲקֹב לְוִזָּה אֲשֶׁר בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן הוּא
בֵּית־אָלָה הוּא וְכָל־הָעָם אֲשֶׁר־עָמוֹ: ⁷ וַיַּבְנֵן
שֵׁם מִזְבֵּחַ וַיַּקְרָא לִמְקוֹם אֶל בֵּית־אָלָה
שֵׁם נָגָלוּ אֶלָּיו הָאֱלֹהִים בְּבָרְחוֹ מִפְנֵי
אָחִיו: ⁸ וַתָּמָת דָּבְרָה מִינְקָתָ רְבָקָה וְתַקְבָּר
מִתְּחַת לְבִית־אָלָה תְּחַת הָאָלָן וַיַּקְרָא שְׁמוֹ
אָלָן בְּכוֹת: ⁹

⁹ וַיַּרְא אֱלֹהִים אֶל־יַעֲקֹב עוֹד בְּבָאוֹ מִפְּנֵי
אָרָם וַיְבָרֶךְ אֹתוֹ: ¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר־לּוּ אֱלֹהִים
שְׁמֵךְ יַעֲקֹב לְאִישָׁרָא שְׁמֵךְ עוֹד יַעֲקֹב כִּי
אִסְמִישָׁרָאֵל” וַיְהִי שְׁמֵךְ וַיַּקְרָא אֶת־שְׁמָנוֹ
יִשְׂרָאֵל: ¹¹ וַיֹּאמֶר לוּ אֱלֹהִים אַתְּ אֶל שְׁדֵי
פְּרָה וּרְבָה גּוֹי וּקְהָל גּוֹיִם יְהִי מִמֶּנָּךְ
וּמְלָכִים מְחֻלְצֵיךְ יִצְאֹו: ¹² וְאַתְּ הָאָרֶץ
אֲשֶׁר נָתַתִּי לְאַבְרָהָם וְלִיצְחָק לְךָ אֶתְנָגָה
וְלִזְוֹעָה אֲחוֹתְךָ אֶתְנָגָה אֶתְנָגָה אֶתְנָגָה: ¹³ וַיַּעֲלֵל
מַעֲלָיו אֱלֹהִים בַּמְקוֹם אֲשֶׁר־דִּבֶּר אֹתוֹ:

¹⁴ וַיַּצְבֵּב יַעֲקֹב מִצְבָּה בַּمְקוֹם אֲשֶׁר־דִּבֶּר
אֹתוֹ מִצְבָּת אָבִן וַיִּשְׁרַעֲלֵיהֶنֶּה נֶסֶר וַיַּצְקַע עַלְיהֶ
שְׁמָן: ¹⁵ וַיַּקְרָא יַעֲקֹב אֶת־שָׁם הַמְּלֻקָּם אֲשֶׁר דִּבֶּר אֹתוֹ שֵׁם אֱלֹהִים בֵּית־אָלָה:

the prophet—is also associated with a tree, for she would sit under a palm and render judgment (Judges 4:4–5).

10. “Jacob are you called no more, for Israel is your name!” The story in vv. 9–15 is a doublet on the name change from Jacob to Israel (32:17–33), one of several episodes in the Torah that appear twice in similar form (see the sister/wife story of Abraham and Sarah in Genesis 12 and 20).

¹⁶They then journeyed from Beth El, and there was still some ground to cover before reaching Ephrath, when Rachel went into labor, and her labor was difficult. ¹⁷And as her labor was difficult for her, the midwife said to her, “Don’t be afraid; this one, too, will be a son for you.” ¹⁸And as her life was leaving her—for she was dying—she named him Ben-oni, but his father called him Benjamin. ¹⁹Rachel died and was buried on the road to Ephrath, that is, Bethlehem, ²⁰and Jacob set up a pillar by her burial site; it is the monument at Rachel’s tomb to this day.

RACHEL’S SECOND SON AND HER DEATH (35:16–21)

On the road from Beth El, Rachel dies in childbirth. Earlier, when Laban had charged Jacob with stealing the household gods (Genesis 31), Jacob had countered, “the one with whom you find your gods shall not live” (31:32). It is unclear whether according to the text’s composer(s) Rachel’s death is an unwitting result of Jacob’s rash curse (after all, Laban did not find his household gods). Deaths during childbirth were a widespread phenomenon in the ancient world. Rachel’s demise may implicitly be connected to her former barrenness and desperate attempts to have a child. Ironically, the woman who so longed for children dies in childbirth.

This is one of only two stories in the Bible about such deaths. In the other (I Samuel 4:18–22), a woman’s premature labor is triggered by the shock of Israel’s defeat in war and of the deaths of her father-in-law and husband; and she, like Rachel, dies after naming the child (but see at 30:3).

17. “Don’t be afraid; this one, too, will be a son for you.” Rachel—who embedded her longing for another son already in the name of her first son, Joseph (30:24)—is dying; but her midwife tries to comfort her with the knowledge that she is giving

¹⁶וַיִּסְעוּ מִבֵּית אֶל וַיָּהִי־עֹד כְּבָרְתִּיחָאָרֶץ
לְבוֹא אֲפָרָתָה וַתַּלְךְ רְחִיל וַתַּקְשֵׁ בְּלְדָתָה:
¹⁷וַיָּהִי בְּהַקְשָׁתָה בְּלְדָתָה וַתֹּאמֶר לֵה
הַמִּלְלָתָךְ אֶל־תִּירָאִי כִּי־גַּם־זֶה לְךָ בֵּן:
¹⁸וַיָּהִי בְּצָאת נֶפֶשָׁה כִּי מֵתָה וַתִּקְרָא שָׁמוֹ
בֶּן־אוֹנִי וְאֶבְיוֹ קְרָא־לּוֹ בְּנִימִין: ¹⁹וַתִּמְתַּחַת
רְחִיל וַתִּקְרַב בְּדָרְךְ אֲפָרָתָה הַוָּא בֵּית
לְחַם: ²⁰וַיַּצְאֵב יַעֲקֹב מִצְבָּה עַל־קְבָרָתָה הַוָּא מִצְבָּת קְבָרָת־רְחִיל עַד־הַיּוֹם:

up her life for a living (male) child. A similar attempt at comfort is recorded in I Samuel 4:18.

18. Ben-oni. An ambiguous name that can mean “son of my suffering” or “son of my strength.”

Benjamin. That is, “son of the right [hand].” Perhaps Jacob is changing Rachel’s sense of the futility of her life into an affirmation of her importance to Jacob as his favorite wife.

19. buried on the road to Ephrath, that is, Bethlehem. According to I Samuel 10:2, the tomb of Rachel was in the territory of (or at the boundary of) Benjamin, as might be expected, and not near Bethlehem, which is in Judah. In Jeremiah 31:15, Rachel weeps for her children in Ramah, a city in Benjamin. The later status accorded to Bethlehem under David’s influence might account for the present note that Rachel’s tomb was near Bethlehem. According to the biblical accounts, Rachel is the only one of the four matriarchs not buried in the cave of Machpelah, purchased by Abraham for Sarah (Genesis 23)—which is also Jacob’s final resting place (50:13). Such perpetual separation is sadly ironic, given his intense love for Rachel.

20. Just as he had set up a pillar to commemorate his encounter with God (35:14), Jacob sets up one to mark Rachel’s grave. Although no emotions are expressed here, on his deathbed Jacob will poignantly recall this loss and burial (48:7).

²¹Israel then resumed his journey, and pitched his tent beyond the tower of Eder. ²²Now, while Israel was residing in that area, Reuben went and lay with his father's concubine Bilhah, and Israel heard of it.

The sons of Jacob were twelve in number. ²³Leah's sons were Jacob's first-born Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun. ²⁴Rachel's sons were Joseph and Benjamin. ²⁵The sons of Bilhah, Rachel's maid, were Dan and Naphtali. ²⁶And the sons of Zilpah, Leah's maid, were Gad and Asher. These are the sons of Jacob, born to him in Paddan-aram.

²⁷Jacob came to his father Isaac at Mamre [near] Kiriath-arba (that is, Hebron), where Abraham and Isaac had sojourned. ²⁸The years of Isaac's life came to 180. ²⁹Isaac then breathed his last and died; he

²¹וַיִּשְׁעַט יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּחֲלֹל אֲהָלָה מִתְּהִלָּה לְמִגְּדָל-עֶדר: ²²וַיְהִי בְּשִׁפְנָן יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּאָרֶץ הַהּוּא וַיָּלֹךְ רָאוֹבֵן וַיֵּשֶׁב אֶת-כְּבָלה פִּילְגָּשׁ אָבִיו וַיִּשְׁמַע יִשְׂרָאֵל *בְּזִיהִוּ בְּנֵי-יעָקָב שְׁנִים עֲשֵׂר: ²³בְּנֵי לְאָהָה בְּכֻור יַעֲקָב רָאוֹבֵן וַיִּשְׁמַעְוֹן וְלִיְּנֵי וַיְהִוֵּה וַיִּשְׁכַּר וַיִּשְׁכַּר וַיַּבְלִין: ²⁴בְּנֵי רָחֵל יוֹסֵף וְבְנֵיָם: ²⁵וְבְנֵי בְּלָה שְׁפָחַת רָחֵל הָן וְנַפְתָּלִי: ²⁶וְבְנֵי זַלְפָה שְׁפָחַת לְאָהָ גָּד וְאֲשֶׁר אֱלֹה בְּנֵי יַעֲקָב אֲשֶׁר יַלְדָּלוּ בְּפָדוֹן: ²⁷אַרְם:

²⁷וַיָּבֹא יַעֲקָב אֶל-יִצְחָק אָבִיו מִמְּרָא קָרִיתָה אֶת-אֶרְבָּעָה הוּא חֶבְרוֹן אֲשֶׁר-גָּרַשׁ אָבָרָהָם וַיִּצְחָק: ²⁸וַיְהִי יְמִי יִצְחָק מִצְחָק מִאת שָׁנָה וַיִּשְׁמַנְיִם שָׁנָה: ²⁹וַיָּגֹן עַזְחָק וְלִמְתָּה וַיָּאַסְף וַיָּלֹךְ רָאוֹבֵן וַיֵּשֶׁב אֶת-כְּבָלה פִּילְגָּשׁ אָבִיו וַיִּשְׁמַע יִשְׂרָאֵל.

*For the latter part of this verse, Masoretic tradition also preserves an alternative cantillation pattern:

וַיָּלֹךְ רָאוֹבֵן וַיֵּשֶׁב אֶת-כְּבָלה פִּילְגָּשׁ אָבִיו וַיִּשְׁמַע יִשְׂרָאֵל:

22. Reuben went and lay with his father's concubine Bilhah. Sleeping with one's father's wife was a great offense (Leviticus 18:8; 20:11). It is possible that this is why Bilhah is called a concubine (pilegesh) here, while she appears as "wife" in other instances (see Genesis 37:2). Intercourse with the father's concubine, although a less severe offense than with his wife, is apparently tantamount to a declaration of rebellion against the father. When Adonijah asks for Abishag, the woman who shared David's bed when he was old (I Kings 1:1–4), Solomon takes this as a bid for the throne, and has Adonijah executed for treason (I Kings 2:13–25). Note also Absalom's sleeping with David's concubines as a sign of displacing his father, David (II Samuel 16:22–23).

and Israel heard. As with Dinah in Genesis 34, Jacob takes no immediate action. However, he will bypass Reuben for the birthright in his deathbed blessing (Genesis 49:3–4).

JACOB'S WIVES AND CHILDREN (35:22–26)

The summary list of Jacob's twelve sons is given according to their mothers. Dinah, and any other possible daughters, are omitted. The mothers' mention presumably indicates the relative status of the sons. The mothers are listed in a different order than seen previously. In 33:2, fearing Esau's wrath, Jacob had placed the maids Bilhah and Zilpah and their children first, Leah and her children next, and Rachel and her son closest to the rear. That order reflects their importance to Jacob, from the most to the least expendable. Here, the women's order corresponds to the order in which Jacob married them: Leah; Rachel; Rachel's maid, Bilhah; and Leah's maid, Zilpah.

ISAAC'S DEATH (35:27–29)

Jacob returns to see his father Isaac (who may have been on his deathbed for two decades; 27:1–2, was gathered to his people old and full of years, and his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.

36 This is the line of Esau (that is, Edom). ²Esau took his wives from the daughters of Canaan—Adah daughter of Elon the Hivite and Oholibamah daughter of Anah daughter of Zibeon the Hivite, ³and Basemath, Ishmael's daughter, Nebaioth's sister. ⁴Adah bore Eliphaz to Esau, and Basemath bore Reuel. ⁵Oholibamah bore Jeush, Jalam, and Korah—these are the sons of Esau born to him in the land of Canaan.

⁶Esau took his wives and sons and all the people of his household, his livestock, his cattle, and all his possessions acquired in the land of Canaan, and went to [another] region because of his brother Jacob; ⁷for their wealth was too abundant for them to dwell together; the land where they were staying could not support them both, because of their livestock. ⁸So Esau settled in the hill country of Seir; Esau is [also called] Edom. ⁹This, then, is the line of Esau, progenitor of the Edomites, of the hill country of Seir:

¹⁰These are the names of Esau's sons: Eliphaz son of Adah, Esau's wife; Reuel son of Basemath, Esau's wife. ¹¹The sons of Eliphaz were Teman, 31:41). Nothing is said about his mother Rebekah, whose death is never reported. Isaac dies and is buried by both Esau and Jacob. This brief report recalls that of Abraham's death and burial (25:8–10). In both cases estranged brothers come together to bury their father. Nothing is recorded as to whether they also bury their differences.

THE LINE OF ESAU (36:1–43)

This section provides the genealogy of Esau's line. Esau's Canaanite wives figure prominently. While the women in Jacob's list above are mentioned only in connection with their sons, Esau's

אֶל-עָמִיו זָקֵן וְשַׁבַּע יָמִים וַיַּקְרֹבוּ אֲתָּה עָשָׂו
וַיַּעֲקֹב בָּנָיו: כ
לו וְאֵלֶּה תַּלְדוֹת עָשָׂו הוּא אֲדֹם: ²עָשָׂו
לְקַח אֶת-נְשָׁיו מִבּוֹנָת בְּנֵעַן אֶת-עֲדָה בְּתָ
אַיָּלוֹן הַחֲתֵי וְאֶת-אֲהַלְיבָמָה בְּתָעֵנָה בְּתָ
צְבָעָן הַחֲנֵי: ³וְאֶת-בְּשָׁמָת בְּתִיזְשָׁמָעָל
אֲחוֹת נְבִיאֹת: ⁴וְתַלְדֵד עֲדָה לְעָשָׂו:
אֶת-אֱלִיפָז וּבְשָׁמָת יְלָדָה אֶת-רְעוֹאָל:
וְאֲהַלְיבָמָה יְלָדָה אֶת-עִשִּׁישׁ יְעוֹשׁ וְאֶת-יְעָלָם וְאֶת-קָרָח אֶלָּה בְּנֵי עָשָׂו אֲשֶׁר יְלָדוֹ
לֹו בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן:
וַיַּקְחֵה עָשָׂו אֶת-גְּנֶשֶׁי וְאֶת-בְּנֵי וְאֶת-בְּנָתָיו
וְאֶת-כְּלִינְפְּשָׁוֹת בֵּיתָו וְאֶת-מִקְנָהוּ וְאֶת-
כָּל-בָּהָמָתוֹ וְאֶת כָּל-קְנֵנוֹ אֲשֶׁר רָכַשׁ
בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן וַיָּלֶךְ אֶל-אָרֶץ מִפְּנֵי יְעָקָב
אֲחָיו: ⁵פִּיהָיוָה רְכוּשָׁם קָבַד מִשְׁבַּת יְחִידָוָה
וְלֹא יָכַלְהָ אָרֶץ מִגּוֹרִיחָם לְשַׁאת אֶתְמָ
מִפְּנֵי מִקְנִיהם: ⁶וַיִּשְׁבַּט עָשָׂו בְּהָר שְׁעִיר
עָשָׂו הוּא אֲדֹם: ⁹וְאֵלֶּה תַּלְדוֹת עָשָׂו אֲבִי
אֲדֹם בְּהָר שְׁעִיר:
¹⁰אֶלָּה שָׁמוֹת בְּנֵי-עָשָׂו אֱלִיפָז בְּנֵעָדָה
אֶשְׁתָּה עָשָׂו רְעוֹאָל בְּנִבְשָׁמָת אֶשְׁתָּה עָשָׂו:
¹¹וַיַּהֲיוּ בְּנֵי אֱלִיפָז תִּימָן אָוֹמֶר צָפֹן וְגַעַטְמָ wives are identified by the name and ethnicity of their fathers. Esau acquires power by establishing a series of marriage alliances corresponding to the later relationship of the nation Edom with these other nations. Here the movement of women from the house of their father to the house of their husband serves to establish political and social relations between two groups of previously unrelated men.

The passage's inconsistent genealogies must have been compiled from a variety of sources. The names of Esau's wives in vv. 2–3 do not correspond to the names of his wives given earlier (26:34, 28:9). Prominent in this list are wives Adah, Basemath, Timna, Oholibamah, and Zibeon.

Omar, Zepho, Gatam, and Kenaz.¹² Timna was a concubine of Eliphaz, Esau's son. She bore Amalek to Eliphaz. These were the descendants of Adah, Esau's wife.¹³ And these are the sons of Reuel: Nahath, Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah. These were the descendants of Basemath, Esau's wife.¹⁴ And these were the sons of Oholibamah daughter of Anah daughter of Zibeon, Esau's wife—she bore Jeush, Jalam, and Korah to Esau.

¹⁵ These are the clans of Esau's descendants: the descendants of Eliphaz, Esau's first-born—the clan of Teman, the clan of Omar, the clan of Zepho, the clan of Kenaz;¹⁶ the clan of Korah, the clan of Gatam, the clan of Amalek; these are the clans of Eliphaz in the land of Edom; these are the descendants of Adah.¹⁷ And these are the descendants of Reuel, Esau's son: the clan of Nahath, the clan of Nahath, the clan of Zerah, the clan of Shammah, the clan of Mizzah; these are the clans of Reuel in the land of Edom; these are the descendants of Basemath, Esau's wife.¹⁸ And these are the descendants of Oholibamah, Esau's wife: the clan of Jeush, the clan of Jalam, the clan of Korah; these are the clans of Oholibamah daughter of Anah, Esau's wife.¹⁹ These are the descendants of Esau, that is, Edom, and these are their clans.

²⁰ These are the descendants of Seir the Horite, who dwelt in the land—Lotan, Shobal, Zibeon, Anah,²¹ Dishon, Ezer, and Dishan. These are the Horite clans, the descendants of Seir in the land of Edom.²² The sons of Lotan were Hori and Hemam; Lotan's sister was Timna.²³ And these are the sons of Shobal—Alvan, Manahath, Ebal, Shepho, and Onam.²⁴ And these are the sons of Zibeon—Aiah and Anah. This is the Anah who discovered the hot springs in the wilderness as he was tending his father Zibeon's donkeys.²⁵ And these are the children of Anah—Dishon, and Oholibamah, Anah's daughter.²⁶ And these are the sons of Dishon—Hemdan, Eshban, Ithran, and Cheran.²⁷ And these are the sons of Ezer—Bilhan, Zaavan,

וְקָנָן:¹² וַתִּמְנֻעַ הִיְתָה פִּילֶגֶשׂ לְאֱלֹפִים בְּנֵי
עִשּׂוֹ וַתַּלְדֵּד לְאֱלֹפִים אֶת-עַמְלָק אֶלְהָה בְּנֵי
עֲדָה אֲשֶׁת עָשָׂו:¹³ וְאֶלְהָה בְּנֵי רְעוֹאֵל נְחָת
וּרְוחַ שְׁמָה וּמְזָה אֶלְהָה הַיּוֹ בְּנֵי בְשָׁמָת
אֲשֶׁת עָשָׂו:¹⁴ וְאֶלְהָה הַיּוֹ בְּנֵי אֲהַלְיבָמָה
בְּתִיעָנָה בְּתִצְבָּעָן אֲשֶׁת עִשּׂוֹ וַתַּלְדֵּד לְעָשָׂו
אֶת-יְדִיעָשׂ יְעוֹשׂ וְאֶת-יְעָלָם וְאֶת-קָרְחָה:¹⁵
אֶלְהָה אֱלֹפִי בְּנֵי-עָשָׂו בְּנֵי אֱלֹפִים בְּכָור
עִשּׂוֹ אֱלֹפָה תִּימְן אֱלֹפָה אָוֹמֵר אֱלֹפָה צְפָו
אֱלֹופָה קָנָן:¹⁶ אֱלֹפִק-קָנָה אֱלֹפָה גַּעַתְּמָ אֱלֹפָה
עַמְלָק אֶלְהָה אֱלֹפִי אֱלֹפִים בְּאָרֶץ אֲדוֹם
אֶלְהָה בְּנֵי עֲדָה:¹⁷ וְאֶלְהָה בְּנֵי רְעוֹאֵל בְּנֵי
עִשּׂוֹ אֱלֹפָה נְחָת אֱלֹפָה זָרָח אֱלֹפָה שְׁמָה
אֱלֹפָה מְזָה אֶלְהָה אֱלֹפִי רְעוֹאֵל בְּאָרֶץ אֲדוֹם
אֶלְהָה בְּנֵי בְשָׁמָת אֲשֶׁת עָשָׂו:¹⁸ וְאֶלְהָה בְּנֵי
אֲהַלְיבָמָה אֲשֶׁת עִשּׂוֹ אֱלֹפָה יְעוֹשׂ אֱלֹפָה
יְעָלָם אֱלֹפָה קָרְחָה אֶלְהָה אֱלֹפִי אֲהַלְיבָמָה
בְּתִיעָנָה אֲשֶׁת עָשָׂו:¹⁹ אֶלְהָה בְּנֵי-עָשָׂו
וְאֶלְהָה אֱלֹפִים הָוֹ אֲדוֹם:
אֶלְהָה בְּנֵי-שִׁיעָר הַחֲרֵי יְשִׁבְיָה הָאָרֶץ לוֹטָן
וְשׁׁוֹבֵל וְצְבָעָן וְעָנָה:²⁰ וְדִשְׁוֹן וְאֶצְרָן וְדִישָׁן
אֶלְהָה אֱלֹפִי הַחֲרֵי בְּנֵי שִׁיעָר בְּאָרֶץ אֲדוֹם:
וַיַּהֲיוּ בְּנֵי-לוֹטָן חֲרֵי וְהַיִּם וְאַחֲותָה לוֹטָן
תִּמְנָע:²¹ וְאֶלְהָה בְּנֵי שׁׁוֹבֵל עַלְעָן וְמַנְחָת
וְעִיבָּל שְׁפָוּ וְאוֹנָם:²² וְאֶלְהָה בְּנֵי-צְבָעָן
וְאֵיה וְעָנָה הָוֹא עָנָה אֲשֶׁר מֵצָא אֶת-יְהִימָּם
בְּמִדְבָּר בְּרַעֲתוֹ אֶת-הַחֲמָרִים לְצְבָעָן
אֲבִיו:²³ וְאֶלְהָה בְּנֵי-עָנָה דְשָׁן וְאֲהַלְיבָמָה
בְּתִיעָנָה:²⁴ וְאֶלְהָה בְּנֵי-דִישָׁן חַמְקָן וְאַשְׁבָּן
וַיִּתְּרֵן וּבְרָן:²⁵ אֶלְהָה בְּנֵי-אֶצְרָן בְּלָהָן וְעַנְּן and Akan.²⁸ And these are the sons of Dishan—Uz and Aran.²⁹ These, then, are the Horite clans—the clan of Lotan, the clan of Shobal, the clan of Zibeon, the clan of Anah,³⁰ the clan of Dishon, the clan of Ezer, the clan of Dishan; clan by clan, these are the Horite clans in the land of Edom.

³¹ And these are the kings who reigned in the land of Edom, before a king reigned over the people of Israel—³² Bela son of Beor reigned in Edom, and his city's name was Dinhabah.³³ When Bela died, Jobab son of Zerah, of Bozrah, reigned in his place.³⁴ When Jobab died, Husham of the land of the Temanites reigned in his place.³⁵ When Husham died, Hadad son of Bedad, who defeated Midian in the countryside of Moab, reigned in his place; his city's name was Avith.³⁶ When Hadad died, Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his place.³⁷ When Samlah died, Saul of Rehoboth-on-the-River reigned in his place.³⁸ When Saul died, Baal-hanan of Achbor reigned in his place.³⁹ When Baal-hanan of Achbor died, Hadar reigned in his place; his city's name was Pau, and his wife's name was Mehetabel daughter of Matred daughter of Me-zahab.

⁴⁰ These, then, are the names of Esau's clans, by their families, their locations, their names—the clan of Timna, the clan of Alvah, the clan of Jetheth,⁴¹ the clan of Oholibamah, the clan of Elah, the clan of Pinon,⁴² the clan of Kenaz, the clan of Teman, the clan of Mibzar,⁴³ the clan of Magdiel, and the clan of Iram. These are the clans of Edom (that is, of Esau the progenitor of the Edomites) in their settlements in the land they possessed.

39. Mehetabel. [The mention of this woman's mother and her maternal grandparent is unusual, especially since nothing further is known about her—and even less is known about her husband. —Ed.]

ועקן: ²⁸ אלה בְּנֵי־דִּישָׁן עִזִּים וְאַרְן: ²⁹ אֱלֹהָה אֱלֹופִי הַחֲרִי אֱלֹוף לוֹטָן אֱלֹוף שׁוֹבָל אֱלֹוף צְבָעָן אֱלֹוף עַנְהָה: ³⁰ אֱלֹוף דְּשָׁן אֱלֹוף אַצְרָה אֱלֹוף דִּישָׁן אֱלֹהָה אֱלֹופִי הַחֲרִי לְאַלְפֵיכֶם בָּאָרֶץ שְׂעִיר: פ

³¹ וְאֱלֹהָה הַמֶּלֶכִים אֲשֶׁר מָלַכְיו בָּאָרֶץ אֲדֻומָּה לְפָנֵי מֶלֶךְ־מֶלֶךְ לְבָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: ³² וַיִּמְלֹךְ בָּאָדָום בֶּלַע בֶּן־בָּעוֹר וְשֵׁם עִירָוּ דְּנַהֲבָה: ³³ וַיִּמְלֹת בֶּלַע וַיִּמְלֹךְ תְּחִתְיָו יוֹבֵב בֶּן־זִרְוחַמְבָּצְרָה: ³⁴ וַיִּמְלֹת יוֹבֵב וַיִּמְלֹךְ תְּחִתְיָו חַשְׁמָמָרָאָרֶץ הַתִּימָנִי: ³⁵ וַיִּמְלֹת חַשְׁמָמָרָאָרֶץ וַיִּמְלֹךְ תְּחִתְיָו הַדָּד בֶּן־בָּרוֹד הַמִּפְּכָה אֶת־מִדְּין בְּשֵׁדָה מוֹאָב וְשֵׁם עִירָוּ עֲוִית: ³⁶ וַיִּמְלֹת הַדָּד וַיִּמְלֹךְ תְּחִתְיָו שְׁמַלָּה מִמְשְׁרָקָה: ³⁷ וַיִּמְלֹת שְׁמַלָּה וַיִּמְלֹךְ תְּחִתְיָו שָׂאָיל מִרְחָבוֹת הַנָּהָר: ³⁸ וַיִּמְלֹת שָׂאָיל וַיִּמְלֹךְ תְּחִתְיָו בָּעֵל חָנָן בֶּן־עֲכָבָור: ³⁹ וַיִּמְלֹת בָּעֵל חָנָן בֶּן־עֲכָבָור וַיִּמְלֹךְ תְּחִתְיָו הַדָּר וְשֵׁם עִירָוּ פָּעוּ וְשֵׁם אֲשֶׁר־וּמְתַבְּאֵל בַּת־מְתַלְדָּה בְּתִ מִיחְבָּבָה: ⁴⁰ וְאֱלֹהָה שְׁמוֹת אֱלֹופִי עָשָׂו לְמִשְׁפְּחָתָם לְמִקְמָתָם בְּשָׁמָתָם אֱלֹוף תִּמְנָע אֱלֹוף עַלְוָה אֱלֹוף יִתְחָת: ⁴¹ אֱלֹוף אַהֲלִיבָמָה אֱלֹוף אֲלֹהָה אֱלֹוף פִּינָּן: ⁴² אֱלֹוף קָנָן אֱלֹוף תִּימָן אֱלֹוף מְבָצָר: ⁴³ אֱלֹוף מְגַדְיאָל אֱלֹוף עִירָם אֱלֹהָה אֱלֹופִי אֲדֻומָּה לְמִשְׁבָּתָם בָּאָרֶץ אֲחִזּוֹתָם הָוֹא עָשָׂו אֲבִי אֲדֻומָּה: פ

40–43. The concluding list of clans in Esau's line, here identified as Edom, Israel's neighbor, includes women—Timna and Oholibamah—each as the head of a clan.

—Shawna Dolansky

Risa Levitt Kohn

Another View

VAYISHLACH BEGINS AND ENDS with references to Esau, Jacob's twin brother. At the beginning of this parashah, it is to Esau whom Jacob sends messengers (32:4), who return with a report that he is on the move, coming to meet his brother (32:7). The parashah concludes with Esau going to another region "because of his brother Jacob" (36:6–8) and with Esau's genealogical line, the Edomite people (36:9–42).

Esau is thus highlighted in this parashah by being the subject of the beginning and ending units. Even so, Jacob is clearly the more important character—a fate Esau has had to endure from early on. Esau is a touching figure because no matter how hard he tries, he cannot measure up to his younger brother who—though not always honest and fair in his dealings—outmaneuvers him.

What distinguishes the two brothers? How to account for Jacob's prominence over Esau? The difference between the two begins with their mother's decision and continues with their choices of marriage partners. God informs Rebekah—not Isaac—about their yet-to-be-born twins that "the older shall serve the younger" (25:23). Rebekah acts on this information by supporting Jacob at the expense of her other son.

Then Esau marries two Hittite women, causing his parents distress (26:34–35), whereas Jacob is sent (at his mother's instigation) to find a wife from her own people (27:46–28:5), which he does (29:21–30). Attempting to please his parents, Esau tries again by marrying Mahalath, also a cousin like Jacob's wives; she is the daughter of Ishmael, his father's brother (28:8–9).

The Dinah story occurs in the middle, in between the references to Esau that frame this parashah. After Shechem—a Canaanite prince—rapes Jacob's daughter, Jacob is indecisive about their marriage (34:5).

Jacob's prominence over Esau is due to their mother and wives.

Dinah's two oldest full brothers, however, respond by killing all the Shechemites so that the marriage between Dinah and Shechem does not happen, thereby keeping their sister from marrying the people in the land.

Genesis 34 reaffirms the importance of marrying the right people within the family. Together these incidents illustrate the importance of mother and wife, and not only father, in determining a person's destiny.

—Tammi J. Schneider

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

his eleven children (32:23). Benjamin was not yet born, but didn't Jacob already have twelve children? Midrash B'reishit Rabbah 76.9 and 80.4 suggest that Jacob hid Dinah in a box so that Esau would not see her and seek to marry her. On that basis, Jacob is castigated for lack of compassion toward his brother; as Rashi explains, perhaps by such a marriage, Esau would have returned to a path of good (on 32:23).

Dinah, Leah's daughter... went out (34:1). B'reishit Rabbah 80.1 (also 8.12, 18.2, 45.5) and JT Sanhedrin 2:6 (2od) are among numerous sources that judge both Dinah and Leah harshly based on this verse. Both are seen to act inappropriately for women simply by going out unattended—Dinah here, and Leah when she likewise “went out” to inform Jacob, “I am the one you will bed [tonight]” (30:16).

VAYISHLACH

to see the women of the locality (34:1). Pirkei D'Rabbi Eliezer 38 claims that they were a ruse, sent by Shechem to play timbrels outside Dinah's tent, in order to lure her outside—where he could lay hold of her.

then, taking Dinah (34:26). Dinah is mentioned only once more in Torah, among Jacob's descendants in 46:15. What became of her? In B'reishit Rabbah 80.11, Rabbi Huna puts into Dinah's mouth the words of Tamar—King David's daughter who was raped by her half-brother Amnon: “Where will I carry my shame . . . ?” (II Samuel 13:13); he suggests that Dinah agreed to leave Shechem's house only after her brother Simeon promised to marry her himself. Thus—based on her involvement with Shechem—Dinah is identified as the otherwise unnamed “Canaanite woman” who was the mother of Simeon's son Saul (46:10). It was also taught that when she died, Simeon buried her in Canaan.

Dinah became pregnant when raped by Shechem, and she bore a daughter.

Another tradition found in B'reishit Rabbah 19.12 (also 57.4, 76.9, 80.4) and BT Bava Batra 15b, among other sources, is that Dinah became the wife of Job. Some versions of this tradition view Dinah's subsequent marriage to a non-Israelite (namely, Job) as part of Jacob's punishment for having withheld her from Esau (see the first entry, above). Alternatively, Pirkei D'Rabbi Eliezer 38 states that Dinah became pregnant when raped by Shechem, and she bore a daughter. Afraid of the shame that the presence of this child would bring on their community, Dinah's brothers sought to kill the infant. Jacob, however, put an amulet with the name of God around the girl's neck and sent her away; she was taken by the archangel Michael to Egypt, where she was adopted by a childless Egyptian priest and raised as his daughter. Dinah's daughter, “Asenath daughter of Potiphera, priest of On” (Genesis 41:45), later became Joseph's wife. A further embellishment on this legend tells the story as follows: Joseph was exceedingly handsome, and when he went out, women would throw jewelry to attract his notice. Asenath tossed her amulet and when Joseph saw it, he realized their relationship and married her (Chizz'kuni to 41:45).

Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, died . . . and was buried . . . under the . . . Oak of Weeping (35:8). The word bachut, “weeping,” is similar to the plural term b'chiyot, “weepings,” suggesting to the Rabbis that two deaths were being mourned here: the death of Deborah, and the death of Rebekah—an event not otherwise mentioned in the Torah. According to B'reishit Rabbah 81.5, this is why the next verse (35:9) relates that God appeared to Jacob . . . and blessed him: God performed the kindness of visiting and comforting Jacob while he mourned his mother. But why is Rebekah's death not related directly? Midrash Tanchuma, Ki Teitzet 4, explains that it was impossible to have an honorable funeral for her. Abraham was dead; Isaac, blind and weakened, could not leave his tent; and Jacob had gone abroad and could not return in time. Only Esau remained, and the continued ill feeling between him and his mother made it unlikely that he would come. Because Rebekah's life ended in such a lonely way, the Torah hints at her passing only obliquely (see also the medieval commentator Ramban on 35:8).

as her life was leaving her . . . she named him Ben-oni, but his father called him Benjamin (35:18). Commentators generally agree that by the word oni, Rachel meant “my pain” or “my sorrow.” Rabbi Moses ben Nachman (1194–1270)—usually known as “Nachmanides” or by his initials as “Ramban”—notes here that another meaning of oni is “strength,” as in 49:3, in which Jacob blesses Reuben as “first fruit of my vigor (reishit oni).” So too y'min, the right hand, stands for strength in the biblical world. Thus, Jacob does not actually change the name given by Rachel—for all Jacob's children bear names given to them by their mothers—but rather “translates” it to its most positive interpretation.

—Gail Labovitz

• • • • •

Contemporary Reflection

AFTER TWENTY YEARS, Jacob is coming home. Anticipating that the reunion with the brother he cheated all those years ago will be disastrous, he sends messengers laden with presents ahead to his brother. But just to be on the safe side, he divides his camp in order to minimize the losses should he come under attack. The story continues: “That same night, he got up, took his two wives, his two maidservants, and his eleven children, and crossed at a ford of the Jabbok [river]....Jacob was left alone, and a man wrestled with him” (32:23–25). The nocturnal wrestler wounds and blesses him and gives him a new name—our name: Yisrael, one who wrestles with God.

Jacob’s wrestling with God is a powerful image and legacy. We never know with whom Jacob is wrestling: is it himself, his conscience, his brother, God, or all of these parts of himself and of his life? Jacob names the place Peniel, meaning “Face of God,” for, as he states, “I have seen God face-to-face” (32:31). Somehow, alone, separated from his “two wives” and his “eleven children,” Jacob discovers the face of God in his adversary—and Jacob is blessed.

Eleven children cross the river? But Jacob already at this point has twelve children. What about Dinah, his daughter? What happened to her? Rashi, quoting a midrash, explains: “He placed her in a chest and locked her in.” While many commentaries understand that by locking Dinah in a box Jacob intends to protect her from marrying his brother Esau, we know the truth of the story. Hiding Dinah—locking her up—is a powerful image about silencing a woman. And that silence echoes loudly through the rest of the Torah.

What happens next? Dinah gets raped (Genesis 34).

In an ultimate act of silencing, the commentaries understand Dinah’s rape as Jacob’s punishment for withholding her from Esau. Dinah’s rape is Jacob’s punishment? What about Dinah? What has she done? How does she feel? Our text is silent. We only know what her brothers and father think: that she has been defiled (34:5–7), that she must not be treated as a whore (34:31). No one in the Torah or the midrashic accounts asks her what she wants, what she needs, or how she can be comforted.

No one asks Dinah what she wants, what she needs, or how she can be comforted.

Her silence is loud enough to reverberate through the generations. We hear it in the reports of other fathers who perceive their daughter’s rape as their dishonor, their punishment. Fortunately for Dinah, in Genesis the blame and punishment fall entirely on the perpetrator and his people, not on her. Other women are not as lucky. In 1998, in Pakistan, Arbab Khatoon was raped by three men in a village in Jacobabad district. She was murdered seven hours later. According to local residents, she was killed by her relatives for bringing dishonour to the family by going to the police. In 1999, Lal Jamilla Mandokhel, a 16-year-old mentally retarded girl, was reportedly raped several times by a junior clerk of the local government department of agriculture in a hotel in Parachinar, Pakistan. The girl's uncle filed a complaint about the incident with police—who took the accused into protective custody but then handed over the girl to her tribe. The elders decided that she had brought shame to her tribe and that the honor could only be restored by her death; she was killed in front of a tribal gathering.

VAYISHLACH

Similar stories are reported not only in Pakistan but also in Bangladesh, Great Britain, Brazil, Ecuador, Egypt, India, Israel, Italy, Jordan, Pakistan, Morocco, Sweden, Turkey, Uganda—as well as Afghanistan, Iraq, and Iran. No wonder women are silent!

This outrage is only part of a much larger problem of violence against women. For example, according to the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), more than five thousand brides die annually in India because their dowries are considered insufficient. Widney Brown, advocacy director for Human Rights Watch, says that “in countries where Islam is practiced, they’re called honor killings, but dowry deaths and so-called crimes of passion have a similar dynamic in that the women are killed by male family members and the crimes are perceived as excusable or understandable.” The practice, she said, “goes across cultures and across religions.” In the few cases when public outcry around the world and international pressure were used, a woman’s life was spared. But stories that capture the headlines do not begin to address the scope and range of the problem.

Another form that violence takes is sexual slavery and human trafficking, which even happens in Israel. According to a recent Knesset report, thousands of women are illegally smuggled into Israel and sold into sexual slavery. These young women—typically in their early twenties—are raped, abused, incarcerated and threatened, “servicing” 15–25 clients over 14–18 hours a day, 7 days a week. The women become indentured slaves with an ever-growing debt to their owners. Israeli men from all walks of life pay approximately a million visits to brothels per month and the profits from this illicit activity are estimated at $750 million annually. Sexual slavery and human trafficking remain a global problem, taking place in nearly every corner of the world. It is estimated that 600,000–800,000 people—mostly women and children—are trafficked across borders worldwide every year. (For ways to get information—and to get involved in this issue—please contact the Task Force on Human Trafficking through its Web site.)

We hear Dinah’s silence as well in the challenges to reproductive rights happening right now in the United States. If Dinah were raped and became pregnant while living in South Dakota in 2007, she might not be able to get an abortion.

What happens to Dinah in the aftermath of her ordeal? We do not know. We never hear from her, just as we may never hear from the women and girls in our generation who are victims of violence and whose voices are not heard. But the legacy of Jacob as Israel, the one who wrestles, demands that we confront the shadowy parts of ourselves and our world—and not passively ignore these facts. The feminist educator Nelle Morton urged women to hear each other “into speech.” Dinah’s story challenges us to go even further and be also the voices for all of our sisters.

—Laura Geller

Voices

Dinah

Ruth Fainlight

Genesis 34

Holding up my hands in warning,
I want to call, “No! No! Don’t do it!”, to Shechem and Dinah, to Simeon and Levi, but most of all, to every able-bodied male of Hamor’s tribe. “Don’t consent, it’s a trap.”

Swollen tender flesh:

Shechem’s, aching with lust and love
(he told his father, “Get me this damsel to wife”, he “spoke comfortingly unto the damsel”);
Dinah’s broken maidenhead;
Hamor’s guards, weakened by pain,
three days after circumcision.

That was the moment chosen to destroy them, spoil the city, take their flocks and herds, enslave their wives and little ones, while Dinah’s brothers led her back to Jacob’s tents, ancient honour satisfied.

Jacob chided his sons, fearful that Canaanites and Perizzites would now combine against him.
Not until he lay dying
did he curse them for that wild vengeance.
Whether Dinah was saddened by Shechem’s death is never mentioned.

“No, no, don’t do it!”,
I want to call out,
palms upward, heart pounding.
“Choose another future!”
But it’s always too late or too soon.
So much still must happen.
The story has only started.

from Dina’s Own Story

Vanessa Ochs

Genesis 34

Dina tried to imagine having a story of her own to tell, of connections she had made that could widen their world. Her story would make her brothers lean forward with curiosity and jealousy, their elbows on their knees, their faces lit orange by the fire.

What if it were she, and not her father, who had encountered angels of God ascending and descending a ladder? She would have learned the name of each angel. She would have held on to their wings, climbed on their backs, and followed them homeward—and then she’d reciprocate, inviting them to her home. If she could only meet people outside her world, hear their languages, eat their foods, shop for red ribbon in their bazaars, wear their clothes, style her hair as they did. She would make a friend, who would reach for her hand....

The Struggle

Amy K. Blank

Genesis 32:17–33

God: I am that which is not.
Search and you shall find about your universe of thought only my shadow; grasp only to hold the measure of your grip.
So am I God—therefore let go!

Jacob: I will not let you go.

*Leah at Benjamin's *B'rit Milah

Hara E. Person

Genesis 35:16–20

How will I explain to you how all this came to be?

Someday you will ask, and what will I tell you?
My sister, your mother, his beloved—Rachel.
How happy she was, in the midst of that pain,
to bring forth one more son.

How I had gloated, son after son, carrying your brothers past her, complaining loudly about the discomforts of pregnancy,

turning a cold shoulder to her pain.

She had his love, but I had his sons.
One after another they streamed forth out of me,

as I was blessed by God for my suffering.
She dreamed and prayed, day after day,
to have a child.

Finally Joseph arrived.
And then, so many years later, when she thought it was all over,
she grew big with you—oh, Benjamin, her happiness!

But now it is me, standing here today, watching from the tent as the men perform their ritual,

not your mother but me,
and I remember.

I remember how we came together at Joseph's b'rit,

how finding it possible to put aside the hurt and the jealousy,

I walked over to her and held her,
keeping her steady as they prepared the blade.
She wanted to scream but refused to look away and I, the mother of so many sons, tried to comfort her.

And now here I stand, at your b'rit milah, taking her place.

She wanted so much.

She always wanted too much.

Not just her husband's God, but her father's too, just in case.

She wanted everything.

Rachel, my sister, it has always been your face
I see when I look in the mirror.

The Death of Rachel

Shirley Kaufman

Genesis 35:16–20

All day she stirs the soup while the tourists park their cars on the side of the road to visit her tomb. Soldiers stand guard.
Barren women sway in their scarves and pray for a child.
She stirs bitter lumps
from the dry riverbed where the sheep feed on anything that grows. She keeps her eyes on the pot so it won't boil over.

When she stole her father's idols and he chased after them, she sat on the gods. She told him the slit moon under her skirt spilled blood and she couldn't rise.

She's run out of lies.

She has been ready for a long time listening to the calm of the desert between her pains.

She strains till the last one in her forces his dark head out.
She stirs the dust into dust.

Like Rachel

Dahlia Ravikovitch

(transl. Chana Bloch and Chana Kronfeld)

Genesis 35:16–20

To die like Rachel
when the soul shudders like a bird, wants to break free.
Behind the tent, in fear and dread,
Jacob and Joseph speak of her,
all a-tremble.
All the days of her own life turn head over heels inside her like a baby that wants to be born.

How grueling. How Jacob's love ate away at her greedily,
with open mouth.
Now, as the soul takes leave,
she has no use for any of that.

Suddenly the baby screeches and Jacob comes into the tent, but Rachel does not even sense it.
Rapture washes over her face,
her head.

And then did a great repose descend upon her.
The breath of her nostrils would not stir a feather.
They laid her to rest among mountain stones and made her no lament.
To die like Rachel,
that's what I want.

Rachel Cried There for Her Children

Rivka Miriam (transl. Linda Stern Zisquit)

Genesis 35:16–20

Rachel cried there for her children not yet born not yet soft-faced infants whose mothers melt to them.

In the field she stood to the wind, transparent as her shadow,
and her flesh was with the soil.
Joseph and Benjamin already clods and she cried for her children against the hills.
Rachel cried for her children before they knew how to cry before they burst from the dust to return to it.

NOTE

Rachel cried...for her children. Jeremiah 31:15–17.

Timna's Revenge

Sherry Blumberg

Genesis 36:12

Lessen my status,
Deny me as wife
Think you are wise
My hate is my life

And I shall give it Freely to the one
Who will plague you forever
To Amalek, my son

וַיֵּשֶׁב ◆ Vayeishev

GENESIS 37:1–40:23

Trials, Tribulations, and Changing Circumstances

PARASHAT VAYEISHEV (“he settled”) begins the so-called “Joseph story cycle,” which goes on until the end of Genesis. In this first portion, the personal drama of Jacob and his family incorporates questions of national identity and survival outside the Promised Land. The reader follows Joseph’s external and internal journey as he grows through hardships and tribulations from a spoiled son—favored by his father but hated by his brothers—into a wiser youth in an Egyptian jail.

Two stories of a woman and sex stand literally at the center of the parashah. One is the story of Tamar and her father-in-law Judah (Genesis 38), in which she eventually gives birth to two sons, one of whom will be a forefather of King David; in this episode Tamar takes extraordinary risks to secure the family’s future (if not her own) by getting pregnant by her father-in-law. In the second story, the wife of Potiphar—Joseph’s Egyptian master—attempts to seduce Joseph; he resists, she lies about the circumstances, and he is sent to prison (Genesis 39).

The two stories present the men’s behavior as contrasts: Judah eagerly has sex with the veiled Tamar, whereas Joseph resists Potiphar’s wife. (The contrast displays a bias for Joseph tribes as Genesis retrojects a much later, ongoing rivalry between the tribes of Joseph in the north and Judah in the south.) In both cases the text presumes that women can be sexually dangerous to men; but Tamar, unlike Potiphar’s wife, is pronounced righteous for ensuring—by using her body—that Judah’s family is not “written out of history.”

Structurally, the parashah is symmetrical: the first and last episodes portray Joseph in relations to dreams and dream solving. Joseph’s development, the structure suggests, revolves around his dreams, and it is generated by his own actions as well as the behavior of others (his father, brothers, master, Potiphar’s wife). God, though involved, remains in the background.

Two stories of a woman and sex stand literally at the center of the parashah.

These themes surround two stories about a woman’s desire and its consequences. In both, the woman uses a garment to deceive. In both, she furthers the education and development of a man. Yet her actions, while advancing the plot—and the divine plan, so it seems—are not transformational; Judah and Joseph will each have to struggle further to transform self-centeredness into leadership. Tamar’s desire and action are rewarded: she becomes a mother of twins—and is invoked in the book of Ruth within a blessing (4:12). In contrast, the desire of Potiphar's wife remains unfulfilled and she disappears unnamed. (In early Christian interpretation, Jewish post-biblical sources, and Islamic re-tellings including the Qur'an [sura 12], she endures as a symbol of the dangerous foreign woman.)

—Athalya Brenner

Outline—

I. JOSEPH THE DREAMER

His Journey from Home to Slavery in Egypt (37:1–36)

II. AN INTERLUDE: TAMAR AND JUDAH

Judah Is Educated through Deception and Sex (38:1–30)

- A. Introduction: Judah and his family (vv. 1–5)
- B. Tamar loses her husbands and position (vv. 6–11)
- C. Tamar evolves from victim to agent: deception, sex, and pregnancy (vv. 12–23)
- D. Tamar is vindicated: trial, birth, and education (vv. 24–30)

III. JOSEPH AND MADAM POTIPHAR

Sex and Deception (39:1–23)

- A. Joseph succeeds in Potiphar's house (vv. 1–6)
- B. Joseph resists seduction (vv. 7–12)
- C. Madam Potiphar lies and Joseph is arrested (vv. 13–20)
- D. Conclusion: Joseph succeeds in jail (vv. 21–23)

IV. JOSEPH'S EDUCATION CONTINUES

The Dream Interpreter in Jail (40:1–23)

37:1

Jacob now settled in the land of his father's sojourning, in the land of Canaan.

²This is the family history of Jacob: when Joseph was 17 years old, he would tend the flock alongside his brothers; he was an attendant along with the sons of Bilhah and Zilpah, his father's wives, and Joseph would bring malicious reports about them to their father. ³Yet Israel loved Joseph better than his other sons, for he was to him the son of his old age; he therefore made him a coat of many colors. ⁴When his brothers saw that he was

וַיֵּשֶׁב יַעֲקֹב בָּאָרֶץ מִגּוֹרֵת אָבִיו בָּאָרֶץ
לְבִנְעֵן :

2 אָלֶה וְתַלְדוֹת יַעֲקֹב יוֹסֵף בֶּן־שְׁבֻע־עֲשָׂרָה
שָׁנָה דַּיְהָ רֶעוּה אֶת־אָחָיו בְּצָאן וְהָוָא נָעַר
אֶת־בְּנֵי בְּלֹהָה וְאֶת־בְּנֵי זִלְפָה נָשֵׁי אָבִיו:
וַיַּבְאֵ אַיִלְעָמֵד אֶת־יְוָסֵף אֶת־זְבָתָם רָעָה אֶל־אָבִיהם:
3 וַיַּשְׂרַאֲל אֶחָב אֶת־יְוָסֵף מִכְלָבְנֵיו בַּיּוֹם
בְּנִזְקָנִים הוּא לוֹ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה לוֹ בְּתִנְתָּה פְּסִים:
4 וַיַּרְאֵו אֶחָיו כִּי־אָתָּה אֶחָב אֶבְיָהֶם

Joseph the Dreamer

HIS JOURNEY FROM HOME TO SLAVERY IN EGYPT (37:1–36)

1. Jacob now settled. The opening lines begin with Jacob. However, the subject is really Joseph, whose mother Rachel—beloved by his father—had died upon giving birth to Benjamin (35:16–20).

2. sons of Bilhah and Zilpah. These sons of Jacob's secondary wives seem less valued than the sons of Leah and Rachel. Joseph's young age (seventeen) and his status as an eleventh son would justify his family status as similar to theirs.

3. Israel. That is, Jacob. Even after receiving this new designation (32:29; 35:9–15), he continues to be known by both names.

he was to him the son of his old age. This is the reason given for Jacob's favoring Joseph, although the younger Benjamin would have been a better candidate for that. No reason is given, although presumably this reflects Jacob's intense love for Rachel, Joseph's (and Benjamin's) deceased mother.

coat of many colors. Or “long tunic.” The book of Samuel uses the same expression for the garment worn by Tamar, daughter of King David, who tears it after her half-brother Amnon rapes her. It may have been an external marker of her status as a royal virgin daughter (II Samuel 13:18–19). That is, this garment functions as a symbol of its wearer's special status. (Compare the role of a garment in Tamar's and Madam Potiphar's stories, below.)

4. his brothers saw. Jacob's other sons have two reasons for hating Joseph: he is a telltale, and he is his father's favorite—as they can see, all the time, by looking at his distinctive attire.

► Potiphar's wife serves as a test in the initiation of Joseph, the young wisdom hero.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 226

► Tamar herself was mindful of the important role her descendants would later play.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 226

► Spousal loss should not force anyone into desperate acts.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 228

► Rachel sits in the tent / and gathers each curl... / of her little daughter Joseph....

VOICES ► 230

the one their father loved, more than any of his brothers, they hated him and could not bear to speak peaceably to him.

⁵Joseph dreamt a dream [one time], and when he told it to his brothers, they hated him all the more. ⁶He said to them, “Do hear this dream that I dreamt! ⁷There we were, tying up sheaves of wheat in the field, when my sheaf rose up and stood up straight! Your sheaves then paraded in a circle around mine and bowed down to my sheaf.” ⁸His brothers said to him, “Are you so certain you will reign over us? Do you really expect to rule us?” So they hated him all the more for his dreams and for his words.

⁹He dreamt yet another dream and recounted it to his brothers, saying, “Look now—I have dreamt another dream, and look: the sun, the moon, and eleven stars were bowing down to me.” ¹⁰But when he recounted it to his father and his brothers, his father rebuked him, saying, “What is this dream that you dreamt? Your mother, your brothers, and I—must we really come to bow down to the ground before you?” ¹¹His brothers detested him, but his father kept the matter in mind.

¹²And when his brothers went to tend their father’s flock at Shechem, ¹³Israel said to Joseph, “Surely your brothers are tending the flock at Shechem [by now]. Come, let me send you to them.” He answered, “Here I am!” ¹⁴Israel then said to him, “Pray go see how your brothers are, and how the flock is doing, and bring me back word.” So he sent him from the valley of Hebron and he came to Shechem.

¹⁵[There] a man happened on him as he was wandering in the countryside. The man asked him:

5–11. Two dreams of Joseph about his forthcoming dominance over other members of his family exacerbate the enmity.

10–11. Jacob chides Joseph for his dream but fails to defuse the situation.

מִבְּלַעַד אֶחָיו וַיֵּשְׁנָאו אֹתוֹ וְלֹא יִכְלֹו דָבָר
לְשָׁלֵם:
⁵וַיְחִלֵּם יוֹסֵף חֲלוֹם וַיֹּגֶד לְאֶחָיו וַיּוֹסֵפוּ
עוֹד שָׁנָא אֹתוֹ: ⁶וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיכֶם שְׁמֻעוּ
נָא הַחֲלוֹם הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר חָלַמְתִּי: ⁷וְהִנֵּה
אֶנְחָנוּ מְאַלְמִים אֲלָמִים בַּתּוֹךְ הַשָּׂדָה
וְהִנֵּה כִּמָּה אַלְמַתִּי וְגַם נִצְבָּה וְהִנֵּה
תִּסְבִּינָה אַלְמַתִּיכֶם וְתִשְׁתַּחַזֵּן לְאַלְמַתִּי:
⁸וַיֹּאמְרוּ לוֹ אֶחָיו הַמֶּלֶךְ תִּמְלֹךְ עָלֵינוּ
אִם־מְשׁוֹלְתָמָשׁוּ בָּנוּ וַיּוֹסֵפוּ עוֹד שָׁנָא
אֹתוֹ עַל־חֲלָמָתֵיכֶם וְעַל־דָּבָרֵיכֶם:
⁹וַיְחִלֵּם עוֹד חֲלוֹם אַחֲרֵי וַיּוֹסֵפֶר אֹתוֹ
לְאֶחָיו וַיֹּאמֶר הִנֵּה חֲלָמָתִי חֲלוֹם עוֹד
וְהִנֵּה הַשְׁמֶשׁ וְהַיּוֹרֶךְ וְאַחֲרֵי עַשְׁלֵבִים
מִשְׁתַּחַזְקִים לֵי: ¹⁰וַיּוֹסֵפֶר אֶל־אָבִיו וְאֶל־
אֶחָיו וַיַּגְעַר־בָּוּ אָבִיו וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ מִה הַחֲלוֹם
הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר חָלַמְתָּ הַבּוֹא נָבוֹא אַנְיִי וְאַמְתִּיבָּה
וְאֶחָיךְ לְהַשְׁתַּחַזֵּן לְךָ אָרֶץְךָ: ¹¹וַיַּקְנָאָוְבָּוּ
אֶחָיו וְאָבִיו שִׁמְרָא תְּהִדְבֵּר:
¹²וַיָּלִכְוּ אֶחָיו לְרֹאשׁ אֶת־עָאן אֲבִיכֶם
בְּשָׁכְּם: ¹³וַיֹּאמֶר יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶל־יְוֹסֵף הַלֹּא
אֶחָיקֶל רְעִים בְּשָׁכְּם לְכָה וְאַשְׁלַחַךְ אֲלֵיכֶם
וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ הַנֹּנִי: ¹⁴וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ לְרִבְנָא רָאָה
אֶת־שְׁלֹום אֶחָיקֶל וְאֶת־שְׁלֹום הַצָּאן
וְהַשְׁבִּנִי דָּבָר וַיִּשְׁלַחַהוּ מַעַמֵּק חֶבְרוֹן וַיַּבַּא
שְׁכָמָה:
¹⁵וַיִּמְצָא הָאִישׁ וְהִנֵּה תְּעֵה בְּשָׂדָה
וַיִּשְׁאַלְהָוּ הָאִישׁ לִיאָמֵר מַה־תַּבְקַשׁ:

12–30. Jacob again proves to be an ineffective father, for he does not act to protect Joseph—as he did not protect his daughter, Dinah (Genesis 34). Ignoring the tension among the siblings, he sends Joseph to the brothers alone and defenseless.

What are you looking for? ¹⁶He said, “I’m looking for my brothers. Can you tell me please where they are tending the flock?” ¹⁷The man said, “They left this place; yes, I heard them say, Let’s go to Dothan.” So Joseph went after his brothers and found them at Dothan.

¹⁸They saw him in the distance, and before he neared them, they wickedly plotted against him, to bring about his death. ¹⁹They said to one another, “Here comes that master of dreams! ²⁰Now then, let us kill him and throw him into one of [these] pits and say, ‘A wild animal devoured him.’ Then we’ll see what becomes of his dreams!”

²¹But when Reuben heard [this], he saved him from their hands by saying, “Let us not strike him a mortal blow!” ²²Reuben said to them, “Do not shed blood; throw him into this pit, [here] in the wilderness, but do not lay a hand against him”—in order to deliver him from their hands, to restore him to his father. ²³So when Joseph came to his brothers, they stripped Joseph of his coat, the coat of many colors that he had on; ²⁴then they took him and threw him into a pit. The pit was empty; there was no water in it.

²⁵They had sat down to eat, when they looked up and saw a caravan of Ishmaelites traveling from Gilead. Their camels were loaded with laudanum, balm, and mastic; they were heading down to Egypt. ²⁶Judah then said to his brothers, “How will it profit [us] if we kill our brother and cover up his blood? ²⁷Let us [rather] sell him to the Ishmaelites; then our hand will not be on him; after all, he is our brother, our own flesh.” And his brothers heeded [him].

²⁸When the Midianite traders came through they pulled Joseph up out of the pit; they sold

¹⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר אֲתִ-אַחֲרֵי אָנֹכִי מַבְקֵשׁ הַגִּידָה-נִנְאָלֵי אַיִּפָה הַמְּרֻעִים: ¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר הָאִישׁ נָסַעַ מִזֶּה כִּי שְׁמַעְתִּי אָמָרִים נָלַכָה דְתִינָה וַיָּלַךְ יוֹסֵף אַחֲרֵי אֲחֵיו וַיִּמְצָאֵם בְּדָתָן:

¹⁸ וַיַּרְאֵו אָתָה מַרְחָק וּבְטָבֵט יָקַרְבֵ אֲלִיכָם וַיִּתְנַכְלֵל אָתָה לְהַמִּיתָה: ¹⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אִישׁ אֶל-אַחֲיו הַנֶּה בַעַל הַחֶלְמוֹת הַלְלוֹה בָא: ²⁰ וְעַתָה לְכוּ וַנִּהְרְגָהוּ וַנִּשְׁלַכָהוּ בְאַחֲד הַבְּרוֹת וְאִמְרָנוּ חִיה רָעָה אֲכַלְתָהוּ וְנִרְאָה מַה-יִהְיֶה חִלְמָתָיו:

²¹ וַיִּשְׁמַע רָאוּבֵן וַיַּצְלַחַם מִידָם וַיֹּאמֶר לֹא נִכְנְטוּ נֶפֶשׁ: ²² וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-כָּלָם | רָאוּבֵן אֶל-תְשִׁפְכּוֹדֶת הַשְׁלִיכוּ אָתוֹ אֶל-הַבּוֹר הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר בְּמִדְבָר וַיַּד אֶל-תְשִׁלְחוּבוּ לְמַעַן הַצִּיל אָתוֹ מִידָם לְהַשִּׁיבוּ אֶל-אָבִיו: ²³ וַיָּהִי בְּאַשְׁר-בָא יוֹסֵף אֶל-אַחֲיו וַיִּפְשַׂטוּ אֶת-יְוֹסֵף אֶת-בְּתַנְתָה אֶת-בְּתַנְתָה הַפְּסִים אֲשֶׁר עָלָיו: ²⁴ וַיַּקְרַחַו וַיִּשְׁלַכּוּ אָתָה הַבְּרָה וַהֲבֹר רָק אֵין בָו מִים:

²⁵ וַיִּשְׁבּוּ לְאַכְל-לְחֵם וַיִּשְׁאַו עַיְנָהֶם וַיִּרְאֹו וַהֲנָה אֶרְחַת יְשֻׁמְעָלִים בָּאהָ מַגְלָעָד וּגְמַלְיָהֶם נְשָׁאִים נְכָאת וְעַרִי וְלַט הַוּלָכִים לְהַוּרִיד מִצְרִימָה: ²⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוּדָה אֶל-אַחֲיו מִה-בָּצָע כִּי נִהְרָג אֶת-אַחֲינו וְכִסְינו אֶת-זְמָנו: ²⁷ לֹאֹנוֹ וַיִּמְבְּרָנו לִיְשֻׁמְעָלִים וַיַּדְלָנו אֶל-תְּהִיָּבוּ פִּיאָחָינו בְּשָׁרָנו הוּא וַיִּשְׁמַעוּ אַחֲיו:

²⁸ וַיַּעֲבֹרֹ אֶנְשָׁים מִדְיָנִים סְחָרִים וַיִּמְשְׁכוּ וַיַּעֲלִי אֶת-יְוֹסֵף מִן-הַבּוֹר וַיִּמְכְּרוּ אֶת-יְוֹסֵף

18. They saw him in the distance... they wickedly plotted against him. There is some confusion as to the sequence and participants of what follows, when the brothers act against Joseph; perhaps two accounts have been combined. The result, though, is clear. Joseph is taken to Egypt and is enslaved (v. 28).

Joseph for twenty pieces of silver to the Ishmaelites, who carried Joseph off to Egypt.

²⁹Reuben went back to the pit—but Joseph was not there in the pit! He tore his clothes. ³⁰Going back to his brothers, he said, “The boy is not there; where am I to go?”

³¹So they slaughtered a goat, took Joseph’s coat, and dipped the coat in the blood. ³²They carried the coat of many colors and brought it to their father. They said, “We found this; do you recognize it? Is it your son’s coat?” ³³He recognized it, saying, “My son’s coat! A wild animal has devoured him! Joseph has been ripped to shreds!” ³⁴Then Jacob tore his clothes, put sackcloth on his loins, and mourned his son many days. ³⁵His sons and daughters endeavored to console him, but he refused to be consoled, saying, “No, in mourning shall I go down to my son to Sheol!” Thus did his father bewail him.

³⁶Meanwhile, the Medanites sold him to Egypt, to Potiphar, one of Pharaoh’s officers, Captain of the Guard.

לִישְׁמָעָלִים בְּעֶשֶׂרִים כַּסְף וַיְבִיאוּ אֹתָהּ
יְוֹסֵף מִצְרַיִם:

²⁹וַיֵּשֶׁב רָאוּבֵן אֶל-הַבּוֹר וְהִנֵּה אַיִן-יְוֹסֵף
בָּבּוֹר וַיִּקְרַע אֶת-בְּגָדָיו: ³⁰וַיֵּשֶׁב אֶל-אֲחֵי
וַיֹּאמֶר הַיּוֹלֵד אִיְנָנוּ וְאַנֶּنֶּה אֲנִיבָּא:

³¹וַיִּקְרֹחַ אֶת-בְּתִינָת יְוֹסֵף וַיִּשְׁחַטֵּה שָׂעֵיר
עַזְזִים וַיִּטְבְּלֵו אֶת-הַבְּתִינָת בְּדָם: ³²וַיִּשְׁלַׁחַז
אֶת-בְּתִינָת הַפְּשִׁיטִים וַיִּבְיאוּ אֶל-אֲבִיהם
וַיֹּאמְרוּ זֹאת מִצְאָנוּ דָּבָר-נָא הַבְּתִינָת בְּנֵי
הָוָא אִם-לֹא: ³³וַיִּבְרַח וַיִּאמֶל בְּתִינָת בְּנֵי
חִיה רָעָה אֲכַלְתָּהוּ טְרֵף טְרֵף יְוֹסֵף:
וַיִּקְרַע יְעָקֹב שְׁמַלְתָּיו וַיִּשְׁמַע שָׁק בְּמַתְנֵיו
וַיִּתְאַבֵּל עַל-בְּנֵיו יָמִים רַבִּים: ³⁵וַיָּקְמוּ בָּל-
בְּנֵיו וּכְל-בְּנֵתיו לְנַחְמוּ וּמְמַאֵּן לְהַתְנִיחַם
וַיֹּאמֶר קַיְאַד אֶל-בְּנֵי אֲכַל שָׁאָלָה וַיַּגְּזַב
אָתוֹ אָבִיו:

³⁶וְהַמְּדֻבָּרִים מְכֻרָו אָתוֹ אֶל-מִצְרַיִם לְפֹטִיפֶר
סְרִיס פְּרֻעָה שָׁר הַטְּבִיחִים: ב

31–35. Jacob draws his own conclusion about Joseph’s “death” by looking at the garment that signified Joseph’s favorite status, now immersed in a goat’s blood. The goat whose blood stains the tunic recalls the kids’ skins that Rebekah had placed on Jacob to dupe his father, Isaac, into believing Jacob was Esau (27:16). The allusion is unmistakable: Jacob is deceived by his sons in the same manner he deceived his father—for the same practice of favoring a son. A kid will be part of Tamar’s negotiation with Judah in 38:17, yet another play on the same theme.

32. “Is it your son’s coat?” The brothers do not tell Jacob that Joseph is dead—that is, they do not formally lie to him. Instead, they present the fabricated evidence and let him reach his own conclusions. An invitation to recognize items signifying identity is also important later in Tamar’s message to Judah (38:25).

35. he refused to be consoled. This, like his death wish, shows disregard for the rest of the family.

36. At the end of this passage, Joseph is in Egypt as a slave; Jacob is in mourning; and the text gives no sign that Joseph’s brothers feel remorse. Perhaps the family’s dysfunction can be explained by the void left after Rachel’s death (35:16–19). Also Leah is no longer in view and has perhaps died, too. (The text never reports her demise, only that Jacob eventually buried her body in the family’s burial site, the cave at Machpelah; 49:31.)

38 Around that time, Judah parted from his brothers, and fell in with an Adullamite named Hirah.² There Judah saw the daughter of a Canaanite named Shua; he took her [to wife] and coupled with her.³ She became pregnant and bore a son, and he named him Er.⁴ Again she became pregnant and bore a son, and she named him Onan.⁵ Yet again she became pregnant and bore a son, and she named him Shelah; when she gave birth to him, he [Judah] was in Chezib.

לְ וַיָּהִי בְּעֵת הַהּוּא וַיַּרְא יְהוָה מִאת
אֶחָיו וַיַּט עֲדָאֵישׁ עֲדָלָמִי וְשָׁמוֹ חִירָה:
2 וַיַּרְא שָׁם יְהוָה בְּתִ-אִישׁ בְּנָעָנִי וְשָׁמוֹ
שָׁועַ וַיַּקְרַב וַיַּבָּא אֲלֵיכָהּ: 3 וַתַּהַר וַתַּלְדֵּבָן
וַיִּקְרַא אֶת-שָׁמוֹ עֲרָךְ: 4 וַתַּהַר עוֹד וַתַּלְדֵּבָן
וַתִּקְרַא אֶת-שָׁמוֹ אָוָןָן: 5 וַתִּטְסַפֵּע עוֹד וַתַּלְדֵּבָן
וַתִּקְרַא אֶת-שָׁמוֹ שֵׁלהָ וְהִיא בְּכַזְיב
בְּלִדְתָּה אֶת-זֶה:

An Interlude: Tamar and Judah

JUDAH IS EDUCATED THROUGH DECEPTION AND SEX (38:1–30)

Readers who wish to learn what will happen to Joseph must wait, because now Tamar and Judah take center stage. This passage disrupts the plotline—just as Tamar and Judah disrupt each other’s lives—and it even seems to be placed out of chronological sequence. We do not know when these events happen. As some early rabbis and Rashi pointed out, however, this episode has literary (thematic and verbal) links to the episodes that precede and follow it, despite the ostensible interruption. For example, Judah deceives his father in the previous episode and is deceived by Tamar (for a good purpose) here; garments—Joseph’s and then Tamar’s—play a central role in both stories, as status markers as well as vehicles of deceit; and the issue of group survival is present in both. This story also looks forward to the next episode. Tamar’s bold desire and the resulting sexual transgression here is comparable (positively or negatively) with Madam Potiphar’s desire for Joseph in the story that follows, in which a garment again figures prominently.

The present story is part of the ongoing history that leads to King David, founder of Israel’s most illustrious dynasty. According to the Bible, David’s pre-history started when Lot’s daughters, believing that the rest of humankind has been destroyed, deceived their drunken father in order to get pregnant. Two sons, Moab and Ammon, were born (19:25–38). In the second (present) installment, Tamar deceives Judah and gives birth to twins. In the third installment, Ruth the Moabite (a descendant of Lot’s daughter) marries Boaz (a descendant of Tamar’s son Perez), making her the great-grandmother of David. All three stories involve transgression of norms inscribed elsewhere in the Bible. In all three cases a younger female relative prompts a male to engage in a sexual liaison; the woman initiates the action at considerable risk to herself; and the woman dupes the man to some extent. All three cases result in the birth of one or more sons, which signals divine approval and brings benefit to Israel. Although Tamar is not explicitly identified as foreign, the context suggests that she might be. Thus foreign women become mothers of Israel’s most illustrious dynasty.

INTRODUCTION: JUDAH AND HIS FAMILY (38:1–5)

1. Judah seems to be fully integrated in the Canaanite environment.
2. the daughter. On her name, see at v. 12.
- 3–5. Judah’s Canaanite wife is credited with giving birth to three sons for Judah, and with naming the two younger ones.

⁶Judah now took a wife for Er, his first-born; her name was Tamar; ⁷but Er, Judah's first-born, was wicked in the sight of God, and God brought about his death. ⁸Judah then said to Onan, "Couple with your brother's widow, unite with her, and raise up offspring for your brother!" ⁹But Onan knew that the offspring would not be his, so whenever he coupled with his brother's wife, he would waste [his seed] on the ground, in order not to produce offspring for his brother. ¹⁰What he did was wicked in the sight of God, who brought about his death, as well. ¹¹Judah then said to his daughter-in-law Tamar, "Stay as a widow in your father's house until my son Shelah grows up." He thought: "Lest he too die like his brothers." So Tamar went and stayed in her father's house.

TAMAR LOSES HER HUSBANDS AND POSITION (38:6–11)

6. Judah now took a wife for Er. As is common in the Bible, the father finds a wife for his son. (But Hagar takes a wife for her son, 21:21.)

Tamar. The name means "a palm tree," a tree used in the ancient Near East as a royal symbol. The context implies that Tamar is Canaanite, although this is never stated.

7. his death. Er dies without offspring.

8. In agreement with the custom of levirate marriage, Judah gives Tamar to his next son, Onan. In levirate marriage (see at Deuteronomy 25:5–10), the wife of a deceased, childless man bears a son for the dead husband by being impregnated by his living brother. The practice applies when brothers live together. The son of such a union inherits the deceased brother's property. Although this is not stated in the current passage, presumably the son also takes care of his mother, who otherwise—with neither a son nor an inheritance—would have no economic resources apart from what she brought into the marriage.

9. waste [his seed] on the ground. Onan's

⁶וַיִּקְחֶה יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר לְעֵד בְּכֹרָוּ וְשָׂמַחַת
תָּמָר: ⁷וַיְהִי עָרָב בְּכֹר יְהוָה רֹעֶב בְּעִינֵי
יְהוָה וַיִּמְתַּחַוו יְהוָה: ⁸וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה לְאוֹנוֹן
בָּא אֶל-אֲשֶׁת אֲחִיךְ וַיִּבְמֶת אֶתְּתָה וְהַקְמֶת וְרֹעֶ
לְאַחִיךְ: ⁹וַיַּדְעַ אָנוֹן כִּי לֹא לֹז וַיְהִי הַזְּעִיר
וְהִיא אִם-בָּא אֶל-אֲשֶׁת אֲחִיךְ וְשָׁחַת
אָרְצָה לְבָלְטִי נְתַנְּזְרָעַ לְאַחִיךְ: ¹⁰וַיַּרְא
בְּעִינֵי יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה וַיִּמְתַּבֵּט גַּם-אֶתְּתוֹ:
¹¹וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה לְתָמָר בְּלֹתָו שְׁבֵי אֶל-מִנְהָ
בֵּית-אָבִיךְ עַד-יִגְלֶל שְׁלָה בָּנִי כִּי אָמַר פָּנָ
יְמֹתָה גַּם-הִוא בְּאַחִיךְ וְתַלְךָ תָּמָר וְתַשְׁבַּ
בֵּית אָבִיךְ:

"sin" is refusing to impregnate his sister-in-law. His fate does not serve to condemn either masturbation or coitus interruptus, two definitions for "onanism" in English dictionaries. Onan's selfish reasoning is logical (but condemned): he has no interest in producing an heir for his dead brother's (land) portion, which is in the interest of the household's structure but not in his own personal interest.

10. Onan dies because he refuses to cooperate. Like his brother Er before him, Onan is presented as responsible for his own demise. The reader thus knows that Tamar does not cause these deaths.

11. "Stay as a widow." Judah disposes of Tamar by sending her to her father's home while keeping her legally bound to his own. His subterfuge is Shelah's youth. As with Joseph in the previous episode (37:26–27), Judah rids himself of a person whose presence vexes him.

"Lest he too die like his brothers." Judah removes Tamar because he blames her for his sons' death (compare at v. 10). While his reluctance is humanly understandable, his deception of Tamar is objectionable—and will, eventually, incite her to act.

So Tamar went. Tamar is obedient. We learn nothing about Tamar's response or feelings through-¹²Time passed; and Shua's daughter, Judah's wife, died, and [after] Judah was consoled, he went up to his sheepshearers—he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite—toward Timnah. ¹³When Tamar was told, “Look—your father-in-law is going up toward Timnah to shear his sheep,” ¹⁴she discarded her widow's garb, covered herself up with a veil, wrapped herself up, and stationed herself at the entrance to Enaim on the way to Timnah—for she saw that Shelah had grown up, yet she had not been given to him as a wife. ¹⁵When Judah saw her, he took her for a prostitute, for she had covered her face; ¹⁶so he turned toward her on the road and said, “Pray let me couple with you”—he was not

¹² וַיָּרֶבֶי הַיְמִינִים וַתִּמְתַּח בַּת-שׁוֹעֵ אֲשֶׁר-יְהוֹדָה וַיִּנְחַם יְהוֹדָה וַיַּעַל עַל-גּוֹזֵן צָעָנוֹ
הָוָא וַיִּרְאֶה רֵעוֹה הַעֲדָלָמִי תִּמְנַתָּה:
¹³ וַיַּגְדֵּל לְתָמָר לְאמֹר הַנָּהָר חַמִּיר עַלָּה
תִּמְנַתָּה לְגַזְזָעָן צָעָנוֹ: ¹⁴ וַתַּסְרֵר בְּגַנְגִּי
אַלְמָנוֹתָה מַעַלְלִיהָ וַתַּכְסֵס בַּצְעִיק וַתַּתְעַלֵּף
וַתִּשְׁבַּב בְּפַתְח עִזּוּים אֲשֶׁר עַל-דָּרָה תִּמְנַתָּה
בְּרִאַתָּה פִּיגְדֵל שְׁלָה וְהֹא לְאַנְתָּנָה לוֹ
לְאַשָּׁה: ¹⁵ וַיַּרְאֶה יְהוֹדָה וַיִּחְשַׁבָּה לֹזְנוֹה
בְּכֶסֶתְתָה פְּנִיתָה: ¹⁶ וַיַּלְטֵא לְאַלְהָרָה
וַיֹּאמֶר הַבָּהִגָּא אֲבֹא אַלְיָהָ בַּי לֹא יַדְעַ בַּי out these occurrences. She is twice widowed (or at least bereft of a partner) in a short time, denied her third man and thus the possibility of all-important motherhood. Moreover, she loses her place in Judah's household by being sent back to her father but is not released of her duty to this same household. Up to this point, Tamar has no voice but only a passive presence.

TAMAR EVOLVES FROM VICTIM TO AGENT: DECEPTION, SEX, AND PREGNANCY (38:12–23)

Tamar finally takes matters into her own hands and ensures that she will have a child by deceiving her father-in-law Judah into having sex with her. This would be incest according to the stipulation in the book of Leviticus (“you shall not uncover the nakedness of your daughter-in-law,” Leviticus 18:15), and is punishable by death (Leviticus 20:12).

Tamar seems to be motivated by the wish to conceive for Judah's family: she endangers herself, because legally she is bound to Shelah. She deceives Judah by covering herself up—not by pretending to be anything she is not. She, then, falls in with his impulsive cupidity.

12. Shua's daughter. Heb. bat shua, which perhaps should be understood as a proper name (“Bathshua,” akin to Bathsheba); however, her father's name is indeed Shua (v. 2). Like many other wives of named characters in the Bible, she seems to remain unnamed in this story.

Judah's wife, died. This remark might serve as partial justification for Judah's eagerness upon meeting Tamar.

14–15. covered herself up with a veil. Ironically, Judah sees Tamar only when she is covered. Whether a covered face indicated the garb of a prostitute in the ancient Near East is far from certain. That Judah does not recognize Tamar despite the veil—or at least by her voice when they negotiate—is a measure of his eager state. It may also signal a lack of familiarity with his daughter-in-law. She, in fact, does not pretend to anything apart from disarming herself and looking available. She leaves the rest to him. He jumps to the conclusion that she is a prostitute.

14. entrance to Enaim. The phrase is also a pun, meaning “opening of the eyes.” Blind in this very spot to Tamar's plight and presence, Judah's eyes will soon open.

for she saw. Although Tamar's specific plan is not recorded, the incentive for her action is clear: Judah's failure to keep his promise and duty.

aware that she was his daughter-in-law—and she said, “What will you give me to couple with me?”

¹⁷He replied, “I will send you a kid from the flock.”

But she said, “Only if you give [me] a pledge until you send [it].” ¹⁸He asked, “What [sort] of pledge should I give you?” She then said, “Your signet seal, your cord, and the staff in your hand.” So he gave [them] to her and coupled with her—and she became pregnant by him.

¹⁹When he got up and left, she discarded her veil and put on her widow’s garb. ²⁰But when Judah sent the kid by way of his Adullamite friend to redeem the deposit from the woman, he did not find her. ²¹And when he asked the people of her place, “Where is that courtesan, the one at the cross-roads?” they replied, “There wasn’t any courtesan here.” ²²He then returned to Judah and said, “I did not find her; moreover, the people of the place said, ‘There never has been a courtesan here.’” ²³Judah then said, “Let her keep it, lest we become a laughingstock! I did send this kid, though you could not find her!”

כָּלְתוֹ הִוא וַיֹּאמֶר מֵהַתְּתַנְּלֵי כִּי תְּבֹא
אֵלִי: ¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר אֲנַכִּי אֲשַׁלֵּח גְּדִי-עַזִּים מִן-הַצָּאן וַתֹּאמֶר אַס-תְּתַהַן עֲרָבּוֹן עַד שְׁלֹחַ:
¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר מִמָּה הַעֲרָבּוֹן אֲשֶׁר אַתְּ-לָךְ
וַתֹּאמֶר חֲטָמָךְ וַפְתִּילָךְ וַמְשָׁךְ אֲשֶׁר בַּיָּדֶךָ
וַיִּתְּנַלֵּלה וַיָּבֹא אַלְיָךְ וַתָּהַר לֹא:
¹⁹ וַתָּקַם וַתָּלַךְ וַתָּסַר צַעִיפה מַעַלְיךָ
וַתָּלַבֵּשׂ בְּגִדֵּי אַלְמָנוֹתָה: ²⁰ וַיַּשְׁלַח יְהוָה
אֶת-גְּדִי הַעֲזִים בַּיד רֻעָהוּ הַעֲדָלָמִי לְקַחַת
הַעֲרָבּוֹן מִינֶּה הָאֲשָׁה וְלֹא מִצָּאתָה: ²¹ וַיַּשְׁאַל
אֶת-אַנְשֵׁי מִקְמָה לְאָמֵר אֵיתָ הַקְדָּשָׁה הַוָּא
בְּעִינֵיכֶם עַל-הַדָּרֶךְ וַיֹּאמְרוּ לֹא-הִתְהִתָּה בָּזָה קָדְשָׁה: ²² וַיַּשְׁבַּל אֶל-יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר לֹא-
מִצָּאתָה וְגַם אַנְשֵׁי הַמִּקְומָה אַמְרוּ לֹא-
הִתְהִתָּה בָּזָה קָדְשָׁה: ²³ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה תַּקְהַ
לָה פָּנָה נָהִיה לְבֹזֹז הַנֶּהָרֶת שְׁלֹחַתִי הָגִיד הַזֶּה
וְאַתָּה לֹא מִצָּאתָה:

16. she said, “What will you give me to couple with me?” Has Tamar planned to have sex with Judah, as the text at least implies? Or did she have some other encounter in mind—and this is why she has disguised herself? At any rate, when Judah suggests having sex with her as a prostitute, she quickly bargains for her presumed wages. She demands a payment; and even if she had no previous such plan, she is quick-witted enough to devise one now.

18. “Your signet seal, your cord, and the staff in your hand.” Judah characteristically suggests a delayed payment (a kid; see at 37:31–35). Tamar asks for a guaranty: she names Judah’s signet, cord, and staff. In other words, she wants all his identity markers (equivalent today to all of one’s major credit cards; see Robert Alter, The Art of Biblical Narrative, 1981, p. 9). While practical as a guaranty, these items also convey Tamar’s goal of legitimating herself. Surprisingly, Judah agrees to this exaggerated request. Tamar, if she had no plan to conceive a child prior to the encounter, certainly has this possibility in mind at this point. Judah has now surrendered, symbolically, his identity and social status as patriarch to Tamar.

21. “courtesan.” Heb. k’deishah (“hallowed one” or “one apart”), a word related to kadosh (“holy”) and thus translated sometimes as “cult prostitute.” While Judah previously assumes that Tamar is a zonah (prostitute), here his friend inquires using a different term. Some have suggested that cultic prostitution—namely, sexual activities connected to worship in shrines—existed in ancient Israel. But there is no evidence that this ever existed anywhere in the ancient Near East. Judah’s friend may be attempting to add dignity to a simple sexual transaction by giving it a cultic meaning. The present translation presumes that he is using a more genteel term, with no cultic signification implied.

²⁴Then, [after] about three months, Judah was told, “Tamar your daughter-in-law has played the whore; and now she has even become pregnant by whoring.” And Judah said, “Bring her out and let her be burned!”²⁵Brought out she was, but she sent to her father-in-law, saying, “The man to whom these belong made me pregnant. Acknowledge whose signet seal, cords, and staff these are!”²⁶Judah recognized [them] and said, “She is more in the right than I, for certainly I did not give her to my son Shelah.” And he never touched her again.

²⁷When she was giving birth, lo—she had twins in her belly! ²⁸And just as she was giving birth, one put a hand out and the midwife took [it] and tied a

²⁴ וַיְהִי | בָּמֶלֶשׁ חֲדָשִׁים וַיַּגֵּד לְיְהוָה
לִאמֶר זֹנֶת תָּמָר בְּלֹתָר וְגַם הַנֵּה הָרָה
לְזֹנוֹנִים וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה הַזָּכִיר אֶת־
²⁵ הָוָא מָוֹצָאת וְהִיא שְׁלָחָה אֶל־חַמִּיקָה
לְאָמֶר לְאִישׁ אֲשֶׁר־אָלָה לוֹ אָנֹכִי הָרָה
וְתַאֲמֵר הַפְּרָנָא לְמַיִּחְתָּמָת וְהַפְּתִילִים
וְהַמְּטָה הָאָלָה: ²⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר
צְדָקָה מִפְנֵי כִּי־עַל־בָּן לְאַנְתָּךְ לְשַׁלָּה
בָּנִי וְלֹא־יִסְף עוֹד לְדֻעָתָה:
²⁷ וַיֹּהִי בָּעֵת לְדֹתָה וְהִנֵּה תְּאוּמִים בְּבֶטֶן:
²⁸ וַיֹּהִי בְּלֹדֶתָה וַיִּתְנִיד וַיַּקְהֵל הַמִּלְדָת

TAMAR IS VINDICATED: TRIAL, BIRTH, AND EDUCATION (38:24–30)

24. “let her be burned!” Judah’s rash judgment highlights the gender double-standard that the story unmasks and probably critiques. Judah has the right, as head of household, to condemn Tamar to death for her “whoredom,” which is how her pregnancy is seen. The usual biblical punishment for adultery, for both women and men, is by stoning; but Judah demands burning. In the Bible and the ancient Near East, “adultery” concerned only a married woman; and Tamar’s status is still that because, in spite of being sent to her father’s house, the marriage relationship is with the household (Judah’s), not only with the dead husband; and Judah has not released her of this bond (as is possible to do according to the levirate marriage custom, Deuteronomy 25:7–10).

25. Acknowledge. Heb. baker na, the same words that Judah and his brothers had posed to their father when they deceived him (“do you recognize it,” 37:32).

Tamar, discreetly, does not confront Judah but sends his symbols of identity and allows him to draw his own conclusion (as was done to Jacob upon Joseph’s presumed death, 37:32–33). Such an indirect mode is risky but in this case effective; complete silence or a head-on confrontation would have been shameful, perhaps also counterproductive.

26. Judah . . . said, “She is more in the right than I.” Judah recognizes that Tamar has behaved in a more moral fashion than he has. He does not comment on his own unchecked desire, on his having been deceived, or on the sudden prospect of progeny. The phrasing indicates relativization: according to Judah, Tamar is not wholly in the right but is better by comparison with him. Yet this is the first reported occasion where anyone has called Judah to account for his actions; he rises to the occasion by taking responsibility for his earlier words and actions—albeit indirectly. It marks a definite step in his maturation.

he never touched her again. That he has no more sex with Tamar may be another attempt to whitewash his dubious behavior. At any rate, his response limits Tamar’s success: she becomes a mother (of twins) but remains without a (sexual) partner. She saves Judah’s household (and, historically, Israel) but does not transform her own position back into a married woman (as it should have been had Judah given her Shelah as promised).

27–30. Tamar’s vindication by Judah is supplemented by what seems like divine vindication.

crimson thread on its hand, saying, “This one came out first.”²⁹ But when it pulled the hand back, look—its brother came out! So she said, “What a breach you have breached!” And she named him Perez.³⁰ Afterward came his brother on whose hand was the crimson thread, and she named him Zerah.

39 Now Joseph was brought down to Egypt, and Potiphar, one of Pharaoh’s officers, Captain of the Guard, an Egyptian man, purchased him from the Ishmaelites who had brought him down there.² But was with Joseph: he was a man who prospered. Now that he was in the household of his Egyptian master,³ his master saw that was with him, and that was prospering whatever he touched. ⁴ Joseph [therefore] found favor in his sight and ministered to him; he [Potiphar] gave him authority over his household, and placed all that he owned in his hand.⁵ From the time he gave him authority over his household and over all that he owned, blessed the house of the Egyptian

וַתִּקְשֹׁר עַל־יָדָו שְׁנִי לֵאמֹר זֶה יִצְאָ רָאשֶׁנָּה:²⁹ וַיַּהֲיוּ בְּמִשְׁבֵּת יָדָו וְהַגָּה יִצְאָ אָחִיו וְתוֹאמֶר מִה־פְּרִצָּת עַל־יָדָךְ פְּרִזְׁן וַיַּקְרָא שְׁמוֹ פְּרִזְׁן³⁰ וְאַחֲרֵי יִצְאָ אָחִיו אֲשֶׁר עַל־ יָדָו הַשְׁנִי וַיַּקְרָא שְׁמוֹ זְרָח: ס

לֹט וַיֹּסֶף הַוְּרֵד מִצְרִימָה וַיַּקְרָא פָּטוּפֶר סְרִיס פְּרֻעָה שָׁר הַטְּבָחִים אֲישׁ מִצְרַיִם מִיד הַיְשָׁמְעוּלִים אֲשֶׁר הַוְּרֵד הָוֹהֵב שְׁפָה:² וַיַּהֲיוּ יְהֹוָה אֶת־יֹסֶף וַיַּהֲיוּ אֲישׁ מִצְלִיחַ וַיַּהֲיוּ בֵּית אַדְנִיוֹ הַמִּצְרִי:³ וַיַּרְא אַדְנִיוֹ בַּיּוֹתֶר אָתוֹ וּכְלָא אֲשֶׁר־הָוֹא עָשָׂה יְהֹוָה מִצְלִיחַ בַּיּוֹתֶר:⁴ וַיִּמְלֹא יוֹסֶף תָּן בְּעִינֵי וַיִּשְׁרַת אָתוֹ וַיַּפְקַד הָוֹעֵל־בַּיִתּוֹ וּכְלָא־יִשְׁלֹךְ נָתַן בַּיּוֹתֶר:⁵ וַיַּהֲיוּ מִאָז הַפְּקִיד אָתוֹ בְּבִירֹנוֹ וְעַל־כָּל־אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁלֹךְ וַיַּבְרֶךְ יְהֹוָה אֶת־בַּיִתּוֹ

Tamar is amply rewarded for her deeds: she brings twin sons into the world (although she remains a single mother).

29. she said. Most likely the midwife, who has identified the baby and his actions (v. 28).

she named him. [Literally, “[he] named him”; but the verb’s implied subject lacks a clear male antecedent. In such a construction the masculine verb does not necessarily imply a gendered referent; many translations render the verb impersonally: “he was named.” The present translation, however, seems influenced by the fact that in the Bible, it is usually the mother or midwife who names a newborn, and that some ancient translations also state “she named him,” as if that was perhaps the reading in their Hebrew source manuscripts. —Ed.]

Perez. The name means “Breach.” It describes not only the circumstances of his birth, but also, indirectly, of his conception.

Joseph and Madam Potiphar

SEX AND DECEPTION (39:1–23)

The story of Joseph resumes right where it left him in 37:36—brought down to Egypt and sold as a slave there. While much in this narrative remains ambiguous, it does continue the theme of self-definition in relation to the other peoples, this time focusing on the danger awaiting a male Israelite in a foreign land.

JOSEPH SUCCEEDS IN POTIPHAR’S HOUSE (39:1–6)

I. Potiphar. The name of Joseph’s new master resembles Potiphera, the name of the father of Asenath, Joseph’s future wife (41:45). If there is a connection, the Torah does not describe it.

on account of Joseph; the blessing of יהוה was on all that he owned in the house and in the field.⁶ He left all that was his in Joseph's hands and gave no thought to what he had, other than the food he ate.

Now Joseph happened to be fair of form and fair of appearance,⁷ and after all this, his master's wife set her sights on Joseph and said, "Lie with me!"⁸ But he refused, saying to his master's wife, "Look, my master gives no thought to what is in this house; all that he owns he has put into my hands.⁹ There is none greater than I in this house; he has withheld nothing from me, other than you, inasmuch as you are his wife; how then could I do this great evil, and thus sin against God?"¹⁰ And so she would sweet-talk Joseph day after day, but he did not heed her plea to lie by her and be with her.

one of Pharaoh's officers. Heb. s'ris paroh; the noun saris means either "a eunuch" or "an official." Potiphar's wife's attraction to Joseph and her attempted seduction of him (see below) might seem different if her husband were understood to be a eunuch.

2–5. God intervenes directly for the first time in this parashah. And undoubtedly Joseph—as a young man in a strange land—would need this divine help.

6. the food he ate. This might be a playful reference to his wife, given that in v. 9 below, Joseph tells Madam Potiphar that his master has "withheld nothing from me but you."

fair of form and fair of appearance. Literally, "good looking and good to look at." The same words described his mother Rachel in 29:17 (translated there as "beautiful of form and of face"). Implicitly, his beauty would serve as Madam Potiphar's motivation for what follows.

הַמָּצִיר בְּגָלֵל יוֹסֵף וַיְהִי בָּרֶכֶת יְהוָה בְּכָל־אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁלֹׁו בָּבִيت וּבְשָׂדָה: ⁶ וַיַּעֲזֹב כָּל־אֲשֶׁר־לֹׁו בַּיד־יוֹסֵף וְלֹא־יָדַע אֶתְךָ מִאוּמָה כִּי אִם־הַלְּחָם אֲשֶׁר־הָוֹא אָוֶל וַיְהִי יוֹסֵף וַיְפַה־תָּאָר וַיְפַה מִירָאָה: ⁷ וַיְהִי אַחֲרֵי הַדָּבָרִים הָאֲלָה וַתְּשִׁא אֲשֶׁת־אֱדָנָיו אֶת־עִינֵּיהֶlla אֶל־יוֹסֵף וַתְּאמֹר שְׁבָה עַפְני: ⁸ וַיַּמְּאֹן | וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־אֲשֶׁת אֱדָנָיו הַן אֶדָּנִי לְאִידְךָ אָתְּ מִה־בָּבִית וְכָל אֲשֶׁר־יִשְׁלֹׁו בָּתָן בְּקִידִי: ⁹ אַיִלְנוּ גָּדוֹל בָּבִית הַזֶּה מִמֶּנִּי וְלֹא־חִשְׁרָה מִמֶּנִּי מִאוּמָה כִּי אִם־אָוֶת בָּאָשֶׁר אֶת־אֶשְׁתָּו וְאֵיךְ אָעַשָּׂה הַרְעָה הַגָּדְלָה הַזֹּאת וְחַטְאָתִי לְאֱלֹהִים: ¹⁰ וַיְהִי בְּדִבְרָה אֶל־יוֹסֵף יוֹם וַיּוֹם וְלֹא־שָׁמַע אֲלֵיכָה לְשֻׁבְבָּא צָלָה לְהִיוֹת עָמָה:

JOSEPH RESISTS SEDUCTION (39:7–12)

7. set her sights on Joseph. Literally, "lifted her eyes up to Joseph."

Lie with me!" Madam Potiphar falls for Joseph and approaches him with this blatant bid. She is painfully direct. We have no details as to her motivation apart from Joseph's beauty: is it lust only, or love as well? Is her husband a eunuch (see at v. 1), thus justifying her adulterous thought somewhat?

8–9. But he refused. Joseph cites his master's trust and God as the two reasons for his refusal. He does not say whether or not he desires his mistress. Indeed, in the absence of data about her—name, looks, age, and attractiveness are all lacking—we may read his refusal either as lack of interest or, conversely, as control of desire due to loyalty to his earthly and divine masters.

10. she would sweet-talk Joseph day after day. The seduction attempts are still only verbal.

¹¹On one such day, when he came into the house to do his work—and not one of the people of the household was there in the house—¹²she took hold of him by his garment, saying, “Lie with me!” He left his garment in her hand, fled, and ran outside. ¹³When she saw that he had left his garment in her hand and fled outside, ¹⁴she summoned her household servants and spoke to them, saying, “See! He brought us a Hebrew man to toy with us. He came to me to lie with me, and I cried out in a loud voice; ¹⁵when he heard me raise my voice and cry out, he left his garment with me and fled and ran outside!” ¹⁶And she kept his garment with her until his master came home.

¹⁷She spoke to him in this manner, saying, “The Hebrew slave whom you brought to us came

¹¹ וַיְהִי בַּיּוֹם הַזֶּה וַיָּבֹא הַבִּיתָה לְעֲשׂוֹת מְלָאכָתוֹ וְאֵין אִישׁ מִאֱנָשֵׁי הַבַּיּוֹת שֶׁמְבַיִת: ¹² וַתַּתְפְּשֹׂה בְּגַדּוֹ לְאָמֵר שְׁכַבָּה עָמֵי וַיַּעֲזֹב בְּגַדּוֹ בַּיּוֹת וַיַּנְסֵן וַיַּצֵּא הַחוֹצֶה: ¹³ וַיְהִי בָּרוֹתָה קַרְעֹב בְּגַדּוֹ בַּיּוֹת וַיַּנְסֵן הַחוֹצֶה: ¹⁴ וַתִּקְרֹא לְאָנָשֵׁי בַּיּוֹת וַתֹּאמֶר לָהֶם לְאָמֵר רָאוּ הַבִּיא לְנוּ אִישׁ עָבֵר לְצַחֵק בְּנֵו בָּא אַלְיָ לְשַׁכֵּב עָמֵי וְאַקְרָא בְּקוֹל גָּדוֹל: ¹⁵ וַיְהִי כַּשְׁמָעוֹ בִּיהְרִימָתִי קוֹלִי וְאַקְרָא וַיַּעֲזֹב בְּגַדּוֹ אַצְלִי וַיַּנְסֵן וַיַּצֵּא הַחוֹצֶה: ¹⁶ וַתִּנְחַנֵּחַ בְּגַדּוֹ אַצְלָה עַד־בָּוֹא אֲדֹנָיו אֶל־בֵּיתוֹ:

¹⁷ וַתְּדַבֵּר אַלְיָ בְּדָבְרִים הָאֶלְהָ לְאָמֵר בָּאָדָל הַעֲבָרִי אֲשֶׁר־הִבָּאת לְנוּ לְצַחֵק

11. Why does Joseph go inside when no one else is around, when he knows the mistress should be inside and waiting to pursue him, as she does “day after day”? What is the unspecified “work”? And where are all the household members? The text is ambiguous, as is Joseph’s behavior.

12. she took hold of him. For the first time, Madam attempts something physical: she gets hold of Joseph’s garment.

he left his garment in her hand. As when his brothers took his robe (37:23), Joseph here is divested of his garment. This time we have no idea what garment it is, although once again it will be used to deceive.

fled, and ran outside. Joseph votes with his feet, so to speak. His verbal refusal is now backed by action.

MADAM POTIPHAR LIES AND JOSEPH IS ARRESTED (39:13–20)

To protect herself, Madam Potiphar accuses Joseph of intending to or actually forcing himself on her. The woman who kept saying laconically, “Lie with me!” now becomes a great rhetor as well as an accomplished liar. She presents her case skillfully to the menservants and to her husband, emphasizing different things in each instance.

13–15. Somehow the menservants are now available again to Madam. In this, her first version of the story, she enlists their sympathy against an upstart foreign (Hebrew) man, brought in by “him”—her husband.

14. “to toy.” Heb. l’tzachek, which has a sexual connotation—such as when Isaac “toys” with his wife Rebekah, whereby Abimelech understands that the pair is married (26:8, where this verb is translated as “fondling”).

“with us.” She includes the menservants as intended victims. The “us” versus “he” places her on the side of the menservants, against her unnamed husband.

16. She then keeps the garment, presumably as proof of her story.

17. “The Hebrew slave.” In this second version, delivered to the master, she emphasizes Joseph’s slave status.

“whom you brought to us.” Given that no one else seems to be present, the “us” here presumably refers only to her and her husband, thus emphato me to toy with me;¹⁸but when I raised my voice and cried out, he left his garment near me and fled and ran outside!”¹⁹When his master heard his wife’s words, namely, “Your slave did these things to me!” he was enraged.²⁰So Joseph’s master took him and gave him over to the prison, the place where the Pharaoh’s prisoners are kept; and there he remained, in the prison.

²¹Yet was with Joseph, and extended kindness to him, and lent him grace in the prison warden’s sight.²²The prison warden put all the prisoners of the jail in Joseph’s hands, and whatever was done there was his doing.²³The prison warden never saw anything amiss with him, because was with him, and because whatever he did prospered.

40 After all this, the cupbearer of the king of Egypt and the baker offended against their master,

בְּיָהִינְשֶׁם בְּבֵית הַסְּהָר :¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר קֹלֵי וְאַקְרָא וַיַּעֲזֹב בְּגִדְעוֹן אֲצַלְיָה וַיַּנְסֶת הַחֻזְצָה :¹⁹ וַיֹּהִי בְּשָׁמְעָיו אֶדְנֵיו אֲתִידְבָּרִי אֲשֶׁתוֹ אֲשֶׁר דָּבָרָה אֲלֵיכָו לְאָמֵר בְּדָבְרִים הַאֲלָה עֲשָׂה לִי עֲבָדָךְ וַיַּחֲרֹב אֲפָו :²⁰ וַיִּקְחֶה אֲדָנִי יוֹסֵף אֶתְנוֹ וַיַּתְגַּהֲלֵל בֵּית הַסְּהָר מִקּוֹם אֲשֶׁר-אָסְרוּ אֲסִירֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ אֲסּוּרִים וַיֹּהִי-שֶׁם בְּבֵית הַסְּהָר :

²¹ וַיֹּהִי יְהוָה אֲתִידְיּוֹסֵף וַיַּט אֲלֵיכָו חֶסֶד וַיִּתְּנַחֵן בְּעִינֵי שֶׁר בֵּית-הַסְּהָר :²² וַיִּתְּנַחֵן שֶׁר בֵּית-הַטְּהָרָל בִּידְיּוֹסֵף אֶת בֵּל-הַאֲסִירִים אֲשֶׁר בְּבֵית הַסְּהָר וְאֶת בֵּל-אֲשֶׁר עֲשִׂים שֶׁם הוּא הַיְהָ עֲשָׂה :²³ אֵין | שֶׁר בֵּית-הַסְּהָר רָאָה אֲתִידְכָּל-מִאוֹמָה בְּיָדוֹ בְּאֲשֶׁר יְהוָה אֶתְנוֹ וְאֲשֶׁר-הָוָא עֲשָׂה יְהוָה מְצַלְּחָה : פ

מִשְׁקָה מִלְּגָמְצָרִים וְהַאֲפָה לְאֶדְנֵיכָם

sizing Potiphar’s responsibility in this shared concern of wife and husband to uphold the husband’s honor.

“to toy with me.” The “us” from her previous statement is reconfigured as “me.”

19. The wife manages to anger her husband, but we readers remain in the dark: does he believe her? He sends Joseph to prison (v. 20), but this is the royal prison where accused persons await decisions concerning their fate. Potiphar does not punish his wife, which would indicate more clearly that he believes Joseph. The ambiguity remains.

CONCLUSION: JOSEPH SUCCEEDS IN JAIL (39:21–23)

At first it appears that Joseph has merely moved from one pit (in the ground in Canaan) to another (in prison in Egypt). Yet the end of this episode links with its beginning. God again has blessed Joseph; the chief jailer likes him and puts him in charge (vv. 21–22) and leaves “everything” to Joseph’s management. Once again, God makes Joseph “succeed.”

Joseph’s Education Continues

THE DREAM INTERPRETER IN JAIL (40:1–23)

Throughout this concluding unit of the parashah, Joseph grows further in stature. From a callous youth, he becomes a person who cares. He asks two jail mates why they look sad after their dreams and is prepared to help (vv. 7–8). He protests his innocence but forgoes the chance to blame anybody specifically (v. 15). From being a mere dreamer, he becomes a dream interpreter. He is coming closer to the ancient Near East’s “wise man” or “wise courtier” ideal type, which is present also in the portrayals of Mordecai (in the book of Esther) and of Daniel.

the king of Egypt,² and Pharaoh was furious at his two officers, at the chief cupbearer and at the chief baker.³ He placed them under guard in the house of the Captain of the Guard, in the prison, the [very] place where Joseph was confined.⁴ The Captain of the Guard assigned Joseph to them; he waited on them, and they were [some] time under guard.

⁵They dreamt a dream, the two of them—the cupbearer and the baker of the king of Egypt who were held in the prison—each one's dream falling on the same night, each one's dream with its own meaning.⁶ When Joseph came to them in the morning, he saw that they seemed out of sorts.⁷ He asked Pharaoh's officers who were with him under guard, “Why are you so downcast today?”

⁸So they said to him, “We each dreamt a dream, but there is no one to interpret it.” Joseph then said to them, “Surely interpretations are in God's domain; but go ahead and tell them to me.”⁹ The chief cupbearer then recounted his dream to Joseph, saying to him, “In my dream, there was a vine in front of me,¹⁰ and on that vine were three branches. Barely had it budded when its blossoms flowered; its clusters ripened with grapes.¹¹ Pharaoh's cup was in my hand, and I took the grapes and squeezed them into Pharaoh's cup and put the cup in Pharaoh's palm.”

¹²Joseph then said to him, “This is its meaning—the three branches are three days;¹³ in three days' time, Pharaoh will lift up your head and restore you to your post; you shall [again] place Pharaoh's cup in his hand, as you used to do when you were his cupbearer.¹⁴ Only call me to mind when it goes well for you, and keep faith with me: commend me to Pharaoh and get me out of this place!¹⁵ For I was stolen from the land of the Hebrews, and here, too, I did nothing, that they consigned me to [this] pit!”

¹⁵. For the first time, the story depicts Joseph telling someone in Egypt how he came to be there. The version he tells the cupbearer is notable for its heavily edited contents. There is not a word about his brothers, or the events in Potiphar's house. He blames nobody and names no culprit. All he does is ¹⁶When the chief baker saw how well he had interpreted, he said to Joseph, “In my dream, too, look, there were three—baskets of bread on my head,¹⁷and in the topmost basket was every kind of food for Pharaoh, baked goods, and birds eating them from the basket on my head.”

לְמַלֵּךְ מִצְרָיִם : ² וַיַּקְצֹף פְּרֻעָה עַל שְׁנֵי סְרִיסִים עַל שֶׁר הַמְשָׁקִים וְעַל שֶׁר הַאֲוֹפִים : ³ וַיְתַן אֲתָם בָּמִשְׁמָר בַּיּוֹת שֶׁר הַטְּבָחִים אַל-בֵּית הַסְּהָר מִקְּוּם אֲשֶׁר יוֹסֵף אָסָר שָׁם : ⁴ וַיַּפְלֹךְ שֶׁר הַטְּבָחִים אֶת-יוֹסֵף אֲתָם וַיִּשְׂרַת אֲתָם וַיַּהְיֵוּ יָמִים בָּמִשְׁמָר : ⁵ וַיְחִלְמָו חֲלוֹם שְׁנֵיהֶם אִישׁ חָלָמוֹ בְּלִילָה אֶחָד אִישׁ בָּפְתִּירָן חָלָמוֹ הַמְשָׁקָה וְהַאֲפָה אֲשֶׁר לְמַלֵּךְ מִצְרָיִם אֲשֶׁר אֲסֹרִים בְּבֵית הַסְּהָר : ⁶ וַיָּבֹא אֲלֵיכֶם יוֹסֵף בָּבֶקֶר וַיַּרְא אֲתָם וְהַנְּם זָעֲפִים : ⁷ וַיִּשְׁאַל אֶת-סְרִיסִי פְּרֻעָה אֲשֶׁר אֲתָו בָּמִשְׁמָר בַּיּוֹת אֲדֹנָיו לְאמֹר מִזְדַּע פְּנֵיכֶם רְעִים הַיּוֹם : ⁸ וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֶלְיוֹן חֲלוֹם חָלָמוֹ וַיְפַתֵּר אֵין אֲתָה וַיֹּאמְרָ אֲלֵיכֶם יוֹסֵף הַלֹּא לְאֲלֹהִים פָּתְרִים סְפִּירָנָא לֵי : ⁹ וַיַּסְפֵּר שֶׁר הַמְשָׁקִים אֶת-חָלָמוֹ לַיּוֹסֵף וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ בְּחַלּוֹמִי וְהַנְּהַגְּפֵן לִפְנֵי : ¹⁰ וּבְגַפֵּן שֶׁלְשָׁה שְׁרִיגִים וְהַוָּא בְּפִלְחָת עַל-תַּחַת נִצָּה הַבְּשִׁילָה אַשְׁכְּלָתִיהָ עֲנָבִים : ¹¹ וּכֹסֶף פְּרֻעָה בַּיּוֹד וְאַקְחֵה אֶת-הַעֲנָבִים וְאַשְׁחַט אֲתָם אַל-בָּסֶס פְּרֻעָה וְאַתָּה אֶת-הַכּוֹס עַל-כֶּף פְּרֻעָה : ¹² וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ יוֹסֵף זֶה פִּתְרָנוּ שֶׁלְשָׁת הַשְּׁרִיגִים שֶׁלְשָׁת יָמִים הֵם : ¹³ בַּעֲדָה שֶׁלְשָׁת יָמִים יְשַׁא פְּרֻעָה אֶת-רָאשָׁךְ וְהַשִּׁיבָה עַל-בְּנָה וְנִתְתַּחַת כּוֹסֶף-פְּרֻעָה בַּיּוֹד בְּמִשְׁפְּט הַרְאָשׁוֹן אֲשֶׁר דִּין מִשְׁקָהוּ : ¹⁴ כִּי אִמְצַרְתָּנִי אַתָּה כִּאֵשׁ כִּאֵשׁ יְיטַב לְךָ וְעַשְׁיַתְנָא עַמְּךָ חַסְד וְהַזְּכָרָתָנִי אַל-פְּרֻעָה וְהַזְּעַתָּנִי מִן-הַבַּיִת הַזֶּה : ¹⁵ כִּי גַּבְּגַּתִּי מִאָרֶץ הָעָבָרִים וְגַּמְפַּת לְאַזְעַתִּי מִאָוָמה כִּירְשָׁמוּ אַתִּי בְּבוֹר :

¹⁸Joseph then responded, saying, “This is its meaning—the three baskets are three days.¹⁹In three days’ time, Pharaoh will lift your head from your body and hang you on a pole, and birds will eat your flesh from upon you.”

²⁰The third day was Pharaoh’s birthday, and he gave a feast for all his officials. He singled out the chief cupbearer and the chief baker among his officials:²¹He restored the chief cupbearer to his office; [again] he placed the cup in Pharaoh’s palm.²²The chief baker he hanged, as Joseph had interpreted for them.²³But the chief cupbearer did not remember Joseph; [instead] he forgot him.

וַיַּרְא שָׁרֵה אֲפִים כִּי טֹב פָּתָר וַיֹּאמֶר
אֶל-יְוָסָף אָפָּנִי בְּחַלוֹמִי וְהַנֶּה שֶׁלֶשֶׁת
סְלִי חֲרִי עַל-רָאשִׁי: ¹⁷וּבְסֶל הַעֲלִyon מִפְלָ
מְאַכֵּל פְּרֻעה מַעֲשָׂה אֲפָה וְהַעֲוף אֲכֵל
אַתֶּם מִן-הַטְּלִי מִעַל רָאשִׁי:

¹⁸וַיַּעַן יוֹסָף וַיֹּאמֶר זוֹה פְּתָרָנוּ שֶׁלֶשֶׁת
הַסְּלִים שֶׁלֶשֶׁת יָמִים هֵם: ¹⁹בַּעֲזֹד
שֶׁלֶשֶׁת יָמִים יִשָּׂא פְּרֻעה אֶת-רָאשֵׁ
מַעַלְיךָ וַתְּלִיה אֶת-ךָ עַל-עַצְמָךָ וְאַכֵּל הַעֲוף
אֶת-בְּשָׂרֶךָ מַעַלְיךָ:

²⁰וַיֹּהֵי בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁלִישִׁי יוֹם הַלְּדָת אֶת-
פְּרֻעה וַיַּעֲשֶׂה מִשְׁתָּחָה לְכָל-עֲבָדָיו וַיִּשְׂא אֶת-
רָאשׁ | שֶׁר הַמְשִׁקִּים וְאֶת-רָאשׁ שֶׁר
הַאֲפִים בְּתוֹךְ עֲבָדָיו: ²¹וַיִּשְׂבַּע אֶת-שֶׁר
הַמְשִׁקִּים עַל-מִשְׁקָהוּ וַיִּתְּנַחַן הַבּוֹס עַל-קְפָר
פְּרֻעה: ²²וְאֶת שֶׁר הַאֲפִים תָּלה בְּאַשְׁר
פָּתָר לְהֵם יוֹסָף: ²³וְלֹא-זָכַר שָׁרֵה מַשִּׁקִּים
אֶת-יְוָסָף וַיַּשְׁכַּח הָוּ:

establish his innocence so that, upon his restoration, the cupbearer would remember and mention him to the pharaoh. This is also the first time we are told that Joseph actively seeks freedom, or an improvement of his lot, since coming to Egypt.

* * *

From an arrogant and gossipy boy, Joseph has grown into a young man who refuses adultery with his master’s wife, who suffers in prison, who does not tell on his brothers when the opportunity arises. Clearly, he can now exercise control over his own behavior and emotions, which he could not do earlier—and which is a prerequisite for his future role. In addition, from a dreamer he has evolved into a dream interpreter. He is poised to act on dreams to the benefit of all: his adopted land, his own self, and his original family.

—Athalya Brenner

Another View

POTIPHAR'S WIFE AND TAMAR provide two models of the feminine and help to forge the contrasting characterizations of Joseph and Judah.

Potiphar's wife is overtly sensual and verbally aggressive. Like the negative archetype of the feminine in one passage of the book of Proverbs (7:1–23), she tempts the young man into sexual impropriety. Potiphar's wife serves as a test in the initiation of Joseph, the young wisdom hero who refuses to allow a woman to make him unfaithful to his master.

Tamar, a young childless widow, becomes a trickster, a marginal figure who succeeds in indirect ways, by deceiving those in power. The trickster's marginality may be rooted in gender, age, economic or social status. Biblical tricksters include Abraham (Genesis 12:1–10), Jacob (Genesis 27), Rebekah (Genesis 27), and Tamar. Tales of tricksters appeal to the underdog side of each of us, but they may have special appeal among groups who feel themselves out of power—for example, women in a world dominated by men.

In Genesis 38, the qualities of the feminine that limited Tamar become her source of strength. When Judah sends her back to her father with empty promises of giving her his third son in good time, Tamar, like other marginal females in ancient Israelite social structure, is caught betwixt and between social categories available to women—as virgins or as child-producing, faithful wives. Eventually, Tamar takes matters into her own hands. Dressing as a prostitute and standing at the crossroads in a double symbolization of her marginality, she becomes pregnant by Judah. Wisely she has demanded and then kept his pledges, symbols of his identity and status. Judah—who is no more appealing in this tale than in the selling of Joseph—orders that Tamar be burned alive when he hears she is pregnant, dismissing her with two words. But she—clever girl—produces the tokens that identify Judah as the father, and even he must admit he has been bested. Judah, coconspirator in the exile of Joseph, is one of the many biblical males, including Samson, Sisera, and Isaac, who are tricked by women's wiles. It is Tamar's right to bear children in Judah's line, and the twins indicate abundant fertility. She will be the ancestress of kings. Tamar's power is indirect, circumscribed by the realm of procreation and supported by tricksterism. It is a power, nevertheless, that is celebrated in the biblical tale.

The qualities of the feminine that limited Tamar become her source of strength.

—Susan Niditch

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

Around that time (38:1). Pondering why the story of Joseph is interrupted by events in the life of his brother Judah, the Rabbis draw our attention to the pivotal roles women play in the lives of both men.

Midrash B'reishit Rabbah 85.2 explains that Judah's and Joseph's adventures are juxtaposed “to bring the stories of Tamar and Potiphar's wife into close proximity, in order to teach that as the former was actuated by a pure motive, so was the latter. For Rabbi

VAYEISHEV

Joshua ben Levi said: Potiphar's wife saw by her astrological arts that she was to produce a child by Joseph, but she did not know whether it was to be from her—or from her daughter." In fact, as related in B'reishit Rabbah 86.3, the Rabbis believed that the woman whom Joseph eventually married was none other than the daughter of Potiphar and his wife, since they identified Potiphar with "Potiphera priest of On," Joseph's future father-in-law (41:45).

covered herself up with a veil (38:14). For the Rabbis, Tamar's heroic actions displayed the where-withal, foresight, and fortitude of a matriarch such as Rebekah. They allude to this association in B'reishit Rabbah 60.15 and 85.7: "Two covered themselves with a veil, and each gave birth to twins—Rebekah and Tamar." Tamar's behavior is considered a praiseworthy response to a situation of injustice.

Potiphar's wife saw by her astrological arts that she was to produce a child by Joseph.

he turned toward her (38:16). The Rabbis saw Tamar's deception as foreordained since they believed that the messiah will ultimately arise from her long-ago union with Judah. B'reishit Rabbah 85.8 recounts that an angel intervened on Tamar's behalf in order to make sure that Judah did not pass her by: "Rabbi Yohanan said: He wished to go on, but the blessed Holy One made the angel who is in charge of desire appear before him and say to him: 'Where are you going, Judah? From where are kings and redeemers to arise?' Thus: he turned toward her."

a kid from the flock (38:17). B'reishit Rabbah 85.9 makes clear that Judah received his comeuppance: "The blessed Holy One said to Judah, 'You deceived your father with a kid of goats [when you hid the truth about Joseph's disappearance, 37:31–32], thus Tamar will deceive you with a kid of goats."

"Your signet seal, your cord, and the staff in your hand" (38:18). In B'reishit Rabbah 85.9, the Rabbis further express their support for Tamar's actions by interpreting the pledges that Judah gives her as emblems of (future) royalty.

she became pregnant by him (38:18). Even Tamar herself was mindful of the important role her descendants would later play. During her pregnancy, "she would pat her belly and exclaim, 'I am big with kings and redeemers'" (B'reishit Rabbah 85.10).

A 1st-century-C.E. Jewish work known as Biblical Antiquities (by an unknown author usually referred to as Pseudo-Philo) presents Tamar as a role model for the Israelites in Egypt. In that account, Amram, Moses' father, speaks of her as "our mother Tamar." The emphasis falls on her determination to perpetuate the line of Judah despite risk—which Amram uses to encourage the people to continue to perpetuate life despite their slavery (Biblical Antiquities 9.5–6).

Judah . . . said, "She is more in the right than I" (38:26). According to B'reishit Rabbah 97, Judah was rewarded for his confession that he had wronged Tamar, since God delivers those who admit their misdeeds—and promises them a life in the world to come.

after all this, his master's wife (39:7). Tamar and Potiphar's wife are both presented in midrashic texts as powerful, beautiful, clever, and seductive women. However, while Tamar is universally praised because she ensured the future destiny of the tribe of Judah—from which the Davidic dynasty would eventually spring—Potiphar's wife emerges as a more ambiguous figure. She is most often depicted as both seducer and seduced. She is portrayed as an immoral woman who meant to taunt and tease Joseph but was overwhelmed by his great beauty. According to B'reishit Rabbah 87.10, when Joseph was in prison, she would say to him: "See how I have made you suffer. By your life, I will persecute you in other ways too." The midrash continues: "She went so far as to place an iron fork under his neck so that he should have to lift up his eyes and look at her. Yet in spite of that he would not look at her." Rabbi Huna explains that Jacob's outcry—"a wild animal has devoured him" (37:33)—was actually a moment of clairvoyance in which the distraught father perceived Mrs. Potiphar's wicked ways and her obsession with Joseph (B'reishit Rab- bah 84.19). Indeed, the more depraved and seductive she acted, the more commendable was Joseph's resistance and display of honor.

—Carol Bakhos

• • • • •

Contemporary Reflection

IN TERMS OF THE BIBLICAL WORLDVIEW, Tamar's tragedy is evident: she has lost her husband, and she has no offspring to secure her status as a widow and give her life purpose. Tired of leaving her fate to male relatives, Tamar takes action to secure her own position, thereby joining the circle of matriarchs who exemplify action to protect Israelite destiny.

When the Family Constellation Changes. As the Bible tells the story, Judah and Tamar are in-laws who have reached a crisis point in their relationship. Why? As Carol Meyers explains (Discovering Eve: Ancient Israelite Women in Context, 1988, pp. 133, 183), a young woman typically married into her husband's extended family household. The new wife was expected to conform to household norms.

At first, Judah is more than willing to support Tamar's rights. It is he who prompts Onan to perform his duty (38:8); however, when Onan dies in turn, Judah inwardly blames Tamar (38:11), although the reader knows that she is innocent (38:7, 10). Clearly, there is a failure of communication. Judah tells Tamar he will eventually allow her access to Shelah, while he privately intends no such thing. For her part, Tamar correctly surmises Judah's true intentions, but she never confronts him, discusses it with him, or attempts less radical measures, such as mediation. Evidently, Judah's abiding sense of loss and resentment are blocking his reconciliation with Tamar. Because of Judah's failure to heal, Tamar is also unable to move on.

Even now, any new family member—whether spouse, in-law, or child—begins as an outsider. The attendant changes in family dynamics bring accompanying stresses. If conversion or adoption is involved, the difficulties of adjustment may be compounded, requiring increased patience and sensitivity. Recriminations, too, have never been uncommon when premature death occurs in a family.

Recovering from the Loss of a Husband. Tamar's actions following the loss of her spouse involve extreme risk, but they are not reckless; she has a plan. Spousal loss should not force anyone into desperate acts. In modern terms, Tamar's predicament cautions women today not to abdicate their financial security to others. They should be aware of and involved in household decisions concerning retirement plans, mortgages, and taxes. Too many widows emerge from mourning to discover financial troubles they had not known existed, and, apart from any monetary crisis that may ensue, are left with a tainted memory of their loved one and an ensuing anger that is hard to resolve.

Tamar's courage in the face of adversity may reduce our fear to realistic proportions.

On a less dire note, entering widowhood nowadays may not be dangerous, but it can be frightening to face life as a single after years of partnership. Tamar's courage in the face of genuine adversity serves as a model for those who fear entering a social situation alone for the first time, and it may help reduce that fear to realistic proportions. After all, no one in America today will try to burn them for exiting their fathers' houses, even were they to turn up pregnant.

VAYEISHEV

Widows today should remember that they are not genuinely alone. Just as Tamar could fall back on her family of origin, the bereaved should not avoid turning to their support networks of family and friends. If these do not exist or are inadequate, there are communal resources—and new interests and people yet to explore.

Tamar eventually rises from her mourning and responds to her loss by taking action that will produce meaning for her life. Producing an heir is not the only way to create a legacy. Many are the widows and widowers who have responded to their loss through volunteer work and community involvement. Victor Frankl, in his work Man's Search for Meaning (1959), taught that while we may have no control over circumstances in which we find ourselves, we have utter freedom in how we respond to those circumstances, even if only in the attitude we choose to assume in response. Tamar teaches us not to become immobilized by loss. Mourn—but then move to find ongoing purpose.

The Role of the Foreigner. Had Tamar been kin, mention of her lineage would be expected; thus it seems that she was foreign. Yet this matters little to Judah: he resents Tamar because he associates her with the loss of his sons, not because of her ethnic identity. Judah had himself been married to a Canaanite, and it is he who arranged Er's marriage with Tamar in the first place (38:6). Moreover, in Tamar's time, no conversion rite, as such, existed; she makes her affiliation clear by aligning herself with the destiny of Judah's household—and thus with the destiny of Israel.

Non-Israelite origin connects Tamar to the story of Potiphar's wife that follows in Genesis 39. Placing the story of a good woman next to that of a bad woman clarifies, from a biblical standpoint, the meaning of both goodness and badness in women. This juxtaposition of good and bad models, known to literary structuralists as "binary opposition," is found again in the case of the widow of Zarephath (in Phoenicia), who aids Elijah in I Kings 17 and is in counterpoint to that other Phoenician woman, Jezebel, who hounds Elijah. Women are not the only foreign exemplars: the good Kenites are repeatedly balanced with the hated Amalekites (Exodus 17–18; Judges 4; and I Samuel 15:6). Such stories provide examples of how a foreigner or foreign people should behave, and another less edifying one of how they often did behave. In the context of the Bible, such passages represent ethnic tensions of the past and highlight the uncertainty of trusting outsiders. For the modern world, they serve as a reminder for us to judge individuals by their actions and attitudes, rather than by labels and assumptions.

—Carol Selkin Wise

• • • • • • •

Voices

• • • • • • •

Tamar's Lament

Hara E. Person

Genesis 38:11

The man of my dreams was brave, true, a hero.
 Handsome, yes, but more,
 a provider, someone to listen to me.
 Not a trickster against man or God.
 Not a rebellious son.
 Not a defiant man.

Why did it go so wrong?
 Why was all that I had learned in my mother's house
 not any use with these brothers?
 Their sneers, their spite.
 No children would they give me.
 They robbed me.
 They stole my innocence and my hope.
 And every month, when their mother would ask,
 what could I say?

But there is also Shelah.
 Ah, Shelah, their baby.
Shelah, hers, mine.
Shelah, shel.
 My husband-in-waiting.
 The soft-skinned, gentle, beautiful boy, waiting for me.

Can I take Shelah, shel, before he grows up to be like them?
 Can I take this beautiful boy before he becomes hardened and bitter and angry?
 But they won't let me,

he is only a small boy after all,
 and if I am to be his wife I cannot also be his mother.

And so they send me,
 with no baby in my arms,
 no baby at my breast—
 in shame they send me back to my father's house.
 There I will sit, and wait—and sit, and wait,
 for Shelah, for mine,
 and try over and over again to tell myself that it wasn't me, that I did nothing wrong.

NOTES

Shelah. In Hebrew, the name Shelah sounds like the word shelah ("hers").

sheli. In Hebrew, "mine."

from The Five Books of Miriam

Ellen Frankel

Genesis 38:13–19

Tamar answers: I regarded this entire episode as my final test of Judah's character. He'd already failed to enforce his family's levirate obligation. He'd sent me home in disgrace to my father's house. Now, by his cavalier surrender of his name and power, he conclusively proved his unworthiness as paterfamilias. And so once the bargain was sealed, it was I who left him and went on my way; he remained behind, stripped of his identity. From that moment on, the family birthright passed to me, the mother of Judah's heir.

The Stripes in Joseph's Coat

Rivka Miriam (transl. Linda Stern Zisquit)

Genesis 37:3–4

The stripes in Joseph's coat were like the rungs in the ladder of Jacob's dream.
The cloak was warm from the sun moon and stars,
sheaves flew off from it as Joseph walked.
He was in the pit as if in the arms of his mother
Rachel of the Well.
Ishmaelites roamed above, their bells ringing and on the humps of their camels they moved him
as in the heart of seas.
The camel rolls up its neck like a long arm and bracelets leap in Joseph's eyes.
On the camel his mother hid the idols under her pressing them close like large dolls, he touched them with a small finger and with a larger finger they stabbed him shooting him to Egypt.
The God of the Hebrews slept under him the whole way like a large stone lumped together from many stones.

from Potiphar's Wife

Linda Hepner

Genesis 39

Joseph, your raven locks have made me mad—
On moonlit nights I dream awake
My soul red-hot that you with snake-like tread
Enter my courtyard. Had I summoned you For bread, for wine, I should have been prepared,
But nightly you pass by and nightly I
Leap trembling at your trespass.

Potiphar lies snoring at my side.
Goats cannot wake him. Daylight calls his chores
From furrows in his mind and he jolts up
With shouts of "Joseph, my cloak!" You appear,
Eyes low with lack of sleep.

Sweet boy your body gleams,
Your tunic ripples. Motes of light reflect
And I beneath my sheet observe.
Girls of your land avert their gaze
And well they might, for gossips shock:
Barbaric brothers once they say
Slaughtered a city in revenge
For loving of their sister.
She like me desired a stranger.

Here I shall stand bejeweled
And naked; our embrace
Shall touch our mouths our toes—
Together we shall encircle
All the world with our desire.

She Is Joseph

Nurit Zarchi (transl. Shirley Kaufman)

Genesis 37:3–10

Rachel sits in the tent and gathers each curl closer to hide them under the silken cap of her little daughter Joseph, because if you wanted a son and your time was running out, what else would you do but lie to alter what God had done.

The little one sits in the tent
in a coat of colored stripes.
Revealed to all—a boy,
a girl whose sex is hidden.

And now the whole world knows her shame is gone. For his father Rachel brought forth a son and she is her mother's daughter.

And the mother reads the future in the dark hair of her daughter:
dreams will cast you in a pit, a foreign court soon after.

The little one sits in the tent,
she hears the words of her mother, and she is caught in a spell,
and she is caught in horror,

while Rachel continues, stunned, the shocks grow more extreme:

you will be locked in prison and freed once more by dreams.

Dreams will save you, daughter,
will cast you in a pit.
But Rachel's time is short for the riddle of her daughter.

The little one sits in the tent,
holds her breath and listens.
Revealed to all—a boy,
a girl whose sex is hidden.

A Word before the Last about Loss

Linda Stern Zisquit

Genesis 37:35

Precisely because you are alive
there is no comfort in this world.
Because wherever you are not
I search, and where I hear your step you have not been or left a mark.
So the roads are trampled by one, not two. And the past is maimed by remembering more. Just as an old man cannot live at peace clutching a rag of stripes as proof without a swish of snakes underneath, without imagining profoundest disease that follows him—a body of bones, a soul clanking around—it is asking for comfort where there is none, possessing the one thing alive that has no end.

מִקְרָב ◆ Mikeitz

GENESIS 41:1–44:17

When Dreams Come True

PARASHAT MIKEITZ (“at the end of”) marks the end of Joseph’s time in prison, traces his rise to power in Pharaoh’s court, and concludes when his brothers stand before him fearful for their fate. Earlier, in Genesis 37, Joseph’s dreams had provoked the envy of his brothers. In this parashah, dreams enable him to leave prison when he uses his gifts to interpret Pharaoh’s dreams. Joseph’s own dreams come true when his brothers—not knowing who he is—bow to him in supplication. How will Joseph respond? Have the brothers changed? The parashah concludes with the key question still unanswered: is this family doomed to relive a violent past, or will it show that transformation and growth are possible? In this parashah, Judah takes the lead as representative of the brothers. His rise to responsibility can be linked to his encounter with Tamar in Genesis 38 (see below).

Favoritism in Jacob’s household continues to propel the narrative. Jacob’s undying love for Rachel has led him to favor her sons, Joseph and Benjamin, over those of Leah, Bilhah, and Zilpah—resulting in virulent sibling rivalry for Jacob’s affection (Genesis 37). Years later, the brothers still must cope with Jacob’s blatant favoritism while he remains oblivious to the effect of his behavior.

In this parashah, women appear mostly indirectly. Unlike Sarah and Rebekah—who actively appeared in the earlier episodes about Abraham, Isaac, and their offspring—Jacob’s wives remain in the background and do not act. Rachel has already died (35:19), and Leah, whose burial is retrospectively recorded later (49:31), goes unmentioned. Nothing further is said about Zilpah or Bilhah. Only Asenath plays a direct role, as Joseph’s Egyptian wife and as mother of his sons. The name of her father, the priest Potiphera, echoes Potiphar’s name—evoking memories of Potiphar’s wife, the cause for Joseph’s incarceration in the previous parashah (Genesis 39).

Judah’s rise now to responsibility can be linked to his earlier encounter with Tamar.

At the same time, one notes several allusions or connections with the encounter between Tamar and Judah in Genesis 38. For example, in both stories, clothing serves as a disguise, hiding the true identity of Judah’s interlocutor; in both, the same verb (translated as “acknowledge” in 38:25–26 and “recognize” in 42:8) marks a pivotal moment; in both, also, the notion of pledge plays a role (see at 43:9). Possibly, Judah’s rise to prominence in this parashah results from the transformation he had undergone when Tamar quietly called him to account.

—Naomi Steinberg

Outline—

I. JOSEPH INTERPRETS PHARAOH'S DREAMS AND RISES TO POWER (41:1–57)

- A. Pharaoh dreams about cows and corn (vv. 1–8)
- B. The chief cupbearer recalls Joseph, interpreter of dreams (vv. 9–13)
- C. Joseph interprets Pharaoh's dreams (vv. 14–36)
- D. Joseph is elevated to high office and marries Asenath (vv. 37–49)
- E. Asenath bears Manasseh and Ephraim to Joseph (vv. 50–52)
- F. Famine causes “all lands” to travel to Egypt for grain (vv. 53–57)

II. TEN BROTHERS JOURNEY TO EGYPT (42:1–25)

- A. Jacob sends ten brothers to Egypt for food (vv. 1–5)
- B. The brothers appear before Joseph (vv. 6–17)
- C. Joseph demands that they bring Benjamin (vv. 18–25)

III. NINE BROTHERS RETURN TO CANAAN (42:26–38)

- A. One brother discovers money in his sack (vv. 26–28)
- B. The brothers report to Jacob (vv. 29–35)
- C. Jacob is dismayed mostly over the prospective loss of Benjamin (vv. 36–38)

IV. THE SECOND JOURNEY TO EGYPT, WITH BENJAMIN (43:1–44:13a)

- A. Continuing famine forces Jacob to let Benjamin go (43:1–14)
- B. The brothers appear before Joseph (43:15–34)
- C. Joseph tests the brothers (44:1–2)
- D. The brothers are charged with theft (44:3–13a)

V. THE THIRD APPEARANCE BEFORE JOSEPH

The Final Test (44:13b–17)

- A. The brothers appear before Joseph (vv. 13b–15)
- B. Judah's confession (v. 16)
- C. Joseph demands only Benjamin (vv. 17)

41:1

At the end of two years' time, Pharaoh had a dream: there he was, standing by the Nile,² when seven cows came up out of the Nile, handsome and fat. They grazed among the reeds.³ And now seven other cows came up after them from the Nile—repulsive and gaunt. They stood beside the [other] cows at the bank of the Nile.⁴ The cows that were repulsive and gaunt then ate the cows that were handsome and fat, and Pharaoh woke up.

⁵He fell asleep and dreamt a second time: this time, seven ears of grain were growing on a single stalk; they were healthy and good;⁶ and then seven

מְאָה וָיִצְחַק שְׁנָתִים יָמִים וּפְרֻעָה חִלֵּם וְהִנֵּה עִמֶּד עַל-הַיָּאָר:² וְהִנֵּה מִן-הַיָּאָר עַל-תַּבְשֵׂע פְּרוֹת יִפּוֹת מִרְאָה וּבְרִיאָת בָּשָׂר וְתַרְעִינָה בְּאַחֲוֹ:³ וְהִנֵּה שְׁבַע פְּרוֹת אֲחֶרוֹת עַל-וְתַבְשֵׂע אַחֲרֵיהֶן מִן-הַיָּאָר רְעוֹת מִרְאָה וּבְרִקּוֹת בָּשָׂר וְתַעֲמִידָה אֶצְל הַפְּרוֹת עַל-שְׁפֵת הַיָּאָר:⁴ וְתַאכְלַנָּה הַפְּרוֹת רְעוֹת הַמִּרְאָה וְדַקְתָּה הַבָּשָׂר אֶת שְׁבַע הַפְּרוֹת יִפּת הַמִּרְאָה וּבְרִיאָת וַיַּקְצֵן פְּרֻעָה:⁵ וַיַּיְשַׁן וַיְחַלֵּם שְׁנִית וְהִנֵּה | שְׁבַע שְׁבָלִים עַל-וְתַבְשֵׂע בְּקָנָה אַחֲד בְּרִיאָות וְתַבּוֹת:⁶ וְהִנֵּה

Joseph Interprets Pharaoh's Dreams and Rises to Power

(41:1–57)

As the parashah opens, Joseph is in Egypt, where he is not only a slave but also indefinitely detained in a prison—and no one in his family knows his whereabouts. For readers the situation would seem grim but for the narrator's note that “יהוה was with Joseph” (39:21). In his youth, Joseph's dreams had provided the pretext for his enslavement (see 37:19–20); now—in a turn of poetic justice—the dreams of others provide the context for solving his problem both of enslavement and of imprisonment: the ruler of Egypt awakens from a pair of disturbing premonitory dreams; upon hearing this, his chief cupbearer recalls how he once received help with his own troubling dream. And this leads back to Joseph.

Although Pharaoh's dreams strictly relate to famine in Egypt, as the story later unfolds we will see the famine extending to the land where Jacob resides. Thus, the famine will make it possible for Joseph to be reunited with his family.

PHARAOH DREAMS OF COWS AND CORN (41:1–8)

After Joseph interpreted the dreams of the chief cupbearer and the chief baker (Genesis 40), he has another opportunity to demonstrate his dream interpretation skills.

2–7. cows...ears of grain. The cows and the corn symbolize the fertility of the land.

- If a single dream would have sufficed, why are there two, and why do they follow so closely?

ANOTHER VIEW ► 252

- They made peace with their father's favoritism.
- Jewish lineage is not shaped by genetics alone.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 254, 255

- Power rests not in the dream itself, but in the wisdom of the interpreter.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 252

- For you dear father, I plant today a garden of grain....

VOICES ► 257

ears of grain—thin, scorched by the east wind—grew after them! ⁷The seven ears of grain that were thin and scorched by the east wind then swallowed the seven ears of grain that were healthy and full, and Pharaoh woke up; behold—it was a dream!

⁸In the morning his spirit was troubled; he put out a call for all the soothsayer-priests and sages of Egypt; Pharaoh related his dream to them, but no one could interpret them for Pharaoh.

⁹The chief cupbearer then spoke to Pharaoh, saying, “This day I [must] acknowledge my sins!

¹⁰Pharaoh had grown angry at his servants, so he put me under guard in the house of the Captain of the Guard—me and the chief baker. ¹¹We dreamt a dream on a single night, he and I, each dream of ours with its own meaning. ¹²Now, there with us was a Hebrew lad, a slave of the Captain of the Guard; when we related our dreams to him, he interpreted for us, interpreting each one’s dream according to its own meaning. ¹³And as he interpreted for us, so it came to be—[Pharaoh] restored me to my position, and him [Pharaoh] hanged.”

¹⁴So Pharaoh sent to summon Joseph; they hurried him from the pit: he shaved, changed his clothing, and came to Pharaoh.

¹⁵Pharaoh said to Joseph, “I dreamt a dream and there is no one to interpret it; but I have heard this

שְׁבַע שָׂבָلִים דָקֹות וּשְׁדוֹפֶת קָרִים צָמְחוֹת
אֲחֵרֶיהָן: ⁷ וַתִּבְלַעַנָּה הַשָּׂבָלִים הַדָּקֹות אֶת
שְׁבַע הַשָּׂבָלִים הַבְּרִיאוֹת וְהַמְלָאוֹת וַיַּקְרַז
פְּרֻעָה וְהַנֶּה חֲלוֹם:

⁸ וַיַּהַי בַּבָּקָר וְתִפְعָם רֹוחָו וַיָּשַׁלֵּחַ וַיַּקְרַא
אֲתִיכְלַחְטָמֵי מִצְרָיִם וְאֲתִיכְלַחְכָמֵיד
וַיִּסְפַּר פְּרֻעָה לְהָם אֲתִיכְלָמוֹ וְאַיִן-פּוֹתָר
אָוֹתָם לְפְרֻעָה:

⁹ וַיַּדְבֵּר שַׁר הַמְשָׁקִים אֲתִיכְלָה לְאָמָר
אֲתִיכְלָאֵי אֲנִי מִזְבֵּחַ הַיּוֹם: ¹⁰ פְּרֻעָה קָצַף
עַל-עֲבָדָיו וַיַּתֵּן אֲתִי בַּמְשָׁמֶר בַּשָּׁר
הַטְּבָחִים אֲתִי וְאַתְּ שַׁר הַאֲפִים:
¹¹ וַיַּחַלְמָה חֲלוֹם בְּלִילָה אֲחָד אֲנִי וְהָוָא
אֲישׁ בְּפַתְּרוֹן חָלָמוֹ חָלָמוֹ: ¹² וְשָׁם אָתָּנוּ
נָעַר עֲבָרִי עָבֵד לְשַׁר הַטְּבָחִים וְגַסְפָּרְלָזָן
וַיִּפְתְּרָלָנוּ אֲתִיכְלָמָתָינוּ אֲישׁ בְּחָלָמוֹ
פָּתָר: ¹³ וַיְהִי בְּאָשֶׁר פַּתְּרָלָנוּ כִּנְחִיה אֲתִי
הַשִּׁבֵּעַ עַל-כָּנִי וְאַתְּ תְּלָה: ¹⁴ וַיָּשַׁלֵּחַ פְּרֻעָה
וַיַּקְרַא אֲתִיכְלָסָף וַיַּרְאֵהוּ מִן-הַבּוֹר וַיַּגְלַת
וַיַּחַלְקֵת שְׁמַלְתָּיו וַיַּבְאֵא אֲלַפְרֻעָה:

¹⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה אֲלַיְזָסָף חֲלוֹם חָלָמָתִי
וַפְּתָר אֵין אָתָּנוּ וְאַנְיִ שְׁמַעַתִּי עַלְיָךְ לְאָמָר

THE CHIEF CUPBEARER RECALLS JOSEPH, INTERPRETER OF DREAMS (41:9–13)

9. “This day I [must] acknowledge my sins!” In 40:14 Joseph had asked the cupbearer to mention him to Pharaoh and to help free him. The cupbearer is only doing that now, two years later. His offense this time is forgetting Joseph.

12. “he interpreted for us.” The cupbearer attributes the ability to interpret dreams to Joseph, while Joseph had claimed that dream interpretation comes from God (40:8), a view that he articulates consistently (see below at v. 16).

JOSEPH INTERPRETS PHARAOH’S DREAMS (41:14–36)

14. he shaved. In the ancient Near East, only the Egyptians were clean shaven, so as Joseph prepares to go before Pharaoh his appearance is made distinctively Egyptian, reflecting Egyptian protocol—and foreshadowing Joseph’s rise from a slave to one who has authority over Egyptians.

changed his clothing. Joseph’s clothes have served to signal his fate (his special coat from his father, 37:3, 33; his garment in the hands of his master’s wife, 39:12–18). In this case, new clothing is a sign of a positive shift in identity.

about you: you have but to hear a dream to interpret it.”¹⁶ Joseph answered Pharaoh by saying, “Not I—it is God who will account for Pharaoh’s well-being.”

¹⁷ Pharaoh then spoke to Joseph, “In my dream I stood on the bank of the Nile,¹⁸ and lo—seven cows went up out of the river; fat and handsome, they grazed among the reeds.¹⁹ And lo—seven other cows—poor, truly repulsive, emaciated—came up after them. Never have I seen any so repulsive in all the land of Egypt!²⁰ The emaciated and repulsive cows then ate up the first cows, the fat ones.²¹ Once they had digested them, one could not tell that they had digested them; they were as repulsive as before—whereupon I awoke.²² Then in my [other] dream I saw that seven ears of grain were growing on one stalk, full and good.²³ Then sprouting after them were seven ears of grain—dried up, thin, scorched by the east wind!²⁴ The seven thin ears of grain swallowed up the seven goodly ears. But when I told the soothsayer-priests, none could explain [it] to me.”

²⁵ Joseph then said to Pharaoh, “Pharaoh’s dream is one: what God is doing, [God] has revealed to Pharaoh.²⁶ The seven goodly cows are seven years, and the seven goodly ears of grain are seven years: it is all one dream.²⁷ The seven cows coming up after them that were emaciated and repulsive are seven years; and the seven ears of grain [that were] thin and scorched by an east wind—they are seven years of famine.²⁸ This is the very thing I told Pharaoh: what God is doing, [God] has shown to Pharaoh.²⁹ Look—seven years are

תָשִׁמְעַ חֲלוֹם לְפָטָר אֶתְךָ: ¹⁶ וַיַּעַן יוֹסֵף אֶת־פְּרֻעָה לְאֹמֶר בְּלֹעַד אֱלֹהִים יַעֲנֶה אֶת־שְׁלֹום פְּרֻעָה:

¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה אֶל־יוֹסֵף בְּחַלְמֵי הַנּוּן עָמַד עַל־שְׁפָת הַיּוֹרֵד: ¹⁸ וְהִנֵּה מִן־הַיּוֹרֵד עַלְתָּה שְׁבַע פָּרוֹת בְּרִיאוֹת בָּשָׂר וִיפְתָּח תְּאֵר וְתְּרַעֵנָה בְּאַחֲרָיו: ¹⁹ וְהִנֵּה שְׁבַע־פָּרוֹת אַחֲרוֹת עַלְוֹת אַחֲרֵיהֶן דְּלוֹת וְרַעֲוֹת תְּאֵר מִזְאֵד וּרְקֹות בָּשָׂר לְאַרְאִיתִי כְּהַנֶּה בְּכָל־אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם לְרֹעֵע: ²⁰ וְתַאֲכַלְנוּ הַפְּרוֹת הַרְקֹות וְהַרְעוֹת אֵת שְׁבַע הַפְּרוֹת הָרָאשָׁנָות הַבְּרִיאָת: ²¹ וְתַבְּאַנָּה אֶל־קְרֻבָּנָה וְלֹא נַזְעֵל בַּיּוֹבָא אֶל־קְרֻבָּנָה וּמִרְאֵיָה רַע בְּאַשְׁר בְּתִחְלָה וְאֵיקָן: ²² וְאָרָא בְּחַלְמֵי וְהִנֵּה שְׁבַע שְׁבָלִים עַלְתָּה בְּקִנְהָה אַחֲרָם מְלָאת וִטְבָות: ²³ וְהִנֵּה שְׁבַע שְׁבָלִים צָנּוּמָות דְּקוֹת שְׁדָפוֹת קְדִים צָמָחוֹת אַחֲרִיהם: ²⁴ וְתַבְּלַעַנְתָּה שְׁבָלִים הַדְּקִית אֵת שְׁבַע הַשְּׁבָלִים הַטְּבָות וְאָמֶר

אֶל־הַחֲרַטְמִים וְאֵין מַגִּיד לֵי: ²⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף אֶל־פְּרֻעָה חֲלוֹם פְּרֻעָה אַחֲרָה הוּא אֵת אֲשֶׁר הָאֱלֹהִים עָשָׂה הָאֵיד לְפְרֻעָה: ²⁶ שְׁבַע פָּרוֹת הַטְּבָת שְׁבַע שְׁנִים הַנָּה וּשְׁבַע הַשְּׁבָלִים הַטְּבָת שְׁבַע שְׁנִים הַנָּה שְׁלֹזָם אַחֲרָה הוּא: ²⁷ וּשְׁבַע הַפְּרוֹת הַרְקֹות וְהַרְעָת הַעֲלָת אַחֲרֵיהֶן שְׁבַע שְׁנִים הַנָּה וּשְׁבַע הַשְּׁבָלִים הַרְקֹות שְׁדָפוֹת הַקְדִּים יְהִי שְׁבַע שְׁנִים רַעֵב: ²⁸ הַוָּא הַדְּבָר אֲשֶׁר דִּבְרָתִי אֶל־פְּרֻעָה אֲשֶׁר הָאֱלֹהִים עָשָׂה הָרָא אֶת־פְּרֻעָה: ²⁹ הַנָּה שְׁבַע

16. “Not I—it is God who will account for Pharaoh’s well-being.” Joseph’s deference to God marks his humility.

25–32. Joseph brilliantly interprets dreams that foretell upcoming events of great magnitude. Through his interpretation, we discover that both cows and ears of corn are symbols of food that express the fertility of land. However, in the next parashah, Joseph will be the one to provide nourishment when he is in charge of distributing grain during the famine.

coming, [of] great plenty in all the land of Egypt.³⁰ But seven years of famine are coming up after them, and all the plenty in the land of Egypt will be forgotten; the famine will consume the land.³¹ The plenty will no longer be known in the land, because of the famine that will follow, so harsh will it be.³² Pharaoh's dream was repeated—two times—because the matter has been fixed by God, and God is making haste to accomplish it.

³³"Let Pharaoh now select a man who is discerning and wise and set him over the land of Egypt;³⁴ let Pharaoh act and appoint administrators over the land, and let him take one-fifth of [the produce of] the land of Egypt during the seven years of plenty.³⁵ Have them gather up all the [surplus] food of these good years that are coming, and let them store up grain in the cities under Pharaoh's control, and put it under guard.³⁶ The food will then be a reserve for the land during the seven years of famine that will prevail in the land of Egypt; thus the land will not perish through famine."³⁷ This advice seemed good to Pharaoh and his officials,³⁸ and Pharaoh said to his officials, "Is there anyone like this to be found, a man with the spirit of God in him?"

³⁹Pharaoh then said to Joseph, "Since God has made all this known to you, there is no one as discerning and wise as you!⁴⁰ You shall be in charge of my household, and all my people shall obey your word; only I, The Throne, shall be greater than you."

⁴¹And Pharaoh said to Joseph, "Observe, I have placed you in charge of the entire land of Egypt."⁴² Pharaoh removed his signet ring from his hand

שְׁנִים בָּאֹת שֶׁבַע גָּדוֹל בְּכָל־אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם:
³⁰ וְקָמוּ שֶׁבַע שְׁנִי רַעֲבָן אַחֲרֵיהֶן וְנִשְׁבַּח
 בְּלַד־הַשְׁבָּעָב בְּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם וּכְלָה הַרְעָב אַתְּ
 הָאָרֶץ:
³¹ וְלֹא־יָזֹעַ הַשְׁבָּעָב בְּאָרֶץ מִפְנֵי
 הַרְעָב הַהוּא אַחֲרֵיכֶן קִירְכֶּבֶד הוּא מָאֵד:
³² וְלֹא הַשְׁנוּת הַחֲלוּם אֶל־פְּרֻעָה פְּעָמִים
 כִּי־נִכְזֹן הַדָּבָר מִעַם הָאֱלֹהִים וּמִמָּהּ
 הָאֱלֹהִים לְעֵשָׂתוֹ:

³³ וַיַּעֲתֵה יָרָא פְּרֻעָה אִישׁ נָבוֹן וְחַכְמָה
 וַיִּשְׁתַּחַוו עַל־אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ³⁴ וַיַּעֲשֶׂה פְּרֻעָה
 וַיִּפְקַד פְּקָדִים עַל־הָאָרֶץ וַיִּמְפַשֵּׁת אֶת־אָרֶץ
 מִצְרָיִם בְּשֶׁבַע שְׁנִי הַשְׁבָּעָב:
³⁵ וַיִּקְבְּצֹו אַתְּ
 בְּלַאֲכָל הַשְׁנִים הַטְּבֹות הַבָּאֹת הָאֱלֹהִים
 וַיִּצְבְּרוּבָר תִּתְחַת יְדֵפְרֻעָה אֶכֶל בָּעָרִים
 וַיִּשְׁמְרוּ: ³⁶ וְהִיא הָאֶכֶל לְפַקְדוֹן לְאָרֶץ
 לְשֶׁבַע שְׁנִי הַרְעָב אֲשֶׁר תַּהֲיוּן בָּאָרֶץ
 מִצְרָיִם וְלֹא־תִּפְרַת הָאָרֶץ בָּרָעָב:
³⁷ וַיִּיטַב הַדָּבָר בְּעֵינֵי פְּרֻעָה וּבְעֵינֵי בְּלַעֲבָדָיו:
³⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה אֶל־עֲבָדָיו הַנִּמְצָא בָּהּ
 אִישׁ אֲשֶׁר רָוח אֱלֹהִים בָּוּ:

³⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה אֶל־יְוָסֵף אֲחִי הַזָּקִין
 אֱלֹהִים אָוֶתךְ אֶת־כָּל־זֹאת אַיִן־גָּבֹונָן וְחַכְמָה
 בְּמֹועֵךְ:
⁴⁰ אַתָּה תַּהֲיָה עַל־בִּיתִי וְעַל־פִּרְקָה
 יִשְׁקַב בְּלַעֲמִי רַק הַכְּסָא אֲגָדֵל מִמֶּךָּךְ:

⁴¹ וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה אֶל־יְוָסֵף רָאוּה נִתְתַּחַת אַתְּ
 עַל בְּלַאֲרֶץ מִצְרָיִם:
⁴² וַיִּסְרַר פְּרֻעָה אֶת־
 טְבֻעָתוֹ מִלְּעָל יָדו וַיִּתְּנַعַּם אַתָּה עַל־יְדֵי יוֹסֵף

JOSEPH IS ELEVATED TO HIGH OFFICE AND MARRIES ASENATH (41:37–49)

Here Joseph is given signs of his authority in the Egyptian court. With this clothing and associated goods, Joseph moves from an outsider to an insider status in Egypt. Ironically, a slave has risen to the second-highest post. It has been suggested that such a role for the foreigner would have been historically possible during the time when the Asiatic Hyksos reigned in Egypt (the 17th and 16th centuries B.C.E.).

42. signet ring. A ring with the royal symbol of Pharaoh.

and put it on Joseph's hand; he dressed him in linen trappings and placed the gold chain [of office] around his neck.⁴³ He gave him his viceroy's chariot to ride; they cried out "Royal Steward!" before him; he placed him in charge of all the land of Egypt.

⁴⁴ Pharaoh now said to Joseph, "I am Pharaoh, and without you none shall lift hand or foot in all the land of Egypt."⁴⁵ Pharaoh called Joseph Zaphenath-paneah and gave him Asenath daughter of Potiphera priest of On as a wife; thus Joseph came to be in charge of the land of Egypt.⁴⁶ When Joseph began to serve Pharaoh, king of Egypt, he was 30 years old; Joseph left Pharaoh's presence and traversed the whole land of Egypt.

⁴⁷ In the seven years of plenty the land produced to overflowing. ⁴⁸ He gathered all the [surplus] food

וַיָּלֶבֶשׁ אֹתוֹ בְּגִרִּישׁ וַיְשִׁם רַבֵּד הַזָּהָב עַל־צְוֹאוֹרֹ: ⁴³ וַיַּרְכֵּב אֹתוֹ בְּמִרְכָּבָת הַמְּשֻׁנָּה אֲשֶׁר־לֹו וַיִּקְרָא לִפְנֵיו אֲבָרֶב וַנְתֹּן אֹתוֹ עַל כָּל־אֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ⁴⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר פָּרֻעַה אֶל־יְסוּף אָנָּה פָּרֻעַה וּבְלֹעֲדָךְ לְאִירִים אִישׁ אֲתִיכְךָ וְאַתִּירְגָּלָךְ בְּכָל־אֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ⁴⁵ וַיִּקְרָא פָּרֻעַה שְׁמָךְ יוֹסֵף צְפָנָת פָּעֵנָת וַיִּתְּנַלֵּוּ אֶת־אֱسָנוֹת בַּת־פּוּטִי פָּרֻעַ פְּהַנֵּן אֵן לְאָשָׁה וַיֵּצֵא יוֹסֵף עַל־אֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ⁴⁶ וַיַּוְסַּךְ בְּנֵשְׁלָשִׁים שָׁנָה בְּעַמְדוֹ לִפְנֵי פָּרֻעַה מֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם וַיֵּצֵא יוֹסֵף מֶלֶפְנֵי פָּרֻעַה וַיַּעֲבֵר בְּכָל־אֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ⁴⁷ וַתַּעֲשֶׂה הָאָרֶץ בְּשַׁבָּעׁ שְׁנִי הַשְׁבָּעָ לְקִמְצִים: ⁴⁸ וַיִּקְבַּץ אֶת־כָּל־אָכָל | שְׁבָעָ

⁴³. "Royal Steward!" Heb. avrech; it appears nowhere else in the Bible and its meaning is unclear. It has also been translated "bow the knee." The term may have Egyptian origins.

⁴⁵. Zaphenath-paneah. Egyptian for "God speaks and lives."

On. The ancient city of Heliopolis, north of modern Cairo.

Asenath. Egyptian for "the one belonging to Neith." Neith was an Egyptian creator goddess seen as both the mother of the king and the mother of Re, the ancient Egyptian creator god and god of the sun.

daughter of Potiphera. When Joseph had encountered Potiphar's wife, he wound up in jail (Genesis 39); but now, when he encounters Potiphera's daughter, Joseph becomes fully integrated into Egyptian society. Perhaps the author is subtly contrasting the "evil woman" versus the "good woman" here. Biblical women characters in Genesis are often presented in pairs: Sarah and Hagar, Rachel and Leah, Bilhah and Zilpah, and now, Potiphar's wife and Asenath.

Potiphera. In Egyptian, "the one whom [the god] Re gave." As just noted, this name evokes that of Pharaoh's officer, Potiphar (Genesis 39), which is obviously similar; but the distinctions between professions suggest different figures.

as a wife. This, like his new name, indicates Joseph's acceptance into Egyptian society and a shift in his identity. One may understand Joseph now to be not only an Egyptian, but also a fully adult male (age 30, according to v. 46). Comparative evidence, not only from other ancient Near Eastern cultures but also from anthropological data regarding patrilineally organized societies, makes clear that in the biblical period, a male was not considered a man until he had a wife (if not also children). Similarly, a female in ancient Israel was not fully accepted as a woman until she was married and had borne children to her husband (think of Sarah in Genesis 12–21; see further Naomi Steinberg, Kinship and Marriage in Genesis, 1993).

Joseph's marriage to a woman of Egyptian descent is an example of exogamous marriage, that is, marriage outside the patrilineal (male line) kinship group. This prefigures Moses' marriage to a foreign woman (Exodus 2:21) and is in stark contrast to the postexilic marriage restrictions in Ezra 9–10. (See further Another Contemporary Reflection, p. 255.)

there was in the land of Egypt from the seven years. He placed food in the cities; the food that came from a city's surrounding fields he placed in its midst.⁴⁹ Thus Joseph heaped up grain as plentiful as the sands of the sea, until he left off measuring—for it was beyond measure.

⁵⁰ Two sons were born to Joseph before the years of famine arrived, born to him by Asenath daughter of Potiphera, priest of On.⁵¹ Joseph named the first-born son Manasseh, “For God has made me forget all the troubles I endured in my father’s house.”⁵² And he named the second one Ephraim, “For God has made me fruitful in the land of my affliction.”

⁵³ The seven years of plenty that prevailed in the land of Egypt came to an end,⁵⁴ and the seven years of famine began, as Joseph had foretold. There was famine in all the lands, but all over the land of Egypt there was food;⁵⁵ yet all the land of Egypt was starving, so that the people cried out to Pharaoh for food. Pharaoh said to all Egypt, “Go to Joseph; do whatever he tells you.”⁵⁶ The famine had spread across the land, so Joseph opened up all that was in [the stores] and he provided for Egypt, for the famine had gained strength in the land of Egypt.⁵⁷ And all lands came to Egypt to buy provisions from Joseph, for the famine had taken hold in every land.

ASENATH BEARS MANASSEH AND EPHRAIM TO JOSEPH (41:50–52)

The names of Joseph’s sons reflect their father’s circumstances and embody his longing to forget his past (Manasseh) and his hope of success (Ephraim). In contrast to Jacob’s sons, whose names bear the hopes and circumstances of their mothers Leah and Rachel (29:31–30:24; 35:18), these sons’ names say nothing about Asenath’s aspirations. Her sons, progenitors of the tribes of Manasseh and Ephraim, are not only linked to the family of Israel but also are

שָׁנִים אֲשֶׁר הַיּוֹ בָּאָרֶץ מֵצְרִים וַיַּתְּנֵן־אֲכָל
בָּעָרִים אֲכָל שָׂדָה־הָעִיר אֲשֶׁר סְבִיבַתִּיחָ
נָתַן בְּתוֹכוֹ: ⁴⁹ וַיַּעֲבֵר יוֹסֵף בָּר בְּחֻול הַיּוֹם
הַרְבָּה מֵאַד עַד כִּיְחַדֵּל לְסִפְרָ בְּיַ-אַיִן
מִסְפָּר:

⁵⁰ וַיַּוּסֵף יָלֵד שְׁנִי בְּנִים בְּטֻרְם תְּבוֹא
שָׁנְתָה הַרְעָב אֲשֶׁר יַלְדָה־לֹו אָסְנָת בַּת־פָוֹטִי
פָּרָעַ כְּהֵן אֹזֶן: ⁵¹ וַיְקַרְא יוֹסֵף אֶת־שְׁמָם
הַבָּכוֹר מִנְשָׁה כִּי־נָשָׁנִי אֶלְהִים אֶת־כָּל־
עַמְּלֵי וְאֵת בֵּית אָבִי: ⁵² וְאֵת שֵׁם הַשְׁנִי
קָרָא אֶפְרַיִם כִּי־הָפְרָנִי אֶלְהִים בָּאָרֶץ
עֲנֵי:

⁵³ וַתִּכְלִיןָה שָׁבָע שְׁנִי הַשְׁבָּע אֲשֶׁר דָּיהָ
בָּאָרֶץ מֵצְרִים: ⁵⁴ וַתִּחְלִיןָה שָׁבָע שְׁנִי
הַרְעָב לְבֵיא בְּאָשֶׁר אָמַר יוֹסֵף וַיְהִי רַעֲבָ
בְּכָל־הָאָרֶצֶת וּבְכָל־אָרֶץ מֵצְרִים הַיָּה
לִחְמָה: ⁵⁵ וַתַּרְעֵב כָּל־אָרֶץ מֵצְרִים וַיַּצְعַק
הָעָם אֶל־פְּרָעָה לְלִחְמָה וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרָעָה לְכָל־
מִצְרִים לְכָו אֶל־יוֹסֵף אֲשֶׁר־יָמַר לְכָם
הַשְׁעָשָׂה: ⁵⁶ וַהֲרָעָב הַיָּה עַל בָּל־פָּנֵי הָאָרֶץ
וַיִּפְתַּח יוֹסֵף אֶת־כָּל־אֲשֶׁר בָּהֶם וַיִּשְׁבַּר
לִמְצָרִים וַיִּחְזַק הַרְעָב בָּאָרֶץ מֵצְרִים:
⁵⁷ וּבָכָל־הָאָרֶץ בָּאוּ מֵצְרִים לְשָׁבָר אֶל־
יוֹסֵף כִּי־חַזֵּק הַרְעָב בְּכָל־הָאָרֶץ:

descendants of an Egyptian priestly heritage. Jacob later recognizes both of these sons as full heirs to the Israelite lineage (48:5).

FAMINE CAUSES “ALL LANDS” TO TRAVEL TO EGYPT FOR GRAIN (41:53–57)

Presumably due to its reliable water supply from the Nile, Egypt is a destination for food; see Abraham and Sarah’s visit there for that reason (12:10). In Genesis (contrary to Exodus) the Israelites find sustenance in Egypt.

42 When Jacob realized that there was grain for sale in Egypt, Jacob said to his sons, “Why are you staring at each other?” ²He said, “Look—I have heard that there are provisions for sale in Egypt; go down that way and buy us provisions from there, that we may live and not die.” ³So Joseph’s brothers went down—ten of them—to buy grain from Egypt. ⁴But Jacob did not send Benjamin, Joseph’s [full] brother, with his brothers, for he thought: “Lest a deadly mishap befall him.”

⁵Israel’s sons came to buy provisions in the midst of those who came, for the famine prevailed over the [whole] land of Canaan. ⁶Now Joseph was the one who held sway over the land; he was the one selling provisions to all the people of the land; Joseph’s brothers therefore came and bowed down to him with their faces to the ground. ⁷When Joseph saw his brothers he recognized them, but he pretended to be a stranger to them and spoke roughly to them; he said to them, “Where have you come from?” They said, “From the land of Canaan to buy food.” ⁸Joseph recognized his brothers, but they did not recognize him. ⁹Joseph then remem-

מִבָּן וַיַּרְא יַעֲקֹב כִּי יִשְׁשָׁבֵר בָּמָצֻרִים וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב לְבָנָיו לְמִה תִּתְהַרְאוּ: ² וַיֹּאמֶר הַנֶּה שְׁמֻתִּי כִּי יִשְׁשָׁבֵר בָּמָצֻרִים רְדוּ שְׁמָמָה וְשָׁבְרוּלָנוּ מִשְׁם וְנַחַתָּה וְלֹא נִמְצָרִים: ³ וַיֹּרְדוּ אֶחָיו יוֹסֵף עִשְׂרָה לְשָׁבֵר בָּרָא-מִמְצָרִים: ⁴ וְאֶת-בְּנֵימִן אֶחָיו יוֹסֵף לְאֶלְעָזֶר שָׁלַח יַעֲקֹב אֶת-אֶחָיו כִּי אָמַר פָּנִיקְרָאנוּ אָסֹן:

⁵ וַיָּבֹא בָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְשָׁבֵר בְּתוֹךְ הַבָּאִים בִּיהִינָה הַרְעָב בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן: ⁶ וַיֹּסֶף הַוָּא הַשְׁלִיט עַל-הָאָרֶץ הוּא הַמְשֻׁבֵּר לְכָל-עַמּוֹת הָאָרֶץ וַיָּבֹא אֶחָיו יוֹסֵף וַיַּתְחַווּלָו אֶפְרַיִם אֶרְצָה: ⁷ וַיַּרְא יוֹסֵף אֶת-אֶחָיו וַיִּבְרָם וַיִּתְגַּנְבֵּר אֲלֵיכֶם וַיִּדְבֶּר אֲתֶם קְשׁוֹת וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהֶם מַا-זָּאת בָּאֶתֶם וַיֹּאמְרוּ מִאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן לְשָׁבֵר-אָכָל: ⁸ וַיִּבְרָם יוֹסֵף אֶת-אֶחָיו וְהֵם לֹא הַכְּרִחוּ: ⁹ וַיִּזְפַּר יוֹסֵף אֶת הַחֲלָמוֹת

Ten Brothers Journey to Egypt (42:1–25)

This unit explores what it means to be a member of a family: what it means to be a brother, what it means to be a father (especially one who plays favorites among his children), and what it means to take responsibility for one’s past actions toward other family members.

The words “brother” and “recognize” are abundant in this unit; they remind us of when Jacob recognized a bloodied coat as belonging to Joseph (37:31–33). Likewise, they recall Tamar’s words to Judah, inviting him to recognize (“acknowledge”) and take responsibility for his actions (38:25). This is one of several connections to the episode of Tamar and Judah in Genesis 38.

JACOB SENDS TEN BROTHERS TO EGYPT FOR FOOD (42:1–5)

3–4. Joseph’s brothers... ten of them... Joseph’s [full] brother... his brothers. The differing status of the brothers’ relationship to Jacob—depending on their different mothers—is emphasized in the wording that separates Joseph’s ten half-brothers from Benjamin, Joseph’s brother by the same mother Rachel.

THE BROTHERS APPEAR BEFORE JOSEPH (42:6–17)

7. recognized... pretended to be a stranger. There is a wordplay at this point because the same Hebrew root, n-k-r, is behind both verbs. The word bered the dreams he had dreamt about them, and he said to them, “You are spies who have come to see the land’s nakedness!”¹⁰“No, my lord,” they said to him. “Your servants have come to buy food;¹¹we are all of us sons of the same man; we are honest; your servants have never been spies.”¹²He said to them, “No, indeed: it is the land’s nakedness that you have come to see!”¹³They then said, “Your servants are twelve brothers, sons of a man in the land of Canaan; the youngest is with our father right now, and one is no more.”¹⁴But Joseph said to them, “It is as I have said to you—you are spies!¹⁵This is how you shall be put to the test: as Pharaoh lives, you shall not get out of this unless your youngest brother comes here!¹⁶Send forth one of you and let him fetch your brother while [the rest of] you are confined; thus your words will be put to the test [to see] whether you are being truthful; if not, as Pharaoh lives, you are indeed spies!”¹⁷And he placed them under guard for three days.

¹⁸On the third day Joseph said to them, “Do this, and live—I am a god-fearing man! ¹⁹If you are honest men, let one of your brothers be confined in your place of custody, while [the rest of] you go bring provisions [to relieve the] starvation of your

אֲשֶׁר חִלּם לְהָם וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים מֶרְגֵּלִים
אַתֶּם לְرֹאֹת אֶת-עֲרוֹתֵת הָאָרֶץ בְּאַתֶּם:
¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים לֹא אֶדְגִּי וַעֲבֹדְךָ בְּאוֹ
לְשֶׁבֶר-אַכְלָל: ¹¹ בְּלֹנו בְּנֵי אִישׁ-אֶחָד נָחָנוּ
בְּנִים אֲנָחָנוּ לְאִתְּהָנוּ עֲבֹדִיךָ מֶרְגֵּלִים:
¹² וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים לֹא כִּי-עֲרוֹתֵת הָאָרֶץ
בְּאַתֶּם לְרֹאֹת: ¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר שְׁנִים עָשָׂר
עֲבֹדְךָ אֶחָדים | אֲנָחָנוּ בְּנֵי אִישׁ-אֶחָד בְּאָרֶץ
בְּנָעַן וְהַלֵּה הַקְטָן אֶת-אָבִינוּ הַיּוֹם וְהַאֲזָר
אַיִלְנוּ: ¹⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יוֹסֵף הוּא אֲשֶׁר
דִּבְרָתִי אֶלָּכֶם לְאָמֹר מֶרְגֵּלִים אַתֶּם:
¹⁵ בָּזָאת תִּבְחַנוּ תִּי פְּרֻעָה אִם-תִּצְאֽו מִזָּה
פִּי אִם-בְּבֹוא אֶחָיכֶם הַקְטָן הַנֶּה: ¹⁶ שְׁלַחוּ
מִכֶּם אֶחָד וַיַּקְרֵח אֶת-אֶחָיכֶם וְאַתֶּם הָאָסְרוּ
וַיִּבְחַנְוּ דִּבְרֵיכֶם הָאֶמְתָּה אַתֶּם וְאִם-לֹא חֲדִי
פְּרֻעָה כִּי מֶרְגֵּלִים אַתֶּם: ¹⁷ וַיַּאֲסַפֵּף אַתֶּם
אֶל-מִשְׁמָר שֶׁלְשָׁת יְמִים:
¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יוֹסֵף בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁלִישִׁי זֹאת
עִשּׂוּ וְחִיו אֶת-הָאֶלְ�לִים אֲנִי יִרְאֶה: ¹⁹ אִם-בְּנִים אֲנָהָם אֶחָיכֶם אֶחָד יִאָסֵר בְּבֵית
מִשְׁמָרְכֶם וְאַתֶּם לְכֹו הַבִּיאו שָׁבֵר רַעֲבָנוּ

also figures prominently in the story of Tamar and Judah—when Tamar confronts Judah with his responsibility for her pregnancy (38:25).

9. Joseph’s identity is masked from his brothers, enabling him to confine them, just as he was earlier confined by them. This is a case of role reversal between the brothers. Joseph may have had one or more motives at this time: punishment, testing, teaching a lesson, or fulfillment of his earlier dream of having all his brothers bow down to him.

“nakedness.” Heb. ervah, which brings to mind that in the Bible nakedness is usually connected with sexual misconduct. (See Leviticus 18:6–20.)

11. “we are all of us sons of the same man.” The brothers’ statement is intended to refute the charge that they are a band of unrelated individuals plotting against Egyptian bounty, but on another level it reminds us of the emphasis on family unity that characterizes the tension of the narrative.

15–16. Joseph asks to see the other son borne by his mother, Rachel. In light of how Leah’s sons had mistreated him, Joseph may fear that a similar fate has met his only full brother, Benjamin.

17. he placed them under guard for three days. The brothers are confined just as Joseph was (40:3).

JOSEPH DEMANDS THAT THEY BRING BENJAMIN (42:18–25)

19–20. “let one of your brothers be confined in your place of custody... then bring your youngest brother to me.” We are not told what motivates families; ²⁰then bring your youngest brother to me, and let your words be proven trustworthy, so that you do not die.” They went to do this. ²¹The brothers said to one another, “Oh, we are being punished on account of our brother! We saw his soul’s distress when he pleaded with us, but we didn’t listen—on that account this distress has come upon us.” ²²Reuben now responded to them, saying, “Didn’t I say to you, ‘Do not sin against the lad’? But you wouldn’t listen, and so his blood-payment, see—it has come due.”

²³They did not know that Joseph understood, for the interpreter had been between them. ²⁴He left them and wept; then he came back to them, spoke to them, took Simeon from them, and bound him before their eyes. ²⁵Joseph gave the command: they were to fill their bags with grain and [his men were] to return each one’s silver to his sack and give them provisions for the road; thus he did to them. ²⁶They loaded their provisions on their asses and went away.

Joseph’s change in plans. Joseph must realize that the separation of Benjamin and Jacob will cause great distress to his father.

22. Reuben now responded to them, saying, “Didn’t I say to you, ‘Do not sin against the lad?’” Reuben’s remark indicates that the brothers’ actions toward Joseph still haunt them.

24. He left them and wept. This is the first of four times in this parashah and the next that Joseph weeps with emotion over his brothers (see also 43:30; 45:1–2, 14–15; and in 46:29, Joseph weeps when he is reunited with his father).

took Simeon from them. Leah’s second son is taken hostage until Benjamin, Rachel’s second son, comes down to Egypt and appears before Joseph. Not knowing for sure that Benjamin is alive and well, Joseph may think that his brothers will care more for money than for Simeon—a repetition of their past actions toward him. However, the significance of Joseph’s actions can have more than one meaning: while earlier the brothers judged him, now he stands in judgment over them and attempts to make them feel the desperation that they once made him feel.

בְּתִיכֶם : ²⁰וְאַתֶּן־אֲחִיכֶם הַקָּטָן תְּבִיאוּ אֵלֵי
וַיַּאמְנוּ דְּבָרֵיכֶם וְלֹא תָמוֹתוּ וַיַּעֲשׂוּכָנָן:

21 וַיַּאמְרוּ אִישׁ אֶל־אֶחָיו אֶבְלָא אֲשָׁמִים וְ
אֲנַחְנוּ עַל־אֲחֵינוּ אֲשֶׁר רָאִינוּ צְרָת נֶפֶשׁ
בְּהַתְּחִנְנָנוּ אֵלֵינוּ וְלֹא שְׁמַעְנָנוּ עַל־כֵּן בָּאָה
אֵלֵינוּ הַצָּרָה הַזֹּאת: ²² וַיַּעֲן רָאוּבָן אֶתְהָם
לִאמְרָה הַלֹּא אִמְרָתִי אֵלֶיךָם לִאמְרָה אֶל־
תְּחַטְּאָה בַּיּוֹלֵד וְלֹא שְׁמַעְתָּם וְגַם־זֶה מַה הַנֶּה נִדְרָשׁ:

23 וְהַט לֹא יַדְעוּ כִּי שְׁמַעַן יוֹסֵף כִּי הַמֶּלֶךְ
בִּינְתָּם: ²⁴ וַיַּסֵּב מַעַלְלָהֶם וַיַּבְרֵךְ וַיַּשֵּׁב
אֲלָהֶם וַיַּדְבֵּר אֲלָהֶם וַיַּקְהֵל מַאֲתָם אֶת־
שְׁמַעְעָן וַיַּאֲסֵר אֲתָּה לְעַיְנָהֶם: ²⁵ וַיַּצְאֵן יוֹסֵף
וַיִּמְלָא אֶת־כְּלֵיָהֶם בָּר וְלִהְשִׁיבֵן בְּסַפִּירָה
אִישׁ אֶל־שְׁקָן וְלִתְהַנֵּת לְהָם צָדָה לְדָרְךָ
וַיַּעֲשֵׂה לְהָם כֵּן: ²⁶ וַיַּשְׁאַל אֶת־שָׁבָרִים עַל־ חַמְרִירָהֶם וַיָּלֹכְדוּ מִשְׁמָם:

meaning: while earlier the brothers judged him, now he stands in judgment over them and attempts to make them feel the desperation that they once made him feel.

Nine Brothers Return to Canaan

(42:26–38)

The vizier has detained Simeon and dismissed the rest of the brothers (vv. 24–25). Ten had left for Egypt to procure food (v. 3), but only nine now make it back home to their father. As these ostensibly free family members react to their situation, it reveals to the reader that they are, as it were, trapped in a confinement of their own: the family is constrained by unacknowledged favoritism, betrayal, and guilt. Thus even what might otherwise be greeted with glee—the surprise discovery of money—is received with dismay (vv. 28, 35).

²⁷When, at the night-lodging, one of them opened his sack to give fodder to his ass, he saw his silver—it was in the mouth of his bag! ²⁸When he said to his brothers, “My silver has been returned; look—it’s in my bag!” their hearts gave out, and trembling they turned to each other and said, “What is this that God has done to us?”

²⁹They then came to Jacob their father in the land of Canaan and told him all that had befallen them, saying, ³⁰“The man who is lord of the land spoke roughly to us; he treated us as though we were spying out the land. ³¹We said to him, ‘We are honest men, we have never been spies; ³²we are twelve brothers, sons of the same father; one is no more and the youngest is with our father right now, in the land of Canaan.’ ³³That man, the lord of the land, said to us, ‘This is how I will know that you are honest—leave one of your brothers with me; take [relief for the] starvation of your families, and go ³⁴and bring your youngest brother to me. Then I will indeed know that you are not spies, that you are honest; I will give you back your brother and you can pass through the land.’”

³⁵When they emptied their sacks, each one’s money-bag was in his sack; and when they caught sight of their money-bags, they and their father, they were struck with fear. ³⁶Their father Jacob said to them, “You have left me bereft—Joseph is no

²⁷וַיַּפְתַּח הָאָחָד אֶת־שֶׁקֹּו לְתַת מִסְפּוֹא
לְחַמְרוֹ בְּמַלְוֹן וַיַּרְא אֶת־בְּסֶפֶפוֹ וְהַנְּהִיהָא
בְּפִי אִמְתְּחָתוֹ: ²⁸וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־אֶחָיו הַוֹשֵׁב
בְּסֶפֶל וְגַם הַנְּהָא בְּאִמְתְּחָתִי וַיֵּצֵא לְבָם
וַיִּחַדְדוּ אִישׁ אֶל־אֶחָיו לְאָמֹר מַה־זֹּאת
עֲשָׂה אֱלֹהִים לְנוּ:

²⁹וַיָּבֹאוּ אֶל־יַעֲקֹב אֲבִיכֶם אֶרְצָה בְּנֵעַן:
וַיֹּגידוּ לוֹ אֵת בְּלַהֲקָרָת אַתֶּם לְאָמֹר:
³⁰דָּבָר הָאִישׁ אֲדֹנֵי הָאָרֶץ אָתָנוּ קְשׁוֹת
וַיִּתְן אָתָנוּ בְּמֶרְגָּלִים אֶת־הָאָרֶץ: ³¹וַיֹּאמֶר
אַלְיוֹ בְּנִים אַנְחָנוּ לֹא חִינּוּ מֶרֶגְלִים:
³²שְׁנַיִם־עָשָׂר אַנְחָנוּ אֶחָים בְּנֵי אֲבִינוּ
הָאָחָד אַיִּנָנוּ וְהַקְטָן דַיּוּם אֶת־אֲבִינוּ בְּאָרֶץ
בְּנֵעַן: ³³וַיֹּאמֶר אַלְיוֹ הָאִישׁ אֲדֹנֵי הָאָרֶץ
בָּזָאת אָלַע בַּבָּנִים אַתֶּם אֶחָיכֶם הָאָחָד
הַנִּיחֹו אֲתִי וְאַתִּרְעַבְנִי בְּתִיכֶם קָחוּ וְלִכְבוֹ:
³⁴וְהַבָּיאוּ אֶת־אֶחָיכֶם הַקְטָן אַלְיָ וְאַדְעָה
כִּי לֹא מֶרֶגְלִים אַתֶּם כִּי בְּנִים אַתֶּם אֶת־
אֶחָיכֶם אָתָּן לְבָם וְאֶת־הָאָרֶץ תְּסֻחָּרוּ:

³⁵וַיֹּזִי הֵם מְרִיקִים שְׁקָנוּם וְהַנְּהִירָא
צְרוּר־בְּסֶפֶפוֹ בְּשֶׁקֹּו וַיַּרְאָו אֶת־צִרְרוֹת
בְּסֶפֶלְךָם הַמָּה וְאֲבִיכֶם וַיִּרְאָו: ³⁶וַיֹּאמֶר
אֶלְהָם יַעֲקֹב אֲבִיכֶם אָתִי שְׁבַלְתֶּם יוֹסֵף

ONE BROTHER DISCOVERS MONEY IN HIS SACK (42:26–28)

28. “What is this...?” The brothers, like the reader, do not know why the money is in each of their sacks. Will it be the source of economic relief or cause them trouble?

THE BROTHERS REPORT TO JACOB (42:29–35)

35. each one’s money-bag was in his sack. As also in v. 27, above, the Hebrew word binneh (untranslated here, but rendered as “lo” or “behold” elsewhere in this translation) appears at the beginning of this phrase to emphasize the drama of the discovery of the money. Here it also indicates a shift from the narrator’s to the character’s point of view.

JACOB IS DISMAYED MOSTLY OVER THE PROSPECTIVE LOSS OF BENJAMIN (42:36–38)

36. “Joseph is no more, Simeon is no more, and now you would take Benjamin from me.” Jacob may think that the brothers sold Simeon for the money that now appears in their sacks—and that more, Simeon is no more, and now you would take Benjamin from me—all these things have come down on me!”³⁷ Reuben then said to his father, “Put my two sons to death if I do not bring him back to you; give him into my hands, and I will return him to you.”³⁸ But [Jacob] said, “My son shall not go down with you—his brother is dead and he alone remains; if a disaster should befall him on the way that you will be going, you would cause my gray head to go down in anguish to Sheol.”

43 The famine bore heavily on the land,² and when they had consumed the provisions they had brought from Egypt, their father said to them, “Go back and buy us a bit of food!”³ But Judah said to him, “The man adjured us most definitely, saying, ‘You shall not see my face unless your brother is they plan the same fate for Benjamin. Benjamin is Jacob’s youngest son and, as far as Jacob knows, his only surviving son from his beloved wife Rachel, who died in childbirth (35:16–19).

38. But [Jacob] said, “My son shall not go down with you—his brother is dead and he alone remains.” Jacob’s speech illustrates that he cannot be consoled after losing the sons Rachel bore to him, while the loss of his other sons is acceptable. Note the shifting familial language: Jacob refers to Benjamin as “my son” and then Joseph as “his brother,” relating them both back to his love for the deceased Rachel. Jacob is still oblivious to the alienation that such favoritism causes among the brothers. His response—that only Benjamin remains—denies the other ten brothers any place in their father’s family or feelings. It is as if they do not exist for their father.

“cause my gray head to go down in anguish to Sheol.” Jacob uses a Hebrew idiom for dying due to grief—rather than in a good old age—and descending to the realm of the dead. Earlier, Jacob had said he would go down to Sheol in mourning for the loss of Joseph, presumably to seek out his son there (37:35). Although Sheol is the underworld—a place below the ground—it is not to be equated with notions of Hell or a judgment after death. Such ideas did not exist in ancient Israelite thought; going to Sheol was the fate of all human beings.

אִינֶנּוּ וְשָׁמַעַן אֵינֶנוּ וְאַתְּ-בְּנֵיכֶן תְּקַחַו עַלְיָהּ בְּלֹנָה: ³⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר רָאוּבֵן אֶל-אֲבִיוֹ לְאֹמֶר אֶת-שְׁנִי בְּנֵי תָּמִית אָסְ-לָא אֲבִיכֶנוּ אֱלֹךְ תָּנָה אָתוֹ עַל-יְהִיד וְאַנְיִ אֲשִׁיבָנוּ אֱלֹךְ: ³⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר לְאִירְד בְּנֵי עַמָּכֶם כִּי-אָחִיו מֵת וְהָוָא לְבָדוּ נְשָׁאָר וְקָרָאָהוּ אָסְ-זָהָר בְּדָרְךָ אֲשֶׁר תַּלְכִּיבָהּ וְהַרְדַּתָּם אַתְּ שִׁיבָּתִי בִּגְנוֹן שָׁאָולָה:

מג וְהַרְעֵב בְּבֵד בָּאָרֶץ: ² וַיֹּהֵי כַּאֲשֶׁר בָּלוּ לְאָכֵל אֶת-הַשְׁבָּר אֲשֶׁר הָבִיאוּ מִפְּצָרִים וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיכֶם אֲבִיכֶם שָׁבוּ שְׁבָרוֹלְנוּ מַעֲט-אָכֵל: ³ וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיכֶם יְהוָה לְאֹמֶר הַעַד הַעַד בְּנֵו דָאָישׁ לְאֹמֶר לְאִתְרָאוּ פָנֵי

The Second Journey to Egypt, with Benjamin (43:1–44:13a)

Eventually even in Jacob’s enormously wealthy household (30:43), the economic situation in Canaan gets desperate. Judah, the fourth oldest son, is at first as reactive as the rest, but eventually he rises to the occasion and shows real leadership. This enables the family to move forward with a plan.

CONTINUING FAMINE FORCES JACOB TO LET BENJAMIN GO (43:1–14)

3. Judah said to him. Now Judah functions as spokesman for the brothers; previously Reuben had spoken up ineffectually on their behalf (42:37). It may be that Reuben was afraid to challenge his with you.’⁴ If you’re willing to let our brother go with us, we’ll go down and buy food for you,⁵ but if you are not willing to let [him] go, we will not go down; the man said to us: ‘You shall not see my face unless your brother is with you.’”

Israel then said, “Why did you do me this wrong, answering the man[’s question], ‘Have you yet another brother?’”⁶ They answered, “The man questioned us closely about ourselves and our family, saying, ‘Is your father still alive? Do you have a brother?’ So we answered as required by these questions. How on earth could we have known that he would say, ‘Bring your brother down?’”

⁸Judah then said to his father Israel, “Let the lad go with me and let us get up and be on our way, that we may live and not die—we ourselves, and you, and our little ones, as well. ⁹I will be responsible for him: from my hand you may demand him; and if I do not bring him back to you and plant him

בְּלֹתִי אֶחָיךְם אַתֶּכָם :⁴ אֲמִישָׁךְ מַשְׁלֵחַ
אַתְּ אֶחָינוּ אַתָּנוּ נִרְדָה וְנִשְׁבְּרָה לְךָ אַכְלָל:
⁵ וְאַסְ-אַיִנָה מַשְׁלֵחַ לֹא נִרְדָ פִּי-הָאִישׁ
אָמַר אֱלֵינוּ לְאִתְרָאוּ פָנֵי בְּלֹתִי אֶחָיךְם

אַתֶּכָם :
⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר יִשְׂרָאֵל לִמְהָ הַרְעַתָם לֵי לְהִגְיֵד
לְאִישׁ הַעֲדָה לְכֶם אֲחֵיכֶם :⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר שָׂאוֹל
שָׁאלְהָאִישׁ לְנוּ וְלִמְזֻלְתָּהּנוּ לְאָמַר הַעֲדָה
אֲבִיכֶם חִילְיָה לְכֶם אֲחֵיכֶם וְגַדְלָו עַל-פִּי הַדְּבָרִים הָאָלָה הַזְׁדָעָ נִלְעָ בַּיּוֹם
הַזֶּה וְאַתְּ אֶחָיךְם :

⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים-יִשְׂרָאֵל אָבִיו שָׁלֵחָה
הַנְּגָעָר אֲתָּי וְנִקְוָמָה וְנִלְכָה וְנִחְיָה וְלֹא
נִמְתֹה גַּם-אָנַחֲנוּ גַּם-אַתָּה גַּם-טַפְנָנוּ :⁹ אַנְכָל אַעֲרַבָּנוּ מִיקְיָה תִּבְקַשְׁנוּ אַסְ-לָא הַבִּיאָתָנוּ

father directly due to his apparently unsuccessful attempt to usurp Jacob’s role as head of the family when Reuben lay with Bilhah (35:22). However, based on his experience that followed upon his unjust treatment of Tamar (Genesis 38; see further below, v. 9), Judah has meanwhile developed the resolve to speak directly to his father of what needs to be done in order for the family to survive.

6–7. “Why did you do me this wrong... Bring your brother down?” Jacob blames his sons for disclosing the existence of Benjamin. They innocently and honestly respond that they could hardly have foreseen that they would be asked to bring Benjamin with them on their next trip to Egypt. Imagine how Jacob would have felt if he learned at this point of their earlier treatment of Joseph.

9. Judah now takes responsibility for the safe return of Benjamin from Egypt. He introduces the religious language of sin (ch-t-a), here translated as “condemned,” which emphasizes the gravity of Judah’s offer to his father. Judah promises Jacob that he will answer for Benjamin in Egypt. Through their statements we can perceive the concern that the brothers have for their father’s emotional well-being, as well as the depth of Jacob’s love for Benjamin. Although the family of Jacob has been torn apart in many respects, specific sons struggle to keep the family intact as best they can.

“I will be responsible for him.” Heb. e’ervenu, based on the same root (e-r-v) as eravon (“pledge”), found in the Bible only in Genesis 38 (vv. 17, 18, 20). The use of such a rare term suggests a deliberate link to the Tamar and Judah story in Genesis 38—and to Judah’s earlier, hasty responses in that episode. If so, the author may imply that Judah’s more mature behavior results from his encounter with Tamar at “the entrance to Enaim” (38:14), a locale that also can be read as “the opening of the eyes.” The transformation of Judah from a callous son in Genesis 37 to a responsible man who can rise to leadership can be understood, then, as a consequence of his eye-opening experience with Tamar.

in front of you, I shall stand condemned before you for all time. ¹⁰If we hadn't dallied, we could have returned twice by now!" ¹¹Their father Israel then said to them, "If that's the way it must be, do this: take from among the land's choice products in your bags, and bring the man an offering—a bit of balm, a bit of honey, some laudanum, mastic, pistachios, and almonds. ¹²And take double the silver with you, and hand over the silver that was returned in your bags—it may have been a mistake. ¹³[Yes,] take your brother, get going, and go back to the man! ¹⁴May El Shaddai give you mercy before that man, so that he lets you and your other brother and Benjamin go! And as for me—if I am bereaved, I am bereaved!"

¹⁵The men then took this offering, and taking in hand the double portion of silver, along with Benjamin, they got going and went down to Egypt, and stood before Joseph. ¹⁶When Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the one in charge of his household, "Bring the men into the house and slaughter an animal and prepare [it], for [these] men are going to eat with me at noon." ¹⁷The man did as Joseph said; the man brought the men into Joseph's house. ¹⁸The men were frightened when they were brought into Joseph's house; they thought: "It is on account of the silver that came back in our bags the first time that we're being brought [here]—in order to fall upon us, to pounce on us, to take us as slaves, along with our asses." ¹⁹They therefore approached the man in charge of Joseph's household and spoke to him at the entrance of the house, ²⁰saying, "By your leave, my lord, the last time we came down to buy food,

אליך והצגתיו לפניו וחתמתי לך כל־הימים: ¹⁰ כי לולא התחממהנו כי עתה שבנו זהה פעמים: ¹¹ ויאמר אליהם ישראל אביהם אמרן ואפוא זאת עשו קחו מזمرة הארץ בכליכם והורידו לאיש מנחה מעט צרי ומיעט דבש נכאת לטל בטנים ושקדים: ¹² וכסף משנה קחו בידכם ואת־הכסף המושב בפי אמתחותיכם תשיבו בידכם أولי משגה הוא: ¹³ ואת־אחיכם קחו וקומו שובו אל־האיש: ¹⁴ ראל שדי יתן לכם רחמים לפני האיש ושלח לכם את־אחיכם אחר ואת־בנימין ואני באשר שכלהתי שכלהתי: ¹⁵ ויקחו האנשים את־המנחה הזאת וממנה הכסף לקחו בידם ואת־בניים ויקמו וירדו מצרים ויעמדו לפני יוסף: ¹⁶ וירא יוסף אתם את־בניים ויאמר לאשר על־ביתו הבא את־האנשים הביתה ויטבח טבח ויהכני כי אני יאללו האנשים בצדדים: ¹⁷ ויעש האיש באשר אמר יוסף ויבא האיש את־האנשים כי הובאו בית יוסף ויראו האנשים כי הובאו בית יוסף ויאמרו על־דבר הכסף שהשbab באמתחותינו בתחלה אנחנו מוכאים להתגלל עליהם ולהתנפל עליהם ולחתות אותנו לעברים ואת־חמורינו: ¹⁸ ויגשו אל־האיש אשר על־בית יוסף וידברו אליו פתח הבית: ²⁰ ויאמרו כי אדרני ירד ירدني בתחלת

14. “if I am bereaved, I am bereaved!” [Jacob expresses his resignation in a manner resembling that of Queen Esther when Mordechai convinces her to risk her life. Her words: “If I am to perish, I shall perish” (Esther 4:16). —Ed.]

THE BROTHERS APPEAR BEFORE JOSEPH (43:15–34)

Joseph's generous hospitality toward his brothers—who still do not know who he is—takes them off guard. Possibly he is trying to lull them into a false sense of security.

²¹when we got to the night lodging and opened our bags, each one's silver was in the mouth of his bag—the exact amount that had been weighed out, and we have brought it back with us. ²²And we have brought other money to buy food—we don't know who put our silver in our bags.” ²³He replied, “You're all right; have no fear. Your god and your father's god has given you a hidden treasure in your bags—your money reached me!” And he brought Simeon out to them.

²⁴The man then ushered the men into Joseph's house; he supplied water and they washed their feet, and he gave fodder to their asses. ²⁵They laid out the offering for the arrival of Joseph at noon, for they had heard that they would eat food there. ²⁶When Joseph entered the house they presented to him the offering they had brought into the house, and they bowed down before him to the ground. ²⁷He asked them how they were, and said, “How is your aged father of whom you spoke? Is he still alive?” ²⁸They said, “Your servant our father is well; he is still alive.” And they knelt and bowed down.

²⁹He looked up and saw his [full] brother Benjamin, his mother's son, and he said, “Is this your youngest brother you told me about?” And he added, “God be gracious to you, my son!” ³⁰Joseph hurried [out], for he was so deeply stirred with tender warmth toward his brother that he wanted to weep; he went into an [inner] chamber and there he wept. ³¹He washed his face, and when he came out, he held himself in check and said, “Serve food!” ³²They served him separately and them separately and the Egyptians who usually ate with him separately, for the Egyptians could not eat food with the Hebrews, since it was an abomination to the Egyptians.

לשבר-אָכֶל: ²¹ וַיֹּהִי בִּירְבָּאנּו אֶל-הַמְלֹן וְנִפְתְּחָה אֶת-אָמְתָחָתֵינוּ וְהַגָּה בְּסַף-אִישׁ בְּפִי אָמְתָחָתוֹ בְּסַפְנוּ בְּמִשְׁקָלוֹ וְנִשְׁבַּע אֹתוֹ בִּירְנוּ: ²² וּבְסַף אַחֲרַ הַוּרְדָנוּ בִּירְנוּ לְשִׁבְרָאָכֶל לֹא יָלַעַנוּ מִיְשָׁם בְּסַפְנוּ בְּאָמְתָחָתֵינוּ: ²³ וַיֹּאמֶר שְׁלֹום לְכֶם אֶל-תִּירְאוּ אֶל-הַיּוֹם וְאֶל-הָיִם אֲבִיכֶם נָתַן לְכֶם מַטְמוֹן בְּאָמְתָחָתֵיכֶם בְּסַפְכֶם בָּא אֶל-וַיֹּצֵא אֶל-הַמִּתְשֻׁמְעָן:

²⁴ וַיָּבֹא הָאִישׁ אֶת-הָאָנָשִׁים בֵּיתָה יוֹסֵף וַיִּתְּמִימִים וַיִּרְחֹצּוּ רְגִלֵּיהֶם וַיִּתְּנַזֵּן מִסְפּוֹא לְחַמְרֵיהֶם: ²⁵ וַיָּלִינוּ אֶת-הַמְנָחָה עַד-בֹּא יוֹסֵף בְּعֶצֶրִים כִּי שְׁמַעוּ בְּיִשְׁשָׁם יָאָכְלָוּ לִחְם: ²⁶ וַיָּבֹא יוֹסֵף הַבְּיִתָּה וַיִּבְאֹו לֹא אֶת-הַמְנָחָה אֲשֶׁר-בְּיִדְםָם הַבְּיִתָּה וַיִּשְׁתַּחֲווּ-יְרֵא אֶרְץָה: ²⁷ וַיִּשְׁאַל לְהָם לְשָׁלוֹם וַיֹּאמֶר הַשָּׁלוֹם אֲבִיכֶם הַזָּקָן אֲשֶׁר אָמַרְתָּם הַעֲזָנוּ חַי: ²⁸ וַיֹּאמְרוּ שְׁלֹום לְעַבְדָּךְ לְאָכְלֵנוּ עַזְרָנוּ חַי וַיִּקְרֹב וַיִּשְׁתַּחֲווּ: ²⁹ וַיָּשָׂא עִינָיו וַיָּרַא אֶת-בְּנָמִין אֲחִיו בָּנָי אָמוֹ וַיֹּאמֶר הַזֶּה אָחִיךְם הַקָּטָן אֲשֶׁר אָמַרְתָּם אֲלֵי וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-הָיִם יִחְנֶן בְּנֵי: ³⁰ וַיִּמְהַר יוֹסֵף קִרְבָּמְרוּ רְחִמְיוֹ אֶל-אֶחָיו וַיִּבְקַשׁ לְבָכֹות וַיָּבֹא הַחֲדָרָה וַיִּבְךְ שְׁמָה: ³¹ וַיִּרְחֹצֵן פָּנָיו וַיֵּצֵא וַיַּתְאַפֵּק וַיֹּאמֶר שְׁיִמְצֵא לִחְם: ³² וַיִּשְׁמַמוּ לֹא לְבָדוּ וְלֹהֶם לְבָדָם וְלִמְצָרָים הַאֲכָלִים אֹתוֹ לְבָדָם כִּי לֹא יוּכְלוּ הַמִּצְרִים לְאָכֵל אֶת-הָעָבָרִים לִחְם כִּי-תֹּועֶבֶת הָוֹא לִמְצָרִים:

27. Joseph's first concern is his father. But when he sees Benjamin, he most deeply reacts.

30. with tender warmth. Heb. rachamim (literally “innards”—taken as the bodily locus of compassion) is not gender specific, unlike rechem (womb), which only women possess.

there he wept. This is the second time we are told that Joseph weeps; see at 42:24, above.

³³As they were seated before him, the first-born according to his seniority and the youngest according to his youth, the men looked at each other in amazement. ³⁴He presented portions [of food] to them from what was in front of him—Benjamin’s portion exceeded all of theirs fivefold—and they drank and grew drunk with him. 44 [Afterward,] he commanded the one in charge of his household, saying, “Fill the men’s bags with food, as much as they can carry, and put each man’s silver in the mouth of his bag. ²And put my goblet—the silver goblet—in the mouth of the youngest one’s bag along with the silver for his grain.” He did just as Joseph instructed.

³At morning light, the men were sent off—they and their asses. ⁴They had left the city [but] had not gone far, when Joseph said to the one in charge of his household, “Get going, pursue the men; when you overtake them, say to them: ‘Why did you repay good with evil? ⁵This is what my master drinks from and with which he constantly practices divination! Have you not caused harm by what you have done?’”

34. Benjamin’s portion exceeded all of theirs fivefold. Joseph’s overt favoritism of Benjamin may indicate his own affection for the only other son borne by his mother Rachel. But Joseph may be testing his brothers to determine whether or not their jealousy toward Jacob’s favorite now applies to Benjamin, now the perceived favorite son. Joseph treats his full brother differently from his half-brothers. By the brothers’ and the narrator’s identifying the sons not only through their father but also by their mother (see also v. 29), we understand that the mother matters, not only the father.

JOSEPH TESTS THE BROTHERS (44:1–2)

Genesis 42 had begun a reenactment of scenes from Joseph’s early experience with his brothers.

³³וַיִּשְׁבּוּ לִפְנֵי הַבָּכָר בְּכֶרֶת וְהַצְעִיר בְּצַעֲרָתוֹ וַיִּתְהַמֵּהוּ הָאֲנָשִׁים אִישׁ אֶל־רַעַהוּ: ³⁴וַיִּשְׂאַל מִשְׁאָת מֵאת פָּנָיו אֱלֹהֶם וַתִּרְבֵּב מִשְׁאָת בְּנִימָן מִמְשָׁאָת בְּלִם חַמְשׁ יְדֹות וַיִּשְׁתַּנוּ וַיִּשְׁבְּרוּ עַפְנוֹ: מַד וַיַּצְוֵל אֶת־אָמְתָחָת אֲשֶׁר עַל־בִּיתוֹ לְאָמֵר מַלְא אֶת־אָמְתָחָת הָאֲנָשִׁים אֶכְל כַּאֲשֶׁר יוּכְלוּ שָׁאת וַיִּשְׂמַח פָּסָק־אִישׁ בְּפִי אָמְתָחָתוֹ ² וְאֶת־גְּבִיעִי גְּבִיעַ הַבָּסָף תְּשִׁיט בְּפִי אָמְתָחָת הַקְּטָן וְאֶת בָּסָף שְׁבָרוּ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה קָדְבָר יוֹסֵף אֲשֶׁר דָּבַר:

³הַבָּקָר אָור וְהָאֲנָשִׁים שָׁלָחוּ הַפָּמָה וְחַמְרִיהֶם: ⁴הֵם יֵצֵא אֶת־דְּחִיעֵיר לְאַרְחֵיקוֹ וַיּוֹסֵף אֶמְרֵל לְאָשֶׁר עַל־בִּיתוֹ קָוָם רְדוּךְ אַחֲרֵי הָאֲנָשִׁים וְהַשְׁגַּתְמָן וְאִמְרָתָן אֱלֹהֶם לְפָה שְׁלָמָתָם רָעה תְּחַת טוֹבָה: ⁵הַלּוֹא זֶה אֲשֶׁר יִשְׂתַּחַת אֶדְנִי בּוֹ וְהַזָּה נִחְשֵׁב בּוֹ הַרְעָתָם אֲשֶׁר עָשִׂיתָם:

Now begins the concluding episode that addresses these issues.

2. “silver goblet.” The cup to be placed in Benjamin’s sack is made of silver, recalling that Joseph was sold to the Ishmaelites for silver (37:28).

THE BROTHERS ARE CHARGED WITH THEFT (44:3–13a)

3–5. Joseph instructs his steward to charge the brothers with theft.

5. “This is what my master drinks from and with which he constantly practices divination!” In the ancient Near East, divination by liquids involved interpreting the liquid in a bowl or cup as an indicator of events to come, comparable to reading tea leaves today.

⁶He overtook them and spoke all these words to them, ⁷and they said to him, “Why is my lord speaking such words? Far be it from your servants to do such a thing! ⁸Look—we brought you back the silver that we found in the mouth of our bags [all the way] from the land of Canaan; why would we steal silver or gold from your master’s house? ⁹Let anyone caught with it among your servants die, and we for our part will become my lord’s slaves.” ¹⁰He replied, “Yes, right away, just as you say, so shall it be—but while he who is caught with it shall be my slave, the rest of you shall be cleared.” ¹¹They hastened to lower their bags to the ground, and each opened his bag. ¹²He began searching with the eldest and ended with the youngest, until he found the goblet in Benjamin’s bag. ¹³They tore their mantles; each then reloaded his ass and they went back to the city.

⁶וַיִּשְׁגֹּם וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵהֶם אֶת־הָדָבָרִים הָאָלָה: ⁷וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיכָו לִמְהִיא יְדַבֵּר אֶת־נִזְבְּחָה כָּלִילָה לְעַבְדִּיכָּה מְעֻשָׂות פְּדָבָר הַזֹּה: ⁸הָנָן בְּסֶף אֲשֶׁר מִצְאָנוּ בְּפִי אַמְתָּחָתֵינוּ הַשִּׁבְעָנָה אֶלְيָךְ מְאָרֶץ בְּנֵנוּ וְאַיִלְךְ נָגַנְבָּה מִבֵּית אֶדְנִיךְ בְּסֶף אָוֹ זָהָב: ⁹אֲשֶׁר יִמְצָא אַתָּה מַעֲבָדִיךְ וְמַתָּה וְגַם־ אַנְחָנוּ נָהִיָּה לְאֶדְנִי לְעַבְדִּים: ¹⁰וַיֹּאמֶר גַּם־ עַתָּה כְּדָבָרִיכֶם בְּנִיהָא אֲשֶׁר יִמְצָא אַתָּה יְהִיחָדְלֵי שָׁבֵד וְאַתָּם תִּהְיוּ נְקִים: ¹¹וַיָּמְהַרֵּז וַיּוֹרְדוּ אִישׁ אֶת־אַמְתָּחָתוֹ אֶרְצָה וַיַּפְתַּח אִישׁ אַמְתָּחָתוֹ: ¹²וַיַּחֲפַש בָּגְדָל הַתְּלָ וּבָקָטֵן בְּלָה וַיִּמְצָא הַגְּבִיעַ בָּאַמְתָּחָת בְּנֵיכֶן: ¹³וַיִּקְרַעוּ שְׁמַלְתֵּם וַיַּעֲמַל אִישׁ עַל־חַמּוֹר וַיָּשָׁבוּ הַעִירָה:

9. “Let anyone caught with it among your servants die.” The brothers’ rash statement, like Jacob’s in 31:32, condemns the “thief” to death, but it will have bearing on the fate of all the brothers.

10. The steward agrees that the harsh sentence is just, but he promises a lighter punishment.

12. eldest...youngest. This search scene continues to recall the one in which Laban searched throughout the tents of his nephew’s family, ending up in the tent of his youngest daughter, Rachel (31:30–35). Now the present search ends with her youngest son, Benjamin.

13. They tore their mantles. The tearing of the clothing reflects the brothers’ concern that Benjamin would be torn from their family. (The custom of tearing one’s clothes as an act of mourning is still followed today.) His fate appears to have been sealed by his brothers’ own words (v. 9). Thus once again they have set up one of Rachel’s offspring to become a slave. Indeed, these brothers had caused their father likewise to tear his garment—more than two decades earlier (37:34).

The Third Appearance before Joseph

THE FINAL TEST (44:13b–17)

The vizier’s missing goblet has been found in Benjamin’s bag (v. 12), suggesting that he stole it. Benjamin stands accused but lacks the ability to prove his innocence. Surely he will be enslaved and remain in Egypt, presumably for the rest of his life. Benjamin’s voice is heard nowhere in the entire narrative. Although he is now at the heart of the story, it is not really about him, but rather about the relationship of his brothers to each other and to their father. (In this regard he resembles his half-sister Dinah in Genesis 34.)

At this point the rest of the brothers—having narrowly escaped slavery themselves—are free to return home. Remarkably, they do not do so. Instead, they return with Benjamin to face the vizier (Joseph), who challenges them to account for their deed. Judah replies, and a dialogue ensues.

At this juncture, the psychological dynamics of ¹⁴Judah and his brothers entered Joseph's house; he was still there. They fell to the ground before him. ¹⁵Joseph said to them, "What is this deed that you have done? Did you not know that a man like me constantly practices divination?" ¹⁶Judah replied, "What can we say to my lord? How speak and how justify ourselves? God has found out the iniquity of your servants; here we are, my lord's slaves—both we and the one who was caught with the goblet in his possession!"

¹⁷But he said, "Far be it from me to do this! The man in whose possession the goblet was found, he shall be my slave, and the rest of you—go up in peace to your father."

these events operate on multiple levels. Thus we may speculate that Judah is haunted by guilt over what the brothers (without Benjamin's involvement) did to Joseph long ago—and he feels that they must finally pay for their actions (see 42:21). Judah's remarks can then refer both to the present unfortunate reality of the goblet in Benjamin's sack and to the brothers' past behavior toward Joseph.

THE BROTHERS APPEAR BEFORE JOSEPH (44:13b–15)

14. Judah and his brothers. Contrast this designation with 43:15–44:4. Since they left Canaan for Egypt, this party has been referred to—ten times in a row—only as ha-anashim (traditionally rendered as “the men”). The shift in language is significant; it may hint at the fraternal solidarity that forces on Judah the role of spokesperson for the brothers.

JUDAH'S CONFESSION (44:16)

Judah acknowledges that all of the brothers are guilty before God, although he presumably believes that none of them is guilty of the crime in question.

¹⁴וַיָּבֹא יְהוָה וְאֶחָיו בֵּיתָה יוֹסֵף וְהִוא עֹזֵב שָׁם וַיַּפְלֹא לִפְנֵיו אֶרְצָה: ¹⁵וַיֹּאמֶר לְהָם יוֹסֵף מִהִתְמַעַשָּׂה הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר עָשִׂיתֶם הַלּוֹא יְדַעְתֶּם כִּי־נִחַשׁ אַיִשׁ אֲשֶׁר בְּמַנְנֵי: ¹⁶וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה מִהִנְאָמָר לְאָדָן מִהִנְדַּרְבָּר וּמִהִגְצַטְדָּק הַאֲלֹהִים מֵאֶת־עַזְן עֲבָדִיךְ הַנֶּנוּ עֲבָדִים לְאָדָן גַּם־אָנַחֲנוּ גַּם אֲשֶׁר־נִמְצָא הַגְּבִיעַ בְּיַדוֹ: ¹⁷וַיֹּאמֶר חֲלִילָה לֵי מַעֲשׂות זֹאת הָאִישׁ אֲשֶׁר נִמְצָא הַגְּבִיעַ בְּיַדוֹ הוּא יְהִיא לֵי עָבֵד וְאַתֶּם עַלְוָה לְשָׁלוֹם אֶל־אֲבִיכֶם: פ

JOSEPH DEMANDS ONLY BENJAMIN (44:17)

Joseph sets up the brothers in order to test them. He intends to find out whether or not they have changed since when they threw him in a pit. In other words, Joseph intends to determine if the brothers will abandon Benjamin as earlier they had abandoned Joseph himself. He is also trying to set them up to face the prospect of their father's grief over the loss of a favorite son.

“go up in peace to your father.” The last words of this parashah remind us of the peace that Jacob had lost when his ten oldest sons showed him Joseph's bloodied coat (37:32). The parashah ends as a cliff-hanger, with the story's resolution still to come in the parashah that follows.

—Naomi Steinberg

Another View

"PHARAOH'S DREAM WAS REPEATED—two times—because the matter has been fixed by God, and God is making haste to accomplish it" (41:32).

Why are there so many repetitions in the Hebrew Bible—and in the Torah especially? The Bible usually does not spell out its poetic principles, so that readers are obliged to deduce them from the text itself. Scholars since the 19th century have explained repetition in the Bible as due to its editors having drawn from different sources. But in this parashah, Genesis 41:32 uniquely offers what amounts to a poetic statement, explaining the need for narrative repetition.

The reader wonders why Pharaoh dreams twice—first of cows, then of ears of grain. Joseph explains that "Pharaoh's dream is one: what God is doing, [God] has revealed to Pharaoh" (41:25). Thus the two dreams have a single solution: God is informing Pharaoh that seven years of abundance will be followed by seven years of famine. But if a single dream would have sufficed, why are there two, and why do they follow so closely? Verse 32 explains that repetition right away means that God had decided the matter and would shortly carry it out.

A close reading reveals that the repetition is not confined to Pharaoh's dreams but recurs throughout the Joseph story. Joseph himself has two dreams (37:5–9), though not close together—meaning that they would not be realized immediately. Moreover, this story cycle's use of repeated occurrences—not necessarily dreams—justifies characterizing its plot as advancing by paired structures. For example: Joseph escapes being killed by his brothers thanks to two rescue attempts (37:18–30); the brothers go to Egypt twice to procure rations (42:1–43:25); Joseph twice acts like a stranger to them and punishes them (42:7–28, 44), and more. We may conclude that repetition does not necessarily indicate a plurality of sources or traditions; it may also represent a poetical principle, a device that indicates a fixed divine intention—and sometimes its imminent actualization. In this manner, parashat Mikeitz offers an interpretation of more than Pharaoh's dreams. It holds a key to the literary and theological use of repetition throughout the Hebrew Bible.

This parashah explains why the Bible so often resorts to narrative repetition.

—Yairah Amit

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

Pharaoh woke up (41:7). Many ancient Jews used to reflect on a passage from the Torah by juxtaposing it with a passage from the Prophets—called a haftarah—that contains similar themes, turns of phrase, or both. A widely attested haftarah with parashat Mikeitz is I Kings 3:15–4:1, which is the norm even today. Royal dreams form one connection between the two biblical passages. The haftarah echoes the parashah verbally by opening with the words "Solomon woke up," and then it relates that Israel's new king had been dreaming.

no one could interpret them (41:8). In B'reishit Rabbah 89.6, the Rabbis explain that Pharaoh's magicians interpreted his dreams incorrectly. According to the sorcerers, the healthy cows foretold that Pharaoh would sire seven daughters; the starving cows signified that he would bury seven daughters.

MIKEITZ

“as he interpreted for us, so it came to be” (41:13). Rabbi Eliezer states that “all dreams follow the mouth”; that is, a dream comes true according to how it is interpreted (BT B'rachot 55b). As an example, B'reishit Rabbah 89.8 recounts that a woman came to him and told him of a recurring dream in which her house split open. The first two times she came to the sage, he told her she would give birth to a boy. The third time the rabbi was away; his students told the woman that her husband would die and this immediately came to pass.

“All dreams follow the mouth.”

When the rabbi heard her laments, he accused his students of killing the husband, and cited this verse as his proof. As the anecdote indicates, power rests not in the dream itself, but in the skill, wisdom, and righteousness of the interpreter.

“Since God has made all this known to you, there is no one as discerning and wise as you!” (41:39). The haftarah cited above reiterates the parashah’s mention of wisdom when it recounts how two prostitutes come before King Solomon. Each had recently given birth, but one of the babies had died during the night. Now each woman insists that the living boy is hers. Solomon orders that the surviving baby be cut in two, to be divided between the claimants. When one woman pleads for the child’s life by agreeing to give the baby to the other woman, Solomon declares her to be the true mother. Thereupon, we read, the people “held the king in awe, seeing that he had within him divine wisdom” (I Kings 3:15–4:1).

and gave him Asenath daughter of Potiphera priest of On as a wife (41:45). Uncomfortable with the Bible’s implication that Joseph married a non-Israelite, Jews of the Hellenistic period composed a romance (Joseph and Asenath) in which Asenath, the most beautiful young virgin in Egypt, converts to belief in the one true God before her marriage to Joseph. During the seven years of plenty, Joseph—as second-in-command to Pharaoh—would travel throughout Egypt to collect corn. He stopped at the home of Pentephres (Potiphera, Asenath’s father), where he met the bejeweled and richly attired Asenath. Upon her first sighting of Joseph, the haughty Asenath is smitten by the beauty of this man whom she first considered to be a common Israelite shepherd. Asenath’s parents suggest that the two beautiful virgins kiss, but Joseph declines to kiss a woman who eats the sacrificial meat of idols. Asenath retires to her chambers (a high tower) to don sackcloth and ashes and repent before God for her sins of idol worship and selfishness. She throws away her idols, fasts, prays, and humbles herself. On the eighth day of her self-flagellation, an angel appears in Asenath’s room and converts her to Judaism in an otherwise unknown ceremony involving a honeycomb and bees. Joseph returns, sees that Asenath is even more beautiful than before, and—having been informed by the angel of Asenath’s conversion—agrees to marry her in a ceremony before Pharaoh.

Later midrashic traditions also demonstrate uneasiness with the implications of Joseph’s marrying the daughter of an Egyptian priest. The sages told that Asenath was actually Dinah’s daughter from her liaison with Shechem (Genesis 34). To prevent public disgrace to his family when the child was born out of wedlock, Jacob had placed an amulet engraved with the divine name around the baby’s neck, and the angel Gabriel had carried her to Potiphar’s house in Egypt —where Potiphar’s childless wife raised her as her own daughter. (The Rabbis also insisted that Potiphar, Joseph’s master, was identical to Potiphera, Joseph’s father-in-law. See also Vayishlach, Post-biblical Interpretations, at 34:26.) Thus, according to this legend, Joseph ends up marrying his niece—a permitted marriage in Jewish law—and both are preserved from marrying outsiders.

—Deborah Green

Contemporary Reflection

THE PAINFUL PAST casts a long shadow on parashat Mikeitz. A father's insensitive treatment of his sons—and the resulting sibling rivalry—form the backdrop to this tale. Though the women are never explicitly mentioned here, Jacob's relationship to his sons' mothers underlies his attitude toward their children. Among his wives, Jacob loves Rachel only, paying scant attention to Leah and the sisters' maidservants. Likewise, Jacob clearly favors Joseph—Rachel's first-born—showing little evidence of affection toward his other children. Blind to the difficult family dynamic he engenders, Jacob had sent Joseph alone to check on his brothers (37:13–14), setting up a situation ripe with the potential for disaster. Joseph's ensuing disappearance does nothing to stop Jacob from now favoring yet another son, Benjamin, Rachel's second (see 42:4).

But healing and transformation also begin here. A hint of what is to come is encapsulated in the name Joseph chooses for his first son, Manasseh, “For God has made me forget all the troubles I endured in my father’s house” (41:51). Clearly Joseph has not forgotten his troubles if they form the basis of his son’s name. Rather, it seems that the past is no longer a burden to him. He is able to thrive despite the horrors he suffered in the pit where his jealous brothers threw him (37:24). The name of Joseph’s second son, Ephraim, expresses this forward movement: “For God has made me fruitful in the land of my affliction” (41:52). His marriage to Asenath indeed bears fruit: their children will become tribes of Israel.

Joseph soon enables his older brothers to achieve a new relationship with their past as well, creating a set of circumstances that provides them with the opportunity to respond to favoritism differently. That would represent true t’shuva (literally “return”), as the medieval Spanish rabbi and philosopher Moses Maimonides describes it: t’shuva has occurred when a person, confronted with the opportunity to commit a transgression anew, refrains from doing so—not out of fear of being caught or failure of strength (Mishneh Torah, Hilchot T’shuva § 2.1). T’shuva is, indeed, a primary theme of parashat Mikeitz. The word, too often mistranslated as “repentance,” actually means “return”—to the right path. Whereas “repentance” connotes remorse and self-flagellation, “return” suggests a kind of joyous homecoming. Our mistakes, rather than serving solely as a source of guilt, become also a springboard of opportunity.

Perhaps unwittingly, the brothers had begun the process of t’shuva before meeting Joseph again in Egypt. In 42:1, at home with their father, they are referred to as Jacob’s sons. Two verses later, on their way to Egypt, we read, “So Joseph’s brothers went down . . .” Restating classic midrashim, Rashi opines that “they set their hearts on conducting themselves toward him as brothers.” This is an optimistic reading, but the language does suggest a change in their relationship to Joseph—though one that is undoubtedly buried beneath layers of guilt and denial.

They come to terms with their father’s failings, choosing compassion over anger.

Joseph manipulates the situation so that the brothers’ feelings can rise to the surface. Simeon is held back as ransom. Alarmed at the prospect of returning home to their father one brother short, the brothers recall their cruelty of more than twenty years ago: “Oh, we are being punished on account of our brother! We saw his soul’s distress when he pleaded with us, but we didn’t listen . . .” (42:21). Perhaps because they could not hear him then, Joseph’s pleading was not mentioned in the initial narrative (Genesis 37). Now, for the first time, the brothers exhibit empathy toward

MIKEITZ

Joseph. According to Marsha Pravder Mirkin, empathy is the key to t'shuva: “Empathy . . . is valuing another person enough to listen and hear her voice. It is a halting that then allows us to take action . . . that brings us closer to becoming the best we can be” (“Hearken to Her Voice: Empathy as Teshuva,” in Gail Twersky Reimer and Judith A. Kates, eds., Beginning Anew: A Woman’s Companion to the High Holy Days, 1997, p. 70).

When the brothers return to their father in Canaan, a significant transformation has occurred. The first indication is their report of their time in Egypt: the brothers demonstrate a newfound sensitivity to their father’s feelings, sparing Jacob some of the more disturbing details of their journey. Modern Israeli commentator Nehama Leibowitz points out, for example, that they omit Joseph’s original plan to keep all but one of them in Egypt (42:16) and the threat of death (42:20) (New Studies in Bereshit/Genesis, undated, pp. 471–2). Then, in the face of their father’s fear for Benjamin’s life, Reuben offers his own sons’ lives in pledge for Benjamin’s (42:37). This is an impulsive and ill-conceived gesture—yet a marked change for the man whose idea it was to throw Joseph into the pit (37:22). Finally Judah, who had convinced his brothers to sell Joseph to the Ishmaelites (37:27), offers to take personal responsibility for the life of his youngest brother (43:9). Clearly, Judah is the brother who has matured and evolved the most.

He and his brothers have made peace with their father’s favoritism. We might imagine that, after Joseph forces them to confront their guilt, they realize that their earlier violent response to their father’s unequal love has not changed Jacob. Aware that hurting Jacob or Benjamin will not get them greater attention from their father, they come to terms with Jacob’s failings, choosing compassion over anger in their dealings with him.

This parashah ends mid-action, leaving us to wonder: Will Joseph really enslave Benjamin? How will the brothers respond? Will Joseph reveal his identity? The answers are not clear—because neither Joseph’s motivation for putting his brothers through this ordeal, nor their commitment to ethical behavior, are fully actualized until the next parashah. Perhaps the Rabbis broke off the story here to suggest that our choices are moment-to-moment decisions, the path never certain until the time comes to act. This cliff-hanger ending is also a signal of hope, because t'shuva is always open to us.

—Suzanne Singer

• • • • •

Another Contemporary Reflection

ACCORDING TO parashat Mikeitz, Joseph marries an Egyptian. Their children, Ephraim and Manasseh (41:45–52), subsequently become progenitors of two Israelite tribes. A traditional blessing of children invokes these sons’ names. Around the Sabbath table for many generations, parents of sons have been reciting (as one English translation renders it): “May you be like Ephraim and Manasseh.” This biblical precedent, which recognizes the children of a non-Israelite mother as equal—even distinguished—members of Israel, invites an examination of assumptions as to who is counted as part of the people Israel and on what basis.

Most biblical texts implicitly reflect patrilineal descent: the child’s membership is determined by that of the father, not the mother. A major exception is the book of Ezra, which excludes foreign wives with their children from the community (Ezra 10:3). The implication: these children, like the mother, do not belong to Israel even though their fathers are Israelites.

In the post-biblical era, rabbinic halachah determined what became normative in Judaism: a child of a Jewish mother is a Jew. (For a detailed discussion, see Shaye Cohen, The Beginning of Jewishness, 1999.)

In 1983, the Central Conference of American Rabbis voted to return to patrilineal descent while also retaining matrilineal descent. The resolution required that in the case of intermarriage, a child's Jewish identity must be confirmed through "acts of identification with the Jewish people" and "the performance of mitzvoth" (if either the mother or father is Jewish). According to this formulation, lineage is not determined by genetics alone but by identification with the Jewish people and by Jewish practice.

Rabbi Alexander Schindler, the visionary behind this effort, viewed this resolution as an extension of his vision of Outreach in response to the growing reality of intermarriage in American Jewish life. But he viewed the return to patrilineality also as an egalitarian issue. At a 1986 conference on Jewish unity he noted, "Why should a movement that from its birth-hour insisted on the full equality of men and women in religious life unquestioningly accept the principle that Jewish lineage is valid through the maternal line alone—all the more so because there is substantial support in our tradition for the validity of Jewish lineage through the paternal line?" (Princeton, New Jersey; March 16, 1986). (The Reconstructionist movement likewise adopted patrilineal descent as valid. The Conservative movement and Orthodox Jews do not accept patrilineal descent as defining who is a Jew.)

While patrilineal descent has been criticized harshly across the greater Jewish world for dividing the Jewish people, its supporters see its inclusion not as a movement away from tradition but as a transition back to certain biblical roots in light of changed circumstances. Thus Rabbi Bernard Zlotowitz writes that

Who is counted as part of the people Israel?

"the changes enacted in the Reform movement fall within the traditional parameters of Judaism as a living faith. In times of necessity and for the welfare of the people, halachah was revised and traditions set aside in favor of more adaptive ones" ("Patrilineal Descent," in The Jewish Condition, ed. Aron Hirt-Manheimer, 1995, p. 265). Zlotowitz notes several examples of adaptive changes that have become part of the halachah: the removal of the laws of the sotah (the wife suspected of adultery as in Numbers 5—see Naso, Contemporary Reflection, p. 838), and the abolition of the husband's right to divorce his wife without cause. These examples are similar in that the changed laws aim to provide for the Jewish community's preservation and continuity in the face of changing circumstances and values.

—Judy Schindler

Voices

Joseph and Pharaoh

Ruth Brin

Genesis 41

The nakedness of Joseph before Pharaoh was the nakedness of an elm tree in the winter.

Not like the pine, whose branches hold the snow, and bend and break in the cold, stood Joseph,
But like the elm, stripped of his colored garments,
the ornaments of his youthful summer, stripped of his pride as favorite son,
of his pretensions to rule his brothers,
Yet rooted in the teachings of his fathers, as the elm tree is rooted in the even temperature of the deep earth,
Joseph stood before the king of Egypt.

The fine branches of his intellect and the myriad fibers of his nerves were exposed to the chilling air of the court.
The nakedness of Joseph before the Pharaoh was a nakedness which both exposes and protects.

It is the nakedness of Jacob before the Wrestler—
for Jacob had sent his wealth, his family, his pretensions and his pride, across the river.

It is the nakedness of Moses before God—for Moses had left behind him the power and the privilege of a prince in Egypt.

It is the nakedness of the Jew in history—
the nakedness of honesty and humility, of innocence and abnegation, of deep roots and bare branches,

of protection and exposure.

It is a nakedness neither to escape nor embrace, but to accept, if it comes, as we have done in every age.

Pharaoh and Joseph

Else Lasker-Schüler (transl. Janine Canan)

Genesis 41:39–40

Pharaoh casts off his blossoming wives—they smell of Amon's gardens.

His kingly head rests on my shoulder, that emanates the scent of corn.

Pharaoh is made of gold.
His eyes come and go like iridescent Nile waves.

But his heart lies in my blood—ten wolves ran to my wells.

Pharaoh ruminates about my brothers,
who threw me into the pit.

In sleep his arms become pillars—threatening!

But his dreamy heart
thunders in my depths.

Therefore my lips compose vast sweetresses
in the wheat of our dawn.

Asenath's Plea to Her Husband Joseph

Sherry Blumberg

Genesis 41:45

Joseph, you will bring these men
To the house we share.
They are your brothers, are they not?
Our steward will greet them,
I'll send water to wash their feet
We will do what is right and proper
You will test them
And I will support you.

But Joseph, I beg you
Do not ever ask me to love them
For they have meant you great harm
And I cannot forgive.
You will make yourself known one day
And I will do what is right and proper
For my love is towards you
The father of my sons

And Joseph, when in the future
Your sons are remembered
Please do not deny me—
Else the love that we shared
The lives we've created
Will be lessened by it.
I am the daughter of a priest
And I am your wife.

me in Dagon Silo in Haifa,
you far away back in Cairo.

Joseph in Egypt land, Canaanite jugs, ritual bronze sickles from temples, crushing-stones, mill-stones and mortars—all link me back to you on old rusty scales.

I remember your orange-beige office in Cairo's Mouski, with deaf Tohami weighing the heavy sacks of flour and grain
on old rusty scales.

And me listening unaware to the birds' chirped warning on the beams of your ceiling:
“Wandering Jew, open your Jewish eyes, you will soon have to spread your wings again, and look for new nest.”

Mighty Dagon's giant arms storing in bulk, fill my own silo with tears that you are not here with me to view this wonder deftly handling bread to Israel—the land you so loved but are not buried in.

For you dear father, I plant today a garden of grain,
for you, who always taught us how to sow.

The Second Exodus

Ada Aharoni

Genesis 41:56–57

Today, I again bring my grain vessel to the docks of your granary, father—while breathing the wheat smells you loved,

NOTE

Dagon. The ancient Philistine god of grain; also the name of an enormous grain silo in the modern-day port of Haifa.

וַיִּגְשֶׁח ✦ Vayigash

GENESIS 44:18–47:27

Reunion and Reconciliation of Joseph, Jacob, and the Brothers

THE HIGHLIGHT OF parashat Vayigash (“he approached”) is when Joseph reveals his true identity to his brothers. This parashah starts with Judah’s emotional plea to let Benjamin return to Jacob in Canaan. The plea revolves around the effect on Jacob of the brothers’ returning without Benjamin. Unable to contain his feelings any longer, Joseph discloses his identity and sends his brothers home to bring his father to Egypt.

The brothers are both sorry and apprehensive about reprisal for what they did to Joseph long ago. But Jacob is happy to learn that Joseph, his elder son by his favorite wife Rachel, is still alive. He and the entire family move to Egypt. Family matters occupy center stage in parashat Vayigash as father and sons are reconciled with each other and forgive past behavior. The other brothers seem to set aside jealousies stemming from Jacob’s favoring Rachel and her children.

On a deeper level, this parashah explores the dynamics of human growth. Robert Alter sums up the issues beautifully:

What is it like, the biblical writers seek to know through their art, to be a human being with a divided consciousness—intermittently loving your brother but hating him even more; resentful or perhaps contemptuous of your father but also capable of the deepest filial regard; stumbling between disastrous ignorance and imperfect knowledge; fiercely asserting your own independence but caught in a tissue of events divinely contrived; outwardly a definite character and inwardly an unstable vortex of greed, ambition, jealousy, lust, piety, courage, compassion, and much more? (The Art of Biblical Narrative, 1981, p. 176)

The parashah, then, presents a study in the human capacity for lasting change. While not mentioned in this parashah, Tamar has been a pivotal figure in Judah’s own growth. Their encounter in Genesis 38 best accounts for Judah’s new capacity to sympathize with his father.

The parashah presents a study in the human capacity for lasting change.

Women appear infrequently in this parashah. There are references to women in 44:20, 45:19, and among those who went to Egypt (46:5–27). The list of the descendants of Jacob who traveled to Egypt divides the entire family according to their mothers (46:8–27). Of the daughters of Jacob, only Dinah is mentioned by name (46:15). The total number of offspring of Jacob who traveled with him to Egypt does not count the wives of his sons (46:26).

—Naomi Steinberg

Outline—

I. JUDAH PLEADS FOR BENJAMIN'S RELEASE (44:18–34)

II. JOSEPH DISCLOSES HIS IDENTITY

Responses and Ramifications (45:1–28)

- A. Joseph discloses his identity (vv. 1–3a)
- B. Joseph and his brothers reunite (vv. 3b–15)
- C. Pharaoh helps Joseph's family (vv. 16–24)
- D. Jacob learns that Joseph is alive (vv. 25–28)

III. JACOB/ISRAEL MEETS JOSEPH IN EGYPT (46:1–34)

- A. Preparations (vv. 1–7)
- B. The seventy members of Jacob's family who come to Egypt (vv. 8–27)
- C. Jacob and his sons reunite (vv. 28–34)

IV. JOSEPH AND JACOB MEET WITH PHARAOH (47:1–10)

V. FURTHER DETAILS REGARDING JOSEPH AND FAMILY (47:11–27)

- A. Joseph settles his father's household in Egypt (vv. 11–12)
- B. Joseph deals with the famine in Egypt (vv. 13–26)
- C. Conclusion: Israel/Jacob prospers in Egypt (v. 27)

44:18

Judah now approached him and said, “By your leave, my lord, please give your servant a hearing, and do not let your anger flare up at your servant—for you are like Pharaoh.¹⁹ My lord asked his servants, ‘Do you have a father or a brother?’²⁰ And we said to my lord, ‘We have an aged father and a young boy of his old age, whose [full] brother is dead. He alone was left of his mother, and so his father loves him [all the more].’²¹ You then said to your servants, ‘Bring him down here to me and let me lay my eyes on him.’²² But we said to my lord, ‘The lad cannot leave his father; if he leaves his father, he will die!’²³ You then said to your servants,

מְדָא ¹⁸ וַיַּגֵּשׁ אֱלֹהִים יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר בְּנֵי אָדָם יְדַבֵּר־נָא עַבְדָּךְ דָּבָר בָּאָזְנוֹنִי אָדָם וְאֶל־יִחְרָא אָפָק בְּעַבְדָּךְ כִּי כָּמוֹךְ כְּפָרֻעה: ¹⁹ אָדָם שָׁאַל אֶת־עֲבָדָיו לְאָמֵר הַיְשַׁלְּכֶם אָב אָוֹ אָח: ²⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר אָל־אָדָם יְשַׁלֵּנוּ אָב זֶלֶן וַיֹּלֶד זְקָנִים קָטָן וְאַחֲיוֹ מֵת וַיַּוּתֶר הָוָא לְבָדוֹ לְאָפָנוֹ וְאַבְיוֹ אָהָבוֹ: ²¹ וַתֹּאמֶר אָל־עֲבָדָךְ הַזָּרְדָּהוּ אָלִי וְאַשְׁרִמָּה עִינִּי עַלְיוֹ: ²² וַיֹּאמֶר אָל־אָדָם לְאִיּוֹכָל הַנּוֹרָעָ לְעַזְבָּ אֶת־אָבָיו וְעַזְבָּ אֶת־אָבָיו וְמִתָּה: ²³ וַתֹּאמֶר אָל־

Judah Pleads for Benjamin's Release (44:18–34)

This parashah picks up where the last one left off: Joseph's goblet had been found in Benjamin's sack, and Joseph had announced his plan to make Benjamin his slave. [Rather than using the occasion as an opportunity to eliminate a rival for his father's affection, Judah now strives to return Benjamin home. —Ed.]

18. Judah now approached him. Judah functions as a spokesman for the brothers.

20. “He alone was left of his mother, and so his father loves him [all the more].” Although the translator modifies the concluding mention of love with “[all the more],” the Hebrew can be understood to suggest that Jacob loves only Benjamin.

Judah seems able to accept that state of affairs. The pathos of the story lies in this acknowledgement.

22. “if he leaves his father, he will die!” Judah's recollection of this filial concern both indicates psychological maturity on his part and foreshadows the unity of father and sons that will finally resolve the tensions that split the family apart in Genesis 37. A family that had been divided against itself is about to overcome the years of alienation and living a lie. The loss of two of his own sons (38:7–10) explains Judah's newfound sympathy, while his encounter with Tamar (38:12–26) seems to account for his willingness to take responsibility. (See at 43:9 and the introduction to Mikeitz, p. 233).

23–34. Judah makes several points in his eloquent speech to Joseph: (1) He retells the events

- The renewed solidarity and cohesiveness do not include any of the family's female members.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 275

- Serah bat Asher “did not taste death” but entered Paradise alive.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 275

- Only by being open to what we learn from one another do we grow.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 277

- I withdrew into the safety of silence, / learning to whisper through the music of my harp.

VOICES ► 279

'If your youngest brother doesn't come down with you, you'll never see my face again!' ²⁴So when we went up to your servant my father, we related to him my lord's words. ²⁵And when our father said, 'Go back and buy us a bit of food,' ²⁶we said, 'We can't go down; only if our youngest brother is with us will we go down, for we won't be allowed to see the man's face unless our youngest brother is with us.' ²⁷Your servant my father then said to us, 'You know that of the two my wife bore me, ²⁸one is gone from my side, and I said, "Surely he's been ripped to shreds!" I haven't seen him to this day. ²⁹If you take this one too from me and some calamity befalls him, you will lower my gray head in woe to Sheol.'

³⁰"And now, if I go to your servant my father and the lad—whose whole being is bound up in his—is not with us, ³¹and he sees that the lad is not there, he will die, and your servants will have lowered your servant our father's gray head in anguish to Sheol. ³²For your servant made himself responsible for the lad to my father, saying, 'If I don't bring him back to you, I will stand guilty before my father for all time.' ³³So now, please let your servant remain as my lord's slave in place of the lad, and let the lad go home with his brothers; ³⁴for how can I

אֶל-עֲבָדִיךְ אַמְלָא יָרֵד אֶחָיכֶם הַקְטָן אַתֶּכֶם לֹא תִסְפֹּן לְרֹאוֹת פְנֵי: ²⁴ וַיֹּהֶל בַי עָלֵינוּ אֶל-עֲבָדְךָ אָבִי וַנְגַדְלָנוּ אֶת דָבְרֵי אָדָנִי: ²⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר אָבִינוּ שָׁבוּ שְׁבָרוֹצְלָנוּ מַעֲט-אֲכָל: ²⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר לֹא נוּכֵל לְרֹדֶת אִמְישׁ אָחִינוּ הַקְטָן אָפָנָנוּ וַיַּרְדֵנָנוּ נוּכֵל לְרֹאוֹת פְנֵי הָאִישׁ וְאָחִינוּ הַקְטָן אִינָנוּ אָתָנוּ: ²⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר עֲבָדְךָ אָבִי אַלְיָנוּ אַתֶּם יַדְעַתֶּם כִּי שְׁנַיִם יָלְדָה-לִי אֲשֶׁר: ²⁸ וַיֹּצֵא הַאָחָל מִאַתִּי וַיֹּאמֶר אָחָר טְרֵף טְרֵף וְלֹא רָאִיתִיו עַד-הַהְנָה: ²⁹ וַלְקַחְתָּם גַּם-אֲתִיזָה מִעֵם פְנֵי וְקַרְבָּה אָסּוֹן וְהַוְרַדְתָּם אָתָה שִׁיבְתַּי בְּרָעָה שָׁאָלָה:

³⁰ וַיַּעֲתַה בְּבַאי אֶל-עֲבָדְךָ אָבִי וְהַנְּעָר אִינָנוּ אָתָנוּ וַנְפַשֵּׂו קְשׁוֹרָה בְּנַפְשׁוֹ: ³¹ וְהַנְּהָרָה בְּרָאֹתוֹ פִּי-אַיִן הַנְּعָר וְמַת וְהַוְרִידוּ עֲבָדְךָ אַתִּישְׁבַּת עֲבָדְךָ אָבִינוּ בִּגְזֻן שָׁאָלָה: ³² כִּי עֲבָדֶל עָרֶב אַתִּיהְנָעֵר מִעֵם אָבִי לְאָמֹר אַמְלָא אֲבִיאָנוּ אַלְיךָ וְחַטָּאתִי לְאָבִי בְּלִהְיוֹתִים: ³³ וַיַּעֲתַה יִשְׁבַּנָּא עֲבָדְךָ תְּחַת הַנְּעָר עָבֵד לְאָדָנִי וְהַנְּעָר יַעַל עַמְּךָ אָחִיו: ³⁴ בִּירָאֵר אַעֲלָה אֶל-אָבִי וְהַנְּעָר that have led the brothers to be in their present circumstances. (2) He emphasizes how Benjamin's absence will break the heart of their father Jacob. (3) He demonstrates his sincere desire to spare their father the heartbreak and offers to serve in Benjamin's place in slavery.

28. "Surely he's been ripped to shreds!" Joseph now learns how Jacob interpreted Joseph's disappearance.

29. "you will lower my gray head in woe to Sheol." This near-quotation of Jacob's own words in 42:38 (reiterated in v. 31) leaves no doubt about the devastating effect on Jacob if Benjamin does not return to his father.

31. "he will die." Judah reveals his desperate concern for the effect on his father, thus demonstrating the love that now binds the sons to their father.

32. "If I don't bring him back to you, I will stand guilty before my father for all time." Judah holds himself responsible for Benjamin because he stood surety for him earlier (43:9–10). Judah's concern for his father's welfare at this time stands in direct contrast to the spirit that moved him to participate in the brothers' plot to rid them of Joseph back in 37:26. Previously self-centered, Judah emerges now as self-sacrificing.

go home to my father without the lad, and thus see the harm my father will suffer?"

45 Joseph could no longer restrain himself before all who were standing in attendance on him, so he cried, "Send everyone away from me!" so that no one else was there when Joseph made himself known to his brothers. ²He gave voice to a loud wail, and the Egyptians heard—Pharaoh's palace heard! ³Joseph then said to his brothers, "I am Joseph—is my father [really] alive?" But his brothers were unable to answer him—they recoiled in fear of him.

⁴Joseph then went on to say to his brothers, "Come, draw near to me!" so they drew near. He said, "I am Joseph your brother, whom you sold to Egypt; ⁵and now, don't be troubled, don't be chagrined because you sold me here, for it was to save

אִנְנוּ אֲתַי פָּנָא אֶרְאָה בָּרוּ אֲשֶׁר יִמְצָא
אֲתִ-אָבִי :

מֵה וְלֹא-יִכְלֶל יוֹסֵף לְהַתְּאַפֵּק לְכָל
הַנִּצְבִּים עַלְיוֹ וַיִּקְרָא הַזָּעִיר כָּל-אִישׁ
מָעַלִי וְלֹא-עָמַד אִישׁ אֶתְוֹ בְּהַתְּנוּעַ יוֹסֵף
אַל-אָחִיו: ² וַיַּתֵּן אֲתִיקָלוּ בְּבָci וַיִּשְׁמַע
מִצְרָיִם וַיִּשְׁמַע בֵּית פְּרֻעה: ³ וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף
אַל-אָחִיו אֱנִי יוֹסֵף הַעֲדָד אָבִי חַי וְלֹא-יִכְלֶל
אָחִיו לְעָנוֹת אֶתְוֹ כִּי נְבָחָלוּ מִפְנִינוּ:
⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף אֲחִיכֶם אֲשֶׁר-מִכְרָתֶם
אֲתִי מִצְרִימה: ⁵ וְעַתָּה אַל-תִּטְعַצְבּוּ וְאַל-יַחַר בְּעִינֵיכֶם כִּי-מִכְרָתֶם אֲתִי הַפָּה כִּי

Joseph Discloses His Identity

RESPONSES AND RAMIFICATIONS
(45:1–28)

Judah's speech to Joseph has brought the suspense between the brothers to a climax, and it prompts Joseph's self-revelation to his brothers. Joseph's statements reveal that he too has undergone a transformation. Joseph's emotional maturity matches the emotional maturity demonstrated in Judah's speech on behalf of Benjamin, as well as Judah's filial concern for Jacob's well-being.

JOSEPH DISCLOSES HIS IDENTITY (45:1–3a)

Judah's speech, and his concern for his father's well-being, push Joseph to reveal himself—and proclaim his own identity and loyalties.

2. wail. This is the third of four times that Joseph weeps with emotion over his brothers (earlier: 42:24 and 43:30).

The Hebrew root b-k-h is often used also for female emotional distress, with a prominent example being the imagined weeping of Joseph's mother, Rachel, for her lost children after the destruction of the northern tribes of Israel (Jeremiah 31:15).

3. "I am Joseph—is my father [really] alive?"

The story reaches its climax when Joseph finally discloses his true identity to his brothers. This is the pinnacle of the emotional build-up that has been developing in Joseph. His outburst of emotions and self-revelation stands out as one of the most moving expressions of family ties in the Torah.

JOSEPH AND HIS BROTHERS REUNITE (45:3b–15)

5–7. "don't be troubled... God sent me ahead of you." The assurance that God sent Joseph is so important here that it is repeated twice (in vv. 5 and 7). The arc that spans the stories of Joseph and his brothers serves to explain the will of God to bring about good for the people. The story perpetuates the idea that faithfulness results in divine action and ultimate relief for the people. Moreover, it affirms that God works through ordinary human lives that God sent me ahead of you.⁶ There have already been two years of famine in the land, and [there remain] five more years without plowing or harvesting.⁷ So God sent me ahead of you to assure your survival in the land, and to keep you alive for a great deliverance.

⁸“So it’s not you who sent me here but the God who made me a father to Pharaoh, a lord of all his household, a ruler of the whole land of Egypt.⁹ Hurry back up to my father and say to him: ‘Thus says your son Joseph, God has made me a lord of all Egypt; come down to me, do not delay!¹⁰ You can settle in the land of Goshen and be near to me—you, your children, and your children’s children, your flocks and herds, and all that you own.¹¹ I will sustain you there, for there remain five more years of famine—so that you and your household and all that you own are not impoverished.’¹² Look—you can see with your own eyes, and so can my brother Benjamin, that it’s my mouth speaking

לִמְחִיה שָׁלַחֲנִי אֱלֹהִים לִפְנֵיכֶם : ⁶ בִּזְהָה
שְׁנַתִּים הָרָעַב בְּקָרְבֵּן הָאָרֶץ וְעוֹד חֲמַשָּׁ
שָׁנִים אֲשֶׁר אִין-חַרְישׁ וְקַצִּיר : ⁷ וַיְשַׁלַּחֲנִי
אֱלֹהִים לִפְנֵיכֶם לְשֻׁוּם לְכֶם שָׁאָרִית בָּאָרֶץ
וְלִהְחִיוֹת לְכֶם לְפִלְיטָה גְּדוֹלָה :

⁸ וְעַתָּה לְאַתֶּם שְׁלַחֲתֶם אֶתְּנֵי הַבָּה פִּי
הָאֱלֹהִים וַיְשִׂימֵנִי לְאָב לְפָרֻעה וּלְאַדְוֹן:
לְכָל-בֵּיתוֹ וּמְשֵׁל בְּכָל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם:
⁹ מִהְרָה וְעַלְוָה אַל-אָבִי וְאִמְרָתֶם אַלְיוֹ כִּה
אָמַל בְּנֵךְ וּלְפַטֵּשׁ שְׁמַנֵּי אֱלֹהִים לְאַדְוֹן לְכָל-
מִצְרָיִם רְדֵה אַלְיִי אַל-תַּעֲמֹד : ¹⁰ וַיְשַׁבְּתָ
בָּאָרֶץ-גָּשָׁן וְהִיאָּת קָרוֹב אַלְיִי אַתָּה וּבְנֵיךְ
וּבְנֵי בְּנֵיךְ וּצְאָנָה וּבְקָרָה וּכָל-אָשָׁר-לָךְ:
¹¹ וּכָל-בְּלִתְתִּי אַתְּךְ שֶׁם בַּיּוּדָה חֲמִשׁ שָׁנִים
רָעַב פְּנִירָה וְרָשָׁע אַתָּה וּבֵיתֶךָ וּכָל-אָשָׁר-לָךְ:
¹² וְהִנֵּה עִינֵיכֶם רָאֹת וְעַיְנִי אַתָּה בְּנֵימָיו beings to accomplish salvation for the people of Israel, as represented by the family of Jacob and his children. Thus, despite the emphasis on Joseph in Genesis 37–50, the drama really concerns a father and all his sons. The family is only a family when all its members acknowledge their connection and unite to support each other. The travails of this family illustrate the messiness and unpredictability of human emotions. Rather than be angry at his brothers for what they did to him in the past, Joseph is now grateful for their presence in his life.

Moreover, the story establishes the importance of the capacity of human beings to forgive each other. The theme of family unity echoes the theme of God’s unified control of events. By attributing all that has happened to the divine intention to save lives, Joseph provides psychological support for the brothers to rid themselves of guilt over what they had done earlier.

8. “So it’s not you who sent me here but the God who made me a father to Pharaoh.” Joseph uses the language of family relations as a way to explain to them his power over and ability to counsel Pharaoh. Although in the ancient Near East people expressed all interpersonal and political relationships in household terms, here such usage is poignant because another “father” (Jacob) is so much on the mind of his sons.

10. “You can settle in the land of Goshen and be near to me—you, your children, and your children’s children, your flocks and herds, and all that you own.” The command from Joseph does not mention the women and wives traveling to Egypt with Jacob. This reflects the patrilineal concerns of the story. (See further at 6:10; 10:1.) However, in Genesis 45:19; 46:5 (see below) the wives of Jacob’s sons are acknowledged as members of the family of Jacob who went with him to Egypt.

The precise location of Goshen is not known, but it is clear from the context that the name refers to a geographical spot that will be ideal for the extended family and its flocks (46:32–34; 47:6, 11).

to you! ¹³Tell my father how they honor me in Egypt, and all that you have seen; hurry up and bring my father down to here!” ¹⁴He then fell weeping upon his brother Benjamin’s neck, and Benjamin wept on his neck. ¹⁵He kissed all his brothers and wept with them; only after this could his brothers respond to him.

¹⁶And the report was heard in Pharaoh’s palace: “Joseph’s brothers have arrived!” And this pleased Pharaoh and his courtiers, ¹⁷so Pharaoh said to Joseph, “Say to your brothers, ‘Do this: load up your beasts and head straight for the land of Canaan, ¹⁸and take your father and your households and come to me; I will give you the best that the land of Egypt offers; [come] eat the fat of the land.’ ¹⁹Moreover, you are instructed [to say], ‘Do this: take wagons from the land of Egypt for your little ones and your wives, and convey your father, and come. ²⁰And don’t look with regret at your household goods, because the best that the whole land of Egypt offers is yours.’”

²¹Israel’s sons set about doing this; Joseph provided them with wagons at Pharaoh’s command, and he gave them provisions for the journey. ²²To each he furnished a change of clothing; but to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver and five changes of clothing. ²³And to his father he sent some ten asses laden with fine Egyptian goods and ten she-asses carrying grain, bread, and food to his

בִּרְפֵּי הַמִּדְבָּר אֲלֵיכֶם: ¹³ וְהִגְּדָתֶם לְאָבִי אֶת-כֶּבֶשׂ-כְּבֹודִי בְּמִצְרָיִם וְאַתְּ בֶּל-אָשָׁר רָאִיתֶם וּמְהֻרְתֶּם וְהִוְרְתֶּם אֶת-אָבִי הַנֶּה: ¹⁴ וַיַּפְלֵל עַל-צְוֹאָרִי בְּנִימְנָאָחִיו וַיַּבְךְ וּבְנִימְנָאָחִיו בְּכָה עַל-צְוֹאָרִיו: ¹⁵ וַיַּשְׁקֵל לְכַל-אָחִיו וַיַּבְךְ עַל-הָם וְאַחֲרֵי כָּן דָּבָרוּ אָחִיו אָתָּה:

¹⁶ וְהַקֵּל נְשָׁמָע בֵּית פְּרָעה לְאמֹר בָּאוּ אָחִי יוֹסֵף וַיַּטְבֵּל בְּעֵינֵי פְּרָעה וּבְעֵינֵי עֲבָדָיו: ¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרָעה אֶל-יוֹסֵף אָמַר אֶל-אָחִיךְ זֹאת עֲשֹׂו טָעֵנוּ אֶת-בְּעִירְכֶם וְלִכְוֹבָאֹז אָרֶץ כְּנֻעַן: ¹⁸ וְקַחוּ אֶת-אֲבִיכֶם וְאַתְּ בְּתִיכֶם וּבָאוּ אַלְיִי וְאַתְּנָה לְכֶם אֶת-טוֹב אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם וְאֶכְלָוּ אֶת-חַלֵּב הָאָרֶץ: ¹⁹ וְאַתָּה צִוִּיתָה לְךָ שְׂעִירָה קְחוּ לְכֶם מִאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם עֲגָלוֹת לְטַפְכֶם וּלְנִשְׁיכֶם וַיְשַׁאֲתָם אֶת-אֲבִיכֶם וּבְאֶתְمָ: ²⁰ וְעַיְנֵיכֶם אֶל-תְּחִסּוּ עַל-כְּלֵיכֶם כִּי-טוֹב כָּל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם לְכֶם הוּא:

²¹ וַיַּעֲשֵׂרְכֶן בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיִּתְּנֵן לָהֶם יוֹסֵף עֲגָלוֹת עַל-פִּי פְּרָעה וַיִּתְּנֵן לָהֶם צְדָה לְדָרָךְ: ²² לְכָלָם נָתַן לְאִישׁ חַלְפּוֹת שְׁמַלְתָּה וּלְבִנְיָמִן נָתַן שְׁלֵשׁ מִזְוֹת בְּסֶף וְחַמְשָׁ חַלְפּוֹת שְׁמַלְתָּה: ²³ וְלֹאָבִיו שְׁלַח בְּזֹאת עִשְׂרָה חַמְנִים נְשָׁאִים מְטוּב מִצְרָיִם וְעַשֶּׂר אַתָּת נְשָׁאָת בָּר וְלֹחֶם וּמְזֹון לְאָבִיו

14–15. weeping...and wept. This is the fourth time Joseph weeps over his brothers (see at 45:2); he also weeps when reunited with his father (46:29).

15. only after this. The gestures of Joseph’s kissing his brothers and weeping over them is what gives the brothers confidence finally to respond. This very emotional scene clearly expresses the true fraternal affection felt by the brothers, who seem to have now made peace with the events of the past.

PHARAOH HELPS JOSEPH’S FAMILY (45:16–24)

18. “households.” Heb. batim (plural of bayit, literally “house”). The thrust of this term here is explained in the next verse: “little ones” and wives.

22. To each he furnished a change of clothing. The gift of clothing should remind the reader—and perhaps Joseph’s brothers themselves—of their father for the road.²⁴ He sent his brothers forth, and as they were going he said to them, “Don’t be anxious along the way.”

²⁵ They went up from Egypt and came to the land of Canaan, to Jacob their father.²⁶ When they told him “Joseph is still alive”—and that he held sway over the whole land of Egypt!—his heart froze, for he could not believe them.²⁷ But when they told him all that Joseph had spoken to them, and when he saw the wagons that Joseph had sent to convey him, their father Jacob’s spirit came alive.²⁸ Israel said, “Enough! My son Joseph is alive! I must go and see him before I die!”

46 Israel and all his company set off on their journey and they came to Beersheba, where he offered sacrifices to the God of his father Isaac.² God addressed Israel in a night vision, saying, “Jacob,

לֹךְךָ: ²⁴ וַיֵּשֶׁלֶח אֶת-אֶחָיו וַיַּלְכֵי וַיֹּאמֶר
אֲלֵהֶם אֶל-תְּرִגְזוּ בְּדָרְךָ:
²⁵ וַיַּעֲלֻ מִמְּצָרִים וַיָּבֹא אֶרֶץ בְּנֵעַן אֶל-יַעֲקֹב אֲבֵיכֶם: ²⁶ וַיָּגֹדוּ לוּ לְאָמֶר עוֹד יוֹסֵ
הָרִי וּבֵיתְהוּא מַשֵּׁל בְּכָל אֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם וַיַּפְגֵּ
לְבָבוֹ כִּי לְאִחָהָמִין לְהָם: ²⁷ וַיַּדְבֵּר אֱלֹהִים
אֶת בְּלִדְבָּרִי יוֹסֵף אֲשֶׁר דִּבֶּר אֲלֵהֶם וַיַּרְא
אֶת-הַעֲגָלוֹת אֲשֶׁר-שָׁלַח יוֹסֵף לְשֵׁאת אֶתְנוֹ
וְתַחַת רַוחַק יַעֲקֹב אֲבֵיכֶם: ²⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר יִשְׂרָאֵל
רַב עוֹד-יוֹסֵף בְּנֵי חֵי אֶלְכָה וְאֶרְאָנוּ בְּטָרָם
אָמוּנוֹ:

מו וַיֵּשֶׁע יִשְׂרָאֵל וּכְל-אֲשֶׁר-לוּ וַיָּבֹא
בְּאָרֶה שֶׁבַע וַיַּזְבַּח זְבָחִים לְאֱלֹהִי אֲבֵינוֹ
יִצְחָק: ² וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵהֶם לִיְשָׁרָאֵל בְּמִרְאֹת earlier jealousy of the special clothing that he had long ago received from their father, a sign of Jacob’s favoritism (37:3–4). Whereas earlier, clothing had divided the brothers against Joseph, here it signifies the reconciliation between them.

JACOB LEARNS THAT JOSEPH IS ALIVE (45:25–28)

26–27. When they told him “Joseph is still alive”... his heart froze, ... But when they told him all that Joseph had spoken to them... their father Jacob’s spirit came alive. Biblical narratives do not often describe how characters feel. Here, however, the vivid descriptions let readers see how shocked Jacob is upon discovering that his son Joseph—believed to have died twenty-two years earlier—is actually alive and well, and in a position of high authority and prestige in Egypt.

28. Israel said, “Enough! My son Joseph is alive! I must go and see him before I die!” Jacob’s excitement about reuniting with Joseph overshadows all material complications that the prospect of life in Egypt would seem to present. Jacob’s emotional outburst might have revived the brothers’ jealousy, but we are not told that they express any such feelings.

Jacob/Israel Meets Joseph In Egypt (46:1–34)

At this juncture—as Jacob sets out on his journey to Egypt—the narrative marks the occasion in two ways. The first is a revelation from God. This is the first reported divine communication to Jacob since the death of his wife Rachel more than twenty years before.

The second way that the text marks this moment’s significance is with a genealogical list of all those who went down to Egypt with Jacob. Until now, Genesis has described the lineage of the patriarchs in what can be called a “vertical” genealogy that traces inheritance from father to one or more sons (11:27; 25:19; 37:2). In contrast, this unit emphasizes a “horizontal” genealogy that acknowledges the family relationship between Jacob and all of his offspring. (Compare Jacob’s adoption and Jacob!" And he said, "Here I am!" ³[God] said, "I am God, the God of your father; do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for I will make you a great people there. ⁴I Myself will go down with you to Egypt, and I will most surely bring you back up as well; and Joseph will lay his hand upon your eyes."

⁵Jacob then moved on from Beersheba; the sons of Israel lifted Jacob their father, their little ones, and their wives onto the wagons that Pharaoh had sent to carry him. ⁶They took their livestock and the possessions they had amassed in the land of Canaan and they came to Egypt—Jacob and all his progeny with him. ⁷His sons and his sons' sons were with him, his daughters and his sons' daughters—all his progeny that he brought with him to Egypt.

הַלִּילָה וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב | יַעֲקֹב וַיֹּאמֶר הַנָּנוּ:
 3 וַיֹּאמֶר אָנֹכִי הַאֵל אֱלֹהִי אָבִיךְ אֱלֹהִים תִּרְאָ
 מִרְדָּה מִצְרִים בַּיּוֹגִי גָּדוֹל אֲשִׁימָה שָׁם:
 4 אָנֹכִי אָרַד עַמְּךָ מִצְרִים וְאָנֹכִי אָעַלְכָ
 גַּם־עַלְהָ וַיּוֹטֶף יְשִׁיתْ דָּרוֹ עַל־עִינָּךְ:
 5 וַיָּקָם יַעֲקֹב מִבָּאָר שְׁבָע וַיָּשָׂאֵר בְּנֵי
 יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת־יַעֲקֹב אֲבִיכֶם וְאֶת־עַפְתָּם וְאֶת־
 נְשֵׁיכֶם בְּעֲגָלוֹת אֲשֶׁר־שָׁלַח פָּרָעוֹה לְשֹׁאת
 אֶתְךָ: ⁶ וַיָּקָחוּ אֶת־מִקְנֵיכֶם וְאֶת־רְכוּשֶׁ
 אֲשֶׁר רְכָשָׂו בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן וַיָּבֹאוּ מִצְרִים
 יַעֲקֹב וּכְלִזְרָעָו אֶתְךָ: ⁷ בְּנֵי וּבְנֵי בְּנֵי אֶתְךָ
 בְּנֵתְךָ וּבְנָתָת בְּנֵי וּכְלִזְרָעָו הַבֵּיא אֶתְךָ מִצְרִים: ס blessing of Ephraim and Manasseh in Genesis 48.) This shift in how the genealogy is established coincides with the conclusion of the ancestors' time in Canaan. The rest of the Torah will concern the people of Israel in circumstances outside their Promised Land.

PREPARATIONS (46:1–7)

1. Israel. This is the name that was given to Jacob in 32:29 and 35:10. Jacob/Israel is an example of an eponym—a group's taking its name from (or: later attributing its name to) an individual. The shift here from Jacob (one man) to Israel (representing the people of God) may be occasioned by the fact that this is the only theophany—direct appearance of God—in the stories of Joseph.

offered sacrifices. Eager though he is to see Joseph, Jacob nevertheless takes time to express gratitude and attend to his relationship with God.

3. [God] said, "I am God, the God of your father." Here is a reference to family religion, linking one generation of believers to the next. God's self-revelation emphasizes the overarching link between earlier stories of Jacob's ancestors and his own experiences of the divine.

"do not be afraid to go down to Egypt." Only after God assures Jacob and blesses him does Jacob move on from Beersheba. This scene further reinforces the importance of God in Jacob's life.

4. "Joseph will lay his hand upon your eyes."

A reference to the practice of a family member's closing the eyes of someone who has just died. God thereby promises Jacob that his favorite son not only will be present when he expires but also will properly care for his corpse. The latter was a matter of abiding concern in the Bible and ancient Near East. (On Israelite burial practices, see Va-y'chi, Another View, p. 297.)

7. His sons and his sons' sons were with him, his daughters and his sons' daughters. The birth of only one daughter of Jacob—Dinah—is mentioned in Genesis. (She first appears in 30:21; see Genesis 34 for her story.) Both 37:35 and this verse indicate that Jacob had more than one daughter, but we have no other details about them apart from these references in passing. Likewise, 46:15 mentions "daughters" yet that passage identifies only Dinah.

⁸These are the names of Israel's sons who came to Egypt, Jacob and his sons: Jacob's first-born Reuben, ⁹and Reuben's children Enoch, Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi. ¹⁰Simeon's children were Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Saul the son of a Canaanite woman; ¹¹Levi's children were Gershon, Kohath, and Merari; ¹²Judah's children were Er, Onan, Shelah, Perez, and Zerah (but Er and Onan had died in the land of Canaan, and the sons of Perez were Hezron and Hamul); ¹³Issachar's children were Tola, Puvah, Iob, and Shimron; ¹⁴Zebulun's children were Sered, Elon, and Jahleel. ¹⁵These were Leah's sons whom she bore to Jacob in Paddan Aram, along with Dinah his daughter. His sons and daughters were 33 persons in all, male and female.

¹⁶Gad's children were Ziphion, Haggi, Shuni, Ezbon, Eri, Arodi, and Areli. ¹⁷Asher's sons were Imnah, Ishvah, Ishvi, and Beriah, and their sister Serah. Beriah's children were Heber and Malchiel.

THE SEVENTY MEMBERS OF JACOB'S FAMILY WHO COME TO EGYPT (46:8-27)

These verses are especially important because they make reference to the women who comprise the family of Jacob. This section reiterates that the totality of Jacob's family includes both women and men borne to Jacob by four different women. The members of the family are listed in relationship to the four women: Leah, Zilpah, Rachel, and Bilhah. The number of banim ("sons" or "children") attributed to each of the women includes not only the individuals they bore but also their grandchildren.

8. These are the names. The same words open the book of Exodus, which begins with a list of only the twelve sons of Israel/Jacob.

10. son of a Canaanite woman. Simeon's youngest son Saul is identified in the same unusual way in Exodus 6:15. Historically, the tribe of Simeon

8 וְאֶלְהָ שָׁמֹת בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל הַבָּאים
מִצְרַיִם יַעֲקֹב וּבָנָיו בָּכָר יַעֲקֹב רָאוּבוּ:
9 וּבָנָי רָאוּבֵן חָנוֹךְ וּפְלוֹא וְחַצְרֹן וּכְרָמִי:
10 וּבָנָי שְׁמֻעוֹן יְמֹוֹאֵל וִימְמִין וְאַחֲד וִיכְיִינֵן
וְצַחֲרֵר וְשָׁאָל בְּנֵי-הַכְּנַעֲנִית: 11 וּבָנָי לְוי
גָּרְשֹׁׁן קָהָת וּמָרְקֵרִי: 12 וּבָנָי יְהוֹדָה עַר
וְאוֹעֵן וְשָׁלָה וּפְרָץ וּרְוחֵה וְלִמְתָה עַר וְאוֹעֵן
בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן וְיָהִוָּה בְּנֵי-פְּרָץ חַצְרֹן וּחַמּוֹל:
13 וּבָנָי יִשְׁכָר יִשְׁכָר תּוֹלֵע וּפְנֹוה וּיְוב
וּשְׁמַרְןֵן: 14 וּבָנָי זְבּוּלֹן סְרֵד וְאַלְזָן וּחַילָּאל:
15 אֶלְהָ בְּנֵי לְאָה אֲשֶׁר יַלְדָה לְיַעֲקֹב בְּפְדוּן
אָרָם וְאֶת דִּינָה בְּתוֹךְ כָּל-נֶפֶשׁ בָּנָיו וּבָנָתוֹי
שְׁלָשִׁים וְשָׁלֶשׁ:

16 וּבָנָי גָּד צְפִיּוֹן וְחַגִּי שְׁוֵינוֹן וְאַצְבֵּן עַרְיוֹ
וְאַרְוֹדֵי וְאַרְאָלֵי: 17 וּבָנָי אֲשֶׁר יִמְנָה וְוִשְׁנָה
וְיִשְׁוִי וּבְרִיעָה וּשְׁרָח אַחֲתָם וּבָנִי בְּרִיעָה was later absorbed by the tribe of Judah. Not only Simeon married a Canaanite woman but also Judah (Genesis 38:2), reflecting both territorial expansion by these tribes and intermarriage with surrounding peoples.

15. These were Leah's sons. Leah's children are listed first, but she is not identified as a wife; compare v. 19.

along with Dinah his daughter. On Dinah, see at v. 7. It may be significant that she is listed here as Jacob's daughter; she appeared in 34:1 as Leah's daughter.

17. their sister Serah. Zilpah, one of Jacob's wives, had borne him two sons, Gad and Asher; the latter became the father of four sons and one daughter, Serah. Serah is the only daughter of any of Jacob's sons mentioned in this genealogy of those who went to Egypt with Jacob. Serah's name appears again in Numbers 26:46—where she seems to be counted also among those leaving Egypt some ¹⁸These were Zilpah's children, whom Laban had given to Leah his daughter. She bore these to Jacob—16 persons.

¹⁹The sons of Jacob's wife Rachel were Joseph and Benjamin. ²⁰Born to Joseph in the land of Egypt, whom Asenath daughter of Potiphera priest of On bore to him, were Manasseh and Ephraim. ²¹Benjamin's children were Bela, Becher, Ashbel, Gera, Naaman, Ehi, Rosh, Muppim, Huppim, and Ard. ²²These were Rachel's children who were born to Jacob—14 persons in all.

²³Dan's son was Hushim. ²⁴Naphtali's sons were Jahzeel, Guni, Jezer, and Shillem. ²⁵These were the children of Bilhah, whom Laban had given to Rachel his daughter. She bore these to Jacob—7 persons.

²⁶All the people who came with Jacob to Egypt—who came forth from his loins—apart from the wives of Jacob's sons—were 66 people in all. ²⁷And the sons of Joseph born to him in Egypt were

חֶבְרָן וּמִלְכִיאָל: ¹⁸ אֵלֶּה בְּנֵי זַלְפָה אֲשֶׁר
בָּתָּן לְבָנָן לְלֹאָה בְּתוֹ וְתַלְדָּ אֶת־אֵלָה
לְיַעֲקֹב שֶׁשׁ עֲשָׂרָה נְפָשָׁה:

¹⁹ בְּנֵי רָחֵל אֲשֶׁת יַעֲקֹב יוֹסֵף וּבְנִימָן:

²⁰ וְוָיָלֵד לְיוֹסֵף בְּאֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם אֲשֶׁר יָלַדְהָ
לוֹ אָסְנָת בְּתִ־פּוֹטִי פָּרָעָה כִּיּוֹן אֶן אֶת־מִנְשָׁה
וְאֶת־אֱפָרִים: ²¹ וּבְנֵי בְּנִימָן בֶּלְעָן וּבְכָרְלָה
וְאַשְׁבָּל גְּרָא וּגְעָמָן אֲחֵי וּרְאֵשׁ מִפְּרִים
וְחַפִּים וְאַרְךָ: ²² אֵלֶּה בְּנֵי רָחֵל אֲשֶׁר יָלַדְ

לְיַעֲקֹב כָּל־נְפָשָׁה אֶרְבָּעָה עָשָׂר:

²³ וּבְנֵי־דָן חֲשִׁים: ²⁴ וּבְנֵי נְפָתָלִי יְחִצָּאָל
וְגּוֹנִי וְיִצְּרָר וְשָׁלָם: ²⁵ אֵלֶּה בְּנֵי בְּלְהָה
אֲשֶׁר־ינֹתֵן לְבָנָן לְרָחֵל בְּתוֹ וְתַלְדָּ אֶת־אֵלָה
לְיַעֲקֹב כָּל־נְפָשָׁה שְׁבֻעָה:

²⁶ כָּל־הָנְפָשָׁה הַבָּאָה לְיַעֲקֹב מִצְרָיִם הַיְצָאִי
יָרַבּוּ מִלְבָד נְשִׁי בְּנֵי־יַעֲקֹב כָּל־נְפָשָׁה שְׁבֻעָם
רָשֶׁשׁ: ²⁷ וּבְנֵי יוֹסֵף אֲשֶׁר־יָלַד־לוּ בְּמִצְרָיִם

400 years later—and in I Chronicles 7:30. [The Bible also mentions another of Jacob's granddaughters, Jochebed daughter of Levi; she is born in Egypt (Exodus 6:16–20; Numbers 26:59). —Ed.]

18. These were Zilpah's children, whom Laban had given to Leah his daughter. She bore these to Jacob. The sons are not reckoned as Leah's children but rather Zilpah's, her handmaid, even though Leah had named them and claimed them as her own (30:9–13). Despite the ostensibly lower status of the handmaids, their sons are acknowledged as equal members of the family—as “Israel's sons” (46:8). In this regard, it appears that the status of Jacob's secondary wives, Zilpah and Bilhah, is comparable to the status of his primary wives, Leah and Rachel.

19. Jacob's wife Rachel. Only she is explicitly identified as “Jacob's wife.” And of the other wives, only her name appears twice (see v. 22), framing the list of her descendants.

20. whom Asenath daughter of Potiphera priest of On bore to him. This reference repeats information first mentioned in 41:50. This is the Bible's third and final mention of Asenath; see also at 41:45. (The text does not censure Joseph for having married outside the kinship group, namely, for having an exogamous marriage.) Asenath is the only wife of the second generation to be named, perhaps a sign of her distinctive importance: Jacob's eventual adoption of Ephraim and Manasseh (48:5) will make her the mother of two tribes—by proxy, a seventh matriarch. Just as the other sons of Jacob are listed according to their mothers, so too here.

25. These were the children of Bilhah, whom Laban had given to Rachel his daughter. These sons are not reckoned as Rachel's children but rather Bilhah's, even though Rachel had named them and claimed them as her own (30:3–8). As with Zilpah's children (see at v. 18), the handmaids' sons are acknowledged as equal members of the family.

2 individuals; the members of Jacob's family who came to Egypt were 70 in all.

²⁸Judah he sent ahead of him to Joseph, to show him the way to Goshen; so they came to the region of Goshen. ²⁹Joseph harnessed his chariot and went up to meet his father Israel in Goshen; he presented himself to him and threw himself on his neck, weeping all the time. ³⁰Israel said to Joseph, “Now that I've seen your face—for you're still alive!—I can die at last.”

³¹Joseph said to his brothers and to his father's household, “I'm going to go up and tell Pharaoh; I will say to him: ‘My brothers and my father's household who were in the land of Canaan have come to me. ³²The men are shepherds; in fact they are breeders of livestock, and they have brought their flocks and their herds and all that they own.’ ³³Therefore, when Pharaoh sends for you and asks, ‘What do you do?’ ³⁴say: ‘Your servants have been breeding livestock from youth onwards to now, both our households and our fathers' households’—in order that you may live in the region of Goshen; for Egyptians find shepherds abhorrent.’”

27. 70 in all. Seventy is a typological or symbolic number (a multiple of seven, equated with the seven days of Creation). Thus the text emphasizes the complete movement of the ancestral family from the Promised Land to Egypt, as the next step in their journey as God's chosen people.

JACOB AND HIS SONS REUNITE (46:28–34)

29. weeping all the time. Just as earlier Joseph wept over seeing his brothers (see at 45:14–15), he now weeps at being reunited with his father.

30. Israel said to Joseph, “Now... I can die at last.” The poignancy of the reunion is stressed by Jacob's statement that he can now die a happy man (in contrast to going down to Sheol in grief; see at 42:38, 44:29), having seen Joseph alive again. One

נֶפֶשׁ שְׁנָים בְּלַהֲנֶפֶשׁ לִבְיֹת־יַעֲקֹב הַבָּאָה מִצְרִים מִשְׁבָּעִים: ס

²⁸וְאַתִּיהוֹתָה שָׁלֵחׁ לִפְנֵיו אַל־יְוֹסֵף
לְהֹוֹתָה לִפְנֵיו גְּשָׁנָה וַיָּבֹאוּ אָרֶץ־גְּשָׁן:
²⁹וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף מְרֻבְבָּתוֹ וַיַּעַל לְקָרְבָּת־
יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲבִיו גְּשָׁנָה וַיַּרְא אֱלֹי וַיַּפְלֵל עַל־
עַזְנָאוֹרִיו וַיַּבְךְ עַל־צְנוּאָרוֹרִיו עוֹד: ³⁰וַיֹּאמֶר
יִשְׂרָאֵל אַל־יְוֹסֵף אָמִוֹתָה הַפְּעָם אַחֲרֵי
רְאוּתִי אֶת־פְּנֵיךְ כִּי עָזָךְ חַי:
³¹וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף אַל־אָחִיו וְאַל־בֵּית אֲבִיו
אַעֲלָה וְאַגִּידָה לִפְרָעָה וְאָמַרָה אֱלֹי אָחִי:
וּבֵית־אֲבִי אֲשֶׁר בָּאָרֶץ־כְּנָעָן בָּאוּ אֱלֹי:
³²וְהָאנְשִׁים רְعֵי צָאן כִּי־אָנָשִׁי מִקְנָה הָיוּ
וְצָאנִים וּבְקָרִים וּכְלָא־אֲשֶׁר לְהֶם הַבִּיאוּ:
³³וְהַיָּה כִּי־יָקָרָא לְכֶם פָּרָעָה וְאָמַר מַה־
מַעֲשֵיכֶם: ³⁴וְאָמַרְתֶּם אָנָשִׁי מִקְנָה הָיוּ
עַבְדִּיל מִגְּעוּרִינוּ וְעַד־עֲתָה גַּם־אָנַחַנוּ גַּם־
אָבְתֵינוּ בַּעֲבוּר תָּשִׁבּוּ בָּאָרֶץ גְּשָׁן כִּי־ הַוְּעָבֵת מִצְרִים בְּלַרְעָה צָאן:

thinks here of the many tearful reunion scenes in our own day of family members reunited after being separated from each other for decades.

31–34. Joseph quickly becomes businesslike in telling his father how he and the brothers ought to respond when they are presented before Pharaoh.

34. “Egyptians find shepherds abhorrent.” This statement is not supported by Egyptian records; moreover, even in the biblical account, Pharaoh has his own herds (see 47:6). Possibly it refers only to non-Egyptian shepherds. (Similarly, using the same Hebrew term as here, we are told that the Egyptians find it an “abomination” to eat together with Hebrews; 43:32.) The point seems to be that Jacob and his family will be allowed to live in a separate region from the Egyptian shepherds and maintain their own cultural identity.

47 Joseph then went and told Pharaoh, saying, “My father, my brothers, their flocks, their herds, and all that they own have arrived from the land of Canaan, and now they’re in the region of Goshen.” 2Out of all his brothers he picked five men and presented them before Pharaoh. 3When Pharaoh said to his brothers, “What do you do?” they said to Pharaoh, “Your servants are shepherds, both our households and our fathers’ households.” 4They went on to say to Pharaoh, “We have come to stay in the land because there is no pasture for your servants’ flocks, for the famine is oppressive in the land of Canaan; now we ask you to let your servants settle in the region of Goshen.” 5Pharaoh then said to Joseph, “[Now that] your father and brothers have reached you, 6the land of Egypt is before you—settle your father and brothers in the best part of the land. Let them settle in the region of Goshen; and if you know of any able men among them, make them overseers of my livestock.”

7Joseph then brought his father Jacob and stood him before Pharaoh, and Jacob greeted Pharaoh. 8Pharaoh said to Jacob, “How many years have you

מז וַיָּבֹא יוֹסֵף וַיִּגְדֶּל פְּרֻעָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֲבִי וְאָחִי וְצָאָנָם וּבְקָרָט וּכְלָאָשָׁר לְהַמְּבָאָז
מִאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן וְהַגָּם בְּאָרֶץ גְּשָׁן: 2 וּמְקֹעַח
אֲחִיו לְקַח חַמְשָׁה אֲנָשִׁים וַיַּצְגִּם לִפְנֵי
פְּרֻעָה: 3 וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה אֶל־אֲחִיו מַה־
מְעַשְׂיכֶם וַיֹּאמֶר אָל־פְּרֻעָה רְעוּה צָאן
עֲבָדֵיךְ גַּם־אָנַחֲנוּ גַּם־אָבוֹתֵינוּ: 4 וַיֹּאמֶר
אֶל־פְּרֻעָה לְגֹור בְּאָרֶץ בְּאָנוּ בַּיּוֹן מַרְעָה
לְצָאן אֲשֶׁר לְעַבְדֵיךְ כִּי־כָבֵד הָרָעָב בְּאָרֶץ
בְּנֵעַן וְעַתָּה יִשְׁבְּנָא עֲבָדֵיךְ בְּאָרֶץ גְּשָׁן:
5 וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה אֶל־יְוֹסֵף לְאָמֵר אֲבִיךְ
וְאֲחִיךְ בָּאוּ אֲלֵיכְ: 6 אֶרְץ מִצְרָим לְפִנֵּיכְ
הָוּא בְּמִיטַּב הָאָרֶץ הַוּשֶׁב אֶת־אֲבִיךְ
וְאֶת־אֲחִיךְ יִשְׁבּוּ בְּאָרֶץ גְּשָׁן וְאֶסְמִיכָּעַת
וַיַּשְׁכּוּ אֲנָשִׁים־תַּלְלִיל וְשָׁמְתָם שְׁרֵי מִקְנָה
עַל־אָשֶׁר־לִי:
7 וַיָּבֹא יוֹסֵף אֶת־יַעֲקֹב אֶבְיוֹ וַיַּעֲמֹדוּ לִפְנֵי
פְּרֻעָה וַיַּכְרֵךְ יַעֲקֹב אֶת־פְּרֻעָה: 8 וַיֹּאמֶר
פְּרֻעָה אֶל־יַעֲקֹב בְּפֶה יְמִינִי שְׁנִי חִיקְ:

Joseph and Jacob Meet with Pharaoh (47:1–10)

During his long years in Egypt and in service to the pharaoh, Joseph has become a master of court diplomacy. These verses bring out the split nature of Joseph’s identity: he is aware of Egyptian court demeanor but also tied to his family of livestock herders. Throughout his time in Egypt, Joseph defies the “macho” stereotype; he uses diplomacy, rather than force, to raise his status in the Egyptian court. This is the characteristic maneuver of a minority people living in a majority culture; one thinks also of the biblical story of Esther and her dealings in the Persian court. However, standing in contrast to Joseph’s subtle maneuvering is the later behavior of Moses, who dramatically cut his youthful ties with Pharaoh’s palace when he “turned this way and that and, seeing no one about, he struck down the Egyptian and he hid him in the sand” (Exodus 2:12).

2–4. The text suggests a protocol that separates the pharaoh from the foreign brothers who are both ethnically and socially of a distinct status from the head of Egypt.

6. “settle . . . in the best part of the land.” This instruction—in fulfillment of what Pharaoh said in 45:18—signals the success of the audience before the pharaoh.

7. greeted. Heb. va-y'varech, which can also be translated as “blessed” (see at v. 10).

8. Pharaoh said to Jacob. Possibly as a sign of respect both for Jacob’s advanced age and for Joseph’s authority within Egypt, Pharaoh speaks more directly to the aged father than to Joseph’s brothers.

lived?”⁹ And Jacob said to Pharaoh, “The span of the years of my lifetime has been 130; few and miserable have been the days of the years of my life. They have not attained to the length of the days of the years of my fathers when they were alive.”

¹⁰Jacob then gave Pharaoh a parting blessing, and he left Pharaoh’s presence.

¹¹Joseph settled his father and his brothers; he gave them a holding in the land of Egypt, in the best part of the land, in the region of Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded. ¹²Joseph also provided food for his father and his brothers and all his father’s household, according to the number of their children.

¹³[At this time] no food was to be had in the

9. Jacob responds to Pharaoh’s question with more than simple facts such as his age; he focuses on the sorrow in his life and acknowledges that his age does not compare with the longevity of his ancestors. Pharaoh’s request for personal information about Jacob establishes a bond between the two men who have in common that Joseph has been a central, life-sustaining figure for each of them.

“fathers.” Heb. avot, which can mean “ancestors” (including females, as in v. 30, below), although here it seems that Jacob is intending only the male family heads: Terah died at 205, Abraham at 175, and Isaac at 180. He is, after all, older than his grandmother Sarah, who died at the age of 127. (The Bible does not disclose the longevity of the other matriarchs.)

10. parting blessing. Heb. va-y’varech; compare v. 7. | The bond between the two elders becomes even clearer when Jacob blesses Pharaoh before departing from his presence. Jacob’s blessing is rooted in the blessing of life that Pharaoh made possible for Joseph’s family. Normally it would go without saying that one utters a benevolent wish when departing from a favorable audience before a monarch. What is noteworthy here is that such an utterance is mentioned—and described as a “blessing,” which in the Torah has an overtone of divine

9 וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב אֶל־פְּרָעָה יְמִיל שְׁנִי מִגּוֹרֵת
שְׁלֹשִׁים וּמִאַת שָׁנָה מִעַט וְרַעַם הַיּוֹם יְמִיל
שְׁנִי חַי וְלֹא הַשִּׁיגוּ אֶת־יִמְלָכֵי שְׁנִי חַי
אָבָתִי בִּימֵי מִגּוֹרֵיהם:¹⁰ וַיַּבְרֶךְ יַעֲקֹב אֶת־
פְּרָעָה וַיֵּצֵא מִלְּפָנֵי פְּרָעָה:
11 וַיַּשְׁבַּט יוֹסֵף אֶת־אָבִיו וְאֶת־אָחָיו וַיְתַּן
לְהֶם אָחֶזֶל בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם בְּמִיטָּב הָאָרֶץ:
12 וַיַּכְלֶל יוֹסֵף אֶת־אָבִיו וְאֶת־אָחָיו וְאֶת־
כָּל־בֵּית אָבִיו לְחַם לְפִי הַטָּף:
13 וְלֹא חַם אֵין בְּכָל־הָאָרֶץ כִּי־כָּבֵד הַרְעָב favor. Compare Bathsheba’s exit from an audience with her husband, King David, in I Kings 1:31.

Further Details Regarding Joseph and Family (47:11–27)

JOSEPH SETTLES HIS FATHER’S HOUSEHOLD IN EGYPT (47:11–12)

11. in the region of Rameses. Up until this point, the text has repeatedly (eight times) referred to the place where Jacob would live with his family as “Goshen” (see also v. 27, below). A place named Rameses is mentioned also in Exodus 12:37 and Numbers 33:3, 5; it is identified as a settlement in Exodus 1:11. This is one of the many biblical passages where a merging of different stories may be responsible for the text.

JOSEPH DEALS WITH THE FAMINE IN EGYPT (47:13–26)

The text has been focused on the reconciliation and reunion of the family. Now the narrator must remind the reader that despite these happy circum-entire land, for the famine bore down very heavily. The land of Egypt and the land of Canaan languished on account of the famine.¹⁴ Joseph now collected all the silver found in the lands of Egypt and Canaan as payment for the grain that the people were buying, and Joseph brought that silver into Pharaoh's palace.¹⁵ When the silver in the lands of Egypt and Canaan was spent, all Egypt flocked to Joseph, saying, "Let us have food—why should we drop dead in front of you because the silver is exhausted?"¹⁶ Joseph replied, "Bring your livestock and I will give it to you in exchange for your livestock, if the silver is exhausted."¹⁷ They therefore brought their livestock to Joseph, and Joseph gave them food in exchange for horses, holdings of sheep and cattle, and asses; that year he kept them alive with food in exchange for all their livestock.

¹⁸ That year ended, and they approached him in the following year and said to him, "We will not hide from my lord that the silver is spent and our animal holdings belong to my lord—there's nothing left before my lord but our bodies and our soil.¹⁹ Why should we die before your eyes, both we and our soil? Buy us and our soil in exchange for food; we and our soil will be slaves to Pharaoh. Distribute seed, so we can live and not die, so the land is not deserted!"²⁰ Joseph then bought all the land in Egypt for Pharaoh, for each Egyptian had sold his field, because the famine had overwhelmed them. Thus the land came into Pharaoh's possession.²¹ And thus he made serfs of the people from one end of the Egyptian border to the other.²² Only the land belonging to the priests did he not buy, for the

מִאֵד וַתָּלֶה אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם וְאָרֶץ בְּנֵן מִפְּנֵי
הָרָעָב: ¹⁴ וַיָּלַקְתָּ יוֹסֵף אֶת-כָּל-הַכָּסֶף
הַנִּמְצָא בְּאֶרְצִים-מִצְרָיִם וּבְאָרֶץ בְּנֵן בְּשֶׁבֶר
אֲשֶׁר-הָיָם שָׂבָירִים וַיָּבָא יוֹסֵף אֶת-הַכָּסֶף
בִּיתָה פְּרֻעה: ¹⁵ וַיְהִי הַכָּסֶף מִאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם
וּמִאָרֶץ בְּנֵן וַיָּבֹא כָּל-מִצְרָיִם אֶל-יוֹסֵף
לְאמֹר הַבָּה-לָנוּ לְחֵם וְלִמְהָנָמוֹת נִגְהַךְ כִּי
אֲפָס כָּסֶף: ¹⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף הַבָּו מִקְנִיכֶם
וְאַתָּה נָהָרֶת לְכֶם בַּמִּקְנִיכֶם אֶם-אֲפָס כָּסֶף:
וַיָּבֹאוּ אֶת-מִקְנֵיהֶם אֶל-יוֹסֵף וַיִּתְعַתֵּן לְהָם
¹⁷ יוֹסֵף לְחֵם בְּטוּלִים וּבְמִקְנֵה הַצָּאן וּבְמִקְנֵה
הַבָּקָר וּבְחַמְרִים וּבְנְהָלִם בְּלַחַם בְּכָל-מִקְנֵהֶם בְּשָׁנָה הַהוּא:

¹⁸ וַתָּתַחַם הַשָּׁנָה הַהוּא וַיָּבֹאוּ אֶלָּיו בְּשָׁנָה
הַשְׁנִית וַיֹּאמְרוּ לוּ לְאַנְכַּחַד מַאֲדָנִי כִּי
אִם-יִתְפּוּ הַכָּסֶף וּמִקְנֵה תְּבַהַמָּה אֶל-אַדְנִי
לֹא נִשְׁאַר לְפָנֵי אַדְנִי בְּלֹתִי אִם-גִּוְתָּנָנוּ
וְאַדְמַתְנוּ: ¹⁹ לִמְהָנָמוֹת לְעִזִּים גַּם-אַנְחָנוּ
גַּם אַדְמַתְנוּ קָנָה-אָתָנוּ וְאֶת-אַדְמַתְנוּ
בְּלַחַם וּנְהָזָה אָנָחָנוּ וְאַדְמַתְנוּ עֲבָדִים
לְפְרֻעה וּתְנַרְעֵה וּנְחִיה וְלֹא נָמוֹת
וְהַאֲדָמָה לֹא תִשְׁמַט: ²⁰ וַיָּקֹן יוֹסֵף אֶת-כָּל-אַדְמַת מִצְרָיִם לְפְרֻעה בִּימְכָרוּ מִצְרָיִם
אַישׁ שְׁרוֹהוּ כִּי-חִזְקָק עַלְהָם הָרָעָב וְתִדְעֵי
הָאָרֶץ לְפְרֻעה: ²¹ וְאֶת-חַעַם הַעֲבָיר אָתוֹ
לְעָרִים מִקְצָה גַּבּוֹל-מִצְרָיִם וְעַד-קָצָחוֹ:
²² רַק אַדְמַת הַכְּהָנִים לֹא קָנָה כִּי חָק לְפֶהָנִים מִאֵת פְּרֻעה וְאֶכְלָוּ אֶת-חַקְם

stances, the reality of famine still plagues Egypt. This serves as a contrasting situation to that of Jacob's family, which is explicitly said to be given food by Joseph (v. 12). Due to the need to preserve human life, the Egyptian people first sell their grain, then their livestock, and finally both their land and themselves to the royal court.

14. The reminder of the famine allows the story to shift back to Joseph's role in Egypt as the one with a plan to avert death when the famine hits.

20–21. Joseph's authority as spokesperson for the Egyptian court is manifested when he buys all the land from the impoverished Egyptian population and accepts their servitude.

priests had an allotment from Pharaoh, and they ate their allotted portion that Pharaoh had given them; they therefore did not sell their land.

²³Joseph then said to the people, “See, now that I’ve bought you and your land for Pharaoh, here is seed for you—sow the land. ²⁴When harvest comes, you must give Pharaoh a fifth, and the other four portions will be yours for seeding the field and to be food for you and your households, and for your little ones to eat.” ²⁵And they said, “You have given us life! May we find favor in my lord’s sight and be serfs to Pharaoh!” ²⁶Joseph made this a law to this day for Egypt’s soil—one-fifth is Pharaoh’s; the priests’ land alone did not become Pharaoh’s.

²⁷Israel thus settled in the land of Egypt, in the region of Goshen. They struck roots in it, were fruitful and multiplied greatly.

אשר נתן להם פרעה על-פָנָן לא מִכְרֹוי
את-אדמתם:

²³וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף אֲלֵהֶם הִנֵּן קְנִיתִי אֶתְכֶם
הַיּוֹם וְאֶת-אֶדְמֹתֶכֶם לְפִרְעָה הַאֲלָכֶם זָרַע
וּנוֹעֲתֶם אֶת-הָאֶדְמָה: ²⁴וְהִיא בְּתֻבוֹאֹת
וָנְתַתֶּם חַמִשָׁית לְפִרְעָה וְאֶרְבָּעָה חִידָה
יְהִי לְכֶם לְזֹרֶעֶת הַשָּׂדָה וְלְאַכְלָכֶם וְלְאַשְׁר
בְּבַתְּכֶם וְלְאַכְלָל לְטַפְכֶם: ²⁵וַיֹּאמֶר
חַיִתִנוּ נִמְצָא-יכֹן בְּעִינֵי אֲדֹנֵינוּ וְהִיָּנוּ
עֲבָדִים לְפִרְעָה: ²⁶וַיִּשְׁם אֹתָהּ יוֹסֵף לְחַק
עַד-הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה עַל-אֶדְמָתָה מִצְרָיִם לְפִרְעָה
לְחַמֵּשׁ לְךָ אֶדְמָתָה כְּבָנִים לְבָדָם לְאָ

היִתֵּה לְפִרְעָה:

²⁷וַיִּשְׁבַּב יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם בְּאָרֶץ גָּשֵׁן וַיַּאֲהַזְנוּ בָּהּ וַיִּפְרוּ וַיַּרְבוּ מִאָד:

CONCLUSION:

ISRAEL/JACOB PROSPERS IN EGYPT (47:27)

The parashah concludes by shifting attention back to the prosperity of Jacob in Egypt and the fruitfulness of the family line there.

27. Israel thus settled. By referring to the thriving of “Israel” rather than the individual Jacob, the text emphasizes that what was once a family of brothers (and sisters) and their father (and their mothers) has grown into a nation. (Compare at 46:1.) Both God’s promise to Abraham in 12:2 (“I will make of you a great nation”) and the blessing bestowed upon Rebekah in 24:60 (“Sister, may you become thousands of myriads”) have begun to be fulfilled.

—Naomi Steinberg

Another View

THIS PARASHAH DESCRIBES the successful deliverance of the extended family of Jacob from hunger in Canaan to prosperity in Egypt and the emergence of the tribal arrangement of the nation of Israel out of Jacob's twelve sons. The circumstances that enable the physical and social survival of the family are described in some detail. The physical survival of the family is made possible by the reconciliation of Joseph and his brothers—which leads to a reunion between Joseph and his father. Yet the family's renewed solidarity and cohesiveness does not include any of its female members. Thus for example, Dinah, whose rape and rescue by her brothers is described in some detail in Genesis 34, was omitted from the list of Jacob's offspring already in parashat Vayishlach (35:23–29).

Our parashah, which gives us insight into the emotional state of Jacob, Joseph, and his brothers, offers us no information about the emotional state of Dinah, the only daughter and sister to be explicitly mentioned here (46:15)—and no story of rehabilitation, reconciliation, nor restitution for her. Eliminated from the tribal list—whether by virtue of her gender, her rape, or association with a foreigner—Jacob's daughter is thereby punished in a way that his sons are not. Note that Joseph has two sons by Asenath, the daughter of the Egyptian priest Potiphera, and is not censored in any way by the narrator.

The detailed genealogical list in our parashah (46:8–27) makes only brief references to Rachel, Leah, Bilhah, and Zilpah—Jacob's four wives. To be sure,

Women appear here as relatives of significant fathers, husbands, and sons.

Rachel's special status is echoed somewhat in 44:20 and 27, and Asher's daughter Serah is mentioned by name in 46:17, but neither mothers nor daughters appear as significant names in the family or tribal genealogies. (On women in lineages, see also at 6:1, 6:10; 10:1; 17:19; 22:20–24.) Similarly, barely any information is offered at all about Asenath, Joseph's wife and the mother of Manasseh and Ephraim. Joseph fathers two tribes in the nation of Israel. In other words, women appear in our parashah as relatives of significant fathers, husbands, and sons, or as nameless relatives as in “your wives” (45:19) or “their wives” (46:5).

—Esther Fuchs

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

“give your servant a hearing” (44:18). In the Hebrew, what Judah literally asks is to speak a word in Joseph's ears. Midrash B'reishit Rabbah 93.6 understands this locution as implying that Judah was relaying a private caution to Joseph—warning him of violent consequences, both human and divine, if Benjamin were to be enslaved in Egypt. All of the examples Judah uses to back up his threats (according to the Rabbis) refer to episodes of retribution in the lives of female family members—starting with Sarah and Rachel: “Because Pharaoh took Benjamin's great-grandmother for only one night (12:15), he and his household were afflicted with plagues (12:17).” Moreover, “[Benjamin's] mother died only because of his father's curse, But the one with whom you find your gods shall not live (31:32). So take heed lest he hurl a curse against you—and you die!” Judah goes on to warn Joseph that two of his brothers once entered a large city and destroyed it (Genesis 34): “And if they did so much on account of a woman—their sister Dinah—how much the more so would they do when it is on account of a man [namely, their brother Benjamin], the beloved of the eyes, the one who gives hospitality to the blessed Holy One, as is said: Of Benjamin he said: Beloved of the Eternal, / He rests securely beside [God], / Who protects him always, / [God] dwells amid his slopes (Deuteronomy 33:12).” This valuing of a man over a woman is reflective of the social ordering of human beings in rabbinic literature, where women are seen as a secondary creation, both lesser and other than men. Nevertheless, the Rabbis did not view the women of Israel as nonentities; as each of the examples cited makes clear, their reputations, their words, and their actions were highly valued.

“your servant made himself responsible for the lad... how can I go home to my father without the lad...?” (44:32–34). The Rabbis very much admired Judah’s loyalty to Benjamin and to the pledge he had made to Jacob. Contrary to the biblical narrative, in which Judah speaks to Joseph with cautious and even obsequious words, the rabbinic sages imagined so mighty a confrontation between “Judah the lion and Joseph the bull” that even the angels descended from heaven to witness the dispute (Midrash Tanchuma, Vayigash 4, 5).

His sons and his sons’ sons were with him, his daughters and his sons’ daughters (46:7). In B’reishit Rabbah 94.6, Rabbi Judah bar Ilai noticed that this verse includes both the sons and daughters of Jacob’s sons but not his daughters’ children, and commented: “The daughters of one’s sons are as one’s own children, whereas the sons of one’s daughters are not as one’s own sons.” This statement reflects a frequent situation in ancient times where daughters left their birth families at marriage and became part of their husbands’ households. Thus, their children were less likely to spend time with their maternal grandparents. In rabbinic halachah (that is, legal traditions), a married woman received a dowry from her father’s resources at the time of marriage but did not automatically inherit anything from her father’s estate.

Asher’s sons... and their sister Serah (46:17). This is the first biblical mention of Serah bat Asher. She reappears in Numbers 26:46 among Asher’s descendants who participated in the Exodus. Some rabbis

If they did so on account of a woman, how much more so on account of a man?

linked these passages and imagined that Serah’s lifetime spanned not only the four hundred years of Israel’s captivity in Egypt but extended far beyond. Her remarkable longevity is attributed to a powerful blessing of praise that her grandfather Jacob bestowed on her when she informed him in song that Joseph was still alive (Midrash HaGadol and Sefer HaYashar on 46:8). At the time of the Exodus, Serah showed Moses where Joseph had been buried, so that his coffin might return with the Israelites to the land of Israel (M’chilta, B’shalach on 13:19; BT Sotah 13a). Other rabbis identify Serah with the “wise woman” who negotiated with David’s general Joab in II Samuel 20:16–24, another four hundred years after the Exodus (B’reishit Rabbah 94.9; Midrash HaGadol on Genesis 23:1). In the 13th-century Yemenite compendium Midrash Ha-Gadol, Serah is further linked with Proverbs 31:26, “Her mouth is full of wisdom, her tongue with kindly teaching” (on Genesis 23:1). Other medieval sources claim that Serah “did not taste death” but entered Paradise alive (Alphabet of Ben Sira 20–21).

—Judith R. Baskin

Contemporary Reflection

AMERICANS LIVE in the kingdom of self-help books: Five Steps to Overcoming Fear and Doubt; Five Steps to Emotional Healing; Five Steps to Spiritual Growth.

Every self-help book is marketed as the “ultimate one,” or even as “the last self-help book you’ll ever need.” Over 300,000 self-help books are on the market. Typically, they promise a neatly outlined plan for self-transformation, for becoming free of a rooted sorrow or of deep-seated fears. They encourage the reader to believe that suffering is not worth the trouble, and gaining self-knowledge a routine affair—easily available for anyone with access to amazon.com and a credit card.

Thanks to the “self-help” industry, Americans—in particular—flee from mourning. We talk of going through the “grief process” until we experience “closure,” as if we ourselves roll along an assembly line of emotion until we get to the final station: the packaging of our sorrow, the sealing it tight, the storing it away.

But the very notion of “closure” for grief is an illusion. Instead, there is only the tentative recognition that our anguish is endurable, that—despite ourselves—life goes on and engages us with new emotions, new situations and images, new challenges and changes. The remembrance of the people we miss gets tucked into our hearts to be revisited—perhaps when we least expect it. As for the process of true inner change, true self-transformation, we learn to forgive ourselves for the mistakes of the past by not making them again. If we are lucky, life “tenderizes” the heart, gives us hearts not of stone but of flesh.

Vayigash powerfully addresses this more authentic model of true emotional change via the character of Judah. In its very opening lines, we find Judah in the midst of responding in an impassioned voice to the demand of the Egyptian vizier that the youngest of Jacob and Rachel’s sons, Benjamin, be left behind in Egypt. Not knowing, of course, that the forbidding vizier is none other than Rachel’s other son, Joseph—whom Judah and his brothers threw into a pit years before—Judah pleads with him to change his mind. Losing Benjamin would break his father’s heart, already broken because he believes his beloved Joseph is dead, says Judah. He begs to be kept behind in Benjamin’s place. And then he speaks the most plaintive words of all: “For how can I go home to my father if the lad is not with me?” (44:34, my translation).

These words finally break Joseph’s heart—and continue to reverberate through the ages. They signal to Joseph that he can finally trust his brothers, that there has been a profound sea-change in their character, that he can finally reveal himself to them. And so we need to ask ourselves what, in fact, has enabled Judah to come forth in this way? What has enabled the change?

The answer cannot be found in any self-help book. Judah most certainly did not take an instant course in “Five Steps to Become a Mensch.” Instead, we can conclude that Judah is able to stand up to Joseph-the-Vizier’s demand because he himself had gone through a painful, embarrassing experience of growth, one made possible through the courageous and determined intervention of his daughter-in-law Tamar.

Reflecting the Torah’s brilliant narrative strategy, the story of Tamar appears right after the brothers have lied to their father Jacob, trying to make it appear as if Joseph has been killed. Jacob rends his garments, puts on sackcloth, and goes into mourning: “His sons and daughters endeavored to console him, but he refused to be consoled, saying, ‘No, in mourning shall I go down to my son to Sheol!’” (37:35). No sooner does that happen than there is a break in the story, a seeming excursus: the scene switches to the tale of Tamar.

“Around that time,” says the text (38:1), Judah marries the daughter of a man named Shua, and she then bears three sons. The oldest, Er, marries Tamar.

But Er dies, with no indication of an emotional reaction from Judah. Following Israelite law, he sends his second son, Onan, to marry Tamar, but Onan refuses to impregnate her and he, too, dies. The law dictates that the third son, Shelah, should now marry Tamar, but Judah delays fulfilling this law, afraid that Shelah, too, will die. Indeed, he waits so long that Tamar, hearing that he is going to a sheep-shearing, presents herself as a harlot on the road. He “couples” with her, not knowing who she is. When rumor later reaches him that his daughter-in-law is pregnant, he demands that she be taken out and burned. Only when she is brought to him and shows him the signet and staff that he had left with her in lieu of payment, does he realize what has transpired. He then admits: “She is more in the right than I, for certainly I did not give her to my son Shelah” (38:26).

Tamar’s achievement lies in more than insisting that her father-in-law right his wrongdoing. Her act also becomes the galvanizing force that enables him to face, and thus finally overcome, the trauma of losing two of his sons and the paralyzing fear that he would lose his third, just as his own father Jacob had feared sending Benjamin to Egypt because he was the only son of Rachel left (42:38). Through the intervention of Tamar, Judah’s heart is “tenderized” by his recognition of the wrong that his inchoate fear of loss had caused. That is why he is now able to plead for compassion before the seeming might of Egypt.

Through the prior intervention of Tamar, Judah is now able to plead for compassion.

Judah’s experience illustrates that there are no instant transformations, no Five Easy Self-Help Steps to Wisdom. Instead, the Torah teaches that only by fully confronting ourselves—by being open to what we learn from one another—do we grow; only thus are we truly able to change.

—Miriyam Glazer

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

Zilpah Speaks to Gad

Elaine Rose Glickman

Genesis 46:16–18

To bear you but not to name you was, I suppose, what I was born to do, also to watch silently while you learned a language that twisted my tongue
and swore allegiance to a God who was not mine.

Your children will not invoke my name but still I send it with you, an echo, my claim on you and on all that is to come—the feasts of grain and lush pastures, the smoldering heat and merciless bricks, the clans and cities and prophets that shall be called after you.
You shall not hear my name again, but it will not matter.
I have entombed myself in you.

from And Jacob Blessed Pharaoh

Amy Blank

Genesis 47:7

Above the silken river
Laden with moonlight and the drifting silt—
Quiet, heavy and simple,
Headless of grandeur
Bent only by age
Jacob stood before the supple king,
The Pharaoh—
He also old and keen
And lean with polished wisdom
Of the ancient kingdom.
They stood together
Two old men who understood each other's Separate earth and separate heaven.

The moonlight almost spent Upon the river,
The stars spread far apart—
Jacob, the father, thought into the future:
“My hope is far removed.”
The lissome Pharaoh thought:
“My hope is long fulfilled.”

Deep silence fell
Upon the two old men who understood
Each other's separate earth and separate heaven.

Serah Bat Asher

Hara E. Person

Genesis 46:17

Entranced by the swirling colors of his tunic
I crept behind Joseph when Grandfather sent him to find his brothers.
Hidden behind a bush,
I watched my father and Reuben and the others.
Young and female and powerless
I could do nothing to stop them.
But I saw the cruel truth behind the lie.
Trapped between the responsibility of a daughter's loyalty
and the heavy guilt of my secret knowledge,
I could not bring forth the words that would have revealed my father and his brothers for what they became that day and released my grandfather from his suffering.
Instead I withdrew into the safety of silence, learning to whisper through the music of my harp
while my refusal to speak mocked my father's now empty authority.
They were relieved to let me stay with Jacob in his tent,
hearing only the endless anguish of an old man and the stubborn silence of a useless girl.
I played and he remembered, recounting the travels and wanderings of our family,
the pains and joys and dreams of each generation.

He spoke of love and treachery and misunderstanding,
and I created a soothing idiom of song.

It was I who was chosen to tell Jacob that Joseph lives still.
Upon hearing the news he granted me eternal life.
Endless life, for Joseph's life.
I became the family historian,
the keeper of tales,
the finder of bones,
the weaver of loose ends.
That is my gift from my grandfather, to revisit sufferings and joys and wanderings anew with each generation, to observe endless cycles of loss and hope and pain,
of births and deaths,
never to rest, never to finish, only to witness, to drag these weary limbs through epoch after epoch
and to wonder until the end of time if this gift is a blessing of thanks for solace in his loss or a curse for having kept the truth from him all those long years.

NOTE

It was I who was chosen. According to rabbinic tradition, it was Serah bat Asher who informed Jacob that Joseph was alive; see Post-biblical Interpretations, p. 276.

וַיְחִי ◆ Va-y'chi

GENESIS 47:28–50:26

Intimations of the Exodus: the Death of Jacob, the Birth of Israel

PARASHAT VA-Y'CHI ("he lived," referring to Jacob's residing in Egypt) serves as a transition between the stories in Genesis about the patriarchs and Joseph, and the narrative in Exodus of the Egyptian slavery and exodus. It is both a conclusion and a foreshadowing. As the end of Jacob's life draws near, he wants to ensure the continuity of the family. Consequently, in this parashah the present points to both the past and the future. The past is represented by the patriarchal blessing, which features the divine promises of progeny made to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; the future, by Jacob's blessings for his own and for Joseph's sons.

Along with the concern for the family is the concern for the land, since both are part of the patriarchal blessing. In making arrangements for his own burial, Jacob insists that he must be laid to rest in the family plot established by Abraham in Canaan, in the cave of Machpelah purchased from Ephron the Hittite (see Genesis 23). Although the entire family now resides in Egypt, this will not be their final resting-place. The parashah foreshadows the Exodus: Jacob's burial procession from Egypt to Canaan anticipates the Israelites' march out of Egypt. But the family's return to Egypt, and Joseph's temporary burial there, show that the real exodus is yet to come.

Joseph plays the leading role among the brothers. He has matured, and he now takes responsibility for his family. He is the one first charged with Jacob's burial instructions, and he is the one who makes sure they are carried out. He also assures his brothers that he bears them no enmity for past deeds. With the death of their father, the brothers are now a reunited family.

The matriarchs are the only women mentioned in this parashah, and only in reference to their place of burial. Jacob recalls Rachel's death on the way to Canaan (48:7). While instructing that he be buried in the cave of Machpelah, Jacob mentions that Sarah (along with Abraham), Rebekah (along with Isaac), and Leah are already buried there (49:29–32). Rebekah's and Leah's deaths have not been mentioned previously, whereas Sarah's death received close attention (Genesis 23).

In burial, they represent the uniting of their family in the Promised Land.

In death and burial, the matriarchs and patriarchs represent the uniting of the family in the Promised Land. Eventually, all Israel will reside in the land. But it will remain for the book of Exodus—where women once again will be very much in the foreground—to continue the story.

—Adele Berlin

Outline—

I. JACOB'S LAST DAYS (47:28–48:22)

- A. Jacob prepares for death and burial (47:28–31)
- B. Jacob blesses Ephraim and Manasseh (48:1–20)
- C. Jacob resumes his preparations for death (48:21–22)

II. JACOB'S DEATHBED BLESSING (49:1–27)

III. JACOB IMPARTS INSTRUCTIONS FOR HIS BURIAL (49:28–33)

IV. JACOB'S FUNERAL AND BURIAL (50:1–13)

V. JOSEPH AND HIS BROTHERS RETURN TO EGYPT (50:14–26)

- A. Brotherly reconciliation (vv. 14–21)
- B. Joseph's last days (vv. 22–26)

47:28

Jacob lived in the land of Egypt for 17 years; Jacob's days—the years of his life—were 147.²⁹ When Israel's time to die drew near, he summoned his son Joseph and said to him, “If I have

מ' ²⁸ וַיֹּחִי יַעֲקֹב בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם שְׁבֻעַ שָׁנָה שָׁנָה וַיְהִי יָמֵן-יַעֲקֹב שְׁנִי חִיוּ שְׁבֻעַ שָׁנִים וְאֶרְבָּעִים וּמִאת שָׁנָה: ²⁹ וַיִּקְרְבּוּ יְמִינֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל לְמוֹת וַיָּקֹרֵא וַיְבִנּוּ לִזְבַּח

Jacob's Last Days (47:28–48:22)

The patriarch turns his attention to his legacy. Jacob's first concern is his final resting-place (47:28–31); he insists that it be in the location that his grandfather Abraham had dedicated. Jacob's second concern for legacy involves assigning heirs, which prompts him to make special provisions for Joseph's two sons (48:1–20). His third concern, combining elements of the first two, is that his descendants return to their ancestral land and live there (48:21–22).

One aspect of the desires that Jacob expresses has since been echoed by pious Jews through the ages and in our own day: to be buried in the Land of Israel. On the ancient norm of burial in a family plot or cave, rather than in a communal cemetery, see Another View, p. 297.

JACOB PREPARES FOR DEATH AND BURIAL (47:28–31)

28. Jacob lived in the land of Egypt 17 years. The period is noted as if to say that it formed a separate chapter in his life.

Jacob's days—the years of his life—were 147. The narration begins a formulaic summary of Jacob's lifetime, but it will not actually relate his demise until much later (49:33; compare 25:7–8; 35:28–29). This parashah thus zooms in on the relatively brief moment in Jacob's existence that lies in between.

29–31. These burial instructions mention neither the locale of the ancestral resting-place nor even the country where it is located. What Jacob emphasizes is that burial must not be in Egypt (stated twice), and that Joseph must swear to carry out these instructions. Compare the reiterations at 49:29–32 and 50:5; see the comments there.

29. It is the duty of sons to bury their father: Isaac and Ishmael buried Abraham (25:9), and Esau and Jacob buried Isaac (35:29). But Jacob does not summon all his sons; he summons only Joseph—child of his beloved Rachel—his favorite son and the one of highest status in Egypt.

Later, when Joseph himself is about to die, he will utter a similar statement: “I am dying, but God will surely take care of you and bring you up out of this land to the land that [God] promised to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob” (50:24).

- Burial in a cave conforms to actual interment practices in the Hebron region.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 297

- One may alter another person's words for the sake of peace.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 297

- Ephraim and Manasseh are the first two siblings in the Bible who do not fight.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 299

- Surely, her blood flows in my blood, / Surely, her voice sings in mine....

VOICES ► 301

but found favor in your sight, please put your hand under my thigh and treat me with faithful kindness; please do not bury me in Egypt.³⁰ When I [am laid to] rest with my ancestors, carry me out of Egypt and bury me in their burial-place.” He replied, “I will do as you say.”³¹ He said, “Swear it to me!” so [Joseph] swore it to him; Israel then bowed down at the head of the bed.

48 After these things, they said to Joseph, “Look—your father is fading,” so he took his two sons with him, Ephraim and Manasseh.² When they told Jacob, saying, “Look, your son Joseph has come,” Israel rallied and sat up in the bed.³ Jacob said to Joseph, “El Shaddai appeared to me in Luz in the land of Canaan and blessed me,⁴ saying to me: ‘Behold, I will make you fruitful and multiply you; I will make you a multitude of peoples and I will give this land to your seed after you as an everlasting possession.’⁵ Now, then, your two sons born to you in the land of Egypt before my arrival

וַיֹּאמֶר לוֹ אָסֵנָא מִצְאָתִי חַן בְּעִינֵיךְ שִׁים־גָּנָא יָדָךְ תַּחַת יַרְכִּי וְעַשְׂית עַפְרָדִי חַסְדְּךָ וְאַמְתָּה אַלְנָא תַּקְבְּרָנִי בְּמִצְרָיִם:³⁰ וְשַׁכְבָּתִי עִם־אֲבָתִי וְנִשְׁאַתָּנִי מִמְצָרִים וַיִּקְבְּרַתִּי בְּקִבְרָתָם וַיֹּאמֶר אָנֹכִי אָעַשָּׂה כֶּדֶבֶךְ:³¹ וַיֹּאמֶר הַשְׁבָעָה לִי וַיִּשְׁבַּע לוֹ וַיִּשְׁתַּחַוו יִשְׂרָאֵל עַל־רַאשׁ הַמְּטָה:^פ מֵחַ וַיֹּהַי אַחֲרֵי הַדְּבָרִים הָאָלוֹהִים וַיֹּאמֶר לְיוֹסֵף הָנֶה אָבִיךְ חַלָּה וַיַּקְרֵחַ אֶת־שְׁנִי בְּנֵינוֹ עַמּוֹ אֶת־מִנְשָׁה וְאֶת־אַפְרִים:² וַיַּגְדֵּל לְיעַקֹּב וַיֹּאמֶר הָנֶה בְּנֵךְ יוֹסֵף בָּא אַלְכָה וַיִּתְחַזֵּק יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיִּשְׁבַּע עַל־הַמְּטָה:³ וַיֹּאמֶר יַעֲקֹב אֶל־יוֹסֵף אֶל שְׁנִי נְרָא־הָאָלֵי בְּלֹא־בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן וַיִּבְרֶךְ אֹתָיו:⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר אַלְכָה הָנֶן מִפְרָל וְהַרְבֵּךְ וַנְתַחֲוו לְקַהֵל עַמִּים וַנְתַחֲתֵי אֶת־הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת לְזַרְעָךְ אַחֲרֵיךְ אֲחֻזֹּות עַולְםָם:⁵ וְעַתָּה שְׁנִיבְנָנָךְ הַנוֹּלְדִים לְךָ בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם עַד־בָּאֵי אַלְכָה

29. “put your hand under my thigh.” This act and the accompanying verbal oath (v. 31) comprise the swearing that Jacob requires; compare Abraham’s procedure when he sent his slave to secure a wife for Isaac (24:2–3, 9).

30. “ancestors.” [Heb. avot, often translated as “fathers.” See at 25:8. —Ed.]

JACOB BLESSES EPHRAIM AND MANASSEH (48:1–20)

3–4. Jacob repeats God’s promise to the patriarchs of progeny and land. Both are in play here. Jacob’s insistence on being buried in Canaan foreshadows the permanent settlement in the Promised Land. His “adoption” of Joseph’s two sons points to progeny and family continuity.

5. “your two sons...they are mine.” Another grandparent (or substitute grandparent) who is considered to be like a parent is Naomi in Ruth 4:17, where the women declare of the son of Ruth and Boaz: “A son is born to Naomi.” In our verse, Jacob equates Ephraim and Manasseh with Reuben and Simeon, his own first- and second-born sons.

Jacob has lifted Ephraim and Manasseh from the genealogy of Joseph and placed them in his own genealogical list. He does so in memory, as it were, of Rachel, Joseph’s mother. This is a strong statement of family continuity—from Jacob to Joseph to Joseph’s sons, a male genealogy inspired by a woman. In later biblical tradition Rachel is the mother of the northern tribes, symbolized by the “Joseph” tribes. Thus we read: “A voice is heard in Ramah / ... Rachel is weeping for her children, / refusing to be comforted” (Jeremiah 31:14); the passage concludes with a promise that her children will be restored (“your children shall return to their own borders,” v. 16).

If we view Genesis 48 as a late retrojection, reflecting the tribes that settled in Canaan, then this in Egypt—they are mine; Ephraim and Manasseh will be to me like Reuben and Simeon. ⁶But your progeny whom you engender after them are yours; they will be called by their brothers' names in their family allotment. ⁷And I—as I was coming from Paddan, Rachel died in the land of Canaan, on the road, only a stretch of ground before reaching Ephrath. I buried her there on the way to Ephrath, that is, Bethlehem.”

⁸When Israel saw Joseph's sons, he asked, “Who are these?” ⁹And Joseph said to his father, “They are my sons, whom God has given me here.” He [Jacob] said, “Bring them to me, pray, that I may bless them.” ¹⁰Israel's eyes had grown clouded with age; he could no longer see. Joseph brought them over to him, whereupon he kissed and hugged them.

¹¹Israel then said to Joseph, “I never expected to see your face again, and here God has shown me your progeny as well!” ¹²Joseph then removed them from his knees, and bowed down before him to the ground. ¹³Then Joseph took the two of them, Ephraim with his right hand to Israel's left, and מצריהם לְיִהְם אֲפָרִים וּמַנְשָׁה כֶּרֶאָבוֹן

וּשְׁמֻעָן יְהִוָּלִי: ⁶ וּמְוֹלֵדְתֶּךָ אֲשֶׁר־הַוְּלֹדָת
אֲחֶרְתֶּם לְקָדְמוֹתֶךָ: ⁷ וְאַנְּכִי בְּבָאֵי מִפְּנֵן מִתְּהָעֵלִי
רְחֵל בְּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן בְּלָרָה בְּעוֹד בְּבָרְתַּת־אָרֶץ
לְבָא אֲפָרָתָה וְאַקְבָּרָה שֵׁם בְּדָרָר אֲפָרָת
הַוָּא בֵּית לְחָם:

⁸ וַיַּרְא יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת־בָּנָיו יוֹסֵף וַיֹּאמֶר מַיְ- אֱלֹהִים: ⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף אֶל־אָבִיו בְּנֵי הַמִּ- אֲשֶׁר־נִתְּנָלִי אֶלְקָדִים בָּזָה וַיֹּאמֶר קָח־מִنִּ- אֵלִי וְאֶבְרָכֶם: ¹⁰ וְעַנְּנִי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּבָדוֹ מִזְקָן לֹא יוּכֶל לְרֹאֹת וַיַּגַּשׁ אֶתְכֶם אַלְיוֹ וַיִּשְׁקַ- לְהָם וַיַּחֲבֹק לְהָם:

¹¹ וַיֹּאמֶר יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶל־יוֹסֵף רָאָה פָנֵיךְ לֵא-
פָלַלְתִּי וְהִנֵּה חֲרָא אָתְּ אֶלְקָדִים גַם אֶת-
זְרוּעָה: ¹² וַיֹּצֵא יוֹסֵף אֶתְכֶם מִעֵם בְּرַכְיָה
וַיִּשְׁתַּחַוו לְאָפִיו אֶרְצָה: ¹³ וַיַּקְרַב יוֹסֵף
אֶת־שְׁנֵיכֶם אֶת־אֲפָרִים בִּימֵינוֹ מִשְׁמָאל

is an etiology for how Ephraim and Manasseh—who were not sons of Jacob like the rest of the tribes' eponyms—came to be tribes. Jacob's bestowal on Ephraim of the birthright reflects the later reality: Ephraim the tribe became the largest and most influential in the northern kingdom.

6. “progeny...after them.” No further progeny is known. If Joseph were to have subsequent sons, they would not form separate tribes bearing their names but would be included in the twelve tribes.

7. “And I—.” In thinking about his own death and burial, Jacob suddenly recalls the death and burial of his beloved wife.

“Rachel died in the land of Canaan.” Joseph's mother was not buried in the ancestral cave of Machpelah. (On its purchase and Sarah's burial there, see Genesis 23.) Her passing, first recounted in 35:16–20, is repeated here with the addition of this notice. This mention of Canaan re-emphasizes the idea of burial in Canaan that marked Jacob's earlier instructions.

“Ephrath, that is, Bethlehem.” See Ruth 4:11, which mentions both Rachel and Leah as it links Ruth with Ephrathah, which is Bethlehem.

8–20. The bestowing of a blessing and a birthright, and bestowing it upon the “wrong” son, recalls Jacob's bargain to obtain the birthright from Esau (Genesis 25:29–34), his deception to obtain the blessing from his father, and the compensatory blessing granted to Esau (Genesis 27). The blessing here reiterates the patriarchal promise and again—as in the preceding passage—emphasizes the continuity from Abraham through Joseph's sons.

8–10. Jacob appears confused here, as if forgetting that he had just seen Joseph's sons and spoken about them at length. Modern critical scholars smooth the rough edges of this narrative sequence

Manasseh with his left hand to Israel's right, and he brought them close to him.¹⁴ But Israel stretched out his right hand and placed it on Ephraim's head, even though he was the younger, and his left hand on Manasseh's head, crossing his arms, though Manasseh was the first-born.¹⁵ He then blessed Joseph, saying, "The God before whom walked my fathers Abraham and Isaac, the God who has shepherded me ever since I came into being until this day—¹⁶the angel who has rescued me from all harm—bless these lads! Through them let my name and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac [ever] be recalled, and let them greatly multiply within the land!"

¹⁷When Joseph saw that his father had placed his right hand on Ephraim's head, it seemed wrong to him, so he took hold of his father's hand to move it from Ephraim's head onto the head of Manasseh.¹⁸ Joseph said to his father, "Not that way, Father! This is the first-born; put your right hand on his head."¹⁹ But his father refused, saying, "I know, my son, I know! He too shall become a people, and he too shall be great. Yet his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations."²⁰ So he blessed them that day, saying, "By you shall [the people of] Israel give [their] blessing, saying, 'May God make you like Ephraim and Manasseh.'" And he put Ephraim ahead of Manasseh.

by suggesting that verse 8 is the continuation of verse 2, and that verses 3–7 are an insertion from a different source, interpreting the original scene.

15. He then blessed Joseph. He does so through his blessing of Ephraim and Manasseh (v. 16, "bless these lads").

16. "let them greatly multiply within the land." Jacob passes on the patriarchal blessing to the next generations: he recalls the names of Abraham and Isaac, and God's promises of land and progeny.

19. Jacob refuses Joseph's attempt to correct

ישָׂרָאֵל וְאֶת-מִנְשָׁה בְּשָׂמָאל מִימַנֵּן
יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּגַּשׁ אֲלֹיו: ¹⁴ וַיַּשְׁלַחْ יִשְׂרָאֵל
אֶת-יִמְינֹו וַיֵּשֶׁת עַל-רֹאשׁ אֲפָרִים וְהִוא
הַצּוּר וְאֶת-שְׂמָאֵל עַל-רֹאשׁ מִנְשָׁה שְׁבֵל
אֶת-יִדְיוֹ כִּי מִנְשָׁה הַבָּכוֹר: ¹⁵ וַיַּבְרֶךְ אֶת-
יְוָסָף וַיֹּאמֶר הָאֱלֹהִים אֲשֶׁר הַתְּהִלֵּכְנוּ אֶתְתִּי
לִפְנֵינוּ אֶבְרָהָם וַיַּצְחַק הָאֱלֹהִים הַרְעָה אֶתְתִּי
מְעוֹדָה עַד-הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה: ¹⁶ הַפְּלַאֲךְ הַגָּאֵל
אֶתְתִּי מַכְלָרָע יִבְרֶךְ אֶת-הַגָּעָרִים וַיָּקָרָא
בְּהַמִּשְׁמָיו וְשָׁם אֶבְרָהָם וַיַּצְחַק וַיַּדְגַּזֵּן
לַרְבָּה בְּקָרְבְּ הָאָרֶץ:
¹⁷ וַיַּרְא יוֹסֵף קִיְּשִׁית אֶבְיוֹ יַד-יִמְינֹו עַל-
רֹאשׁ אֲפָרִים וַיַּרְעֶה בְּעֵינָיו וַיַּתְמַרֵּךְ יַד-אֶבְיוֹ
לְהַסְּעֵיר אֶתְתָּה מִעֵל רָאשׁ-אֲפָרִים עַל-רֹאשׁ
מִנְשָׁה: ¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף אֶל-אֶבְיוֹ לְאַבְנֵן
אֶבְיָה פִּיהָה הַבָּכָר שִׁים יִמְינֶךָ עַל-רֹאשׁ
¹⁹ וַיַּמְאַן אֶבְיוֹ וַיֹּאמֶר יִדְעָתִי בֶןְ יַדְעָתִי
גַּם-יְהוָה יְהִי-לְעָם וְגַם-יְהוָה יִגְדֶּל וְאוֹלֵם
אַחֲרֵי הַקְּטָן יִגְדֶּל מִפְנֵנוּ וַיַּרְעֶה יְהִי מֶלֶךְ
הַגּוֹיִם: ²⁰ וַיַּבְרֶכֶם בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא לְאַמּוֹן בְּקָל
יִבְרֶךְ יִשְׂרָאֵל לְאָמֵר יִשְׁמַךְ אֶלְהִים
בְּאֲפָרִים וּבְמִנְשָׁה וַיִּשְׁמַךְ אֶת-אֲפָרִים לִפְנֵי מִנְשָׁה:

the order of precedence of the children. The same Jacob who supplanted his own older brother once again puts the younger before the older. The switching of places of Ephraim and Manasseh also invokes the common theme in Genesis of the younger sibling taking precedence over the older: Isaac over Ishmael (Genesis 21); Jacob over Esau (Genesis 27); Rachel over Leah (31:4); Tamar's son Perez over Zerah (38:27–30). (The theme is also a popular one elsewhere in the Bible. But in the story of Leah and Rachel, Laban reverses the theme, using the priority of Leah to trick Jacob; 29:26.)

²¹Israel then said to Joseph, “I am dying now, but God will be with you and bring you back to the land of your ancestors. ²²And I have given you—first among your brothers—the Shechem mountain-ridge, which I won from the Amorites with my sword and my bow.”

49 Jacob then summoned his sons, saying, “Gather ’round that I may tell you what shall befall to you in days to come:

²“Assemble and hearken, O sons of Jacob; hearken to Israel your father.

³Reuben, my first-born, you are my strength and first fruit of my vigor, excessive in exalting [yourself], excessive in strength.

²¹ וַיֹּאמֶר יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶל-יְوֹסֵף הִנֵּה אָנֹכִי מֵת וְהִנֵּה אֱלֹהִים עַמְּכֶם וְהַשִּׁיב אֶתְכֶם אֶל-אָרֶץ אֲבֹתֶיכֶם: ²² וְאַנְּיִ נְתַתִּי לְךָ שָׁכֶם אֶחָד עַל-אֶחָיךְ אֲשֶׁר לְקֹחָתִי מִן-הַאֲמֹרִי בְּחֻרְבִּי וּבְקַשְׁתִּי: פ

מֵט וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לְבָנָיו וַיֹּאמֶר הָאָסְפָה וְאַגְּדָה לְכֶם אֶת אֲשֶׁר-יֹאמֶר אֶתְכֶם בְּאַחֲרִית הַיּוֹם:

² הַקְּבֹצֹו וְשִׁמְעוּ בְּנֵי יַעֲקֹב וְשִׁמְעוּ אֶל-יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲבָיכֶם:

³ רָאוּבֵן בָּכְרֵי אֶתְתָּה פְּחִי וְרָאשִׁית אָנִי יִתְּרַ שְׂאָתָה וַיְתַּר עָז:

JACOB RESUMES HIS PREPARATIONS FOR DEATH (48:21–22)

22. “Shechem mountain-ridge.” Heb. sh'chem echad, a difficult phrase. Many commentators understand it to mean “one portion,” or the double portion assigned to the first-born (Deuteronomy 21:17). Others, including our translator, read it in terms of the walled town of Shechem, in the vicinity of which Jacob had once settled and even purchased land (Genesis 33:18–19). It is the locale where Jacob had sent Joseph when his brothers were pasturing flocks there (37:13), and where Joseph would eventually be buried (Joshua 24:32). According to the Bible’s allotment of Canaan by tribe, Shechem sits in the territory of Manasseh—one of Joseph’s sons—which would later become part of the northern kingdom of Israel. It is the same town where the story of Dinah takes place, and the name of the prince who lies with her (see at Genesis 34).

“which I won...with my sword and my bow.” This clause strengthens the argument that the previous phrase refers to a location. There is, however, no record of Jacob’s having fought to obtain land.

“Amorites.” Another name for the indigenous inhabitants of Canaan.

Jacob’s Deathbed Blessing (49:1–27)

This is a laconic and therefore difficult poem; a number of verses remain poorly understood. In it, Jacob sets the future course of his sons—the eponyms of the tribes of Israel. It reflects a later time, after the tribes have settled in the land, but here its panoramic view is retrojected into a last will and testament of the patriarch. It has political overtones, putting some tribes in a more favorable light than others. Yet the overall effect—like so much in this parashah—is to foreshadow the fulfillment of the patriarchal promise: it depicts Israel settled in its land.

Such a testament is a well-known literary trope. A counterpart is found in Deuteronomy 33, in Moses’ farewell blessing of Israel, in which the tribes are blessed as if they are his own sons. Ancient

VA-Y'CHI

GENESIS 49:4–7

⁴Licentious one, boil up like water no more—Oh, you mounted your father's bed, then defiled my couch—he mounted my couch!
⁵Simeon and Levi are partners;
 instruments of violence are their plan.
⁶Let me not enter their council, nor let my being join their assembly;
 for they killed a man in their wrath,
 and in their whim hamstrung an ox.
⁷Cursed is their wrath so fierce,
 and their fury so harsh!
 I will disperse them in Jacob, scatter them in Israel.

⁴ פְּחוֹ בָּפְלִים אֶל-תֹּוֹתֶר
 בַּי עֲלִית מְשֻׁבֵּבִי אָבִיךְ
 אָז חַלְלָת יִצְוְעִי עַלְהָ: פ
⁵ שְׁמַעַן וְלֹעֵן אֲחִים
 כָּלִי חַמֵּס מִבְּרִתֵּיכֶם:
⁶ בְּסִדְם אל-תָּבָא נִפְשֵׁי
 בְּקָהָלָם אֶל-תִּתְחַדְּ בְּבָנֶיךְ
 בַּי בְּאָפֵם הַרְגוּ אִישׁ
 וּבְרָצְנָם עַקְרוֹרְשָׂוֹר:
⁷ אָרוֹר אָפֵם בַּי עָזָן
 וּעֲבָרְתָּם בַּי קָשְׁתָה
 אֲחִילָקָם בַּיְעָקָב וְאֲפִיעָם בַּיְשָׁרָאֵל: פ

post-biblical literature elaborated on this genre, composing testaments for the Twelve Patriarchs—the twelve sons of Jacob—as well as for other biblical figures like Moses, Solomon, and Job.

The sons are listed roughly by the mothers who bore them. Leah's children appear first (Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Zebulun, Issachar) followed by Zilpah's and Bilhah's sons (Dan, Gad, Asher, Naphtali), and culminating in Rachel's sons (Joseph, Benjamin). But the order does not follow exactly the birth order in the stories in Genesis 29, 30, and 35. Despite the adoption of Ephraim and Manasseh in the foregoing section, they are not mentioned in this poem.

In some cases, the blessing includes the tribal totem or symbol. For example, Judah is a lion; Zebulun is associated with ships; Dan is a serpent; Benjamin is a wolf. (Through the ages, these symbols have been used by various artists, such as Chagall in his famous Hadassah Hospital windows in Jerusalem.) The poem often invokes wordplay on the sons' names.

Taken as a whole, this poem privileges Judah and Joseph—symbols of the later southern and northern Israelite kingdoms, respectively. It thereby looks beyond the tribal land allotments to the time of the divided monarchy, when the individual tribes had little significance, having been replaced by the two more centralized polities. Some scholars read the poem as promoting Judah over Joseph, implying an even later perspective when the northern kingdom had been destroyed and Judah alone was left (D. Carr, Reading the Fractures of Genesis, 1996, p. 250).

4. “you mounted your father's bed.” An allusion to when Reuben slept with his father's concubine (35:22). Such an act is taken elsewhere as a sign of wishing to supplant the father (II Samuel 16:20–22; I Kings 2:20–22). This verse might be an attempt to explain why Reuben, although the first-born of Jacob, was not to become a historically important tribe.

5–7. The allusion is to Genesis 34, the Dinah story, in which Simeon and Levi arrange for the massacre of the men of Shechem. Here, as in the earlier account, Jacob's assessment differs from that of these two brothers.

7. “I will disperse them in Jacob, / scatter them in Israel.” They would not remain distinct tribes. Simeon was absorbed into the tribe of Judah; and Levi—the tribe from which the Levites and priests would come—did not have landholdings.

⁸You, Judah:
your brothers shall heap praise on you—your hand on the neck of your foes, your father's sons shall bow down to you.
⁹Judah is a lion's cub:
you flourish, my son, from the prey.
He kneels, crouches like a lion,
like a lioness—who dare stir him up?
¹⁰The staff shall not depart from Judah, nor the scepter from between his legs,
until he comes to Shiloh,
and the people's fealty is his.
¹¹He tethers his ass to a vine, his ass's foal to the choicest vine;
he cleanses his garments in wine,
his robe in the blood of grapes.
¹²Eyes that sparkle with wine!
Teeth whitened by milk!
¹³Zebulun shall dwell at the seashore, he will be a harbor for ships,
with his farthest reach near Sidon.
¹⁴Issachar, a bony donkey, lies between the folds, ¹⁵He saw how good was the resting-place, and how pleasant the ground:
so he bent his shoulder to the burden, to be subjected to forced labor.

8 יְהוָה אַתָּה יוֹדוֹךְ אֲחֶיךְ
יְהֻדָּה בִּעֲרֵף אִזְבֵּחַ
יִשְׂתַחֲוו לְךָ בְּנֵי אֲקִיבָּה
9 גּוֹר אֲרִיה יְהוָה
מְשֻׁרֵף בְּנֵי עָלִית
כָּרָע רְבִז בְּאַרְיָה
יְכָלְבֵיא מֵי יְקִימָנוּ
10 לְאִיסּוֹר שְׁבָט מִיהוֹדָה
וַיְמַחְקֵק מִבֵּין רְגִילֵי
עֵד בְּיִצְבָּא שִׁלְתָּה
וְלוֹז יִקְהַת עַמִּים
11 אַסְרֵי לְגַפֵּן עִירָה עִירָוֹ
וְלִשְׁרָקָה בְּנֵי אַתָּנוֹ
כְּבָס בְּיַיִן לְבָשָׂוֹ
וּבְנִים עֲנָבִים סָוָתָה סָוָתוֹ
12 חֲבָלֵלִי עַיִנִים מִיאִין
וַיְלַכְּנָשָׁנִים מִחְלָבָ: פ
13 זְבוֹלָן לְחוֹף יְמִים יִשְׁבַּן
וְהַוָּא לְחוֹף אֲנִית
וַיְרַכְּתָו עַל־צִיקָּן: פ
14 יִשְׁכַּר יִשְׁכַּר חָמָר גָּרָם
רְבִז בְּין הַמְשִׁפְתִּים:
15 וַיְרַא מְנַחָה בַּי טֹוב
וְאַתְּ־הָאָרֶץ בַּי נְעַמָּה
וַיֵּט שְׁכָמוֹ לְסִבְלָה
וַיְהִי לְמַס־עַבְדָ: ס

9–10. The blessings of Reuben, Simeon, and Levi disqualify those three oldest sons, leaving Judah to serve as the leading tribe—securing the birthright, as it were.

“lion's cub... lion... lioness.” The “king of beasts” is an appropriate emblem for Judah, the tribe linked with the Davidic kingship—an eternal dynasty.

10. “until he comes to Shiloh.” This last part of the verse is obscure; it has been interpreted as having messianic meaning.

11–12. This blessing's emphasis on wine suggests agricultural fertility, as well as luxury and festive banqueting. Future royalty is surely implied.

13. This verse places the tribe of Zebulun on the northern coast of Israel.

“Sidon.” A Phoenician port-town (now part of Lebanon).

14. Issachar is not portrayed positively; he is subjugated to those around him, probably the Canaanites.

¹⁶Dan will plead his people's cause as one of Israel's tribes.

¹⁷Let Dan be a snake on the road, a horned serpent on the path,
biting the horse's heels,
so its rider tumbles backward.

¹⁸I await Your help, יְהוָה!

¹⁹Gad shall be raided by raiders, but shall raid their rearguard.

²⁰Asher—his food is fat,
he provides delicacies for a king.

²¹Naphtali, a mountain-ewe born, bears lovely lambs in the folds.

²²Joseph is a wild she-ass's son, a wild she-ass's son by a spring,
the wild she-asses at Shur:

²³They harassed him,
shot arrows at him,
the archers were foes to him, ²⁴yet steady stayed his bow, quick his arms!

Through the Mighty One of Jacob, through the Shepherd, Israel's Rock,

¹⁶כִּי־יַדֵּין עַמּוֹ
בְּאֶחָד שָׁבֵטִי יִשְׂרָאֵל:
¹⁷יְהִידָּן נָחַשׁ עַלְיִדְרָה
שְׁפִיפָּן עַלְיָאָרָה
הַנְּשָׁלָעַקְבִּירִיטָסִיס
וַיְפֵלְךָ רַכְבּוֹ אַחֲרָךְ:
¹⁸לִשְׁוֹעַתְךָ קִימְתִּי יְהֹוָה:
¹⁹גָּד גָּדוֹד יְגֹונָנוּ
וְהַוָּא יַגְדֵּעַ עֲקָבָם:
²⁰מִאֶשֶּׁר שְׁמַנְתָּה לְחָמָן
וְהַוָּא יַתְּהַן מַעֲדָנִים־מַלְךָם:
²¹נְפָתָלִי אִילָה שְׁלָחָה
הַנְּתָן אַמְרִיר־שָׁפָר:
²²בֶּן פָּרָת יוֹסֵף
בֶּן פְּנַת עַלְיָעִין
בְּנָות צָעַדָה עַלְיָשָׁור:
²³וַיְמַרְרָהוּ וַרְבּוּ
וַיְשַׁטְמְמוּהוּ בָּעֵלִי חָצִים:
²⁴וַתַּשְׁבַּבְךָ בְּאִתָּן קְשָׁתָו
וַיְפַזְּזֵרְעֵי יְדֵינוּ
מִידֵּי אָבִיר יְעַקְבָּבָר
מִשְׁם רָעָה אָבִן יִשְׂרָאֵל:

16. “Dan will plead.” A wordplay on the name of Dan, linking it with the root d-y-n, “to judge.”

17. This verse adds an apparently additional, unrelated portrait of Dan. It is not clear whether it is positive or negative.

18. This verse breaks away from the main poem and has been explained as an interpolation from elsewhere (see Psalm 119:166). In its present location, it might be seen as an aside by Jacob, calling on God's help.

19. This verse features repeated wordplay on the name of Gad, built on the root letters g-w-d.

22. “wild she-ass's son.” Or, “a fruitful bough.” Both interpretations have been offered for this difficult phrase. In either case, the image is one of vigor.

23. The poetry now transmutes the animal or floral image of the preceding verse into a human archer-warrior who, although having been set upon by enemies, was able to remain steady. We have no inkling of the referent of this image; the Bible nowhere else mentions Joseph as a warrior or archer. It may refer to the later history of the northern kingdom, given that the “Joseph” tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh settled in the central part of the country and dominated it politically.

24–26. Jacob heaps the greatest blessing upon Joseph.

24. “Mighty One of Jacob . . . Shepherd . . . Rock.” The poetry invokes several ancient divine epithets.

²⁵by the God of your father, who helps you, Shaddai, who blesses you,
blessings of heaven above,
blessings of the deep that lies below, blessings of breasts and womb—²⁶blessings of your father surpass my parents' blessings—the bounty of the timeless hills:
let them be on Joseph's head,
on the brow of the prince among his brothers.
²⁷Benjamin is a wolf that rends, in the morning devouring the booty, in the evening dividing the spoil.”

²⁸All these are the twelve tribes of Israel, and thus did their father speak to them as he blessed them, blessing each one with a blessing that befit him. ²⁹And he gave them a charge, saying, “When I

²⁵מְאֵל אָבִיךְ וַיְעֹרֶךְ
וְאַת שָׁדֵי וַיְבָרֶכְךָ
בְּרָכָת שָׁמִים מַעַל
בְּרָכָת תְּהוּם רַבָּצָת תְּחַת
בְּרָכָת שְׂדִים וַרְחַם:
²⁶בְּרָכָת אָבִיךְ
גָּבָרו עַל-בְּרָכָת הָוָרִי
עֲד-תְּאוּת גְּבֻעָת עַזְלָם
תְּהִינָן לְרָאשׁ יוֹטֶף
וְלִקְדָּקָד נְזִיר אֲחִיו: פ
²⁷בְּנִימִין זָאֵב יַטְרֵף
בְּבָקָר יַאֲכֵל עַד
לְעַרְבָּה יְחַלֵּק שָׁלֵל:
²⁸כָּל-אֱלֹהָה שָׁבֵטִי יִשְׂרָאֵל שָׁנִים עַשֶּׂר
וֹזֵאת אֲשֶׁר-דִּבֶּר לָהֶם אֲבִיכֶם וַיְבָרֶךְ אֶזְרָם
אִישׁ אֲשֶׁר בְּבָרְכָתוֹ בָּרַךְ אֶתְכֶם: ²⁹וַיַּצְא
אֹתֶם וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְהָם אָנִי נָאָסֶף אֶל-עַמִּי

25. “Shaddai.” One of God's names, often associated with fertility.

“heaven above...deep...below.” The entire cosmos, from the heavens above to the primeval waters below, participates in the blessing.

“blessings of breasts and womb.” This unusual reference signals fertility.

26. “my parents' blessings.” The blessing on Joseph, says Jacob, will surpass the blessing he received from his own parents; that is to say, the blessing of Joseph will surpass the promise to the patriarchs. Interestingly, Jacob does not use the Hebrew word avot (“ancestors”) but horai—here translated as “parents”—a term related to pregnancy.

Jacob Imparts Instructions for His Burial (49:28–33)

The narrative returns to the issue of Jacob's instructions for his burial that has occupied so much of this parashah. Here, as opposed to 47:30,

Jacob addresses all his sons—not Joseph alone—and he details the location of the burial place and the family members who have already been laid to rest in it. The deceased matriarchs figure as prominently as the patriarchs. Indeed, it was the death of Sarah that had necessitated acquiring this family plot. (Genesis 23:3–15 recounts the purchase of this site—the first land acquisition in the Promised Land, and the first step in the fulfillment of God's promise to Abraham.) In death, as in life, the matriarchs are the cement that provides family continuity.

28. All these are the twelve tribes of Israel. This summation acknowledges that the poem refers not to Jacob's sons themselves but to the future of the tribes. By putting the future of the tribes in the form of this testament, it suggests that what befell the tribes was fitting to the character of each; it was their destiny. The Bible often explains and justifies a current situation as if it had been predicted prophetically.

29–32. Jacob's words are not meant simply to provide instructions on how to find the burial plot.

am gathered to my people, bury me with my ancestors—in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite,³⁰in the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, facing Mamre, in the land of Canaan, the field that Abraham bought from Ephron the Hittite as an inalienable gravesite.³¹There they buried Abraham and his wife Sarah, there they buried Isaac and his wife Rebekah, and there I buried Leah.³²The purchase of the field and the cave in it was from the Hittites.”³³When Jacob was done charging his sons he drew his feet into the bed; he then breathed his last and was gathered to his people.

50 Joseph threw himself upon his father; he wept over him and kissed him.²Joseph then charged his servants the physicians to embalm his father, so the physicians embalmed Israel.³When his forty days were completed—for it took the embalmers that many days—Egypt bewailed him seventy days.

By retelling the story of the site, Jacob appeals for family continuity—for the preservation of this burial tradition. (How often thoughts of family continuity and traditional practice come at the moment of death, when an important link in the chain is about to be lost!)

29. “my people.” See at 25:8.

“ancestors.” [Heb. avot, often translated as “fathers.”] See at 25:8. —Ed.]

33. he drew his feet into the bed. This action complements that of 48:2, when Jacob “sat up in the bed.” His instructions are now complete; he can die in peace knowing that he has conveyed his wishes to his sons.

Jacob's Funeral and Burial (50:1–13)

The narrative spotlight now shifts from Jacob to Joseph. He takes the lead in mourning for Jacob and in making arrangements to carry out his father’s last wishes.

קְבָרֵי אֶתְךָ אַל־אֲבֹתִי אַל־הַמּוֹעֵד אֲשֶׁר
בָּשָׂרָה עֲפָרֹן הַחַתִּי:³⁰ בְּמִעֵדָה אֲשֶׁר
בָּשָׂדָה הַמְכֻבָּלָה אֲשֶׁר עַל־פָּנֵי מִמְּרָא
בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן אֲשֶׁר קָבַה אֲבָרְהָם אֶת־
הַשָּׂדָה מֵאַת עֲפָרָן הַחַתִּי לְאַחֲזֹת־קָבָרָה:
31 שְׁמָה קָבָרָו אֲתִ-אֲבָרְהָם וְאֶת שְׁרָה
אֲשֶׁתוֹ שְׁמָה קָבָרָו אֲתִ-יְצָחָק וְאֶת רְבָקָה
אֲשֶׁתוֹ וְשְׁמָה קָבָרָתִי אֲתִ-לְאָה:³² מִקְנָה
הַשָּׂדָה וְהַמּוֹעֵד אֲשֶׁר־בָּבוּ מֵאַת בְּנִ-חַתִּים:
33 וְיָבֵל יַעֲקֹב לְצֹוֹת אֲתִ-בְּנֵי וַיַּאֲסַף רְגָלִי
אַל-הַמְּטָה וַיַּגְעַן וַיַּאֲסַף אַל-עַמְּיוֹ
גַּנְוִילְלָוּ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה יְסָף עַל-פָּנֵי אֲבִיו וַיַּבְךְ עַלְיוֹ
וַיִּשְׁקַלְלוּ: 2 וַיַּעֲשֵׂה יוֹסֵף אֲתִ-עֲבָדָיו אֶת־
הַרְפָּאִים לְחַנְתַּת אֲתִ-אֲבִיו וַיַּחֲנַטוּ הַרְפָּאִים
אֲתִ-יִשְׂרָאֵל:³ וַיַּמְלַא אַרְלָל אַרְבָּעִים יוֹם פֶּה
בֵּן יַמְלָא אִימֵּן הַחֲנַטוּם וַיַּבְּפַו אֶתְךָ מִצְרִים
שְׁבָעִים יוֹם:

Some of the confusion in this unit—especially in reference to Joseph’s acting alone versus all the brothers—is explained by modern critical scholars as the result of the combination of different sources, Priestly and non-Priestly accounts.

2. his servants the physicians. Apparently Joseph had his own staff of physicians. Knowledge of anatomy is necessary for embalming, during which the internal organs are removed.

to embalm his father. An Egyptian practice that conforms to Egyptian religious thought about the afterworld. This is one of several features in the Joseph story that reflects its Egyptian setting. Except for Jacob and Joseph, no other Israelites in the Bible are embalmed. Later Jewish law forbade attempts to preserve a corpse (except in extreme circumstances), since normally Jews are to be buried quickly.

3. The forty days of embalming were followed by thirty (or, per the present translation, seventy) days of public mourning: Jacob, because of his relation to Joseph, was treated as a quasi-royal figure.

⁴The days of bewailing him passed and Joseph spoke to Pharaoh's household, saying, "If I have found favor in your sight, please speak to Pharaoh and say: ⁵'My father adjured me, saying, "See, I am about to die; in my grave that I acquired for myself in the land of Canaan, there must you bury me." Now, then, give me leave to go up and bury my father; then I will come back.'" "Pharaoh said, "Go up and bury your father as he adjured you."

⁷Joseph then went up to bury his father; with him went all Pharaoh's officials, the elders of his palace, all the [other] elders of Egypt, ⁸and all Joseph's household, and his brothers, and his father's

4–6. Only after concluding the period of mourning does Joseph begin arrangements for the burial. Here Egyptian custom ends and Jacob's instructions begin to be carried out. Yet the Egyptian setting of the story is still in evidence in Joseph's carefully crafted words, seeking permission to bury his father in Canaan. Here—as often in the Bible—the narrative repeats a character's speech with changes that adjust it to its changing audience. Three times the text relates Jacob's burial instructions (47:29–30; 49:29–32; and here), and each time the wording is different, because both the purpose of the speech and the recipients of the information have changed. Joseph must obtain permission from Pharaoh, so he uses a strategy and language that will accomplish his goal.

4. Pharaoh's household. Joseph does not approach Pharaoh directly but through his official court, whom he asks to convey his request to Pharaoh. (This seems strange, given Joseph's high status as second only to Pharaoh.)

5. "My father adjured me, saying..." Joseph does not repeat the exact wording of the oath he swore to his father. He changes it so as to make it sound more positive: "bury me in Canaan" rather than "don't bury me in Egypt." It is not as if Jacob specifically rejected Egypt, but that he preferred Canaan. Joseph speaks here as a loyal Egyptian merely doing his filial duty.

⁴וַיַּעֲבֹרׁ יְמֵי בְּכִיתוֹ וַיַּרְבֶּרׁ יוֹסֵף אֶל־בַּיִת
פְּרֻעָה לְאָמֵר אִם־נָא מִצְאָתִי חַן בְּעִינֵיכְם
דְּבָרוֹתָנָא בָּאַזְנוֹ פְּרֻעָה לְאָמֵר: ⁵אָבִי
הַשְׁבִּיעָנִי לְאָמֵר הַנֶּה אָנֹכִי מֵת בְּקֶבֶרִי
אֲשֶׁר קָרִיתִי לִי בָּאָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן שְׁמוֹת תְּקַבְּרָנִי
וְעַתָּה אַעֲלָה־גַּא וְאַקְבְּרָה אַת־אָבִי
וְאַשּׁוּבָה: ⁶וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה עַלְה וְקִבְרֵר אֶת־
אָבִיךָ בְּאַשְׁר הַשְׁבִּיעָךְ:

⁷וַיַּעַל יוֹסֵף לְקִבְרָה אֶת־אָבִיו וַיַּעֲלֹו אֶת־
כָּל־עֲבָדֵי פְּרֻעָה זָקְנֵי בִּירוֹת וְכָל זָקְנֵי אֶרְצָ
מִצְרָיִם: ⁸וְכָל בֵּית יוֹסֵף וְאֶחָיו וּבֵית אָבִיו

"acquired." Heb. kariti, literally "dug" or perhaps "prepared." There is no prior notice that Jacob had prepared his grave in any way. This suggests that, as this translation reflects, it was the location that was important to Jacob himself—not the structure of the grave. (On the burial details, see Another View, p. 297.) But Joseph has designed his words to appeal to a pharaoh. High-ranking Egyptians had elaborate tombs prepared for themselves many years before their death. Therefore, we should take the word kariti literally: Joseph is making it sound as if his father, too, followed Egyptian custom, but with an Israelite twist—burial in the ground rather than in a pyramid. Pharaoh could predictably relate to this request of Joseph's, to honor his father by burying him in the "tomb" specially prepared for him.

"then I will come back." Joseph's loyalty is again evident in these words. After the burial Joseph will resume his place in Egypt. Indeed, he and his brothers do return (v. 14), for although the funeral procession foreshadows the Exodus, it is, as it were, only a rehearsal for it (see below on vv. 8, 10).

7–9. Like the period of mourning, the funeral and burial involve a large entourage, including Egyptians. This is a state funeral. In fact, the Canaanites perceive it as "a solemn mourning for Egypt" (v. 11).

household. They left in Goshen only their little ones, their flocks, and their cattle.⁹ And with him went the chariots and charioteers, so the camp was very numerous.

¹⁰When they reached Goren ha-Atad on the other side of the Jordan, they held there a great and solemn lamentation; he observed a mourning ceremony of seven days for his father.¹¹ When the land's inhabitants, the Canaanites, saw the mourning ceremony at Goren ha-Atad, they said, "This is a solemn mourning for Egypt," and they called [the place] Abel Mizraim; it is on the other side of the Jordan.¹² Thus his sons did for [Jacob] exactly as he had commanded them.¹³ His sons conveyed him to the land of Canaan and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, the field that Abraham had bought as an inalienable gravesite from Ephron the Hittite, facing Mamre.

8. They left in Goshen only their little ones, their flocks, and their cattle. While this is not yet the Exodus, the language foreshadows the struggle to take the children and livestock in Exodus 10:9–11, 24. As for women, it seems likely that most remained with the children, while at least a few of them featured in the funeral and burial ceremonies (see at v. 10, "lamentation").

10. Goren ha-Atad. A place name not otherwise known.

on the other side of the Jordan. The route through Transjordan is not a direct route from Egypt to the cave of Machpelah. This route foreshadows that of the Israelite exodus, which also wound its way through Transjordan.

they. Presumably referring to the brothers and the Egyptians, or perhaps only the Egyptians.

lamentation. A specialty of women; the public voice of mourning in the ancient Near East was both female and male (see Chaye Sarah, Contemporary Reflection, p. 129, and at Leviticus 10:6).

mourning ceremony. The translation "ceremony" suggests that the mourning period observed by Joseph included still more lamentation. Alter-

רַק טְפֵם וְצָאנִים וּבְקָרְם עֹזֶבו בָּאָרֶץ גָּשֵׁן:
⁹ וַיַּעֲלֶה עָמֹו גַּמְרָכֶב גַּמְפָרְשִׁים וַיַּהֲיֵה
 הַמִּתְנָה כְּבֵד מְאֹד:
¹⁰ וַיָּבֹאו עֲדִגְרָן הָאָטָר אֲשֶׁר בַּעֲבָר הַיְרָאֵן
 וְלִסְפּוֹרְשָׁם מִסְפֵּד גָּדוֹל וּכְבֵד מְאֹד וַיַּעֲשֶׂה
 לְאַבְיוֹ אַבְל שְׁבֻעָת יָמִים: ¹¹ וַיַּרְא יוֹשֵׁב
 הָאָרֶץ הַפְּנֵנִי אֲתִיהָאַבְל בְּגַרְן הָאָטָר
 וּלְאַמְרוֹ אַבְל-כְּבֵד זה לְמִצְרָיִם עַל-פָּנֵן קָרְאָה
 שְׁמָה אַבְל מִצְרָיִם אֲשֶׁר בַּעֲבָר הַיְרָאֵן:
¹² וַיַּעֲשֶׂה בְּנֵיו לֹא קָנְפָאשָׁר צָוָם: ¹³ וַיִּשְׁאָל
 אֹתוֹ בְּנֵיו אָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן וַיַּקְרְבּוּ אֹתוֹ בְּמֻרְתָּה
 שְׂדָה הַמִּכְפָּלָה אֲשֶׁר קָנָה אֶבְרָהָם אֲתִיהָ
 הַשְׁדָה לְאַחֲזָת-קָבֵר מְאֹת עָפָרָן הַחַתִּי עַל-פָּנֵי מִמְּרָא:

natively, Joseph observed "a seven-day period of mourning" of an unspecified type.

seven days. A mourning period of seven days is known from the Mesopotamian epic of Gilgamesh, and in the Bible also from the mourning for Saul (I Samuel 31:13) and from Job's friends (Job 2:13). It became shivah, the traditional period for Jewish mourning that begins after the burial. Here, however, Jacob has not yet been buried (see v. 13). Alternatively, this verse reflects an alternate tradition which has Jacob buried at Goren ha-Atad, followed by the period of mourning. See also at vv. 12–13.

11. Abel. Which means "brook, watercourse" or "pasture, meadow, well-watered land." (Place names beginning with "Abel" are found in sites in Canaan dating from the transition between the Late Bronze and early Iron Ages. These sites originated among non-urban populations.) It is here given the false etymology of "mourning," deriving from this incident.

Abel Mizraim. This particular place name has been identified with several sites.

12–13. These verses give the impression that after the public mourning at Abel Mizraim, Jacob's ¹⁴Joseph then returned to Egypt—he, his brothers, and all who had gone with him to bury his father—after burying his father. ¹⁵Joseph's brothers, seeing that their father was dead, now said, “Perhaps Joseph [still] bears us enmity and intends to repay us for all the harm that we inflicted upon him!” ¹⁶So they brought a charge to Joseph, saying, “Your father left this charge before his death, saying, ¹⁷Thus shall you say to Joseph: Please, I beg of you, forgive the transgression of your brothers and their sin, though they inflicted harm upon you; yet now please forgive the transgression of the servants of your father's God.” Joseph wept as they spoke to him. ¹⁸His brothers also prostrated themselves before him and said, “Here we are, your slaves!” ¹⁹Joseph said to them, “Have no fear, for am I in

¹⁴ וַיֵּשֶׁב יוֹסֵף מִצְרָיִם הַזֹּאת וְאֶחָיו וְכָל־
הַעֲלִים אֶתְתוֹ לִקְבָּר אֶת־אָבִיו אַחֲרֵי קִבְרֵוֹ
אֶת־אָבִיו: ¹⁵ וַיֹּרְאֻ אֶחָיו יוֹסֵף בִּימָת
אָבִיהם וַיֹּאמְרוּ לוֹ יְשַׁטְמָנוּ יוֹסֵף וְהַשְׁבֵּב
יְשִׁיבֵל לְנוּ אֶת בֵּל־דָּקָרָה אֲשֶׁר גִּמְלָנוּ אֶתְתוֹ:
¹⁶ וַיֹּצְאֻ אֶל־יוֹסֵף לְאמֹר אָבִיךְ צָהָה לִפְנֵי
מוֹתָתוֹ לְאמֹר: ¹⁷ בַּהֲתָאמָרָו לִיוֹסֵף אָנָּא
שָׂא נָא פְּשֻׁעָא אֲחִיךְ וְחַטָּאתָם בִּירָעָה
גִּמְלוֹךְ וְעַתָּה שָׂא נָא לְפִשְׁעָע עֲבָדֵי אֱלֹהִים
אָבִיךְ וַיֹּבֶךְ יוֹסֵף בְּרַבָּרָם אֶלְיוֹן: ¹⁸ וַיָּלֶבֶךְ
גִּמְאָחִיו וַיַּפְלֵל לִפְנֵיו וַיֹּאמְרוּ הַנָּנוּ לְכָה לְעָבָדים: ¹⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלָּהֶם יוֹסֵף אֶל־תִּירְאֹו family continued on to the cave of Machpelah for a private burial. Yet verse 14 mentions “all who had gone with him,” as though the whole entourage was present at the burial. The present verses are, then, better understood as a conclusion, a frame bringing closure to Jacob's initial command, which has now been carried out as he wished. (See also at v. 10, “seven days.”)

Joseph and His Brothers Return to Egypt (50:14–26)

*A*s he had promised Pharaoh (v. 5), Joseph—along with his brothers—returns to Egypt after the burial. The action of the Joseph story concludes as it began, with a confrontation between Joseph and his brothers.

BROTHERLY RECONCILIATION (50:14–21)

Just as at the beginning of the story the brothers plotted against Joseph and fabricate a speech (Genesis 37), so they do at the end, although much more benignly. Worried now that after Jacob's death, Joseph will take revenge on them for all the trouble they caused him, they introduce a hitherto unacknowledged deathbed speech of Jacob. The brothers claim that Jacob told them to tell Joseph that he should forgive his brothers.

The brothers' claim is implausible; why did Jacob not tell this directly to Joseph? It is better to conclude that Jacob never said this and that the brothers made it up. (Compare Bathsheba's making up a speech that her husband, King David, was supposed to have said, designating Solomon as heir; I Kings 1.) The language is overly formal, and one can imagine how stiffly and nervously the words were delivered.

But this lie is in essence true. The brothers have repented—and Joseph knows it. He cries when they say this. He will not hold their past actions against them.

16. “Your father.” Not “our father”—to play on the special bond between Joseph and Jacob.

17. “servants of your father's God.” The brothers refer to themselves via a phrase of humility and piety.

17–18. Joseph's weeping and the brothers' prostrating themselves and calling themselves “your slaves” is a replay of the earlier meetings between Joseph and his brothers (especially 45:1–5). But this place of God? ²⁰Though you intended me harm, God intended it for good, in order to accomplish what is now the case, to keep alive a numerous people. ²¹Now, therefore, have no fear—I will provide for you and your little ones.” Thus did he comfort them and speak straight to their hearts.

²²Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he and his father’s household, and Joseph lived 110 years. ²³Joseph saw Ephraim’s grandchildren; the children of Machir, too, Manasseh’s son, were born on Joseph’s knees. ²⁴Joseph then said to his kin, “I am dying, but God will surely take care of you and bring you up out of this land to the land that [God] promised to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.” ²⁵Joseph adjured Israel’s children, saying, “God will surely take care of you; bring my bones up from this place!” ²⁶Joseph died aged 110 years. They embalmed him and he was put into a coffin in Egypt.

כִּי בָתַחְתָּ אֱלֹהִים אָנִי: ²⁰ וְאַתֶּם חִשְׁבַתֶּם עַלְיָ רָעָה אֱלֹהִים חִשְׁבָה לְטָבָה לְמַעַן עֲשָׂה בַּיּוֹם הַזֶּה לְהַחֵית עַמִּירָב: ²¹ וְעַתָּה אַל-תִּרְאֻ אָנֹכִי אֲכַלְבֵל אֶתְכֶם וְאַתָּה טְפַכֶּם וְינִיחַם אֶתְכֶם וְיִגְרֵר עַל-לְבָטָם: ²² וַיַּשְׁבַּבְיָ יוֹסֵף בְּמִצְרָיִם הַוָּא וּבֵית אָבִיו וְיַחַד יוֹסֵף מֵאָה וָעֶשֶׂר שָׁנִים: ²³ וַיַּרְא יוֹסֵף לְאֶפְרַיִם בְּנֵי שְׁלֹשִׁים גַּם בְּנֵי מְכִיר בֶּן-מַנְשָׁה יָלְדוּ עַל-בְּרֵבִי יוֹסֵף: ²⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר יוֹסֵף אֶל-אֶחָיו אָנֹכִי מֵת וְאֱלֹהִים פָּקַד יִפְקֹד אֶתְכֶם וְהַעֲלָה אֶתְכֶם מִן-הָאָרֶץ הַזֹּאת אֶל-הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּע לְאַבְרָהָם לִיצְחָק וּלְיַעֲקֹב: ²⁵ וַיִּשְׁבַּע יוֹסֵף אֶת-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְאָמֹר פָּקַד יִפְקֹד אֶלְهִים אֶתְכֶם וְהַעֲלָתֶם אֶת-עַצְמֹתַי מִזֶּה: ²⁶ וַיָּמָת יוֹסֵף בְּנַמְרָדָה וָעֶשֶׂר שָׁנִים וַיָּחַנְטוּ אֹתוֹ וַיִּשְׁמַם בָּאָרוֹן בְּמִצְרָיִם:

time, at last, the relationship is wholly repaired: The brothers are fully reunited, not only physically, but also emotionally and psychologically. The next step, taken at the beginning of Exodus, is for this family to become a people.

JOSEPH’S LAST DAYS (50:22–26)

22. 110 years. This is the ideal life span in Egyptian culture; the Bible’s ideal is 120 years (6:3).

23. Ephraim’s grandchildren. In the Bible, to live to see one’s grandchildren is one of the signs of blessing, along with living to a ripe old age (Psalm 128:6). Joseph is even more fortunate: he sees his great-grandchildren.

Machir. The eponym of the most important clan in the tribe of Manasseh. (In a genealogy elsewhere in the Bible, his wife or sister is named as Maacah; I Chronicles 7:15–16.)

born on Joseph’s knees. Joseph may have adopted Machir—as Jacob had adopted Ephraim and Manasseh (48:5–6, 12); alternatively, this is a figurative idiom for family continuity.

24–26. Joseph, too, like Jacob (49:1–28), makes a deathbed prophecy and extracts a promise from his survivors to bury him in Canaan.

24. “take care.” Heb. p-k-d, literally “take notice.” Moses will use the same verb and construction when he introduces the idea of the Exodus to the Israelites (“taken note,” Exodus 3:16). The same verb appeared earlier in Genesis when God fulfilled a promise to Sarah: she became pregnant with Isaac (“remembered,” 21:1).

—Adele Berlin

Another View

ALTHOUGH IT IS NAMED VA-Y'CHI ("he lived"), this parashah details Jacob's death rather than his life. Here Jacob insists on being buried in the cave of Machpelah, near Hebron, where his ancestors and his wife Leah are already buried (49:29–32).

To flesh out the role of the dead in Israelite society, biblical testimony can be combined with archeological evidence. According to Jacob's statement, his family buried its members together: all the matriarchs and patriarchs were interred in the Cave of Machpelah, with the exception of Rachel. That tomb both substantiated the inheritance claim and served as a boundary marker; through his purchase of the field and cave, Abraham had established Israelite claim to territory near Hebron (Genesis 23).

Burial in a cave conforms to actual interment practices in the Hebron region from pre-Israelite times to the fall of the Davidic kingdom (ca. 1800–586 B.C.E.). The local residents indeed buried their family members—including children—together in either natural caves or roughly hewn chambers. Alongside their deceased, they placed ceramic vessels for food and drink, lamps, tools, and personal items. In the 8th and 7th centuries B.C.E., they occasionally provided also a clay female figurine—crudely formed, with little distinguished besides a head (sometimes schematic) and prominent breasts.

Grave goods suggest that the dead were considered to continue some form of existence. Many scholars—but by no means all—identify the female figurines with the fertility goddess Asherah, speculating that perhaps a figurine conveyed the wishes of the living

The dead were considered to continue some form of existence.

for the dead to intercede on their behalf with God (and Asherah) to promote lactation for children's welfare. Biblical passages likewise attribute ongoing benevolent powers to the deceased. Repeated admonitions not to consult the dead—rather than God—on behalf of the living (Deuteronomy 18:11), the woman of En-dor conjuring up the deceased Samuel to foretell the future (I Samuel 28), and the Israelite householder's annual declaration that no tithed food had been given to the dead (Deuteronomy 26:14) are just three examples of belief in the continuing powers of the dead and the practices of reaching out to them.

—Elizabeth Bloch-Smith

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

"treat me with faithful kindness" (47:29). In giving his burial instructions, Jacob asks to be treated with chesed v'emet. The Midrash asks why Jacob uses this expression—is there really such a thing as unfaithful kindness? Rather, Jacob's words come to teach that truly faithful kindness is that which the living show the dead (B'reishit Rabbah 96.5). Consider that when a person shows kindness to someone living, no one knows for certain what that person's motivation is; perhaps there is a hope for a favor in return. Furthermore, the outcome of that action is uncertain; while intended to be kind, it may result in harm or pain. But the kindness shown to a dead person—in the form of burial and a eulogy—is always true kindness. In addition, it is disinterested; one expects no favors from the dead (Itturei Torah).

Rachel died... on the road (48:7). Jacob had once before pressed Joseph to bury him in his ancestral burial plot (47:28–30). The commentators ask why Jacob only now—and not in that earlier scene—discusses his decision to bury Rachel at the roadside (rather than in the cave of Machpelah). One commentator argues that there was room in the cave of Machpelah only for Jacob and one of his wives. Up until now, Joseph had accepted the fact that Leah—as Jacob's senior wife and the mother of his oldest sons—was entitled to that place. However, Jacob has since adopted Joseph's sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, saying that they “will be to me as Reuben and Simeon” (48:5). With his sons recognized as the equals of his father's oldest sons, Joseph then must have inquired why his mother should not henceforth be viewed as Jacob's senior wife—and so be entitled to burial by his side. Therefore, Jacob now explains his decision to bury Rachel near Ephrath (Itturei Torah).

In defending his decision, Jacob explains that Rachel is destined to be an intercessor for her descendants (and, in fact, for all Israel). When the Israelites are conquered by the Babylonians, they will pass Rachel's tomb on their way into exile. Rachel will then mediate on their behalf, beseeching God to have compassion on her children (a rabbinic understanding of Jeremiah 31:15–17). Rachel, rather than any other matriarch, is chosen as Israel's intercessor because of her compassion for her sister, and her willingness to overcome her jealousy, when Leah married Jacob by subterfuge (Itturei Torah, citing Rashi and Eichah Rabbah, proem 24; see parashat Vayetzei at 29:25, p. 176).

Rachel died. Heb. metah alai Rachel, literally “Rachel died on me” or “...upon me.” According to Rut Rabbah 2, the preposition indicates that Jacob sees Rachel's death as a “greater grief than all his other misfortunes.” Another rabbinic tradition construes the preposition as a reminder that a woman's death is painful especially to her husband (BT Sanhedrin 22b). The same teaching meanwhile derives the parallel lesson—that a man's death pains his wife more than anyone else—from Ruth 1:3, “And Elimelech, Naomi's husband, died...” because that verse identifies him in terms of her.

“By you”* (48:20). In his commentary on this parashah, Rashi cites this verse as the source for the custom of blessing sons with the words “May God make you like Ephraim and Manasseh.”

blessing each one (49:28). How could Jacob have “blessed” Simeon and Levi, given the harsh words he directed toward them (49:5–7)? One interpreter of this verse suggests that Jacob's rebuke of his sons was, in fact, a blessing. In cursing their anger specifically—rather than his sons—Jacob sought to temper it, and to encourage them to distance themselves from their inappropriate behaviors. In this sense, his criticism was intended as a blessing, offering his sons a chance to renounce their past actions and become better people (Itturei Torah).

Jacob explains that Rachel is destined to be an intercessor for all Israel.

“Please . . . forgive . . . your brothers”* (50:17). Given that the narrative did not mention Jacob's having dispatched this exact message, Rabbi Eleazar son of Rabbi Simeon bar Yohai sees this verse as proof that one may alter another person's words for the sake of peace (BT Yvamot 65b); the brothers' claim made it easier for them to approach Joseph and easier for him to respond positively.

“I will provide”* (50:21). Commentators wonder why Joseph promised to care for his brothers' children. The brothers believed that the compassion Joseph had shown them since their arrival in Egypt reflected his duty to them as his older brothers. They feared that when they died, Joseph's anger at them for selling him into slavery would emerge and be directed at their children. Joseph reassures them; not only does he have no intention of harming them, but he plans to care for their children even after their death (Itturei Torah).

VA-Y'CHI

—Dvora E. Weisberg

• • • • •

Contemporary Reflection

VA-Y'CHI SPEAKS OF BLESSINGS, of a grandfather blessing his grandsons, a father blessing his sons. Imagine the scene at the end of the Torah portion: Jacob, whose name has been changed to Israel, calls his twelve sons to his deathbed and blesses each one of them. But his real concern, according to our rabbis, is that his sons will abandon his God after he has died. In the Midrash, his sons respond to this unstated fear with words that have become familiar to us: “Sh'ma Yisrael (Listen, [Dad—whose name is] Israel!): יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ וָאֶחָד is our God, only יְהוָה.” Hearing this, the dying patriarch sighs quietly: “Baruch shem k'vod malchuto l'olam va'ed (Blessed is the glorious Name whose kingdom is forever and ever)!” (Midrash B'reishit Rabbah 98.4). Each time we say the Sh'ma, we are rehearsing this moment. We are the children acknowledging the God of our own father, and we are pledging our own loyalty to the tradition of ancestors.

This farewell scene cannot fail to move us. But it is also confusing. Jacob also has daughters, and the one named Dinah is no longer in the story. Is she not worthy of blessing?

The question of blessing our daughters emerges by way of omission. Jacob and the rest of his family have been reunited with Joseph after many years (Genesis 46). The beloved child Joseph, whom Jacob thought was dead, is not only still alive, but he is a father, with children of his own!

Now, facing death, Jacob says: “I never thought I'd see your face again, and look, God has enabled me to see the face of your children!” (48:8–12). Joseph brings his sons close to his father, with Manasseh, the elder, first. Jacob crosses his arms, putting his right hand on Ephraim's head, and his left on Manasseh's. Joseph intervenes, “Not that way, Father! This is my first-born; put your right hand on his head.” But Jacob wants to put Ephraim ahead of Manasseh. Then Jacob blesses them both together with these words: “By you shall the people of Israel give their blessing, saying, ‘May God make you like Ephraim and Manasseh’” (48:18–20).

Why does Jacob bless his younger grandson first? It is hard to imagine this blessing without recalling the earlier moment when Jacob himself stole the blessing that his father Isaac meant for his older brother Esau. In blessing his grandsons, is Jacob repairing his own history, doing intentionally what Isaac did by accident? Is Jacob asserting through his act of blessing that birth order no longer determines one's destiny—and that blessing is an act of will as opposed to an accident of chance?

The question of blessing our daughters emerges by way of omission.

The story raises other questions. Jacob's blessing of his grandsons has become over the centuries the blessing bestowed regularly upon boys; but what is it about Ephraim and Manasseh that merits our blessing our sons in their name? And what about our daughters?

We do not know much about these two young men. We meet them first when they are born (41:51–53), and we encounter them again at this moment of blessing. They are children of an Egyptian mother and a father who is one of the most powerful men in Egypt. They are children born in the Diaspora, not only Egyptian but also Israelite—children living in two worlds.

So why do we bless our sons in their name? Could it be because, like so many Jews throughout history, they grew up in the Diaspora and still remained Jews? Could it be because we imagine that they followed in their father's footsteps—being part of Egyptian culture and politics—and yet still connected to their grandfather, part of Israel's community?

Or perhaps we invoke Ephraim and Manasseh because these are the first two siblings in the Bible who do not fight. With Ephraim and Manasseh, the family pathology that unfolds in the book of Genesis, in which siblings struggle with each other, finally comes to an end. They teach us that we do not have to fight over blessings: there are enough of them to go around.

In the Middle Ages, the customary blessing of children took place before Kol Nidrei—the time when we are most aware of our mortality—a time reminiscent of Jacob's deathbed blessings. In recent centuries, the tradition expanded to include blessing the children every Shabbat evening and on the evening of holidays. Whereas we continue to bless sons by reference to Ephraim and Manasseh ("May God make you like Ephraim and Manasseh"), the tradition for our daughters is different; we bless them with these words: "May God make you like Sarah, Rebecca, Rachel, and Leah."

Why are the blessings so different? Rabbi Richard Levy suggests the following contemporary reason for interpreting the difference:

"Just as Ephraim and Manasseh received their merit not through any acts of their own but only because they were alive and were descendants of Jacob (as are we all), so Jewish boys need not feel that their parents' love is dependent on their accomplishments; they are beloved just because they are children. For Jewish girls, however, who might be inclined by society's prejudices to think that because they are girls they need not set their sights very high, the blessing holds them up to the highest models: May God make you like the greatest women the Torah knows—Sarah, Rebecca, Rachel, and Leah" ("Parashat Vayechi," in Learn Torah With..., 1996, Vol. 2, No. 12).

As our community mores continue to evolve, one might claim that we now expect both our daughters and our sons to set their sights high. We also hope to create an environment where both daughters and sons feel valued simply because they are alive—and are our children. So perhaps there is yet another way to interpret these blessings, one that accounts for changes we value in our contemporary world.

Maybe we can understand Jacob's blessing of his grandchildren this way: "Ephraim, may God help you become the best that Ephraim can be; Manasseh, may God help you become the best that Manasseh can be!" Maybe we should fill in the names of our own children as we bless them. So I would say to my daughter: "Elana, may you be fully Elana!" And to my son I would say: "Joshua, may you be fully Joshua!" Or, in the words of the modern Jewish poet Marcia Falk: "Be who you are... and may you be blessed in all that you are" (The Book of Blessings, 1996).

—Laura Geller

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

Rachel

Rahel (transl. Wendy Zierler)

Genesis 48:7

Surely, her blood flows in my blood,
Surely, her voice sings in mine—
Rachel who grazed Laban's flock,
Rachel—Mother of mothers.

Therefore, the house is narrow to me,
and the city—strange,
for her scarf once waved to the winds of the desert;

and therefore, I shall hold firm to my way with assurance such as this,
for safeguarded in my feet are the memories, of back then, of back then!

Jacob Blesses Dinah

Sue Levi Elwell

Genesis 49

I have wrestled with the words with which to bless you,
Dinah, daughter of Leah.
A child, you went out to see the daughters of the land.

You returned a woman.
Did you raise your voice? Your cries were not heard.
Blood flowed through the streets of Shechem and I was afraid.

Like your mother,
you walk among the people with head unbowed.

May that strength and clarity of vision continue in the generations to come.

To you, my daughter, belong the blessings of the breast and the womb, blessings of justice and care.
Your offspring will learn many tongues and practice healing arts.
They will build cities of righteousness and none shall make them afraid.

Leah's Last Words

Sherry Blumberg

Genesis 49:31

So, in the end we will be together
Resting throughout time
In that piece of land
Abraham purchased long ago

Here, beautiful Sarah
And kind, strong-willed Rebekah Lie with their mates, Abraham and Isaac
In the cave of Machpelah

Come, Jacob, let Joseph return you
Not to Rachel's side, but to mine
And here, with the ancestors we shall lie
In the cave of Machpelah

Yet I will miss Rachel, weeping for her children
Death puts to rest all jealousy and fear
And I think of Hagar and Bilhah and Zilpah as our sons carry Jacob's bones home

This cave, now holy ground,
Open to receive Israel
Our bones wait for those who come Let Jacob's long wrestling end in peace

There's Only One Question

Merle Feld

Genesis 50:1–13

And the only answer is to keep crying,
to cry daily,
the way one is supposed to write daily or pray daily,
as a discipline.

I Know

Else Lasker-Schüler (transl. Janine Canan)

Genesis 49:28–33

I know, that soon I must die.
Yet all the trees are glowing from July's long-awaited kiss.

My dreams are fading—never have I written a duller ending in all my books of rhyme.

To greet me, you pick a flower—
I loved already in the bud.
Yes, I know, that soon I must die.

My breath hovers over God's river—softly I set my foot on the path to my eternal home.

Nearing the End

Merle Feld

Genesis 50:1–13

One question is should I save you
a place in my heart, or should I work
to fill the emptiness,
or, alternatively,
allow the wild grasses to grow over the bald spot
naturally, as they will,
in their own good time.

שמות • Sh'mot

EXODUS

FROM HIGH ATOP Mount Sinai, amidst thunder and lightning, comes a voice: “I הִנֵּה am your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt, the house of bondage” (Exodus 20:2). The exodus from Egypt and the revelation at Mount Sinai form the heart of the book of Exodus and the foundation of biblical Israel and subsequent Judaism. This book contains some of the most memorable episodes in the Torah, including Moses’ encounter with God at the Burning Bush, the ten signs and wonders (“plagues”) that convince Pharaoh to free the Israelites, the Decalogue (“Ten Commandments”), and the Golden Calf.

The English name “Exodus,” which derives from an ancient Greek title meaning “departure from Egypt,” summarizes the dramatic events in the first part of the book. The Hebrew name Sh'mot (“names”), taken from the book’s opening line (“These are the names of the sons of Israel who came to Egypt with Jacob . . .”), reflects the way in which Exodus continues the story that commenced in Genesis. In this second book of the Torah, the children of Israel/Jacob become the people of Women take part in Israel's striving to maintain a connection with God.

Israel. In fulfillment of the promises that God makes to the ancestors in Genesis, the patriarch’s descendants substantially increase in number and eventually begin their journey to the land of Canaan, guided by the teachings transmitted at Sinai.

Exodus contains four main sections: (1) the story of the enslavement of the Israelites and the liberation from Egypt (1:1–15:21);

(2) the narrative of the journey from the shores of the Reed Sea to the wilderness of Sinai (15:22–18:27); (3) the account of Israel's entry into a covenant with God, including the precepts contained in the Decalogue and the Covenant Collection (19:1–24:18); and (4) detailed instructions for building the portable shrine (called the Tabernacle or Tent of Meeting), its furnishing, and the priestly vestments (25:1–40:38).

Many readers wrestle with the historical veracity of these events; but the book defies facile answers. While there is some evidence that enslavement and exodus were a core authentic experience, none of the names of the pharaohs are recorded (although the names of the midwives Shiphrah and Puah are preserved), no dates are given, and the biblical text does not correlate easily with archeological finds or extra-biblical evidence. The book itself does not focus on historical facts, but on the teachings derived from the episodes recounted. The main concern is how subsequent generations will answer the questions “What do you mean by this rite?” (12:26) and “What lessons can be derived from these narrative details?” (See also Sh'mot, Contemporary Reflection, p. 326.)

Women play a pivotal role in the Exodus account, especially in parashat Sh'mot, which records the heroic deeds of six women who take action to save Moses and the people Israel: the midwives Shiphrah and Puah (1:15–21), Moses' mother Jochebed and sister Miriam (2:1–10), Pharaoh's daughter (2:5–10), and Zipporah, Moses' wife (2:16–22; 4:24–26). Following the miraculous escape from Egypt, Miriam the prophet leads the women in a celebratory song and dance (15:20–21). (Some scholars consider her the probable author of the Song at the Sea as well; see pp. 386–87, 392.) Women figure prominently in the laws of Exodus (see p. 427); and four women are even mentioned in a Levite genealogy (6:14–25).

Yet in other parts of the book, women play a more elusive role. Moses' command before the revelation at Sinai not to go near a woman (19:15) and the grammatically masculine language of the laws have prompted questions about the extent to which women were included in the covenant between God and Israel, questions explored throughout this Commentary (see, in particular, parashat Yitro). Likewise, the account of the construction of the Tabernacle initially seems to largely exclude women. However, a close reading of the text reveals that women contributed directly to this sacred structure through their donations and their labor.

Thus, in various ways, women take part in the drama of the Exodus and in the people's striving to maintain a connection and covenant with God.

—Andrea L. Weiss

• • • • •

שמות ♦ Sh'mot

EXODUS 1:1–6:1

Giving Birth to a Nation

PARASHAT SH'MOT (“names of . . .”) is both a new beginning and a continuation of the book of Genesis. In that first book, God made a twofold promise to Abraham of progeny and land (12:2–3, 7; 15:1–7, 18–21; 17:1–8). This second book amplifies the passing notice in Genesis (47:27) that part of the promise has been realized: the family of Jacob has “multiplied and increased very greatly” (1:7). Now the Torah turns to the acquisition of the Promised Land, which can begin only with an exodus from Egypt.

Four prominent themes appear in this parashah: the fertility of Israel; the oppression they suffer; God’s decision to intervene; and the role of women in saving the nation. Israel’s oppression is directly linked to Israel’s fertility, for as the family of Jacob grows into the nation of Israel, Pharaoh becomes concerned that Israel will become too numerous and thereby too strong. Although he tries various ways to limit the population increase, he cannot stem Israel’s growth. Thus begins the contest between God and Pharaoh that will play out in the story of the signs and wonders (in English parlance, commonly called “plagues”) in the subsequent Torah portions.

Also intertwined with the theme of fertility is a more pervasive theme in the Bible: women save the nation. This conclusion emerges clearly from the stories of the matriarchs (Genesis 12–35) and the account of Tamar (Genesis 38), as well as in the book of Ruth: women ensure the continuity of the family—and ultimately the nation—through the birth or protection of a son through whom the line will continue. The beginning of Exodus explores this theme in unusual ways, through unnamed Israelite women and the agency of non-Israelite women. The fertile Israelite women increase the strength of the nation, fulfilling God’s promise and threatening the pharaoh. The midwives Shiphrah and

These heroic women are pivotal in Israel’s eventual salvation.

Puah disobey Pharaoh’s command to kill the newborn boys. Moses’ mother and sister (whose names are not yet disclosed), and later Pharaoh’s own daughter, ensure that he is rescued and raised for future greatness. Finally, his wife, Zipporah, averts disaster by circumcising her son. Thus, while Moses and Aaron serve as the explicitly chosen instruments of God’s deliverance, these heroic women are nevertheless pivotal in Israel’s eventual salvation.

This parashah also marks a new stage in the national religion. In Genesis, the patriarchs had a personal relationship with God; in Exodus, the Israelites will enter into a communal relationship with the Divine. Previously, God was known to the patriarchs, and known in reference to them, as “the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob” (Exodus 3:6, 16; 4:5). Now, as God hears the cries of the Israelites and resolves to rescue them, God’s “official” or personal name, הָאֵל, will be revealed.

—Adele Berlin

Outline—

I. ISRAEL PROLIFERATES IN EGYPT (1:1–22)

- A. Transition from Genesis: Israelite fertility (vv. 1–7)
- B. Pharaoh’s response: oppression and killing of the baby boys (vv. 8–16)
- C. Midwives’ response: opposition to Pharaoh (vv. 17–22)

II. MOSES’ BIRTH, UPBRINGING, AND MARRIAGE (2:1–22)

- A. Moses’ birth: women rescue and nurture Moses (vv. 1–10)
- B. Moses’ flight to Midian (vv. 11–15)
- C. Moses’ rescue of Reuel’s daughters and marriage to Zipporah (vv. 16–22)

III. MOSES’ MISSION COMMENCES (2:23–6:1)

- A. Setting the stage: God takes note of Israel’s suffering (2:23–25)
- B. The burning bush: God commissions Moses (3:1–10)
- C. Moses resists accepting God’s mission (3:11–4:17)
- D. Moses accepts God’s mission (4:18–23)
- E. Interlude: Zipporah rescues the “bridegroom of blood” (4:24–26)
- F. Moses and Aaron convince the Israelites of God’s plan (4:27–31)
- G. Moses and Aaron fail to convince Pharaoh: oppression worsens (5:1–6:1)

1:1

These are the names of the sons of Israel who came to Egypt with Jacob, each coming with his household: ²Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah; ³Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin; ⁴Dan and Naphtali, Gad and Asher. ⁵The total number of persons that were of Jacob's issue came to seventy, Joseph being already in Egypt. ⁶Joseph died, and all his brothers, and all that generation. ⁷But the Israelites were fertile and prolific; they multiplied and increased very greatly, so that the land was filled with them.

וְאֶלָּה שְׁמוֹת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל הַבָּאִים
מִצְרַיִם אֲתָה יַעֲקֹב אִישׁ וְבִתָּו בָּאוּ:
²רָאוּבוּ שְׁמֻעוֹן לְעֵזִיר וְיְהוֹדָה: ³וַיָּשָׁכַר
וַיָּשָׁכַר זְבוּלֹן וּבְנִימָן: ⁴דָּן וּגְנְפְתָלִי גָּד
וְאַשְׁר: ⁵וְיְהִי בָּלְנֶפֶשׁ יַצָּא יְרִיחִי-עַקְבָּר
שְׁבָעִים נֶפֶשׁ וַיּוֹסֶף הַיְהָה בָּמִצְרָיִם: ⁶וַיָּמָת
יוֹסֶף וּכְלָא-אָחִיו וּכְלָהָדוֹר הַהוּא: ⁷וּבְנֵי
יִשְׂרָאֵל פָּרוּ וַיִּשְׁרַצּוּ וַיַּרְבּוּ וַיַּעֲצְמוּ בָּמָאָד
מָאָד וְתַمְלִיא הָאָרֶץ אֲתֶם: ב

Israel Proliferates in Egypt (1:1–22)

Fearful that the Israelites are “too numerous,” the new ruler of Egypt tries several increasingly severe measures to reduce the population; yet his efforts produce the opposite effect.

TRANSITION FROM GENESIS: ISRAELITE FERTILITY (1:1–7)

The names of the sons of Israel were listed in Genesis 46, so their repetition here provides a flashback to the descent into Egypt, which in turn becomes the preface to the exodus from Egypt. Exodus 1:6–7 also functions as an epilogue to the Joseph story. These verses introduce, or re-introduce (see Genesis 47:27), the theme of fertility, which dominates the first two units (Exodus 1:1–2:22).

i. These are the names. The identical expression in Genesis 46:8 introduces a list that includes Dinah, Leah, Serah, Zilpah, Rachel, Asenath, and Bilhah (46:15–25). [The list in Genesis also mentioned dozens of men who are not named here, which indicates that the men whose names are repeated here have been given a new role: each of them now represents a whole “house” (clan or tribe) of people—both women and men.—Ed.] Although these women do not appear here, named and unnamed women soon take on a central role in the narrative.

7. fertile and prolific...multiplied...the land was filled. Heb. paru vayishr'itzu vayirbu...vatimalei ha-aretz, which recalls the proliferation of life at the creation of the universe (Genesis 1:28) and also after the flood (9:1, 7)—particularly the teeming, swarming water creatures and the command to humans to “be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth” (1:28).

► The liberation of the people Israel from slavery begins with the saving acts of women.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 324

► This text is about a woman circumcising a child, which in early sources was not a problem.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 324

► Why is it that the most unbelievable of Jewish stories is that which is most believed in?

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 326

► We were God's daughters, an army of sisters, with our weapons of love and faith.

VOICES ► 328

⁸A new king arose over Egypt who did not know Joseph. ⁹And he said to his people, “Look, the Israelite people are much too numerous for us. ¹⁰Let us deal shrewdly with them, so that they may not increase; otherwise in the event of war they may join our enemies in fighting against us and rise from the ground.” ¹¹So they set taskmasters over them to oppress them with forced labor; and they built garrison cities for Pharaoh: Pithom and Rameses. ¹²But the more they were oppressed, the more they increased and spread out, so that the [Egyptians] came to dread the Israelites.

¹³The Egyptians ruthlessly imposed upon the Israelites ¹⁴the various labors that they made them perform. Ruthlessly they made life bitter for them with harsh labor at mortar and bricks and with all sorts of tasks in the field.

PHARAOH'S RESPONSE: OPPRESSION AND KILLING OF THE BABY BOYS (1:8–16)

8. a new king arose over Egypt who did not know Joseph. This notice indicates more than just the passage of time. Whereas in Joseph's time the pharaoh welcomed the family of Israel, now they face persecution by this new, unnamed king.

9. “Israelite people.” Heb. am b'nei yisrael, which points to a significant transition. What in Joseph's time constituted “the children of Israel,” that is, an extended family or clan, has now become a people. The shift in language marks a new era in Israel's history.

(Outside the Bible, the first extant mention of Israel as a people occurs in the Merneptah stele, a monument celebrating an Egyptian victory over various peoples in Canaan, including Israel. The pharaoh Merneptah, successor to Rameses II, ruled Egypt from 1213–1203 B.C.E.)

“much too numerous for us.” Ironically, the king feels threatened by a people who remains a small minority.

⁸וַיָּקֹם מֶלֶךְ-חָרֵשׁ עַל-מִצְרָיִם אֲשֶׁר לֹא-
יָדַע אֶת-יְוָהָה: ⁹וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-עָםָו הָנָה עַם
בָּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל רַب וּעְזָום מִפְנֵנו: ¹⁰הַבָּה
נִתְחַכֵּמָה לֹא פָזִירְבָּה וְהִיא בִּיתְקָרָאנָה
מַלְחָמָה וּנוֹסֶף גַּם-הַוָּא עַל-שְׂנָאנוּ
וּגְלַחַם-בָּנָנו וְעַלָּה מִן-הָאָרֶץ: ¹¹וַיִּשְׁלַמּוּ
עַלְיוֹ שָׂרֵי מִסְפִּים לְמַעַן עַנְתוֹ בְּסִבְלָתָם
וַיָּבֹן עָרֵי מִסְפְּנוֹת לְפָרֻעה אֶת-פְּתָתָם וְאֶת-
רַעֲמָסָט: ¹²וְכֹאשֶׁר יִעֱנוּ אָתוֹ כִּי יַרְבָּה וּכְן
יַפְרֹץ וַיְלַכּוּ מִפְנֵי בָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל:

¹³וַיַּעֲבְדוּ מִצְרָיִם אֶת-בָּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּפִרְקָה:
¹⁴וַיִּמְرְרוּ אֶת-חַיִּים בְּעַבְדָּה קָשָׁה בְּחַמְרָ- וּבְלַבְנָים וּבְכָל-עַבְדָּה בְּשָׂדָה אֶת כָּל-עַבְדָּתָם אֲשֶׁר-עֲבָדוּ בָּהֶם בְּפִרְקָה:

ii. forced labor. The Israelites were not forced into domestic slavery. Instead, they were conscripted for corvée labor, which entailed mandatory unpaid labor on large public projects.

garrison cities. These were not pyramids (royal tombs), a popular misconception.

14. harsh labor at mortar and bricks. In the ancient Near East, certain types of forced labor, such as building projects, were typically reserved for men. Brickmaking was understood to be men's work, even as voluntary labor. See also the next comment.

made them perform...tasks in the field. The biblical text speaks vaguely of “them”; thus it does not clearly indicate whether Israelite women were forced into working as slaves along with Israelite men. Women's participation may have been understood since historically in ancient Egypt, both women and men performed field work in state fields; and in ancient Israel, too, both genders regularly engaged in farm labor (see Ruth 2:8–9). More likely, it went without saying that the Egyptians drafted only Israelite men for the physical corvée labor.

¹⁵The king of Egypt spoke to the Hebrew midwives, one of whom was named Shiphrah and the other Puah,¹⁶saying, “When you deliver the Hebrew women, look at the birthstool: if it is a boy, kill him; if it is a girl, let her live.”¹⁷The midwives, fearing God, did not do as the king of Egypt had told them; they let the boys live.¹⁸So the king of Egypt summoned the midwives and said to them, “Why have you done this thing, letting the boys live?”¹⁹The midwives said to Pharaoh, “Because the Hebrew women are not like the Egyptian women: they are vigorous. Before the midwife can come to

¹⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר מֶלֶךְ מצִירִים לְמִילְדָת הָעֲבָרִית אֲשֶׁר שֵׁם הַאַחֲת שְׂפָרָה וְשֵׁם הַשְׁנִית פַּוְעַה: ¹⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר בַּיּוֹם אֲתִיהָ עֲבָרִות וַיֹּאמֶת עַל־הָאֲבוֹנִים אַמְּבֵן הוּא וְהַמְּתַנָּא אָתוֹ וְאַמְּבֵת הוּא וְחַיָּה: ¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר קָאשֶׁר דְּבָר אֲלֵיכֶם מֶלֶךְ מצִירִים וְלֹא עַשׂ כַּאֲשֶׁר הַיְלָדִים: ¹⁸ וַיֹּקַרְא מֶלֶךְ־מִצְרָיִם לְמִילְדָת וַיֹּאמֶר לְהַן מִדּוֹעַ עֲשֵׂיתָן הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה וְתַחֲזִין אֲתִיהָ־יְלָדִים: ¹⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר מֶלֶךְ־מִצְרָיִם אֶל־פְּרַעַה כִּי לֹא בְּנָשִׁים הָעֲבָרִית בִּיהִיוֹת הַנָּה בְּטָרֵם תִּבּוֹא

15. Hebrew midwives. It is unclear from the wording of the Hebrew whether they are Hebrew women who work as midwives, or Egyptian midwives who serve the Hebrews. If the latter, the midwives are righteous gentiles who fear God (1:17).

Shiprah and...Puah. The midwives' names are Semitic rather than Egyptian in origin. The name Shiphrah comes from the root meaning “to be beautiful” and has been found also in an a pre-biblical Egyptian document listing Asiatic slaves. The name Puah is attested in Ugaritic (Canaanite) literature and can be traced to a word for a fragrant blossom that came to mean “young girl.”

Commentators question how two midwives could have served the entire burgeoning Israelite population. It has been suggested that this account only includes the names of the two midwives who disobeyed Pharaoh. Alternatively, it is possible that the narrator is here mentioning the names of the overseers of two guilds of midwives—or the names of the guilds themselves. Either way, it is significant that while the pharaoh's name is not mentioned, the names of these two women are preserved.

“if it is a boy, kill him.” The reason is apparently so they could not become soldiers in an opposing army, which is what worries Pharaoh (see v. 10).

16. “birthstool.” Literally, “two stones,” referring to a pair of stones that women used for support as they squatted or kneeled during childbirth. (Not surprisingly, a kneeling woman was the Egyptian hieroglyphic sign for childbirth.) This practice allowed for an easier delivery than the contemporary practice of lying down, and gave access to the midwife; she sat facing a kneeling woman in labor, or behind a squatting woman. After the delivery, the midwife would cut the umbilical cord, bathe the baby, rub the child with salt, and wrap it in strips of cloth (see Ezekiel 16:4).

MIDWIVES' RESPONSE: OPPOSITION TO PHARAOH (1:17–22)

Twice it is mentioned that the midwives are God-fearing (vv. 17, 21), which undoubtedly gives them the courage to countermand a direct order from Pharaoh by letting the Hebrew boys live. They cleverly make up the excuse that the Hebrew women delivered their children before the midwives could arrive. (See also Another View, p. 324.)

19. “vigorous.” Heb. chayot, which also conveys the sense that the women are like wild animals (chayot) in that they gave birth naturally, without the assistance of a midwife. The midwives' resist-them, they have given birth.”²⁰ And God dealt well with the midwives; and the people multiplied and increased greatly.²¹ And [God] established households for the midwives, because they feared God.²² Then Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, “Every boy that is born you shall throw into the Nile, but let every girl live.”

2 A certain member of the house of Levi went and married a woman of Levi.² The woman conceived and bore a son; and when she saw how ance goes beyond non-cooperation to a direct defiance of Pharaoh through lies. On subterfuge as recourse for both women and men who face abuses of authority, see p. 142.

21. [God] established households for the midwives. The midwives are rewarded for their role in helping to increase the Israelite population by having progeny of their own. [Perhaps this notice means to suggest that a lineage was named after each midwife; elsewhere in the Bible, the word batim (“households”) refers not merely to having progeny but to heading a lineage (see Ruth 4:11–12). Some scholars speculate that the biblical text mentions Shiphrah and Puah by name because those were lineage names known to the text’s ancient audience (The Torah: A Modern Commentary, 2005, p. 347). In biblical genealogies, many of the names refer to a town or clan known also from later in Israelite history; occasionally—albeit rarely—the genealogies do mention women’s names in this capacity.—Ed.]

22. “throw.” Heb. tashlichu, which with regard to a child does not mean “to hurl” but “to abandon” (see Genesis 21:15; Ezekiel 16:5). The predictable—but not immediate—result would be the baby boy’s death.

“into the Nile.” Much as in ancient Greece, where unwanted female babies were left on hillsides, here the males are to be floated in baskets on the water—where they would die out of the sight of their parents, either by sinking into the water or from exposure. | Ironically, Moses will be saved, not

אֲלֹהִים הַמִּילְדָת וַיָּלֹדו: ²⁰ וַיֵּיטֶב אֱלֹהִים לִמְילְדָת וַיַּרְבֵּה הָעָם וַיַּעֲצִמּוּ מֵאָד: ²¹ וַיָּהִי בִּירָאוּ הַמִּילְדָת אֶת־הָאֱלֹהִים וַיַּעֲשֵׂה לְהֶם בְּתִים: ²² וַיַּצְוֹלְפָרָעָה לְכָל־עַמּוֹ לְאמֹר בְּלַהֲבֵן הַיּוֹלֵד הַיָּאֹרֶת תִּשְׁלִיכְךָ וְכָל־הַבָּת תִּתְחַזֵּן: פ

ב וַיָּלֹךְ אִישׁ מִבֵּית לְוַיַּקְחָ אֶת־בָּת־לְוִי:
וְתַהֲרֵה הָאָשָׁה וְתַלֵּל בָּן וְתַרְאֵ אֶת־ killed, by the Nile. Later, a pharaoh will himself be killed with his troops by water in the Sea of Reeds as they pursue the Israelites (14:28).

Moses’ Birth, Upbringing, and Marriage (2:1–22)

Heroes in ancient traditions often have auspicious births. The Bible’s typical special birth story involves a child born to a barren mother (Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Samson, Samuel). However, given the emphasis on fertility in the Exodus account, a barren woman motif would be jarring, if not dissonant, so an alternate special birth theme was chosen: the young hero’s abandonment and narrow escape from death. Similar stories were told about Sargon of Akkad (a king who established an empire in southern Mesopotamia) and Romulus and Remus (the founders of Rome). In both the Legend of Sargon and the Moses story, the child is born in secret, abandoned by his natural parents, set in a reed basket, and pulled out of the water by a rescuer. A distinctive feature of Exodus 2 is that the rescuers of the future hero are women.

MOSES’ BIRTH: WOMEN RESCUE AND NURTURE MOSES (2:1–10)

Moses’ mother manages to keep his birth a secret for three months, until she is no longer able to hide beautiful he was, she hid him for three months. ³When she could hide him no longer, she got a wicker basket for him and caulked it with bitumen and pitch. She put the child into it and placed it among the reeds by the bank of the Nile. ⁴And his sister stationed herself at a distance, to learn what would befall him.

⁵The daughter of Pharaoh came down to bathe in the Nile, while her maidens walked along the Nile. She spied the basket among the reeds and sent her slave girl to fetch it. ⁶When she opened it, she saw that it was a child, a boy crying. She took pity on it and said, “This must be a Hebrew child.” ⁷Then his sister said to Pharaoh’s daughter, “Shall I go and get you a Hebrew nurse to suckle the child for you?” ⁸And Pharaoh’s daughter answered, “Yes.” So the girl went and called the child’s mother. ⁹And Pharaoh’s daughter said to her,

בִּיטּוֹב הָוֹ וַתְּצִפְנָהוּ שֶׁלֶשָׁה יְרֵחִים:
³ וְלֹא-יִכְלֶה עוֹד חֲצִינוֹ וַתְּקַח-לָוּ תַּבְתַּחַם
גַּמָּא וַתְּחַמְּרָה בְּחָמָר וַבְּזַפְתָּה וַתְּשַׁם בָּהּ
אֶת-הַיּוֹלֵד וַתְּשַׁם בְּסֻוף עַל-שְׁפַת הַיּוֹרֵד:
⁴ וַתְּתַצְּבֶּן אֶחָתוֹ מִרְחָק לְדֹעָה מִה-יִعָּשֶׂה
לֹ:

⁵ וַתַּרְדֵּד בַּת-פְּרָעָה לְרָחֵץ עַל-הַיּוֹרֵד
וַנְּעַרְתָּה הַלְּכָת עַל-יָד הַיּוֹרֵד וַתַּרְא אֶת-
הַתְּבָלָה בְּתוֹךְ הַטּוֹף וַתְּשַׁלַּח אֶת-אַמְתָּה
וַתְּקַחַת: ⁶ וַתִּפְתַּח וַתַּרְא-הוּא אֶת-הַיּוֹלֵד
וַהֲנִינָּעַ בְּכָה וַתִּחְמַל עַלְיוֹ וַתֹּאמֶר
מִילָּהּ הָעֲבָרִים זֶה: ⁷ וַתֹּאמֶר אֶחָתוֹ
אֶל-בַּת-פְּרָעָה הָאֱלֹהִים וְקָרְאָתִי לְךָ אִשָּׁה
מִינְקָת מִן הָעֲבָרִית וַתִּנְקַדֵּךְ אֶת-הַיּוֹלֵד:
⁸ וַתֹּאמֶר לָהּ בַּת-פְּרָעָה לְכִי וַתַּלְקַח
הַעַלְמָה וַתְּקַרְא אֶת-אָם הַיּוֹלֵד: ⁹ וַתֹּאמֶר

his existence. She then puts the baby in a basket on the Nile where he is rescued by Pharaoh’s daughter and aided by his sister. The collaboration of these three women ensures that Moses will survive.

1. A certain member of the house of Levi . . . married a woman of Levi. Moses’ parents remain anonymous in this story. (In 6:20, they are identified as Amram and Jochebed.) His father plays no further role; his mother and sister (see v. 4) take the initiative and do what is needed to protect Moses.

2. bore. See at Genesis 29:32.

3. wicker. That is, made from reeds growing along the Nile.

basket. Heb. teivah, the same word for Noah’s ark (Genesis 6–9), another container designed to save special people from the water.

caulked it with bitumen and pitch. To make it watertight. Moses’ mother thus takes special precautions to ensure the life of her son.

4. his sister. This is Miriam, although she is not referred to by name until 15:20, where she is called a prophet. | Although women were generally not included in genealogical lists, Miriam’s name appears in the list of Amram’s three children in I Chronicles 5:29. Micah 6:4 mentions her along with Moses and Aaron as having played an equal role in saving Israel. (See also at Numbers 20:1.)

stationed herself. Here—and when she approaches Pharaoh’s daughter in v. 7—the unnamed sister takes initiative. There is no indication that her mother or father sent her to watch over the baby. Thus this scene highlights Miriam’s audacity and ingenuity.

6. “Hebrew child.” It is significant that Pharaoh’s daughter realizes that the baby is a Hebrew, because she probably knows about her father’s injunction. If so, her rescue of the child constitutes another case in which a woman bravely defies Pharaoh’s decree. (See also 1:17–22.)

7. “Shall I go and get you a Hebrew nurse . . . ?” Whereas Moses hesitates later before addressing Pharaoh, his sister displays no reluctance as she now approaches Pharaoh’s daughter and enacts a clever plan to reunite Moses with his mother.

"Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will pay your wages." So the woman took the child and nursed it.¹⁰ When the child grew up, she brought him to Pharaoh's daughter, who made him her son. She named him Moses, explaining, "I drew him out of the water."

¹¹ Some time after that, when Moses had grown up, he went out to his kinsfolk and witnessed their labors. He saw an Egyptian beating a Hebrew, one of his kinsmen.¹² He turned this way and that and, seeing no one about, he struck down the Egyptian and hid him in the sand.¹³ When he went out the next day, he found two Hebrews fighting; so he said to the offender, "Why do you strike your fellow?"¹⁴ He retorted, "Who made you chief and ruler over us? Do you mean to kill me as you killed

לה בת-פרעה היליכי את-הילד הוה
והינקחו לי ואני אתן את-שכבה ותקח
האשה הילד ותניקהו:¹⁰ ויגדל הילד
ותבאחו לבת-פרעה ויהי-לה לבן ותקרא
שמו משה ותאמור כי מון-הרים
משיתהו:

¹¹ ויהי | בימים הרים ויגדל משה ויצא
אל-אחיו וירא בסבלתם וירא איש מצרי
מפה איש-ערבי מאחיו:¹² ויפן פה וכד
ווירא כי אין איש וירא את-המצרים ויטמן-הו
בחול:¹³ ויצא ביום השני והנה שני
אנשים עברים נצאים ויאמר לך-שע למה
תבה רעך:¹⁴ ויאמר מי שמאך לאיש שר
ושפט עליינו הלהרגנו אתה אמר באשר

9. "nurse it for me, and I will pay your wages." Wet-nurse agreements like this one are attested in ancient Near Eastern documents, corroborating that a wet nurse might act as guardian for the infant during the first few years of its life. Here, the baby's mother is to be paid for nursing her own child. [In the ancient Near East, adoptive mothers often relied on wet nurses, as did birth mothers—particularly among the urban elite, and not only due to lack of milk or loss of the birth mother. See the mention of Rebekah's wet nurse in Genesis 24:59 and 35:8 and comments there. Similarly, one Mesopotamian document mentions that a woman had contracted to give her daughter to a team of two other women for wet-nursing; those nurses "received food and clothing for three years" plus a monetary payment (Mayer Gruber, "Breast-Feeding Practices . . .," 1989, pp. 74–82). —Ed.]

10. When the child grew up. Extant documents suggest that in Egypt, as elsewhere in the ancient Near East, mothers usually weaned their children at around the age of three. [As long ago as the 18th century B.C.E., Mesopotamian contracts and other documents—including even lawsuits—mention a three-year period for wet-nursing (see previous note). —Ed.]

She named him Moses. The narrator gives a Hebrew etiology for Moses' name, but the name is actually Egyptian, meaning "gave birth."

MOSES' FLIGHT TO MIDIAN (2:11–15)

The young Moses is raised as a prince in the Egyptian court, yet upon his maturity he immediately identifies with his kin, an enslaved people. His first act is murder in defense of his kinsman, which prompts him to flee from Egypt; but after escaping, he almost immediately rescues seven Midianite shepherdesses. The narrative characterizes Moses here as heroic; although later known to be humble and modest, he shows leadership qualities from the start.

11. kinsfolk. Heb. achim, literally "brothers." Although raised in Pharaoh's palace, Moses considers the Israelite his "brother" and thus acts to defend him.

the Egyptian?" Moses was frightened, and thought: Then the matter is known! ¹⁵When Pharaoh learned of the matter, he sought to kill Moses; but Moses fled from Pharaoh. He arrived in the land of Midian, and sat down beside a well.

¹⁶Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters. They came to draw water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock; ¹⁷but shepherds came and drove them off. Moses rose to their defense, and he watered their flock. ¹⁸When they returned to their father Reuel, he said, "How is it that you have come back so soon today?" ¹⁹They answered, "An Egyptian was our champion! He rescued us from the shepherds; he even drew water for us and watered the flock." ²⁰He said to his daughters, "Where is he then? Why did you leave this champion? Ask him in to break bread."

²¹Moses consented to stay in [Reuel's] household, and he gave Moses his daughter Zipporah as wife. ²²She bore a son whom he named Gershom, for he said, "I have been a stranger in a foreign land."

²³A long time after that, the king of Egypt died. The Israelites were groaning under the bondage.

15. Midian. A region south of the Negev, which is beyond Egyptian jurisdiction.

sat down beside a well. That is, a central gathering place.

MOSES' RESCUE OF REUEL'S DAUGHTERS AND MARRIAGE TO ZIPPORAH (2:16-22)

Meeting a future wife at a well is a narrative motif that recurs in betrothal type scenes in the Bible (see Genesis 24:10-27; 29:2-14). One difference about this scene is that here the man defends the women and waters their flocks, thus giving prominence to the hero, Moses.

16. seven daughters. [With the five women mentioned earlier, this makes twelve women in Exodus 1-2, a parallel to the twelve tribes. —Ed.]

הרגת את-המצרים וירא משה ויאמר אכן
נודע הדבר:¹⁵ וישמע פרעה את-הדבר
הזה ויבקש להרג את-משה ויבחר משה
מןפנֵי פרעה וישב בארץ-מדין וישב
על-הבאר:

16 וְלֹכֶה מִדְיָן שְׁבֻעַ בְּנוֹת וְתִבְאָנָה
וְתִדְלֵנָה וְתִמְלָא נָגָה אֶת־חֶרְחָטִים לְהַשְׁקָות
עָזָן אֲבִיהָן: 17 וַיָּבֹאוּ הָרָעִים וַיָּגְרוּ שָׂוָם
וַיַּקְרְבּוּ מֹשֶׁה וַיּוּשְׁעָנָה וַיַּשְׁקֵן אֶת־דָצָאן:
18 וְתִבְאָנָה אַלְרָעוֹאָל אֲבִיהָן וַיֹּאמֶר
מִדְעוּ מִהְרָתַן בָּא הַיּוֹם: 19 וַתֹּאמֶרֶת אִישׁ
מִצְרַי הָצִילָנוּ מִיד הָרָעִים וְגַם־דָלָה דָלָה
לָנוּ וַיַּשְׁקֵן אֶת־דָצָאן: 20 וַיֹּאמֶר אַל־בְּנָתָיו
וְאַיּוֹ לְמֹה זֶה עֲזֹבְתָּן אֶת־הָאֱלֹהִים קְרָאָן לוֹ
וַיַּאֲכַל לְחֵם: 21 וַיַּוְאֶל מֹשֶׁה לְשִׁבְתָּן אֶת־
הָאֱלֹהִים וַיִּתְعַנֵּן אֶת־צִפְרָה בְּתוֹן לְמֹשֶׁה:
22 וַתַּלְדֵד בֵן וַיִּקְרָא אֶת־שְׁמוֹ גַּרְשָׂם כִּי
אמֶר גָּרְשִׂי בָּאָרֶץ נְכִירִיה: פ

וַיְהִי בַּיָּמִים הָרְבִים הָהֶם וַיָּמָת מֶלֶךְ
מָצֻרים וַיָּנָחוּ בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִן־הַעֲבֹדָה

They . . . filled the troughs to water their father's flock. Although the seven sisters are not called "shepherds" (as was Rachel in Genesis 29:9), they are clearly acting in that capacity. In the ancient Near East, both females and males took care of the flocks.

21. Zipporah. Her name means "bird." We are not told why she was selected from the seven daughters to marry Moses.

Moses' Mission Commences (2:23–6:1)

The death of the pharaoh who had presumably sought to bring Moses to justice now paves the way for Moses' return to Egypt—but it does not end the oppression of the Israelites. Moses and cried out; and their cry for help from the bondage rose up to God.²⁴ God heard their moaning, and God remembered the covenant with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob.²⁵ God looked upon the Israelites, and God took notice of them.

3 Now Moses, tending the flock of his father-in-law Jethro, the priest of Midian, drove the flock into the wilderness, and came to Horeb, the mountain of God.² An angel of יהוה appeared to him in a blazing fire out of a bush. He gazed, and there was a bush all aflame, yet the bush was not consumed.³ Moses said, “I must turn aside to look at this marvelous sight; why doesn’t the bush burn up?”⁴ When saw that he had turned aside to look, God called to him out of the bush: “Moses! Moses!” He answered, “Here I am.”⁵ And [God] said, “Do not come closer! Remove your sandals from your feet, for the place on which you stand is holy ground!”⁶ and continued, “I am the God of your father’s [house]—the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.” And Moses hid his face, for he was afraid to look at God.

⁷ And יהוה continued, “I have marked well the plight of My people in Egypt and have heeded their outcry because of their taskmasters; yes, I am mindful of their sufferings.⁸ I have come down to reluctantly accepts that he has been chosen by God to deliver them from bondage.

SETTING THE STAGE: GOD TAKES NOTE OF ISRAEL’S SUFFERING (2:23–25)

The covenant with the ancestors includes the promise of land; however, as predicted in Genesis 15:13–16, this promise would not be fulfilled until the Israelites endured enslavement and affliction. This report of God’s resolve to respond to the Israelites’ suffering signals the first step in their deliverance.

וַיֹּאמֶר וַתָּעַל שׂוֹעַתְּמָם אֱלֹהִים מִן־
הָעֵדָה: ²⁴ וַיִּשְׁמַע אֱלֹהִים אֶת־נְאָקָתָם
וַיַּכְרֵב אֱלֹהִים אֶת־בְּרִיתֵנוּ אֶת־אֶבְרָהָם
אֶת־יַצְחָק וְאֶת־יַעֲקֹב: ²⁵ וַיַּרְא אֱלֹהִים
אֶת־בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּדַּע אֱלֹהִים: ס

ג וְמַשְׁהָ הִיָּה רֹעֶה אֶת־צָאן יְתֻרוֹ חַתְנוֹ
בְּהַן מִדְּין וַיַּגְןֵג אֶת־הַצָּאן אַחֲרֵי הַמְּדָבֵר וַיַּבְאֵלְהָרָה אֱלֹהִים חַרְבָּה: ² וּוֹרָא
מֶלֶךְ יְהוָה אֱלֹיו בְּלֶבֶת־אַשׁ מִתּוֹךְ הַסְּנָה
וַיַּרְא וְהַנֶּה הַסְּנָה בָּעָר בְּאַשׁ וְהַסְּנָה אִינְנוּ
אֶפְלָה: ³ וַיֹּאמֶר מַשְׁה אֱסְרָה־גָּזָא וְאֶרְאָה
אֶת־הַמִּרְאָה הַגָּדוֹל הַזֶּה מִדּוּעַ לְאַיְבָּעָר
הַסְּנָה: ⁴ וַיַּרְא יְהוָה בַּיּוֹם לְרֹאֹות וַיָּקֹרֵא
אֱלֹיו אֱלֹהִים מִתּוֹךְ הַסְּנָה וַיֹּאמֶר מַשְׁה
מַשְׁה וַיֹּאמֶר הַנְּנִיא: ⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־תִּקְרֵב
הַלֵּם שְׁלֹנְגָּעֵל מִעַל רְגַלְיךָ קַיְמַת הַמְּקוֹם
אֲשֶׁר אַתָּה עֹמֵד עַלְיוֹן אֶדְמָת־קָדְשׁ הוּא:
⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר אָנֹכִי אֱלֹהִי אָבִיךָ אֱלֹהִי אֶבְרָהָם
אֱלֹהִי יַצְחָק וְאֱלֹהִי יַעֲקֹב וְיִסְתַּחַר מַשְׁה
פָּנָיו בַּיּוֹם מִהְבִּיט אֱלֹהִים:

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה רָאָה רְאִיתִי אֶת־עַנְיִן עַמִּי
אֲשֶׁר בְּמִצְרָיִם וְאֶת־עַזְקָתָם שְׁמַעְתִּי מִפָּנָי
נְגַשְּׁיו בַּיּוֹם יָרַעַת אֶת־מִכְאָבָיו: ⁸ וְאֶרְדָּ

THE BURNING BUSH: GOD COMMISSIONS MOSES (3:1–10)

Moses is first introduced to God through a modest vision of a burning bush—an object just odd enough to catch his attention. At first only curious about this unnatural phenomenon, he only gradually becomes aware that he stands before the divine presence.

1. his father-in-law Jethro. He was called Reuel in 2:18.

Horeb. Another name for Sinai (see at 18:5).

rescue them from the Egyptians and to bring them out of that land to a good and spacious land, a land flowing with milk and honey, the region of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites. ⁹Now the cry of the Israelites has reached Me; moreover, I have seen how the Egyptians oppress them. ¹⁰Come, therefore, I will send you to Pharaoh, and you shall free My people, the Israelites, from Egypt."

¹¹But Moses said to God, "Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh and free the Israelites from Egypt?" ¹²And [God] said, "I will be with you; that shall be your sign that it was I who sent you. And when you have freed the people from Egypt, you shall worship God at this mountain."

¹³Moses said to God, "When I come to the Israelites and say to them, 'The God of your ancestors has sent me to you,' and they ask me, 'What is [God's] name?' what shall I say to them?" ¹⁴And God said to Moses, "Ehyeh-Asher-Ehyeh," contin-

להציאלו | מידי מצרים ולחעלתו מניה הארץ
ההוא אל-ארץ טובה ורחה אל-ארץ
ובית חלב ודבש אל-מקום הפנעני והחתי
והאמורי והפרזי והחמי והיבוסי: ⁹ ועתה
הנה עתקת בניישראל באה אליו גם-ראיתי את-הلهן אשר מצרים לחצים
אתם: ¹⁰ ועתה לך ואשלחו אל-פרעה
והוציא את-עמי בניישראל ממצריים:

¹¹ ויאמר משה אל-האללים כי אני כי
אלך אל-פרעה וכי אוציא את-בני ישראל
ממצרים: ¹² ויאמר ביראהיה עמך וזה לך
האות כי אני שלחתיך בהוציאך את-העם ממצרים תעבדו את-האללים על

ההר הזה:

¹³ ויאמר משה אל-האללים הנה אני
בא אל-בני ישראל ואמרת ליהם אל-ה
אבותיכם שלחני אליכם ואמרודלי מה-שם מה אמר אליהם: ¹⁴ ויאמר אליהם
אל-משה אהיה אשר אהיה ויאמר בָּה

MOSES RESISTS ACCEPTING GOD'S MISSION (3:11–4:17)

Like some later biblical prophets, Moses is reluctant to accept his prophetic commission, partially out of modesty and partially out of fear of how he will be received and whether he will be successful. Moses raises four objections (3:11, 13; 4:1, 10), each of which God addresses.

11. "Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh...?"

When Moses first objects to his prophetic calling, he expresses humility and lack of self-confidence. In response, God assures Moses that God will be with him (v. 12).

13. "what shall I say to them?"

Moses' second objection concerns what proof to offer to the Israelites that God really sent him. The proof will be the knowledge of God's name (vv. 14–15), which is connected to the God of the ancestors, a deity already known to the Israelites. In the course of reassuring Moses, God foreshadows the events that will unfold: the people will be freed; they will return to the place where Moses stands now; Pharaoh will only let the Israelites go after God has smitten Egypt; and the Israelites will not leave Egypt empty-handed (vv. 16–22).

14. "Ehyeh-Asher-Ehyeh." God seems to proclaim this enigmatic phrase as a name, although it appears nowhere else in the Bible. Its first and third words derive from the Hebrew root h-y-h ("to be"). Thus, this divine name suggests pure existence, being—a presence that cannot be seen or touched but which is most certainly there. Left in transliteration here, the expression sometimes has been translated as "I Am That/Who I Am" or "I Will Be What I Will Be." The present verse may be explaining God's permanent name (see next comment) in terms of this one, as an instructive "folk" uing, “Thus shall you say to the Israelites, ‘Ehyeh sent me to you.’”¹⁵ And God said further to Moses, “Thus shall you speak to the Israelites: יהוה, the God of your ancestors—the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob—has sent me to you:

This shall be My name forever,
This My appellation for all eternity.

¹⁶“Go and assemble the elders of Israel and say to them: יהוה, the God of your ancestors—the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—has appeared to me and said, ‘I have taken note of you and of what is being done to you in Egypt,’¹⁷ and I have declared: I will take you out of the misery of Egypt to the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, to a land flowing with milk and honey.’¹⁸ They will listen to you; then you shall go with the elders of Israel to the king of Egypt and you shall say to him, ‘יהוה, the God of the Hebrews, became manifest to us. Now therefore, let us go a distance of three days into the wilderness to sacrifice to our God.’¹⁹ Yet I know that the king of Egypt will let you go only because of a greater might.²⁰ So I will stretch out My hand and smite Egypt with various wonders which I will work upon them; after that he shall let you go.²¹ And I will dispose the Egyptians favorably toward this people, so that when you

תאמָר לְבָנַי יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲהֵה שְׁלֹחַנִי אֲלֵיכֶם :
¹⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר עוֹד אֱלֹהִים אֶל-מֹשֶׁה בַּהֲ- תָאמָר אֶל-פָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל יְהוָה אֱלֹהִ
אֱבֹתֵיכֶם אֱלֹהִי אֶבְרָהָם אֱלֹהִי יַעֲקֹב וְאֱלֹהִי יַעֲקֹב שְׁלֹחַנִי אֲלֵיכֶם
וְהַשְׁמֵן לְעַלְמָם
וְיָהּ זָכְרֵי לְדָר דָר :

¹⁶ לֹךְ וְאַסְפֵת אֶת-זָקְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְאִמְרָתָ
אֱלֹהֶם יְהוָה אֱלֹהִי אֱבֹתֵיכֶם נְרָא אֶל-אֱלֹהִי אֶבְרָהָם יַעֲקֹב וַיַּעֲקֹב לֵאמֹר פָּקֹד
פָּקֹד תִּי אֶתְכֶם וְאֶת-הַעֲשֹׂוי לְכֶם בְּמִצְרָיִם :
¹⁷ וְאָמַר אֱלֹהָה אֶתְכֶם מַעֲנֵי מִצְרָיִם אֶל-אָרֶץ הַכְּנָעָנִי וְהַחֲתִי וְהַאֲמֹרִי וְהַפְּרָזִי
וְהַחֲנִי וְהַבּוֹסִי אֶל-אָרֶץ זֹבֵת חַלְבָן וְרוּבְשָׁן :

¹⁸ וְשָׁמַעוּ לְקָלָךְ וּבָאתְ אַתָּה וְזֹכְרֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל
אֶל-מֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם וְאִמְرָתָם אֶלְיוֹן יְהוָה
אֱלֹהֵי הָעֲבָרִים נְקֻרָה עַלְינוּ וְעַפְתָה גַּלְכָה-
גַּא דָרֶךְ שֶׁלַשְׁת יְמִינֵט בְּמִדְבָּר וּנוֹבֵחָה
לִיהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ :¹⁹ וְאַנְיִינְךָ בַּיּוֹתֵר כִּי לְאִיתָנָן
אֶתְכֶם מֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם לְהַלְךְ וְלֹא בַּיּוֹתֵר חִזְקָה :

²⁰ וְשַׁלְחָתִי אֶת-יִצְחָק וְהַבִּיטִי אֶת-מִצְרָיִם
בְּכָל גַּפְלָאָתִי אֲשֶׁר עֲשָׂה בְּקָרְבָוּ וְאַחֲרָיו-
כֹּן יִשְׁלַח אֶתְכֶם :²¹ וְנַתְתִּי אֶת-חַנּוּן הָעֵמֶד הַזֶּה בְּעֵינֵי מִצְרָיִם וְזֹהֵה כִּי תִלְבִּין לֹא

etymology—in much the same way that the Bible often portrays mothers as explaining via wordplay the name that she has given her child.

15. “יהוה, the God of your ancestors.” God here proposes to be identified by an additional name, the more familiar יהוה (Y-H-V-H, yud-hei-vav-hei). Known in English as the tetragrammaton (from the Greek for “the four consonants”), Jews came to consider the pronunciation of this personal divine name so sacred that it was avoided and has been lost over time. In Jewish tradition, the convention developed in speech to substitute with Adonai (the Hebrew word meaning “my Lord”) or Hashem (“the name”), an even more indirect substitution. In 1783, Moses Mendelssohn proposed the translation “the Eternal,” which has since become popular in certain Bible translations and religious circles. Meanwhile, modern academic scholars have widely accepted a reconstruction as “Yahweh,” although there is only circumstantial evidence in its favor; many Jews avoid it. Whereas the word “Lord” invokes a masculine image, the divine name revealed in this verse is free of gendered associations (see at Genesis 2:4).

21. “I will dispose the Egyptians favorably toward this people.” That is, the Egyptians will willingly provide objects of value.

EXODUS 3:22–4:5

SH'MOT

go, you will not go away empty-handed.²² Each woman shall borrow from her neighbor and the lodger in her house objects of silver and gold, and clothing, and you shall put these on your sons and daughters, thus stripping the Egyptians.”

4 But Moses spoke up and said, “What if they do not believe me and do not listen to me, but say: ‘Yahweh did not appear to you?’”² said to him, “What is that in your hand?” And he replied, “A rod.”³ [God] said, “Cast it on the ground.” He cast it on the ground and it became a snake; and Moses recoiled from it. ⁴ Then said to Moses, “Put out your hand and grasp it by the tail”—he put out his hand and seized it, and it became a rod in his hand—⁵ “that they may believe that, Yahweh, the God of their ancestors, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, did appear to you.”

תָלְכִו רַיקְם: ²² וְשָׁאַלְהָ אֲשֶׁר מִשְׁבְּנֹתָה יִמְגַּרְתָ בֵיתָה בְלִיכְסָף וּכְלִי זָהָב וּשְׁמַלְתָ וּשְׁמַפְתָ עַל-בְנֵיכְם וּלְבָנֵתיכְם וּנְצַלְתָם אֶת-מְצֻרִים:

ד וַיַעַן מֹשֶׁה וַיֹאמֶר וְהִנֵּן לְאִيָמִינוּ לֵי וְלֹא יִשְׁמַעוּ בְקָלִי כִּי יֹאמְרוּ לְאִינְרָא אֱלֹיכְ יְהוָה: ² וַיֹאמֶר אֱלֹיכְ יְהוָה מוֹה מְהָזָה בְּיַדְךָ וַיֹאמֶר מְטָה: ³ וַיֹאמֶר הַשְׁלִיכָה אֶרְצָה וַיַּהֲיוּ לְנַחַשׁ וַיַּנְסַת מֹשֶׁה מְפִנֵיו: ⁴ וַיֹאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה שְׁלֹחַ יְדֶךָ וְאַחֲרֵי בָזְבָזָנוּ וַיְשַׁלַּח יְדָוֹ וַיִּחְזֹק בָו וַיַּהֲיוּ לְמְטָה בְכָפֹו: ⁵ לְמַעַן יִאָמִינוּ כִּי-גָרָא אֱלֹיכְ יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי אַבְתָם אֱלֹהֵי אֶבְרָהָם אֱלֹהֵי יִצְחָק וְאֱלֹהֵי יַעֲקֹב:

22. “Each woman.” In these instructions, the women are the ones involved in the transfer of goods; but in 12:35–36, where the event takes place, women are not specifically mentioned. (Compare also 11:2, 3.)

“borrow.” See at 11:2.

“neighbor... lodger.” The Hebrew nouns are feminine, which may imply that Egyptian and Israelite women were on good terms, despite the subjugation of the Israelites. The wording of this verse suggests that both peoples lived in close proximity, not in segregated areas as depicted in the Joseph story (Genesis 46:34). Confirmation of this integration can be found later, in the need for the Israelites to mark their doorposts with blood so that their first-born sons will not be killed with those of the Egyptians (12:13; see also at 11:2).

“lodger in her house.” This phrase is puzzling. Did Israelites have Egyptian servants in their homes? Some commentators suggest that the Israelites had Egyptian slave-women like Hagar (Genesis 16:1) who served as legally recognized concubines and could bear their master legitimate children.

“silver and gold, and clothing.” That is, objects of value, in fulfillment of God’s promise to Abraham that after four hundred years of servitude in a foreign land, God would bring judgment upon the nation they are serving and Israel “shall go out with many possessions” (Genesis 15:13–14).

“on your sons and daughters.” Evidence from the ancient Near East suggests that men as well as women wore jewelry. Later, women and men will contribute to the Tabernacle their gold and silver jewelry and expensive textiles (35:21–29), presumably goods obtained from the Egyptians.

“thus stripping the Egyptians.” Many commentators have been troubled by the implication that the Israelites would plunder the Egyptians. Commentators justify the taking of these valuable objects either as just payment for the years of slave labor, or as voluntary gifts from Egyptians who were eager to get rid of the Israelites.

4:1. “What if they do not believe me?” Moses’ third objection expresses his concern that the Israelites will not believe him. At this point, Moses receives a set of more concrete signs to prove God’s power: the rod that becomes a snake, the leprous hand, and the water that turns to blood.

⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה לֹא עוֹד הַבָּא־נָא יִדְךָ בְּחִיקָּךְ
וַיִּבְאֶרְךָ בְּחִיקָּךְ וַיֹּצְאָה וַיִּגְנְּבָה יְהוָה מֵצְרָעָה
בְּשָׁלָג: ⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר הַשְׁבָּע יִדְךָ אֶל־חִיקָּךְ וַיִּשְׁבַּ
יְהוָה אֶל־חִיקָּךְ וַיֹּצְאָה מִחִיקָּךְ וַיִּגְנְּבָה
בְּבָשָׂרוֹ: ⁸ וְהִיא אִם־לֹא יַאֲמִינוּ לְךָ וְלֹא
יִשְׁמְעוּ לְכָל הָאָתָּה הַרְאָתָּן וְהַאֲמִינוּ גַּם
הָאָתָּה הַאָخְרֹן: ⁹ וְהִיא אִם־לֹא יַאֲמִינוּ גַּם
לְשִׁנֵּי הָאָתּוֹת הָאֱלֹהָה וְלֹא יִשְׁמְעוּ לְכָל
וּלְקָחַת מִמֵּימִינֵי דִּיאָר וּשְׁפָכַת הַיְבָשָׂה וְהַיּוֹ
הַמְּלִט אֲשֶׁר תַּקְחַ מִזְרָחָיו וְהַיּוֹ לְקָם
בִּיבְשָׁת:

¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל־יְהוָה בַּי אָדוֹן לֹא אִישְׁ
דָּבָרִים אָנֹכִי גַּם מִתְמֻולָּה גַּם מִשְׁלָשָׁם גַּם
מִאוֹ דָּבָרָךְ אֶל־עַבְדָּךְ כִּי בְּדִיפָּה וּכְבָדָ
לְשׁוֹן אָנֹכִי: ¹¹ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־יְהוָה מַיִּשְׁבָּ
פֶּה לְאָדָם אָוְ מִירִישָׁוּם אֶלְםָ אָוְ חָרְשָׁ אָוְ
פְּקָחָ אָוְ עֹור הַלָּא אָנֹכִי יְהוָה: ¹² וְעַתָּה לֹא
וְאָנֹכִי אֲהִיה עַמִּפְנֵיךְ וְהַוּרִיתִיךְ אֲשֶׁר
תְּדַבֵּר: ¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר בַּי אָדוֹן שְׁלֹחֵנָא בִּידָךְ
תְּשַׁלֵּחַ: ¹⁴ וַיֹּחַרְאָפֵס יְהוָה בְּמֹשֶׁה וַיֹּאמֶר
הַלָּא אָהָרָן אֲחִיךָ הַלֹּוי יַדְעַתִּי קִידְבָּרָ
יַדְבֵּר הוּא וְגַם הַגָּהָהוּא יֵצֵא לְקָרְאָתְךָ
וּרְאָךְ וּשְׁמַח בְּלָבָבוֹ: ¹⁵ וְדִבְרָתִ אֶלְיוֹ וּשְׁמַתָּ
אֲתִיהָדְבָרִים בְּפִיו וְאָנֹכִי אֲהִיה עַמִּפְנֵיכֶל
וּעַמִּפְנֵיכֶוּ וְהַוּרִיתִיכֶוּ אֲתָכֶם אֶת אֲשֶׁר
תַּعֲשֶׂו: ¹⁶ וְדִבְרָהָהוּא לְךָ אֶל־הָעָם וְהִיא
הַוָּא יְהִי־לְךָ לִפְנֵי וְאַתָּה תְּהִיא־לְךָ
לְאֱלֹהִים: ¹⁷ וְאֲתִיהָדְמַתָּה הַזָּה תַּקְחַ בִּידְךָ
אֲשֶׁר תַּעֲשֶׂה־בָּו אֲתִיהָאָתָּה:

פ

10. “I have never been good with words.” Moses’ fourth objection reflects his understanding that a prophet’s success depends on his ability to speak, since he must represent God in a convincing manner. Again, God assures Moses about the source of prophetic power, though God also becomes annoyed with Moses’ excuses and appoints Aaron as the official spokesperson (4:11–17).

¹⁸Moses went back to his father-in-law Jether and said to him, “Let me go back to my kinsfolk in Egypt and see how they are faring.” And Jethro said to Moses, “Go in peace.”

¹⁹יְהוָה said to Moses in Midian, “Go back to Egypt, for all the authorities who sought to kill you are dead.” ²⁰So Moses took his wife and sons, mounted them on an ass, and went back to the land of Egypt; and Moses took the rod of God with him.

²¹And said to Moses, “When you return to Egypt, see that you perform before Pharaoh all the marvels that I have put within your power. I, however, will stiffen his heart so that he will not let the people go.” ²²Then you shall say to Pharaoh, ‘Thus says יְהוָה: Israel is My first-born son.’ ²³I have said to you, “Let My son go, that he may worship Me,” yet you refuse to let him go. Now I will slay your first-born son.”

²⁴At a night encampment on the way, יהוה encountered him and sought to kill him. ²⁵So Zipporah took a flint and cut off her son’s foreskin,

¹⁸וַיֵּלֶךְ מֹשֶׁה וַיִּשְׁבֶּן | אֶל-יִתְּר חֹתֵן וַיֹּאמֶר
לֹא אֶלְכָה נָא וְאַשׁוּבָה אֶל-אֲחֵי אֲשֶׁר-
בָּמִצְרָיִם וְאֶרְאֶה הַעֲדָם חַיִים וַיֹּאמֶר יִתְּרוּ
לְמֹשֶׁה לְךָ לְשָׁלוֹם:

¹⁹וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה בְּמִדְין לְךָ שָׁבֵט
מִצְרָיִם כִּי-מֵתָו פֶּלֶת-הָאָנָשִׁים הַמִּבְקָשִׁים
אֶת-נִפְשָׁר: ²⁰וַיִּקְחֶנְשֶׁה אֶת-אַשְׁתָּוֹתָו
וְאֶת-בָּנָיו וַיַּרְכְּבֶת עַל-הַחֲמָר וַיִּשְׁבֶּן אֶרְצָה
מִצְרָיִם וַיִּקְחֶנְשֶׁה מֹשֶׁה אֶת-מִטְהָה הַאֱלֹהִים
בִּיקָּר:

²¹וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה בְּלִכְתָּךְ לְשׁוֹבֵט
מִצְרָיִם רָאָה בְּלִהְמֹפְתִּים אֲשֶׁר-שְׁמָתֵי
בִּיקָּר וַיַּעֲשֵׂיתָם לִפְנֵי פָּרָעָה וְאַנְּיָ אֶחֱזֹק אֶת-לְבּוֹ וְלֹא יִשְׁלַׁח אֶת-הָעָם: ²²וְאָמַרְתָּ אֶל-פָּרָעָה בָּהּ אָמַר יְהוָה בָּנַי בְּכָרֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל:
²³וְאָמַר אֶלְיךָ שְׁלַׁח אֶת-בָּנֵי וַיַּעֲבֹרֵנִי
וַתִּמְאֵן לְשִׁלְחוֹ הַנְּגָה אֶנְכִּי הַרְג אֶת-בָּנֵךְ
בְּכָרָךְ:

²⁴וַיְהִי בְּהַרְךָ בְּמָלֵן וַיַּפְגַּשְׁהוּ יְהוָה וַיִּבְקַשׁ
הַמִּיתָּו: ²⁵וַתִּקְחֶנְשֶׁה צְפָרָה צָר וַתִּכְרֹת אֶת-

MOSES ACCEPTS GOD’S MISSION (4:18–23)

Moses asks for his father-in-law’s permission to return to Egypt; yet he does not reveal the immense, divinely appointed task that awaits him.

18. Jether. An alternate form of the name Jethro (3:1).

22–23. If Pharaoh refuses to free God’s first-born, Israel, then Pharaoh’s first-born will suffer the consequences. Moses is never recorded as repeating these words to Pharaoh. Yet they set the tone for the long confrontation that will shortly ensue.

INTERLUDE: ZIPPORAH RESCUES THE “BRIDEGROOM OF BLOOD” (4:24–26)

Moses’ mission begins with an enigmatic episode. Perhaps an old, no-longer-understood story was placed here because of the connection between the slaying of the first-born mentioned in the preceding verse and the blood of circumcision of Zipporah’s son. Later blood will mark the Israelite homes, where the first-born will be spared (12:21–23). In both cases, blood is an apotropaic—warding off death.

24. sought to kill him. It is unclear who the intended victim is: Moses—or his and Zipporah’s son, Gershom (2:22). Aside from God, the only name mentioned in this episode is Zipporah’s.

25. So Zipporah took a flint and cut off her son’s foreskin. This is the only place in the Bible that explicitly mentions a woman’s performing the rite of circumcision. | Why was Gershom not circumcised before now? Commentators surmise that Zipporah’s father might have prevented Gershom’s and touched his legs with it, saying, “You are truly a bridegroom of blood to me!”²⁶ And when [God] let him alone, she added, “A bridegroom of blood because of the circumcision.”

²⁷ said to Aaron, “Go to meet Moses in the wilderness.” He went and met him at the mountain of God, and he kissed him.²⁸ Moses told Aaron about all the things that יהוה had committed to him and all the signs about which he had been instructed.²⁹ Then Moses and Aaron went and assembled all the elders of the Israelites.³⁰ Aaron repeated all the words that יהוה had spoken to Moses, and he performed the signs in the sight of those assembled,³¹ and the assembly was convinced. When they heard that יהוה had taken note of the Israelites and that [God] had seen their plight, they bowed low in homage.

5 Afterward Moses and Aaron went and said to Pharaoh, “Thus says יהוה, the God of Israel: Let My people go that they may celebrate a festival for circumcision, or Moses might have postponed it in anticipation of their difficult journey back to Egypt.

26. “bridegroom of blood.” This baffling phrase may reflect an ancient custom (long since abandoned) of circumcision at the time of marriage.

MOSES AND AARON CONVINCE THE ISRAELITES OF GOD’S PLAN (4:27–31)

As Aaron becomes Moses’ assistant and spokesman, the two brothers must convince the Israelites of God’s intentions before they can convince Pharaoh.

MOSES AND AARON FAIL TO CONVINCE PHARAOH: OPPRESSION WORSENS (5:1–6:1)

The story returns to the reality of the Israelite suffering, which only gets worse after Moses and Aaron’s initial meeting with Pharaoh. Pharaoh’s pronouncement that the Israelite men must hence-

עֲרָלֶת בְּנָה וַתַּגְעַל לִרְגֵלָיו וְתֹאמֶר פִּי חֲתָן־
דָּמִים אַתָּה לִי: ²⁶ וַיַּרְא מִמְּנוּ אֲזִ אַמְרָה
חֲתָן דָּמִים לְמוֹלַת: ^ב

²⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לֵךְ לִקְרָאת
מֹשֶׁה הַמִּדְבָּרָה וַיָּלֹךְ וַיַּפְגַּשׁ הָנָדְבָּר
הָאֱלֹהִים וַיַּשְׁקַלְוּ: ²⁸ וַיַּגְדֵּל מֹשֶׁה לְאָהָרֹן
אֶת בְּלֹדְבָּרִי יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר שָׁלַחְוּ וְאֶת בְּלֹדְ
הָאַתָּת אֲשֶׁר צָוָה: ²⁹ וַיַּלְכֵל מֹשֶׁה וְאָהָרֹן
וַיַּאֲסַפֵּוּ אֶת-בְּלֹדְזָקְנִי בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: ³⁰ וַיַּדְבֵּר
אָהָרֹן אֶת בְּלֹדְבָּרִים אֲשֶׁר-דִּבֶּר יְהוָה
אֶל-מֹשֶׁה וַיַּעֲשֵׂה הָאַתָּת לְעֵינֵי הַעַם:
³¹ וַיַּאֲמַן הַעַם וַיַּשְׁמַע כִּירְפָּקֵד יְהוָה
אֶת-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְכִי רָאֵה אֶת-עֲנִים וַיַּקְרֹב
וַיִּשְׁתַּחוּ:

ה וְאַחֲרֵבָאוּ מֹשֶׁה וְאָהָרֹן וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֱלֹהִים
פְּרֻעָה כֹּה-אָמַר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִי יִשְׂרָאֵל שְׁלֹחֵ

forth gather their own straw and still meet their quotas of bricks is reminiscent of the earlier pharaoh’s decrees regarding “birth control” (1:16, 22); but here the pronouncement is also calculated to undermine the Israelites’ acceptance of Moses and Aaron. The scene is now set, physically and psychologically, for a contest between the might of Pharaoh and the might of God.

1–2. Moses announces to Pharaoh the name of the God of Israel, whom Moses represents, but Pharaoh claims not to know this deity and therefore has no intention of heeding God’s words. This is the main issue in the account that will follow of the signs and wonders: how and when will Pharaoh come to know God and understand that God’s power trumps all other divine powers?

i. “Let My people go that they may celebrate a festival for Me.” In God’s name, Moses will repeatedly request to bring the people to the wilderness for a worship festival; he does not go so far as to ask to leave Egypt permanently.

Me in the wilderness.”² But Pharaoh said, “Who is that I should heed him and let Israel go? I do not know יהוה, nor will I let Israel go.”³ They answered, “The God of the Hebrews has become manifest to us. Let us go, we pray, a distance of three days into the wilderness to sacrifice to our God, יהוה, lest [God] strike us with pestilence or sword.”⁴ But the king of Egypt said to them, “Moses and Aaron, why do you distract the people from their tasks? Get to your labors!”⁵ And Pharaoh continued, “The people of the land are already so numerous, and you would have them cease from their labors!”

⁶ That same day Pharaoh charged the taskmasters and overseers of the people, saying,⁷ “You shall no longer provide the people with straw for making bricks as heretofore; let them go and gather straw for themselves.⁸ But impose upon them the same quota of bricks as they have been making heretofore; do not reduce it, for they are shirkers; that is why they cry, ‘Let us go and sacrifice to our God!’⁹ Let heavier work be laid upon the laborers; let them keep at it and not pay attention to deceitful promises.”

¹⁰ So the taskmasters and overseers of the people went out and said to the people, “Thus says Pharaoh: I will not give you any straw.¹¹ You must go

את-עָמֵד וְיַחֲגֹג לִי בַמְּדֻבָּר :² וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה מַיְ יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר אָשָׁמָע בְּקָלָו לְשַׁלֵּחַ אֶת-יִשְׂרָאֵל לֹא יַדְעַתִּי אֶת-יְהוָה וְגַם אֶת-יִשְׂרָאֵל לֹא אַשְׁלַח :³ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִי הָעָבָרִים נִקְרָא עַלְמָנוּ גָּלְכָה נָא דָרְךָ שֶׁלְשָׁת יָמִים בַּמְּדֻבָּר וְנַזְבֵּחַ לְיְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ פְּנֵי-פְּגַעַנוּ בְּקָרְבָּן אוֹ בְּחַרְבָּן :⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהֵינוּ מֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם לְמַה מֵשָׁה וְאֶחָרֶن תִּפְרֹיעַ אֶת-הָעָם מִמְּעָשָׂיו לְכָוֵן לְסִבְלָתֵיכֶם :⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה הַזְּרָבִים עַתָּה עִם הָאָרֶץ וְהַשְּׁבָתֶם אֶתְכֶם מִסְבְּלָתֶם :

וַיַּצְאַו פְּרֻעָה בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא אֶת-הַנֶּגֶשִׁים בְּעַם וְאֶת-שְׂטָרוֹן לְאמֹר :⁶ לֹא תִּאֲסִפְוּ לְהַנְּתָן תְּבִן לְעַם לְלִבְנֵן הַלְּבָנִים בְּתִמְוּל שֶׁלְשָׁם הֵם יַלְכֵד וְקַשְׁשֵׁה לְהֵם תְּבִן :⁷ וְאֶת-מִתְחַבֵּנת הַלְּבָנִים אֲשֶׁר הֵם עֲשִׂים תִּמְוּל שֶׁלְשָׁם תְּשִׁימוּ עַלְיהָם לֹא תִּגְרַעֵוּ מִמְּנוּ כִּינְרָפִים הֵם עַל-לִבְנֵן הֵם צַעְקִים לְאָמֹר גָּלְכָה נַזְבֵּחַ לְאֱלֹהֵינוּ :⁸ תִּכְבֹּד העֲבָדָה עַל-הָאָנָשִׁים וַיַּעֲשֵׂרְבָה וְאֶל-יִשְׁעַז בְּדָרְבֵּי-שָׁקָר :

וַיַּצְאַו נְגָשִׁי הָעָם וְשְׂטָרוֹן וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-הָעָם לְאָמֹר בָּה אָמַר פְּרֻעָה אַיִלְנִי נְתַן לְכָם תְּבִן :¹⁰ אֶתְכֶם לְכָמוּ קָחוּ לְכָם תְּבִן

6. taskmasters and overseers. The “taskmasters” are Egyptians; the “overseers” are Israelite leaders of work-gangs who are supervised by the taskmasters (see v. 14).

8. Pharaoh claims repeatedly that the request for a three-day festival is an excuse to slack off from work (see also v. 17).

9. “laborers.” Heb. anashim, a plural noun that can apply also to women in some contexts; but in the present context of brickmaking—considered to be men’s work—it would go without saying that Pharaoh is placing an increased burden on the men in particular; see at 1:14. That Pharaoh would now single out males for harsh treatment is predictable, given that it is men (namely, Moses and Aaron, and presumably the elders for whom they are speaking) who openly challenge his authority. Furthermore, Pharaoh has been trying to get rid of the males all along (1:16, 22).

“deceitful promises.” Does Pharaoh refer here to the promise of a three-day festival vacation, or of liberation? Either way, he is trying to undermine Moses’ credibility. Perhaps Pharaoh already senses that the request for a festival is a ruse.

and get the straw yourselves wherever you can find it; but there shall be no decrease whatever in your work.”¹² Then the people scattered throughout the land of Egypt to gather stubble for straw.¹³ And the taskmasters pressed them, saying, “You must complete the same work assignment each day as when you had straw.”¹⁴ And the overseers of the Israelites, whom Pharaoh’s taskmasters had set over them, were beaten. “Why,” they were asked, “did you not complete the prescribed amount of bricks, either yesterday or today, as you did before?”

¹⁵ Then the overseers of the Israelites came to Pharaoh and cried: “Why do you deal thus with your servants? ¹⁶ No straw is issued to your servants, yet they demand of us: Make bricks! Thus your servants are being beaten, when the fault is with your own people.”¹⁷ He replied, “You are shirkers, shirkers! That is why you say, ‘Let us go and sacrifice to יְהוָה.’¹⁸ Be off now to your work! No straw shall be issued to you, but you must produce your quota of bricks!”

¹⁹ Now the overseers of the Israelites found themselves in trouble because of the order, “You must not reduce your daily quantity of bricks.”²⁰ As they left Pharaoh’s presence, they came upon Moses and Aaron standing in their path,²¹ and they said to them, “May look upon you and punish you for making us loathsome to Pharaoh and his courtiers—putting a sword in their hands to slay us.”²² Then Moses returned to יְהוָה and said, “O my lord, why did You bring harm upon this people? Why did You send me?²³ Ever since I came to Pharaoh to speak in Your name, he has dealt worse with this people; and still You have not delivered Your people.”

14. The Egyptian government now puts additional pressure on the overseers, who were responsible for meeting the quota of bricks. Their reaction is to seek redress from Pharaoh, and—when that fails—to blame Moses and Aaron.
21. This condemnation of Moses and Aaron is מִאשֶׁר תִּמְצָאוּ בַּי אֵין נִגְרָע מַעֲבֵדְתֶכֶם

 דָּבָר: ¹² וַיַּפְצֵץ הַעַם בְּכָל־אֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם
 לְקַשֵּׁש קַש לְתַבּוֹן: ¹³ וְהַנְּגָשִׁים אֲצִים
 לְאָמֵר בְּלֹו מַעֲשֵׂיכֶם דְּבָרִיּוֹם בַּיּוֹם
 בְּאַשְׁר בְּהִיוֹת הַתַּבּוֹן: ¹⁴ וַיָּבֹא שָׁטָרִי בְּנֵי
 יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲשֶׁר־שְׁמוֹ עַלְלָהּ נְגַשִּׁי פְּרֻעָה
 לְאָמֵר מַדּוֹעַ לֹא כְּלִיחָם חֲקָכֶם לְלִבְנֵז
 בְּתִמְנוֹל שְׁלָשֶׁם גַּמְ-תִּמְנוֹל גַּמְ-הִיּוֹם:
¹⁵ וַיָּבֹא שָׁטָרִי בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּצְעַקְוּ אֶל־
 פְּרֻעָה לְאָמֵר לִמְהּוּ תַּعֲשֵׂה כֵּה לְעַבְדֵיךְ:
¹⁶ תַּבּוֹן אֵין נִתְן לְעַבְדֵיךְ וְלְבָנָים אָמְרִים
 לְנָנוּ עַשְׂוֹ וְהַנָּהָרָה עַבְדֵיךְ מִכִּים וְחַטָּאת עַמְּךָ:
¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר נְרָפִים אַתָּם נְרָפִים עַל־בָּן אַתָּם
 אָמְרִים נִלְכָה נִזְבְּחָה לִיהוָה: ¹⁸ וַעֲתָה לְכָנוּ
 עַבְדּוֹ וַתַּבּוֹן לְאַיִנְתָּן לְכֶם וַתַּכְنַן לְבָנָים
 תַּפְנוֹ:

¹⁹ וַיָּרָא שָׁטָרִי בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אַתָּם בְּרַע
 לְאָמֵר לְאַתְגְּרָעוּ מַלְבָנִיכֶם דְּבָרִיּוֹם
 בַּיּוֹמוֹ: ²⁰ וַיִּפְגַּעַל אֶת־מֹשֶׁה וְאֶת־אַהֲרֹן
 נִצְבִּים לְקַרְאָתָם בְּצָאתָם מִמְּאתָ פְּרֻעָה:
²¹ וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֶלָּהֶם יְרָא יְהוָה עַלְלָהּ וַיַּשְׁפַּט
 אֲשֶׁר הַבָּאָשָׁתָם אֶת־רִיחָנוּ בְּעִינֵי פְּרֻעָה
 וּבְעִינֵי עַבְדֵיו לְתַת־חַרְבָּב בַּידָם לְהַרְגָּנוּ:
²² וַיִּשְׁבַּב מֹשֶׁה אֶלְيְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר אָדָנִי לִמְדָה
 חֲרַעַתָּה לְעַם הָהָר לְמָה זֶה שְׁלִיחָתָנוּ:
²³ וְמֵאָז בְּאַתִּי אֶל־פְּרֻעָה לְדֹבֶר בְּשָׁמֶךָ
 הַרְעָע לְעַם הָהָר וְהַאֲלָל לְאַהֲלָת אַתָּה עַפְךָ:

the first of a long list of Israelite complaints that will accompany and follow the Exodus.

22. As he will do many times, Moses turns to God to argue on behalf of the people. He also expresses despair at being sent on what seems to be a doomed mission.

6 Then said to Moses, “You shall soon see what I will do to Pharaoh: he shall let them go because of a greater might; indeed, because of a greater might he shall drive them from his land.”

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֲלֵיכֶם עַתָּה תִּרְאָה
אֲשֶׁר אָעַשָּׂה לְפַרְעָה כִּי בַּיָּד חֹזֶקֶת יִשְׁלַחֵם
יַבַּיַּד חֹזֶקֶת יִגְרַשֵּׂם מִאֶרְצָו: ס

6:1. Foreshadowing what is to come in the following three Torah portions, God assures Moses that Pharaoh will soon see God's might.

—Adele Berlin

Another View

THE LIBERATION of the people Israel from slavery in Egypt begins with the saving acts of women. First, the midwives of the Hebrews refuse to follow Pharaoh's edict to destroy male Hebrew children. As Tikva Frymer-Kensky has noted, when the pharaoh confronts the midwives, they tell him just what he wants to hear (Reading the Women of the Bible, 2002, p. 26). To the ruler worried about a people that "swarms" and fills the land (1:7), Shiphrah and Puah claim that the Hebrew women are chayot ("vigorous"; or, like beasts)—creatures capable of giving birth by themselves, without the civilized intervention of professionals. When he buys their excuse, the incongruous encounter between the king-of-all-Egypt and the midwives-to-the-slaves exposes Pharaoh as a fool.

The next savior is Moses' mother, who defies Pharaoh by hiding her son and preparing a basket that saves him from death (2:3). When Pharaoh's own daughter discovers the crying boy among the reeds of the Nile (2:5–6), she recognizes immediately that this must be one of the Hebrew children doomed to death by her father. Moved by empathy and humanity, she too defies the king when she rescues the boy. The baby's sister then appears, offering to secure a nursemaid, who just happens to be Moses' own mother (2:7–9). Through this conspiracy of enterprising women who collaborate with each other across ethnic, class, and religious lines, the future leader of the Exodus is spared—and with him the entire people Israel.

The presence of these five women at the opening of this critical Israelite foundation myth is immensely significant. Deeply wise in fundamental, life-sustaining ways, these women understand instinctively that Pharaoh should be disobeyed; and, with initiative, they act on this knowledge. Ultimately, these women's defiance demeans the male tyrant. Thus, from these women filled with a power rooted in moral reason, an ethical concern for life, and the capacity to empathize, we learn a valuable lesson in political ethics: the very weakest in society can contribute to liberation by judiciously engaging in acts of civil disobedience.

From these women, we learn a valuable lesson in political ethics.

—Susan Niditch

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

Shiprah and...Puah (1:15). The Rabbis are worried about unnamed women and intrigued with the Hebrew midwives. They conclude that Shiphrah and Puah are actually designations for Jochebed and Miriam (Midrash Sifrei B'midbar 78). They explain this via wordplay on the meaning of the names: Shiphrah was associated with Jochebed because she made children beautiful, and Puah was linked with Miriam because she wept over Moses. This conflation of the characters limits the number of women involved in the salvation of Moses and, by association, all Israel.

And his sister stationed herself (2:4). The Rabbis engage in creative midrash, claiming Miriam had prophetic powers. A midrash found in BT Sotah 12a–13a, among other sources, indicates that when Pharaoh decided to kill all Israelite male newborns, the Israelites chose to cease procreating, and Amram—Moses's destined father—divorced his wife. His daughter Miriam rebuked him and described his decree as harsher than Pharaoh's, since Amram's action spelled disaster for females as well as males. Furthermore, Miriam prophesied that a son born to Amram would redeem Israel. Her father listened to her and remarried Jochebed, after which Moses was born. Yet, when they were forced to abandon Moses in the reeds, Amram no longer believed Miriam's prophecy and reprimanded her. To find out whether she was right, Miriam “stationed herself” to see what would befall her brother.

SH'MOT

The daughter of Pharaoh came down to bathe in the Nile (2:5). The Rabbis are also interested in naming Pharaoh's daughter. Using a verse from I Chronicles 4:18 (“These are the sons of Bithiah daughter of Pharaoh”), they identify Bithiah as her name and interpret it as a message from God: “Moses was not your son, yet you called him your son; so too you are not my daughter, yet I call you my daughter” (Bithiah, or bat Yah, means daughter of God) (Vayikra Rabbah 1.3). This very positive attitude to this Egyptian woman downplays her foreign background.

In BT Sotah 12b, the Rabbis transform Pharaoh's daughter into a prophet, claiming that the reason she could tell that the child in the basket was a Hebrew (2:5–6) was because of her unacknowledged prophetic capabilities. Since it is inconceivable to the Rabbis that such insight could be found in a non-Israelite woman, they thus conclude that Pharaoh's daughter had converted. To reach this conclusion, they interpret “the daughter of Pharaoh came down to bathe in the Nile” (2:5) with the words “she went down to wash away her father's idolatry.” The Rabbis are also interested in presenting Moses' upbringing as untainted by heathen practices. They remark that a Hebrew wet nurse (ultimately his mother) was sought for Moses after he had turned down all the Egyptian wet nurses, their milk obviously not being kosher. Thus, the Rabbis are more concerned with a differentiation between Jews and Gentiles than the Bible seems to be.

and [Reuel] gave Moses his daughter Zipporah as wife (2:21). Interestingly, Zipporah's foreign background does not seem to have been an issue for the Rabbis. When retelling the story of Moses' marriage to Zipporah, they make Moses a greater hero than in the Bible. They do so by suggesting that the shepherds from whom Moses saves Zipporah and her sisters had actually threatened to rape them (B'reishit Rabbah 70.11). In this stereotypical, patriarchal manner, they portray the man who is to become her husband as protecting the defenseless woman from sexual danger.

הַנְּזִיר encountered him and sought to kill him (4:24). In order to make sense of this mysterious story, the Rabbis fill in its gaps with the following details: Before encountering God in the desert, Moses had promised his heathen father-in-law to allow his first-born to be raised as a heathen. But God is merciless and will kill Moses unless he goes back on his word. Moses is placed in a difficult situation, which is resolved by Zipporah, who had herself made no such promise to her father. Thus, she is the one who circumcises the child (M'chilta, Yitro 1).

Miriam prophesied that a son born to her father Amram would redeem Israel.

Zipporah... cut off her son's foreskin (4:25). This text is about a woman circumcising a child, which in early sources was not a problem (Tosefta Shabbat 15:8); yet for the Rabbis of the Babylonian Talmud it was. In a complicated halachic discussion they maintain that some Jews are not circumcised for medical reasons yet still are considered Jews, while some gentiles (such as Arabs) are circumcised but obviously are not Jews. In this context the Babylonian Talmud disqualifies women as circumcisors. This means that if a woman were to perform circumcision, her action would not be ritually valid. At this point, the Rabbis invoke the memory of Zipporah circumcising her son. To this seeming contradiction they respond with two alternative readings. One suggests that Zipporah only gave instructions and a man who was present performed the circumcision. The other claims that Zipporah took the knife, but that Moses actually circumcised his sons (Avodah Zarah 27a).

—Tal Ilan

• • • • •

Contemporary Reflection

PARASHAT SH'MOT SETS THE STAGE for the drama that plays out not only in the rest of the book of Exodus but around tables worldwide as Jewish families gather year in and year out for Passover seders. The Exodus and the experiences connected with it—the slavery of the Israelites, their liberation from Egypt, the covenant at Sinai, and the journey in the wilderness toward the Promised Land—are indelibly stamped on the Jewish collective memory and imagination. North American Jews relish, arguably more than any other holiday, the festival of Passover whose symbolic foods serve as props for retelling the tale of Israelite bondage that ceases with God's redemptive miracles. The story is fantastic in every sense of the term: fanciful, remarkable, unreal, and superb. The biblical writers are at their best in these passages, crafting a gripping narrative inscribed with timeless ethical imperatives, such as "You shall not wrong nor oppress a stranger, for you were strangers in the land of Egypt" (Exodus 22:20), and theological conundrums, like why does God repeatedly harden Pharaoh's heart—thereby preventing the necessary redemption without plagues befalling Egypt? This story has sustained generations of Jews, from esteemed commentators of yore to today's questioning sons and daughters with mouths full of matzah and maror. Jews of all stripes rally to the Exodus cry; even those with mere peripheral knowledge of things Jewish resonate to "Let my people go!"

So why is it that the most unbelievable of Jewish stories is that which is most believed in? Why does the Exodus charm and beguile liberal Jews, even Reform Jews, who are products of a movement of leaders who early on dismissed what the 1885 Pittsburgh Platform calls "miraculous narratives" of the Bible as "reflecting the primitive ideas of its own age . . . ?"

Indeed, on one level, the popularity of the Exodus is baffling. One might imagine that its lack of historical veracity would knock it off its pedestal. After all, biblical scholars, whose stock in trade is comparative

*To my students' question, "But is it true?"
I respond, "Yes!" and "No!"*

materials of contemporaneous ancient Near Eastern cultures and archeology, inform us that few of the book's details can be substantiated by cold, hard facts.

Take, for example, the matter of dating. Based on chronological indications in the text itself, the Hebrew Bible would have us believe that the Exodus took place in about 1446 B.C.E. One of the mathematical "proofs" for such a claim depends on the following information provided to the biblical reader in various places: Exodus 12:40 claims that the Israelite slavery in Egypt lasted 430 years (a figure that contradicts the prediction of an Egyptian sojourn of 400 years or four generations; Genesis 15:13, 16). I Kings 6:1 states that the Temple was constructed 480 years after the Exodus, during the fourth year of Solomon's forty-year reign (I Kings 11:42), which scholars date as 966 B.C.E. According to these calculations, the Israelites were enslaved in Egypt between 1876 and 1446 B.C.E. Moreover, if, as the text indicates, the Israelites wandered in the wilderness for forty years before entering the Promised Land, the conquest of Canaan would have begun in approximately 1406 B.C.E.

SH'MOT

Besides the fact that the Torah texts do not agree with one another on the length of Israelite enslavement in Egypt, these numbers do not add up against the evidence of extra-biblical sources. In fact, the first clear historical proof of an Israelite presence in Canaan at all is the inscription on the so-called Israel Stele of the pharaoh Merneptah, dating to about 1207 B.C.E. In other words, the biblical claim of a 15th-century Exodus is off by 200 years when compared to the archaeological evidence. Moreover, ancient records demonstrate that Egypt controlled Canaan in 1446, a fact that makes an escape from Egypt to Canaan at that time rather unlikely.

Another aspect of the story that troubles modern readers is the purported size of the Exodus. The biblical claim of 600,000 men (Exodus 12:37), which including their families would total nearly 2 million people, is hyperbolic at best. Plus, many of the sites appearing in the detailed itinerary of the Israelites' route from Egypt to Canaan (see Numbers 33) cannot be verified.

Certainly, scholars like the preeminent Nahum Sarna have argued convincingly that corroborating evidence suggests a "plausible context" for the Exodus story. Many have confidently asserted that a group of people who later became Israel went down to Egypt from Canaan, settled there, and became oppressed as foreigners. At some point, it can be presumed, they were conscripted into labor and oppressed as foreigners. Some of them later escaped and professed to a transcendent experience with a divine being in the desert. Still later, they or their descendants entered Canaan, where, according to Sarna, they were joined by other peoples and became the biblical nation of Israel.

From my perspective as a professor of Jewish history and a Reform rabbi, dismissing the story because it conflicts with historical data misses the point. Holding the Torah to critical standards of historiography is unfair, because it is not intended to be a history book containing scholars' attempts to re-create an impartial rendering of what occurred in the past. Instead, the Torah is a knitting together of narratives composed to cultivate a particular spiritual and moral point of view. So when God parts the Reed Sea, I can no more expect myself to nod in faithful assent like an open-mouthed child than when reading a book like Harry Potter.

As a non-literalist, non-fundamentalist, liberal, and committed Jew, I ascertain the message behind the medium. To me, the text asserts God's ability to subvert nature as a means of demonstrating God's vital interest in the welfare of the Israelites, which extends through time—indeed, I fervently hope, to our own time. To my students' question, "But is it true?" I respond, "Yes!" and "No!" The Exodus' visible and venerated place in the Jewish calendar assures that it will be believed in, year in and year out, to our rational consternation and spiritual delight.

—Carole Balin

Voices

Deliverance: Pu'ah Explains

Bonnie Lyons

Exodus 1:15–21

I would like to tell you
I acted out of deep faith or that God sent me a dream to prophesy this helpless baby would grow up to deliver us all out of Egypt.
But I can't.

Year after year
Shifrah and I struggled to help mothers push newborns out of their bodies and into the world.
Hour after hour
we used the secret knowledge of our sacred calling, gentle words of encouragement,
our own powerful hands.
Oh the joy and triumph when a wet head finally crosses over, the transport in every mother's eyes, pain behind her now.

Besides, Jochebed was my neighbor: could I kill her son?

Hebrew cries were camel grunts to Pharaoh's ears
so when we told him
our women delivered their babies before we midwives could arrive —that Hebrew women, unlike Egyptian women, poured babies from their bodies like wine from a jug—that stubborn, distrustful, arrogant man naturally believed us.

from Yocheved's Own Story

Vanessa Ochs

Exodus 2:1–2

At the edge of the Nile, Yocheved gathered reeds, and exactly as her mother had taught her, she began to weave the basket to hold her baby son. She called him “my son, may God protect you,” for she knew she could not give him the name that he would take with him. He would have to wait for the name to be given to him by his own life, by his own loves, and by his own pains....

Yocheved positioned the sleeping baby under the blanket so that his ear rested on her beating heart. She continued to weave as she spoke to her mother in heaven.

“You taught me to weave baskets for my babies so I could place them beside me when they were too large to carry. You never taught me how to make a basket strong enough to hold my child so he might float away from death.”

SH'MOT

from Miriam

Marsha Pravder Mirkin

Exodus 2:4–8

I hid by the river, a young lioness, crouching, ready to jump, keeping myself still. And then she came—the princess dressed in her golden clothing.... That day changed my life and the life of the princess. I was no longer simply Moses' sister, and she was no longer simply Pharaoh's daughter. We were God's daughters, an army of resisters, with our weapons of love and faith.

On Adoption

Lisa Hostein

Exodus 2:10

My new son did not come from the fruit of my womb, but he lives in the deepest recesses of my heart. Another woman gave birth to him, but with his adoption, his life is in my hands. He represents pure potential: the potential to grow and to blossom, to learn and to teach, to lead and to follow, to love and to be loved. He is a new life and a new beginning, a promise of what can be.

Epitaph

Eleanor Wilner

Exodus 2:1–10

Though only a girl,
the first born of Pharaoh,
I was the first to die.

Young then,
we were bored already,
rouged pink as oleanders on the palace grounds, petted by the eunuchs, overfed from gem-encrusted bowls, barren with wealth, until the hours of the afternoon seemed to outlast even my grandmother's mummy, a perfect little dried apricot in a golden skin. We would paint to pass the time, with delicate brushes dipped in char
on clay, or on our own blank lids.
So it was that day we found him wailing in the reeds, he seemed a miracle to us, plucked from the lotus by the ibis's beak, the squalling seed of the sacred Nile. He was permitted as a toy; while I pretended play
I honed him like a sword.
For him, I was as polished and as perfect as a pebble in a stutterer's mouth.

While the slaves' fans beat incessantly as insect's wings,
I taught him how to hate this painted Pharaoh's tomb this palace built of brick and dung, and gilded like a poet's tongue; these painted eyes.

Miriam Argues for Her Place as Prophetess

Chava Romm

Exodus 2:1–10

That morning when we left you in the bulrushes,
scrubbed clean and freshly swaddled
in your simple basket,
I knew you were too precious to abandon.

And when the princess was taken by your innocence, and claimed you for her own,
it was no mere fate that restored you to the full breasts of your rightful mother,
but your sister's cunning.

You lived a stranger in the house of the oppressor.
I grew among midwives,
stubborn tribeswomen,
who spared the newborn sons in rank defiance of the pharaoh's orders.

You learned to speak for us before kings and officials.
I coaxed children from the narrows into light with singing, tempered by our kin laboring long in huts and brickyards.

My brother,
we have both been chosen.
What you witness on the mountain cannot live without the miracles below.
Women draw water for the journey;
I have packed bells and timbrels.

Let us go.

The Wife of Moses

Shirley Kaufman

Exodus 2:21–22; 4:24–25

Something went wrong
when he told her to pack and went on listening to voices she couldn't hear.

It wasn't her job,
this blood on her fingers,
this cut flesh, red love-bites in the sand.

The desert widens between them like an endless argument.
His mouth is too soft for God's omnivorous rage, fish will die, the river stink and lice and flies and boils and the rest.
Slice of the covenant: blood on the doors.

He's off to his mountain.
She'll lose
what she saves,
fall out of the future
thankless, nothing to lean on but her own arms, holding the small face
unfathered anyway, crying between her hands.

וְאֵרֶא ◆ Va-eira

EXODUS 6:2–9:35

Marvelous Signs and Destructive Wonders

VA-ERAHAT VA-EIRA (“I appeared”) recounts how God, with the help of Moses and Aaron, endeavors to persuade the pharaoh to release his Hebrew slaves. Here we encounter a stubborn, resistant king not willing to concede an inch of ground to the beleaguered Israelites. This parashah begins the tale—continued in the two subsequent Torah portions—of how a reluctant, underdog prophet triumphs over a recalcitrant tyrant. The suspense-filled drama of the liberation from servitude is central to the Bible and to Judaism. This story is recalled with gratitude through the Passover seder, daily prayers, and identification with the oppressed. The exodus from Egypt has inspired resistance movements throughout the ages, as the downtrodden of many lands and faiths have invoked the potent phrase of self-determination: “Let my people go!”

The divine acts recounted in this parashah are commonly called “plagues,” yet this term is used only rarely in the exodus narrative (see at 9:14). Instead, words like “signs” (otot), “marvels” (moftim), and “wonders” (nifle’ot) describe the events that devastate the land and attack the routine affairs of ordinary Egyptians. We read about the first seven signs in this parashah: bloody water, frogs, lice, swarms of insects, pestilence, boils, and hail. These episodes are intended to engender a specific kind of knowledge, teaching the Israelites that “I, יהוה, am your God” (6:7) and the Egyptian king “that there is none like יהוה” (8:6) and that “I יהוה am in the midst of the land” (8:18; see also 7:17; 9:14, 29).

Women figure far less prominently in this Torah portion than in the previous parashah,

The movement of a people from slavery to liberation has wide-reaching consequences.

yet the genealogy in 6:14–24 preserves the memory of four women: Moses’ mother, Jochebed; Simeon’s unnamed Canaanite wife; and two priestly wives, Elisheba and Putiel’s daughter. The political clash that unfolds in parashat Va-eira is more destructive than the non-confrontational, non-violent resistance of the women in parashat Sh’mot. The events in this portion remind us that the movement of a people from slavery to liberation has wide-reaching consequences.

—Rachel Havrelock

Outline—

I. PROPHETIC COMMISSION AND MISSION

Covenant and Continuity (6:2–7:7)

- A. Revelation of God's name and reaffirmation of the Covenant (6:2–9)
- B. Prophetic doubts (6:10–13)
- C. Genealogy listing four wives (6:14–25)
- D. Reiteration of the prophetic mission (6:26–7:7)

II. MOSES AND GOD VERSUS PHARAOH

Seven Signs and Marvels (7:8–9:35)

- A. Prologue: snakes and spells (7:8–13)
- B. One: Nile turns to blood (7:14–24)
- C. Two: Egypt swarms with frogs (7:25–8:11)
- D. Three: dust turns to lice (8:12–15)
- E. Four: swarms invade the land (8:16–28)
- F. Five: pestilence attacks the animals (9:1–7)
- G. Six: soot brings about boils (9:8–12)
- H. Seven: hail rains down destruction (9:13–35)

6:2

God spoke to Moses and said to him, “I am יהוה. ²I appeared to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob as El Shaddai, but I did not make Myself known to them ³

וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֲלֵיכָם וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים
אָנָּנוּ יְהוָה: ³ וְאֶתְּנָא אֲלֵיכָם אֲלֵיכָם אֲלֵיכָם
וְאֲלֵיכָם בְּאֶל שְׁנֵי וְשְׁמֵי יְהוָה לَا

Prophetic Commission and Mission COVENANT AND CONTINUITY (6:2–7:7)

Moses and Aaron's first appearance before Pharaoh (5:1–5) resulted only in harsher work conditions for the Israelites (5:6–19). The prior parashah ended with the Israelite overseers' condemnation of Moses and Aaron, and with Moses wondering why God had dispatched him. In response, God now reiterates the terms of the covenant and reassures Moses that he is God's chosen representative.

REVELATION OF GOD'S NAME AND REAFFIRMATION OF THE COVENANT (6:2–9)

The name revealed to Moses is offered as proof of God's manifest presence. Moses initially asked for such evidence in order to assure the people that the Deity known to their ancestors had recognized their suffering (3:13). However, the desire to know God's name also can be seen as a gesture toward establishing a relationship. As the first piece of information we often give others about ourselves, a name enables interaction and serves as a substitute when we are not physically present, thus allowing for invocation and an extension of immanence.

2. “I am יהוה.” The name revealed by God, with all its iconic power, is something of an enigma. On the history both of the pronunciation of this name and of its treatment in translations, see at 3:15.

“El Shaddai.” This complex title shares a root with the Akkadian word for mountain (shadu) and intersects with the Hebrew root sh-d-d, “to be powerful.” Since shad also means “breast” in biblical Hebrew, some scholars have suggested that this divine name expresses the fertile, life-giving aspect of God. There is some evidence for this connotation in the book of Ruth, where Naomi invokes a shortened version of this name, Shaddai, when she refers to the Deity who claimed the lives of her husband and sons (Ruth 1:20–21; see also Genesis 17:1; 35:11). As the plot reveals, God also restores Naomi's fertility by providing her with an heir whom she is said to nurse (Ruth 4:16).

Historically speaking, El was the name of the chief god of the early Canaanite pantheon, and the Israelite forebears—who were largely Canaanite—would have worshipped El. Other divine names with El preserved in the ancestral stories include El Elyon (in our translation, “God Most High”; Genesis 14:18–22), El Ro'i (16:13), El-Elohei-Yisrael (33:20), and El Beth El (“El of Beth El,” 35:7).

“but I did not make Myself known to them by My name יהוה.” The book of Genesis does in fact

- ▶ Introducing a new divine name signals a new beginning for Israel.

ANOTHER VIEW ▶ 349

- ▶ Conflating several biblical personalities into one person is typical of rabbinic interpretation.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ▶ 349

- ▶ The Kabbalists taught that women have a monthly flow as the Shechinah menstruates.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ▶ 351

- ▶ One day I dared to put the O back / in G-d.

VOICES ▶ 353

by My name. ⁴I also established My covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land in which they lived as sojourners. ⁵I have now heard the moaning of the Israelites because the Egyptians are holding them in bondage, and I have remembered My covenant. ⁶Say, therefore, to the Israelite people: I am יהוה. I will free you from the labors of the Egyptians and deliver you from their bondage. I will redeem you with an outstretched arm and through extraordinary chastisements. ⁷And I will take you to be My people, and I will be your God. And you shall know that I, יהוה, am your God who freed you from the labors of the Egyptians. ⁸I will bring you into the land which I swore to give to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and I will give it to you for a possession, I, יהוה.” ⁹But when Moses told this to the Israelites, they would not listen to Moses, their spirits crushed by cruel bondage.

¹⁰ spoke to Moses, saying, ¹¹“Go and tell Pharaoh king of Egypt to let the Israelites depart from his land.” ¹²But Moses appealed to יהוה, saying, “The Israelites would not listen to me; how then should Pharaoh heed me, me—who gets portray the ancestors as using this divine personal name (as in 14:22, 15:2, 16:5), yet here God claims that the name was unknown to them.

נָךְעַתִּי לָהֶם: ⁴ וְגַם הַקְמָתִי אֶת־בְּרִיתִי אֲתֶם לְתֵת לָהֶם אֶת־אֶרֶץ בְּנֵנוֹ אֶת אֶרֶץ מִגְרַיָּהֶם אֲשֶׁר־אָגָרוּ בָהּ: ⁵ וְגַם אָנֹכִי שְׁמַעְתִּי אֶת־גָּאָקָת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲשֶׁר מִצְרָיִם מַעֲבָדִים אָתֶם וְאוֹכֵר אֶת־בְּרִיתִי: ⁶ לְכָן אָמַר לְבָנָנִי יִשְׂרָאֵל אָנֹכִי יהָה וְהֹזְאתִי אֶתְכֶם מִתְחַת סְבָلָתִים מִצְרָיִם וְהַצְלָתִי אֶתְכֶם מִעֲבָדָתֶם וְגַאֲלָתִי אֶתְכֶם בְּזֹרֻעָנֶתְּוֹתֶה וּבְשְׁפָטִים גָּדוֹלִים: ⁷ וְלַקְחָתִי אֶתְכֶם לְעַם לְאֱלֹהִים וְיַדְעָתֶם כִּי אָנֹכִי יהָה אֶלָּהֶיכֶם הַמוֹצִיא אֶתְכֶם מִתְחַת סְבָלּוֹת מִצְרָיִם: ⁸ וְהַבָּאָתִי אֶתְכֶם אֶל־הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁאָתִי אֶת־יְדִי לְתֵת אֶתְהָ לְאָבָרָהּ לִיצְחָק וּלְיַעֲקֹב וּנְתָנָתִי אֶתְהָ לְכֶם מִורְשָׁה אָנֹכִי יהָה: ⁹ וַיַּדְבֵּר מֹשֶׁה בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְלֹא שָׁמַעוּ אֶל־מֹשֶׁה מִקְצֵר רוח וּמִעֲבָדָה קָשָׁה: ¹⁰ פְּנֵי וַיַּדְבֵּר יהָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה לְאמֹר: ¹¹ בְּאֵ דָבָר אֶל־פְּרֻעָה מֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם וַיְשַׁלֵּח אֶת־בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִאֶרְצָו: ¹² וַיַּדְבֵּר מֹשֶׁה לִפְנֵי יהָה לְאמֹר הִנֵּן בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְאֶשְׁמָעוּ אֶלְيָהּ וְאִירָל יִשְׁמַעְנִי פְּרֻעָה וְאָנֹכִי עַרְלָ

7. “I will take you to be My people, and I will be your God.” The covenantal language used in this verse indicates that God and Israel are entering into a binding relationship. This contractual, formulaic language also reflects the way marriage is spoken of in the Bible: God “takes” Israel the way that a man “takes” a wife. (On marriage in the Bible, see Chayei Sarah, Another View, p. 127.) There is a reciprocal devotion in this relationship: as God takes Israel, God becomes Israel’s sole deity.

9. they would not listen to Moses. The Israelites responded positively to their first encounter with Moses and Aaron, convinced that God had taken note of their plight (4:29–31). But since the first confrontation between Moses and Pharaoh resulted in more oppressive labor demands (5:6–23), the people’s exhaustion and despondence prevent them from believing in the promise of redemption.

PROPHETIC DOUBTS (6:10–13)

Moses has a herculean task on his hands. His own people reject him, and his request of Pharaoh is rebuffed. In this scene, Moses appears as the hesitant actor pushed onto the stage of history under God’s reassuring direction.

12. “who gets tongue-tied.” In response to his tongue-tied!”¹³So spoke to both Moses and Aaron in regard to the Israelites and Pharaoh king of Egypt, instructing them to deliver the Israelites from the land of Egypt.

¹⁴The following are the heads of their respective clans.

The sons of Reuben, Israel's first-born: Enoch and Pallu, Hezron and Carmi; those are the families of Reuben.¹⁵The sons of Simeon: Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Saul the son of a Canaanite woman; those are the families of Simeon.¹⁶These are the names of Levi's sons by their lineage: Gershon, Kohath, and Merari; and the span of Levi's life was 137 years.¹⁷The sons of Gershon: Libni and Shimei, by their families.¹⁸The sons of Kohath: Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel; and the span of Kohath's life was 133 years.¹⁹The sons of Merari: Mahli and Mushi. These are the families of the Levites by their lineage.

being sent again to speak before Pharaoh, Moses claims to be literally “uncircumcised of lips” (the same protest he will raise in v. 30). His words echo the assertion at the burning bush that he is, literally “heavy of mouth and heavy of tongue” (4:10). While some commentators conclude that Moses claims to have some sort of speech impediment, others interpret these expressions to mean that Moses feels he is unworthy of transmitting the divine word.

13. both Moses and Aaron. In response to Moses' hesitation, God includes his brother Aaron—but not his sister Miriam—in the revelation. The Torah first mentioned Miriam (but not by name) at 2:4; see the comment there. Although she does not join her brothers during any of the revelatory moments in the Exodus narrative, she is referred to as a “prophet” (15:20), a title only metaphorically associated with Aaron (7:1). God speaks directly to all three siblings in Numbers 12:4–6.

שְׁפָתִים: פ ¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹמֶשֶׁה
וְאֶל־אַהֲרֹן וַיַּצְוֵם אֶל־בָּנָיו יִשְׂרָאֵל וְאֶל־
פְּרֻעָה מֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם לְהֹצִיא אֶת־בָּנָיו יִשְׂרָאֵל מִאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ס

14 אלה רְאֵשִׁי בֵּית־אָבָתֶם
בְּנֵי רָאוּבֵן בֶּכֶר יִשְׂרָאֵל חָנָן
וּכְרָמִי אֶלְהָה מִשְׁפָּחָה רָאוּבֵן: ¹⁵ וּבְנֵי
שְׁמֻעוֹן יִמְוָאֵל וִימְנַז וְאֶחָד וִיכְנָן וְצָחָר
וּשְׁאוֹל בֶּן־הַכְּנָעָנִית אֶלְהָה מִשְׁפָּחָה
שְׁמֻעוֹן: ¹⁶ וְאֶלְהָה שְׁמוֹת בְּנֵי־לְיִלּוּ לְתַלְדָתָם
גַּרְשּׁוֹן וְקָהָת וּמָרָאֵי וּשְׁנֵי חֵינִי לְיִשְׁבַּע
וּשְׁלָשִׁים וּמֵאֵת שָׁנָה: ¹⁷ בְּנֵי גַּרְשּׁוֹן לְבָנִי
וּשְׁלָשִׁים וּמֵאֵת שָׁנָה: ¹⁸ וּבְנֵי קָהָת עַמְרָם
וּצְחָר וְחֶבְרוֹן וּזְיוֹאֵל וּשְׁנֵי חֵינִי קָהָת שְׁלָשִׁים
וּמֵאוֹשִׁי אֶלְהָה מִשְׁפָּחָה הַלְּיִוּ לְתַלְדָתָם:

GENEALOGY LISTING FOUR WIVES (6:14–25)

The challenge presented by the Torah's genealogies for the female reader is the frequent omission of women's names. This genealogy stands out because it mentions four women. Carol Meyers claims that including Aaron's mother, wife, and daughter-in-law in this passage draws attention to Aaron and contributes to an aristocratic claim for the Aaronide priesthood (Exodus, 2005, p. 69).

15. son of a Canaanite woman. This unnamed mother gives birth to Saul, a Canaanite-Israelite half-breed who bears the same name as the future king of Israel; see at Genesis 46:10. Individuals of mixed origins trouble the juxtaposition of Israel and the other nations since they fall between ethnic categories. Nonetheless, it appears that some offspring of Israelite fathers and non-Israelite women assume positions of stature, as in the cases of Perez (son of Judah and Tamar; see Genesis 38; Ruth ²⁰Amram took to wife his father's sister Jochebed, and she bore him Aaron and Moses; and the span of Amram's life was 137 years. ²¹The sons of Izhar: Korah, Nepheg, and Zichri. ²²The sons of Uzziel: Mishael, Elzaphan, and Sithri. ²³Aaron took to wife Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab and sister of Nahshon, and she bore him Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. ²⁴The sons of Korah: Assir, Elkanah, and Abiasaph. Those are the families of the Korahites. ²⁵And Aaron's son Eleazar took to wife one of Putiel's daughters, and she bore him Phinehas. Those are the heads of the ancestral houses of the Levites by their families.

²⁶It is the same Aaron and Moses to whom said, “Bring forth the Israelites from the land of ²⁰וַיָּקֹחַ עִמְרָם אֲתִיּוֹכֶבֶד דָּרְתָּו לֹא לְאַשָּׁה וַתֵּלֶד לֹא אֲתִרְאָהָרְן וְאֲתִמְשָׁה וְשָׁנִי חִיאִי עִמְרָם שְׁבֻע וְשָׁלְשִׁים וּמִאַת שָׁנָה: ²¹וּבְנֵי יְצָהָר קְרָח וְנַפְגָּג וְזָכָרִי: ²²וּבְנֵי עַזְיאָל מִישָׁאָל וְאַלְצָפָן וְסְתָרִי: ²³וַיָּקֹחַ אֲהָזָן אֲתִיּוֹלִישָׁבָע בְּתִ-עֲמִינְדָּב אֲחֹתָה נְחַשּׁוֹן לֹא לְאַשָּׁה וַתֵּלֶד לֹא אֲתִינְדָּב וְאֲתִיּוֹהָא אֲתִיּוֹעָזָר וְאֲתִיּוֹתָמָר: ²⁴וּבְנֵי קְרָח אֲסִיר וְאַלְקָנָה וְאַבְיאָסָף אֱלֹהָה מִשְׁפָחָת הַקְּרָחִי: ²⁵וְאַלְעָזָר בֶּן-אֲהָזָן לְקָח-לּוּ מִבְּנוֹת פּוֹטִיאָל לֹא לְאַשָּׁה וַתֵּלֶד לֹא אֲתִיּוֹבִינְחָס אֱלֹהָה רְאֵשִׁי אֲבוֹת הָלּוּם לְמִשְׁפָחָתָם:

²⁶הִיא אֲהָרְן וְמֹשֶׁה אֲשֶׁר אָמַר יְהוָה לְהָם הַזְּרִיאוּ אֲתִבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם

4:11–22) and Phinehas (see v. 25). See also Mikeitz, Another Contemporary Reflection, p. 256.

20. Jochebed. Moses' mother is the first person recorded in the Bible with a name containing elements of the tetragrammaton (see at 3:15), for her name means “Yo/Yah is glorified” (the first part of the name is a shortened form of יהוה). Her name thus gives weight to the tradition that identifies Moses as the first to know God's personal name (see 6:2). Jochebed is identified as her husband's aunt (the sister of Amram's father); note that Leviticus 18:12 and 20:19 ban marriages between family members so closely related.

23. Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab and sister of Nahshon. The name of Aaron's wife may mean “My God is seven,” alluding to the wholeness and perfection of the number seven that is evident in the story of Creation (Genesis 1) and the institution of the Jubilee (Leviticus 25). Alternatively, the name can be understood as “God of the oath,” suggesting the promissory bond between God and her lineage. The names of Elisheba's father and brother indicate that she is from the tribe of Judah; her brother would become a distant ancestor of King David (see Numbers 2:3; Ruth 4:20–22).

25. one of Putiel's daughters. The lineage of Eleazar's wife and Phinehas's mother is provided, yet not her name or her sisters' names. Putiel is a distinctly Egyptian name and is never otherwise mentioned in the Bible. If Putiel was an Egyptian, then this suggests that his grandson, the zealot priest Phinehas, was of mixed background (see Numbers 25:1–13). Note, however, Deuteronomy 23:8–9 considers the grandchildren of an Egyptian to be legitimate Israelites.

REITERATION OF THE PROPHETIC MISSION (6:26–7:7)

The narrative resumes its focus on Aaron and Moses, as the major themes of Moses' commission are revisited. This section returns to various themes in 6:2–12, such as the declaration of the divine name (6:2, 29; 7:5), promise of deliverance from Egypt (6:6; 7:5), and the issue of Moses' “uncircumcised lips” (6:12, 30).

Egypt, troop by troop.”²⁷ It was they who spoke to Pharaoh king of Egypt to free the Israelites from the Egyptians; these are the same Moses and Aaron.²⁸ For when spoke to Moses in the land of Egypt²⁹ and said to Moses, “I am יהוה speak to Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I will tell you,”³⁰ Moses appealed to יהוה, saying, “See, I get tongue-tied; how then should Pharaoh heed me!”⁷ יהוה replied to Moses, “See, I place you in the role of God to Pharaoh, with your brother Aaron as your prophet.² You shall repeat all that I command you, and your brother Aaron shall speak to Pharaoh to let the Israelites depart from his land.³ But I will harden Pharaoh’s heart, that I may multiply My signs and marvels in the land of Egypt.⁴ When Pharaoh does not heed you, I will lay My hand upon Egypt and deliver My ranks, My people the Israelites, from the land of Egypt with extraordinary chastisements.⁵ And the Egyptians shall know that I am יהוה, when I stretch out My hand over Egypt and bring out the Israelites from their midst.”⁶ This Moses and Aaron did; as יהוה commanded them, so they did.⁷ Moses was eighty years old and Aaron eighty-three, when they made their demand on Pharaoh.

על-עֲבָתֶם: ²⁷ הֵם הַמְּרֻבִּים אֶל-פְּרֻעָה מֶלֶךְ-מִצְרָיִם לְהֹזִיא אֶת-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִמִּצְרָיִם הוּא מֹשֶׁה וְאַהֲרֹן: ²⁸ וַיַּדַּבֵּר בַּיּוֹם דָּבָר יְהֹוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ס ²⁹ וַיַּדַּבֵּר יְהֹוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה לְאַמְלָא אֲنֵנִי יְהֹוָה דָּבָר אֶל-פְּרֻעָה מֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם אֶת בְּל-אֲשֶׁר אֲנִי דָּבָר אֲלֵיכֶךָ: ³⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה לִפְנֵי יְהֹוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה פְּרֻעָה: פ ² וַיֹּאמֶר יְהֹוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה רָאָה נָתַתִּיךְ אֶל-הָדִים לְפְרֻעָה וְאַהֲרֹן אֲחֲיךָ יְהֹוָה נָבִיאךְ: ² אַתָּה תֹּדַבֵּר אֶת בְּל-אֲשֶׁר אֲצֹנָה וְאַהֲרֹן אֲחֲיךָ יֹדַבֵּר אֶל-פְּרֻעָה וְשָׁלַח אֶת-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִאֶרְצָו: ³ וְאַנְיִי אֲקַשָּׁה אֶת-לֵב פְּרֻעָה וְהַרְבִּיתִי אֶת-אַתְּתִּי וְאַתְּ מַזְפֹּתִי בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ⁴ וְלֹא-יִשְׁמַע אֶל-כֶּטֶף פְּרֻעָה וְנָתַתִּיךְ אֶת-יְדִיךְ בְּמִצְרָיִם וְהֹזְצָאֵתִי אֶת-עֲבָדִים בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִאֶרְצָם מִצְרָיִם בְּשִׁפְطִים גָּדוֹלִים: ⁵ וַיַּדְעָו מִצְרָיִם כִּי-אַנְיִי אֶת-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִתְּזֻכָּתְךָ: ⁶ וַיַּעַשׂ וְהֹזְצָאֵתִי אֶת-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִתְּזֻכָּתְךָ מֹשֶׁה וְאַהֲרֹן בְּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהֹוָה אַתָּם פָּנָיעַ: ⁷ וּמֹשֶׁה בְּנֵי-שְׁמֹנִים שְׁנָה וְאַהֲרֹן בְּנֵי-שְׁלֹשִׁים וְשְׁמֹנִים שְׁנָה בְּדָבְרָם אֶל-פְּרֻעָה: פ

7:1. “I place you in the role of God to Pharaoh.” This astonishing analogy promotes Moses to the role of the Deity, lording over Pharaoh—who in Egyptian society was considered divine.

3. “But I will harden Pharaoh’s heart.” This aspect of the Exodus raises questions of theodicy. On one level, the obstacle of a hardened monarch and the ensuing portrait of Egypt’s destruction seem unjust. Could God not have softened Pharaoh’s heart and spared Egypt? The exodus narrative justifies the freedom won at the expense of the oppressors’ devastation not as retribution, but as a means of impressing knowledge of divine power on Israel and Egypt alike. Pharaoh’s opposition entails a clash of wills as well as a contest between the pantheon of Egypt and the lone God of Israel. Biblical narrative renders the victor indisputable and the powers of the Egyptian gods obsolete. The number ten is at work in this part of the plot: ten times God hardens Pharaoh’s heart (4:21; 7:3; 9:12; 10:1, 20, 27; 11:10; 14:4, 8, 17); and another ten times Pharaoh is described as naturally resistant due to his own obstinacy (7:13, 14, 22; 8:11, 15, 28; 9:7, 34, 35; 13:15). (See also Another View, p. 349; and Bo, Contemporary Reflection, p. 374.)

⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים וְאֶל־אַהֲרֹן
לֵאמֹר: ⁹ כִּי יְדַבֵּר אֶלְכֶם פְּרֻעָה לְאֹמֶר
תִּنְוְנֶה לְכֶם מוֹפֵת וְאָמְרָתָךְ אֶל־אַהֲרֹן כֹּחַ אַתְּ
מְטוּךְ וְהַשְׁלֵךְ לִפְנֵי־פְּרֻעָה יְהִי לְתָנִין:
¹⁰ וְנִבְאַר מִשְׁׁה וְאַהֲרֹן אֶל־פְּרֻעָה וַיַּעֲשֵׂו כֵּן
בְּאָשָׁר צֹוָה יְהֹוָה וַיִּשְׁלַךְ אַהֲרֹן אֶת־מִטְחָה לִפְנֵי פְּרֻעָה וּלִפְנֵי עָבָדָיו וַיְהִי לְתָנִין:

.....

Moses and God versus Pharaoh

SEVEN SIGNS AND MARVELS (7:8–9:35)

Is there any logic behind the arrangement of the so-called ten plagues? Interpreters have indeed observed different types of organizing principles in this artfully crafted narrative. The events can be seen as a sequence of five pairs: two Nile transformations, two infestations of insects, two epidemics, two crop destructions, two conjurings of darkness and death. The narrative can also be divided into three triads topped by a climactic final plague: the 1st, 4th, and 7th signs begin with Moses “standing before” Pharaoh in the morning; the 2nd, 5th, and 8th start with Moses “coming before” Pharaoh; and the 3rd, 6th, and 9th are unleashed without warning. One line of rabbinic interpretation divides the signs according to the instigating agent: Aaron brings about the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd signs; Moses brings about the 7th, 8th, and 9th; God causes the 4th, 5th, and 10th; and the 6th is created by a collaboration of Aaron, Moses, and God (Sh'mot Rabbah 9.10; 20.1).

While the account in the book of Exodus enumerates ten separate episodes, two other accounts in Psalms 78:42–51 and 105:28–36 each list seven; and in those two poetic accounts, the signs are arranged in a different order than in the Torah. Interestingly, the designation “Ten Plagues” (eser makkot) is not found in the Bible; it is a later, rabbinic appellation. In fact, most of these divine acts are called “signs,” not “plagues,” thus highlighting that they were not considered punitive, but rather the means to convince Pharaoh, the Israelites, and the reader of God’s might (see also at 9:14 and 11:1).

In straining to place the Exodus in an indisputably historical context—rather than a literary or religious one—some scholars have proposed naturalistic explanations of these events. For instance, the claim has been made that the Nile appeared red due to red sediment caused by uncommonly heavy rainfalls; this unusual flooding then disturbed the ecosystem of the Nile and caused a chain of events, including the invasion of frogs and disease-carrying insects that made cattle ill and caused boils. However, the rhetoric of Exodus emphasizes that these are unique preternatural occurrences intended to promote awareness of divine power; they are best understood as devices that heighten the contest between God and Pharaoh and drive the plot toward the liberation of Israel.

PROLOGUE: SNAKES AND SPELLS (7:8–13)

Here and in several subsequent episodes, Aaron competes with the magicians of Egypt, showing how God bests Pharaoh and the Egyptian pantheon on their own terrain.

9. “into a serpent.” During his earlier vision at Sinai, Moses was instructed to deploy a similar wonder as a means of authentication before the Israelites (4:2–5). Here Aaron’s staff becomes a serpent (tannin), a large sea creature, as opposed to a snake in the prior episode. Since Aaron’s staff later changes into an almond branch (Numbers 17:23), some scholars have identified a connection to the ancient Near Eastern goddess Asherah, who is associated with blooming trees, rods, and serpents.

and it turned into a serpent.¹¹ Then Pharaoh, for his part, summoned the sages and the sorcerers; and the Egyptian magician-priests, in turn, did the same with their spells:¹² each cast down his rod, and they turned into serpents. But Aaron's rod swallowed their rods.¹³ Yet Pharaoh's heart stiffened and he did not heed them, as יְהוָה had said.

¹⁴ And said to Moses, “Pharaoh is stubborn; he refuses to let the people go.”¹⁵ Go to Pharaoh in the morning, as he is coming out to the water, and station yourself before him at the edge of the Nile, taking with you the rod that turned into a snake.¹⁶ And say to him, “יְהוָה, the God of the Hebrews, sent me to you to say, ‘Let My people go that they may worship Me in the wilderness.’” But you have

¹¹ וַיִּקְרָא גַּם־פְּרֻעָה לְחֶכְמִים וּלְמְכֹשְׁפִים רַיִשׁו גַּם־הָמָם תְּרַטְּפֵי מִצְרָיִם בְּלַהֲטֵיכֶם פָּנָן: ¹² וַיִּשְׁלַׁיכוּ אִישׁ מִטְהָר וַיְהִי לְתַבִּינָם וַיַּבְלַּע מִטְהָר־אַחֲרֵן אֶת־מִטְהָרָם: ¹³ וַיַּחֲזַק לְבַב פְּרֻעָה וְלֹא שָׁמַע אֲלֹהִים בִּאָשֶׁר דִּבֶּר יְהוָה:

ס

¹⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה כֹּדֶב לְבַב פְּרֻעָה מֵאָן לְשַׁלֵּחַ הָעָם: ¹⁵ לְרַא אֶל־פְּרֻעָה בְּבֹקֶר־הַנֶּהָר יֵצֵא הַמִּימָה וַנַּצְבָּת לְקַרְאוֹתָו עַל־שְׂפַת הַיָּאָר וְהַמִּטְהָר אֲשֶׁר־נָהָפָךְ לְנַחַשׁ תַּקְהַ בִּירָךְ: ¹⁶ וְאָמְרָתָ אֲלֵינוּ יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ הָעָבָרִים שְׁלַחְנוּ אֲלֵיכָהּ לְאָמֵר שְׁלַח אֶת־עַמִּי וַיַּעֲבְּדָנִי בַּמִּדְבָּר וְהַנֵּה לְאַשְׁמָעָת עָדָ- sages. Given the plural language, women are conceivably included in this term. Historically speaking, “wise woman” was a well-known category in Egypt; and the Hebrew Bible also recognized women for their wisdom (II Samuel 14:2, 20:16; Proverbs 31:26).

sorcerers. Again, given the plural term, women may be included: they were among Egypt’s sorcerers since pre-dynastic times; and in the Bible, the practice of magic is specifically associated with women in Exodus 22:17 (“You shall not tolerate a sorceress”) and Nahum 3:4.

magician-priests. Unlike the preceding two Hebrew terms, this one comes directly from an Egyptian word that—in Egypt—applied only to men.

ONE: NILE TURNS TO BLOOD (7:14–24)

The signs (often called “plagues” in later Jewish parlance) are framed by blood: They begin with the transformation of life-giving waters into deadly aquifers, and they end with blood smudged on Israelite doorposts to deflect the macabre visit of the Angel of Death (12:23). As both source of abundance and site of Egyptian divinity, the Nile is targeted first. Various water-related terms (such as rivers, canals, and ponds in v. 19) permeate this section, introducing a theme that will climax with the splitting of the Sea of Reeds.

“at the edge of the Nile.” The spilling of Moses’ blood was avoided when Pharaoh’s daughter drew him from the Nile (2:5–10); now Moses faces another member of the Egyptian royal family on the banks of the river.

“God of the Hebrews.” In the Bible, the Israelites tend to be called Hebrews (ivrim) by speakers outside of the group (Genesis 39:14; 41:12; Exodus 1:16, 19; 2:6) or when an Israelite speaks to an outsider (Genesis 14:13; Exodus 2:7; Jonah 1:9).

“Let My people go.” This resounding phrase first appeared in Exodus 5:1 (compare 4:23). God repeats it five more times in giving instructions to Moses (here; 7:26; 8:16; 9:1, 13), while Moses repeats it once more to Pharaoh (10:3)—a total of seven times.

“that they may worship Me.” The request for freedom from slavery is linked to the request for freedom to serve God. Linguistically speaking, the contrast could not be more pointed: the Hebrew narrative employs the same verb (avod) for the two paid no heed until now.¹⁷ Thus says יְהוָה, “By this you shall know that I am יְהוָה.” See, I shall strike the water in the Nile with the rod that is in my hand, and it will be turned into blood;¹⁸ and the fish in the Nile will die. The Nile will stink so that the Egyptians will find it impossible to drink the water of the Nile.”

¹⁹ And said to Moses, “Say to Aaron: Take your rod and hold out your arm over the waters of Egypt—its rivers, its canals, its ponds, all its bodies of water—that they may turn to blood; there shall be blood throughout the land of Egypt, even in vessels of wood and stone.”²⁰ Moses and Aaron did just as יְהוָה commanded: he lifted up the rod and struck the water in the Nile in the sight of Pharaoh and his courtiers, and all the water in the Nile was turned into blood²¹ and the fish in the Nile died. The Nile stank so that the Egyptians could not drink water from the Nile; and there was blood throughout the land of Egypt.²² But when the Egyptian magician-priests did the same with their spells, Pharaoh’s heart stiffened and he did not heed them—as יְהוָה had spoken.²³ Pharaoh turned and went into his palace, paying no regard even to this.²⁴ And all the Egyptians had to dig round about the Nile for drinking water, because they could not drink the water of the Nile.

²⁵ When seven days had passed after struck counterposed activities: “work as a slave” to Pharaoh, and “worship” God.

20. all the water in the Nile was turned into blood. This sign conveys a sense of measure-for-measure justice: the bloody river recalls the blood of Israelite infants spilled in the Nile (1:22).

A similar event is brought about by the goddess Inanna, “Queen of Heaven,” in the Sumerian myth “Inanna and the Gardener”: as a punishment, the goddess transforms all well water into blood.

24. the Egyptians had to dig round about the Nile for drinking water. Elsewhere the Bible portrays the hauling of water (for drinking and general use): as a woman’s activity (Genesis 24:11; I Samuel 9:11). If this were also the case in Egypt, then one can imagine the particularly hard burden that this sign placed on Egyptian women.

25. וַיִּמְלֹא שָׁבֻעַת יְמִים אֶחָרִי הַכּוֹתֵרִיָּה

TWO: EGYPT SWARMS WITH FROGS (7:25–8:11)

In the course of the second sign, a creature that dwells mostly in water emerges to take over the human realm. This species invasion signals that the realms of creation—water, earth, and air—have been breached. The multiplication of frogs, like the Nile,²⁶ said to Moses, “Go to Pharaoh and say to him, ‘Thus says יְהוָה: Let My people go that they may worship Me.²⁷ If you refuse to let them go, then I will plague your whole country with frogs.²⁸ The Nile shall swarm with frogs, and they shall come up and enter your palace, your bed-chamber and your bed, the houses of your courtiers and your people, and your ovens and your kneading bowls.²⁹ The frogs shall come up on you and on your people and on all your courtiers.’”

EXODUS 7:26–8:5

8 And said to Moses, “Say to Aaron: Hold out your arm with the rod over the rivers, the canals, and the ponds, and bring up the frogs on the land of Egypt.”² Aaron held out his arm over the waters of Egypt, and the frogs came up and covered the land of Egypt.³ But the magician-priests did the same with their spells, and brought frogs upon the land of Egypt.

⁴ Then Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron and said, “Plead with יְהוָה to remove the frogs from me and my people, and I will let the people go to sacrifice to יְהוָה.”⁵ And Moses said to Pharaoh, “You may have this triumph over me: for what time shall I plead in behalf of you and your courtiers and your people, that the frogs be cut off from you and your houses, to remain only in the אֶת-הַיָּמָר: פ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה בָּא אֶל-פְּרֻעָה וְאָמַרְתָּ אֲלֵיכָה בַּהֲ אָמַר יְהוָה שְׁלַח אֶת-עַמִּי וַיַּעֲבֹדָנִי: וְאַם-מִמְּנָן אַתָּה לְשַׁלֵּח הַנֶּגֶת אֲנָכִי נֶגֶת אֶת-כְּפָלָגָולָךְ בְּצִפְרְדָעִים: וְשָׁרֶץ דֵּיאָר צִפְרְדָעִים וְעַלְוָוְבוֹא בְּבִתְחָר וּבְחַנְרָמָשְׁבָּחָק וְעַל-מְשַׁתָּךְ וּבְבִתְחָר עַבְדְּלִיק וּבְעַמְּךָ וּבְתְּנוּרִיךְ יְבַמְּשָׁאַרוֹתִיךְ: וְבִכָּה וּבְעַמְּךָ וּבְכָל-עַבְדָּךְ יְעַלְוָו הַצִּפְרְדָעִים:

ח וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה אָמַר אֶל-אַהֲרֹן נְתַת אֶת-יִדְךָ בְּמִטְף עַל-הַנֶּהָרָת עַל-הַיָּאָרִים וּעַל-הַאֲגָמִים וְהַעַל אַתָּה הַצִּפְרְדָעִים עַל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: וַיְשִׂיט אַהֲרֹן אֶת-יָדוֹ עַל מִימֵי מִצְרָיִם וְתַעַל הַצִּפְרְדָעִים וְתַכְסֵס אֶת-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: וַיַּעֲשֶׂה כָּנָף הַחֲרַטְמִים בְּלֹטִיהם וַיַּעֲלֹז אֶת-הַצִּפְרְדָעִים עַל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם:

ד וַיָּקֹרֶא פְּרֻעָה לְמֹשֶׁה וְלְאַהֲרֹן וַיֹּאמֶר הַעֲתִידְךָ אֶל-יְהוָה וַיִּטְלֹל הַצִּפְרְדָעִים מִפְנֵי וּמִעַמֵּי וְאַשְׁלַחְךָ אֶת-יָדֶךָ וַיַּזְבְּחוּ לְיְהוָה: וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה לְפְרֻעָה תַּחֲפֵר אֶלְيָהָר לְמִתְנִית אַעֲתִיר לְלֵךְ וְלַעֲבְדִילָךְ וְלַעֲמַךְ לְהִכְרִית הַצִּפְרְדָעִים מִפְנֵי וּמִבְּתִיךְ רַק בִּיאָר

the appearance of the blood, conveys a sense of measure-for-measure justice: the “swarming” frogs (7:28) invoke Pharaoh’s fear of the multiplying, “swarming” population of Israelites (1:7). In ancient Egypt, human reproduction was associated with Heqt, the frog goddess of childbirth who protected the mother and newborn infant. Other deities associated with fertility and childbirth include Bes (the hippo goddess) and Taweret (the female crocodile goddess).

26. “Let My people go that they may worship Me.” Moses does not ask Pharaoh to liberate the Israelites permanently. Instead, following God’s plan, Moses requests that the Israelites be allowed a brief leave so they can take a three days’ journey to the wilderness for a sacrificial celebration (3:18; 5:1–3; 8:21–24). Ancient Egyptian documents do attest to the practice of allowing free workers time off for various reasons, including participating in religious festivals.

8:4. “I will let the people go to sacrifice to יְהוָה.” For the first time, the pharaoh seems to acknowledge the existence of God.

5. “for what time shall I plead in behalf of you?” In order to prove that the removal of the frogs is not incidental but rather an act of God, Moses lets Pharaoh name the time of their elimination.

Nile?" ““For tomorrow,” he replied. And [Moses] said, “As you say—that you may know that there is none like our God יְהוָה;⁷ the frogs shall retreat from you and your courtiers and your people; they shall remain only in the Nile.”⁸ Then Moses and Aaron left Pharaoh’s presence, and Moses cried out to the frogs which had been inflicted upon Pharaoh.⁹ And so did as Moses asked; the frogs died out in the houses, the courtyards, and the fields.¹⁰ And they piled them up in heaps, till the land stank.¹¹ But when Pharaoh saw that there was relief, he became stubborn and would not heed them, as יְהוָה had spoken.

¹²Then said to Moses, “Say to Aaron: Hold out your rod and strike the dust of the earth, and it shall turn to lice throughout the land of Egypt.”¹³ And they did so. Aaron held out his arm with the rod and struck the dust of the earth, and vermin came upon human and beast; all the dust of the earth turned to lice throughout the land of Egypt.¹⁴ The magician-priests did the like with their spells to produce lice, but they could not. The vermin remained upon human and beast;¹⁵ and the magician-priests said to Pharaoh, “This is the finger of God!”

תְשַׁאֲרֵנָה: ⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר לִמְחֹר וַיֹּאמֶר בְּדָבֶר
לְמַעַן תְּדֻעַ פִּיאָין קִיהוֹה אֱלֹהֵינוּ:
וְסָרוּ הַצְּפְרַדְעִים מִמֶּלֶךְ וּמִבְּתִיר וּמִעַבְדֵיכֶךָ
וּמַעֲמֵךְ רַק בִּיאָר תְשַׁאֲרֵנָה: ⁸ וַיֵּצֵא מֹשֶׁה
וְאַהֲרֹן מִעֵם פְּרֻעָה וַיַּצַּעַק מֹשֶׁה אֶל־יְהוָה:
עַל־דָּבָר הַצְּפְרַדְעִים אֲשֶׁר־שָׁם לְפְרֻעָה:
וַיַּעֲשֵׂה יְהוָה בְּדָבֶר מֹשֶׁה וַיִּמְתַּהַ
הַצְּפְרַדְעִים מִן־הַבְּתִים מִן־הַחֲצִירָת וּמִן־
הַשְׁדָת: ¹⁰ וַיַּצְּבָרוּ אֹתָם חַמְרָם חַמְרָם
וַתַּבְאַשׁ הָאָרֶץ: ¹¹ וַיַּרְא פְּרֻעָה בַּיּוֹתָה
הַרְוֹחֶה וְהַכְּבֵד אֶת־לְבָבוֹ וְלֹא שָׁמַע אֶל־הָם
בְּאָשָׁר דִּבֶּר יְהוָה: ¹²
וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה אָמֵל אֶל־אַהֲרֹן
נְתַח אֶת־מְטָר וְהַר אֶת־עַפְרָה הָאָרֶץ וְהַיָּה
לְכָנָם בְּכָל־אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ¹³ וַיַּעֲשֵׂרְךָ וַיְטַבֵּל
אַהֲרֹן אֶת־יְדוֹ בְּמַטְהָהוּ וַיַּרְא אֶת־עַפְרָה הָאָרֶץ
וַתַּהַלֵּה הַכָּנָם בְּאָדָם וּבְבְהָמָה בְּלַעַפְרָה
הָאָרֶץ הָיָה כָּנָם בְּכָל־אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם:
¹⁴ וַיַּעֲשֵׂרְכָן הַחֲרַטְמִים בְּלִטְיָהָם לְהֹזִיא
אֶת־הַכָּנָם וְלֹא יָכֹל וַתַּהַלֵּה הַכָּנָם בְּאָדָם
וּבְבְהָמָה: ¹⁵ וַיֹּאמְרוּ הַחֲרַטְמִם אֶל־פְּרֻעָה

6. “that you may know that there is none like our God יְהוָה.” The signs are expressly intended to engender knowledge of God among the Egyptians and Israelites, with differing effects on each. (See also Another View, p. 349.)

10. the land stank. Here and in 7:21, the text emphasizes the olfactory dimension of the first two signs. Measure-for-measure justice is again at work. In 5:21 the Israelites had condemned Moses and Aaron for literally “causing our breath to be malodorous” (in our translation: “making us loathsome”), meaning that Moses’ demands have brought harsher labor requirements down on the slaves. As God proves through the signs, it is not the Israelites who stink, but rather the land of Egypt during its accelerated rate of decay.

THREE: DUST TURNS TO LICE (8:12–15)

During this third round, the Egyptian magician-priests drop out of the contest and—humbled—admit defeat, with a partial recognition of God’s agency. The lice infest Egyptian bodies as the frogs would have disrupted their households.

12. “Say to Aaron.” In the 3rd, 6th, and 9th signs (the last in each triad), the event occurs without any warning being given to Pharaoh.

14. magician-priests . . . could not. Having matched the signs performed by Moses and Aaron three times (rod in 7:11–12; blood in 7:22; frogs in 8:3), the Egyptians now fail to reproduce Aaron’s actions.

15. “This is the finger of God!” Throughout

But Pharaoh's heart stiffened and he would not heed them, as יהוה had spoken.

¹⁶And said to Moses, “Early in the morning present yourself to Pharaoh, as he is coming out to the water, and say to him, ‘Thus says יהוה: Let My people go that they may worship Me.’ ¹⁷For if you do not let My people go, I will let loose swarms of insects against you and your courtiers and your people and your houses; the houses of the Egyptians, and the very ground they stand on, shall be filled with swarms of insects. ¹⁸But on that day I will set apart the region of Goshen, where My people dwell, so that no swarms of insects shall be there, that you may know that I am in the midst of the land. ¹⁹And I will make a distinction between My people and your people. Tomorrow this sign shall come to pass.’” ²⁰And did so. Heavy swarms of insects invaded Pharaoh's palace and the houses of his courtiers; throughout the country of Egypt the land was ruined because of the swarms of insects.

the Exodus narrative, reference is made to God's outstretched hand (such as 3:20) or arm (such as 6:6) as the vehicle for punishing the Egyptians. Here, the magician-priests express their acknowledgment of God's power through a similarly anthropomorphic image. As in other ancient Near Eastern texts, the hand of a deity is an image that signifies her or his ability to act in the world.

FOUR: SWARMS INVADE THE LAND (8:16–28)

17. “if you do not let My people go.” God does not secure Israel's liberation in a non-violent manner, rather, each refusal entails a harsh consequence. Moses emphasizes the reciprocal damage that Pharaoh brings on himself and his people by using verbs that share the same root. A translation that captures the parallel is: “If you do not send my people, then I will send swarms against you.”

“swarms of insects.” Heb. arov, which stems

אַצְבָּע אֱלֹהִים הוּא וַיַּחֲזֹק לְבִ-פְּרֻעָה וְלֹא־ שָׁמַע אֱלֹהִים בְּאָשֶׁר דִּבֶּר יְהוָה: ס
16 וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֵלֶ־מֹשֶׁה הַשְּׁפָם בְּבָקָר
וְהַתִּצְבֵּל לִפְנֵי פְּרֻעָה הַנֶּה יוֹצֵא הַמִּימָה
וְאָמְרָתָן אֶלְיוֹ בְּהָ אָמַר יְהוָה שָׁלַח עַמִּי
וַיַּעֲבֹרְנִי: 17 כִּי אִם־אִינָךְ מַשְׁלָחֵךְ אֶת־עַמִּי
הַנֶּגֶן מַשְׁלִיכֵךְ בָּהּ וּבְעַבְדֵיךְ וּבְעַמְךְ וּבְבָתֵיךְ
אֶת־הָעָרָב וּמְלָאוּ בְּתֵי מִצְרָיִם אֶת־הָעָרָב
וְגַם הָאָרְמָה אֲשֶׁר־הָם עָשָׂו: 18 וְהַפְּלִיטָיו
בְּלֹום הַהָוֹא אֶת־אָרֶץ גָּשָׂו אֲשֶׁר עַמִּי עָמַד
עַלְיָה לְבָלָתִי הַיּוֹתָשִׁים עַרְבָּם לְמַעַן תְּרַעַת
כִּי אַנְיִי יְהוָה בְּקָרְבֵי הָאָרֶץ: 19 וְשָׁמְתִי פְּרַתָּה
בֵּין עַמִּי וּבֵין עַמְךָ לְמַחֵר יְהִיא הַאֲתָה הַזֹּה:
20 וַיַּעֲשֵׂה יְהוָה בְּנֵן וַיַּבְאֵל עַרְבָּם כִּיּוֹתָה
פְּרֻעָה וּבֵית עַבְדֵיךְ וּבְכָל־אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם
תִּשְׁחַת הָאָרֶץ מִפְנֵי הָעָרָב:

from the root meaning “to mix.” Some ancient and medieval commentators understood the word as referring to a mixture of wild beasts, while others interpreted the term as some sort of insect, perhaps a fly. The parallelism with “lice” in Psalm 105:31 supports the present translation.

18. “I will set apart the region of Goshen.” God begins the process of separating the people of Israel from the Egyptian population while fulfilling the fantasy of the oppressed seeing their oppressors suffer. God wrenches Israel from Egypt in gradual stages of individuation during which Israel is free of suffering.

19. “I will make a distinction.” The distinction that results from the Exodus is of two sorts: Israel becomes independent of Egypt and receives a legal code that marks it as different from other nations.

20. Like the frogs, the insects invade the houses of royalty and commoners alike.

²¹Then Pharaoh summoned Moses and Aaron and said, “Go and sacrifice to your God within the land.” ²²But Moses replied, “It would not be right to do this, for what we sacrifice to our God is untoouchable to the Egyptians. If we sacrifice that which is untoouchable to the Egyptians before their very eyes, will they not stone us!” ²³So we must go a distance of three days into the wilderness and sacrifice to יְהוָה as our God may command us.” ²⁴Pharaoh said, “I will let you go to sacrifice to your God יְהוָה in the wilderness; but do not go very far. Plead, then, for me.” ²⁵And Moses said, “When I leave your presence, I will plead with that the swarms of insects depart tomorrow from Pharaoh and his courtiers and his people; but let not Pharaoh again act deceitfully, not letting the people go to sacrifice to יְהוָה.”

²⁶So Moses left Pharaoh’s presence and pleaded with יְהוָה. ²⁷And did as Moses asked—removing the swarms of insects from Pharaoh, from his courtiers, and from his people; not one remained. ²⁸But Pharaoh became stubborn this time also, and would not let the people go.

9 יְהוָה said to Moses, “Go to Pharaoh and say to him, ‘Thus says יְהוָה, the God of the Hebrews: Let My people go to worship Me. ²For if you refuse to let them go, and continue to hold them, ³then the hand of יְהוָה will strike your livestock in the fields—the horses, the asses, the camels, the cattle,

²¹ וַיִּקְרָא פְּרֻעָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה וְלֵאמֹר לְכָךְ זָבְחוּ לְאֱלֹהִיכֶם בָּאָרֶץ: ²² וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה לֹא נִכְזֹן לְעֵשׂוֹת פָּנֵי תֹּועֶבֶת מִצְרָיִם נִזְבֵּחַ לִיהוָה אֶלְהֵינוּ הֵן נִזְבֵּחַ אֶת־תֹּועֶבֶת מִצְרָיִם לְעֵינֵיכֶם וְלֹא יִסְקְלֶנוּ: ²³ דָּרְךְ שְׁלֹשָׁת יְמִים גָּלַף בְּמִדְבָּר וְבְחָנָנוּ לִיהוָה אֶלְהֵינוּ כַּאֲשֶׁר יֹאמֶר אֶלְינוּ: ²⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר פְּרֻעָה אֶنְכִּי אֲשֶׁר אַתָּכֶם וַיִּזְבְּחָתֶם לִיהוָה אֶלְהֵיכֶם בְּמִדְבָּר רֶקֶת הַרְתָּק לְאַתְּרָחִיקוּ לְלִכְתָּה הַעֲטִירָיו בְּעֵדִי: ²⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה הִנֵּה אֶنְכִּי יוֹצֵא מִעַמְּךָ וְהַעֲתָרָתִי אֶלְיהָה וִסְרֵה הַעֲלָב מִפְרָעָה מִעַבְדָּיו וּמִעַמּוּ מַחְרֵר רָק אֶל־יִסְף פְּרֻעָה הַתֵּל לְבִלְתִּיל שְׁלֹחַ אֶת־הָעָם לִזְבֹּחַ לִיהוָה:

²⁶ וַיֹּצֵא מֹשֶׁה מִעַמְּךָ מִעַמְּךָ פְּרֻעָה וַיַּעֲתֵר אֶל־יְהוָה: ²⁷ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה יְהוָה כְּדָבָר מֹשֶׁה וַיַּסֶּלֶת הַעֲלָב מִפְרָעָה מִעַבְדָּיו וּמִעַמּוּ לֹא נִשְׁאַר אֶחָדר: ²⁸ וַיַּכְבִּיד פְּרֻעָה אֶת־לְבָבוֹ גַּם בְּפָעָם הַזֹּאת וְלֹא שְׁלֹחַ אֶת־הָעָם: ט ^ט וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה בָּא אֶל־פְּרֻעָה וְדֹבְרַת אֲלֵינוּ בְּהָאָמֵר יְהוָה אֶלְהֵי הָעָבָרִים שְׁלֹחַ אֶת־עַמִּי וַיַּעֲבֹדָנִי: ² כִּי אִם־מָאֵן אַתָּה לְשַׁלֵּחַ וַיַּזְרַק מִחְצִיק בְּמִן: ³ הִנֵּה יְדִיחָה חֹזֶק בְּמִקְנֶה אֲשֶׁר בְּשָׂדָה בְּטוּסִים בְּחִמְרִים בְּגִמְלִים בְּבָקָר

21. “sacrifice to your God within the land.” A clever negotiator, Pharaoh concedes to half of Israel’s request by proposing that they sacrifice to their God within Egypt, a compromise Moses rejects.

22. “what we sacrifice... is untoouchable to the Egyptians.” According to classical sources, ancient Egyptians sacrificed animals to gods and to the dead, but the creatures they offered were not sheep and goats like the Israelites. This may account for the perception that Israelite sacrifices would be anathema to the Egyptians. This is a kind of “ethnic differentiation” in which the customs of one group are deeply disapproved of by another.

FIVE: PESTILENCE ATTACKS THE ANIMALS (9:1–7)

Like the first two signs, this episode, too, seems to involve an element of measure-for-measure justice. Since Israel is not allowed to sacrifice its animals to God in Egypt, the animals of Egypt will suffer.

and the sheep—with a very severe pestilence.⁴ But יְהוָה will make a distinction between the livestock of Israel and the livestock of the Egyptians, so that nothing shall die of all that belongs to the Israelites.⁵ יְהוָה has fixed the time: tomorrow יְהוָה will do this thing in the land.”⁶ And יְהוָה did so the next day: all the livestock of the Egyptians died, but of the livestock of the Israelites not a beast died.⁷ When Pharaoh inquired, he found that not a head of the livestock of Israel had died; yet Pharaoh remained stubborn, and he would not let the people go.

⁸Then said to Moses and Aaron, “Each of you take handfuls of soot from the kiln, and let Moses throw it toward the sky in the sight of Pharaoh. ⁹It shall become a fine dust all over the land of Egypt, and cause an inflammation breaking out in boils on human and beast throughout the land of Egypt.” ¹⁰So they took soot of the kiln and appeared before Pharaoh; Moses threw it toward the sky, and it caused an inflammation breaking out in boils on human and beast.¹¹ The magician-priests were unable to confront Moses because of the inflammation, for the inflammation afflicted the magician-priests as well as all the other Egyptians.¹² But יְהוָה stiffened the heart of Pharaoh, and he would not heed them, just as had told Moses.

וַיָּצֹא בְּרִבְרִיבָה מֵאָד : ⁴ וְהַפְלָה יְהוָה בֵּין מִקְנֶה יִשְׂרָאֵל וּבֵין מִקְנֶה מִצְרָיִם וְלֹא יִמְوت מִכְלָל-לְבָנִי יִשְׂרָאֵל ذָבֵר : ⁵ וַיִּשְׁמַע יְהוָה מוֹעֵד לְאָמָר מִתְרַגֵּשׁ יַעֲשֵׂה יְהוָה הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה בָּאָרֶץ : ⁶ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה יְהוָה אַתְּ-הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה מִמְחֻרָת לִימָת כָּל מִקְנֶה מִצְרָיִם וּמִמְקֶנֶה בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל לְאַ-מִת אֶחָד : ⁷ וַיַּשְׁלַח פְּרֻעה וְהַנָּהָר לְאַ-מִת מִמְקֶנֶה יִשְׂרָאֵל עַד-אֶחָד וַיַּכְבִּל לְבָבָ פְּרֻעה וְלֹא שָׁלַח אַתְּ-הַדָּבָר : ⁸

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה וְאֶל-אַהֲרֹן קְחוּ לְכֶם מִלְאָחָת חַפְנִיכֶם פִּיחַ כְּבָשֵׂן וּזְרַקְוּ מֹשֶׁה הַשְׁמִימָה לְעֵינֵי פְרֻעה : ⁹ וְהִיא לְאַבְקָע עַל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם וְהִיא עַל-הָאָדָם וְעַל-הַבְּהֵמָה לְשְׁחִין פִּיחַ אֶבְעָבָעָת בְּכָל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם : ¹⁰ וַיִּקְחָו אַתְּ-פִיחַ הַכְּבָשֵׂן וַיַּעֲמֹד לִפְנֵי פְרֻעה וַיִּזְרַק אֹתוֹ מֹשֶׁה הַשְׁמִימָה וְיָהִי שְׁחִין אֶבְעָבָעָת פִּיחַ בְּאָדָם וּבְבְהֵמָה : ¹¹ וְלֹא-יָכֹלוּ הַמְּרֻטְמִים לְעַמְדָה לִפְנֵי מֹשֶׁה מִפְנֵי הַשְׁחִין בִּיהִיה הַשְׁחִין בְּחַרְטָמָם וּבְכָל-מִצְרָיִם : ¹² וַיַּחֲזַק יְהוָה אַתְּ-לָבֶב פְרֻעה וְלֹא שָׁמַע אֶלָּהֶם كְאָשֶר דִבֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה : ¹³

SIX: SOOT BRINGS ABOUT BOILS (9:8–12)

With Pharaoh as their witness, Moses and Aaron throw handfuls of soot into the air; the soot becomes dust and causes boils to break out on humans and animals. In James Frazer's typology of magic, this constitutes imitative magic, for the properties of one object (soot that has been burnt) resemble another (a burning rash on the skin) to the point of actual inflammation.

When stricken by boils, Job sits in ash and scratches himself with a potsherd (Job 2:7–8). This image conveys the misery of the affliction that, like the lice before it, affects the flesh of both humans and animals.

8. “soot from the kiln.” The reason for this specification is not clear. Umberto Cassuto suggests that the kiln in view is one where bricks are forged; since the making and laying of bricks are the very labors forced on the Israelites, both symmetry and “poetic justice” would then be evident in this divine act (Exodus, 1967, p. 113). Arguing against that interpretation is the fact that in ancient Egypt, bricks were generally sun-dried rather than kiln-fired.

10. Moses threw it. Although both Aaron and Moses are instructed to take handfuls of soot, only Moses actually throws the soot into the sky. Aaron's role is fading, as Moses takes center stage along with God and Pharaoh.

¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹמֶשֶׁה הַשְׁבָּט בְּבָקָר
וְהַתִּצְאֵב לִפְנֵי פָּרָעָה וְאָמַרְתָּ אֲלֵיכָהּ כֹּה
אָמַר יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי הָעָבָרִים שְׁלֹחַ אֶת־עַמִּי
וְיַעֲבֹרְנִי: ¹⁴ פִּי בְּפִעם הַזֹּאת אָנָּי שְׁלֹחַ
אֶת־כָּל־מְגֻפָּתִי אֶל־לְבָבֶךָ וּבְעַכְרִיךְ וּבְעַמְּרִיךְ
בְּעַבוֹר תְּרוּפִי אֵין קָמְנִי בְּכָל־הָאָרֶץ:
¹⁵ כִּי עַתָּה שְׁלֹחַתִּי אֶת־יְהִי וְאֵת אַתָּה
וְאֶת־עַמְּךָ בְּדָבָר וְתִפְחַד מִן־הָאָרֶץ:
¹⁶ וְאַוְלָם בְּעַבוֹר זֹאת הַעֲמַדְתִּיק בְּעַבוֹר
הָרָאֹתֶךָ אֶת־בָּחֵן וְלִמְעֵן סְפִיר שְׁמֵי בְּכָל־
הָאָרֶץ: ¹⁷ עֹזְךָ מִסְטוֹלֵל בְּעַמִּי לְבָלָתִי
שְׁלֹחַם: ¹⁸ הַנּוּ מִמְטִיר פְּעַת מְחֹר בָּרֶד
בָּרֶד מֵאַד אֲשֶׁר לְאִיהִה כִּמְהוּ בְּמַצְרִים
שְׁלֹחַ הָעַז אֶת־מְקֹנֶךָ וְאַתָּ בְּלָאֲשֶׁר לֹכֶךָ
בְּשָׂהָה בְּלָהָאָלָם וְהַבְּהָמָה אֲשֶׁר־יִמְצָא
בְּשָׂהָה וְלֹא יִאֲסִף הַבִּיתָה וְירַד עַלְהָם
הַבָּרֶד וּמְתוּ: ²⁰ הִירָא אֶת־יְהִי יְהוָה
מִעֲבָרִי פָּרָעָה הַנִּיס אֶת־עַבְדֵיכְיוּ וְאֶת־מְקֹנֶיכְיוּ
אֶל־הַבָּתִים: ²¹ וְאֲשֶׁר לְאַשְׁם לְבָבוֹ אֶל־
דָּבָר יְהוָה וַיַּעֲזֹב אֶת־עַבְדֵיכְיוּ וְאֶת־מְקֹנֶיכְיוּ
בְּשָׂהָה: ²² פְּ

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹמֶשֶׁה נִטָּה אֶת־יְהִי
עַל־הַשְׁמִינִים וַיְהִי בָּרֶד בְּכָל־אָרֶץ מִצְרִים

SEVEN: HAIL RAINS DOWN DESTRUCTION (9:13–35)

This plague comes with an additional test of Pharaoh: he is forewarned that if he wants to preserve his remaining servants and livestock, then he will need to shelter them before the hail strikes. The warning divides Pharaoh's household into those who fear God's word and therefore bring the animals inside and those who do not heed the divine word and leave their animals exposed.

14. “My plagues.” Prior to mention of the killing of the first-born (11:1), this is the one time that God uses a term of affliction: magifot (plagues). While the other episodes are referred to as “signs,” “marvels,” or “wonders,” here the term “plagues” may have been used because the hail will involve a loss of life for humans and animals. (See also at 11:1.)

“in order that you may know that there is none like Me.” The intended outcome of the increasingly severe signs is the recognition of the unequaled power of God. Such a sentiment is expressed in the Song at the Sea (15:11) and later intoned in Jewish liturgy as the prayer Mi Chamochah.

Egypt, upon human and beast and all the grasses of the field in the land of Egypt.”²³ So Moses held out his rod toward the sky, and sent thunder and hail, and fire streamed down to the ground, as rain rained down hail upon the land of Egypt.²⁴ The hail was very heavy—fire flashing in the midst of the hail—such as had not fallen on the land of Egypt since it had become a nation.²⁵ Throughout the land of Egypt the hail struck down all that were in the open, both human and beast; the hail also struck down all the grasses of the field and shattered all the trees of the field.²⁶ Only in the region of Goshen, where the Israelites were, there was no hail.

²⁷ Thereupon Pharaoh sent for Moses and Aaron and said to them, “I stand guilty this time. יְהוָה is in the right, and I and my people are in the wrong.²⁸ Plead with יְהוָה that there may be an end of God’s thunder and of hail. I will let you go; you need stay no longer.”²⁹ Moses said to him, “As I go out of the city, I shall spread out my hands to יְהוָה; the thunder will cease and the hail will fall no more, so that you may know that the earth is יְהוָה’s.³⁰ But I know that you and your courtiers do not yet fear God יְהוָה.”—³¹ Now the flax and barley were ruined, for the barley was in the ear and the flax was in bud;³² but the wheat and the emmer were not hurt, for they ripen late.—³³ Leaving Pharaoh, Moses went outside the city and spread out his hands to יְהוָה:

עַל-הָדָם וְעַל-הַבְּהָמָה וְעַל כָּל-עַשֵּׂב הַשְׁדָה בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ²³ וַיְתִּמְשֹׁךְ מִשְׁחָה עַל-הַשְׁמִינִים וַיְהִי נָתַן קָלָת וּבָרֶד וְתַהֲלֵךְ אַשְׁרָאַד וַיְמַטֵּר יְהֹוָה בָּרֶד עַל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ²⁴ וַיְהִי בָּרֶד וְאַשְׁרָאַד מִתְלַקְּחָת בְּתוֹךְ הַבָּרֶד בְּבָרֶד מִלְּאָד אֲשֶׁר לְאִיהָה בָּמָהוּ בְּכָל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם מִזְרָחָה לְגַוִּי: ²⁵ וַיָּרַק הַבָּרֶד בְּכָל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם אֶת כָּל-אֲשֶׁר בְּשָׂדָה מִזְרָחָה וְעַד-בָּהָמָה וְאֶת כָּל-עַשֵּׂב הַשְׁדָה הַבָּהָד וְאֶת-כָּל-עַז הַשְׁדָה שָׁבָר: ²⁶ רַק בָּאָרֶץ גַּשֵּׁן אֲשֶׁר-שָׁם בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לֹא הִיה בָּרֶד: ²⁷ וַיִּשְׁלַח פָּרָעָה וַיָּקָרָא לִמְשָׁה וְלְאַהֲרֹן וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלָּכֶם חֲטֹאתִי הַפְּעָם יְהֹוָה הַצְדִיק וְאַנְיָ וְעַמִּי הַרְשִׁיעִים: ²⁸ הַעֲתִירוּ אֶל-יְהֹוָה וּרְבָּ מִהִיאת קָלָת אֱלֹהִים וּבָרֶד וְאַשְׁלָחָה אֶתֶּלֶם וְלֹא תִסְפּוּן לְעַמְּדָן: ²⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹנָה מִשְׁה בְּצָאתִי אֶת-הָעִיר אֶפְרָאֵם אֶת-כְּפֵר אֶל-יְהֹוָה הַקְּלוֹת יְחִידְלֵין וְהַבָּרֶד לֹא יְהֹוָה שׁוֹד לְמַעַן תְּלֻעָה כִּי לְיְהֹוָה הָאָרֶץ: ³⁰ וְאַתָּה וְעַדְקֵיךְ יְדַעְתִּי בַּי טָרֵם תִּירְאֹן מִפְנֵי יְהֹוָה אֱלֹהִים: ³¹ וְהַפְּשָׁתָה וְהַשְׁעָרָה נְכַתָּה בַּי הַשְׁעָרָה אָבִיב וְהַפְּשָׁתָה גַּבְעָל: ³² וְהַחֲטָה וְהַכְּטָמָת לֹא נָכַר בַּי אֲפִילַת הַנֶּהָה: ³³ וַיִּצְא מִשְׁה מִעֵם פָּרָעָה אֶת-הָעִיר וַיַּפְרֵשׁ בְּפִיו

^{23.} thunder and hail, and fire. Note the detailed language used to describe hail, rain, thunder, and lightning, which may foreshadow the revelation at Sinai (Exodus 19).

^{27.} “I stand guilty this time.” Pharaoh temporarily puts himself in the wrong, but he recants from this position when the marvel ceases (9:34–35). Pharaoh sometimes seems to peer beyond his stubbornness and grasp the inevitable conclusion of the struggle.

^{31.} Now the flax and barley were ruined. This digression about the harvest emphasizes the loss of one season’s yield as well as the survival of the late-blooming crops. This foreshadows more destruction to come.

^{31–32.} barley...wheat. These grains are associated with the Exodus not only narratively but also ritually: the earliest celebrations of Passover marked the barley harvest; and Shavuot was, in its first form, the wheat harvest holiday. The practice of cleaning one’s house of leaven before Passover recalls the farmers’ clearing of stale remnants of a previous crop before the harvest of a new one.

emmer. A kind of wheat.

the thunder and the hail ceased, and no rain came pouring down upon the earth.³⁴ But when Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunder had ceased, he became stubborn and reverted to his guilty ways, as did his courtiers.³⁵ So Pharaoh's heart stiffened and he would not let the Israelites go, just as Yahweh had foretold through Moses.

אֶל-יְהוָה וַיַּחֲלֹל הַקּוֹלֹת וְהַבָּרֶד וְמַטָּר
לְאַנְגָּלֶת אֶרְצָה:³⁴ וַיַּרְא פְּרֻעָה כִּי-חִכְלֵל
הַמַּטָּר וְהַבָּרֶד וְהַקּוֹלָת וַיַּסֶּף לְחַטָּאת וַיַּכְבֹּד
לְבוֹ הַוָּא וַיַּעֲבֹדוּ³⁵ וַיַּחֲזֹק לִבְ פְּרֻעָה וְלֹא
שָׁלַח אֶת-בָּנָי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּאָשָׁר דֹּבֵר יְהוָה
בִּיד-מֹשֶׁה:³⁵ פ

35. The parashah ends with both Pharaoh's stone heart and the acknowledgment that all is going according to God's plan.

—Rachel Havrelock

Another View

IN THE PRECEDING PARASHAH, Pharaoh challenged Moses: “Who is יהוה that I should heed him and let Israel go?” (5:2).

Earlier, Moses had anticipated that the Israelites would pose a similar question: “When I come to the Israelites . . . and they ask me, ‘What is his name?’ what shall I say to them?” (3:13). Divine self-revelation in parashat Va-eira answers these questions in two ways.

First, God declares: “I am יהוה; I appeared to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob as El Shaddai, but I did not make Myself known to them by My name יהוה” (6:2). This personal divine name validates the promises made to the ancestors in Genesis. It also evokes God’s eternal nature (see at 3:14, 15). Moreover, introducing a new divine name signals a new beginning for Israel, as God prepares to bring them from slavery to freedom.

A second aspect of God becomes manifest in overpowering Pharaoh with the so-called plagues and even in controlling Pharaoh’s heart. The text makes it clear that the signs and wonders are part of God’s design—the means to demonstrate God’s control of history. Had there only been one or two, they might have been dismissed as a chance occurrence. However, Israel’s

God is able both to inflict multiple signs and to withdraw them at a designated time.

Given the high status of Pharaoh as god in Egyptian culture, it is especially significant that Israel’s God can also control and manipulate Pharaoh himself by hardening his heart in certain instances (4:21; 7:3; 9:12; 10:1, 20, 27; 11:10; 14:4, 8). Although hardening Pharaoh’s heart creates tension regarding Pharaoh’s culpability, it highlights God’s supreme control.

Divine self-revelation answers these questions in two ways.

God’s intentions are quite explicit: “I have spared you for this purpose: in order to show you my power, and in order that my fame may resound throughout the world” (9:16).

Thus, like the revelation at the burning bush (Exodus 3) and the revelation on Mt. Sinai (Exodus 19), the ten signs become a means of divine self-disclosure. They demonstrate God’s supreme power, proving that the Creator of the universe controls even the most powerful of human rulers.

—Naomi Steinberg

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

Amram took to wife his father’s sister Jochebed (6:20). While Moses’ mother is mentioned several times in the Torah, her proper name, Jochebed, is stated only twice, here and in Numbers 26:59. Here, she is simply described in the Hebrew as her husband Amram’s dodah, an imprecise term indicating a familial relationship. Numbers 26:59, however, makes clear that Jochebed was the daughter of Jacob’s son Levi (and that she was born to Levi in Egypt). That information has been taken into account in the translation of the present verse: Jochebed (daughter of Levi) was the aunt of her husband, Amram (grandson of Levi; Exodus 6:16, 18).

The Rabbis were uncomfortable with this marriage, since it appeared to contradict the prohibition in Leviticus 18:12 against an aunt-nephew sexual/marital relationship. One response to this dilemma was simply to point out that the relationship was pre-Sinaitic and therefore was not restricted to the law as stipulated in Leviticus (BT Sanhedrin 57b–58b). Another rabbinic approach rested on further investigation into the meaning of the word dodah. According to BT Sanhedrin 58b, Jochebed was only a “half-aunt.” She and Amram’s father were said to have shared the same father (Levi), but they were born of different (unnamed) mothers. Therefore, the marriage of Amram and Jochebed was not prohibited as it was between a man and his half-aunt.

Aaron took to wife Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab (6:23). The Torah mentions Elisheba only once and defines her by her familial relationships. While it is standard for a biblical woman to be identified by her father’s name, and even by her husband’s or children’s names, the mention of all of them in the same verse is unusual. The description of Elisheba is even more unusual in that she is also identified as the sister of Nahshon. Vayikra Rabbah 20.2 elaborates on these relationships by pointing to one day in Elisheba’s life, which was also an important day in the lives of all the male relatives mentioned in this verse. According to narratives found later in the Torah, it occurred exactly one year after the Exodus took place; on that day, the Tabernacle was dedicated in the wilderness, and Elisheba experienced a number of joyous events—but then a disaster transformed her happiness into mourning. The joyous incidents were that her brother-in-law (Moses) took on a mantle of leadership that is compared to royalty; her brother (Nahshon) was made chief of the tribe of Judah; her husband (Aaron) was made high priest; her grandson (Phinehas) was anointed as a military leader; and two of her sons (Nadab and Abihu) were made assistants to the high priest. The circumstance for grief concerned these two sons. According to Leviticus 10:1–2, on that same day

“they offered before יהוה alien fire . . . and fire came forth from יהוה and consumed them; thus they died at the instance of יהוה.”

Even though Elisheba bat Amminadab is mentioned only once in the Torah, a rabbinic opinion in BT Sotah 11b equates her with Puah, one of the two midwives who saved the Israelite baby boys contrary to Pharaoh’s decree (Exodus 1:15–22). These two midwives, Shiphrah and Puah, are identified by some rabbinic commentators as the mother-daughter team of Jochebed and Miriam, and by other rabbinic commentators as a mother–daughter-in-law team, namely, Jochebed and Elisheba. Such conflation of several biblical personalities into one person is typical of rabbinic interpretation.

Aaron’s son Eleazar took to wife one of Putiel’s daughters (6:25). This verse is part of a longer priestly lineage recorded in Exodus 6. It is unusual,

The way that this woman is designated is also unusual.

although not unique, in that it mentions a wife. The way that this woman is designated is also unusual, in that she is described as one of the daughters (plural) of Putiel, rather than simply a daughter (singular) of Putiel. The Rabbis derived from this plurality that both sides of her family may be seen as influences on her son, Phinehas (who plays a major, heroic role in events recorded in Numbers 25). They learned about her ancestors by analyzing the name of her father Putiel, since he is not mentioned elsewhere in the Bible, and nothing else is known about him. By examining the Hebrew root of his name they deduced that he (and therefore his daughter) is descended from Jethro (Moses’ father-in-law) on one side of his family, and from Joseph on the other side (BT Sotah 43a).

—Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein

Contemporary Reflection

THE SIGNS AND WONDERS (or “plagues”) described in parashat Va-eira must have been extremely frightening for both the Egyptians who suffered and the Israelites who bore witness to God’s might for the first time. Thirteenth-century Kabbalists believed that when the Children of Israel braved the agonies of slavery and the ten displays of divine might that devastated Egypt, they did not do so alone. Rather, the Israelites knew that the Shechinah, the pre-eminent feminine aspect of God, dwelled alongside them in Egypt. Medieval Kabbalists often portrayed the feminine Shechinah as a loving mother who suffers along with her children Israel in exile. She toils with her children while they are slaves in Egypt and protects them in the wilderness after they are liberated.

This association between the Shechinah, the supernatural mother, and human mothers is given a biological dimension in the Zohar, the most popular work of medieval Kabbalah. The Zohar understands God as a power that is utterly transcendent and—at the same time—wholly immanent in our world. The Deity is comprised of the Ein Sof (“Without End”), which lies beyond the realm of human cognition, and ten lower sfirot (aspects) that emanate forth into the realm of being. Kabbalists believed that everything on earth reflects this divine realm.

The Zohar represents the realm of the sfirot in a myriad of different ways. It often compares the sfirot to an inverted tree or to the days of the week.

Perhaps the most popular symbol, however, is gufa (the body). Genesis 1:26 states that God made humans in God’s image and after God’s likeness. Kabbalists understood this verse literally. If human beings are in the form of an anthropos (human body), and if human beings were made in the image and likeness of God, then God must be an anthropos too. Human anatomy and physiology reflect this divine reality.

Hence, women and men engage in sexual intercourse because two sfirot—Tiferet (the sixth sfirah, symbolically understood as the King and Groom) and Shechinah (the tenth sfirah, symbolically understood as the Queen and Bride)—desire harmony and union. Women conceive and give birth because the Shechinah receives the effluxes or emanative powers of the higher sfirot. And women have a monthly flow because the Shechinah menstruates when she comes under the influence of the demonic “other side” (sitra achra).

Medieval halachah (Jewish law) required women to separate from their husbands for twelve to fourteen days every month: the five- to seven-day period of menstruation plus another seven “clean” days. The Zohar traces the source of this halachah to the myth of the Shechinah. The Zohar considers Egypt to be the ultimate symbol of the sitra achra. When the Shechinah dwells with the Children of Israel in Goshen, She becomes influenced by the “other side” and begins to menstruate. Therefore she must separate from her husband, Tiferet, for the duration of her blood flow; as a consequence, she is exiled or banished (literally niddah) from the forces of the Holy. Although her flow ends as soon as the Children of Israel flee Egypt, the Shechinah is not ritually pure yet. In keeping with the dictates of halachah, she must separate from her husband for another seven clean days. The Zohar conceives of these seven “days” as seven weeks—the seven weeks of the counting of the Omer between Passover and Shavuot.

Dairy meals on Shavuot recall the lactating Shechinah who nourishes Israel with Torah.

After forty-nine days of travel, the Shechinah and her children rest at the foot of Mount Sinai, where she at last undergoes the final purificatory ritual: immersion in a supernal mikveh (pool). Like a newly adorned bride, the ritually pure Shechinah meets her husband, Tiferet, at the crest of Mount Sinai. They engage in divine union on the eve of Shavuot. On Shavuot day, the Shechinah gives birth to the two tablets of the Covenant. Ever the devoted mother, the Shechinah gives these tablets to Moses for her children Israel (Zohar 3:96b).

The Shechinah figures prominently throughout the Zohar. Consequently, many Jews understand Kabbalah to be the only haven for gender equality in rabbinic Judaism. Unfortunately, this is not the case. Indeed, it would be extraordinary if it were. The Zohar is the product of a 13th-century worldview. Its author, Moses de León, and his circle lived in a world in which women's physical and intellectual inferiority was believed to have been proven scientifically. It would have been inconceivable for them to develop a mythology of the Shechinah that defied societal norms. Hence, the Shechinah is most often represented as a passive vessel with "nothing of her own." When she acts righteously, she sometimes changes gender and becomes male; when she comes under the sway of the sitra achra, she always remains female.

There are passages, however, that we can read as more sympathetic to feminist views. When we read the Zohar through the prism of history, we can differentiate between the different shades of prejudice to create a new meaning. The Kabbalistic story of the Shechinah's exodus from Egypt is a case in point. There are many troubling notions in this passage—the association between menstruation and demonic possession being one of the most egregious. Nonetheless, valuable insights that can enhance our spirituality are embedded in this story. The Shechinah as caring mother, basing the Omer on a female biological function, and the notion of the giving of Torah (matan Torah) as a birth are notions that we can reclaim and make our own. The notion that the Shechinah gave birth to the Torah tablets gives an entirely new meaning to the notion of "Torah from Sinai." Indeed, I believe that the custom of eating dairy on Shavuot can be traced to this very myth. After all, dairy foods symbolize the lactating Shechinah who nourishes her children Israel with the Torah.

—Sharon Koren

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

Disquisition

Chana Bloch

Exodus 6:3

One day I dared to put the O back in G-d.

I watched Him bulge to God—paunchy, respectable and sad.

I brooded about my heresy until I guessed that God who loves the circle best only to find our angularity might after all not mind.

He'd take it to heart, perhaps,
if I chose to drop the caps.

But O that fine round O fleshed out from the scrawny spine of a minus sign—or would He object that O was zero,
taking Him in vain?

God knows,
an O is an O is an O,
and slyly checks
our tic-tac-toe with His wry X.

I Spread Out God's Names in Front of Me

Rivka Miriam (transl. Linda Stern Zisquit)

Exodus 6:3

I spread out God's names in front of me
on the floor of my chilly room.
The name by which I called him when his spirit breathed in me.

And the name by which I called him when I was a young girl.

The name by which I called him when I was given to a man.

And the name when I was again permissible to all.

The name by which I called him when my parents were a roof to me. And the name when I had no ceiling.

The name by which I called him so that I would fear him. And the name by which I called him so that I would not be afraid.

The name by which I called him so that he would remember me. And the name so that he would refrain from remembering.

In the heat of day I will prostrate myself on the floor of my chilly room.

NOTE

G-d. God's sacred name is revealed to Moses in Exodus 6:3. In order to protect the sanctity of the divine name, some Jews write "G-d" rather than "God." The poet uses humor to challenge this custom.

Elishba Speaks

Sue Levi Elwell

Exodus 6:23

Aaron bathes and anoints.
I prepare his priestly raiment.
I sew fine linen with bone needles, smoothing
the folds as I go.
I take great care to keep my bleeding fingers from soiling the garments.

They teach that blood defiles.
He stays away from me when it flows.
I know that my bright blood is life.
In my strength, those nights, I sleep alone.

Aaron bathes and anoints. I, too, bathe.
I keep his priestly garments, and our sheets
white and pure.
Thus we each serve the Source of All.

God, Take Me By Your Hand

Etty Hillesum (transl. Arnold J. Pomerans)

Exodus 6:12

God, take me by Your hand. I shall follow You dutifully, and not resist too much. I shall evade none of the tempests life has in store for me, I shall try to face it all as best I can. But now and then grant me a short respite. I shall never again assume, in my innocence, that any peace that comes my way will be eternal. I shall accept all the inevitable tumult and struggle. I delight in warmth and security, but I shall not rebel if I have to suffer cold, should You so decree. I shall follow wherever Your hand leads me and shall try not to be afraid. I shall try to spread some of my warmth, of my genuine love for others, wherever I go.

from The Nursing Father

Alicia Suskin Ostriker

Child of compassion, child of wrath. Moses is Egyptian, he is Hebrew, he is both/neither, he is insider/outsider, he is compressed/torn. Child of the mothers in the world of the fathers. He is the locus of gain/loss, he is where another division begins. Between the God of the universe and the God of a tribe, between inclusion and exclusion, between the imperative of liberty and the imperative of law, explodes Moses. What we know about him is exactly nothing, exactly everything, he is a fierce mystery.

from Passover

Linda Pastan

Exodus 7:8–9:35

Far from Egypt, I have sighted blood, have heard the throaty mating of frogs.
My city knows vermin, animals loose in hallways,
boils, sickness, hail.
In the suburban gardens
seventeen year locusts rise from their heavy beds in small explosions of sod.
Darkness of newsprint.
My son, my son.

Exodus

EXODUS 10:1–13:16

Power, Plagues, Passover

PARASHAT Bo (“go”) features three final signs from God (locusts, darkness, and the slaying of the first-born), following directly after the first seven signs in the previous parashah. (Although in English parlance this series of events is commonly called “the Ten Plagues,” the Hebrew text refers to them mainly as “signs,” “marvels,” or “wonders”; see further at 11:1.) Then the narrative from which this book takes its English name reaches its climax as the Israelites’ exodus from Egypt begins. Framing the account of the last sign and the hurried flight from Egypt are instructions for the (annual) passover sacrifice and the Festival of Matzot (Unleavened Bread).

An overriding theme in this Torah portion is God’s omnipotence. The signs are meant to prove to Pharaoh, all Egypt, and the burgeoning people of Israel that Israel’s God reigns supreme. Because of Pharaoh’s stubborn willfulness, God’s determination to respond to the outcry of the oppressed Israelites (3:7) ultimately leads to a loud cry in Egypt as the anguish of the death of every first-born male echoes in the night (11:6; 12:30).

The theme of remembrance also recurs throughout this parashah. Several passages emphasize the importance of teaching future generations about how God saved the Israelites (10:2; 12:26–27; 13:14–15). Also, a number of apparently existing rites—including the Festival of Matzot (12:14; 13:3), t’fillin (13:9, 16), and the redemption of the first-born (13:14–15)—are linked to the Exodus to institutionalize its memory.

Many readers of this parashah wonder about the historicity of the Exodus story. It is important to remember that these events are not recounted as verifiable history. Rather, the narrative describes a people’s collective memory of their past. As such, the historical accuracy of the account is unimportant, for it has no bearing on the story’s core message or themes. (See Sh’mot, Contemporary Reflection, p. 326.)

The theme of remembrance recurs throughout this parashah.

We find a few scattered references to women throughout this parashah. When Moses negotiates with Pharaoh, he insists that every Israeliite—including the women—be permitted to leave Egypt to worship God (10:9). Further on, as the Israelites prepare to leave, women are instructed to “borrow” objects of silver and gold from their female Egyptian neighbors (11:2). (They will later donate such materials for the Tabernacle; 35:22–29.) In addition, Moses warns the people that every Egyptian first-born male will die—even the oldest child of “the slave girl who is behind the millstones” (11:5).

The image of her grinding grain into flour reflects the role women played in the complex production of bread (see at 11:5 and 12:8). Although we repeatedly read about unleavened bread in this parashah (12:8, 14–20, 39; 13:3–8), the text does not mention who makes the matzah. Textual and archeological evidence suggests that women would have baked the unleavened cakes of dough that are part of the story of the Israelites' fleeing from Egypt. As an integral part of each Israelite "family" and "household" (12:3), women experience the long-awaited Exodus, the unprecedented redemptive act that becomes the foundation for the relationship between God and Israel.

—Sharon R. Keller

Outline—

I. MOSES AND GOD VERSUS PHARAOH, CONTINUED

Two More Signs from God (10:1–29)

- A. Eight: locusts (vv. 1–20)
- B. Nine: darkness (vv. 21–29)

II. RITUAL PREPARATIONS FOR THE EXODUS (11:1–12:28)

- A. Announcement of the tenth sign (11:1–10)
- B. Instructions for the Passover sacrifice (12:1–13)
- C. Regulations for the Feast of Matzot (12:14–20)
- D. Instructions for the Passover sacrifice delivered to the elders (12:21–28)

III. THE TENTH SIGN

Slaying of the First-born (12:29–36)

IV. THE EXODUS FROM EGYPT BEGINS (12:37–42)

V. RITUAL REMEMBRANCES OF THE EXODUS (12:43–13:16)

- A. Laws of the Passover offering (12:43–51)
- B. Consecration of first-born males, Feast of Matzot, and t'fillin (13:1–16)

10:1

Then said to Moses, “Go to Pharaoh. For I have hardened his heart and the hearts of his courtiers, in order that I may display these My signs among them,² and that you may recount in the hearing of your children and of your children’s children how I made a mockery of the Egyptians and וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה בָּא אֶל-פְּרֻעָה כִּי-אֲנִי הַכְּבָרָתִי אֶת-לְבָבוֹ וְאֶת-לְבָב עֲבָדָיו לְמַעַן שְׁתִּי אֶתֵּתִי אֱלֹה בְּקָרְבָו: ² וְלְמַעַן תְּסִפֵּר בְּאַזְנֵי בָנֶךָ וּבְאַזְנֵךָ אֶת אֲשֶׁר-הַתְּعַלְלָתִי בְמַצְלִים וְאֶת-אֶתְתִּי אֲשֶׁר-

Moses and God versus Pharaoh, continued

TWO MORE SIGNS FROM GOD (10:1–29)

The previous parashah ended after a series of seven signs of divine power. According to the narrator, Pharaoh reacted to these signs by “stiffening” his “heart” (that is, his will). Following the 5th sign, God began to “harden” Pharaoh’s heart. Nevertheless, his free will remained (9:35).

Now, after Moses and Aaron again warn Pharaoh—and God once again hardens his heart—the east wind ushers in an unprecedented swarm of locusts. The grand scale of this 8th sign underscores that it is a one-time, cataclysmic event aimed to demonstrate God’s supremacy.

Pharaoh is unable to relent. This will lead to a 9th sign—darkness—which is announced and performed without confrontation with, or warning to, Pharaoh (just like the 3rd and 6th signs; see 8:12–15 and 9:8–11).

EIGHT: LOCUSTS (10:1–20)

1. “I have hardened his heart.” A major theme of this parashah is God’s omnipotence, especially in relation to the pharaoh. The narrator insists on showing that God completely controls all that is happening, as exemplified by the way God hardens Pharaoh’s heart. (Earlier, Pharaoh hardens his own heart, as in 8:15.)

“hardened.” Literally, God “made [Pharaoh’s heart] heavy” (from the root k-b-d, “to be heavy”). The image of the heavy heart may relate to the ancient Egyptian conception that in the afterlife, when weighed on the scales of judgment, the virtuous soul is found to have a heart that is lighter than a feather, whereas the sinner has a heavy heart.

2. “that you may recount.” The memory of the bondage in and redemption from Egypt is central to Israel’s covenantal relationship with God, as seen in the prologue to the Decalogue (20:2). Moses is addressed in the singular here, as the one who will begin the process of the retelling of the ► Rituals . . . allow us to see a connection between blood, sacrifice, and family ties.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 372

► The new mother’s desperate cry was so great that it reached heaven.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 372

► God’s hardening of Pharaoh’s heart presents a theological problem on two levels.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 374

► Miriam, her head hot in her hands, wept / as the city swelled / with the wail of Egypt’s women.

VOICES ► 376

how I displayed My signs among them—in order that you may know that I am יְהוָה.³” So Moses and Aaron went to Pharaoh and said to him, “Thus says יְהוָה, the God of the Hebrews, ‘How long will you refuse to humble yourself before Me? Let My people go that they may worship Me.⁴ For if you refuse to let My people go, tomorrow I will bring locusts on your territory.⁵ They shall cover the surface of the land, so that no one will be able to see the land. They shall devour the surviving remnant that was left to you after the hail; and they shall eat away all your trees that grow in the field.⁶ Moreover, they shall fill your palaces and the houses of all your courtiers and of all the Egyptians—something that neither your fathers nor fathers’ fathers have seen from the day they appeared on earth to this day.’” With that he turned and left Pharaoh’s presence.

⁷Pharaoh’s courtiers said to him, “How long shall this one be a snare to us? Let a delegation go to worship their God! יְהוָה? Are you not yet aware that Egypt is lost?” ⁸So Moses and Aaron were brought back to Pharaoh and he said to them, “Go, worship your God! Who are the ones to go?” ⁹Moses replied, “We will all go, regardless of social

שָׁמַתִּי בְּם וַיַּדְעָתֶם כִּי־אָנִי יְהוָה: ³ וַיַּבֵּא
מֹשֶׁה וְאַחֲרֵן אֶל־פְּרֻעָה וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֶלְיוֹ פָּה־
אָמַר יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי הָעָבָרִים עַד־מַתִּי מְאֹנֶת־
לְעָנוֹת מִפְנֵי שְׁלָחָעִם וַיַּעֲבֹדָנִי: ⁴ כִּי אָמַ-
מָאַן אַפְּהָ לְשַׁלֵּחַ אֶת־עַמִּי הַנְּגִינִי מִבְּיאָ
מַתָּר אַרְבָּה בְּגַבְלָךְ: ⁵ וְכַסְתָּה אֶת־עַיִן
הָאָרֶץ וְלֹא יוּכֶל לְרֹאָת אֶת־הָאָרֶץ וְאֶכְלָ- אֶת־יִתְּחַרְתָּ הַפְּלָטָה הַנְּשָׁאָרָת לִכְמָן־
הַבָּרֶד וְאֶכְלָ אֶת־כָּל־הָעַזְצָמָמָה לִכְמָן־
הַשְׂדָה: ⁶ וּמְלָאוּ בְּתִיר וּבְתִּיעַנְיָה כָּל־עַבְדִּיךְ
וּבְתִּיעַנְיָה כָּל־מִצְרָיִם אֲשֶׁר לְאַרְאֵן אֶבְתָּחֵל
וְאֶבְתָּחֵל מִיּוֹם הַיּוֹתָם עַל־הָאָדָמָה
עַד דַּיּוֹם הַזֹּה וַיַּפְּנֵן וַיַּצֵּא מִעַם פְּרֻעָה:
⁷ וַיֹּאמְרוּ עַבְדֵי פְּרֻעָה אֶלְיוֹ עַד־מַתִּי
יְהֹוָה זֶה לָנוּ לְמוֹקֵשׁ שְׁלֹחַ אֶת־הָעָנָשִׁים
וַיַּעֲבֹדוּ אֶת־יְהֹוָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם הַטָּרָם תְּדַעַ בְּ
אֶבְדָּה מִצְרָיִם: ⁸ וַיַּוְשֵׁב אֶת־מֹשֶׁה וְאֶת־
אַחֲרֵן אֶל־פְּרֻעָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְהָם לְכֻם עַבְדָּו
אֶת־יְהֹוָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם מִי וּמִי הַהְלָקִים:
⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה מִשְׁהָ בְּנֵעֲנִינוּ וּבְקָנִינוּ נִלְקָ enslavement and exodus to subsequent generations in order to ensure that these events do not fade from Israelite memory.

“in order that you may know that I am יְהוָה.³” As with the other signs, part of God’s stated motivation for these events is to demonstrate and authenticate the divine Presence, thus eliciting recognition of God’s power from both the Egyptians and the Israelites.

5. “no one will be able to see.” This phrase refers not only to the 8th sign but also foreshadows the 9th sign (see next section). For further foreshadowing, see at v. 17, below.

7. “a delegation.” Heb. ha-anashim (traditionally “the men”), which the present translation understands as referring to a group’s representatives. The courtiers’ plea to Pharaoh is to dispatch the Israelite elders or officials—presumably men; thus Pharaoh asks for a specific list (v. 8).

9. “We will all go.” In his reply, Moses shows that the courtiers’ limited offer is unacceptable: he includes all the people as well as the livestock. Moses and Aaron had originally resorted to a ruse, telling Pharaoh that they wanted to leave only in order to worship their God at a distance of three days’ journey into the wilderness (see 5:1, 3). Since they have no intention of returning to Egypt, no one and nothing can be left behind.

“regardless of social station.” Literally, “with our underlings and with our elders” or “with our youths and with our old folks”; the Hebrew terms can refer either to socioeconomic status or to age.

This type of expression is called a “merism,” meaning that the figure of speech uses two extremes station; we will go with our sons and daughters, our flocks and herds—for we must observe יהוה's festival.”¹⁰ But he said to them, “יהוה be with you—the same as I mean to let your dependents go with you! Clearly, you are bent on mischief.¹¹ No! You gentlemen go and worship יהוה, since that is what you want.” And they were expelled from Pharaoh's presence.

¹²Then said to Moses, “Hold out your arm over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come upon the land of Egypt and eat up all the grasses in the land, whatever the hail has left.”¹³ So Moses held out his rod over the land of Egypt, and יהוה drove an east wind over the land all that day and all night; and when morning came, the east wind had brought the locusts.¹⁴ Locusts invaded all the land of Egypt and settled within all the territory of Egypt in a thick mass; never before had there been so many, nor will there ever be so many again.¹⁵ They hid all the land from view, and the land was darkened; and they ate up all the grasses of the field and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left, so that nothing green was left, of tree or grass of the field, in all the land of Egypt.

¹⁶Pharaoh hurriedly summoned Moses and Aaron and said, “I stand guilty before your God יהוה and before you.¹⁷ Forgive my offense just this once, and plead with your God יהוה that this death but be removed from me.”¹⁸ So he left Pharaoh's presence and pleaded with יהוה. יהוה caused a shift to a very strong west wind, which lifted the locusts and hurled them into the Sea of Reeds; not a

בְּנֵינוּ וּבְנֹתָנוּ בַּצְאָנוּ וּבְקָרְנוּ נֶלֶךְ כִּי
חֲגִיהָה לָנוּ: ¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְהִי כֵּן
יְהֹוָה עַמְּכֶם כַּאֲשֶׁר אָשַׁלֵּח אֶתְכֶם וְאַתֶּ
טֶפְכֶם רָאוּ כִּי רָעָה נִגְדֵּפְנִיכֶם: ¹¹ לֹא בָּן
לְכֹורְנָא הָגְבָּרִים וּעֲבָרוּ אֶתְיְהֹוָה כִּי אָתָּה
אַתֶּם מַבְקָשִׁים וַיִּגְרַשׁ אֶתְכֶם מִאֶת פְּנֵי
פָּרֻעַה: ¹²

12 וַיֹּאמֶר יְהֹוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה נְתָה יְדְךָ עַל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם בְּאֶרְבָּה וַיַּעַל עַל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם
וַיַּאֲכַל אֶת-כָּל-עַשְׂבָּה הָאָרֶץ אֵת בְּל-אֲשֶׁר
הַשְׁאֵיר הַבָּרֶד: ¹³ וַיַּט מֹשֶׁה אֶת-מְטָהָה
עַל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם וַיְהִי נִגְהַג רֹוח-קָדִים
בָּאָרֶץ בְּל-הַיּוֹם הַהוּא וּכְל-הַלִּילָה הַבָּקָר
הַיּוֹה וּרְוֹתָה קָקְלִים נִשְׁאָה אֶת-הָאָרֶבֶה:
¹⁴ וַיַּעַל הָאֶרֶבֶה עַל בָּل-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם וַיַּנְחַ
בְּכָל גָּבוֹל מִצְרָיִם בְּבָד מַאֲדָל פְּנֵיו לֹא-
הַיּוֹה כָּן אֶרֶבֶה כִּמְהוּ וְאַחֲרָיו לֹא יַהְיֵה כָּן:
¹⁵ וַיַּכְסֵס אֶת-עֵין בְּל-הָאָרֶץ וַתַּחַשֵּׁר הָאָרֶץ
וַיַּאֲכַל אֶת-כָּל-עַשְׂבָּה הָאָרֶץ וְאֶת בְּל-פְּרִ
הָעֵז אֲשֶׁר הַזֹּתוּר הַבָּרֶד וְלֹא-נוֹתֵר בְּל-יַרְקָ
בָּעֵץ וּבְעַשְׂבָּה הַשְׁדָה בְּכָל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם:
¹⁶ וַיִּמְהַרְךְ פָּרֻעַה לִקְרָא לְמֹשֶׁה וְלְאַהֲרֹן:
וַיֹּאמֶר חַטְאָתִי לְיְהֹוָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם וְלִכְמָם:
¹⁷ וַעֲתָה שְׁאָנָּא חַטְאָתִי אֶרְךְ הַפְּעָם
וְהַעֲתָרוֹת לְיְהֹוָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם וַיִּטְרֵל מַעַלְיָה רַק
אֶת-הַמֹּות הַזֹּהָה: ¹⁸ וַיַּצְא מִעַם פָּרֻעַה
וַיַּעֲתַר אֶל-יְהֹוָה: ¹⁹ וַיַּהַפֵּר יְהֹוָה רֹוח-קָדִים
חַזָּק מַאֲדָן וַיָּשַׁאַל אֶת-הָאֶרֶבֶה וַיִּתְקַעֵּהוּ to convey a totality, as if it said “and everybody in between.”

“with our sons and daughters.” This is a second expression that Moses uses to signal inclusiveness in the proposed religious observance.

13. east wind. Later, when the Israelites cross the Sea of Reeds, God will again bring an east wind to turn the water into dry ground (see at 14:21; also Numbers 11:31).

17. this death. Thus the 8th sign anticipates the final and most crushing divine act, the death of the first-born sons (11:1–10; 12:29–36); compare at v. 5, above.

single locust remained in all the territory of Egypt.²⁰ But יהוה stiffened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let the Israelites go.

²¹ Then יהוה said to Moses, "Hold out your arm toward the sky that there may be darkness upon the land of Egypt, a darkness that can be touched."²² Moses held out his arm toward the sky and thick darkness descended upon all the land of Egypt for three days.²³ People could not see one another, and for three days no one could move about; but all the Israelites enjoyed light in their dwellings.

²⁴ Pharaoh then summoned Moses and said, "Go, worship יהוה! Only your flocks and your herds shall be left behind; even your dependents may go with you."²⁵ But Moses said, "You yourself must provide us with sacrifices and burnt offerings to offer up to our God; ²⁶ our own livestock, too, shall go along with us—not a hoof shall remain behind: for we must select from it for the worship of our God; and we shall not know with what we are to worship יהוה until we arrive there."²⁷ But יהוה stiffened Pharaoh's heart and he would not agree to let them go.²⁸ Pharaoh said to him, "Be gone from me! Take care not to see me again, for the moment you look upon my face you shall die."²⁹ And Moses replied, "You have spoken rightly. I shall not see your face again!"

NINE: DARKNESS (10:21–29)

23. People could not see one another... but all the Israelites enjoyed light. Presumably the text's ancient audience would have understood such darkness as a reflection of the impotence of Re, the Egyptians' sun god. Thus this sign implicitly proves that the God of Israel is stronger than the gods of the Egyptians.

24. "even your dependents may go with you." Despite Pharaoh's earlier restriction that only the men leave (v. 11, rendered there as "you gentlemen"), he now relents and acquiesces to Moses' demand that all the people be allowed to leave (v. 9).

יְמָה סֹוףׁ לֹא נִשְׁאַר אֶרְבָּה אֶחָד בְּכָל גִּבּוֹל
מִצְרָיִם: ²⁰ וַיַּחֲזַק יְהֹוָה אֶת־לִבּ פְּרֻעָה וְלֹא
שָׁלַח אֶת־בָּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: פָ
וַיֹּאמֶר יְהֹוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה נָתָה יְהֹוָה עַל־
הַשְׁמִים וַיְהִי חִשְׁבָּה עַל־אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם וַיִּמְשֵׁךְ
חִשְׁבָּה: ²² וַיַּטְמֵשׁ מֹשֶׁה אֶת־יְדָיו עַל־הַשְׁמִים
וַיְהִי חִשְׁבָּה־אֱפָלָה בְּכָל־אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם
שֶׁלְשָׁת יְמִים: ²³ לְאֶרְאֹו אִישׁ אֶת־אָחִיו
וְלְאֶקְמוּ אִישׁ מִתְחַתְּיו שֶׁלְשָׁת יְמִים
וְלְכָל־בָּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל הִיה אָוֶר בְּמוֹשְׁבָתָם:
²⁴ וַיִּקְרָא פְּרֻעָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה וַיֹּאמֶר לְכָל־
עֲבָדָיו אֶת־יְהֹוָה רַק צָנָכָם וּבְקָרְבָּם יִצְאֵג
גַּם־טְפָכָם יַלְרֵעֶמֶךְ: ²⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה גַּם־
אַתָּה תַּתְנוּ בִּידְנֵינוּ זְבִחִים וּעַלְתָּן
לִיהֹוָה אֶל־הַדְּנֵינוּ: ²⁶ וְגַם־מִקְנֵנוּ וְלֹהֶה עַמְּנֵנוּ
לֹא תִשְׁאַר פֶּרֶשׁ בַּיּוֹם מִפְנֵנוּ נִקְחֵל עַבְדָּת
יְהֹוָה אֶל־הַדְּנֵינוּ וְאֶנְחֵנוּ לְאַנְיָעֵמָה־נְעָבֵד
אֶת־יְהֹוָה עַד־בָּאָנוּ שְׁמָה: ²⁷ וַיַּחֲזַק יְהֹוָה
אֶת־לִבּ פְּרֻעָה וְלֹא אָבָה לְשִׁלְחוּם:
²⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר־לֹא פְּרֻעָה לְךָ מַעַלְיָה הַשְׁמָר לְךָ
אֶל־אֲסָף רְאוֹת פָּנֵי בַּיּוֹם רְאַתְּךָ פָּנֵי
תְּמִוּתָה: ²⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה כִּי דָבְרַת לְאַיִלָּסֶף עוֹד רְאוֹת פָּנֶיךָ: פָ

"dependents." Heb. taf, a flexible term whose sense depends on what it complements. Since Moses previously specified that everyone would go, including "our youths and our old folks" and "our sons and daughters" (v. 9; see comments there), its scope must include the women as well as children. Most individuals in this category would be economically productive members of their household.

29. "You have spoken rightly. I shall not see your face again." In spite of this statement, Moses continues speaking to Pharaoh (11:4–8). Moses and Aaron meet with Pharaoh again when Pharaoh gives his final permission for the Israelites to leave Egypt (12:31–32).

11 And יהוה said to Moses, “I will bring but one more plague upon Pharaoh and upon Egypt; after that he shall let you go from here; indeed, when he lets you go, he will drive you out of here one and all. ²Tell the people to borrow, each man from his neighbor and each woman from hers,

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה עַד נִגְעַת אֶחָד אֲבִיא עַל־פְּרֻעָה וְעַל־מִצְרָיִם אַחֲרֵיכֶן יְשַׂלֵּחַ אֶתְכֶם מִזֶּה בְּשֶׁלַח כֵּלָה גַּרְשִׁים יְגַרֵּשׁ אֶתְכֶם מִזֶּה: ² דָּבָרִינָא בְּאַנְיִן הַעַם וַיֵּשֶׁלֶךְ אִישׁ | מֵאַת רַעֲהָיו וְאַשְׁהָ מֵאַת

Ritual Preparations for the Exodus

(11:1–12:28)

Nine signs from God in dramatic escalation have led to the present impasse: Pharaoh is unwilling to relent. However, God has already hinted at a 10th sign (4:23), and now it is announced. But before describing the execution of that sign, the narrative will pause to embed in the story two ritual acts—a Passover offering and a Feast of Matzot—that are to be commemorated annually.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE TENTH SIGN (11:1–10)

The final calamity, which is labeled a “plague” (see at 11:1), proves decisive. It is introduced at length and receives more narrative space than any of the others; the account is more dramatic and also more disturbing to modern readers. Although the Egyptians are condemned for inflicting bondage on the Israelites and attempting to kill Hebrew babies, God’s killing of innocent Egyptians may still raise theological and ethical questions for a contemporary audience. However, these concerns are not central to the biblical account. From the Bible’s perspective, the main purpose of the signs is to prove God’s might and supreme control. While recognizing the literary function and ahistorical nature of these texts helps to provide perspective on the seeming injustice of God’s actions, many nevertheless struggle with what remains for them a troubling biblical text.

i. יהוה said. This revelation to Moses interrupts the heated exchange between Moses and Phar-aoth and begins the instructions to the Israelites regarding preparations for the impending exodus. This interruption heightens the tension preceding the actual exodus from Egypt.

“plague.” Heb. nega, a term of affliction like mageifah in 9:14 and negef in 12:13, which are all customarily translated by the same English word. Such terms appear only in connection with the killing of the first-born and the hail—both of which involve a loss of human life. However, as Carol Meyers has pointed out, whenever God or the narrator describes what these calamities are intended to mean to the story’s Israelite characters—and to its Israelite audience—the term used is “signs” (otot, see 8:19), “marvels” (mof’tim, see 11:10), or “wonders” (nifla’ot, see 3:20) (Exodus, 2005, pp. 76–77). At the same time, the phrasing here (“one more plague”) suggests that all ten events generally are “plagues,” referring to how the Egyptians experience them.

2. “borrow.” The Bible gives no indication of any intention to return the Egyptians’ objects. The Hebrew word translated as “borrow” has a range of meanings, including “ask” or “demand” (see also at 3:22). To explain the Israelites’ actions, commentators connect this verse with Deuteronomy 15:13, which states that a Hebrew slave should not be set free without payment. As early as the 2nd century B.C.E., the despoiling of the Egyptians was considered recompense for the labor of bondage (Jubilees 48:18).

“each man from his neighbor and each woman from hers.” In this context, the grammatically masculine language of the first phrase alone could have been understood as gender inclusive. God’s objects of silver and gold.” יְהוָה³ disposed the Egyptians favorably toward the people. Moreover, [God’s] envoy Moses was much esteemed in the land of Egypt, among Pharaoh’s courtiers and among the people.

⁴Moses said, “Thus says יְהוָה: Toward midnight I will go forth among the Egyptians,⁵ and every [male] first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first-born of Pharaoh who sits on his throne to the first-born of the slave girl who is behind the millstones; and all the first-born of the cattle.⁶ And there shall be a loud cry in all the land of Egypt, such as has never been or will ever be again;⁷ but not a dog shall snarl at any of the Israelites, at human or beast—in order that you may know that makes a distinction between Egypt and Israel.

⁸“Then all these courtiers of yours shall come down to me and bow low to me, saying, ‘Depart, instructions thus go out of their way to specify that the Israelite men are to interact with the Egyptian men, and the Israelite women are to deal with the Egyptian women.

“neighbor.” Presumably Egyptians, not Israelites (see 12:35), thus implying that the Israelites lived in close proximity to at least some Egyptians. See also at 3:22.

3. disposed the Egyptians favorably. One of the main points of the account of the signs is that God is all-powerful: God rules heaven and earth and all therein, including the Egyptians. Each biblical reference to this episode underscores that the Egyptians willingly gave their belongings to the Israelites as a result of God’s intervention, meaning that the silver and gold was not plunder, but freely given (see 3:19–22; 12:35–36; Psalm 105:36–38).

5. “every [male] first-born.” This translation clarifies that the plague will target specifically first-born sons, not daughters.

“from the first-born of Pharaoh...to the first-born of the slave girl.” Another merism (see at 10:9): the intent of this act is to affect all Egyptian

רְעוֹתָה בְּלִי-כֶּסֶף וּבְכַלְיֵי זָהָב: ³ וַיִּתְּן יְהוָה אֶת-חַדֵּן הָעָם בְּעִינֵי מִצְרָיִם גַּם | הָאִישׁ מִשְׁהָ גָּדוֹל מִאֶד בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם בְּעִינֵי עֲבָדִי-פְּרֻעָה וּבְעִינֵי הָעָם: ⁴

וַיֹּאמֶר מִשְׁהָ כִּי אָמַר יְהוָה בְּחִזְצָה הַלִּילָה אָנָּי יוֹצֵא בְּתוֹךְ מִצְרָיִם: ⁵ וְמֵת בְּלִבְכּוֹר בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם מִבּוֹר פְּרֻעָה הַיֹּשֵׁב עַל-בֵּטָאוֹ עַד בְּכּוֹר הַשְׁפָחָה אֲשֶׁר אַחֲרַ הַרְחִים וְכֹל בְּכּוֹר בְּהַמָּה: ⁶ וְהִתְהַגֵּד עֲזָקָה גָּדוֹלָה בְּכָל-אָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם אֲשֶׁר כִּמְהֹוד לֹא נְהִיתָה וְכִמְהֹוד לֹא תִּסְפֶּף: ⁷ וְלֹכֶל | בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לֹא יַחֲרִץ-כָּלֵב לְשָׁנוֹ לִמְאֵישׁ וּעְדִי מִצְרָיִם וּבֵין יִשְׂרָאֵל:

⁸ וַיַּרְא כָּל-עֲבָדָיו אֱלֹהָ אֵלִי וְהַשְׁתַּחוּוּ-לֵי לְאָמֵר צֹא אַתֶּה וּכְלַ-הָעָם אֲשֶׁר-בְּרָגְלֵיכָה households, from the highest male aristocracy to the lowest female slave. The Torah is not concerned with the guilt or innocence of any specific victim, nor with the ethical implications of blanket punishments; the focus remains resolutely on exemplifying God’s supreme power.

behind the millstones. Grinding grain to make bread for household consumption was likely the task of free women, bondwomen, or bondmen. On some large estates in Egypt, men first would crush grain in a mortar to make it ready for the women who then would grind it into flour. In ordinary peasant households, women likely performed all the procedures necessary for transforming grain into bread. In the Bible, grinding stones are associated with women (Judges 9:53); when young men carry them, the world has gone topsy-turvy (Lamentations 5:13). (See at 12:8 for more on women’s involvement in bread production.)

6. “loud cry.” The cry of the Egyptians will parallel the earlier outcry of the Israelites that God heard (3:7), the event that precipitated their salvation.

EXODUS 11:9–12:4

BO

you and all the people who follow you! After that I will depart.” And he left Pharaoh’s presence in hot anger.

⁹Now had said to Moses, “Pharaoh will not heed you, in order that My marvels may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.” ¹⁰Moses and Aaron had performed all these marvels before Pharaoh, but Yahweh had stiffened the heart of Pharaoh so that he would not let the Israelites go from his land.

12 said to Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt: ²This month shall mark for you the beginning of the months; it shall be the first of the months of the year for you. ³Speak to the community leadership of Israel and say that on the tenth of this month each of them shall take a lamb to a family, a lamb to a household. ⁴But if the house-

ואחרי־כן יצא ויצא מעם־פְּרֻעָה בְּחַרִיךְ אֲפָן: ס
וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹמֶשֶׁה לֵא־יִשְׁמַע אֶל־יכם
פְּרֻעָה לְמַעַן רַבּוֹת מַופְּתִּי בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם:
וְמַשְׁה וְאַהֲרֹן עֲשֵׂו אֶת־בְּלִיהְמַפְתִּים
הָאֱלֹהָה לִפְנֵי פְּרֻעָה וַיַּחֲזַק יְהוָה אֶת־
לֵב פְּרֻעָה וְלֹא־שָׁלַח אֶת־בְּנֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל
מִאָרֶץ: ס

יב וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה יְהוָה אֱלֹמֶשֶׁה וְאֱלֹא־אֲהָרֹן
בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם לְאָמֵר: ² הַחֲדֵשׁ הַוָּה לְכֶם
רָאשׁ חֲדָשִׁים רָאשׁוֹן הוּא לְכֶם לְחֶדֶשִׁי
הַשָּׁנָה: ³ דָּבָרו אֱלֹהִים עֲדָת יִשְׂרָאֵל לְאָמֵר
בַּעֲשֵׂר לְחֶדֶשׁ הַזֶּה וַיַּקְרְבוּ לְהַמִּשְׁבֵּת שָׁה
לְבֵית־אֶבֶת שָׁה לְבֵית: ⁴ וְאִם־יִמְעַט הַבְּיִת

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE PASSEOVER SACRIFICE (12:1–13)

The narrative is interrupted at this point, thus heightening the suspense and drama of the story. The account of the plague continues in v. 29, after God gives instructions for the preparation of the Passover sacrifice, the application of blood to the doorposts and lintels, and the Feast of Matzot—all means of remembering and commemorating God’s signal acts.

1–2. This instruction depicts the exodus from Egypt as the start of a new epoch in Israelite history and in the relationship of the Israelites with God. This foundational event is memorialized by a reformation of the calendar so that the year starts in the spring, the time of the Exodus. Exactly one year later, the Tabernacle will be erected (40:17), again highlighting this date as one on which momentous events occurred.

2. This month. Although unnamed here, the month is later identified as Abib (13:4; 23:15; 34:18; Deuteronomy 16:1), meaning “month of new grain”; still later it is called Nisan (Esther 3:7).

first of the months of the year. Rosh HaShanah, the first day of the seventh month, is now celebrated as the Jewish New Year; however, the Bible simply refers to it as a holiday commemorated with a shofar blast (see Leviticus 23:24; Numbers 29:1). In an agricultural society, both the spring and the fall could be considered new years, so some scholars see these two festivals as a way of combining competing ancient beliefs regarding the beginning of the year.

3–6. The passover sacrifice is not a typical offering, for each family is to prepare, slaughter, and consume its own lamb (or kid—the Hebrew term applies to the young of both sheep and goats; see v. 5) as part of the offering. Some believe that this was an earlier apotropaic (or protective) custom that here becomes associated with the Exodus.

3. family . . . household. Heb. beit avot and bayit, both of which can refer to a small (6- to 12-person) family unit, as probably here, or to a larger clan or lineage group. The language here and in v. 21 (mishpachot, translated there as “families”) signals that women were included in the passover sacrifice. See also Deuteronomy 16:16, in which only men are obligated to celebrate the Passover festival.

hold is too small for a lamb, let it share one with a neighbor who dwells nearby, in proportion to the number of persons: you shall contribute for the lamb according to what each household will eat.⁵ Your lamb shall be without blemish, a yearling male; you may take it from the sheep or from the goats. ⁶You shall keep watch over it until the fourteenth day of this month; and all the assembled congregation of the Israelites shall slaughter it at twilight. ⁷They shall take some of the blood and put it on the two doorposts and the lintel of the houses in which they are to eat it. ⁸They shall eat the flesh that same night; they shall eat it roasted over the fire, with unleavened bread and with bitter herbs. ⁹Do not eat any of it raw, or cooked in any way with water, but roasted—head, legs, and entrails—over the fire. ¹⁰You shall not leave any of it over until morning; if any of it is left until morning, you shall burn it.

¹¹This is how you shall eat it: your loins girded, your sandals on your feet, and your staff in your

מִהְיוֹת מֶשֶׁה וְלַקְחֵה הוּא וְשָׁכְנוּ הַקָּרְבָּן אֶל־
בֵּיתוּ בְּמִכְסַת נְפָשָׁת אִישׁ לְפִי אֲכָלוּ תְּכַסּוּ
עַל־הַשֶּׁה: ⁵ שֶׁהָ תְּמִימָם זָכָר בְּנֵשָׁנָה יְהִיה
לְכֶם מִן־הַכְּבָשִׁים וּמִן־הַעַזִּים תַּקְחֵוּ:
⁶ וְהִיא לְכֶם לְמִשְׁמְרַת עַד אַרְבָּעָה עָשָׂר
יּוֹם לְחַדְשֵׁה הַזֶּה וְשָׁחֹטוּ אֹתוֹ בְּלִקְנָל
עַדְתִּי־יִשְׂרָאֵל בֵּין הָעָרִבִּים: ⁷ וְלַקְרָבֵן מִן־
הַלְּמִים וְנַתְנָוּ עַל־שְׁתֵּי הַמְּזוֹזֹת וּעַל־
הַמְּשֻׁקּוֹף עַל הַבְּתִים אֲשֶׁר־יִאֱכַלוּ אֹתוֹ
בָּהֶם: ⁸ וְאָכְלֵי אֲתִיהָבָשׂ בְּלִילָה הַזֹּה
צְלִי־אָשׂ וּמִצּוֹת עַל־מְרֻרִים יִאָכְלֵהוּ:
⁹ אֶל־תִּאֱכַלֵּן מִמְּנוֹ נָא וּבְשָׁל מְבָשָׁל
בְּפִים כִּי אִם־צְלִי־אָשׂ רָאשׂוֹ עַל־בְּרָעִיו
וְעַל־קָרְבּוֹ: ¹⁰ וְלֹא־תַזְהִירוּ מִמְּנוֹ עַד־בָּקָר
וְהַנְּגַרְגַּר מִמְּנוֹ עַד־בָּקָר בְּאֵשׁ תְּשַׁرְפֵּוּ:
¹¹ וְכֹה תִּאֱכַלֵּן אֹתוֹ מִתְנִיכָּם חֲגִים
נְעַלְיכֶם בְּרָגְלֵיכֶם וּמְקַלְיכֶם בִּידֵיכֶם

5. yearling male. The male animal is selected for sacrifice not because it is considered more valuable than a female. Rather, the female animals are preserved for breeding purposes and for milk production.

7–13. Blood, as a vital force of life, has protective powers in biblical thought. Some scholars maintain that the blood is to be applied to the doorframe of the house to protect the point where evil might enter; therefore, no one is to pass through the doorway (v. 22). The blood must be applied to the doorway before nightfall so that the sign will be apparent to God, thus ensuring that the Israelites will remain safe.

8. with unleavened bread and with bitter herbs. No explanation is provided for the instruction to eat unleavened bread and bitter herbs along with the passover sacrifice. Hence, many scholars believe that this was a pre-existent custom that here becomes associated with the Exodus. The source of this custom is unknown, but many scholars associate the bitter herbs with a sharp seasoning that might have been used in ancient times. According to the Mishnah (P'sachim 10:5) and the Passover Haggadah, the bitter herbs symbolize the bitterness of the enforced labor (Exodus 1:14).

Although the Bible does not give much information about food preparation, several texts (Genesis 18:6; I Samuel 8:13; II Samuel 13:8; Ecclesiastes 12:3), as well as extra-biblical and ethnographic evidence, suggest that women usually prepared bread. See also at 11:5, 16:3, and Leviticus 26:26.

11. The instructions in this verse indicate that the Israelites are to be prepared for an imminent departure. A reference to speed appears again in vv. 33–34, which describe the Egyptians' impatience for the Israelites to leave, and in v. 39, which links the unleavened bread to the Israelites' hasty departure.

hand; and you shall eat it hurriedly: it is a passover offering to יהוה. ¹²For that night I will go through the land of Egypt and strike down every [male] first-born in the land of Egypt, both human and beast; and I will mete out punishments to all the gods of Egypt, I יהוה. ¹³And the blood on the houses where you are staying shall be a sign for you: when I see the blood I will pass over you, so that no plague will destroy you when I strike the land of Egypt.

¹⁴This day shall be to you one of remembrance: you shall celebrate it as a festival to יהוה throughout the ages; you shall celebrate it as an institution for all time. ¹⁵Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread; on the very first day you shall remove leaven from your houses, for whoever eats leavened bread from the first day to the seventh day, that person shall be cut off from Israel.

¹⁶You shall celebrate a sacred occasion on the first day, and a sacred occasion on the seventh day; no work at all shall be done on them; only what every person is to eat, that alone may be prepared for you. ¹⁷You shall observe the [Feast of] Unleavened Bread, for on this very day I brought your ranks out of the land of Egypt; you shall observe this day throughout the ages as an institution for all time. ¹⁸In the first month, from the fourteenth day of the month at evening, you shall eat unleavened bread until the twenty-first day of the month at וְאָכַלְתֶּם אֹתוֹ בְּחַפּוֹז פֵּسֶחׁ הַוָּא לִיהְוָה:

¹² וְעַבְרַתִּי בְּאָרֶץ־מִצְרָיִם בְּלִילָה הַזֹּה
 וְהַבִּיטִי כָּל־בָּכוֹר בְּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם מִאָדָם
 וְעַד־בְּהַמִּיחָה וּבְכָל־אָלֹהִי מִצְרָיִם אָעַשָּׂה
 שְׁפָטִים אֲנִי יְהֹוָה: ¹³ וְהַיְהָ הַלְּם לְכֶם
 לְאֹתָה עַל הַבְּתִים אֲשֶׁר אַתֶּם שָׁם וְרַאֲתִי
 אֶת־הָדָם וְפִסְחָתִי עַלְכֶם וְלֹא־יְהִי בְּכֶם
 נָגָע לְמִשְׁחָתִיב בְּהַכְּתִיב בְּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם:
¹⁴ וְהַיְהָ הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה לְכֶם לִזְבָּחָן וְחַגְתֶּם
 אֹתוֹ חַג לִיהְוָה לְדֹרְתִיכֶם חֲקַת עוֹלָם
 תִּחְגַּהוּ: ¹⁵ שְׁבֻעָת יְמִינֵיכֶם מִצּוֹת תַּאֲכִלוּ אֶת
 בַּיּוֹם הַרְאַשׁוֹן תִּשְׁבִּטוּ שָׁאָר מִבְּתִיכֶם כִּי
 בְּלָא־אֶכְלָל חַמֵּץ וְנִכְרְתָה הַנֶּפֶשׁ הַהְוָא
 מִיְשְׁרָאֵל מִיּוֹם הַרְאַשׁוֹן עַד־יּוֹם הַשְׁבָעִי:
¹⁶ וּבַיּוֹם הַרְאַשׁוֹן מִקְרָא־קֹדֶשׁ וּבַיּוֹם
 הַשְׁבָעִי מִקְרָא־קֹדֶשׁ יְהֹוָה לְכֶם בְּלָא־
 מְלָאכָה לְאִיעָשָׂה בָּהֶם אֶת אֲשֶׁר יְאַכֵּל
 לְכָל־נֶפֶשׁ הַוָּא לְבָדוּ יְעַשָּׂה לְכֶם:
¹⁷ וְשִׁמְרַתֶּם אֶת־הַמְּצֻוֹת בַּיּוֹם הַזֶּה
 הַזֶּה הַזְּעָנִיתִי אֶת־צְבָאוֹתיכֶם מִארָץ
 מִצְרָיִם וְשִׁמְרַתֶּם אֶת־הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה לְדֹרְתִיכֶם
 חֲקַת עוֹלָם: ¹⁸ בְּרָאָשׁוֹן בְּאַרְבָּעָה עָשָׂר יוֹם
 לְחַדְשָׁה בְּעֶרֶב תַּאֲכִלוּ מִצָּת עַד יוֹם הַאַחֲרִי passover. This is the first time the word pesach is used in the Torah; and, as with matzah and the bitter herbs, the text assumes that the Israelites will understand the term. A folk etymology for the name “Passover” connects it to the angel of death’s passing over the houses of the Israelites (see at 12:27).

REGULATIONS FOR THE FEAST OF MATZOT (12:14–20)

Some scholars posit that the Feast of Unleavened Bread (matzot) and the passover sacrifice (pesach) originally were two distinct festivals; but there is no consensus regarding their origins. Here the Bible connects the two and links them to the Exodus experience (see also Joshua 5:11; Ezekiel 45:21; II Chronicles 35:17), thereby making them part of the rite of remembrance.

15. you shall eat unleavened bread. The exact significance here of matzah is unclear. The Bible presents unleavened bread as both a festive food (Genesis 19:3) and a symbol of oppression, associating “the bread of distress” with the memory of the Exodus (Deuteronomy 16:3).

person. See at Leviticus 2:1.

cut off from Israel. See at Leviticus 7:20.

evening.¹⁹ No leaven shall be found in your houses for seven days. For whoever eats what is leavened, that person—whether a stranger or a citizen of the country—shall be cut off from the community of Israel.²⁰ You shall eat nothing leavened; in all your settlements you shall eat unleavened bread.

²¹ Moses then summoned all the elders of Israel and said to them, “Go, pick out lambs for your families, and slaughter the passover offering.²² Take a bunch of hyssop, dip it in the blood that is in the basin, and apply some of the blood that is in the basin to the lintel and to the two doorposts. None of you shall go outside the door of your house until morning.²³ For יְהוָה, when going through to smite the Egyptians, will see the blood on the lintel and the two doorposts, and will pass over the door and not let the Destroyer enter and smite your home.

²⁴ “You shall observe this as an institution for all time, for you and for your descendants.²⁵ And when you enter the land that יְהוָה will give you, as promised, you shall observe this rite.²⁶ And when your children ask you, ‘What do you mean by this rite?’²⁷ you shall say, ‘It is the passover sacrifice to יְהוָה, who passed over the houses of the Israelites in

וְעַשְׂרִים לְחֹדֶשׁ בּוּרֶב :¹⁹ שְׁבֻעָת יְמִים שָׁאֵר לֹא יִמְצֵא בְּבּוּרֶב כִּי כָל-אַכְלָמָחֲצָת וּגְכַרְתָּה הַנֶּפֶשׁ הַהְוָא מַעֲדָת יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּגַעַר וּבְאַזְרָח הָאָרֶץ :²⁰ כָּל-מַחֲצָת לֹא תִּאְכְּלוּ בְּכָל מַוְשְׁבָתֵיכֶם תְּאַכְּלוּ מִצּוֹת : כ

²¹ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה לְכָל-זָקְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלָּהֶם מֵשֶׁבּוּ וַיִּקְחׁוּ לְכֶם צָאן לְמַשְׁפְּחַתֵיכֶם וַיְשַׁתְּטוּ הַפְּסִחָה :²² וְלֹקְחָתָם אֶגְדָת אַזְבָּן וְטַבְלָתָם בְּדָם אֲשֶׁר-בְּסָךְ וְאֶל-שְׁתִּי הַמְּזוֹזָות מִן-הַדָּם אֲשֶׁר בְּסָף וְאַתָּם לֹא תִּצְאִוּ אִישׁ מַפְתָּח-בֵּיתוּ עַד-בָּקָר :²³ וַיַּעֲבֵר יְהוָה לְגַنְּךָ אֶת-מִצְרָיִם וּרְאָה אֶת-הַדָּם עַל-הַמְשָׁקוֹף וְעַל שְׁתִּי הַמְּזוֹזָות וּפְסִחָה יְהוָה עַל-הַפְּתָחָה וְלֹא יִתְּן הַמְּחוֹתִית לְבָא אֶל-בְּתִיכֶם לְגַנְּךָ :²⁴ וְשִׁמְרָתָם אֶת-הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה לְחַקִּילָה וְלִבְנֵנָה עַד-עוֹלָם :²⁵ וְהִיא פִּירְתָּבָאוּ אֶל-הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר יִתְּן יְהוָה לְכֶם כַּאֲשֶׁר דִּבֶּר וְשִׁמְרָתָם אֶת-הַעֲבָדָה הַזֹּאת :²⁶ וְהִיא כִּי יִأְמְרוּ אֲלֵיכֶם בְּנֵיכֶם מִהִעְדָּה הַזֹּאת לְכֶם :²⁷ וְאִמְרָתָם זְבַח-פְּסִחָה הַוָּא לִיהְוָה

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE DELIVERED TO THE ELDERS (12:21–28)

Earlier, God instructs Moses to “speak to the whole community of Israel” (12:3). Here, however, Moses speaks specifically to the elders of Israel, who then will disseminate the information about the passover sacrifice to the entire community.

22. “None of you shall go outside the door of your house.” The blood applied to the doorway differentiates the Israelites from the Egyptians and symbolically protects any first-born male children in the house (see at 12:7–13).

23. “Destroyer.” The one who brings the plague is personified as an agent of God (see II Samuel 24:15–17; II Kings 19:32–37). Nonetheless, God’s control remains complete, for it is God who will “not let the Destroyer” enter the Israelites’ homes.

27. “passed over.” In this verse, the root p-s-ch links the festival of Passover (Pesach) to God’s passing over (pasach) the houses of the Israelites, thereby protecting them from this plague. Scholars debate the precise force of the verb here. Some focus on the apotropaic function of blood (see at vv. 7–13) and understand it to mean “protect.” Others connect it with the leaping of the demons from which one needs protection, or they relate it to a rite of passage.

EXODUS 12:28–36

BO

Egypt when smiting the Egyptians, but saved our houses.”

Those assembled then bowed low in homage.²⁸ And the Israelites went and did so; just as יְהוָה had commanded Moses and Aaron, so they did.

²⁹In the middle of the night יְהוָה struck down all the [male] first-born in the land of Egypt, from the first-born of Pharaoh who sat on the throne to the first-born of the captive who was in the dungeon, and all the first-born of the cattle.³⁰ And Pharaoh arose in the night, with all his courtiers and all the Egyptians—because there was a loud cry in Egypt; for there was no house where there was not someone dead.³¹ He summoned Moses and Aaron in the night and said, “Up, depart from among my people, you and the Israelites with you! Go, worship יְהוָה as you said!³² Take also your flocks and your herds, as you said, and begone! And may you bring a blessing upon me also!”

³³The Egyptians urged the people on, impatient to have them leave the country, for they said, “We shall all be dead.”³⁴ So the people took their dough before it was leavened, their kneading bowls wrapped in their cloaks upon their shoulders.³⁵ The Israelites had done Moses’ bidding and borrowed from the Egyptians objects of silver and gold, and clothing.³⁶ And יְהוָה had disposed the Egyptians

אֲשֶׁר פָּטַח עַל-בְּתִי בְנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּמַעַרְיוֹם בְּנֶגֶפּוֹ אֶת-מִצְרַיִם וְאֶת-בְּתִינּוֹ הַצִּיל וַיַּקְרֵד הַעַם וַיִּשְׁתַּחַווּ: ²⁸ וַיַּלְכּוּ וַיַּעֲשׂُוּ בְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּאָשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אֶת-מִשְׁׁה וְאֶת-הָרָן בְּנָעָשׂוּ:

²⁹ וַיְהִי בְּחֵצֵי הַלִּילָה וַיִּהְוֶה הַכְּהָבָל בְּכָבוֹר בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרַיִם מִבְּכָר פְּרֻעָה הַיֹּשֵׁב עַל-כֶּסֶף עַד בְּכָבוֹר הַשְׁבֵי אֲשֶׁר בְּבֵית הַבָּרוֹר וּבָל בְּכָבוֹר בְּהַמִּהְמָה: ³⁰ וַיָּקָם פְּרֻעָה לִילָה הוּא וְכָל-עָבָדָיו וְכָל-מִצְרַיִם וְתָהִרְיוֹן צַעַקָּה גָּדוֹלָה בְּמִצְרַיִם בַּיּוֹם הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר אִין-שָׁם מִתְּהִרְיוֹן: ³¹ וַיַּקְרָא לִמְשָׁה וְלְאַהֲרֹן לִילָה וַיֹּאמֶר קַיְמָה צָאוּ מִתּוֹךְ עַמִּי גַּם-אתֶם גַּם-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְלֹכֶד עַבְדָוֹ אֶת-יְהוָה בְּדָבְרָכֶם: ³² גַּם-עֲנָכֶם גַּם-בְּקָרָכֶם קָחוּ בְּאָשֶׁר דִּבְרָתָם וְלֹכֶד וּבְרָכָתָם גַּם-אָתֵי: וַתַּחַזֵּק מִצְרַיִם עַל-הָעָם לִמְהֹר לְשִׁלְחוֹמָן מִן-הָאָרֶץ כִּי אָמְרוּ בְּלֹנֶגֶת מִתְּהִרְיוֹן: ³⁴ וַיָּשָׁא הָעָם אֶת-בְּצָקוֹ טְרַם יִחְמֹץ מִשְׁאָרָתָם עַרְתָּה בְּשִׁמְלָתָם עַל-שְׁכָמָם: ³⁵ וּבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל עָשׂוּ כְּדָבָר מִשְׁׁה וַיָּשְׁאַל מִמְּעָלִים בְּלִירְבֶּשׂ וּבְלִיזֶבֶת זְהֻבָּה וְשְׁמַלְתָּה: ³⁶ וַיִּהְוֶה נָנוֹן that all elements of Egyptian society are subject to the reach of God’s wrath.

30. loud cry. See at 11:6.

31. “Go, worship יְהוָה as you said.” The outcome predicted by God in 3:20 and 6:1 now comes to pass as Pharaoh finally recognizes God’s supremacy.

34. dough...kneading bowls. The narrative may highlight these objects because the description of the unleavened cakes of dough baked on the journey out of Egypt (12:39) links the narrative of the Exodus to the festival of matzot (13:3).

The Tenth Sign

SLAYING OF THE FIRST-BORN (12:29–36)

The prior narrative—set aside since 12:1—picks up again here, after the Israelites carry out the instructions for the passover offering (v. 28).

29. first-born of the captive. When this sign is announced (11:5), a slave girl exemplifies the lowest member of society. Here a different figure, a male captive, is contrasted with Pharaoh to signify favorably toward the people, and they let them have their request; thus they stripped the Egyptians.

³⁷The Israelites journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about six hundred thousand fighting men on foot, aside from noncombatants. ³⁸Moreover, a mixed multitude went up with them, and very much livestock, both flocks and herds. ³⁹And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough that they had taken out of Egypt, for it was not leavened, since they had been driven out of Egypt and could not delay; nor had they prepared any provisions for themselves.

⁴⁰The length of time that the Israelites lived in Egypt was four hundred and thirty years; ⁴¹at the end of the four hundred and thirtieth year, to the very day, all the ranks of יהוה departed from the

אֶת-חַדּוֹן הָעָם בְּעִינֵי מִצְרָיִם וַיָּשָׁלֹם
וַיִּנְצַּלּוּ אֶת-מִצְרָיִם: פ'

³⁷ וַיֵּסְעוּ בְנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל מִרְעַמֵּס סִפְתָּה
בְּשֵׁשׁ-מֵאוֹת אֲלָף רְגִלִּי הַגְּבוּרִים לִבְדֵּק
מַטָּפָה: ³⁸ וְגַם־עַרְבָּה בְּבֵבָעַ עַלְהָ אַתֶּם וְצַאֲנָה
וּבְקָרְמָנָה בְּבֵדָמָד: ³⁹ וַיָּאִפְוּ אֶת־
הַבְּאָקָר אֲשֶׁר הַזְּכִיאוּ מִצְרָיִם עֲנַת מִצְוֹת
בַּיּוֹם לֹא חֲמִץ בַּיּוֹרְשׁוּ מִמִּצְרָיִם וְלֹא יְכַלּוּ
לְהַתְּמִימָה וְגַם־צִדָּה לְאָדָשׁוּ לָהֶם:
⁴⁰ וּמוֹשֵׁב בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁבּוּ בְמִצְרָיִם
שְׁלֹשִׁים שָׁנָה וְאֶרְבַּע מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה: ⁴¹ וַיָּהִי
מִקְצֵן שְׁלֹשִׁים שָׁנָה וְאֶרְבַּע מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה
וַיָּהִי בְּעֹצֶם הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה יֵצְאֻוּ בְּלִצְבָּאותָה

36. stripped. Heb. root n-tz-l, meaning “to take away.” Though in English “stripped” has a negative connotation, the Torah does not seem to give a pejorative spin to the “despoiling” of Egypt (see at 11:2).

The Exodus from Egypt Begins (12:37–42)

The drama of the hurried flight from Egypt is followed by various details about the start of the journey, including where the Israelites traveled, how many left, and when the exodus occurred.

37. from Rameses to Succoth. The exact location of these cities, and therefore the route of the exodus itself, is unknown, perhaps because the biblical account is not an historical record but rather a story meant to dramatize and commemorate a formative experience.

six hundred thousand fighting men. This large number is symbolic, perhaps representing all Israelites of generations to come. If taken literally, the estimates for the total number of people leaving Egypt range between two and three million, assuming each man was accompanied by a wife and between two and three children. The number here agrees with the accounting in Numbers 11:21, but note the discrepancy with the census account in Numbers 26:51 (see also Exodus 38:26).

noncombatants. As in 10:24, this term (Heb. taf) presumably includes the women, children, and infirm or disabled men.

38. mixed multitude. Heb. erev rav, an expression implying that other people joined the Israelites when they fled Egypt; but these people are not identified.

39. The significance of eating matzah is given here, even though the initial directive for eating it had been given in connection with the regulations for the Passover Festival (v. 8).

40. four hundred and thirty years. It is impossible to reconcile this figure with the other dates for the sojourn in Egypt given in the Bible (see Genesis 15:13, 16). Large numbers like this need not be taken literally but can be read as indicating relative size (see at v. 37). In this case, the message conveyed is that the sojourn in Egypt lasted a long time. There is, as yet, not enough information available to posit any precise dating of the Exodus; any attempt to do so is, at best, speculation.

41. to the very day. This phrase indicates that the timing of the Exodus was either divinely pre-ordained or miraculous. Either way, the implication land of Egypt.⁴² That was for יְהוָה a night of vigil to bring them out of the land of Egypt; that same night is יְהוָה's, one of vigil for all the children of Israel throughout the ages.

⁴³ said to Moses and Aaron: This is the law of the passover offering: No foreigner shall eat of it. ⁴⁴ But any householder's purchased male slave may eat of it once he has been circumcised. ⁴⁵ No bound or hired laborer shall eat of it. ⁴⁶ It shall be eaten in one house: you shall not take any of the flesh outside the house; nor shall you break a bone of it. ⁴⁷ The whole community of Israel shall offer it. ⁴⁸ If a male stranger who dwells with you would offer the passover to יְהוָה, all his males must be circumcised; then he shall be admitted to offer it; he shall then be as a citizen of the country. But no uncircumcised man may eat of it. ⁴⁹ There shall be one law for the citizen and for the stranger who dwells among you.

יְהוָה מְאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם: ⁴² לַיְלָה שְׁמֻרִים הוּא
לִיהוָה לְהֹצִיאָם מְאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם הוּא
הַלְּילָה הַזֹּה לִיהוָה שְׁמֻרִים לְכָל-בָּנֵי
יִשְׂרָאֵל לְדָרְתָּם: פ

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֲלֵ־מֹשֶׁה וְאַהֲרֹן זֶאת חֲקַת
הַפְּסָחָה בְּלִפְנֵי־נִכְרָת לְאַיִלָּבָל בּוֹ: וְכָל־
עַבְדָּ אִישׁ מִקְנַת־כָּסֶף וּמִלְתָּה אֲתָּוֹ אָזֶן
יַאֲכֵל בּוֹ: ⁴⁵ תָּשַׁׁב וְשַׁכֵּר לְאַיִלָּבָל בּוֹ:
⁴⁶ בְּבֵית אָחָד יַאֲכֵל לְאַתְּזִיעָה מִן־הַבַּיִת
מִן־הַבָּשָׂר חֲוֹצָה וְעַצְם לֹא תִשְׁבְּרוּבוּ:
⁴⁷ בְּלִעְדרָת יִשְׂרָאֵל יִעֲשֶׂה פָּסָח לִיהוָה הַמּוֹלֵן
יִגּוֹר אֶתְךָ גָּר וְעַשֵּׂה פָּסָח לִיהוָה הַמּוֹלֵן
כָּל־זָכָר וְאָזֶן יִקְרָב לְעַשְׂתָּו וְהִיא בְּאוֹרָה
הָאָרֶץ וְכָל־עָרֵל לְאַיִלָּבָל בּוֹ: ⁴⁹ תּוֹרָה
אַחַת יִהְיֶה לְאֹורֶחֶת וְלִגְעָר הַגָּר בְּתוֹכְכֶם:

is that God keeps all promises, thus continuing the theme of God's ultimate control over all events.

42. vigil . . . vigil. Heb. shimurim, literally “keeping watch,” contains the root sh-m-r, which occurs a total of seven times in Exodus 12 (also “keep watch,” v. 6; “observe,” vv. 17 [twice], 24, 25). Just as God has kept watch to effectuate the Exodus, so the Israelites must vigilantly observe the various rites established to commemorate this extraordinary event. These rites are the subject of the remainder of the parashah.

ing is to be prepared; here we are told who may partake of the offering and who is excluded. The topic of the second, outer frame is the importance of memory, a concern that not only began the parashah (10:2) but also appeared in the preparations for the Exodus (12:26–27); here we find a listing of rites that institutionalize the memory of the Exodus and God's redemptive power.

LAWS OF THE PASSOVER OFFERING (12:43–51)

44. circumcised. Inclusion in the covenantal relationship through circumcision is the dominant criterion for participation in the passover offering for foreigners who live in the community (see also v. 48). Mention of circumcision here links this episode to the circumcision performed by Zipporah, Moses' wife, in 4:24–26, and thus frames the story of the salvation of the Israelites.

Ritual Remembrances of the Exodus (12:43–13:16)

In returning to ritual considerations, the text now constructs a double frame around the climactic events just narrated. The first frame is focused on the passover sacrifice. The regulations enumerated earlier (vv. 3–6) discuss how the offer-⁵⁰And all the Israelites did so; as had commanded Moses and Aaron, so they did.

⁵¹That very day יְהוָה freed the Israelites from the land of Egypt, troop by troop.

13 יְהוָה spoke further to Moses, saying,
²“Consecrate to Me every male first-born; human and beast, the first [male] issue of every womb among the Israelites is Mine.”

³And Moses said to the people,

“Remember this day, on which you went free from Egypt, the house of bondage, how freed you from it with a mighty hand: no leavened bread shall be eaten. ⁴You go free on this day, in the month of Abib. ⁵So, when יְהוָה has brought you into the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which was sworn to your fathers to be given you, a land flowing with milk and honey, you shall observe in this month the following practice:

⁶“Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day there shall be a festival of יְהוָה. ⁷Throughout the seven days unleavened bread shall be eaten; no leavened bread shall be found with you, and no leaven shall be found in all your territory. ⁸And you shall explain to your child on that day, ‘It is because of what יְהוָה did for me when I went free from Egypt.’

⁹“And this shall serve you as a sign on your hand and as a reminder on your forehead—in order that

CONSECRATION OF FIRST-BORN MALES, FEAST OF MATZOT, AND T'FILLIN (13:1–16)

2. “first [male] issue of every womb.” Heb. peter rechem, from the root p-t-r, meaning “to separate” or “to open”; the phrase refers to a female’s first offspring. | The reason for the consecration or separation of first-born males is explained in vv. 12–15.

3–8. This section connects the prior instructions for matzot (12:14–20) with the recounting of the events of the Exodus for future generations (see at 10:2).

⁵⁰ וַיַּעֲשׂוּ כָל-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּאָשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אֶת-מְשֹׁה וְאֶת-אַהֲרֹן בְּן עֹשֶׂוּ: ס
⁵¹ וַיְהִי בְּצָעַם הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה הַזֶּה יְהוָה אֶת-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִארֶץ מִצְרָיִם עַל-עֲבֹתֶם: פ

יג וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מְשֹׁה לְאָמֵר: ² קָדְשֵׁ
לֵי כָל-בָּבּוֹר פָּטֵר כָּל-רְחֵם בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל
בְּאֶתְمָ וּבְבְּהָמָה לֵי הוּא:
³ וַיֹּאמֶר מְשֹׁה אֶל-הָעָם
זָכָר אֶת-הַיּוֹם הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר יִצְאָתֶם מִמִּצְרַיִם
מִבֵּית עֲבָדִים כִּי בְּחִזְקָה יְדֵי הַזָּעִיר יְהוָה
אִתְּכֶם מִזֶּה וְלֹא יִאכְלֶל חַמֵּץ: ⁴ הַיּוֹם אַתֶּם
יִצְאִים בְּחַדֵּשׁ הַאֲכִיב: ⁵ וְהִיא כִּי-יְהִיא
יְהוָה אֶל-אָרֶץ הַכָּנָעָנִי וְהַחֲנִינִי
וְהַחֲנוּנִי וְהַיְבוֹסִי אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּע לְאַבְתָּיק לְתַת-לְךָ אָרֶץ זֹבֵת חָלֵב וִידְבָשׁ וּבְרִיתָתְךָ אֶת-

הַעֲבָדָה הַזֹּאת בְּחַזְׁקָשׁ הַזֹּהֶה:
⁶ שְׁבַעַת יָמִים תַּאֲכִל מַצָּה וּבַיּוֹם הַשְׁבִיעִי
חַג לִיהוָה: ⁷ מַצּוֹת יִאכְלֶל אֶת שְׁבֻעָת
הַיּוֹם וְלֹא-יִרְאֶה לְכָךְ חַמֵּץ וְלֹא-יִרְאֶה לְכָךְ
שָׂאָר בְּכָל-גְּבָלָר: ⁸ וְהִגְדָּת לְבָנֶךָ בַּיּוֹם
הַהוּא לְאָמֵר בְּעַבוּר זֹה עֲשָׂה יְהוָה לְיִהּ
בְּצָאתִי מִמִּצְרַיִם:

⁹ וְהִיא לְכָךְ לֹא-לְאֶות עַל-יָדֶךָ וְלֹא-פְּרוֹן בֵּין
עִינֶיךָ לְמַעַן תַּהֲיוּ תּוֹרַת יְהוָה בְּפִיךָ

3. “house of bondage.” This is the Torah’s first instance of this famous phrase, a depiction of Egypt that foreshadows the Decalogue (20:2). Literally a “house of slaves,” it envisions all Egypt as one large slave quarters. Ancient workers’ villages found in Egypt show that historically, laborers were housed in segregated areas near their building projects and given provisions according to their skills and the difficulty of their labor.

5. fathers. See at Deuteronomy 4:31.

9. “sign...reminder.” Here and in other passages (see Deuteronomy 6:8; 11:18; Proverbs the Teaching of יְהוָה may be in your mouth—that with a mighty hand יְהוָה freed you from Egypt.¹⁰ You shall keep this institution at its set time from year to year.

¹¹“And when has brought you into the land of the Canaanites, as [God] swore to you and to your fathers, and has given it to you,¹² you shall set apart for every first issue of the womb: every male firstling that your cattle drop shall be יְהוָה’s.¹³ But every firstling ass you shall redeem with a sheep; if you do not redeem it, you must break its neck. And you must redeem every male first-born among your children.¹⁴ And when, in time to come, a child of yours asks you, saying, ‘What does this mean?’ you shall reply, ‘It was with a mighty hand that brought us out from Egypt, the house of bondage.¹⁵ When Pharaoh stubbornly refused to let us go, he slew every [male] first-born in the land of Egypt, the first-born of both human and beast. Therefore I sacrifice to יְהוָה every first male issue of the womb, but redeem every male first-born among my children.’

¹⁶“And so it shall be as a sign upon your hand and as a symbol on your forehead that with a mighty hand יְהוָה freed us from Egypt.”

6:20–21; 7:1–3) this sort of language refers metaphorically to the way certain ritual practices memorialize the Exodus experience. In late antiquity, some Jewish authorities understood this language literally, as referring to the wearing of t’fillin (phylacteries) on the hand and head. (See also at v. 16 and Deuteronomy 6:8.)

15. “redeem every male first-born among my children.” Although animals are to be sacrificed to God, sons are to be redeemed by monetary means (Numbers 18:16) since human sacrifice is not tolerated. | This verse, together with Numbers 3:13 and 18:16, provide the biblical background for the Jewish ceremony of pidyon haben: on the thirty-first day after his birth, the parents redeem their first-born son, usually with silver coins, from a kohein (priest). Following v. 2, above, this ceremony

בַּיּוֹם חִזְקָה הַוֹּצָאָה יְהוָה מִמּוֹצִירִים:
¹⁰ וְשִׁמְרָתֶת אֲתִיכְחַקָּה הַזֹּאת לְמוֹעֵדָה
מִיקְרִים יִמְמִיחָה: פ

וְהִיא כִּי יִבְאַךְ יְהוָה אֶל־אֶרֶץ הַכְּנָעָן:
כַּאֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּע לְךָ וְלְאָבָתֶיךָ וְנִגְנַּיהֲ לְךָ:
¹² וְהַעֲבָרָת בְּלִפְטָרִיךְם לִיהוָה וּבְלִפְטָר
וְשָׁגַר בְּהָמָה אֲשֶׁר יִזְהַה לְךָ הַזְּכָרִים
לִיהוָה:¹³ וּבְלִפְטָר חָמָל תִּפְדַּה בְּשָׂה
וְאַמְלָא תִּפְדַּה וּנְרַפְּתָו וּבְלִבְכּוֹר אָדָם
בְּבָנָיו תִּפְדַּה:¹⁴ וְהִיא כִּי יִשְׁאַלְךָ בָּעֵד
מַחְרֵךְ לְאָמֵר מִהְזָאת וְאָמְרָת אֶלְיוֹ בְּחִזְקָה
נֶד הַזְּכִיאָנוּ יְהוָה מִמּוֹצִירִים מִבֵּית עֲבָדִים:
¹⁵ וְיִהְיֶה כִּי־הַקְשָׁה פְּרֻעה לְשַׁלְחָנוּ וַיַּהַגֵּג
יְהוָה כִּל־בְּכוֹל בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם מִבּוֹר אָדָם
וּעֲד־בְּכּוֹר בְּהָמָה עַל־כֵּן אֲנֵי זָהָה לִיהוָה
בְּלִפְטָר רְחֵם הַזְּכָרִים וּבְלִבְכּוֹר בְּנֵי
אָפְדָה:

¹⁶ וְהִיא לְאוֹת עַל־יָדֶךָ וּלְטוֹטֶף בֵּין
עֵינֶיךָ בַּיּוֹם בְּחִזְקָה נֶד הַזְּכִיאָנוּ יְהוָה מִמּוֹצִירִים: ס

is performed only if the son is the first issue of his mother’s womb. Thus, exempt from redemption is a first-born son delivered by caesarean section, or a first-born son to a mother who had previously given birth to a daughter, or who had miscarried.

16. “symbol.” Heb. totafot; the term’s meaning is uncertain, but the context indicates that it refers to an amulet (an object thought to provide spiritual protection) worn “between the eyes” (that is, on the forehead). While some have attempted to connect t’fillin with specifically female ornaments or amulets, there is ample evidence that in the ancient Near East and Egypt both women and men wore forehead ornaments both for protection and for decoration. T’fillin are to serve as another type of reminder of the might of God and the redemption from Egypt.

—Sharon R. Keller

Another View

PARASHAT BO DESCRIBES a number of rituals surrounding the Exodus that allow us to see a connection between blood, sacrifice, and family ties. Sacrificial blood in 12:1–13 is protective, separating the Egyptians who are about to die from the Israelites who soon will hurriedly flee the “house of bondage.” As an expression of the life force, the blood is also symbolic of the fertility of the family that offers it as a sacrifice and then applies it to the doorposts and the lintel of their house.

In addition, the blood symbolizes the connection between past and living generations. The living and the deceased should not be seen as mutually exclusive, but instead can be considered as part of a chain of human existence connecting ancestors and their descendants. Thus for readers of the story, the passover sacrifice acts as a link to generations past, a way to recognize the plight of those who first left Egypt and to offer gratitude to God for their liberation. The passover sacrifice also connects the past to the future, as one generation teaches the next the lessons of the Exodus: “And when your children ask you, ‘What do you mean by this rite?’ you shall say, ‘It is the passover sacrifice to הַמֶּלֶךְ, who passed over the houses of the Israelites . . .’” (12:26–27).

Furthermore, the consumption of the communal Passover meal provides a map of the social structure of the family network. Eating the roasted lamb (or kid) with unleavened bread and bitter herbs determines the boundaries of the people who share in the event, indicating who is inside and outside the group. With all family groups eating their paschal lamb on the same evening (vv. 6–8), the act of eating becomes symbolic of continuity and unity. However, the separate groups consume their own sacrifices, “a lamb to a household” (12:3), with no foreigners allowed to eat of it (12:43–45). Thus, the rite also symbolizes discontinuity and differentiation. In these various ways, the Passover sacrificial ritual is about identity and how we solidify family ties through this ancient ritual.

The blood symbolizes the connection between past and living generations.

—Naomi Steinberg

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

“the first-born of the slave girl who is behind the millstones” (11:5). According to the midrash collection P'sikta D'Rav Kahana 7.9, Egyptian slave women were proud to work beside well-born Israelite women like Serah bat Asher, Jacob’s granddaughter (Genesis 46:17). Yet, despite their lowly status and their solidarity with Israelite slaves, the Torah makes clear that these women were still Egyptians—and their first-born children were not spared. According to midrashic tradition, Serah’s life spanned the entire period of Israel’s slavery in Egypt (see Numbers 26:46).

“This month shall mark for you the beginning of the months” (12:2). Based on this verse, traditional Judaism ordains the celebration of Rosh Chodesh, the new month. Since the Jewish calendar is partially based on the lunar cycle, this observance corresponds with each new moon, and it has special connotations for women. In ancient times, Rosh Chodesh did not have the elevated status of a full holiday, but it was celebrated in a festive, sacred manner. According to JT Taanit 1:6, women customarily did not work on the day of the new moon. Later rabbinic sources explain that the Rosh Chodesh holiday was given to women as a reward, since—according to midrashim on Exodus 32—they refused to participate in the sin of the Golden Calf (Pirkei D'Rabbi Eliezer 45). The custom of special time for women on Rosh Chodesh, which persisted through the Middle Ages, has been renewed today in Rosh Chodesh groups for women and girls.

BO

In the middle of the night ייְהוָה struck down all the [male] first-born in the land of Egypt (12:29). Even though the Egyptians had already been tortured with nine plagues, they continued to force the Israelites to work as slaves. One of the well-known, back-breaking tasks of the slaves was making bricks (1:14; 5:7). This involved the treading of clay to mix it with water and straw in order to prepare it for placing into molds to form bricks. A midrash in Pirkei D'Rabbi Eliezer 48 recounts the story of a specific woman, Rachel the granddaughter of Shuthelah, who is not actually named in the Torah although her grandfather appears in a genealogical list (Numbers 26:36). At this late stage in the Egyptian bondage, Rachel was pregnant and was treading clay for bricks along with her husband. She spontaneously gave birth to her baby in the midst of her work, and the newborn mistakenly fell into the clay and was mixed into it. The new mother's desperate cry was so great that it reached heaven. There, the angel Michael heard her, went down to earth, and took the clump of clay that had now been made into a brick with the infant inside it and brought it up to God's Throne of Glory, where the brick served as God's footstool. This outrage served as a reminder for God to proceed with the punishment of the Egyptians—and it was to that very same night that the present biblical verse refers.

That was for ייְהוָה a night of vigil (12:42). A rabbinic opinion states that first-born Egyptian females as well as males were killed in the tenth plague. According to this view, Pharaoh's daughter—who had rescued Moses and raised him as her son (2:5–10)—was a first-born and thus should have perished in this plague.

First-born Egyptian females as well as males were killed in the tenth plague.

Psikta D'Rav Kahana 7.7 explains that Moses prayed for his adoptive mother, whose name was thought to be Bithiah. His prayer is said to have extolled Bithiah in the language of Proverbs 31, the biblical tribute to the “woman of valor.” According to a verse in this poetic passage, the woman of valor’s lamp does not go out at night (Proverbs 31:18). The midrash understands this statement as a metaphorical reference to the survival of Pharaoh’s daughter, whose soul was not extinguished on the fateful night of death. Evidence is adduced from the unusual spelling of the Hebrew word for “night” as written in Proverbs 31:18 (without the final letter heh), which matches the spelling of a form of the same word in Exodus 12:42. Insisting on the connection between these two biblical verses, the midrash teaches that Pharaoh’s first-born daughter was saved during the tenth plague due to Moses’ prayer on her behalf.

—Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein

Contemporary Reflection

GOD'S HARDENING OF PHARAOH'S HEART in Exodus 10:1 presents a theological problem on two levels. First, if God is the agent of Pharaoh's behavior, what does that imply about Pharaoh's free will? Second, if God hardens Pharaoh's heart in order to demonstrate God's power, we must ask: At what price the Israelites' liberation? Indeed, the ultimate result of Pharaoh's stubbornness is the murder of every first-born Egyptian male. Even if we consider this to be retributive justice, payback for Pharaoh's earlier order to kill all newborn Hebrew males, we still must ponder: Does one heinous crime justify another? And how do we come to terms with killing innocent children?

Commentators, equally bothered by this thorny moral dilemma, have provided inspired interpretations. With regard to the question of free will, some interpreters note that during the first five plagues, Pharaoh hardens his own heart. Only afterward does God take over, starting with the sixth plague (9:12), suggesting that Pharaoh has foregone the chance to operate independently. Modern psychoanalyst Erich Fromm writes, "The more man's heart hardens, the less freedom he has to change; the more he is determined by previous action . . . there comes a point of no return, when man's heart has become so hardened . . . that he has lost the possibility of freedom" (You Shall Be as Gods, 1966, p. 101). This is an astute insight into human behavior, but it begs the question of the text's plain meaning, which is that God causes Pharaoh's stubbornness.

The hardening of Pharaoh's heart might also be viewed as a paradigm for what Fran Burgess calls the "transformative power of adversity." According to this view, Pharaoh's stubborn resistance is the condition necessary for Moses and the Israelites to emerge from their straits (the Hebrew name for Egypt, mitzrayim, is very close to the Hebrew for "straits," metzarim).

Indeed, it often takes facing overwhelming odds to make radical change. As Tour de France winner Lance Armstrong said, "Before cancer, I just lived. Now I live strong." Pharaoh thus serves as a tool for the Israelites' psychological and moral development. However keen, this interpretation too satisfies only on the level of metaphor.

Perhaps the most satisfactory approach is to keep the theological problems ever-present. In The Particulars of Rapture: Reflections on Exodus (1995), Avivah Gottlieb Zornberg suggests that the liberation story of the Israelites, what she calls the "master narrative," gives rise to "counter-narratives" that throw the justification of God's triumphal power into question. Indeed, as Zornberg argues, the master narrative of God as loving and benevolent redeemer of the Israelites is challenged by the killing of the Egyptians' first-born, including "the first-born of the captive who was in the dungeon" (12:29). This prompts a counter-narrative from the perspective of the plague's victims that asks: What sin could the babies and the captives possibly have committed to deserve this punishment? The answer posits an evil God. This narrative appears again later, in the story of the Golden Calf, when Moses convinces God not to murder the Israelites for their transgression, arguing that otherwise, the Egyptian story will prevail: "Let not the Egyptians say, 'It was with evil intent that he delivered them'" (32:12). Although the Midrash attempts to silence and "neutralize" potentially heretical answers to such queries, Zornberg maintains that "the Torah, even God's quoted words, gives rise to interpretations that radically contradict its own master-narrative, and that cannot, moreover, be totally repudiated by its accredited expositors" (p. 143).

Just as women defied Pharaoh, so we must challenge troubling aspects of our sacred texts.

BO

For Zornberg, an alternative for dealing with the dissonance between narrative and counter-narrative is "the model of endless questioning, in which the answer does not totally silence the questioner" (p. 143). In fact, implicit and explicit questions play an important role in this parashah. God mandates that the story of the Exodus be told in response to children's queries: "And when your children ask you..., you shall say..." (12:26–27). This is the basis for the Passover seder's custom of the Four Questions. Further, two more verses from this parashah and one from Deuteronomy instruct us to answer our children's questions about the Exodus. The Rabbis understood all these verses as referring to four kinds of children, the Haggadah's Four Sons, each with varying aptitudes, each eliciting a different perspective on the narrative: the Wise Son (Deuteronomy 6:20–21), the Wicked Son (Exodus 12:26), the Simple Son (13:14), and the One Who Is Unable to Ask (13:8).

Through questions, we might call forth another counter-narrative: the experience of women during the exodus and its subsequent retelling. Noting that the traditional Haggadah assumes a conversation between a father and four sons, contemporary feminist Haggadot fill in for the absence of women's voices. The Ma'yan Haggadah, for example, includes the Four Daughters. The daughter "in search of a usable past" asks, "Why did Moses say at Sinai, 'Go not near a woman,' addressing only men, as if preparation for revelation was not meant for us, as well?" The daughter "who wants to erase her difference" wonders about the importance of women's issues. The daughter "who does not know that she has a place at the table" asks, "What is this?" And the daughter "who asks no questions" is told: "From the moment Yocheved, Miriam, and the midwives questioned Pharaoh's edict until today, every question we ask helps us leave Egypt a little farther behind" (Tamara Cohen, Sue Levi Elwell, and Ronnie Horn, eds., The Journey Continues: Ma'yan Passover Haggadah, 1997).

Just as the women defied Pharaoh, so we too as readers must confront and challenge troubling aspects of our sacred narratives. The persistent hardening of Pharaoh's heart results in the Israelites' night of redemption, but we must never forget that this same night was one of horror for the Egyptians. We must continue to ask the questions that preserve our awareness of the Other's story. Did the Israelites hear the tzaakah (cry) of the Egyptians (12:30)? Did it remind them of their own cry—the tzaakah in 3:7, which brought God's attention to their plight? Year after year, as we recall at our seder table the wonders God performed for us, we must remember the price the Other paid for our liberation.

—Suzanne Singer

• • • • • • •

Voices

• • • • • • •

Passover Love Song

Hara E. Person

Exodus 12:1–20

The seder is a love song written in the language of silver polish and dishpan hands freshly grated lemon zest blanched almonds ground pecans shelled pistachios pitted olives sliced meat matzah meal white tablecloths to-do lists trips to Boro Park and Sahadi's

This is how it's done.

ashkenazi haroset vegetarian chopped liver
my mother's real chopped liver
Bonnie's matzah ball soup
Israeli salad
gefille fish terrine chestnut farfel stuffing tzimmes
leek and shallot kugel salmon in grape leaves with pine nuts turkey and brisket
coconut macaroons sephardic lemon pistachio cookies pecan meringues chocolate dipped apricots

Remember.

tables stretched the length of the house tulips on the mantle
my grandmother's blue glass plates
Aunt Hannah and Uncle Joe's silver

Nana's candlesticks
the silver salt bowls from my mother Frieda and Solly's cut-glass horseradish pot the wedding present seder plate grape juice stains on the tablecloth thin paperback haggadot our mismatched family of friends silly half-versions of songs and don't lick the wine from your finger after the plagues

Don't be fooled by the easy domesticity of these words.

This is more than a recipe for nostalgia.
This is an urgent coded message of survival adaptation love.

Read between the words.

Boiled Beet

Anna Swanson

Exodus 12:3–13

Each seder is a retelling.
We come together and taste our way through the story: Matzo, unleavened because fleeing women can't wait for bread to rise; Charoset, the mortar used to bind stone together;
Bitter herbs, the taste of slavery.

She passes me the haggadah and I read out loud about the shank bone, the blood which marked the doors of Jewish houses with a message

BO

to the angel of death saying, spare this home.

This year we use a crooked beet instead, smear beet juice on doorposts and white picket fences.

I want to run around the city with a boiled beet, mark the skin of women everywhere, screaming may this body this body
this body be spared.

Miriam's Song

Eleanor Wilner

Exodus 12:29–30

Death to the first born sons, always—
The first fruits to the gods of men.
She had not meant it so, standing in the reeds back then, the current tugging at her skirt like hands, she had only meant to save her little brother, Moses, red-faced with rage when he was given to the river. The long curve of the Nile would keep their line, the promised land around the bend. Years later when the gray angel, like the smoke trail of a dying comet, passed by their houses with blood smeared over doorways, Miriam, her head hot in her hands, wept as the city swelled with the wail of Egypt's women.
Then she straightened up, slowly plaited her hair and wound it tight around her head, drew her long white cloak with its deep blue threads

around her, went out to watch the river where Osiris, in his golden funeral barge, floated by forever . . .

as if in offering, she placed a basket on the river, this time an empty one, without the precious cargo of tomorrow. She watched it drift a little from the shore. She threw one small stone in it, then another, and another, till its weight was too much for the water and it slowly turned and sank. She watched the Nile gape and shudder,

then heal its own green skin. She went to join the others, to leave one ruler for another, one Egypt for the next.
Some nights you still can see her, by some river where the willows hang, listening to the heavy tread

of armies, those sons once hidden dark in baskets, and in her mind she sees her sister, the black-eyed Pharaoh's daughter, lift the baby like a gift from the brown flood waters and take him home to save him, such a pretty boy and so disarming, as his dimpled hands reach up, his mouth already open for the breast.

O the Night of the Weeping Children

Nelly Sachs (transl. Michael Hamburger)

Exodus 12:29–30

O the night of the weeping children!
 O the night of the children branded for death!
 Sleep may not enter here.
 Terrible nursemaids
 Have usurped the place of mothers,
 Have tautened their tendons with the false death,
 Sown it on to the walls and into the beams—
 Everywhere it is hatched in the nests of horror.
 Instead of mother's milk, panic suckles those little ones.

Yesterday Mother still drew Sleep toward them like a white moon,
 There was the doll with cheeks derouged by kisses
 In one arm,
 The stuffed pet, already Brought to life by love,
 In the other—
 Now blows the wind of dying,
 Blows the shifts over the hair
 That no one will comb again.

This Night

Hara E. Person

Exodus 12:29–30

Outside there is only the pulsating darkness, the terrified wails of other mothers' pain.
 Death winds through nearby villages and distant towns.
 And I, I stand safe inside the light-filled shelter, my arm wrapped tight around the narrow shoulders of my precious first-born.

In colorless gear the soldiers defend our boundaries,
 bursts of fire red in the shadows.
 The cycle continues still.
 Our sons fighting their sons,
 too many children lost on the way to freedom.
 In the morning the siren sounds the all-clear and we emerge to a newly drawn landscape, safe for now but still far from redemption.

Meditation for Tefillin

Elizabeth Tikvah Sarah

Exodus 13:9, 16

| | |
|---|--|
| I cannot bind myself to You | My own answer is wound around with every |
| I can only unbind myself continually and free | taut binding and unbinding blood rushing heart pounding life-force surging pushing |
| Your spirit within me | So why this tender-cruel parody of bondage black leather straps skin gut and sacred litany of power and submission which binds us Your slave-people still? |
| | straining struggling to break through to You panting straining |

בשלה ◆ B'shalach

EXODUS 13:17–17:16

Crossing the Sea and Crises in the Wilderness

PARASHAT B'SHALACH ("when [Pharaoh] let [the people] go") recounts the crossing of the sea, the culmination of the story of the Israelite sojourn in Egypt. From the beginning of the book of Exodus, the goal of leaving Egypt is part of the narrative thread describing the oppressive measures that Pharaoh uses to keep the Israelites in Egypt. That goal is finally realized once the Israelites traverse the Sea of Reeds. This climactic event is related in two versions: a prose account in 14:1–31, followed by a poetic account (called in rabbinic literature Shirat HaYam, "Song at the Sea") in 15:1–22. The latter is more of a celebratory or victory hymn than a record of the Exodus event. Without the prose version, the sequence and details of the crossing would be unclear. However, without the poetic one—which may be a female composition—the soaring emotion of escape and the realization of God's role in deliverance would be lost.

Fleeing from Egypt does not end the Israelites' woes. They are far from the Promised Land, and they must cross the uninviting Sinai Peninsula. The crises they face in the wilderness—military threats and shortages of food and water—are the focus of 15:22–17:16. These predicaments foreshadow the challenges they must deal with as an agrarian people living in the highlands of the land of Israel.

Just as women and water began the story of the liberation from Egypt (Exodus 2), so too

Women and water frame the story of Israel's beginnings.

they bring it to its fulfillment. Miriam, the sister who first stood by the water (the Nile River) to watch over her baby brother, now, as a prophet, leads the women in interpreting what crossing the water (the Sea of Reeds) means. Thus, women and water frame the story of Israel's beginnings, from servitude to freedom.

—Carol Meyers

Outline—

I. DEPARTING FROM EGYPT (13:17–22)

II. CROSSING THE SEA (14:1–31)

- A. Egyptian pursuit (vv. 1–14)
- B. Splitting of the sea (vv. 15–25)
- C. Rejoining of the waters (vv. 26–31)

III. CELEBRATING DELIVERANCE (15:1–21)

- A. Song at the Sea (vv. 1–19)
- B. Song of Miriam (vv. 20–21)

IV. JOURNEYING IN THE WILDERNESS (15:22–17:16)

- A. Water crisis (15:22–27)
- B. Food crisis (16:1–36)
- C. Another water crisis (17:1–7)
- D. Military crisis (17:8–16)

13:17

Now when Pharaoh let the people go, God did not lead them by way of the land of the Philistines, although it was nearer; for God said, “The people may have a change of heart when they see war, and return to Egypt.”¹⁸ So God led the people round about, by way of the wilderness at the Sea of Reeds.

Now the Israelites went up armed out of the land of Egypt.¹⁹ And Moses took with him the bones of Joseph, who had exacted an oath from the children of Israel, saying, “God will be sure to take notice of you: then you shall carry up my bones from here with you.”

וַיְהִי בָּשָׁלֵחַ פָּרֻעַ אֶת-הָעָם וְלֹא־
נָחַם אֱלֹהִים דֶּרֶךְ אֶרֶץ פְּלִשְׁתִּים כִּי קָרוֹב
הֵוָה כִּי | אָמַר אֱלֹהִים פָּנִינְחָם הָעָם
בְּרַאֲתָם מְלֻחָּמָה וְשָׁבוּ מִצְרִימָה: ¹⁸ וַיְסַבֵּב
אֱלֹהִים | אֶת-הָעָם דֶּרֶךְ הַמִּדְבָּר יַסְדוֹף
וְחַמְשִׁים עָלָו בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל מִארֶץ מִצְרַיִם:
¹⁹ וַיַּקְהֵל מֹשֶׁה אֶת-עָצְמוֹת יוֹסֵף עַמּוֹ כִּי
הַשְׁבֵּעַ הַשְׁבֵּעַ אֶת-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְאָמֹר
פָּקַד יַפְקַד אֱלֹהִים אֶתְכֶם וְהַעֲלִיתֶם אֶתְכֶם
עָצְמֹתַי מִזָּה אֶתְכֶם:

Departing from Egypt (13:17–22)

This parashah continues the account of the journey away from Egypt and into the wilderness that began in 12:37–42. God’s involvement is apparent from the outset: God chooses the route, and God’s presence as manifest in pillars of cloud and fire leads the people as they travel. Moses’ role as human leader—so prominent in negotiations with the pharaoh that were featured in the previous three Torah portions—now gives way to divine leadership.

17. way of the land of the Philistines. This phrase refers to the coastal route from Egypt to Israel. The route derives its name from the Philistines, who settled the southern coast of Canaan in the early 12th century B.C.E. As such, it is anachronistic as a reference to the earlier migration from Egypt that this story is recounting.

war. This is perhaps a reference to the militarized way stations on the heavily traveled coastal route.

18. by way of the wilderness at the Sea of Reeds. This designates a more circuitous and difficult route. “Sea of Reeds” (or “Reed Sea”) is a literal translation of yam suf and almost certainly does not refer to the Red Sea. It is a descriptive term for a body of water with an abundance of reedy plants rather than the designation of a specific sea. Attempts to identify the sea have proved fruitless, for this is an impressionistic recollection of escape rather than an accurate accounting of geographic places.

19. bones of Joseph. The Israelites comply

- ▶ Food can be called Israel’s national obsession.

ANOTHER VIEW ➤ 400

- ▶ There are moments that define us.... Crossroads come disguised in many forms.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ➤ 402

- ▶ In rabbinic literature, Miriam and Moses often appear in parallel, with Miriam given an equal status to Moses.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ➤ 400

- ▶ ...now, in the darkness, / there is only motion / and my mother's hand.

VOICES ➤ 404

²⁰They set out from Succoth, and encamped at Etham, at the edge of the wilderness. ²¹went before them in a pillar of cloud by day, to guide them along the way, and in a pillar of fire by night, to give them light, that they might travel day and night. ²²The pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night did not depart from before the people.

14 יהוה said to Moses: ²Tell the Israelites to turn back and encamp before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, before Baal-zephon; you shall encamp facing it, by the sea. ³Pharaoh will say of the Israelites, “They are astray in the land; the wilderness has closed in on them.” ⁴Then I will stiffen Pharaoh’s heart and he will pursue them, that I may gain glory through Pharaoh and all his host; and the Egyptians shall know that I am יהוה.

And they did so.

with Joseph’s deathbed request that his bones be buried in Israel (Genesis 50:24–26), thus making the Sinai journey a funeral procession as well as a trek to freedom.

20. set out...encamped. Formulaic language—departing from place A and arriving at place B—introduces the second of what will be twelve stages of the wilderness journey. The symbolic number twelve suggests a set number of places and thus a purposeful journey rather than a period of random wandering. Most of the places mentioned in the account of the wilderness journey have not been firmly identified—nor is it likely that they ever will be, for the names have been gathered from various sources, or even invented by the storyteller, to give a sense of reality to the dimly remembered recollections of the journey.

21. pillar of cloud...pillar of fire. Similar to signals that caravans use, these pillars represent God’s presence. This imagery will recur in the account of the Tabernacle (Exodus 33:9–10) and elsewhere in the Torah (see 16:10).

²⁰וַיֵּסֹעַ מִסְפָּת וַיַּחֲנֹן בְּאֶתְمָ בְּקַצָּה הַמִּדְבָּר: ²¹וַיַּהֲוֶה הַלְּךָ לִפְנֵיכֶם יוֹמָם בָּעֶמֶד עַד נִיחָתֶם הַדָּرֶךְ וְלִילָּה בָּעֶמֶד אֲשֶׁר לְהַאֲיר לְהָם לִלְכָת יוֹמָם וְלִילָּה: ²²לְאִזְמִישׁ עַמּוֹד הַעֲנָן יוֹמָם וְעַמּוֹד הַאֲשֶׁר לִילָּה לִפְנֵי הַעַם: כ יְד וַיֹּאמֶר יהוה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה לְאֹמֶר: ²דָבָר אֶל-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיֵּשֶׁבוּ וַיַּחֲנֹן לִפְנֵי פַי הַחִירָת בֵּין מְגֻדָּל וּבֵין חֵים לִפְנֵי בָעֵל עַפְן נְכֻחוּ תְּחִנּוּ עַל-הַקִּים: ³וַיֹּאמֶר פָּרָעָה לְבָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל נְבָקִים קָם בָּאָרֶץ סָגַר עַלְלֵיכֶם הַמִּדְבָּר: ⁴וַחֲזַקְתִּי אֶת-לְבַב-פָּרָעָה וַרְדֵף אַחֲרֵיכֶם וַאֲבִרְבָּה בְּפָרָעָה וּבְכָל-חִילָיו וַיַּדְעָו מִצְרָיִם כִּי-אָנִי יהוה וַיַּעֲשֵׂוּ:

Crossing the Sea (14:1–31)

The sea crossing is set forth in three prose sections, each introduced by “יהוה said to Moses” (vv. 1, 15, 26). The literary structure thus emphasizes God’s control of what happens.

EGYPTIAN PURSUIT (14:1–14)

Having reached Etham, the Israelites are told to backtrack so that the pharaoh will think they are lost, thus setting the stage for one last appearance of the motif of the hardening of Pharaoh’s heart. The Egyptians will attempt to capture the fleeing and frightened Israelites, but they will fail because of God’s spectacular intervention.

4. gain glory. The Heb. root is k-b-d, language that provides a sense of irony, for the “hardening” of the pharaoh’s heart sometimes uses the same root (see at 10:1). The action caused by the Egyptian ruler’s fateful stubbornness thus portends an event that will magnify God.

Egyptians shall know that I am יהוה. Acknowledging the existence, and sometimes the su-

⁵When the king of Egypt was told that the people had fled, Pharaoh and his courtiers had a change of heart about the people and said, “What is this we have done, releasing Israel from our service?” ⁶He ordered his chariot and took his force with him; ⁷he took six hundred of his picked chariots, and the rest of the chariots of Egypt, with officers in all of them. ⁸יהוה stiffened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he gave chase to the Israelites. As the Israelites were departing defiantly, ⁹the Egyptians gave chase to them, and all the chariot horses of Pharaoh, his riders, and his warriors overtook them encamped by the sea, near Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon.

¹⁰As Pharaoh drew near, the Israelites caught sight of the Egyptians advancing upon them. Greatly frightened, the Israelites cried out to יהוה.

¹¹And they said to Moses, “Was it for want of graves in Egypt that you brought us to die in the wilderness? What have you done to us, taking us out of Egypt? ¹²Is this not the very thing we told you in Egypt, saying, ‘Let us be, and we will serve the Egyptians, for it is better for us to serve the Egyptians than to die in the wilderness?’” ¹³But Moses said to the people, “Have no fear! Stand by, and witness the deliverance which יהוה will work for you today; for the Egyptians whom you see today you will never see again. ¹⁴יהוה will battle for you; you hold your peace!”

⁵וַיָּגֹל לְמֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם כִּי בָּרוּךְ הָעָם וַיַּחֲפֹךְ
לִבֵּב פְּרֻעָה וַיַּעֲבֹדוּ אֶל-הָעָם וַיֹּאמֶר
מִה-זֶּאת עֲשֵׂינו כִּי-שְׁלַחְנוּ אֶת-יִשְׂרָאֵל
מִעֲבָדֵנו: ⁶וַיַּאֲסַר אֶת-רַכְבָּיו וְאֶת-עַמּוֹ
לְקַח עָמוֹ: ⁷וַיָּקַח שְׁשִׁמְאוֹת רַכְבֵּב בַּחוֹר
וְכָל רַכְבֵּי מִצְרָיִם וְשָׁלַשּׁ עַל-בָּלָל: ⁸וַיַּחֲזַק
יְהוָה אֶת-לֵב פְּרֻעָה מֶלֶךְ מִצְרָיִם וַיַּרְדַּךְ
אַחֲרֵי בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וּבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל יָצְאִים בַּיּוֹם
רַקְמָה: ⁹וַיַּרְדַּךְ מִצְרָיִם אַחֲרֵיכֶם וַיִּשְׁיגּוּ
אֹתָם חֲנִים עַל-הָלוּם בְּלִסְוֹל רַכְבֵּי פְּרֻעָה
וַיַּפְרַשְׁיוּ וַיַּחֲלֹלוּ עַל-פִּי הַחִירָת לְפָנֵי בָּעֵל צָפֵן:

¹⁰וַיַּפְרַעָה הַקָּרֵב וַיִּשְׁאֹוּ בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת-
עַינֵּיהֶם וְהַנֵּה מִצְרָיִם | נָסַע אַחֲרֵיכֶם
וַיַּירְאָו מָאֵד וַיַּצְעֲקוּ בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶל-יְהוָה:
¹¹וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים לְקַחְתָּנוּ לִמְوֹת בְּמִדְבָּר מִה-זֶּאת
עֲשֵׂית לְנֵנוּ לְהֹצִיאָנוּ מִמִּצְרָיִם: ¹²הַלְאֵذָה
הַדָּבָר אֲשֶׁר דִּבְרָנוּ אֶלָּיכֶם בְּמִצְרָיִם כִּי טוֹב לְנֵנוּ
חֶרְלָל מִמְּנוּ וּנְעַבְדָה אֶת-מִצְרָיִם כִּי טוֹב לְנֵנוּ
עַבְדָ אֶת-מִצְרָיִם מִמְּנָנוּ בְמִדְבָּר: ¹³וַיֹּאמֶר
מֹשֶׁה אֶל-הָעָם אֶל-תִּרְאֹו הַחֲנִיכְבָו וְרָאֹו
אַתִּישְׁעַת יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר-יְעַשָּׂה לְכֶם הַיּוֹם לֹא כִּי אֲשֶׁר רְאִיתֶם אֶת-מִצְרָיִם הַיּוֹם לֹא
תִּטְפֹּו לְזֹאתֶם עוֹד עַד-עוֹלָם: ¹⁴זֶה יְלִיחָם לְכֶם וְאַתֶּם תִּחְרָשׁוּ: פ premacy, of Israel's God is a recurring theme of the Exodus account (see 5:2 and 10:2).

7. picked chariots . . . the rest of the chariots.

Given the elite nature of a chariot corps, such detail highlights the enormous social and military distance between the pursuers and their prey.

8. defiantly. Literally “with hand [held] high,” this is an allusion to having an uplifted weapon. Thus it is an image of defiance.

11–12. The terrified Israelites pose three rhetorical questions, imbued with biting sarcasm.

Their outcry is less a lack of faith in God than a sign of human anguish in the face of the perceived threat of death in the wilderness.

13. “Have no fear! Stand by, and witness the deliverance.” The people's three questions elicit three reassuring imperatives. The language here is used in military contexts to calm troops before battle and to denote battle readiness (see Deuteronomy 20:3; Joshua 10:25).

14. “will battle for you.” Moses' resolute and reassuring response introduces the “divine

¹⁵Then said to Moses, “Why do you cry out to Me? Tell the Israelites to go forward. ¹⁶And you lift up your rod and hold out your arm over the sea and split it, so that the Israelites may march into the sea on dry ground. ¹⁷And I will stiffen the hearts of the Egyptians so that they go in after them; and I will gain glory through Pharaoh and all his warriors, his chariots and his riders. ¹⁸Let the Egyptians know that I am, when I gain glory through Pharaoh, his chariots, and his riders.”

¹⁹The angel of God, who had been going ahead of the Israelite army, now moved and followed behind them; and the pillar of cloud shifted from in front of them and took up a place behind them, ²⁰and it came between the army of the Egyptians and the army of Israel. Thus there was the cloud with the darkness, and it cast a spell upon the night, so that the one could not come near the other all through the night.

²¹Then Moses held out his arm over the sea and drove back the sea with a strong east wind all that night, and turned the sea into dry ground. The waters were split, ²²and the Israelites went into the sea on dry ground, the waters forming a wall for

¹⁵וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה מִה־תַּצְעַק אֲלֵי־
דְּבִרֵךְ אֶל־בְּנֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּסְעוּ: ¹⁶וְאַתָּה הָרָם
אֶת־מִطְּפָךְ וְנַטָּה אֶת־יָדְךָ עַל־הָיִם וּבְקָעָהוּ
וַיָּבֹאוּ בְנֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּתוֹךְ הָיִם בִּיבְשָׁה:
¹⁷וְאַנְתִּי הָנַנִּי מַחְזֹק אֶת־לְבַב מִצְרָיִם וַיָּבֹא
אֶחָרֵיכֶם וְאֶפְבָּדָה בְּפִרְעָה וּבְכָל־חַיִלּוֹ
בְּרַכְבּוֹ וּבְפִרְשָׁיו: ¹⁸וַיַּדְעֻוּ מִצְרָיִם כִּי־אָנִי
יְהוָה בְּהַכְּבָדִי בְּפִרְעָה בְּרַכְבּוֹ וּבְפִרְשָׁיו:
¹⁹וַיַּעֲשֵׂה מִלְאָר הָאֱלֹהִים הַהֲלָל לְפָנֵי מִחְנָה
יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיָּלֹךְ מַאֲחִירָהִים וַיַּשְׁעַע עַמּוֹד הָעָנוֹן
מִפְנֵיכֶם וַיַּעֲמֹד מַאֲחִירָהִים: ²⁰וַיָּבֹא בֵּין
מִחְנָה מִצְרָיִם וּבֵין מִחְנָה יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּהַ
עַנוֹן וְהַחֲשָׁר וַיַּאֲרֹר אֶת־הַלִּילָה וְלֹא־קָרְבָּ
וְאֶל־זָהָב בְּלַ-הַלִּילָה:
²¹וַיַּלְטֵת מֹשֶׁה אֶת־יָדוֹ עַל־הָיִם וַיַּלְכֵד יְהוָה
אֶת־הָיִם בְּרוּחַ קָרְבָּן עַזָּה בְּלַ-הַלִּילָה
וַיִּשְׁם אֶת־הָיִם לְחַרְבָּה וַיַּבְקֹעַ הַמִּים:
²²וַיָּבֹאוּ בְנֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּתוֹךְ הָיִם בִּיבְשָׁה וְהַמִּים לְהַם חֹמֶה מִימִינָם וּמִשְׁמָאלָם:

warrior” theme. Drawn from Canaanite mythology, the image of God doing battle with Israel’s foes is a powerful expression of divine might and one of the most masculine biblical metaphors applied to God (see at 15:3). Military language suffuses the depiction of God’s involvement in delivering the people.

SPLITTING OF THE SEA (14:15–25)

The sea event takes the narrative to a new level. The signs and wonders performed in Egypt are intense versions of natural devastation, and the horrific slaying of the first-born is a counterpoint to the earlier Egyptian infanticide and an etiology for various Israelite rituals. But the splitting of the sea lies in the realm of cosmic battle.

16. “your rod.” Moses’ staff is a symbol of authority and an instrument of magical acts (see 4:2–3, 17).

19. angel of God. The narrator has not previously mentioned this divine messenger (compare 3:2), who appears to have been leading the Israelites along with the pillar of cloud, which contains God’s presence (13:21). Both shift to the rear, forming a protective shield between the people and the advancing Egyptians (v. 20).

21. his arm. The narrative now refers to Moses’ arm only and not his rod (compare v. 16).

east wind. Winds from the east, known today by the Arabic term chamsin, are notorious in the Levant for their suffocatingly hot gusts.

them on their right and on their left.²³The Egyptians came in pursuit after them into the sea, all of Pharaoh's horses, chariots, and riders.²⁴At the morning watch, יהוה looked down upon the Egyptian army from a pillar of fire and cloud, and threw the Egyptian army into panic.²⁵[God] locked the wheels of their chariots so that they moved forward with difficulty. And the Egyptians said, "Let us flee from the Israelites, for יהוה is fighting for them against Egypt."

²⁶Then said to Moses, "Hold out your arm over the sea, that the waters may come back upon the Egyptians and upon their chariots and upon their riders."²⁷Moses held out his arm over the sea, and at daybreak the sea returned to its normal state, and the Egyptians fled at its approach. But יהוה hurled the Egyptians into the sea.²⁸The waters turned back and covered the chariots and the riders—Pharaoh's entire army that followed them into the sea; not one of them remained.²⁹But the Israelites had marched through the sea on dry ground, the waters forming a wall for them on their right and on their left.

³⁰Thus delivered Israel that day from the Egyptians. Israel saw the Egyptians dead on the shore of the sea.³¹And when Israel saw the wondrous power which had wielded against the Egyptians, the people feared יהוה; they had faith in יהוה and in God's servant Moses.

REJOINING OF THE WATERS (14:26–31)

The restoration of the divided waters brings deliverance for the Israelites but death for the Egyptian army.

28. not one of them remained. Taken literally, the complete annihilation of the Egyptian army seems excessive and tragic. However, the story is more likely a literary way to emphasize divine might and God's concern for the oppressed. Realizing that it is not a historical record of the complete slaughter of many thousands of Egyptians partially

²³וַיַּרְא֨ פְּנֵ֣י מִצְרָיִם וַיַּבְאֹו אֶחָרֵיכֶם בְּלִסְעָדָה
פְּרֻעָה רַכְבָּו וַיַּפְרִשׂוּ אֶל-תֹּוךְ הַיּוֹם: ²⁴וַיַּהֲיוּ
בְּאַשְׁמָנָת הַבָּקָר וַיִּשְׁקַף יְהוָה אֶל-מִחְנָה
מִצְרָיִם בְּעֶפְמוֹד אַשׁ וְעַזְןָ וְלֹהֶם אָתָּה מִחְנָה
מִצְרָיִם: ²⁵וַיַּסַּר אֶת אַפְנָן מֶרְכַּבְתֵּיכֶם
וַיַּנְהַגְתָּה בְּכָבְדָת וַיֹּאמֶר מִצְרָיִם אָנוֹסָה
מִפְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל כִּי יְהוָה נָלַת לְהֶם
בְּמִצְרָיִם: פ

²⁶וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה נְתַת אֶת-יְדֶךָ
עַל-הַיּוֹם וַיָּשִׁבוּ הַמְּפִימָה עַל-מִצְרָיִם עַל-רַכְבָּו
וְעַל-פְּרִשְׁיוֹ: ²⁷וַיְשִׁיט מֹשֶׁה אֶת-יְדֵוֹ עַל-הַיּוֹם
וַיָּשִׁבַּת הַיּוֹם לְפָנָות בְּקָר לְאִיתָנוֹ וּמִצְרָיִם
גָּסִים לְקַרְאָתוֹ וַיַּגְעַר יְהוָה אֶת-מִצְרָיִם
בְּתוֹךְ הַיּוֹם: ²⁸וַיָּשִׁבוּ הַמְּפִימָה וַיַּכְסְּוּ אֶת-
הַרְכָּב וְאֶת-הַפְּרִשְׁים לְכָל-הַיּוֹם פְּרֻעָה
הַבָּאִים אֶחָרֵיכֶם בַּיּוֹם לְאַיִשְׁאָר בְּהָם
עַד-אֶחָד: ²⁹וַיַּבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל הַלְּכָוּ בִּיבְשָׁה
בְּתוֹךְ הַיּוֹם וְהַמְּפִים לְהֶם חָמָה מִימִינָם
וּמִשְׁמָאלָם:

³⁰וַיַּוְשַׁע יְהוָה בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא אֶת-יִשְׂרָאֵל
מִינִּיד מִצְרָיִם וַיַּרְא יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת-מִצְרָיִם מִתְּ
עַל-שְׁפַת הַיּוֹם: ³¹וַיַּרְא יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת-יְדֵי
הַגָּדְלָה אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה יְהוָה בְּמִצְרָיִם וַיַּרְא
הָעָם אֶת-יְהוָה וַיַּאֲמִינֵוּ בְּיְהוָה וּבְמֹשֶׁה עֲבָרוּ: פ

ameliorates our modern revulsion at so many deaths. Yet we still must confront the reality of a tradition that recounts and even celebrates this extensive loss of human lives. (See the introduction to 11:1–10).

31. wondrous power. Literally, "great hand (or: arm)." This translation masks the use of corporeal language for conveying divine might. God's arm, not Moses', becomes the instrument of destruction.

bad faith. The Hebrew word denotes trust rather than belief.

(continued on p. 387)

ט אָנוּ יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת-הַשִּׁירָה הַזֹּאת לִיהְוָה וְיִאמְרוּ
 סֻסָּא אֲשֶׁרֶת לִיהְוָה בְּגִגְעָה גָּאָה
 וְרַכְבָּבוֹ רַמָּה בַּיּוֹם:
 לִשְׁוֹעָה
 אֱלֹהִי וְאַנְגָּלוֹהוּ
 אָבִי וְאַרְמָמְנוֹהוּ:
 וּמְבָרֵךְ 4 מִרְכְּבַת פְּרִיעָה וְחִילּוּ יְרֵה בַּיּוֹם שְׁמוֹ:

troops after battle (see at 15:20). Thus, the title “Song of Miriam” that is often used by modern scholars and interpreters for v. 21 might in fact be appropriate for this passage as well.

1. Moses...sang this song. The prose introduction mentions Moses, the chief human protagonist of the Exodus narrative, as the performer of the Song, along with the people. Hence it has traditionally been assumed that Moses is the author of the Song. Why would a woman’s composition (see previous comment) be attributed to a man? Perhaps the centrality of Moses to the Exodus story meant that authorship of this hymnic masterpiece accrued to him.

I will sing to יהוה. Directed to God alone, human agency in the victory over the enemy disappears; neither Moses’ rod nor outstretched arms, both prominent in the prose account (14:16, 21, 26–27), appear in the poem.

He. On the palpable masculinity of the poetic figure employed in vv. 1–4, see at v. 3, below.

2. יהוה...deliverance. The first part of this verse is also found in Isaiah 12:2 and Psalm 118:14, suggesting a liturgical use of this resounding affirmation of God’s power to save those in need.

enshrine. This term may allude to the building of an abode (shrine) for God, a project to which much of the second half of Exodus is devoted. However, because the poetry places it in parallel with “exalt,” the Hebrew term might better be translated “glorify.”

ancestors. Heb. av, which is sometimes translated “father.” Yet here it does not refer to the poet’s biological male parent; rather, it alludes to the ancestors of Genesis as a collective (see also Exodus 3:13, 15, 16; 4:5; 13:5, 11). The inclusive term “ancestor” best represents the poet’s claim that the deity celebrated for deliverance at the sea is the same as the One who appeared to earlier generations.

3. the Warrior. As one of the most strikingly male metaphors applied to God in the Bible, this

(continued on p. 389)

B'SHALACH

15 Then Moses and the Israelites sang this song to יְהוָה. They said:

I will sing to יְהוָה, for He has triumphed gloriously;
 Horse and driver He has hurled into the sea.
²יְהוָה is my strength and might;
 He is become my deliverance.
 This is my God and I will enshrine Him;
 The God of my ancestors, and I will exalt Him.
³יְהוָה, the Warrior—
 יְהוָה is His name!
⁴Pharaoh's chariots and his army
 He has cast into the sea;

Celebrating Deliverance (15:1–21)

Most scholars understand the poetic celebration of Israel's miraculous rescue from the Egyptians to be a very ancient poem, dating to the late 12th or early 11th century B.C.E.—much older than the somewhat different prose account that precedes it. In form and content, the poetry draws from the mythological epics of ancient Canaan, in which the heroic deity Baal conquers the primordial forces of chaos, represented by surging waters, so that order can be established. The military imagery of that cosmic battle is echoed and historicized in the Song at the Sea (Shirat HaYam), in which the natural elements—water and wind—become God's weapons against human enemies. The miracle of deliverance is captured in exuberant language, making this passage the thematic centerpiece of Exodus.

Thus far the narrative movement of the book has taken us toward God's holy mountain, first mentioned in 3:1 and now again at the end of this poem (see also 3:12 and 4:27); most of the rest of Exodus focuses on God's revelation at this mountain. On its location, see at 18:5.

The poetic account of victory at the sea appears in two segments, a longer version (vv. 1–18, with a prose frame in vv. 1 and 19) followed by a much briefer version (v. 21, with a prose introduction in v. 20). On biblical poetry, see at Deuteronomy 32:1–43.

SONG AT THE SEA (15:1–19)

Many modern scholars conclude that the Song was created and performed by women. Beginning in the mid-20th century, a considerable body of literary, historical, sociological, and musicological evidence has been amassed to suggest that the Song should be attributed to Miriam. For example, one ancient manuscript tradition calls it the Song of Miriam. Also, songs of military triumph belong to a victory song genre typically composed and performed by women—not men—to greet victorious

- שְׁלַשִׁיו טָבֵעוּ בַּיּוֹם-סֶופֶךְ: ۵ תְּהִמָּת יְכֻסִּימָו יַרְדוּ בְּמִצּוֹלָת בָּמוֹזָעַ
 אָבָן: ۶ יִמְינֶה יְהֹוָה נָאָדָרִי בְּכָחָנָה
 יִמְינֶה ۷ וּבָרְבָ גָאוֹגָה מִתְהָרָסָה
 קְמִימִיכָ ۸ וּבְרוּתָה תְּשַׁלֵּחַ חֲרֹנָה יַאֲכִלָּמוּ בְּקַשָּׁה
 נַצְבֵּי בְּמַוְנָדָה
 נְזָלִים ۹ אָמָר קְפָאוּ תְּהִמָּת בְּלָבִיזִים:
 אָזְוִיב אָרְדָף אָשָׁרִיג
 נְפָשִׁי ۱۰ אָרְרִיק חֲרָבִי תּוֹרִישָׁמוּ יְדֵיכָי
 בְּרוֹתָחָק בְּסָמוּ יָם אֲדִירִים: ۱۱ מִידְכָמָכָה בְּאַלְמָת יְהֹוָה battle is often the booty gathered by the victors. This phrase probably implies the taking of humans as well as goods, since conquering soldiers took nubile women as spoil (see Judges 5:30). Young female captives were especially prized for their reproductive and labor potential, for the mortality rates for women due to death in childbirth meant a shortage of wives. (See at Deuteronomy 21:10–14.)

II. Who is like You, יְהֹוָה, . . . ? The proclamation of the incomparability of God is expressed in a resounding rhetorical question that has become part of daily Jewish liturgy and is known as the Mi Chamochah. The uniqueness of God flows from the divine might exemplified by the deliverance at the sea.

among the celestials. The very declaration of uniqueness is witness to a polytheistic world: God is unique among the “celestials,” a somewhat misleading translation of a word that means “gods.” Because true monotheism did not emerge in ancient Israel until the 6th century B.C.E., this verse may well reflect an earlier period in which the existence of other divine beings was assumed. The reference to other gods also may denote the lesser heavenly beings, or “hosts,” that were part of ancient Israel’s

(continued on p. 391)

B'SHALACH

And the pick of his officers
 Are drowned in the Sea of Reeds.
⁵The deeps covered them;
 They went down into the depths like a stone.
⁶Your right hand, יְהוָה, glorious in power,
 Your right hand, יְהוָה, shatters the foe!
⁷In Your great triumph You break Your opponents;
 You send forth Your fury, it consumes them like straw.
⁸At the blast of Your nostrils the waters piled up,
 The floods stood straight like a wall;
 The deeps froze in the heart of the sea.
⁹The foe said,
 “I will pursue, I will overtake,
 I will divide the spoil;
 My desire shall have its fill of them.
 I will bare my sword—
 My hand shall subdue them.”
¹⁰You made Your wind blow, the sea covered them;
 They sank like lead in the majestic waters.
¹¹Who is like You, יְהוָה, among the celestials; term signifies divine power and asserts that human military victories must be attributed to God. It contributes to our contemporary notion that the biblical deity is male. However, although warriors were understood to be male, this imagery does not mean that the Torah's composer(s) believed God to be a male being. Note that female imagery for God also occasionally appears in the Bible, including in Exodus (see at 16:4, 19:4; Numbers 11:12; Deuteronomy 32:13, 18). In Isaiah 42:13–14, the image of God as a warrior is juxtaposed with the image of God as a woman in labor. The prophet uses both metaphors to convince the people of God's power.

5. The deeps. Heb. t'homot, the plural of t'hom, the deep waters of Genesis 1:2. This mention echoes the name of the Babylonian goddess Tiamat and represents primeval water and chaos.

6. right hand...shatters. This image depicts God's military might, for the right hand is the one used for holding a weapon in Near Eastern mythology.

8. blast of Your nostrils. Although God's flared nose usually means hot anger, here the anthropomorphic language for God depicts the ferocious winds that will reconfigure the waters.

9. “I will divide the spoil.” An incentive for

| | |
|---|---|
| נָרָא תְּהִלַּת עֲשָׂה | פֶּמֶכָּה נָאֵר בְּקָדֵשׁ |
| 13 נְחִיתָ | 12 נְטִיתָ יְמִינָךְ תְּבֻלָּעָמוֹ אָרֶץ: |
| נְהִלָּתָ בְּעֹזָךְ אֶל-גָּנוֹה | בְּחִסְדְּךָ עַמְּזָךְ גָּאֵלָתָ |
| חִיל | קָדְשָׁךְ: |
| 14 שָׁמְעוּ עֲפָנִים יְרִגְזוּן | אָחָזָוּ יִשְׁבְּיִ פְּלִשְׁתָּה: |
| 15 אָז נְבָחָלָ אֶל-וְתִי | אָדוֹם |
| נְמָגוֹן | כָּל יִשְׁבְּיִ כְּנָעָן: |
| 16 תְּפֵל עַל-יְהָם אִימְתָּה | וּפְחַד |
| עַד-יְעַבֵּר עַמְּזָךְ | יַעֲבֵר עַמְּקָ יְהָהָה |
| מִכּוֹן | קָנִיתָ: |
| מִקְדָּשׁ אֲדֹנֵי בּוֹנְנוֹ | לְשָׁבְתֶךָ פְּעָלָת יְהָהָה |
| 17 תְּבָאָמוֹ וִתְּשִׁעַמָּו בְּהָר נְחִלָּתָךְ | יְדִירָךְ: |
| 18 יְהָהָה יִמְלָךְ לְעַלְמָם וְעַד: | בָּאָ סּוֹס פְּרֻעה בְּרַכְבּוֹ וּבְפְרַשְׁיוֹ בְּיִם |
| וַיֵּשֶׁב יְהָהָה עַל-הָם | וּבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל הָלְכוּ בִּיבְשָׁה בְּתוֹךְ הַיּוֹם: |
| אֶת-מֵי הַיּוֹם | פָּ |

16. ransomed. A better translation would be “created.” The root k-n-h can mean “to acquire” (hence “ransomed”; compare “redeemed” in v. 13) or “to create.” It was used when Eve, the archetypal mother, gave birth to her first child (Genesis 4:1), thus linking childbirth with divine creativity.

17. Your own mountain . . . The sanctuary . . . which Your hands established. This verse reflects mythic language for God’s sacred mountain and indicates that God has a hands-on role in the construction of this sanctuary. Like v. 13, the passage refers to God’s imagined dwelling in the heavens.

18. reign. The exultant closing line of the poem applies another masculine metaphor to God: kingship, an image commonly employed for deities in ancient Near Eastern literature (see at Deuteronomy 33:5).

(continued on p. 392)

B'SHALACH

Who is like You, majestic in holiness,
Awesome in splendor, working wonders!

¹²You put out Your right hand,
The earth swallowed them.

¹³In Your love You lead the people You redeemed;
In Your strength You guide them to Your holy abode.

¹⁴The peoples hear, they tremble;
Agony grips the dwellers in Philistia.

¹⁵Now are the clans of Edom dismayed;
The tribes of Moab—trembling grips them;
All the dwellers in Canaan are aghast.

¹⁶Terror and dread descend upon them;
Through the might of Your arm they are still as stone—
Till Your people cross over, יְהוָה,
Till Your people cross whom You have ransomed.

¹⁷You will bring them and plant them in Your own mountain,
The place You made to dwell in, יְהוָה,
The sanctuary, O Lord, which Your hands established.

¹⁸יְהוָה will reign for ever and ever!

¹⁹For the horses of Pharaoh, with his chariots and riders, went into the sea; and יְהוָה turned back on them the waters of the sea; but the Israelites marched on dry ground in the midst of the sea.

understanding of divinity (see at Deuteronomy 6:4; Isaiah 3:1; Jeremiah 5:14; Zechariah 1:3).

13. love. Heb. chesed, a relational term. When applied to God, it indicates God's utter commitment and kindness to Israel. (See at Deuteronomy 7:12.)

holy abode. Although some understand this to be a reference to the Jerusalem temple and thus consider the Song a composition of the monarchic period (beginning in the 10th century), the mythic nature of the hymn makes it more likely that "holy abode" refers to God's heavenly habitation. The Israelites, like their Canaanite neighbors, imagined a divine abode in heaven that became the model for God's earthly dwellings, the Tabernacle and the Temple (see at v. 17 and 25:9).

14–15. dwellers in Philistia...Edom...Moab...Canaan. These four groups of people represent the Israelites' early enemies. The Song serves as a warning to them, anticipating or reflecting Israel's early struggles in the Promised Land.

²⁰Then Miriam the prophet, Aaron's sister, picked up a hand-drum, and all the women went out after her in dance with hand-drums. ²¹And Miriam chanted for them:

Sing to יהוה, for He has triumphed gloriously;
Horse and driver He has hurled into the sea.

²⁰וַתִּקְרֹב מִרְיָם הַנֵּבִיאָה אֶחָdot אֲחִרְן אֶת־
הַתְּפִלָּה בִּידָה וַתֵּצֵא כָּל־הַנְשִׁים אַחֲרֶיהָ
בְּחֻפָּם וּבְמַחְלָתָה: ²¹וַתַּעֲנֹן לָהֶם מִרְיָם
שָׁירׂו לְיְהֻנָּה בִּירְגָּאָה גָּאָה
סֻס וּרְכָבָו רְמָה בִּים: ס

SONG OF MIRIAM (15:20–21)

Preceded by a prose introduction (v. 20), the single stanza of v. 21 is known in contemporary parlance as the Song of Miriam. This poetic verse is likely the title of the full poem, suggesting that the victory song in vv. 1–19 may have been composed by a woman (see at v. 1).

20. Miriam the prophet. Unnamed in Moses' birth narrative (2:4, 7–9), the woman mentioned in more biblical books (five) than any other female figure finally gets a name. She also gets a title, one that never appears for Moses in the book of Exodus. Miriam is the first of several biblical women—including Deborah (Judges 4:4), Huldah (II Kings 22:14), and Noadiah (Nehemiah 6:14)—to bear the title of prophet. The authority of prophets as conveyors of God's will to the people was gender inclusive both in the biblical world and in other parts of the ancient Near East. The 8th-century-B.C.E. prophet Micah acknowledges Miriam's leading role in the Exodus when he proclaims in God's name that to deliver Israel, "I sent you Moses, Aaron, and Miriam" (Micah 6:4). In the present verse, Miriam appears also as a singer and a leader of other singing women, a role familiar from other biblical texts and ancient cultures.

hand-drum. This translation of tof is more appropriate than either the anachronistic "tambourine" or the vague "timbrel" that appears in many English translations; tambourines are not attested until the Roman period, more than a thousand years later. The hand-drum, or frame-drum, is the only percussion instrument mentioned in the Bible, in contrast to other classes of instruments (such as string and wind instruments) for which there are many examples. Archeological evidence—such as terracotta statuettes of women (never men) playing the frame-drum—indicates that this was largely a woman's instrument. Thus, the mention of instrumental ensembles, including the frame-drum in other biblical texts (such as Psalm 150), suggests the presence of female musicians. Because of the rhythmic nature of ancient Hebrew music, drum playing—by women—would have been an essential part of most musical performances.

all the women. It was apparently customary in ancient Israel for women to welcome victorious armies with victory songs (see Judges 11:34; I Samuel 18:6–7). Accomplished female musicians would have earned the esteem of their community. Also, groups of female performers likely would have met together to practice their instruments and compose songs for specific occasions, which would have provided occasions for female bonding and for women to exert organizational skills and mentor younger performers.

dance. Along with singing and drum playing, dance was an integral part of this performance genre. It is likely that most musical performances in the biblical world involved movement as well as vocal and instrumental expression (see Psalms 149:3; 150:4).

²²Then Moses caused Israel to set out from the Sea of Reeds. They went on into the wilderness of Shur; they traveled three days in the wilderness and found no water. ²³They came to Marah, but they could not drink the water of Marah because it was bitter; that is why it was named Marah. ²⁴And the people grumbled against Moses, saying, “What shall we drink?” ²⁵So he cried out to耶和華, and耶和華 showed him a piece of wood; he threw it into the water and the water became sweet.

There [God] made for them a fixed rule; there they were put to the test. ²⁶[God] said, “If you will heed your God 耶和華 diligently, doing what is upright in God’s sight, giving ear to God’s commandments and keeping all God’s laws, then I will not bring upon you any of the diseases that I brought upon the Egyptians, for I 耶和華 am your healer.”

Journeying in the Wilderness

(15:22–17:16)

No sooner do the Israelites safely cross the sea than they are confronted with two universal problems of community survival. The first concerns sustenance: how will they secure enough to eat and drink? The second concerns safety: how will they deal with military threats? The provision of food and water and the protection from enemies signal God’s beneficent presence. The deliverance from Egypt was depicted largely in masculine imagery—with God portrayed, for example, as a warrior defeating Israel’s enemies. Now we come to accounts of divine resolution of food and water problems; arguably these episodes portray God with female imagery, insofar as women in ancient Israel were the ones who frequently drew water (see Genesis 24:11 and Exodus 2:16) and nearly always provided food.

WATER CRISIS (15:22–27)

The trust in God and Moses established by the sea episode (14:31) gives way to bitter complaints in the face of life-threatening thirst.

²²וַיִּשְׁלַח מֹשֶׁה אֶת-יִשְׂרָאֵל מִים-טוֹף וַיֵּצֵא אֶל-מִדְבָּר-שָׂוֵר וַיָּלֹכְד שֶׁלְשָׁת-יָמִים בַּמִּדְבָּר וְלֹא-מֵצָאוּ קְרִים: ²³וַיָּבֹא מִרְתָּה וְלֹא-יָכְלוּ לְשֹׁתָה מִים מִפְרָה בַּיּוֹרִים הֵם עַל-כֵּן קָרְאָשָׁמָה מִרְתָּה: ²⁴וַיָּלֹא דָעַם עַל-מֹשֶׁה לְאמֹר מַה-יִנְשְׁתָּחַת: ²⁵וַיַּעֲצַק אֶל-יְהוָה וַיֹּרֶה יְהוָה עַז וַיַּשְׁלַח אֶל-הַמִּינִים וַיִּמְתַּקֵּן הַמִּינִים

שָׁם שָׁם לוֹ חָק וּמִשְׁפָּט וְשָׁם נְסָהוּ ²⁶וַיֹּאמֶר אֶם-שְׁמוּעַ תִּשְׁמַע לְקוֹל | יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם וְהַיְשֵׁר בְּעֵינֵיכֶם תַּעֲשֶׂה וְהַזְּנוּת לִמְצֹותְיכֶם וּשְׁמַרְתָּ בְּלִחְקִיעַ כָּל-הַמְּחֻלָּה אֲשֶׁר-שְׁמַתִּי בְּמַעַרְיוֹת לְאַשְׁרִים עַלְיכֶם בַּיּוֹם אֲנִי יְהוָה רֹפֵא: ס

23. Marah. Like other places named in this parashah, this is an unknown locale and probably not a real place. Instead, its name, meaning “bitterness,” indicates what happens there. In addition, the name connects the bitterness of wandering with the bitterness of work in Egypt (1:14), which the bitter herbs of the Passover ritual commemorate (12:8).

25. piece of wood . . . the water became sweet. What might nowadays be considered magic and thus superstition was believed to be efficacious in the biblical world. Judging from Palestinian folklore, throwing wood into water may be akin to a modern European homeopathic procedure: a piece of wood with bitter-tasting bark removes the bitterness of impotable water.

test. The theme of testing appears in all the food and water crises in this parashah.

26. I耶和華 am your healer. God as healer may evoke images of women as well as men as practitioners of folk medicine. Because women in ancient Israel prepared food and kept herb gardens, they possessed knowledge about the specific properties of various plant substances used in folk medicine.

²⁷And they came to Elim, where there were twelve springs of water and seventy palm trees; and they encamped there beside the water.

16 Setting out from Elim, the whole Israelite community came to the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departure from the land of Egypt. ²In the wilderness, the whole Israelite community grumbled against Moses and Aaron. ³The Israelites said to them, “If only we had died by the hand of יהוה in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the fleshpots, when we ate our fill of bread! For you have brought us out into this wilderness to starve this whole congregation to death.”

⁴And יהוה said to Moses, “I will rain down bread for you from the sky, and the people shall go out and gather each day that day’s portion—that I may thus test them, to see whether they will follow My instructions or not. ⁵But on the sixth day, when they apportion what they have brought in, it shall prove to be double the amount they gather each day.” ⁶So Moses and Aaron said to all the Is-

²⁷ וַיָּבֹא אִילָמָה וְשֶׁם שְׁתִים עֲשָׂרָה עֵינֶת מִים וְשְׁבעִים תְּמִירִים וַיְחִנּוּ שֶׁם עַל-הַמִּים :

16 וַיָּסֻעُ מַאיִלָּם וַיָּבֹא בֶּלְעָדָת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶל-מִדְבָּר-סִינְיָן אֲשֶׁר بֵּין-אִילָם וּבוּזָן סִינְיָן בַּחֲמִשָּׁה עַשֶּׂר יוֹם לְחִדְשָׁה הַשְׁנִי לְצַאתָם מִארְץ מִצְרָיִם : ² וַיָּלִינוּ בֶּלְעָדָת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל עַל-מִשָּׁה וּעַל-אַהֲרֹן בֶּפְנִיקְרָב : ³ וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֲלֵיכֶם בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִי-יִתְּנוּ מֹתָנָנוּ בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁנִי בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרָיִם בְּשַׁבְּתָתָנוּ עַל-סִיר הַבָּשָׂר בְּאַכְלָנִי לְחַם לְשָׁבָע כִּי-הַזֹּאתָם אָתָנוּ אֶל-הַפְּנִיקְרָב הַזֶּה לְהַמִּית אֶת-בֶּלְעָדָת הַזֶּה בָּרְעָב : ⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר יהָוה אֶל-מִשָּׁה הַנִּגְנִי מִמְּטוּר לְכָם לְחַם מִן-הַשָּׁמַיִם וַיָּצָא הָעָם וַיָּקְטַע דָּבָר יוֹם בַּיוֹמָו לְמַעַן אֲנָסָנוּ תִּלְעַל בְּתוּרָתִי אַמְּלָא : ⁵ וְהִיא בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁנִי וְהִכְנִינוּ אֶת אֲשֶׁר-יָבִיאוּ וְהִיא מִשְׁנָה עַל אֲשֶׁר-יָקְטַע יוֹם ⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר מִשָּׁה וְאַהֲרֹן אֶל-כָּל-בְּנֵי

FOOD CRISIS (16:1–36)

The next stage of the trek across Sinai is marked by food shortages, which are resolved by the provision of manna and quail in this somewhat repetitive narrative. The testing motif recurs, the complaining persists, and a strange ritual involving the manna is recounted.

1. wilderness of Sin. The place name Sin (unrelated to the English noun “sin”) may be an alternative form of Sinai.

2. grumbled. This word of complaint occurs repeatedly in 16:1–12. The frequent use of “grumble” may be the narrator’s way of expressing the intensity of the people’s dissatisfaction with their lot.

3. “our fill of bread.” Cereal products were so central to the diet of people in ancient Israel—providing approximately half of their daily caloric intake—that the Bible uses the term for bread (lechem) sometimes to denote food more generally. Close examination of biblical texts mentioning bread production, and consideration of relevant archeological and ethnographic data, together indicate that women were the producers of bread in households in the Land of Israel. In an arduous series of operations—grinding, sifting, kneading, baking (which involved collecting wood and building fires)—taking several hours every day, women transformed grain into bread. This complex process was essential because human beings cannot digest the endosperm surrounding the grain nor the grains’ nutritional starch in raw form. On women and bread-baking, see also at 11:5, 12:8, and Leviticus 26:26.

4. “I will rain down bread.” In miraculously producing “bread” from on high, God assumes the female role of bread producer.

raelites, “By evening you shall know it was who brought you out from the land of Egypt; ⁷and in the morning you shall behold the Presence of יהוה, because [God] has heard your grumblings against us.” ⁸Since it is I, ” Moses continued, “who will give you flesh to eat in the evening and bread in the morning to the full—because יהוה has heard the grumblings you utter—what is our part? Your grumbling is against us, יהוה, not against us!”

Then Moses said to Aaron, “Say to the whole Israelite community: Advance toward יהוה, who has heard your grumbling.” ¹⁰And as Aaron spoke to the whole Israelite community, they turned toward the wilderness, and there, in a cloud, appeared the Presence of יהוה.

¹¹ spoke to Moses: ¹²“I have heard the grumbling of the Israelites. Speak to them and say: By evening you shall eat flesh, and in the morning you shall have your fill of bread; and you shall know that I יהוה am your God.”

¹³In the evening quail appeared and covered the camp; in the morning there was a fall of dew about the camp. ¹⁴When the fall of dew lifted, there, over the surface of the wilderness, lay a fine and flaky substance, as fine as frost on the ground. ¹⁵When the Israelites saw it, they said to one another, “What is it?”—for they did not know what it was. And Moses said to them, “That is the bread which יהוה has given you to eat. ¹⁶This is what has commanded: Each household shall gather as much as it requires to eat—an omer to a person for as many of you as there are; each household shall fetch according to those in its tent.”

ישראל עָרֶב וַיַּדְעָתָם כִּי יְהוָה הֽוּא
אֲתֶכְם מִארֵץ מִצְרָיִם: ⁷ וּבְקָר וּרְאִיתָם
אֲתִ-כְבֹוד יְהוָה בְּשָׁמְעוֹ אֲתִ-תְלַנְתִיכָם
עַל-יְהוָה וַיְחַנֵנוּ מָה כִּי תָלוּנוּ תְלַנִינוּ עָלֵינוּ:
8 וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה בְּתִתְיַהֵן יְהוָה לְכֶם בְּעָרֶב בְּשָׁר
לְאַכְל וְלַחַם בְּבָקָר לְשָׁבָע בְּשָׁמְעַי יְהוָה
אֲתִ-תְלַנְתִיכָם אֲשֶׁר-אַתֶם מַלְינִים עַל-
וַיְחַנֵנוּ מָה לֹא-עָלֵינוּ תְלַנְתִיכָם כִּי עַל-
יְהוָה:

9 וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל-אַהֲרֹן אָמַר אֱלֹהִים
עֲדַת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל קָרְבָו לִפְנֵי יְהוָה כִּי שָׁמַע
אַתְתְלַנְתִיכָם: ¹⁰ וַיְהִי בְּדָבָר אַהֲרֹן אֶל-
כָּל-עֲדַת בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-הַמִּדְבָר
וְהַגֵּל כְּבֹוד יְהוָה נְרָאֵה בְּעַנְנָה:

11 וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה לְאָמֵן: ¹² שָׁמַעְתִּי
אֲתִ-תְלַזֵת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל דִבֶר אֱלֹהִים לְאָמֵר
בֵּין הָעֲרָבִים תָאכְלוּ בָשָׁר וּבְבָקָר תִשְׁבֹועַ
לְחַם וַיַּדְעָתָם כִּי אַנְיִי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִיכָם:
13 וַיְהִי בְּעָרֶב וַיַּתַּעַל הַשְּׁלֹו וַתַּכְסֵס אֶת-הַמִּחְנָה וּבְבָקָר הִיְתָה שְׁכַבָת הַטְלָסְבִיב
לְמִחְנָה: ¹⁴ וַיַּתַּעַל שְׁכַבָת הַטָּל וְהַגֵּה עַל-פִנֵּי הַמִּדְבָר דַק מַחְסָפֵס דַק בְּכֻפֵר עַל-
הָאָרֶץ: ¹⁵ וַיַּרְא אֶל-אַהֲרֹן וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֱישׁ
אֶל-אֲחֵיכֶם מִן הָוַיָּא כִּי לֹא יָדַעַו מִה-הָוָא
וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל-הָוָא הַזֶּה הוּא הַלְּחֵם אֲשֶׁר נָתַן
יְהוָה לְכֶם לְאַכְלָה: ¹⁶ זֶה הַדְבָר אֲשֶׁר צִוָּה
יְהוָה לְקַטוּ מִפְנֵנו אִישׁ לְפִי אַכְלֹו עַמּוֹר
לְגַלְגַלָת מִסְפֵר נְפִשְׁתִיכָם אִישׁ לְאַשְׁר
בָּאַהֲלָו תִקְחוּ:

7. “you shall behold the Presence of יהוה.” Divine presence is signified by God’s (female) role as bread provider.

12. you shall know. Ample food is seen as evidence of God’s providence and relationship to Israel.

13. quail. These small, easily prepared birds serve as the evening meal, perhaps only this once

(see Numbers 11). In ancient Israel, people rarely ate meat except at special occasions and festivals.

15. “What is it?” The Hebrew words of this question (man hu) provide a folk etymology for the term by which the bread from heaven will be known: man (“manna”) (v. 31).

16. “omer.” A measure of volume (see at v. 36).

¹⁷The Israelites did so, some gathering much, some little. ¹⁸But when they measured it by the omer, anyone who had gathered much had no excess, and anyone who had gathered little had no deficiency: each household had gathered as much as it needed to eat. ¹⁹And Moses said to them, “Let no one leave any of it over until morning.” ²⁰But they paid no attention to Moses; some of them left of it until morning, and it became infested with maggots and stank. And Moses was angry with them.

²¹So they gathered it every morning, as much as each one needed to eat; for when the sun grew hot, it would melt. ²²On the sixth day they gathered double the amount of food, two omers for each; and when all the chieftains of the community came and told Moses, ²³he said to them, “This is what Iyohoh meant: Tomorrow is a day of rest, a holy sabbath of Iyohoh. Bake what you would bake and boil what you would boil; and all that is left put aside to be kept until morning.” ²⁴So they put it aside until morning, as Moses had ordered; and it did not turn foul, and there were no maggots in it. ²⁵Then Moses said, “Eat it today, for today is a sabbath of Iyohoh; you will not find it today on the plain. ²⁶Six days you shall gather it; on the seventh day, the sabbath, there will be none.”

²⁷Yet some of the people went out on the seventh day to gather, but they found nothing. ²⁸And Iyohoh said to Moses, “How long will you all refuse to obey My commandments and My teachings? ²⁹Mark that it is Iyohoh who, having given you the sabbath, therefore gives you two days’ food on the sixth day. Let everyone remain in place: let no one leave the vicinity on the seventh day.” ³⁰So the people remained inactive on the seventh day.

³¹The house of Israel named it manna; it was ¹⁷וַיַּעֲשׂוּכָן בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּלְקֹטוּ הַמְּרַבָּה וְהַמְּמֻטָּה: ¹⁸וַיִּמְדֹדוּ בְּעֶמֶר וְלֹא הַעֲדִיקָה הַמְּרַבָּה וְהַמְּמֻטָּה לְאַחֲרֵי אִישׁ לְפִי-אַכְלוֹ לְקֹטוֹ: ¹⁹וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֲלֵיכֶם אִישׁ אַל-יָוֹתֶר מִמְּנָגָן עַד-בָּקָר: ²⁰וְלֹא-שְׁמַעוּ אֶל-מֹשֶׁה וַיּוֹתַר אֲנָשִׁים מִמְּנָגָן עַד-בָּקָר וַיָּרַם תּוֹלְעִים וַיָּבָאשׂ וַיִּקְצַּף עַל-הָמָה:

²¹וַיַּלְקֹטוּ אֹתוֹ בְּבָקָר בְּבָקָר אִישׁ בְּפִי אַכְלוֹ וְתִם הַשְׁמַשׁ וְנוֹמָס: ²²וַיֹּהִי בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁבִּיעִי לְקֹטוֹ לְחַמֶּן מִשְׁנָה שְׁנִי הַעֲמָר לְאַחֲרֵי וַיָּבָא בְּלִנְשִׁיאִי הַעֲדָה וַיַּגְדִּיל לְמֹשֶׁה: ²³וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיכֶם הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר דָּבַר יְהוָה שְׁבָתוֹן שְׁבָתוֹן לְיְהוָה מִחרְאָת אֲשֶׁר-תָּאָפוּ אֲפִי וְאֶת אֲשֶׁר-תָּבְשַׁלְלָה בִּשְׁלָל וְאֶת בְּלִ-הָעָדָף הַפְּנִיחוּ לְכֶם לְמִשְׁמַרְתָּה עַד-הַבָּקָר: ²⁴וַיַּגְדִּילוּ אֹתוֹ עַד-הַבָּקָר כַּאֲשֶׁר צֹוָה מֹשֶׁה וְלֹא הַבָּאֵשׂ וַיְרַפֵּה לְאַ-הִתְהַבֵּת בּוּ: ²⁵וַיֹּאמֶר מִשְׁלָה אֲכַלְהוּ הַיּוֹם קִי-שְׁבָתָה הַיּוֹם לְיְהוָה הַלּוּ לֹא תִמְצָאوهוּ בְּשָׂדָה: ²⁶שְׁשַׁת יְמִינֵיכֶם תַּלְקַטְתֶּהוּ וְבַיּוֹם הַשְּׁבִיעִי שְׁבָת לֹא יְהִי-בָּבוּ:

²⁷וַיֹּהִי בַּיּוֹם הַשְּׁבִיעִי יִצְאֹו מִן-הַעַם לְלַקְטָה וְלֹא מִצְאָו: ²⁸וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֲל-מֹשֶׁה עַד-אַנְךָ מְאַנְתָּם לְשִׁמְרָה מִצּוֹתָר וַתּוֹתַר: ²⁹רֹאֶה קִי-יְהוָה נִתְן לְכֶם הַשְּׁבָת עַל-בָּנֶיךָ הוּא נִתְן לְכֶם בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁבִּיעִי לְחַמֶּן יוֹמִים שְׁבָוָה אִישׁ תְּחַפֵּיו אֲלִיּוֹתָא אִישׁ מִמְּקָמוֹ בַּיּוֹם הַשְּׁבִיעִי: ³⁰וַיִּשְׁבַּטוּ הַעַם בַּיּוֹם הַשְּׁבִיעִי: ³¹וַיִּקְרָאוּ בֵית-יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת-שְׁמוֹ מִן וְהֹוּ

^{21–25}. This anachronistic passage assumes that Sabbath regulations forbidding work on the seventh day are known even before the Sinai revelation (20:8–11).

³¹. manna. On the name, see at v. 15.

Modern interpreters have tried but failed to show the historicity of the Exodus narrative by identifying manna with some known substance. Manna should be considered a non-natural substance, a miracle provided by God.

like coriander seed, white, and it tasted like wafers in honey.³² Moses said, “This is what יהוה has commanded: Let one omer of it be kept throughout the ages, in order that they may see the bread that I fed you in the wilderness when I brought you out from the land of Egypt.”³³ And Moses said to Aaron, “Take a jar, put one omer of manna in it, and place it before יהוה, to be kept throughout the ages.”³⁴ As יהוה had commanded Moses, Aaron placed it before the Pact, to be kept.³⁵ And the Israelites ate manna forty years, until they came to a settled land; they ate the manna until they came to the border of the land of Canaan.³⁶ The omer is a tenth of an eifah.

17 From the wilderness of Sin the whole Israelite community continued by stages as יהוה would command. They encamped at Rephidim, and there was no water for the people to drink.² The people quarreled with Moses. “Give us water to drink,” they said; and Moses replied to them, “Why do you quarrel with me? Why do you try יהוה? ”³ But the people thirsted there for water; and בָּזְרֻע גָּד לְבָנ וַתֵּעֶמֹּו בְּצִפִּיחַת בְּרַבְשׁ :

 וַיֹּאמֶר מֵשֶׁה זוֹה הַדָּבָר אֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה
 מַלְאָה הַעֲמָר מִמְּנוּ לִמְשָׁמֶרֶת לִדְרָתֵיכֶם
 לְמַעַן | יִרְאֹו אֶת־הַלְּחֵם אֲשֶׁר הָאֱלֹהִי
 אֶתְכֶם בְּמִדְבָּר בְּהֹצִיאֵי אֶתְכֶם מִמָּרָץ
 מַעֲרִים :³³ וַיֹּאמֶר מֵשֶׁה אֶל־אַהֲרֹן קֹח
 צְנַצְנַת אֶתְת וְתִנְשְׁמָה מַלְאָה־הַעֲמָר מִן
 וְהַנֶּחֶת אֹתוֹ לְפָנֵי יְהוָה לִמְשָׁמֶרֶת
 לִדְרָתֵיכֶם :³⁴ כַּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אֶל־מֵשֶׁה
 וַיַּנְיחֵהוּ אַהֲרֹן לְפָנֵי הַעֲדָת לִמְשָׁמֶרֶת :
 וּבָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲכִלו אֶת־הַמּוֹן אֶרְבָּעִים
 שָׁנָה עַד־בָּאָם אֶל־אָרֶץ נֹשֵׁבָת אֶת־הַמּוֹן :
 אֲכִלו עַד־בָּאָם אֶל־קָצָה אָרֶץ בְּנֵעַן :³⁵

וְהַעֲמָר עִשְׂרִית הַאִיפָה הוּא : פ³⁶

וְיִסְטּוּ בְּלִיעָלָת בְּנֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל מִמִּדְבָּר
 סִין לְמַסְעֵיכֶם עַל־פִּי יְהוָה וַיְחַנֵּן בְּרַפִּידִים
 וְאַיִן מִים לְשַׁתַּת הָעָם :² וַיָּרַב הָעָם עַמִּ
 מֵשֶׁה וַיֹּאמְרוּ תְנוּלֵנוּ מִים וַיְשַׁתָּה וַיֹּאמֶר
 לְהַט מֵשֶׁה מִהְתְּרִיבֵנוּ עַמַּנִּי מִהְתִּנְסֵן
 אֶת־יְהוָה :³ וַיַּצְמַא שֵׁם הָעָם לְמִים וַיָּלֹן

32–33. This is probably the etiology of a ritual that did not survive into the post-biblical period.

34. before the Pact. This is an anachronistic and elliptical reference to the “Ark of the Pact,” said to be the repository for the Covenant document (see at 25:16).

35. forty years. That is, a generation.

36. eifah. This seems to have been the most common dry measure in ancient Israel, yet its exact capacity is not known; perhaps it was between ten and twenty liters.

ANOTHER WATER CRISIS (17:1–7)

Again the people claim they have nothing to drink, and Moses magically produces water by striking a rock. Sufficient water was a persistent problem in ancient Israel. Thus, it is no wonder that two water crises appear in succession. This incident appears in other biblical books (such as Deuteronomy 33:8; Psalm 95:7–8) as an important example of how God provides for the people—and also as an illustration of the people’s lack of trust that God will do so.

1. Rephidim. Because this place name is from a verb meaning “to help, support,” it is probably not a real place name but rather a name that symbolizes what is said to happen there: God helps Israel with water. (Also, in the next episode—which takes place at this same locale—Moses receives support for his arms so as to effect military victory; see vv. 8, 12.)

the people grumbled against Moses and said, “Why did you bring us up from Egypt, to kill us and our children and livestock with thirst?”⁴ Moses cried out to YHWH, saying, “What shall I do with this people? Before long they will be stoning me!”⁵ Then YHWH said to Moses, “Pass before the people; take with you some of the elders of Israel, and take along the rod with which you struck the Nile, and set out. I will be standing there before you on the rock at Horeb. Strike the rock and water will issue from it, and the people will drink.” And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.⁶ The place was named Massah and Meribah, because the Israelites quarreled and because they tried to test YHWH, saying, “Is YHWH present among us or not?”

⁸ Amalek came and fought with Israel at Rephidim. ⁹ Moses said to Joshua, “Pick some troops for us, and go out and do battle with Amalek. Tomor-

הַעַם עַל־מֹשֶׁה וַיֹּאמֶר לְפָנָה זוֹה הַעֲלִיתָנוּ מִמְּצָרִים לְהַמִּתָּ אֶתְּנִי וְאֶת־בְּנִי וְאֶת־מִקְנֵי בָּצָמָא:⁴ וַיַּצְعַק מֹשֶׁה אֶל־יְהוָה לְאָמֶר מֵהָ אָעַשָּׂה לְעַם הַזֶּה עַד מֵעַט וְסַקְלֵנִי:⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה עֲבָל לִפְנֵי הַעַם וְקַח אֶתְךָ מִזְקָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיְמַטֵּךְ אֲשֶׁר הַבִּתְהָר בּוֹ אֶת־יְהִיאָר קָח בִּידָךְ וְהַלְכָתָךְ:⁶ הַנְּנִינִי עַמְּדָל לִפְנֵיךְ שְׁם | עַל־הַצּוֹר בְּחַרְבָּ וְהַכִּתְהָר בְּצָרָ וְיִצְאֵו מִמְּנוּ מִים וְשַׁתָּה הַעַם וַיַּעֲשֵׂה בְּנֵי מֹשֶׁה לְעִינֵי זָקְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל:⁷ וַיַּקְרֵא שְׁם הַמָּקוֹם מִשְׁה וּמִרְיבָּה עַל־רִיבָּ | בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְעַל נְסָתָם אֶת־יְהֹוָה לְאָמֶר הִישׁ יְהֹוָה בְּקָרְבָּנוּ אַם־אַין:⁸ פ

⁸ וַיָּבֹא עַמְלָק וַיַּלְחַם עַם־יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּרִפִּידָם:⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל־יְהוָה בְּחַרְלָנָנוּ אָנָשִׁים וְצָא הַלְתָם בְּעַמְלָק מִחרְ אַנְכִי

3. “us and our children and livestock.” That women are not listed separately indicates that they are part of “the people” registering the complaint. Clearly they have a voice in life-and-death matters affecting the community.

5. “rod with which you struck the Nile.” Note the irony: the rod that had magically made the Nile undrinkable (7:14–24) will now provide potable water.

6. “Horeb.” This is another name for Sinai (see 3:1, 12), perhaps reflecting a separate narrative tradition.

7. Massah and Meribah. Like so many of the places on the wilderness trek, these terms, meaning “Test” and “Quarrel,” are probably symbolic rather than geographical names.

“Is YHWH present . . . ?” This agonizing query reveals a fundamental conundrum regarding the concept of divine presence. Because God’s presence is equated with the provision of food and water (see, for example, 16:4–7), thirst and hunger seem to mean divine absence. (The same issue arises in the next episode regarding protection from enemies: military defeat would seem to indicate divine absence.) How can these facts be reconciled with the notion that God is everywhere? (See also Another View, p. 400.)

MILITARY CRISIS (17:8–16)

The protective aspect of divine presence becomes immediately apparent in the confrontation with the Amalekites, who are defeated as long as Moses holds high his magical staff.

8. Amalek. The Amalekites are traditional enemies of the Israelites, especially in the pre-monarchic era. That they are also related to the Israelites—Amalek is a grandson of Esau (Genesis 36:11–12)—makes their traditional enmity all the more tragic.

Rephidim. See at v. 1.

9. Joshua. This is the first appearance of Moses’ eventual successor.

row I will station myself on the top of the hill, with the rod of God in my hand.”¹⁰Joshua did as Moses told him and fought with Amalek, while Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill.¹¹Then, whenever Moses held up his hand, Israel prevailed; but whenever he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.¹²But Moses’ hands grew heavy; so they took a stone and put it under him and he sat on it, while Aaron and Hur, one on each side, supported his hands; thus his hands remained steady until the sun set.¹³And Joshua overwhelmed the people of Amalek with the sword.

¹⁴Then said to Moses, “Inscribe this in a document as a reminder, and read it aloud to Joshua: I will utterly blot out the memory of Amalek from under heaven!”¹⁵And Moses built an altar and named it Adonai-nissi.¹⁶He said, “It means, ‘Hand upon the throne of יהוה ! יהוה will be at war with Amalek throughout the ages.’”

נִצְבֵּל עַל־רֹאשׁ הָגֶבֶעָה וּמִטָּה הָאֱלֹהִים
 בַּיּוֹד :¹⁰ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה יְהוָשֻׁעַ בַּאֲשֶׁר אָמַר־לּוֹ
 מֹשֶׁה לְהַלְּחָם בְּעַמְלָק וּמֹשֶׁה אַהֲרֹן וּחוֹר
 עַלּוּ רָאשׁ הָגֶבֶעָה :¹¹ וְהַזֵּה בַּאֲשֶׁר יָרִים
 מֹשֶׁה יָדוֹ וְגַבְرָה יִשְׂרָאֵל וּבַאֲשֶׁר יָנִיחַ יָדוֹ
 וְגַבְרָה עַמְלָק :¹² וַיְדַיּוּ מֹשֶׁה בְּכָרִים וַיַּקְחוּ
 אָבִן וַיִּשְׁמִינוּ תְּחִתָּיו וַיֵּשֶׁב עַלּוּה וְאַהֲרֹן
 וְחוֹר תִּמְכְּרוּ בַּיּוֹדְיוּ מִזְהָא אֶחָד וּמִזְהָא אֶחָד
 וַיְהִי יָדוֹ אָמוֹנוֹה עַד־בָּא הַשְׁמָשׁ :¹³
 וַיְחַלֵּשׁ יְהוָשֻׁעַ אֶת־עַמְלָק וְאַת־עַמְלָק
 לְפִירְחָרְבָּה : פ

וַיְאִמְרֵר יְהֹוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה כְּתַב זֶאת זְבָרוֹן
 בְּסֶפֶר וְשִׁים בְּאַזְנֵי יְהוָשֻׁעַ בִּימָחָה אֶמְחָה
 אֲתִזְכָּר עַמְלָק מִתְחַת הַשָּׁמִים :¹⁵ וַיַּבְנֵן
 מֹשֶׁה מִזְבֵּחַ וַיִּקְרָא שְׁמוֹ יְהֹוָה וְנֶסֶי :¹⁶
 וַיֹּאמֶר בַּיּוֹד עַל־בֵּטֶס יְהָה מִלְחָמָה לִיהְוֹה
 בְּעַמְלָק מִדָּר דָּר : פ

10. Hur. Along with Moses and Aaron, Hur is part of a triumvirate presented as Israel’s leaders in the wilderness (see 24:14).

14. “Inscribe this...as a reminder...and read it aloud.” This is the first explicit reference in the Bible to documents and to literacy. It takes for granted that Moses knew how to both read and write—the latter being a more elite skill in the ancient world.

“utterly blot out the memory.” The total destruction of Amalek will not only be genocidal but will also preclude existence in memory. This is harsh and troubling language for expressing divine power.

16. “Hand upon the throne of יהוה!” Or, according to a frequent emendation of the text, “...the banner of יהוה (nes).” Either way, this etiology for the altar’s name, Adonai-Nissi, is probably an ancient oath; it would be like swearing in God’s name. Oaths in the biblical world were sworn while placing one’s hand in a significant place.

“throughout the ages.” If Amalek symbolizes Israel’s enemies, this notice acknowledges the sad fact that military crises will always be part of Israelite life. With war in the ancient Near East being waged almost entirely by men, to the extent that the Bible is concerned for Israel’s security it not surprisingly focuses on male characters, with little attention given to the lives of women.

—Carol Meyers

Another View

BY BREAKING THROUGH the waters of the Sea of Reeds and emerging through the narrow passage, Israel is born as a liberated nation. Like any newborn, Israel expresses the need for food and water—and voices the fear of their absence. In response, God behaves as a mother, sometimes nurturing, sometimes stern, often setting limits.

Israel first faces a lack of water. When they encounter bitter waters, Moses sweetens them by casting in a piece of wood. Later, panic ensues because no springs are discovered at Rephidim. God instructs Moses to bring forth water from a rock with the very staff that turned the Nile to blood. On this initial leg of the journey, the people interpret the lack of water and food as indicative of God's absence, much as an infant interprets a lack of nourishment as the absence of nurture.

Food can be called Israel's national obsession, and it is used to gauge the relative safety or danger of a situation. Raw foods that require less chewing (milk, honey, manna) indicate relative stability, while meat has the potential to cause trouble (Numbers 11). Although no mention is made of Israel eating anything in Egypt before the Passover celebration (Exodus 12:8–9, 15), the people salivate when remembering Egyptian delicacies (Exodus 16:3; Numbers 11:5). While God promises Israel a land of milk and honey, they accuse God of trying to starve them in the wilderness (Exodus 16:3; Numbers 21:5). God rains bread from heaven (Exodus 16:4) as a taste of what is to come: manna that is white as milk and resembles the promised honey (Exodus 16:31). But, as Moses later informs the Divine, not even manna can fill the bottomless pit of Israel's appetite (Numbers 11:21–22).

Israel is born as a liberated nation; in response, God behaves as a mother.

Why are the people so hungry? Perhaps the trauma of slavery has left a residue of deprivation, or perhaps meals allow for some regularity during the journey through an unknown wilderness. The plot of the Torah implies that the people can find satisfaction only when they partake of the homeland's fruits (Joshua 5:11–12). Hunger is indicative of exile; and Israel is not sated until it finds a home.

—Rachel Havrelock

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

Then Moses and the Israelites sang this song (15:1). The Rabbis noted that the word shirah (song) appears ten times in the Hebrew Scriptures. The Song at the Sea (Exodus 15) is the second instance. According to M'chilta, an early commentary on Exodus, nine of these songs were sung in the past, but the tenth is for the "Age to Come." This passage also reports that "for all the songs referring to previous events the noun used (shirah) is in the feminine" (Shirta 1). In a revelatory exposition of rabbinic sexual politics, the sages explained that "even as a female gives birth, so the achievements of the past were followed by subjugation." That is, just as a woman who emerges from a successful labor is still subject to the authority of her husband, so Israel, despite small victories, has consistently been subjected to foreign conquest. However, in the case of the future song, predicted in "Sing unto תְּבוֹזָה a new song” (Isaiah 42:10), the masculine noun shir is used. This indicates “that just as no male gives birth, so the triumph which is yet to come will not be succeeded by subjugation” (M'chilta, Shirta 1).

B'SHALACH

Then Miriam the prophet (15:20). Miriam is called “the prophet” in this verse, although she never prophesies in the Bible. The M'chilta says she predicted the birth of Moses to her father, who praised her when Moses was born—but then blamed her when they were forced to expose him in the basket (Shirta 10; also BT Sotah 12a–13a, referring to Exodus 2:1–3).

and all the women went out after her in dance with hand-drums (15:20). The Rabbis speculated as to where the women obtained the musical instruments they played when they danced at the sea. Like a mother who remembers to pack all the necessities for a family trip, the women’s confidence that God would deliver them made them bring these instruments along: “But where did the Israelites get hand-drums and flutes in the wilderness? It was simply that the righteous were confident and knew that God would perform miracles and mighty deeds when they left Egypt, so they prepared hand-drums and flutes” (M'chilta, Shirta 10). Although the M'chilta calls the righteous tzaddikim (masculine plural), the medieval commentator Rashi, in his remarks on this verse, made a point of calling them tzadkaniot (feminine plural), referring to the women.

And Miriam chanted for them (15:21). Interpreters visualized two choral groups at the sea chanting the same song, both led by prophets: the men by Moses, the women by Miriam. Just as Moses recited the Song among the men, so it was Miriam who recited among the women: “Sing to הָרָה for He has triumphed gloriously” (M'chilta, Shirta 10).

In rabbinic literature, Miriam and Moses often appear in parallel, with Miriam given an equal status to Moses. In a midrash in the 13th-century-c.e. Midrash HaGadol, Joseph explains two dreams of Pharaoh in which the number three appears. According to Joseph’s interpretation, the double appearance of this number refers to the three patriarchs and to the three leaders who would redeem the people from Egypt: Moses, Aaron, and Miriam. Furthermore, the miraculous well of Miriam, which accompanied the people of Israel though the wilderness and sustained them because of Miriam’s righteousness (BT Taanit 9a; B'midbar Rabbah 1.2), was among the ten miraculous entities created by God during the twilight on the eve of the

Where did the Israelites get hand-drums and flutes in the wilderness?

first Sabbath (Mishnah Avot 5:6). This well complements the manna, which was given to the people because of Moses’ righteousness. The Talmud (BT Taanit 9a, among many other sources) explains as follows: “Rabbi Yose the son of Rabbi Judah says, ‘Three good leaders had arisen for Israel—namely, Moses, Aaron, and Miriam—and for their sake three good things were given: the well, the clouds of glory, and the manna. The first was given for the merits of Miriam, the second for those of Aaron, and the third for those of Moses.’” The well disappeared at Miriam’s death, but one tradition says a vessel of water from Miriam’s well is one of three concealed objects that Elijah will restore in the messianic age, along with vessels of manna and of sacred oil (M'chilta, Vayassa 6).

—Claudia Setzer

Contemporary Reflection

THERE ARE MOMENTS that define us: unexpected or unplanned moments when the decisions we make, the actions we take, determine all that will follow.

Crossroads come disguised in many forms. Many are unmarked, without a hint of what is ahead.

B'shalach describes such a crossroads. The crossing of the Sea of Reeds was not only the crossing out of Egypt and out of slavery, but also the entrance into an unknown future, made possible by a moment of extraordinary faith.

At the far bank of the sea, triumph rings out in instrumental music and in song, led by both Moses and Miriam. Yet earlier, with Egyptians in pursuit and the waters ahead, according to the Rabbis it was neither Moses nor Miriam who took center stage, but Nahshon ben Amminadab. Nahshon is a curious hero. Briefly mentioned as Aaron's brother-in-law (Exodus 6:23), the Torah neither notices nor lauds him. Yet the Rabbis praise him for his initiative, the one who first entered the billowing waves, leading all of Israel to safety.

Nahshon's heroism is a literary deduction. In Numbers 7:12, Nahshon, the prince of the tribe of Judah, brings the first offering to dedicate the Tabernacle. The Midrash surmises: "When it was time to dedicate the tabernacle, Moses confessed to the princes of the tribes, 'The Holy One has commanded you to bring offerings, but I do not know who should go first.' The princes looked at Nahshon, saying, 'This man has sanctified the name of the Holy One at the Sea of Reeds. He is worthy to bring the Shechinah. Let Nahshon go first'" (B'midbar Rabbah 12.21).

At the Sea of Reeds, according to midrashic tradition, Nahshon stood at a crossroads—whether to have faith and plunge into the water, or be gripped by fear and remain on the shore. What was that moment like? If we were on the shore of the sea that fateful day, how would we have acted? Confidently? Timidly? Would we have entered the water gingerly or with fury? Flailing or swimming? How do we approach the sea crossings in our own lives? Are we coerced by an army from behind, or pulled ahead by the unknown?

Some think of Nahshon as fearless, determined to be the first into the water. In Midrash T'hillim 114:8, Nahshon reputedly pelts his brothers with stones to assure his place of primacy. The daredevil confidence of this Nahshon contrasts sharply with another vision of this moment (M'chilta, B'shalach 5). Huddled together, a terrified crowd looks behind at the Egyptians and forward toward water. As they yell, "I don't want to go into the sea!" Nahshon jumps up in fear; losing his footing, he falls into the waves. Overcome with terror, he cites Psalms, "Save me, O God, for the waters have reached my neck" (Psalm 69:2). Here, Nahshon—a fearful, drowning man—cries for God's help. The midrash alternately envisions Nahshon as hapless victim, brash show-off, or eager leader.

Like Nahshon and Miriam, today's women face our own sea crossing.

As she emerges from the water, Miriam, too, faces an array of alternatives—an internal sea crossing of her own. Was it the time to forge ahead, adrenaline still coursing from their narrow escape? Was it the occasion to mourn the loss of the known, the familiar if oppressive Egypt? Was it the instant to comfort those catching their breath, those who had needed to run and swim faster than they believed possible? Was it safer to hang back and let others take their rightful place as leaders? Or was this the moment to lift up the hand-drum and triumphantly sing and dance, giddy with gratitude for God's redemption?

Miriam had the foresight to bring her hand-drum.

B'SHALACH

Miriam had the wisdom to gather her sisters to acknowledge and affirm the miracle, to mark the moment when their tenuous hope broke forth in joy—the birth of her community as a people touched by God.

Like Nahshon, Miriam's leadership is surprising. Kol ishah, the voice of a woman, Miriam's strong voice, had been heard previously only as a sister and daughter. Yet, at her sea crossing, emerging from the waters, she does not wait for someone else to change the world. She does not demur that she was not bred for greatness. She does not blend into the crowd. Instead, Miriam's voice rings out for all to hear.

Miriam is a leader: a prophet who speaks to and binds others to God. Like a large tallit on small shoulders, she is one upon whom the mantle of authority does not fit snugly, one who might have been surprised at her own influence, but one who nevertheless conscientiously undertakes responsibility for contributing to God's purpose—much like contemporary women leaders. In the waters of transition, Miriam sparks innovation, creativity, and hope, rooted in the past yet focused on the future—just like contemporary women leaders. Like Nahshon before the waves and Miriam after them, we ask: how do we navigate waters never traversed before? How do we create rituals that reflect the tradition yet give voice to our experience? How do we speak new words that include the familiar in a Holy tongue?

Like Nahshon and Miriam, today's women face our own sea crossing. We too can choose to enter the water: with quiet certitude, brash impulsiveness, or terror at what lies ahead. Or, we may decide to hang back, looking around for someone else to go in first. Eventually, when we enter—however we enter—we, and our world, are transformed.

In our time, the sea crossing may be when we hear a cry for social justice, when we unexpectedly find our voice waxing prophetic; it may come as we read a book, converse with a friend, or witness a scene in which we are seized with understanding about our place in the world. As we enter the water, if we speak and act out of awe and gratitude, if we look around and trust our vision, we may discover that we are bathed in and buoyed by the presence of God.

—Patricia Karlin-Neumann

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

Leaving Egypt

Merle Feld

Exodus 13:17–22

The night is so dark and I am afraid.
I see nothing, smell nothing,
the only reality—
I am holding my mother's hand.

And as we walk
I hear the sounds of a multitude in motion—
in front, behind,
all around,
a multitude in motion.

I have no thought of tomorrow,
now, in the darkness,
there is only motion
and my mother's hand.

Miriam: The Red Sea

Muriel Rukeyser

Exodus 14:26–15:21

High above shores and times,
I on the shore
forever and ever.
Moses my brother has crossed over to milk, honey,
that holy land.
Building Jerusalem.
I sing forever
on the seashore.
I do remember
horseman and horses, waves of passage
poured into war,
all poured into journey.
My unseen brothers have gone over, chariots deep seas under.
I alone stand here ankle-deep and I sing, I sing, until the lands
sing to each other.

The Other Shore

Shira Rubenstein

Exodus 14:26–15:21

The guilt begins on the other shore of the Reed Sea, with us, drained from terror and excitement,
with the sun beating down,
seagulls swooping overhead,
waves lapping against the bodies on the sand,
so gently, now.
Children laugh or cry,
but the world is quiet,
afterwards.

Who is like you, O God?
We know about fear
and doubt,
resentment and guilt.
We thought we'd be leaving it behind.
How heavy a load can be carried out of Egypt?
How many in that army were blameless?

How many innocents will die for this freedom?

We don't know whether these questions are for God or us.
We try to drown them out with drums,
hoarse, harsh song,
the pounding of tired feet in a desperate dance.
We think of the cracks of the whip,
the insults,
every murdered child
—all the times we wished something like this would occur.
We tell ourselves we have a right to rejoice.

It would be easier to believe if the horses hadn't had time to scream.

The Song of Miriam

Ruth H. Sohn

I, Miriam, stand at the sea and turn to face the desert stretching endless and still.
My eyes are dazzled
The sky brilliant blue
Sunburnt sands unyielding white.
My hands turn to dove wings.
My arms reach for the sky and I want to sing
the song rising inside me.
My mouth open
I stop.

Where are the words?
Where the melody?
In a moment of panic
My eyes go blind.
Can I take a step
Without knowing a Destination?
Will I falter
Will I fall
Will the ground sink away from under me?

The song still unformed—
How can I sing?

To take the first step—
To sing a new song—
Is to close one's eyes and dive into unknown waters.
For a moment knowing nothing risking all—
But then to discover
The waters are friendly
The ground is firm.

And the song—
the song rises again.
Out of my mouth
come words lifting the wind.
And I hear for the first the song that has been in my heart silent unknown even to me.

Thirst IV

Kadya Molodowsky (transl. Kathryn Hellerstein)

Exodus 15:22–25

My pitcher lies, dry and thirsty,
And I walk through all the streets
Seeking out a drop of water,
And I am spent
Near my pitcher.
I lay my lips
To the roots of the trees,
I stretch with eyes and mouth
To the sky's rains.
And my tongue is bitter from roots of the trees,
My mouth is thirsty,
And my eyes are tired from looking at the sky.
I seek my pitcher,
And it is dry.

יְתָרו ✦ Yitro

EXODUS 18:1–20:23

The Birth of a Nation: Israel Becomes a Covenanted People

PARASHAT YITRO (“Jethro”) records the transformative encounter between God and Israel at Mount Sinai, the moment when God and the people Israel become wedded in an exclusive covenantal relationship. After experiencing how God bore them “on eagles’ wings” (19:4) from Egypt, the people willingly accept God’s proposal: If they listen to God’s voice and obey the covenant, they will become God’s “treasured possession,” a “kingdom of priests and a holy nation” (19:5–6). The blare of a ram’s horn and a spectacular display of smoke, thunder, and lightning herald the appearance of the Divine. Then, the revelation of the commandments stipulate what it means to walk in God’s ways.

The teachings of the Decalogue, also known popularly as the Ten Commandments, guide the Israelites in their relationships with God and other human beings. The first four commandments charge the Israelites to worship God faithfully and to observe the Sabbath. The last five prohibit taking what is not yours: a human life, another man’s wife, or someone else’s property, either directly through stealing or indirectly through false testimony or coveting another’s belongings. The fifth commandment—a bridge between the precepts focused on the Divine and those concerned with humans—mandates reverence of one’s mother and father.

In the Decalogue, women are mentioned as mothers, wives, daughters, and servants. Elsewhere in the parashah, women play a more elusive role. Zipporah appears in the beginning of the portion, when Moses’ father-in-law, Jethro, travels to the wilderness of Sinai in order to reunite Moses with his wife, Zipporah, and their two sons. What is puzzling about this scene is that an earlier passage in Exodus suggests that Moses brought his family with him to Egypt (4:20, 24–26). When and why had she “been sent home” (18:2) to Midian?

Were women included in—or excluded from—the revelation at Sinai?

Even more perplexing and disturbing for many contemporary readers is the question of whether women were included in, or excluded from, the revelation at Sinai. How should we interpret Moses’ command to “not go near a woman” (19:15)? Does the masculine language of the laws address women? These issues are explored at 19:8, 15; introduction to 20:1–14; 20:10, 14, as well as in Another View (p. 421) and Contemporary Reflection (p. 423).

—Elaine Goodfriend

Outline—

I. JETHRO'S ADVICE TO MOSES (18:1–27)

- A. Jethro, Zipporah, and sons with Moses at Sinai (vv. 1–12)
- B. Jethro recommends delegating judicial authority (vv. 13–27)

II. PREPARING FOR THE COVENANT AND DIVINE REVELATION (19:1–25)

- A. Arriving at Sinai (vv. 1–2)
- B. God proposes a covenant and Israel accepts (vv. 3–8)
- C. Preparing for the divine revelation (vv. 9–25)

III. THE DECALOGUE (“TEN COMMANDMENTS”) (20:1–14)

- A. Introduction (vv. 1)
- B. The commandments (vv. 2–14)

IV. THE PEOPLE’S RESPONSE AND THE FIRST INSTRUCTION (20:15–23)

18:1

Jethro priest of Midian, Moses' father-in-law, heard all that God had done for Moses and for Israel, God's people, how יהוה had brought Israel out from Egypt.² So Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took Zipporah, Moses' wife, after she had been sent home,³ and her two sons—of whom one was named Gershom, that is to say, “I have been a stranger in a foreign land”;⁴ and the other was named Eliezer, meaning, “The God of my father's

ר וַיִּשְׁמַע יְתָרו כֹּהן מִדָּן חֲנִינָה מֹשֶׁה
אֵת בְּלֹאָשֶׁר עֲשָׂה אֱלֹהִים לְמֹשֶׁה
וְלִיְשָׁרָאֵל עַמּוֹ כִּי־הָזֹאת יְהוָה אֱתָה
יִשְׂרָאֵל מִפְּצָרִים: ² וַיַּלְךְ יְתָרו חֲנִינָה מֹשֶׁה
אֲת־צָבָרָה אֲשֶׁת מֹשֶׁה אַחֲרָ שְׁלוֹחִיתָה:
וְאֲתָה שְׁנִי בְּנֵיכֶם אֲשֶׁר שֵׁם הַאַחֲרָ גַּרְשָׁם
כִּי אָמַר גַּר חִילָּתִי בָּאָרֶץ נְכָרִיה: ⁴ וְשֵׁם
הַאַחֲרָ אֶלְיָזֶר פִּי־אֶלְהִי אָבִי בְּעֹזֶר וַיַּעֲלֵנִי

Jethro's Advice to Moses (18:1–27)

Moses' Midianite father-in-law, Jethro, joins the Israelites at Sinai and advises Moses how to create a system for resolving internal disputes. This passage serves as a transition between the liberation from Egypt and the revelation of God's teachings. The positive relations between Israelite and non-Israelite at the start of this parashah stand in direct contrast to the conclusion of the preceding parashah, which expresses permanent hostility toward Amalek (17:16). The desire to contrast “good gentile” with “bad gentile” may have dictated the placement of this episode.

JETHRO, ZIPPORAH, AND SONS WITH MOSES AT SINAI (18:1–12)

1. Jethro. Moses' father-in-law is referred to elsewhere as Jether (4:18), Hobab (Numbers 10:29; Judges 4:11), and Reuel (Exodus 2:18), though the latter may be the name of Jethro's father.

2. So Jethro... took Zipporah... after she had been sent home. The narration implies that Moses' wife and children were living in Midian while Moses returned to Egypt to free the Israelites. Yet no notice was given earlier that Zipporah and her sons were dispatched back to Midian. When last we encountered Zipporah, she was traveling with Moses and her sons from Midian to Egypt (4:20). On the way, she saved her family by circumcising her son, the mysterious “bridegroom of blood” incident (4:24–26).

sent home. The Hebrew verb here can mean divorce, so some interpreters claim that Moses had divorced her; yet this explanation is not persuasive since Jethro refers to her as Moses' wife in v. 6. The reason for the separation is not explained.

4. Eliezer. While Gershom's birth is mentioned in 2:22, this is the first explicit reference to Eliezer, although 4:20 alludes to him.

meaning. In the Torah, the explanation of a name by the mother or father is a standard feature of the birth of sons, but never of daughters. This may

- What gives Moses the right to report God's words differently than originally delivered?

ANOTHER VIEW ► 421

- Moses renders women invisible as part of the congregation about to enter into the covenant.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 423

- Neither gender, foreign origins, nor a dubious past is a barrier to joining the Jewish people.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 421

- ... I was welcomed and more than welcome / among the women.

VOICES ► 425

[house] was my help, delivering me from the sword of Pharaoh.”⁵ Jethro, Moses’ father-in-law, brought Moses’ sons and wife to him in the wilderness, where he was encamped at the mountain of God.⁶ He sent word to Moses, “I, your father-in-law Jethro, am coming to you, with your wife and her two sons.”⁷ Moses went out to meet his father-in-law; he bowed low and kissed him; each asked after the other’s welfare, and they went into the tent.

⁸Moses then recounted to his father-in-law everything that יהוה had done to Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel’s sake, all the hardships that had befallen them on the way, and how יהוה had delivered them.⁹ And Jethro rejoiced over all the kindness that had shown Israel when delivering them from the Egyptians.¹⁰“Blessed be יהוה,” Jethro said, “who delivered you from the Egyptians and from Pharaoh, and who delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.¹¹Now I know that יהוה is greater than all gods, yes, by the result of their very schemes against [the people].”¹²And Jethro, Moses’ father-in-law, brought a burnt offering and sacrifices for God; and Aaron came with all the elders of Israel to partake of the meal before God with Moses’ father-in-law.

מִתְחִרֵב פָּרֻעַה: ⁵ וַיָּבֹא יְתָרוּ חֲתָנֵן מֹשֶׁה וּבְנָיו וְאֶשְׁתָוֹ אֶל-מֹשֶׁה אֶל-הַמִּדְבָּר אֲשֶׁר-הָוָא חָנַה שֵׁם הָר הָאֱלֹהִים: ⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל- מֹשֶׁה אָנָּי חֲתָנֶךָ יְתָרוּ בָּא אֶלְיךָ וְאֶשְׁתָּךְ וְשָׂנֵי בְּנָיֶךָ עַמּוֹה: ⁷ וַיֵּצֵא מֹשֶׁה לְקַנְאָתָה חֲתָנֵנוּ וְיִשְׁתַּחַווּ וַיִּשְׁקַלְלוּ וַיִּשְׁאַלְוּ אִישׁ לְרֹעָתוֹ לְשָׁלוֹם וַיָּבֹא הַאֲחֶלָה: ⁸ וַיַּסְפֵּר מֹשֶׁה לְחֲתָנוּ אֶת בְּל-אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה יְהוָה לִפְרֻעַה וּלְמִצְרִים עַל אֹזֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת בְּל-הַתְּלִאָה אֲשֶׁר מִצְאָתֶם בְּלָרָה וַיַּצְלִם יְהוָה: ⁹ וַיִּתְחַדֵּשׁ יְתָרוּ עַל בְּל-הַטּוֹבָה אֲשֶׁר-עֲשָׂה יְהוָה לִשְׂרָאֵל אֲשֶׁר הָצִילוּ מִידְמִצְרִים: ¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר יְתָרוּ בָּרוּךְ יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר הָצִיל אֶתְכֶם מִידְמִצְרִים וּמִידְמִצְרִים: ¹¹ עַתָּה יָדַעְתִּי כִּי גָדוֹל יְהוָה מִכָּל-הָאֱלֹהִים כִּי בְּדָבָר אֲשֶׁר זָדוּ עֲלֵיכֶם: ¹² וַיַּקְחַ יְתָרוּ חֲתָנֵן מֹשֶׁה עַל-הַזְּבָחָה וַיִּבְחַר לְאֱלֹהִים וַיָּבֹא אֶחָרֵן וְכָל-זָקְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְאַכְל-לָחֶם עַמְ-חֲתָנֵן מֹשֶׁה לִפְנֵי הָאֱלֹהִים:

be due to the patrilineal nature of Israelite society: the names of boys often become clan and tribal names, while girls’ names did not.

“My ancestors’.” Heb. avi, literally “my father’s.” On the gender-inclusive sense, see at 15:2.

5. the mountain of God. Several passages in the Torah refer to this mountain as Sinai, while others call it Horeb (see 3:1). One explanation is that two different traditions existed about the name of this mountain; another possibility is that the term Horeb should be understood as the name of the larger region, while “wilderness of Sinai” and “Mount Sinai” refer to a specific area or peak in the boundaries of Horeb. People have long sought to locate this mountain, identifying it with Jebel Musa or other particular mountains in the Sinai Peninsula or northwestern Arabia. However, such efforts seem to misconstrue the way the Bible presents Sinai as a phenomenon that transcends space and time (Carol Meyers, Exodus, 2005, p. 144).

7. he bowed low and kissed him. Moses, acting as the host, warmly greets his father-in-law; but no mention is made of him welcoming his wife and sons. This imbalance may reflect the formal hospitality customs common in the biblical world. Or, rather than suggesting the neglect of his family, this may stem from the Torah’s intent to highlight Moses’ remarkable relations with his Midianite father-in-law.

¹³Next day, Moses sat as magistrate among the people, while the people stood about Moses from morning until evening. ¹⁴But when Moses' father-in-law saw how much he had to do for the people, he said, "What is this thing that you are doing to the people? Why do you act alone, while all the people stand about you from morning until evening?" ¹⁵Moses replied to his father-in-law, "It is because the people come to me to inquire of God. ¹⁶When they have a dispute, it comes before me, and I decide between one party and another, and I make known the laws and teachings of God."

¹⁷But Moses' father-in-law said to him, "The thing you are doing is not right; ¹⁸you will surely wear yourself out, and these people as well. For the task is too heavy for you; you cannot do it alone. ¹⁹Now listen to me. I will give you counsel, and God be with you! You represent the people before God: you bring the disputes before God, ²⁰and enjoin upon them the laws and the teachings, and make known to them the way they are to go and the practices they are to follow. ²¹You shall also seek out, from among all the people, capable deputies who fear God—trustworthy deputies who spurn ill-gotten gain. Set these over them as chiefs of thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens, and ²²let them judge the people at all times. Have them bring every major dispute to you, but let them decide every minor dispute themselves. Make it easier for yourself by letting them share the burden with

¹³וַיְהִי מִמְּחֹרֶת וַיֵּשֶׁב מֹשֶׁה לְשֻׁפֵּט אֶת־
הָעָם וַיַּעֲמֹד הָעָם עַל־מֹשֶׁה מִן־הַבָּקָר עַד־
הַעֲרָבָה: ¹⁴וַיַּרְא חֹתֶן מֹשֶׁה אֶת בֶּלְעָשֶׂר־
הַוָּא עָשָׂה לְעֵם וַיֹּאמֶר מִהִתְדַּבֵּר הַזֹּה
אֲשֶׁר אָתָּה עָשָׂה לְעֵם מִלְּיוּן אַתָּה יוֹשֵׁב
לְבָקָר וּכְלַחַם נָצֵב עַל־יךְ מִן־בָּקָר עַד־
עֲרָבָה: ¹⁵וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה לְחוֹתֶנוּ כִּי־יָבָא
אֱלֹהִים הָעָם לְדַרְשָׁן אֱלֹהִים: ¹⁶כִּי־יִהָה לְהָם
דָּבָר בָּא אֱלֹהִים וְשִׁפְטוּתִי בֵּין אֲנָשִׁים וּבֵין
רֹעָה וְהַזְׁדָּעָתִי אֲתִיחַקְיִי הָאֱלֹהִים וְאַתָּה
תוֹרַתְּךָ:

¹⁷וַיֹּאמֶר חֹתֶן מֹשֶׁה אַלְיוֹ לְאַטּוֹל הַדָּבָר
אֲשֶׁר אָתָּה עָשָׂה: ¹⁸נִבְלָתָל גַּם־אַתָּה
גַּם־הָעָם הַזֹּה אֲשֶׁר עַמְּךָ כִּי־כָּבֵד מִמֶּךָ
הַדָּבָר לְאַתְוּכָל עָשָׂה לְבָקָה: ¹⁹עַתָּה
שְׁמַעْ בְּכָל־אִיעָצָךְ וַיְהִי אֱלֹהִים עַמְּךָ
אָתָּה לְעֵם מִול הָאֱלֹהִים וְהַבָּאת אָתָּה
אֲתִיחַדְךָרִים אֶל־הָאֱלֹהִים: ²⁰וְהַזְּרַתָּה
אָתָּה תִּמְשִׁיכָם אֲתִיחַדְךָם וְאֲתִיחַדְתָּה
אֲתִיחַדְךָ אֶת־הַחֲקִים וְאֲתִיחַדְתָּה תּוֹרָתָה
לְלִקְיָה אֲתִיחַדְךָ לִילְכָה בָּהּ וְאֲתִיחַדְתָּה
אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁוֹן: ²¹וְאָתָּה תִּחְווֹתָה מִפְּלָדָה
אֲנָשִׁים־רִילְיָה יְרָאֵי אֱלֹהִים אֲנָשִׁים אֲמִתָּה שְׁנָאֵי
בְּצֻעָה וְשִׁמְתָּתָה עַלְלָהָם שְׁרִי אֲלָפִים שְׁרִי מִאות
שְׁרִי חֲמִשִּׁים וְשְׁרִי עַשְׁרָת: ²²וְשִׁפְטוּתִי אַתָּה
הָעָם בְּכָל־עַת וְהַזָּה בְּלִיחַדְךָ הַגָּדוֹל יִבְאֵוּ
אֱלֹהִים וּכְל־הַדָּבָר הַקְּטָן יִשְׁפְטוּתָם וְהַקְּלָ

JETHRO RECOMMENDS DELEGATING JUDICIAL AUTHORITY (18:13–27)

After noticing the cumbersome and inefficient nature of Moses' role as the sole judge of the people, Jethro makes a suggestion. Deuteronomy's version of this episode omits Jethro's role (Deuteronomy 1:9–18), which is hardly surprising since ascribing Israel's judiciary structure to a foreigner is quite remarkable.

^{21.} chiefs. Heb. sarim, meaning officers with a range of administrative duties. The judicial system outlined by Jethro is hierarchical and quasi-military, which makes sense since Israel's organization in the wilderness is most akin to a military formation. The noun “judge” (shofet) is not used in this passage. While presumably women were excluded from such leadership positions, Judges 4–5 records that Deborah served as a judge and prophet.

you. ²³If you do this—and God so commands you—you will be able to bear up; and all these people too will go home unwearied.”

²⁴Moses heeded his father-in-law and did just as he had said. ²⁵Moses chose capable deputies out of all Israel, and appointed them heads over the people—chiefs of thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens; ²⁶and they judged the people at all times: the difficult matters they would bring to Moses, and all the minor matters they would decide themselves. ²⁷Then Moses bade his father-in-law farewell, and he went his way to his own land.

19 On the third new moon after the Israelites had gone forth from the land of Egypt, on that very day, they entered the wilderness of Sinai. ²Having journeyed from Rephidim, they entered the wilderness of Sinai and encamped in the wilderness. Israel encamped there in front of the mountain, ³and Moses went up to God. יהוה called to him from the mountain, saying, “Thus shall you say to the house of Jacob and declare to the children of Israel: ⁴You have seen what I did to the Egyptians, how

מעליך ונסאו אתה: ²³ אם את־הָדֹבֶר הַזֶּה תעשה וצוה אל־הָיִם ויכלת עמר ונגט כל־העם הזה על־מְקוֹמוֹ יבא בְּשָׁלוֹם: ²⁴ וישמע משה ל蠃 חתנו ויעש כל אשר־אמר: ²⁵ ויבחר משה אנשי־חיל מבל־ישראל ויתן אתם ראשי עלהעם שרי אלפים שרי מאות שרי חמשים ושורי עשרת: ²⁶ ושפטו את־העם בכל־עת את־הדבר הקשה יביאו אל־משה ובכל־דבר הקטן ישפטו הם: ²⁷ ושלח משה את־חתנו וילך לו אל־ארצו: פ

יט בחודש השלישי לעת בני־ישראל מארץ מצרים ביום זה באו מדבר סיני: ² ויסעו מרים ויבאו מדבר סיני ויחנו במדבר וייחן שם ישראל נגד ההר: ³ ומשה עליה אל־האללים ויקרא אליו יהוה מנהר לאמר בה תאמר לעקב ותגיד לבני ישראל: ⁴ אתם ראייתם

Preparing for the Covenant and Divine Revelation (19:1–25)

The encounter at Sinai forms the literary and ideological heart of the Torah. Israel's experience at “God's mountain” is presented as the determining factor in its spiritual and national identity. It is here that God proposes and Israel accepts the covenant (b'rit) that creates a legal and binding relationship between a people and its deity, a relationship not found elsewhere in the ancient world. This covenant also serves to bind individuals into a nation, for Israel's communal acceptance of the terms of the covenant (19:9) imposes upon the people collective rewards and punishments (Leviticus 26; Deuteronomy 28).

ARRIVING AT SINAI (19:1–2)

This passage marks the Israelites' arrival in the wilderness of Sinai. According to Numbers 10:11–12, they remain there for nearly a year before briefly resuming their journey to the Promised Land.

GOD PROPOSES A COVENANT AND ISRAEL ACCEPTS (19:3–8)

In contrast to the unconditional covenant with the ancestors in Genesis, the Sinai covenant requires the people to adhere to certain stipulations in order to receive God's promised benefactions. The people enthusiastically accept God's covenantal offer, although the exact terms of the covenant remain unspecified until Exodus 20–23.

I bore you on eagles' wings and brought you to Me.
 5 Now then, if you will obey Me faithfully and keep My covenant, you shall be My treasured possession among all the peoples. Indeed, all the earth is Mine,
 "but you shall be to Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation." These are the words that you shall speak to the children of Israel."

⁷Moses came and summoned the elders of the people and put before them all that had commanded him. ⁸All those assembled answered as one, saying, "All that יהוה has spoken we will do!" And Moses brought back the people's words to יהוה. ⁹And said to Moses, "I will come to you in a thick cloud, in order that the people may hear when I speak with you and so trust you ever

אשר עשיתי למלחינים ואשא אתכם על בנפי נשרים וABA אתכם אליו: 5 ועתה אם שמווע תשמעו בקלי ושמרתם את בריתני והייתהם לי סגלה מכל העמים כי לי בל הארץ: 6 ואתם תהוו לי ממלכת כהנים וגוי קדוש אלה הדברים אשר

תדבר אל בני ישראל:
 7 ויבא משה ויקרא לזקניהם העם וישם לפניהם את בל-הברים האלה אשר צויה יהוה: 8 ויענו כל-העם יחן ויאמר כל אשר דבר יהוה נעשה וישב משה את דברי העם אליו יהוה: 9 ויאמר יהוה אל-משה הנה אנבי בא אליך בעב הענן בעבור ישמע העם בךéri עמר וגמ-בקע

4. "I bore you on eagles' wings." Whereas the prior parashah contains a number of masculine images of God (see at 14:14; 15:3, 18) and possibly some female divine imagery (see at 15:26; 16:4; and the introduction to 15:22–17:16), here we find God depicted as an eagle, a metaphor that evokes the way this majestic bird protectively carries its young while training them to fly.

5. "treasured possession." Heb. s'gulah, which normally refers to a private accumulation of valuable property (see Ecclesiastes 2:8). While this universal deity could potentially claim possession of any nation on earth, God chooses Israel as a personal treasure. The notion of Israel's exclusive relationship with God—found here and in the subsequent verse—is problematic for many modern readers. However, in the polytheistic world of the ancient Near East, it was assumed that a deity would have a special connection to a single people.

6. "you shall be to Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation." These words clarify Israel's unique role as God's covenant partner. The words "kingdom" and "nation" express the idea that national autonomy and ethnic distinctiveness are essential for the fulfillment of Israel's mission. Further, just as the priests devote their lives to the service of the Divine and convey God's will to the people, so Israel is to assume this role among the nations. The word "holy" (kadosh) designates that which is set apart from the profane or ordinary. (For more on biblical notions of holiness, see parashat K'doshim.)

8. All those assembled. The presence of women in the am (usually construed as "people") is not explicitly indicated by the text. Other public occasions where the Law is read, or covenants are made, expressly indicate the presence of women (Deuteronomy 31:9–13; Joshua 8:35; perhaps II Kings 23:2; Nehemiah 8:2–3). This is not the case at Sinai. However, since the event at Sinai represents the paradigmatic revelation to the Israelite nation, it seems unlikely that women would have been excluded.

PREPARING FOR THE DIVINE REVELATION (19:9–25)

In this passage, the people prepare for God's self-manifestation, which is commonly associated with storm imagery (see Judges 5:4–5; Isaiah 29:6; 30:30; Nahum 1:3–6; Psalm 18:7–17). Here and in 20:15, the sight of lightning, dense clouds, and smoke, after.” Then Moses reported the people’s words to יהוה,¹⁰ and said to Moses, “Go to the people and warn them to stay pure today and tomorrow. Let them wash their clothes.¹¹ Let them be ready for the third day; for on the third day will come down, in the sight of all the people, on Mount Sinai.¹² You shall set bounds for the people round about, saying, ‘Beware of going up the mountain or touching the border of it. Whoever touches the mountain shall be put to death¹³ without being touched—by being either stoned or shot; beast or person, a trespasser shall not live.’ When the ram’s horn sounds a long blast, they may go up on the mountain.”

¹⁴Moses came down from the mountain to the people and warned the people to stay pure, and they washed their clothes.¹⁵ And he said to the people, “Be ready for the third day: [the men among] you should not go near a woman.”

along with the sound of thunder and blaring horns, herald God’s awesome revelation.

10. “Go to the people and warn them to stay pure.” God instructs Moses to make sure that the people are in a pure state, expressed here by the root k-d-sh, “holy.” Although this verse focuses only on washing clothes, other passages specify that attaining a physically holy state also involves washing oneself as well as avoiding sexual relations and contact with impurities (see at Leviticus 12–15; 17:15).

15. “[the men among] you should not go near a woman.” In vv. 14–15, Moses implements the instructions received in vv. 10–13. He repeats God’s charge to the Israelites to stay pure and launder their clothes, while he adds the command not to approach a woman. The prohibition seems to concern sexual intercourse (based on how the synonymous verb k-r-v is used in Leviticus 18:14; 20:16; Deuteronomy 22:14; Isaiah 8:3). According to Leviticus 15:18, sexual intercourse renders both parties ritually impure, so that they may not have access to the Sanctuary or objects deemed holy. By specifying a common action that would preclude individuals from participation in the sacred event of revelation, Moses amplifies God’s directions to ensure the purity of the people.

יאמינו לעולם ויגר משה את־דְבָרֵי הָעָם אֶל־יְהוָה: ¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה לְךָ אֶל־הָעָם וְקִדְשָׂתָם הַיּוֹם וּמַחַר וְכַבְסָיו שְׁמַלְתָּם: ¹¹ וְהִיּוּ נְכֻנִים לַיּוֹם הַשְׁלִישִׁי כִּי בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁלִישִׁי יָרַד יְהוָה לְעֵינֵינוּ בְּלַעַם הָעָם עַל־הַר סִינֵי: ¹² וְהַגְּבָלָת אֶת־הָעָם סְبִיב לְאָמֵר הַשְׁמָרוּ לְכֶם עֲלוֹת בַּהַר וְנַגְעַבְקָצָהוּ בְּלַהֲנַגְעַבְקָצָה מֹת יוֹמָת: ¹³ לֹא תָגַע בָּו נֶד כִּי־סְקָול יְסָקָל אָוִירָה יְיָרָה אַסְבָּהָמָה אַסְ-אִישׁ לֹא יְחִיה בְּמִשְׁנָה הַיּוֹלֵד הַמָּה יַעֲלֵוּ בָהּ:

¹⁴ וַיָּרַד מֹשֶׁה מִן־הַהָר אֶל־הָעָם וַיְקִדְשֵׁשׁ אֶת־הָעָם וַיְכַבְּסֵו שְׁמַלְתָּם: ¹⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־הָעָם הַיּוּ נְכֻנִים לְשִׁלְשָׁת יְמִים אֶל־הַגְּשָׁבוֹא אֶל־אִשָּׁה:

The present translation inserts the phrase “[the men among]” in order to show that although the inclusion of women is generally assumed, in this particular verse the imperative must be addressed to men.

Some scholars infer from this that Moses spoke only to the men; they argue that if women were included in the covenant community, Moses would have phrased his warning in mutual terms, something akin to: “Men and women do not go near each other.” However, this suggestion can be challenged by the fact that biblical Hebrew rarely addresses sexual relations in mutual terms. Instead, references to sexual relations usually contain a masculine subject and a female object: a man “knows” a woman, “lies” or “lies with” her, “approaches”

¹⁶On the third day, as morning dawned, there was thunder, and lightning, and a dense cloud upon the mountain, and a very loud blast of the horn; and all the people who were in the camp trembled. ¹⁷Moses led the people out of the camp toward God, and they took their places at the foot of the mountain.

¹⁸Now Mount Sinai was all in smoke, for יהוה had come down upon it in fire; the smoke rose like the smoke of a kiln, and the whole mountain trembled violently. ¹⁹The blare of the horn grew louder and louder. As Moses spoke, God answered him in thunder. ²⁰came down upon Mount Sinai, on the top of the mountain, and Moses called Moses to the top of the mountain and Moses went up. ²¹יהוה said to Moses, “Go down, warn the people not to break through to gaze, lest many of them perish. ²²The priests also, who come near יהוה, must stay pure, lest break out against them.” ²³But Moses said to יהוה, “The people cannot come up to Mount Sinai, for You warned us saying, ‘Set bounds about the mountain and sanctify it.’” ²⁴So יהוה said to him, “Go down, and come back together with Aaron; but let not the priests or the people break through to come up to יהוה, lest [God] break out against them.” ²⁵And Moses went down to the people and spoke to them.

¹⁶וַיְהִי בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁלִישִׁי בְּהִיאֶת הַבָּקָר וַיְהִי
קָלֵת וּבָרְקִים וַעֲנָן בְּבֵד עַל-הַהָר וְקָל שָׁפֵר
חֹזֶק מִאֵד וַיַּחֲרֵד פָּל-הָעָם אֲשֶׁר בַּמִּחְנָה:
¹⁷וַיּוֹצֵא מֹשֶׁה אֶת-הָעָם לְקַרְאַת הָאֱלֹהִים
מִן-הַמִּחְנָה וַיַּתְּצַבּוּ בְּתְחִתִּית הַהָר:
¹⁸וְהָר סִינֵי עָשָׂן בָּלוּ מִפְנֵי אֲשֶׁר יָרַד עַל-יוֹ
יְהוָה בָּאָשׁ וַיָּעַל עָשָׂנוּ בַּעֲשָׂנוּ הַכְּבָשָׂן וַיַּחֲרֵד
פָּל-הַהָר מִאֵד: ¹⁹וַיְהִי קָול הַשְּׁפֵר הַוּלָג
וְחֹזֶק מִאֵד מֹשֶׁה יְדַבֵּר וְהָאֱלֹהִים יַעֲנָנוּ
בְּקוֹל: ²⁰וַיָּרַד יְהוָה עַל-הָר סִינֵי אֶל-רָאשׁ הַהָר
וְהָר וַיַּקְרֵא יְהוָה לִמְשָׁה אֶל-רָאשׁ הַהָר
וַיָּעַל מֹשֶׁה: ²¹וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה רֵד
הַעַד בְּעַם פָּנֵי-הָרָטוֹ אֶל-יְהוָה לְרָאות
וַנִּפְלֶל מִפְנֵי רַב: ²²וְגַם הַפְּנִינִים הַגְּשִׁים
אֶל-יְהוָה יַתְּקַדְּשׁוּ פָנֵי-פְרִזְבָּן בָּהָם יְהוָה:
²³וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל-יְהוָה לְאַיִוָּל הָעָם
לְעַלְתָּאֶל-הָר סִינֵי כִּי-אַתָּה הַעֲדָתָה בְּנוֹ
לְאֹמֶר הַגְּבֵל אֶת-הַהָר וְקִדְשְׁתוֹ: ²⁴וַיֹּאמֶר
אֶל-יוֹהָןֶה לְקַרְדֵּר וּעַלְתָּאֶת אַתָּה וְאַהֲרֹן
עַמָּה וְהַכְּהֻנִים וְהָעָם אֶל-יְהוָה לְעַלְתָּאֶל אֶל-יְהוָה פָנֵי-פְרִזְבָּם: ²⁵וַיָּרַד מֹשֶׁה אֶל-הָעָם וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל-הָם: ס her, or “comes to” her. This language presents the male as the active figure and the female as the passive party. Although this linguistic pattern is problematic for contemporary readers, it means that the address to men in this verse cannot be used to argue that women were excluded from the revelation at Sinai. (See also Another View, p. 421, and Contemporary Reflection, p. 423.)

^{19.} in thunder. Heb. b'kol, literally “in a voice,” is enigmatic. The identification of God’s “voice” with thunder is found in several biblical passages (Psalm 18:14; 29:3); however, since the focus here is on God’s discourse with Moses and Israel, “voice” is the more likely meaning. The content of Moses’ conversation with God is unclear. Some commentators think that this verse refers to the Decalogue, while others identify it with God’s instructions to Moses in vv. 21–22.

20 God spoke all these words, saying:

כ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֶת כָּל־הַדְבָּרִים הָאֵלֶּה
לְאָמָר :

The Decalogue ("Ten Commandments") (20:1–14)

The unique status of the Decalogue is due to the tradition, found in the framework of Exodus 19–20 and Deuteronomy 4–5, that God recited these rules directly to the people, without the mediation of Moses. Only after the last commandment do the people demand Moses' intervention because they dread the terrifying display of divine power.

While Exodus 19–20 does not provide a specific title for this group of precepts, the label "Ten Words" (aseret had'varim) is found elsewhere (34:28; Deuteronomy 4:13; 10:4). The ancient Jewish Greek-speaking community in Egypt translated that Hebrew phrase as deka logoi ("ten words"), resulting in the alternative English name "Decalogue." The more common English title "Ten Commandments" is somewhat misleading since the Torah itself does not use the term "commandment" (mitzvah) in conjunction with this passage, nor is it clear that every one of its utterances constitutes a command (see at v. 2). Likewise, uncertainty exists as to how to divide these verses into ten discrete commandments. Verse 3 may be grouped with v. 2 or with vv. 4–5, while the prohibition against coveting in v. 14 may be considered a single law or two distinct commandments.

This passage has no specific target audience (such as priests or judges); nor does it refer to any societal institution (like kingship or the Temple) or any specific historical context (though v. 12 may reflect Israel's residence in Canaan). Reward for adherence is mentioned only once (v. 12), while punishments are largely omitted (except for v. 5). Recognition of divine authority and of prior acts of redemption, established in v. 2, seems to be the primary motivating factor for obeying these stipulations.

Exodus 20:2–14 consistently uses the second-person singular, perhaps to impress upon the audience their obligation as individuals to adhere to these teachings. Because the language of address is grammatically masculine, one might infer that these regulations address only men. However, in biblical Hebrew, masculine grammatical form does not specify social gender unless it is used to refer to a definite, particular person. So-called masculine forms often have a gender-neutral function. (See, for example, Deuteronomy 28:68, where masculine singular address at the start of the verse is equivalent to both masculine and feminine plurals at the end of the verse.) Therefore, the Decalogue's masculine singular address does not necessarily mean that only men were addressed. (See further at Exodus 21:2; Mishpatim, Another View, p. 445.)

The Torah later records that God also engraved the "Ten Words" upon two stone tablets, which Moses received on the top of Mount Sinai (31:18; Deuteronomy 4:13). Furthermore, these tablets were to be deposited in the Ark of the Covenant, which was to be placed in the "Holy of Holies" of the Tabernacle (25:16). This is akin to the ancient Near Eastern practice of storing a treaty document in the sanctuary of a temple so that the deity could serve as the guardian of its implementation. The medium of stone, as opposed to parchment or papyrus, underlines the permanent validity of these precepts.

INTRODUCTION (20:1)

This verse establishes that God speaks the Decalogue directly to the people. In contrast, the precepts that follow in the Covenant Collection, like the Tabernacle instructions, are communicated through Moses (see 20:19; 25:2).

²I am your God who brought you out of the land of Egypt, the house of bondage: ³You shall have no other gods besides Me.

⁴You shall not make for yourself a sculptured image, or any likeness of what is in the heavens above, or on the earth below, or in the waters under the earth. ⁵You shall not bow down to them or serve them. For I your God am an impassioned God, visiting the guilt of the parents upon the *אנְכִי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִיךְ אֲשֶׁר הוֹצֵאתִיךְ מִמְּאֶרֶץ מִצְרַיִם מִבֵּית עֲבָדִים ³ לְאַיִתְּהָה לֹךְ אֱלֹהִים אֶחָדים עַל־פָּנֶיךְ: ⁴ לְאַתְּעַשֵּׂה לְךָ פֶּסֶל וּכְלַתְּמֻונָה אֲשֶׁר בְּשָׁמַיִם מִפְּעָל וְאֲשֶׁר בָּאָרֶץ מִתְחַת וְאֲשֶׁר בְּפְמִים מִתְחַת לְאָרֶץ: ⁵ לְאַתְּשַׁתְּחֹווּ לָהֶם וְלֹא תְּعַבְּדֵם כִּי אַنְכִי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִיךְ אֶל-

*This accent pattern for the Decalogue is the one that is customarily used for private study. (Masoretic tradition also includes an accent pattern that is used for public reading.) Verses are numbered according to a modern convention.

THE COMMANDMENTS (20:2–14)

The “Ten Words” have a discernable arrangement, with a separation between those that dictate correct behavior regarding God and those that apply to the treatment of other human beings. Note, for instance, that the first statement opens with “your God,” while the last one closes with “your neighbor.” Further, the first five utterances mention “יהוָה your God” five times, while the second five contain no references to God. The fifth commandment, which mandates honoring one’s parents, serves as a bridge between the two halves; it contains both religious and social aspects, and both God and parents claim authority over the individual. Within each grouping of five, the directives are arranged in order of decreasing severity. (These foundational precepts are repeated, with minor variations, in Deuteronomy 5:6–18.)

2. I יהוָה am your God. This verse, in which God is self-identified as the One who took Israel out of Egypt, serves as the introduction and basis for all that follows. It is because God redeemed Israel from Egypt that God reserves the right to command exclusive fidelity (v. 3).

3. You shall have no other gods besides Me. This command of fidelity to only one god is unique in the ancient Near East. Texts from this period present a generally tolerant religious environment: the gods did not mind the worship of their “peers” as long as their own needs (in the form of donations of precious goods, food, and drink) were not neglected. This precept does not negate the existence of other gods, and may be pre-monotheistic (see also Deuteronomy 6:4). Biblical scholars compare Israel’s covenant with God to ancient Near Eastern international vassal–overlord treaties. Marriage is another, more familiar relationship that shared this kind of exclusivity; hence, the prophets develop the metaphor of God as husband and Israel as wife (see Isaiah 54, Jeremiah 3, Hosea 1–3).

4. You shall not make for yourself a sculptured image. Prevailing Jewish tradition understands vv. 4–6, forbidding the worship of images, as a continuation of v. 3. Yet if v. 3 is interpreted as the first stipulation, then v. 4 begins the second. The reason offered for the prohibition is that God communicated at Sinai only through a voice (Deuteronomy 4:12–16). Idols are therefore incompatible with the historic self-disclosure of God’s nature. Further, the worship of God through fixed representations limits the range of the Deity’s attributes.

5. impassioned. See at Deuteronomy 5:9. visiting the guilt of the parents upon the children. While God may practice trans-generational reward and punishment, Israeliite courts are forbidden to do so (Deuteronomy 24:16).

parents. Heb. avot, sometimes translated as “fathers.” Here, however, the principle is more general: with regard to the covenant with God, the children, upon the third and upon the fourth generations of those who reject Me, ⁶but showing kindness to the thousandth generation of those who love Me and keep My commandments.

⁷You shall not swear falsely by the name of your God יְהוָה; for יְהוָה will not clear one who swears falsely by God's name.

⁸Remember the sabbath day and keep it holy. ⁹Six days you shall labor and do all your work, ¹⁰but the seventh day is a sabbath of your God יְהוָה: you shall not do any work—you, your son or daughter, your male or female slave, or your cattle, or the stranger who is within your settlements. ¹¹For in six days יְהוָה made heaven and earth and sea—and all that is in them—and then rested on the seventh day; therefore blessed the sabbath day and hallowed it.

¹²Honor your father and your mother, that you may long endure on the land that your God is assigning to you.

deeds (and misdeeds) of both mothers and fathers will matter.

7. You shall not swear falsely. This verse prohibits the misuse of the divine name. Commentators debate whether this refers specifically to invoking God's name when taking an oath or more broadly to using God's name frivolously or improperly.

10. sabbath. This is an institution unique to ancient Israel.

you shall not do any work. This clause introduces a list of seven categories of individuals who are obligated to rest on the Sabbath, beginning with the word atah, the masculine singular second-person pronoun. On the scope of grammatically masculine address, see the introduction to the present unit (p. 416). Paradoxically, it is the conspicuous omission of the wife that signals her inclusion here: if she is not addressed by “you,” then are we to as-

קֹנֶא פְּקֻד עַזְן אֲבָת עַל־בָּנִים עַל־שָׁלִשִׁים
וּעַל־רַבָּعִים לְשֵׁנִי: ⁶ וְעַשָּׂה חִסְד לְאַלְפִים
לְאַחֲרֵי וּלְשָׁמְרֵי מִצּוֹתִי: ס

7 לֹא תְשַׁא אֶת־שְׁמֵי יְהוָה אֶל־חַיָּכְךָ לְשֵׁנוֹ
כִּי לֹא יִנְקַל יְהוָה אֶת אֲשֶׁר־יִשְׁא אֶת־שְׁמָוֹ
לְשֵׁנוֹ: ב

8 זָכֹר אֶת־יּוֹם הַשְׁבָּת לְקַדְשׁו: ⁹ שְׁשַׁת
יְמִינָם תַּעֲבֹד וְעַשֵּׂית כָּל־מְלָאכָתךְ: ¹⁰ וַיּוֹט
הַשְׁבִּיעִי שְׁבָת לְיְהוָה אֶל־יְהִי לְאַתְעַשָּׂה
כָּל־מְלָאכָה אַתָּה וּבָנֶךָ וּבְתָךְ עֲבֹדָת
וְאַמְתָּל וּבְחַמְתָּךְ וּגְרוּךְ אֲשֶׁר בְּשֻׁעְרֵיךְ:
11 כִּי שְׁשַׁת־יְמִינָם עָשָׂה יְהוָה אֶת־הַשְׁמִינִי
וְאֶת־הַאֲרַצָּה אֶת־הַיִם וְאֶת־כָּל־אֲשֶׁר־בָּם
וַיְנִיחַ בְּיוֹם הַשְׁבִּיעִי עַל־פָּנֶיךָ בְּרָה יְהוָה אֶת־יּוֹם הַשְׁבָּת וְיִקְדְּשָׁהו: ס

12 כַּבֵּד אֶת־אֲבִיךָ וְאֶת־אֱמֹת לְמַעַן יִאֲרְכוּ
יְמִינְךָ עַל הָאָדָמָה אֲשֶׁר־יְהוָה אֶל־יְהִי נְתָנוּ לְךָ: ס

sume that the verse burdens her with work—while her children, slaves, and draft animals rest? This can hardly be the case. As Tikva Frymer-Kensky writes, “the omission of a phrase ‘and your wife’ shows that the ‘you’ that the law addresses includes both women and men, each treated as a separate moral agent” (“Deuteronomy,” Women’s Bible Commentary, 1992, p. 59). Confirmation of a gender-inclusive “you” comes from comparing this verse to the similar construction in Deuteronomy 12:18, where logically and in light of 12:7 the word atah must have an inclusive sense.

12. Honor your father and your mother. The importance of respect for parents is underlined by its inclusion in the first five precepts, which concern proper behavior toward God. This command is the only one in the Decalogue for which a reward, extended residence in the land of Israel, is promised.

¹³You shall not murder. You shall not commit adultery. You shall not steal. You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor.

¹⁴You shall not covet your neighbor's house; you shall not covet your neighbor's wife, nor male nor female slave, nor ox nor ass, nor anything that is your neighbor's.

¹⁵All the people witnessed the thunder and lightning, the blare of the horn and the mountain

¹³לֹא תְּرִצֵּחْ ס לֹא תַּנְאָף ס לֹא
תְּגַנְבֵּס ס לֹא-תַעֲנֵה בְּרַעַךְ עַד שְׁקָרָ: ס ¹⁴לֹא תְּחַمֵּד בֵּית רַעַךְ ס לֹא-תְּחַמֵּד
אָשֶׁת רַעַךְ וְעַבְדָיו וְאִמְתָו וְשָׂוֹרַו וְחַמְרוֹ וְכָל אֲשֶׁר לְרַעַךְ: ס

¹⁵וּכְלַ-הָעֵם רְאֵים אֶת-הַקּוֹלֶת וְאֶת-
הַלְּפִילּוּם וְאֶת קַוֵּל הַשְּׁפָר וְאֶת-הַהָּר עַשְׁן

It may reflect the legal custom found in other ancient Near Eastern texts that inheritance of property is conditional upon proper treatment of parents in their old age. The Torah outlines various offenses against parents, some of which are considered capital crimes: striking, cursing, insulting, and insubordination (as in 21:15, 17; Deuteronomy 21:18; 27:16). The inclusion of the mother alongside the father is consistent in all of these laws. | The specific activities that constitute “honor” are enumerated in post-biblical Jewish texts, not in the Torah.

13. You shall not commit adultery. Adultery is defined in Israel and the ancient Near East as sexual relations between a betrothed or married woman and any man other than her fiancé or husband. A married man was guilty of adultery only if his sexual partner officially “belonged” to another, since a man could legitimately take another unmarried woman as wife. The Torah’s legal texts consider adultery a capital offense and demand the execution of both the woman and her paramour (see Leviticus 18:20; 20:10; Deuteronomy 22:22–24; compare Hosea 2:4–9). Such harsh punishments reflect a concern for paternity and the transmission of property by men to their own offspring.

false witness. See at Deuteronomy 5:17.

14. The traditional paragraphing in a Torah scroll properly breaks this verse into two clauses. In the first, the object of “covet” is “house,” which should be understood as “household” (as in Genesis 7:1). As the present translation indicates, the second clause enumerates those objects that constitute an covet. This refers to an intense desire for an object, and perhaps the scheming to acquire it (34:24; Joshua 7:21). See also at Deuteronomy 5:18.

Israelite household, starting with the most important, one’s wife.

your neighbor’s wife. Some scholars have argued that if the Decalogue were addressed to women as well as men, it would have included a parallel prohibition against coveting “your neighbor’s husband.” But the lack of mutuality here does not rule out that the previous provisions of the Decalogue addressed themselves to both men and women. Rather, each provision is addressed to whomever it applies. In ancient Israel, marriage was not a symmetrical arrangement: typically a man was in a position to take a woman into the household as a wife, but typically a woman could not take a man into her household as a husband. That alone would seem to account for why “husband” is not mentioned in this verse, as Tikva Frymer-Kensky has pointed out (“Deuteronomy,” Women’s Bible Commentary, 1992, p. 59). (See also Mishpatim, Another View, p. 445.)

The People’s Response and the First Instruction (20:15–23)

The overwhelming display of divine might inspires such fear that the people withdraw and demand that Moses assume the role of mediator (vv. 15–16). The belief that seeing God could be lethal is found elsewhere in the Bible (Genesis 32:31;

smoking; and when the people saw it, they fell back and stood at a distance.¹⁶“You speak to us,” they said to Moses, “and we will obey; but let not God speak to us, lest we die.”¹⁷Moses answered the people, “Be not afraid; for God has come only in order to test you, and in order that the fear of God may be ever with you, so that you do not go astray.”¹⁸So the people remained at a distance, while Moses approached the thick cloud where God was.

¹⁹ said to Moses:

Thus shall you say to the Israelites: You yourselves saw that I spoke to you from the very heavens:²⁰With Me, therefore, you shall not make any gods of silver, nor shall you make for yourselves any gods of gold.²¹Make for Me an altar of earth and sacrifice on it your burnt offerings and your sacrifices of well-being, your sheep and your oxen; in every place where I cause My name to be mentioned I will come to you and bless you.²²And if you make for Me an altar of stones, do not build it of hewn stones; for by welding your tool upon them you have profaned them.²³Do not ascend My altar by steps, that your nakedness may not be exposed upon it.

וַיּוֹרֶא הָעָם וַיִּנְגַּע וַיַּעֲמֹד מַרְחָק: ¹⁶ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים דְּבָרִי אֶתְתָּה עַמְּנָנוּ וְנִשְׁמַעָה וְאַל־יְדַבֵּר עַמְּנָנוּ אֱלֹהִים פְּנִינּוֹת: ¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר מֶשֶׁה אֱלֹהֶם אֱלֹהֶם אֱלֹהִים בְּיַד לְבַעֲבוֹר נִסּוֹת אֲתֶכְם בְּאֶתְהָלָקִים וּבְעַבּוֹר תְּדִיחָה יְרָאָתוּ עַל־פְּנֵיכֶם לְבָלְתִּי תְּחַטְּאוּ וַיַּעֲמֹד הָעָם מַרְחָק יְמַשָּׁה נִגְשָׁה אֱלֹהִים: ¹⁸ ס הַעֲרָפֶל אֲשֶׁר־שָׁם הָאֱלָהִים:

¹⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהֹוָה אֱלֹהִים בָּה תֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְשָׁרָאֵל אַתָּם רְאִיתֶם בַּי מִן־הַשְׁמִימִים דְּבָרָתִי עַמְּכֶם: ²⁰ לְאַתָּה תַּعֲשׂוּ אֹתִי אֱלֹהִי בָּסָק וְאֱלֹהִי זָהָב לֹא תַּعֲשׂוּ לְכֶם: ²¹ מִזְבֵּחַ אֲדָמָה תַּעֲשֶׂה־לִי וּבְחִתָּת עַלְיוֹ אֶת־עַלְתִּיק וְאֶת־שְׁלֹמִיךְ אֶת־צָאנְךְ וְאֶת־בְּקָרְךְ בְּכָל־הַמִּקְוֹם אֲשֶׁר־אָזְפֵּר אֶת־שְׁמֵי אֲבוֹא אֶלְיךְ וּבְרָכָתְךָ: ²² וְאַמְּרָה מִזְבֵּחַ אֲבָנִים תַּעֲשֶׂה־לִי לְאֶתְבּוֹנָה אֶתְחָנָן גְּנוּית בַּי חֲרֵבָה הַנְּפֵת עַלְיהָ וְתַחֲלַחָה: ²³ וְלֹא־תַעֲלֵה בְּמַעַלְתָּה עַל־מִזְבֵּחַ אֲשֶׁר־לֹא־תַגְלֵה עֲרוֹתָךְ עַלְיוֹ: פ

Exodus 33:20; Judges 6:22–23; 13:22). The revelatory experience at Sinai becomes the basis for the first instruction following the Decalogue (vv. 19–23): Because Israel’s experience of God at Sinai was auditory and not directly visual, their worship of God should exclude physical representations. This passage introduces the precepts of the Covenant Collection that follow in the next parashah.

—Elaine Goodfriend

Another View

WHEN GOD TELLS MOSES to command the people to sanctify themselves, wash their clothes, and be ready for the divine revelation, God emphasizes that the people should be instructed not to go up or touch the mountain (19:10–13). Moses begins by faithfully repeating God's commands, yet he concludes, not by reiterating God's warning not to touch the mountain, but instead by admonishing the Israelites not to go near a woman (19:15). Feminists have wrestled with this disturbing verse and its implications. Does this formulation mean that Moses was only speaking to the men? Moses seems to have subverted God's command to all the people by speaking only to half the Israelites.

Moses' striking deviation from God's command is troubling well beyond the feminist focus. Moses' alteration of God's command raises the central question of who is the final authority on what God really says. Which version of the command is authoritative? Is Moses faithfully transmitting God's words? Is the text accurately presenting God's instructions? And, ultimately, what gives Moses or the text the right to report God's words differently from the way in which they were originally delivered?

A clue can be found in the genre of this passage.

Exodus 19:9–15 fits the ancient literary form of the Command/Performance formula, in which a divine command is expected to be transmitted by the messenger in identical language. According to this convention, any deviation from the initial command in the transmission draws attention to itself and is highly significant. What is the significance of Moses' alteration of the divine word here?

This text, with its deviation from the expected Command/Performance convention, cries out "darsheini" ("Interpret me!") and so invites readers—ancient as well as modern—to grapple with revelation. The entire history of interpretation of our sacred texts, from the Mishnah to modern feminist midrash, is empowered by Moses' audacious transformation of God's words. Exodus 19:9–15 subverts omniscient external authority and hands authority to the reader. This troubling passage empowers all of us to read, interpret, and find meaning in this parashah and its contradictions.

Interpretation of sacred texts is empowered by Moses' transformation of God's words.

—Diane M. Sharon

Post-biblical Interpretations

Jethro priest of Midian . . . heard (18:1). The Rabbis wondered what prompted Jethro, priest of Midian, father of Moses' wife, Zipporah, to visit Moses in the wilderness. One tradition concludes that Jethro learned of the revelation at Mt. Sinai. Another sage suggests that Jethro heard about the parting of the Sea of Reeds. The Rabbis go on to say that Jethro converted to Judaism because he was so impressed by God's power in redeeming Israel from Egypt (M'chilta, Amalek 3; Sh'mot Rabbah 27.6).

Discussion of Jethro's acceptance of Judaism in this passage in M'chilta reminded the Rabbis of another supposed convert, Rahab the harlot—who was said to have been, along with Sarah, Abigail, and Esther, one of the most beautiful women who ever lived (BT M'gillah 15a). In Joshua 2:10–11, Rahab tells Joshua's spies that when she heard of the parting of the Sea of Reeds, she became convinced that "your God יהוה is God in heaven above and here on earth" (Joshua 2:11). Rahab is said to have gone beyond all other converts in her recognition of God's great powers (M'chilta, Amalek 3). When she was fifty years old, she converted and asked God to forgive her for her life as a prostitute, reminding God that she had enabled Joshua's spies to escape from Jericho. According to some rabbinic sources, Rahab even married Joshua (BT M'gillah 14b) and was rewarded by having priests and prophets of Israel among her descendants (Sifrei B'midbar 78). Her story, like Jethro's, represents a powerful message that neither gender, foreign origins, nor a dubious past is a barrier to those who sincerely wish to join the Jewish people.

So Jetro... took Zipporah, Moses' wife, after she had been sent home (18:2). The biblical text gives no information on when or why Moses sent Zipporah and her two sons back to Jethro. A tradition in M'chilta, Amalek 3, imagines that after Moses received the divine call to redeem Israel from slavery, he set out for Egypt with his family. When he encountered Aaron on the way (4:27), Moses introduced his wife and sons. Aaron responded, "We are worrying about those already there and now you bring upon us these newcomers!" At that moment, Moses said to Zipporah, "Go to your father's house." Based on the use of the verb "sent" (shalach) both here and in the description of divorce in Deuteronomy 24:1, the Rabbis concluded that Moses divorced his wife, though they debated whether he did so with a get (a bill of divorce) or simply by an oral statement (M'chilta, Amalek 3).

Thus shall you say to the house of Jacob and declare to the children of Israel (19:3). The Rabbis were certain that divine words contained no repetition. Thus, M'chilta, Bachodesh 2, explains that house of Jacob refers to the Israeliite women, while children of Israel refers to the men. (In 1917, Sarah Schenirer of Cracow, Poland, founded what is now a worldwide network of Orthodox schools for girls, which takes its name from the rabbinic interpretation of this verse: Beis Yaakov, The House of Jacob.) A second interpretation of this "House of Jacob" refers to the women;

"children of Israel" refers to the men.

juxtaposition suggests that Thus shall you say was a divine directive that Moses should instruct the women in a mild tone, while the parallel verb declare implied that Moses should be strict with the men. The result was that God's revelation was accessible to everyone.

Honor your father and your mother (20:12). A statement in M'chilta, Bachodesh 8, observes that honoring parents is equal to honoring God. The Rabbis also noticed that this verse puts honoring father before honoring mother, while in Leviticus 19:3 fearing one's mother precedes fearing one's father. They explained this discrepancy as being the result of the parents' different gender roles: "a man honors his mother more than his father because she sways him with persuasive words," whereas "a man is more afraid of his father than of his mother because his father teaches him Torah."

—Judith R. Baskin

Contemporary Reflection

READ FROM a feminist perspective, Yitro contains one of the most painful verses in the Torah. At the formative moment in Jewish history, when presumably the whole people of Israel stands in awe and trembling at the base of Mount Sinai waiting for God to descend upon the mountain and establish the covenant, Moses turns to the assembled community and says, “Be ready for the third day: do not go near a woman” (19:15). Moses wants to ensure that the people are ritually prepared to receive God’s presence, and an emission of semen renders both a man and his female partner temporarily unfit to approach the sacred (see Leviticus 15:16–18). But Moses does not say, “Men and women do not go near each other.” Instead, at this central juncture in the Jewish saga, he renders women invisible as part of the congregation about to enter into the covenant.

These words are deeply troubling for at least two reasons. First, they are a paradigm of the treatment of women as “other,” both elsewhere in this portion and throughout the Torah. Again and again, the Torah seems to assume that the Israelite nation consists only of male heads of household. It records the experiences of men, but not the experiences of women. For example, the tenth commandment—“You shall not covet your neighbor’s wife” (20:14)—presupposes a community of male hearers.

Second, entry into the covenant at Sinai is not just a one-time event, but an experience to be reappropriated by every generation (Deuteronomy 29:13–14). Every time the portion is chanted, whether as part of the annual cycle of Torah readings or as a special reading for Shavuot, women are thrust aside once again, eavesdropping on a conversation among men, and between men and God. The text thus potentially evokes a continuing sense of exclusion and disorientation in women. The whole Jewish people supposedly stood at Sinai. Were we there? Were we not there? If we were there, what did we hear when the men heard “do not go near a woman”? If we were not there originally, can we be there now? Since we are certainly part of the community now, how could we not have been there at that founding moment?

Given the seriousness of these questions, it is important to note the larger narrative context of Moses’ injunction to the men not to go near a woman. When the Israelites arrive at Sinai on the third new moon after leaving Egypt, Moses twice ascends the mountain to talk with God. After he brings God the report that the people have agreed to accept the covenant, God gives Moses careful instructions for readying everyone for the moment of revelation: “Go to the people and warn them to stay pure today and tomorrow,” God says. “Let them wash their clothes. Let them be ready for the third day; for on the third day תְּנִיחַת will come down, in the sight of all the people, on Mount Sinai” (19:10–11). It is striking that God’s instructions to Moses are addressed to the whole community. It is Moses who changes them, who glosses God’s message, who assumes that the instructions are meant for only half the people. Thus, at this early stage in Jewish history, Moses filters and interprets God’s commands through a patriarchal lens. His words are a paradigm of the treatment of women, but a complex one. They show how Jewish tradition has repeatedly excluded women, but also the way in which that exclusion must be understood as a distortion of revelation.

There is no revelation without interpretation, and the process of interpretation is ongoing.

Interestingly, the Rabbis seem to have been disturbed by the implication of women’s absence from Sinai, because they read women into the text in a variety of ways. B'reishit Rabbah 28.2 understands Exodus 19:3 ("Thus shall you say to the house of Jacob and declare to the children of Israel") to mean that "the house of Jacob" refers to the women and "the children of Israel" refers to the men. According to the midrash, the order of the verse suggests that God sent Moses to the women with the Torah first. Perhaps, the sages speculate, God regretted the mistake of not directly giving Eve the commandment concerning the forbidden fruit and so resolved not to repeat it. Besides, the Rabbis note, women are more careful in observing religious precepts, and they are the ones who will instruct their children. Rashi, commenting on the Mishnah (Shabbat 9:3; BT Shabbat 86a), interprets Exodus 19:15 ("Do not go near a woman") as a stricture specifically designed to enable Israel's women to be present at Sinai. Since semen loses its power to create impurity after three days, Moses' instruction to the men guarantees that women will remain ritually pure, even if they discharge residual semen during the Revelation. In other words, without ever naming Moses' distortion of God's words directly, the Rabbis sought to reverse its effects.

Several lessons can be drawn from this. One is the inseparability of revelation and interpretation. There is no revelation without interpretation; the foundational experience of revelation also involves a crucial act of interpretation. Second, we learn that the process of interpretation is ongoing. What Moses does, the Rabbis in this case seek to undo. While they reiterate and reinforce the exclusion of women in many contexts, they mitigate it in others. Third, insofar as the task of interpretation is continuing, it now lies with us. If women's absence from Sinai is unthinkable to the Rabbis—despite the fact that they repeatedly reenact that absence in their own work—how much more must it be unthinkable to women and men today who function in communities in which women are full Jews? We have the privilege and the burden of recovering the divine words reverberating behind the silences in the text, recreating women's understandings of revelation throughout Jewish history.

—Judith Plaskow

Voices

The Ineffable Name

Hava Pincas-Cohen (transl. Miriyam Glazer)

Exodus 19–20

Everyone's gone to the mount already and they're waiting, waiting to see, waiting in great quiet—even, strangely, the camels and the donkeys—
In this quiet not a bird twitters or children on their fathers' shoulders.
An overwhelming quiet, as if before some wondrous thing. Still—I wanted time to hang out the laundry, time for myself to freshen up and I warmed the baby's milk so he won't get hungry—
and God forbid, cry at the wrong moment, however long till then. You can expect the laundry to dry—but the baby?
No one knew.
And I saw that a soft breeze, like the breath of a sleeping man, passed through the laundry and ballooned the belly of my nightgown and the Sabbath tablecloth was a white sail in the middle of the desert and we left there on the sky-blue far away to the place where we'll split open pomegranates and eat their juice to the place where love is the ineffable name.

We All Stood Together

Merle Feld

Exodus 19–20

My brother and I were at Sinai
He kept a journal of what he saw,
of what he heard,
of what it all meant to him.

I wish I had such a record of what happened to me there

It seems like every time I want to write
I can't—
I'm always holding a baby,
one of my own,
or one for a friend,
always holding a baby
so my hands are never free to write things down.

And then
as time passes,
the particulars,
the hard data,
the who what when where why,
slip away from me,
and all I'm left with is the feeling.

But feelings are just sounds
the vowel barking of a mute.

My brother is so sure of what he heard—after all he's got a record of it—consonant after consonant after consonant.

If we remembered it together we could recreate holy time sparks flying.

Zipporah's Return

Bonnie Lyons

Exodus 18:2–5

Word of the divine events in Egypt reached us and my father took us to Moses in the desert.
Now I was the stranger in an alien land until Miriam told me
I was the fourth of the magic circle—that his mother, and Pharaoh's daughter, and Miriam herself had all saved him and I was welcomed and more than welcome among the women.

Prophet Miriam at Mount St. Helens, Washington, USA

Helen Papell

Exodus 19:14–15

I was with the women at Mt. Sinai.
The cloud spoke out of a hole
but we were pushed away by my brother Moses.
He said Only I am summoned by the voice. Only I may climb the lava that spurts like semen.

I never asked Does the Eternal speak only through men?
No woman had been made strong by boys' games
my legs trembled like twigs in the wind echoing the voice.

Other places, other volcanoes: always lava erupted and dried over the body of the mountain. I never asked Does the Eternal speak only through men?

A postcard brought me here to Mount St.
Helens.
In the picture, tree trunks sprawl like scorched bones waiting for a mass grave but where is the lava? My brother would look for it.

A ranger says No lava flow. This volcano kicked out her north top screamed a birth of rock and ash.
She gives me ash hardened into pumice. Holes sprinkle it. She says
Each hole to gather the dust of decayed wood, a drop of rain, a seed flying from beyond the dead trees.

Here at Mount St. Helens
I know the Eternal speaks also through me: one of the holes shimmers water like a well
from another a green stem pokes its head.

Mother

Alicia Suskin Ostriker

Exodus 20:12

although I have put an ocean between us still do you know how I lie awake at night the eye in my right palm pictures you sitting amid your litter, feet buried by accumulated jars of buttons, glasses lost beneath a decade of bank statements and funny poems, hands folded under your chin, staring at nothing, preparing to be blind and helpless, for fifty years it has tortured me that I cannot save you from madness and that I do not love you enough

what is enough
nothing is enough

מִשְׁפָטִים ◆ Mishpatim

EXODUS 21:1–24:18

Rules for Life in a Covenant Community

PARASHAT MISHPATIM (“rules”) presents the culmination of the covenant process that began with the preparations for the revelation on Mount Sinai (Exodus 19). While the so-called Ten Commandments articulate the general principles of the covenant between God and Israel (20:1–14), this parashah presents specific stipulations. This collection of case rulings and rules, referred to as the “Book of the Covenant” (24:7), the “Covenant Code,” or the “Covenant Collection,” covers a range of topics—from criminal and civil matters like murder, assault, and theft, to moral and religious precepts, such as treatment of the stranger and observance of the festivals. Although the stipulations in this parashah address an array of subjects, they do not constitute a comprehensive legal code. Many essential aspects of life in biblical times, like marriage, adoption, or inheritance, do not appear here.

The contents of the Book of the Covenant can be divided into two groups of laws. The rules in the first group (21:2–22:16) are formulated mainly as case laws, meaning that the text describes a specific scenario and its legal consequences: “When an ox gores a man or a woman to death, the ox shall be stoned” (21:28).

As for the second group (22:17–23:19), many of its regulations are phrased as unconditional imperatives, similar to language of the Decalogue: “You shall not boil a kid in its mother’s milk” (23:19).

Parashat Mishpatim refers to a remarkable number of women; however, like the men in this parashah, they are not named characters but rather different types of female figures who warranted legal consideration in certain situations. We read about the wife of the Hebrew slave (21:3–5), the daughter sold into slavery (21:7–11), the mother verbally or physically abused (21:15, 17), the female slave beaten by her master (21:20–21, 26–27), the pregnant woman who suffers a miscarriage and possible death because of a brawl (21:22–25), the woman gored by an ox (21:28–32), the unbetrothed young woman (22:15–16), the sorceress condemned to death (22:17), and the vulnerable widow (22:21–23). Furthermore, Exodus 21 repeatedly equates females and males regarding compensation for assault and injury (vv. 15, 16, 20, 26, 28, 29, 31, 32). This collection also treats other types of women implicitly, such as the slave owner (21:2, 10, and elsewhere), the debtor mother (21:7), the impudent daughter (21:15), the brawler (21:18, 22), the fatherless daughter (22:21), and more.

This parashah refers to a remarkable number of women.

After Moses communicates these stipulations to the people, they voice their enthusiastic acceptance of the terms of the covenant: “All that יהוה has spoken we will faithfully do!

(naaseh v’nishma)” (24:7). The parashah ends with Moses’ ascent of the mountain to receive two stone tablets, the physical symbol of the new legal relationship wedding God and Israel.

—Elaine Goodfriend

Outline

I. THE COVENANT COLLECTION (21:1–23:33)

- A. Introduction (21:1)
- B. Civil and criminal matters (21:2–22:16)
 - 1. Treatment of male and female Hebrew indentured servants (21:2–11)
 - 2. Capital crimes: murder, abuse of parents, kidnapping (21:12–17)
 - 3. Bodily injury caused by people and livestock (21:18–32)
 - 4. Property damage: injury to livestock, theft, crop damage, safeguarded property (21:33–22:14)
 - 5. Seduction of an unbetrothed woman (22:15–16)
- C. Assorted religious and social precepts (22:17–23:19)
 - 1. Prohibitions of sorcery, bestiality, and apostasy (22:17–19)
 - 2. Proper treatment of the disadvantaged (22:20–26)
 - 3. Obligations to God (22:27–30)
 - 4. Judicial conduct (23:1–3)
 - 5. Treatment of the enemy, needy, and stranger (23:4–9)
 - 6. Religious calendar with appended food prohibition (23:10–19)
- D. Divine promises and warnings (23:20–33)

II. THE COVENANT RATIFICATION RITUAL (24:1–18)

21:1

These are the rules that you shall set before them:

כִּי וְאֶלָּה הַמִּשְׁפְּטִים אֲשֶׁר תְּשִׂים לִפְנֵיכֶם:

The Covenant Collection (21:1–23:33)

In conveying the Decalogue (Exodus 20:2–14), God addressed the people directly; but because the people fear the terrifying display of divine might (20:18–21), Moses mediates the regulations that now follow. The Book of the Covenant exhibits numerous similarities in content, form, and organization to the law collections of Israel's neighbors. Yet biblical law departs from ancient Near Eastern jurisprudence in several ways. Israel was unique in its belief that God—not a king—authored the rules governing interactions with humans and the Divine. Another distinguishing feature is that all Israelites were charged with knowing the precepts in order to ensure their observance.

INTRODUCTION (21:1)

The inclusive nature of Israelite law is seen in this verse, when God instructs Moses to set the rules before the people. In contrast, the Laws of Hammurabi stipulate that only the aggrieved party could have the laws read to him; in Mesopotamian society, public knowledge of the law was not assumed.

CIVIL AND CRIMINAL MATTERS (21:2–22:16)

This section presents various cases involving the mistreatment of humans, livestock, or property, and the corresponding adjudications of those misdeeds. The Book of the Covenant commences with regulations concerning the emancipation of Hebrew indentured servants (21:2–11). While this arrangement might seem jarring at first glance—since it follows so closely after the story of the Israelites' deliverance from bondage—it makes sense when we understand it as an attempt to limit Israelite servitude.

In what comprises the bulk of this section (21:12–22:14), laws are arranged according to decreasing severity, with crimes against property in the last passage. The section closes with consideration of a case of seduction (22:15–16).

Treatment of Male and Female Hebrew Indentured Servants (21:2–11)

Whereas the Israelites were subject to corvée labor in Egypt (see at 1:11), this passage describes a more restricted form of indentured service, also called debt-slavery. An Israelite might be reduced to indentured servitude because of extreme poverty, debt, or in restitution for theft; the individual was not chattel owned by the master (see at v. 7).

In comparison to other ancient Near Eastern legal collections, several regulations in this parashah are somewhat protective of servants (see 21:2–11, 20–21, 26–27, 32). Most biblical rulings treat male and female slaves equally (see, for instance, 20:10

- The English text now reflects the fact that many legal principles apply to women.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 445

- Jews who translated the Bible in the 3rd century B.C.E. understood these verses differently.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 445

- The Torah is truthful with us, although that truth does not always make us happy.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 447

- Help me say goodbye / to the child / who was growing within me, / to the dreams I bore.

VOICES ► 449

²When you acquire a Hebrew slave, that person shall serve six years—and shall go free in the seventh year, without payment. ³If [a male slave] came single, he shall leave single; if he had a wife, his wife shall leave with him. ⁴If his master gave him a wife, and she has borne him children, the wife and her children shall belong to the master, and he shall leave alone. ⁵But if the slave declares, “I love my master, and my wife and children: I do not wish to go free,” ⁶his master shall take him before God. He shall be brought to the door or the doorpost, and

²כִּי תִּקְנֹהֵה עָבֵד עַבְרִי שֶׁשׁ שָׁנִים יַעֲבֹד
וּבְשְׁבָעָת יֵצֵא לְחַפְשֵׁי חַנְמָ: ³אִם־בְּגַפְוֹ
יָבָא בְּגַפְוֹ יֵצֵא אִם־בְּעֵל אִשָּׁה הוּא וַיַּעֲזֹה
אִשְׁתָּתוּ עַמּוֹ: ⁴אִם־אָדָנֵיו יִתְּהַלֵּל אִשָּׁה
וַיִּלְדֹּהֵלֵל בָּנִים אֹו בָּנֹות הָאִשָּׁה וַיִּלְדֹּהֵל
תְּהִילָּה לְאָדָנֵה וְהָוּא יֵצֵא בְּגַפְוֹ: ⁵וְאִם־
אָמַר יַאֲמַר הַעֲבֵד אַהֲבָתִי אֶת־אָדָנֵי אֶת־
אִשְׁתִּי וְאֶת־בָּנֵי לֹא אַצֵּא חַפְשֵׁי: ⁶וְהַגִּישׁוּ
אָדָנֵיו אֶל־הָאֱלֹהִים וְהַגִּישׁוּ אֶל־הַדָּלַת אֹו

or 21:20). Here, however, the text specifies that a male servant must be released at the end of six years, but not the indentured daughter (see at v. 7). [While this passage seems to present two contrasting laws, some interpretations—including the present translation—perceive that the unit has three parts: first, a general rule concerning the release of both female and male Hebrew indentured servants in the seventh year (v. 2, which is formulated in masculine language but represents an inclusive category); then two exceptions, one for males (vv. 3–6) and the other for daughters (vv. 7–11). This inclusive reading of v. 2 resembles Deuteronomy 15:12, which mandates the release of a Hebrew slave regardless of gender. —Ed.]

2. you. The Hebrew wording is grammatically masculine singular. The present translation presumes that such biblical language leaves the social gender unspecified whenever it refers to a non-specific category of persons (“you who . . .” or “anyone who . . .”). Readers or listeners then determine the intended social gender from the topic under discussion, or from other clues in the context. Here, the topic is determinative: the sense is gender inclusive because in ancient Israel, some women as well as some men owned debt-slaves; and the law has no reason to discriminate according to the owner’s gender.

slave. Heb. eved, which can refer to either male or female servants or slaves. Here, the translation understands this noun in an inclusive way, on the grounds that the basic principle is not constrained by gender. This law would thus also cover the case of a desperate woman who—lacking familial assistance—sells herself into slavery (compare Deuteronomy 15:12, 28:68). Note, however, that this section takes pains not to be gender inclusive by differentiating between eved (v. 2) and amah (female slave) (v. 7) (see also vv. 20, 26–27, 32), as well as between ish (man) and ishah (woman) (v. 28) and between ben (son) and bat (daughter) (v. 31).

3. if he had a wife. This verse suggests that if a man was married before he became a debt slave, his wife accompanies him when he becomes an indentured servant and then is set free after six years. Presumably, the master provides for the man’s wife and children during the years of servitude.

4. the wife and her children shall belong to the master. In this case, the master gives the bondsman a slave-wife, possibly of non-Israelite origin, in order to produce “house born” slaves. The mother’s status determines the children’s status, a practice that departs from the patrilineal norm in ancient Israel: if the mother is a slave, the children remain slaves. At the end of his indenture, the bondsman has to choose between continued servitude with his family or a lonely freedom. Perhaps because of the precariousness of his circumstances when freed, he might choose to stay. (For another perspective, see Contemporary Reflection, p. 447.)

his master shall pierce his ear with an awl; and he shall then remain his master's slave for life.

⁷When a parent sells a daughter as a slave, she shall not go free as other slaves do. ⁸If she proves to be displeasing to her (male) master, who designated her for himself, he must let her be redeemed; he shall not have the right to sell her to outsiders, since he broke faith with her. ⁹And if the master designated her for a son, he shall deal with her as is the practice with free maidens. ¹⁰If he marries another,

אֶל-הַמּוֹזֵה וְרָצֵעַ אֲדֹנֵיו אֶת-אִזְנוֹ בְּפָרָצָע
וַיַּבְדֹּו לְעָלָם : ס
וְכִי יִמְכַר אִישׁ אֶת-בָּתָתוֹ לְאַמָּה לֹא תַּצְא
בְּצָאת הַעֲבָרִים : ⁸ אִם־רָעָה בְּעִינֵּי אֲדֹנֵיה
אֲשֶׁר־לֹא לוּ יַעֲקָה וְהַפְקָה לְעַם נְכָרִי לֹא־
יִמְשַׁל לִמְכָרָה בְּבָגְדָּבָה : ⁹ וְאִם־לִבְנָה
יַעֲדָנָה בְּמִשְׁפַּט הַבָּנוֹת יַעֲשֵׂה־לָה : ¹⁰ אִם־

7–11. This case concerns a daughter sold into debt servitude. Gregory Chirichigno observes that this passage applies to a female sold into marriage and specifically designated as a sexual partner, as opposed to a female dependent sold to perform only household or non-sexual labor; the latter case is treated in Deuteronomy 15:12–18 (Debt-Slavery in Israel and the Ancient Near East, 1993, p. 255).

7. parent. Heb. ish (traditionally translated as “man”) in the Bible usually refers to a category of person (“anyone who . . .”). In the context of legal proceedings, when ish refers non-specifically to a plaintiff, defendant, or victim, the present translation understands the term as equivalent to the English word “party”; its social gender is determined not by the language but by the situation. Here, either a mother or a father could be in a position to sell a child; in the biblical world, impoverished families sometimes pledged a daughter or son in order to secure loans or land. The Bible tells of a widow who expects that a creditor will seize her children and force them into indentured servitude to pay off the family’s debt (II Kings 4:1). In Nehemiah 5:5, the people complain about having to sell their children in order to survive.

slave. Heb. amah, which refers to a female servant and has a wide range of meanings. While designating a slave or servant (such as Bilhah in Genesis), it also can be a self-deprecating title for a woman when she wishes to show deference. (See how the term is repeatedly used by wealthy Abigail when speaking to David in I Samuel 25:24–31.)

she shall not go free as other slaves do. According to this passage, an indentured daughter does not go free in the seventh year (v. 2) but rather stays in her master’s home where she becomes a wife or secondary wife of either the master or the master’s son. In contrast, Deuteronomy 15:12 allows the Israelite woman to go free in the seventh year, but that verse may refer to a girl or woman who becomes an indentured servant with no intention of marriage. Here, marriage to the master or the master’s son seems to be the condition the father makes for the daughter’s indenture.

8. If she proves to be displeasing. What causes her to be seen, literally, as “bad in the eyes of her master”? Given the implicit focus on sexuality in this passage, some commentators infer that she is rejected because of something related to her status as a potential sexual partner or wife. However, reasons for the disapproval are not specified.

be shall not have the right to sell her. This law implies that if the master designates the girl as his wife but then finds her unsatisfactory for any reason, he has to allow her family to redeem her (compare Leviticus 25:47–49).

outsiders. The Hebrew phrase includes the word am (kin). While the woman changes hands without her choice, at least she remains among her people.

9. he shall deal with her as is the practice with free maidens. This verse suggests that the girl must be given the rights of a free Israelite bride, as explained in v. 10.

he must not withhold from this one her food, her clothing, or her conjugal rights.¹¹ If he fails her in these three ways, she shall go free, without payment.

¹²One who fatally strikes another person shall be put to death.¹³ If [a male killer] did not do it by design, but it came about by an act of God, I will assign you a place to which he can flee.

¹⁴When a person schemes against another and kills through treachery, you shall take that person from My very altar to be put to death.

¹⁵One who strikes one's father or mother shall be put to death.

¹⁶One who kidnaps a person—whether having sold or still holding the victim—shall be put to death.

אַחֲרַת יְקֻחָלֹו שָׁאַנְהָ בִּסּוֹתָה וְעַנְתָּה לְאֵת
יִגְרָע: ¹¹ וְאֶם־שָׁלַש־אֱלֹהָ לֹא יַעֲשֵׂה לְאֵת וַיַּצְאֵה חָפֵם אֵין בְּסֻף: ס

אֲבָהָ מִבְּה אִישׁ וְמִתְּמוֹת יוֹמָת: ¹³ וְאַשְׁר לְאֵת
צָדָה וְהַאֲלֹהִים אֲנָה לִדְךָ וְשָׁמְתִּי לְאֵת
מִקּוּם אֲשֶׁר יִנוֹט שָׁמָה: ס

וְכִידְזָד אִישׁ עַל־רְעֵשוֹ לְהָרְגוֹ בְּעַרְמָה
מִעַם מִזְבְּחֵי תְּקַחְנוּ לְמוֹת: ס

וְמִבְּה אָבִיו וְאֶפְיוֹ מוֹת יוֹמָת: ס

וְגַנְבָּב אִישׁ וְמַכְרוֹ וְנִמְצָא בִּזְקָוֹ מוֹת יוֹמָת: ס

10. her food, her clothing, or her conjugal rights.

These three provisions comprise the basic entitlements of a married woman. The meaning of the third term (onah) is disputed; it appears nowhere else in the Bible. Some understand this word as a reference to a dwelling place (ma'on). Others translate the noun as “oil” or “ointment,” a reading that is based not on linguistic evidence, but on the fact that the combination of food, clothing, and oil is found in several ancient Near Eastern texts concerned with the minimal requirements for supporting a dependent. Jewish tradition considers onah to refer to marital relations, either for the purpose of sexual gratification or procreation, hence the translation “conjugal rights.” According to Nahum Sarna, if this interpretation is correct, “it would reflect a singular recognition in the laws of the ancient Near East that a wife is legally entitled to sexual gratification” (Exodus, 1991, p. 121).

11. If he fails her in these three ways. One interpretation of the phrase “three ways” is that she may leave as a free woman if the master does not allow her to be redeemed by her own family (v. 8), if he fails to treat her as a free maiden (v. 9), or if he neglects her maintenance (v. 10). Alternatively, “these three ways” could refer to “her food, her clothing, or her conjugal rights” (v. 10). In either case, if certain conditions are not met, the female servant has the ability to leave her master’s home without one of her relatives paying a redemption fee.

Capital Crimes: Murder, Abuse of Parents, Kidnapping (21:12–17)

This section enumerates crimes against persons for which the Book of the Covenant demands the execution of the guilty party.

12. One. Linguistically the social gender is unspecified (see at v. 2); here the same law—and the death penalty—would apply whether the killer was a man or a woman (compare at Genesis 9:5–6).

13. If [a male killer]. The verse establishes that someone who commits involuntary homicide can flee to a city of refuge (see Numbers 35:9–29 and at Deuteronomy 19:1–13) to avoid vengeance being carried out by the deceased’s family. The principle of asylum was applicable regardless of gender. However, it may have gone without saying—as the present translation presumes—that the case of a female killer would be somewhat more complicated than the case that the Torah outlines.

15, 17. One who strikes one's father or mother ... One who insults one's father or mother. The ¹⁷One who insults one's father or mother shall be put to death.

¹⁸When [two] parties quarrel and one strikes the other with stone or fist, and the victim does not die but has to take to bed: ¹⁹if that victim then gets up and walks outdoors upon a staff, the assailant shall go unpunished—except for paying for the idleness and the cure.

²⁰When a person [who is a slave owner] strikes a slave, male or female, with a rod, who dies there and then, it must be avenged. ²¹But if the victim survives a day or two, it is not to be avenged, since the one is the other's property.

²²When [two or more] parties fight, and one of them pushes a pregnant woman and a miscarriage results, but no other damage ensues, the one responsible shall be fined according as the woman's וּמְקַלֵּל אָבִיו וְאֶמוֹ מוֹת יוֹמָת: ס

¹⁸ וְקִרְיַרְבָּן אֲנָשִׁים וְהַבָּהִיאָש אַתְּ
 רְעַחוּ בָּאָבִן אָו בָּאָגָרָף וְלֹא יִמּוֹת וְנִפְלַּ
 לְמִשְׁכָּב: ¹⁹ אִם־יִקְׁוּם וְהַתְּהַלֵּךְ בְּחֻזּוֹן עַל־
 מְשֻׁעָנָנוֹ וְנִקְּהָה הַמְּבָהָרָק שְׁבָתוֹ יְהֻן וְרִפְאָ יְרִפְאָ: ס

²⁰ וְקִרְיַבָּה אִישׁ אַתְּ־עַבְדָּו אָו אַתְּ־אַמְתָּו
 בְּשָׁבֵט וְמִתְּתַחְתָּ יְדוֹ נִקְּם יִנְקָם: ²¹ אֲגָ
 אִם־יְוּם אָו יְוּמִים יִעַמְּדָ לֹא יִקְּם כִּי בְּסַפְטוֹ
 הָוָא: ס

²² וְקִרְיַנְצָו אֲנָשִׁים וְנִגְפּוֹ אֲשָׂה הָרָה וַיֵּצֵאוּ
 יְלָדֵיהָ וְלֹא יִהְיֶה אָסּוֹן עֲנוֹשׁ יִעַנְשׁ בְּאַשְׁר physical or verbal abuse of father and mother is considered a capital offense, for these regulations are addressed to adult offspring upon whom senior family members are dependent for their survival. The word “insults” can refer to cursing or habitual rebellious behavior (see Deuteronomy 21:18–19), as well as treating parents with contempt; it is the opposite of “honor” in Exodus 20:12. Biblical law consistently mentions “mother” alongside “father” in its legislation regarding the honoring of parents, with father mentioned first in most cases (20:12; Deuteronomy 5:16; 21:18; 27:16) except for Leviticus 19:3, which lists the mother first. A similar provision in the Laws of Hammurabi (¶ 195) mentions only the father. See further at v. 20.

Bodily Injury Caused by People and Livestock (21:18–32)

After treating the capital crimes, the text transitions to situations where the prescribed remedy can be execution but more typically is physical retaliation or financial compensation.

20. A slave, male or female. A distinctive feature of the Covenant Collection is that eight among its first laws make the gender-inclusive sense explicit (vv. 15, 17, 20, 26, 28, 29, 31, 32). This may be due to the position of Exodus 21 as the first section of jurisprudence after the Decalogue. Thus, the equal protection of women is emphasized at the beginning of the covenant legislation.

22. When [two or more] parties fight, and one of them pushes a pregnant woman and a miscarriage results. This verse contains two significant aspects of biblical and later Jewish law. First, this is the only Torah text that discusses the value of a fetal life, a subject crucial for the development of legislation concerning women. Further, it presents the statement of exact retaliation, “an eye for an eye” or “talion” law, from the Latin term lex talionis. | This verse does not explain how the woman became involved in the altercation. Was she simply an innocent bystander, or did she intervene to aid one of the parties? (The latter legal scenario is found in Deuteronomy 25:11–12.)

damage. Heb. ason, which is used elsewhere in the Bible only in the Joseph narrative, when Jacob husband may exact, the payment to be based on reckoning.²³ But if other damage ensues, the penalty shall be life for life,²⁴ eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,²⁵ burn for burn, wound for wound, bruise for bruise.

²⁶ When a person [who is a slave owner] strikes the eye of a slave, male or female, and destroys it, that person shall let the slave go free on account of the eye.²⁷ If the owner knocks out the tooth of a slave, male or female, that person shall let the slave go free on account of the tooth.

ישית עליו בעל האשה וננתן בפללים:
²³ ואמ-אָסֹן ייהה וננתה נפש תחת
 נפש:²⁴ עין תחת עין שנ תחת שנ יד
 תחת יד רגל תחת רגל:²⁵ ברייה תחת
 בוריה פצע תחת פצע חבורה תחת חבורה:^ס
²⁶ וקַיִנְפָה אִישׁ אֶת־עֵינָן עֲבָדוֹ אֶת־אֶת־עֵינָן:
 אָמְתוֹ וְשַׁחַתָּה לְחַפְשֵׁי יִשְׁלַחֲנוּ תְּחַת עֵינוֹ:
²⁷ וְאֶם־שָׂן עֲבָדוֹ אֶת־שָׂן אָמְתוֹ יִפְלִיל לְחַפְשֵׁי יִשְׁלַחֲנוּ תְּחַת שָׁנוֹ:^פ

fears sending Benjamin down to Egypt lest an ason, meaning some sort of harm or mishap, befalls him (Genesis 42:4, 38; 44:29). Likewise the present translation understands that ason refers to harm in general, given the range of penalties mentioned in vv. 23–25. In this particular case, ason seems to refer specifically to the death of the mother as a result of the trauma of the assault and subsequent miscarriage. This assumption is corroborated by similar ancient Mesopotamian laws which speak first of the death of the fetus and then the death of the mother: “If a noble strikes a woman of the noble class and thereby causes her to miscarry her fetus, the perpetrator shall weigh and deliver ten shekels of silver for her fetus. If that woman should die, they shall kill the perpetrator’s daughter” (Laws of Hammurabi ¶¶ 209–10). In the Hammurabi regulation, the one who kills the pregnant woman loses a daughter. In the Torah, the attacker is required to monetarily compensate the “owner” of the fetus, the woman’s husband, with an amount of compensation to be negotiated.

23. But if other damage ensues, the penalty shall be life for life. Only if the mother dies (literally “if there is an ason”) must the attacker pay “life for life” (“nefesh in place of nefesh”). The relatively permissive Jewish law regarding abortion is derived from the essential distinction between the fetus and its mother. While the mother is considered a nefesh and her death is a capital crime, the loss of a fetus carries a lesser penalty. Similar to other cases of physical injury (vv. 18–19), the miscarriage is punished by monetary compensation.

24. eye for eye, tooth for tooth. The legal formula for precise retribution, “eye for an eye,” has little relevance here, as this case speaks only of the miscarriage of the fetus or of the mother’s death (see at v. 22), not burns or injuries to eyes, hands, or feet. This expression was probably placed here to complete the beginning of the formula found in v. 23, “life for life,” the one part of the phrase that fits this particular case. The talion formula recurs in different contexts in Leviticus 24:17–20 and Deuteronomy 19:21. According to Tikva Frymer-Kensky, this formula “must have been a judicial maxim to express the principles of equivalent retaliation” and not a mandate to inflict a penalty of bodily mutilation (“Israeli Law: State and Judiciary Law,” Encyclopedia of Religion, 2nd ed., 2005, 7:474). In other words, this language should not be interpreted literally. Measure-for-measure punishment is found not only in biblical law but also in narrative; this was considered God’s own way of rendering justice.

26. male or female. On the mention of both genders, see at v. 20.

²⁸When an ox gores a man or a woman to death, the ox shall be stoned and its flesh shall not be eaten, but the owner of the ox is not to be punished. ²⁹If, however, that ox has been in the habit of goring, and its owner, though warned, has failed to guard it, and it kills a man or a woman—the ox shall be stoned and its owner, too, shall be put to death. ³⁰If ransom is imposed, the owner must pay whatever is imposed to redeem the owner's own life. ³¹So, too, if it gores a minor, male or female, [its owner] shall be dealt with according to the same rule. ³²But if the ox gores a slave, male or female, [its owner] shall pay thirty shekels of silver to the master, and the ox shall be stoned.

³³When a person opens a pit, or digs a pit and does not cover it, and an ox or an ass falls into it, ³⁴the one responsible for the pit must make restitution—paying the price to the owner, but keeping the dead animal.

³⁵When a person's ox injures a neighbor's ox and it dies, they shall sell the live ox and divide its price; they shall also divide the dead animal. ³⁶If, however, it is known that the ox was in the habit of goring, and its owner has failed to guard it, that person must restore ox for ox, but shall keep the dead animal.

³⁷When a person steals an ox or a sheep, and slaughters it or sells it, that person shall pay five oxen for the ox, and four sheep for the sheep.—
22 If the thief is seized while tunneling and beaten to death, there is no bloodguilt in that case. ²If the sun had already risen, there is bloodguilt in that case.—[The thief] must make restitution, and if lacking the means, shall be sold for the theft. ³But

28–32. This case distinguishes between an animal that unexpectedly attacks someone and one that previously exhibited such aggressive behavior. The law's gender-inclusive sense is stressed via the repetition of "man or a woman" (vv. 28, 29) and "male and female" (vv. 31–32); see at v. 20.

²⁸וְקִרֵּיחַ שׂוֹר אֲתִ-אָישׁ אָוֹ אֲתִ-אָשָׁה וּמְתַסְּקָל יִסְקָל הַשׂוֹר וְלֹא יִאֱכָל אֲתִ-
 בָּשָׂרוֹ וּבָעַל הַשׂוֹר נָקִי: ²⁹וְאִם שׂוֹר נָגַח הָוֹא מִתְמָלֶל שְׁלָשָׁם וְהַוָּעֶד בְּבָעַלְיוֹ וְלֹא יִשְׁמְלֹנוּ וְהַמִּית אֲיַשׁ אָוֹ אֲשָׁה הַשׂוֹר יִסְקָל וְגַם-בָּעַלְיוֹ יִוּמָת: ³⁰אִם-כְּפָר יוּשַׁת עַלְיוֹ וּנְתַן פְּדִין נְפָשׁוֹ כָּל אֲשֶׁר-יוּשַׁת עַלְיוֹ: ³¹אוּבָן יִגְחַ אֲזַבְתָּ יִגְחַ בְּמִשְׁפָט הַזֶּה יִعָשֵׂה לוֹ: ³²אִם-עָבֵד יִגְחַ הַשׂוֹר אָוֹ אַמְתָה בְּסֻף | שְׁלָשִׁים שְׁקָלִים יִשְׁלַם לְאֹדוֹן לְאֹדוֹן וְהַשׂוֹר יִסְקָל: ס

³³וְקִרְבְּתָח אֲיַשׁ בָּזָר אָוֹ קִרְבָּרָה אֲיַשׁ בָּר וְלֹא יִכְסְּנוּ וּנְפָלֶשֶׁמָה שׂוֹר אָוֹ חַמּוֹר: ³⁴בָּעַל הַבּוֹל יִשְׁלַם בְּסֻף יִשְׁבַּב לְבָעַלְיוֹ וְהַמִּת יִהְיֶה-לוֹ: ס

³⁵וְקִרְבְּגַע שׂוֹר-אֲיַשׁ אֲתִ-שׂוֹר רַעַחוֹ וּמְתַסְּקָל וּמְכָרֹו אֲתִ-הַשׂוֹר הַחַי וְחַצּוֹ אֲתִ-כְּסָפֹו וְגַם אֲתִ-הַמִּת יִחְצֹו: ³⁶אוֹ נָרָע בַּי שׂוֹר נָגַח הָוֹא מִתְמָול שְׁלָשָׁם וְלֹא יִשְׁמְרֹנוּ בָעַלְיוֹ שְׁלַם יִשְׁלַם שׂוֹל תְּחַת הַשׂוֹר וְהַמִּת יִהְיֶה-לוֹ: ס

³⁷בַּי יִגְנְבַּ-אֲיַשׁ שׂוֹר אוֹרְשָׁה וְטַבְּחוֹ אָוֹ מְכָרֹו חַמְשָׁה בְּקָר יִשְׁלַם תְּחַת הַשׂוֹר וְאַרְבָּעַ-צָעָן תְּחַת הַשָּׁה: כב אִם בְּמִחְתָּרָת יִמְצָא הַגְּנָב וְהַכָּה וּמְתַסְּקָל לוֹ דְּמִים: ²אִם-זְרַחָה הַשְּׁמָשׁ עַלְיוֹ דְּמִים לוֹ שְׁלַם יִשְׁלַם אִם-אֵין לוֹ וּנְמַכֵּר בְּגַנְבָּתוֹ: ³אִם-הַמִּצְאָה תִּמְצָא בַּיּוֹ הַגְּנָבָה

Property Damage: Injury to Livestock, Theft, Crop Damage, Safeguarded Property
 (21:33–22:14)

The regulations in this section deal with crimes against an individual's property. Penalties range if what was stolen—whether ox or ass or sheep—is found alive and in hand, that person shall pay double.

⁴When a person who owns livestock lets it loose to graze in another's land, and so allows a field or a vineyard to be grazed bare, restitution must be made for the impairment of that field or vineyard.

⁵When a fire is started and spreads to thorns, so that stacked, standing, or growing grain is consumed, the one who started the fire must make restitution.

⁶When a person gives money or goods to another for safekeeping, and they are stolen from that other person's house: if caught, the thief shall pay double; ⁷if the thief is not caught, the owner of the house shall depose before God and deny laying hands on the other's property. (⁸In all charges of misappropriation—pertaining to an ox, an ass, a sheep, a garment, or any other loss, whereof one party alleges, "This is it"—the case of both parties shall come before God: the one whom God declares guilty shall pay double to the other.)

⁹When a person gives to another an ass, an ox, a sheep or any other animal to guard, and it dies or is injured or is carried off, with no witness about, ¹⁰an oath before יהוה shall decide between the two of them that the one has not laid hands on the property of the other; the owner must acquiesce, and no restitution shall be made. ¹¹But if [the animal] was stolen from the guardian, restitution shall be made to its owner. ¹²If it was torn by beasts, the guardian shall bring it as evidence—not needing to replace what has been torn by beasts.

¹³When a person borrows [an animal] from another and it dies or is injured, its owner not being with it, that person must make restitution. ¹⁴If its owner was with it, no restitution need be made; but if it was hired, that payment is due.

from financial compensation for loss of property to forced labor for the thief who cannot pay the penalty (22:2).

מִשּׂוֹר עַד-חַמּוֹר עַד-שָׂה חַיִם שְׁנִים יִשְׁלָם: ס

⁴כִּי יִבְעַר-אִישׁ שָׂדָה אֶזְבְּרָם וְשַׁלֵּחַ אֶת-בָּעֵירָה בְּעִירוֹ וּבְעֵירָה בְּשָׂדָה אֶחָר מִיטָּב שָׂדָה-וּמִיטָּב כְּרָמוֹ יִשְׁלָם: ס

⁵כִּי-תִּתְצַא אֲשׁוֹם וּמִצְאָה קָצִים וּגְאַל גְּדִישָׁ
אוֹ הַקְּמָה אוֹ הַשְּׂדָה שְׁלָם יִשְׁלָם הַמְּבָעֵר
אֶת-הַבְּעֵרָה: ס

⁶כִּי-יִתְּנַטֵּן אִישׁ אַל-רְעֵהוֹ בְּסֻף אַזְ-כְּלִים
לְשַׁמּוֹר וּגְנֻבָּב מִבֵּית הָאִישׁ אִם-יִמְצָא הַגְּנֻבָּב
יִשְׁלָם שְׁנִים: ⁷אִם-לֹא יִמְצָא הַגְּנֻבָּב וּגְנֻבָּב
בְּעַל-הַבִּيت אֶל-הָאֱלֹהִים אִם-לֹא שַׁלֵּחַ יְדוֹ
בְּמַלְאָכָת רְעוּהוֹ: ⁸עַל-בְּלִדְכְּבָר-פְּשָׁע עַל-
שָׂור עַל-חַמּוֹר עַל-שָׂה עַל-שְׁלֹמָה עַל-כָּל-אֲבָנָה אֲשֶׁר יָאמַר בַּיּוֹתָר זֶה עַד
הָאֱלֹהִים יִשְׁלָם שְׁלָם שְׁנִים יַרְעָהוֹ: ס

⁹כִּי-יִתְּנַטֵּן אִישׁ אַל-רְעֵהוֹ חַמּוֹר אוֹ-שָׂור אוֹ-
שָׂה וּכְלָ-בָּהָמָה לְשַׁמּוֹר וּמִת אַזְ-נְשָׁבֵר אוֹ-
נְשָׁבֵה אֵין רָאָה: ¹⁰שְׁבָעַת יְהֹוָה תְּהִילָה בֵּין
שְׁנֵיהם אִם-לֹא שַׁלֵּחַ יְדוֹ בְּמַלְאָכָת רְעוּהוֹ
וּלְקַח בָּעֵלָיו וְלֹא יִשְׁלָם: ¹¹וְאִם-גְּנֻבָּב
מִעַמּוֹ יִשְׁלָם לְבָעֵלָיו: ¹²אִם-טְרַף יִשְׁרָף
יְבָאָהוּ עַד הַטְּרַפָּה לֹא יִשְׁלָם: פ

¹³וְכִי-יִשְׁאַל אִישׁ מִעֵם רְעוּהוֹ וּנְשָׁבֵר:

¹⁴אוֹ-מִת בָּעֵלָיו אֵין-עָמוֹ שְׁלָם יִשְׁלָם:

הַוָּא בָּא בְּשָׁכְרוֹ: ס

21:37–22:3, 6–7. On stealing, see at Leviticus 19:11.

¹⁵If a man seduces a virgin for whom the bride-price has not been paid, and lies with her, he must make her his wife by payment of a bride-price. ¹⁶If her father refuses to give her to him, he must still weigh out silver in accordance with the bride-price for virgins.

¹⁷You shall not tolerate a sorceress.

Seduction of an Unbetrothed Woman (22:15–16)

This case concerns a young woman of marriageable age, as young as eleven or twelve, who loses her virginity to a man who did not seek her father's permission by entering into a formal engagement and paying a betrothal gift. While scholars generally differentiate between this case, which deals with the "persuasion" of the young girl, and Deuteronomy 22:28–29, which deals with rape, the distinction is not clear when dealing with young women who may be too naïve to offer real consent for sexual relations. This case is positioned after a series of laws regarding property loss (likewise remedied by monetary compensation), but before a series on disruptions to the social order; it seems to share aspects with both subjects. It may reflect an ancient Near Eastern view of a daughter's virginity as the father's or household's asset.

bride-price. Heb. mohar, which indicates the customary transfer of property from the groom or his family to the bride's father (see also Genesis 34:12 and I Samuel 18:25–27), perhaps to compensate her family for the loss of her labor. The mohar is different from a dowry, the money or moveable property that the wife might bring to her husband and his family at marriage. Carol Meyers argues that the betrothal gift does not mean that the groom purchased the bride like chattel; therefore, the standard translation of mohar as "bride-price" is misleading. Instead, the dowry and betrothal gift (a better rendering of mohar) helped form alliances between the two families and provided security for the woman, who theoretically retained possession of the dowry (Exodus, 2005, p. 197).

¹⁵ וְקִידֻפָתָה אֲישׁ בַּתּוֹלָה אֲשֶׁר לֹא-אָרְשָׁה
וּשְׁכֵב עַמָּה מִהָר יְמָרְנָה לֹו לְאַשָּׁה:
¹⁶ אִם־מִןָן יְמַנָּן אָבִיה לְתַתָּה לֹו בְּסָף יִשְׂקֵל בְּמִהָר הַבְּתוּלָת: ס
¹⁷ מַכְשִׁפָה לֹא תְחַיָה:

16. If her father refuses to give her to him.

Although the law requires the man to take full responsibility for his actions and marry the woman, it is understandable that a father might refuse to allow his daughter to marry the man who evaded his parental authority and seduced his daughter. In that case, the law ensures that the father's household bears no financial loss and thus receives the betrothal gift of virgins, which would have been greater than that for widows or divorcees. The law underlines a father's responsibility for his daughter's sexuality.

ASSORTED RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL PRECEPTS (22:17–23:19)

The start of the second section of the Book of the Covenant is marked by a shift in content and style. Whereas the prior laws are formulated as hypothetical cases, many of the subsequent verses are phrased apodictically as categorical imperatives. These injunctions deal with various social and religious matters, such as questions of how to treat others and the proper way to approach God. One consequence of the notion of the divine authorship of the law is that the distinction between civil and religious law becomes blurred, as seen in this parashah.

Prohibitions of Sorcery, Bestiality, and Apostasy (22:17–19)

These three offenses all incur the death penalty. Sorcery and sacrificing to other gods conflict with the proper worship of Israel's God. Sexual relations with an animal are condemned elsewhere, along ¹⁸Whoever lies with a beast shall be put to death.

¹⁹Whoever sacrifices to a god other than יהוה alone shall be proscribed.

²⁰You shall not wrong nor oppress a stranger, for you were strangers in the land of Egypt.

²¹You [communal leaders] shall not ill-treat any widow or orphan. ²²If you do mistreat them, I will heed their outcry as soon as they cry out to Me, ²³and My anger shall blaze forth and I will put you to the sword, and your own wives shall become widows and your children orphans.

²⁴If you lend money to My people, to the poor among you, do not act toward them as a creditor; exact no interest from them. ²⁵If you take your neighbor's garment in pledge, you must return it

¹⁸כָּל־שַׁבֵּב עִם־בָּהֶמה מֹות יוֹמָת: ס

¹⁹זָבֵחׇ לְאֱלֹהִים יְחֻרֵם בְּלִתִּי לִיהְוָה:
לְבָדוּ:

²⁰וְגַרְתָּ לְאִתּוֹנָה וְלֹא תַלְחַצֵּנוּ פִּיגָּרִים
הַיּוֹנָם בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרִים:

²¹כָּל־אֲלֹמָנָה וַיְתַום לֹא תַעֲפֵן: 22 אָמֵן
עֲנֵה תִּעֲנֵה אֹתוֹ כִּי אָמֵן־צַעַק יִצְעַק אַלְיִ
שְׁמַע אָשָׁמָע צַעֲקָתוֹ: 23 וְחַרָּה אָפִי
וְהַרְגַּתִּי אֶתְכֶם בְּחֶרֶב וְהִי נְשִׁיכֶם אֲלֹמָנוֹת
וּבְנִיכֶם יְתַנְּמִים: פ

²⁴אָמֵן־בָּסָף | תְּלִוָּה אֶת־עַמִּי אֶת־הָעֲנֵי
עַמְּךָ לְאִתְּהֵיה לֹא בְּנָשָׁה לְאִתְּשִׁימָנוּ עַלְיוֹ נְשָׁר: 25 אָמֵן־חַבֵּל תְּחַבֵּל שְׁלָמָת רַעֲךָ with incest and adultery (Leviticus 18:23, 20:15–16; Deuteronomy 27:21).

17. You shall not tolerate. Biblical authors treat an attempt to learn the future as permissible so long as it is accomplished through permissible means: consultation with prophets, dream interpretation, or an oracle via the high priest's breastplate (I Samuel 28:6). All other means—such as conjuring the spirits of the dead, interpreting the movements of clouds, or “reading” omens from the livers of sacrificial animals—fall into the category of intolerable sorcery (see next comment). Deuteronomy 18:13–14 suggests that sorcery violates Israel’s obligation to wholeheartedly worship God.

sorceress. Whereas many of the prior laws in this parashah mention both women and men, here the text focuses only on the former. Deuteronomy 18:9–14 enumerates various kinds of diviners and sorcerers, without distinguishing between male and female.

Women are associated with the occult in I Samuel 28, where the Woman of En-dor conjures up Samuel’s ghost, and in Ezekiel 13:17–23, where the prophet denounces female soothsayers. (See also at Leviticus 20:27 and at Deuteronomy 18:10–11.)

Proper Treatment of the Disadvantaged (22:20–26)

In this section, the Torah targets the oppression of the vulnerable members of society: the stranger, the widow, the fatherless, and the poor.

21. You [communal leaders]. The Hebrew wording is masculine plural; on this language, see at 21:2. Here, the addressees are those with the authority and power to carry out this precept, namely, certain male leaders (see Isaiah 1:23; Jeremiah 22:2–3). This explains the reference to “your wives” in v. 23.

widow or orphan. These two classes are recognized as deserving of compassion because they have no adult male provider and protector. The term yatom (“orphan”) more precisely means “fatherless,” since v. 23 makes it clear that the individual is bereft of a father, not both parents. The plight of a widow was often dire because she did not automatically inherit her husband’s land. She was left at the mercy of her children, who might have been too young to support their mother, or, in the event that she had no children, her deceased husband’s male relatives (Numbers 27:9–11). (On widows, see also Eikev, Another View, p. 1108.)

before the sun sets;²⁶ it is the only available clothing—it is what covers the skin. In what else shall [your neighbor] sleep? Therefore, if that person cries out to Me, I will pay heed, for I am compassionate.

²⁷You shall not revile God, nor put a curse upon a chieftain among your people.

²⁸You shall not put off the skimming of the first yield of your vats. You shall give Me the male first-born among your children.²⁹ You shall do the same with your cattle and your flocks: seven days it shall remain with its mother; on the eighth day you shall give it to Me.

³⁰You shall be holy people to Me: you must not eat flesh torn by beasts in the field; you shall cast it to the dogs.

23 You must not carry false rumors; you shall not join hands with the guilty to act as a malicious witness:² You shall neither side with the mighty to do wrong—you shall not give perverse testimony in a dispute so as to pervert it in favor of the mighty—³ nor shall you show deference to a poor person in a dispute.

⁴When you encounter your enemy's ox or ass wandering, you must take it back.

⁵When you see the ass of your enemy lying under its burden and would refrain from raising it, you must nevertheless help raise it.

⁶You shall not subvert the rights of your needy in their disputes. ⁷Keep far from a false charge; do not bring death on those who are innocent and in the right, for I will not acquit the wrongdoer.

Obligations to God (22:27–30)

These four verses prohibit cursing God or a chieftain, delaying gifts to the sanctuary, and consuming carrion. Their common concern is proper respect for tribal and especially religious authority.

Judicial Conduct (23:1–3)

These admonitions warn judges, litigants, and wit-

עד־בָּא הַשְׁמָשׁ תִּשְׁיבֵנָו לוֹ: ²⁶ כִּי הוּא
בְּסֻתוֹן לְבָתָה הַוָּא שְׁמַלְתָּו לְעָרוֹ
בְּמַה יִשְׁכַּב וְהַיְלָה כִּי־יִצְעַק אֱלֹי וְשָׁמְעוּתִי
כִּי־חֲנֹנוּ אָנָּנוּ: ס

²⁷ אֱלֹהִים לֹא תַּקְלֵל וְנִשְׁיא בְּעַמְקָעַ לֹא
תָּאֶרְךָ:

²⁸ מְלָאָתֶךָ וְדָמָעָךָ לֹא תַּאֲחַר בְּכָור בְּנֵיךְ
תַּתְּנוּלִי: ²⁹ פְּנִיתְעָשָׂה לְשָׂרָךְ לְעַזְנֶךְ
שְׁבֻעַת יָמִים יְהִי עַם־אָמֹר בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁמִינִי
תַּתְּנוּלִי:

³⁰ וְאַנְשֵׁי־קָדֵשׁ תַּהֲיוּ לְיַי וּבָשָׂר בְּשָׂרָה
טְרֵפָה לֹא תַּאֲכִלוּ לְפֶלֶב תַּשְׁלַבּוּ אתָתוֹ: ס

כג לֹא תְּשַׁא שְׁמָע שְׁוֹא אֶל־תַּשְׁתַּחַת יְדֶךָ
עַמְּרִישׁוּ לְהִזְרָת עַד חִמֵּס: ² לְאִתְהִיה
אַחֲרִירְבִּים לְרַעַת וְלְאִתְעַנָּה עַל־רַב
לְנִטְתָּה אַחֲרִי רַבִּים לְהִתְחַתָּה: ³ וְדָל לֹא
תַּהֲרֵר בָּרִיבּוֹ: ס

כג כִּי תִּפְגַּע שׂוֹר אִיבָּךְ אוֹ חֲמֹרְךָ תַּעֲשֵׂה דְּשֵׁב
תִּשְׁיבֵנָו לוֹ: ס

כג כִּי־תִּרְאָה חֲמֹר שְׁנָאָךְ רַבֵּן תַּחַת
מִשְׁאוֹן וְחַדְלַתְתְּ מַעֲזָב לוֹ עַזְבָּתְךָ עַמוֹּ: ס

כג לֹא תַּטְהֵר מִשְׁפָט אֲבִינָךְ בָּרִיבּוֹ: ⁷ מִדְבָּר־
שְׁקָר תַּרְחַק וְנָקִי וְצָדִיק אֶל־תַּקְהַרְגֵּכִי לֹא־

nesses not to undermine the integrity of the judicial system by offering false testimony or by favoring the poor, mighty, or majority opinion.

Treatment of the Enemy, Needy, and Stranger (23:4–9)

After commands to kindly treat an enemy's animals, the focus returns to upholding justice and the rights of the poor and the stranger.

⁸Do not take bribes, for bribes blind the clear-sighted and upset the pleas of those who are in the right.

⁹You shall not oppress a stranger, for you know the feelings of the stranger, having yourselves been strangers in the land of Egypt.

¹⁰Six years you shall sow your land and gather in its yield; ¹¹but in the seventh you shall let it rest and lie fallow. Let the needy among your people eat of it, and what they leave let the wild beasts eat. You shall do the same with your vineyards and your olive groves.

¹²Six days you shall do your work, but on the seventh day you shall cease from labor, in order that your ox and your ass may rest, and that your home-born slave and the stranger may be refreshed.

¹³Be on guard concerning all that I have told you. Make no mention of the names of other gods; they shall not be heard on your lips.

¹⁴Three times a year shall hold a festival for Me: ¹⁵You shall observe the Feast of Unleavened Bread—eating unleavened bread for seven days as I have commanded you—at the set time in the month of Abib, for in it you went forth from Egypt; and none shall appear before Me empty-handed; ¹⁶and the Feast of the Harvest, of the first fruits of your work, of what you sow in the field; and the Feast of Ingathering at the end of the year, when you gather in the results of your work from the field. ¹⁷Three times a year all your males shall appear before the Sovereign, יהוה.

¹⁸You shall not offer the blood of My sacrifice with anything leavened; and the fat of My festal offering shall not be left lying until morning.

¹⁹The choice first fruits of your soil you shall bring to the house of your God, יהוה.

You shall not boil a kid in its mother's milk.

אַצְקִיק רְשָׁעָה: ⁸ וְשַׁחַד לֹא תַקְחَ פִּי הַשְׁחָד
יַעֲוֵר פְּקָדִים וַיְסַלֵּף דְּבָרַי צְדִיקִים:
⁹ וְגַרְגַּר לֹא תַלְחַץ וְאַתֶּם יַדְעַתֶּם אֶת־נֶפֶשׁ
הַגָּר כִּי־גִּירִים הַיִּתְּמִם בָּאָרֶץ מִצְרִים:

¹⁰ וְשַׁשׁ שָׁנִים תִּזְרֻעַ אֶת־אֶרְצֶךָ וְאַסְפֵּה
אֶת־תְּבוֹאתֶךָ: ¹¹ וְהַשְׁבִּיעַ תִּשְׁמַטְנָה
וּטְשַׁתָּה וְאָכַלְוּ אֲבִינִי עַמְּךָ וַיִּתְרַם
תַּאֲכֵל חַיָּת הַשְׂדָה בְּנִית־עֲשָׂה לְכַרְמֶךָ
לְזִיתֶךָ:

¹² שְׁשָׁת יְמִים תַּعֲשֵׂה מְעַשֵּׂיךְ וּבַיּוֹם
הַשְׁבִּיעִי תִּשְׁבַּת לְמַעַן יְנוּחָ שָׂרֵךְ וְחַמְרָךְ
וְנֶפֶשׁ בְּנֵי־אַמְתָּךְ וְהַגָּר:

¹³ וּבָכֶל אֲשֶׁר־אָמַרְתִּי אֲלֵיכֶם תִּשְׁמַרְתֶּן וְשָׁם אֱלֹהִים אֶחָרִים לֹא תִזְבְּרוּ לֹא
יִשְׁמַע עַל־פָּיוֹ:

¹⁴ שְׁלֹשׁ רְגִלִּים תַּחַג לִי בְּשָׁנָה: ¹⁵ אֶת־חַג
הַמְצֹות תִּשְׁמַר שְׁבַעַת יְמִים תַּאֲכֵל מֵצֹות
כַּאֲשֶׁר צוִּיתָךְ לְמוֹעֵד חֲדַש הָאָבֵב בִּיבְּרוּ
יצָאת מִמְּעָרִים וְלֹא־יָרָא פָּנֵי גִּיקְםָ:

¹⁶ וְחַג הַקְּצִיר בְּפִ悠ִי מְעַשֵּׂיךְ אֲשֶׁר תִּזְרַע
בְּשָׂדָה וְחַג הַאֲסָל בְּצֹאת הַשָּׁנָה בְּאַסְפָּה
אֶת־מְעַשֵּׂיךְ מִן־הַשְׂדָה: ¹⁷ שְׁלֹשׁ פָּעָמִים
בְּשָׁנָה יְרָאָה כָּל־זְכוּר אֶל־פָּנֵי הָאֱלֹהִים
יְהוָה:

¹⁸ לְאַתְזִבָּח עַל־חִמֵּץ דְּמִזְבְּחִי וְלֹא־יָלִין
חַלְבִּיחָגִי עַד־בָּקָר:

¹⁹ רְאַשֵּׁית בְּפִ悠ִי אֶדְמָתָךְ תְּבִיא בֵּית יהוָה
אֶל־הַיּוֹם
לְאַתְבִּשֵּׁל גָּדִי בְּחַלֵּב אָמוֹ:

ב

Religious Calendar with Appended Food Prohibition (23:10–19)

These verses concern Israel's fixed times: the sabbatical year, Sabbath, and three pilgrimage festivals.

¹⁹ While this verse is not directly addressed to women, few laws have had a greater impact on the domestic lives of Jewish women than this one, for it

²⁰I am sending an angel before you to guard you on the way and to bring you to the place that I have made ready. ²¹Pay heed to him and obey him. Do not defy him, for he will not pardon your offenses, since My Name is in him; ²²but if you obey him and do all that I say, I will be an enemy to your enemies and a foe to your foes.

²³When My angel goes before you and brings you to the Amorites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites, and I annihilate them, ²⁴you shall not bow down to their gods in worship or follow their practices, but shall tear them down and smash their pillars to bits. ²⁵You shall serve your God, who will bless your bread and your water. And I will remove sickness from your midst. ²⁶No woman in your land shall miscarry or be barren. I will let you enjoy the full count of your days.

²⁰הִנֵּה אָנֹכִי שְׁלַח מֶלֶךְ לְפָנֶיךָ לְשֻׁמְרָךָ בְּדָרְךָ וְלְהַבִּיאָךָ אֶל־הַמִּקְוָם אֲשֶׁר הָכָן תִּתְּ: ²¹הַשְׁמֹר מִפְנֵיךָ וְשָׁמַע בְּקָל׊וּ אֶל־תִּפְרָר בָּוּ כִּי לֹא יִשָּׂא לְפִשְׁעָם כִּי שְׁמֵי בְּקָרְבָּוּ: ²²כִּי אִם־שְׁמָעוּ תִּשְׁמַע בְּקָל׊וּ וְעַשְׂתָּה כָּל־אֲשֶׁר אָדָבָר וְאִבְתָּה אֶת־אִזְבֵּחַ וְצַרְתֵּי אֶת־צְרָרִיךְ: ²³כִּי־יֵלֶךְ מֶלֶךְ לְפָנֶיךָ וְהַבִּיאָךָ אֶל־הָאָמָרִי וְהַחֲתֵי וְהַפְּרָאֵל וְהַכְּנָעָנִי הַחֲזִי וְהַדְּבוּשִׁי וְהַכְּהַדְקִיוֹּ: ²⁴לְאַתְּ שְׁתַחֲווּ לְאַלְהֵיכֶם וְלֹא תִּعְבֹּדְם וְלֹא תִּעְשֶׂה בְּמַעֲשֵׂיכֶם כִּי חָרוֹט תְּהִרְלָם וְשָׁבֵר תְּשִׁבֵּר מִצְבְּתֵיכֶם: ²⁵וְעַבְרָתָם אֶת יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם וּבְרָא אֶת־לִחְמָךְ וְאֶת־מִימִיךְ וְהַסְּרָוִתִּי מִחְלָה מִקְרָבֶךָ: ²⁶לֹא תְהִרְחֵה מִשְׁבָּלה וְעַקְרָה בָּאָרֶץ אֶת־מִסְפָּר יָמִיךְ אָמָלָא:

serves as the basis for the historic Jewish dietary practice of separating dairy and meat products. The kid, or young goat, is mentioned because it was the most common type of livestock; later Jewish law extended the prohibition to sheep and large cattle as well. In ancient Israel, meat was rarely consumed outside of special occasions—such as festivals, new moons, or perhaps the visit of an honored guest. Cooking the animal in milk instead of water would have made it tastier and more tender. (For a different theory, see at Deuteronomy 14:21.) Most commentators point to a humanitarian motivation for this law, like the other regulations in the Torah that express a sensitivity to animals and their young (see Exodus 22:29; Leviticus 22:27; Deuteronomy 22:6–7). Boiling a goat in its mother’s milk, a plausible scenario on a small farm, represents the destruction of the young in the substance intended to sustain and nurture it. In order to prevent the accidental transgression of this original injunction, the rabbinic sages expanded this command into a general prohibition against mixing meat with dairy products.

DIVINE PROMISES AND WARNINGS (23:20–33)

This epilogue reaffirms the divine promise to bring Israel to Canaan and articulates the blessings that will be enjoyed by those who keep the covenant. The blessings of food, water, health, and procreation were crucial for the Israelites to survive in the Promised Land.

26. No woman in your land shall miscarry or be barren. Israel is admonished in vv. 24–25 to worship the God of Israel and not adopt the religious practices of the native Canaanite population. As a reward, they will receive an array of blessings, including absence of two kinds of women: those who are incapable of conception, and those who suffer miscarriages (or, according to Rashi, those who bury their children). Fertility was considered ²⁷I will send forth My terror before you, and I will throw into panic all the people among whom you come, and I will make all your enemies turn tail before you. ²⁸I will send a plague ahead of you, and it shall drive out before you the Hivites, the Canaanites, and the Hittites. ²⁹I will not drive them out before you in a single year, lest the land become desolate and the wild beasts multiply to your hurt. ³⁰I will drive them out before you little by little, until you have increased and possess the land. ³¹I will set your borders from the Sea of Reeds to the Sea of Philistia, and from the wilderness to the Euphrates; for I will deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hands, and you will drive them out before you. ³²You shall make no covenant with them and their gods. ³³They shall not remain in your land, lest they cause you to sin against Me; for you will serve their gods—and it will prove a snare to you.

24 Then [God] said to Moses, “Come up to יְהוָה, with Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy elders of Israel, and bow low from afar. ²Moses alone shall come near to יְהוָה; but the others shall not come near, nor shall the people come up with him.”

.....

crucial for both the individual and society for several reasons. Israel's agrarian economy depended upon large families to perform all necessary labors. Premature mortality due to disease therefore made it necessary for women to have many children in order to ensure that some lived to adulthood. Also, a woman's financial security depended upon having children, as seen in the book of Ruth, where the women rejoice that Ruth's son will provide for his grandmother Naomi in her old age (Ruth 4:14–15). If a woman was widowed without children and her husband made no provisions for her, she might have no means of support, for her deceased husband's property would be inherited by her husband's brothers (Numbers 27:9).

²⁷ אַתֶּן-אִמְתֵּל אֲשֶׁר לְפָנֶיךָ וְהַמְתֵּל אֶת-בָּלְהָעָם אֲשֶׁר תָּבֹא בָּהֶם וְנַתֵּן אֶת-כְּבָל-אַיִשְׁרָף אֱלֹיכָךְ עָרָף: ²⁸ וְשַׁלְחָתִי אֶת-הַצְּרָעָה
לְפָנֶיךָ וְגַרְשָׂה אֶת-הַחֲזִיר אֶת-הַכְּנָעָן וְאֶת-
הַחֲנִינָה מִלְּפָנֶיךָ: ²⁹ לֹא אָגַרְשָׁנוּ מִלְּפָנֶיךָ
בָּשָׁנָה אַחַת פְּנִיתְחִיה הַאֲרָץ שְׁמָמָה
וּרְבָה עַלְיָךְ חַיָּת הַשְׁדָה: ³⁰ מַעַט מַעַט
אָגַרְשָׁנוּ מִלְּפָנֶיךָ עַד אֲשֶׁר תִּפְרַח וְנַחַלְתָּ
אֶת-הָאָרֶץ ³¹ וְשַׁתִּי אֶת-גָּבְלָךְ מִיםִּסּוּקָ
וְעַד-יָם פְּלַשְׁתִּים וּמִמְּדָבָר עַד-דָּנָהָר כִּי
אָתָּנוּ בִּזְדָּכָם אֶת יְשֻׁבֵּי הָאָרֶץ וְגַרְשָׂתָמוּ
מִלְּפָנֶיךָ: ³² לְאַתְכָּרְתָּ לָהֶם וְלְאֲלֹהֵיכֶם
בְּרִית: ³³ לֹא יִשְׁבּוּ בָּאָרֶץ פְּנִיחָתִיאוּ
אַתֶּךָ לְיִכְרֹת תַּעֲבֶל אֶת-אֱלֹהֵיכֶם כִּי-יְהִיא
לְךָ לִמְוקָשׁ: ב

כְּד וְאֶל-מֹשֶׁה אָמַר עַלְהָ אֶל-יְהֹהָ אַתָּה
וְאֶחָרֶן נָדֵב וְאֶבְיוֹהָ וְשְׁבָעִים מִזְקָנִי
יִשְׁרָאֵל וְהַשְׁתְּחוּתָם מִרְחָק: ² וְנִגְשֶׁשׁ מֹשֶׁה
לְבָדוֹ אֶל-יְהֹהָ וְהֵם לֹא יִגְשֶׁשׁ וְהָעָם לֹא
יַעֲלֹן עַמּוֹ:

The Covenant Ratification Ritual (24:1–18)

Exodus 24 depicts the ratification of the covenant between God and Israel. The central components of this ceremony involve Moses' recitation of the terms of the covenant, the people's unanimous agreement to follow God's words, the construction of an altar and twelve pillars symbolizing the twelve tribes, and the offering of sacrifices, with half the blood dashed on the altar and the other half sprinkled on the people—perhaps a graphic symbol of their entry into the covenant.

This passage also describes an unusual scene in which the leaders and representatives of the people ³Moses went and repeated to the people all the commands of יְהוָה and all the rules; and all the people answered with one voice, saying, “All the things that יְהוָה has commanded we will do!” ⁴Moses then wrote down all the commands of יְהוָה.

Early in the morning, he set up an altar at the foot of the mountain, with twelve pillars for the twelve tribes of Israel. ⁵He designated some assistants among the Israelites, and they offered burnt offerings and sacrificed bulls as offerings of well-being to יְהוָה. ⁶Moses took one part of the blood and put it in basins, and the other part of the blood he dashed against the altar. ⁷Then he took the record of the covenant and read it aloud to the people. And they said, “All that has spoken we will faithfully do!” ⁸Moses took the blood and dashed it on the people and said, “This is the blood of the covenant that now makes with you concerning all these commands.”

⁹Then Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy elders of Israel ascended; ¹⁰and they saw the God of Israel—under whose feet was the likeness of a pavement of sapphire, like the very sky for purity. ¹¹Yet [God] did not raise a hand against the leaders of the Israelites; they beheld God, and they ate and drank.

¹²יְהוָה said to Moses, “Come up to Me on the mountain and wait there, and I will give you the stone tablets with the teachings and commandments which I have inscribed to instruct them.”

¹³So Moses and his attendant Joshua arose, and ascend partway up the mountain, where they collectively experience a vision of God and participate in a formal meal to solemnize the covenant. Various segments of Israel’s leadership participate in this ceremony: prophetic (Moses), priestly (Aaron, his sons Nadab and Abihu), and judicial (seventy representative elders). Although women do not take part in this particular ritual, presumably they are

³וַיָּבֹא מֹשֶׁה וַיִּסְפֶּר לִפְנֵם אֶת בְּלִדְבָּרִי יְהוָה וְאֶת בְּלִהְמְשֻׁפְטִים וְיַעֲן בְּלִהְעָם קֹול אֶחָד וַיֹּאמְרוּ בְּלִהְדָבְרִים אֲשֶׁר־דִּבֶּר יְהוָה נִעְשָׂה: ⁴וַיִּכְתַּב מֹשֶׁה אֶת בְּלִדְבָּרִי יְהוָה

וַיִּשְׁבַּם בְּבָקָר וַיִּבְנֶן מִזְבֵּח תְּחִת הַהָר וַיִּשְׁתַּחַט עֲשָׂרֶה מֵצֶבֶת לְשָׁנִים עָשָׂר שְׁבָטֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: ⁵וַיִּשְׁלַח אֶת־נְעָרָיו בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּעֲלֹה עַלְת וַיִּזְבְּחוּ זְבָחִים שְׁלָמִים לִיהוָה וַיַּעֲשֵׂה עֲלֵת וַיִּזְבְּחוּ זְבָחִים לִיהוָה וַיַּעֲשֵׂה פְרִים: ⁶וַיִּקְחֶה מֹשֶׁה חֵצֵי הָלֶם וַיִּשְׁמַע אֶת־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ בְּאָגָנָת וְחֵצֵי הָלֶם זָרָק עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ: ⁷וַיִּקְחֶה סְפִיר הַבְּرִית וַיִּקְרָא בְּאֹזֶן הָעָם וַיֹּאמְרוּ כָל אֲשֶׁר־דִּבֶּר יְהוָה נִعְשָׂה וַיָּשֶׁבּוּ: ⁸וַיִּקְחֶה מִשְׁלָח אֶת־הָלֶם וַיִּזְרַק עַל־הָעָם וַיֹּאמֶר הִנֵּה רְסִיחַבְרִית אֲשֶׁר בְּרַת יְהוָה עָמָיכֶם עַל בְּלִהְדָבְרִים הָאָלוֹ:

⁹וַיַּעַל מֹשֶׁה וְאַהֲרֹן נֶדֶב וְאַבְיָהוָא וְשָׁבָעִים מַזְקִנִּי יִשְׂרָאֵל: ¹⁰וַיֹּאמֶר אֶת אֱלֹהִי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַתַּחַת גִּלְעֹל בְּמַעֲשֵׂל בְּבִנְתַּת הַטְּפִיר וּבְעַצְמַת הַשָּׁמְמִים לְטַהַר: ¹¹וְאֶל־אַצְלֵל בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לֹא שָׁלַח יָדו וַיְחִזֵּן אֶת־הָאֱלֹהִים וַיַּאֲכִלוּ וַיִּשְׁתַּהוּ: ¹²

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה עַל־הַהָר וְהִיה־שָׁם וְאַתָּה לְךָ אֶת־לְחֹות הָאָנוֹ: וְהַתְּרַחֵל וְהַמְצִיחֵה אֲשֶׁר בְּתַבְתִּי לְהֹזְרָתֶם: ¹³וַיָּקַם מֹשֶׁה וַיַּהְשַׁע מִשְׁרָתוֹ וַיַּעַל מִשְׁהָה included in the term “people” as everyone affirms, “All that יְהוָה has spoken we will faithfully do” (v. 7). The episode reaches its climax when Moses ascends the mountain and receives the stone tablets etched with God’s precepts. The tablets are to be deposited eventually in the ark of the Tabernacle, the focus of most of the remaining portion of the book of Exodus.

—Elaine Goodfriend

Moses ascended the mountain of God.¹⁴ To the elders he had said, “Wait here for us until we return to you. You have Aaron and Hur with you; let anyone who has a legal matter approach them.”

¹⁵ When Moses had ascended the mountain, the cloud covered the mountain. ¹⁶ The Presence of יהוה abode on Mount Sinai, and the cloud hid it for six days. On the seventh day [God] called to Moses from the midst of the cloud. ¹⁷ Now the Presence of יהוה appeared in the sight of the Israelites as a consuming fire on the top of the mountain. ¹⁸ Moses went inside the cloud and ascended the mountain; and Moses remained on the mountain forty days and forty nights.

אֶל־הָרֶב הָאֱלֹהִים: ¹⁴ וְאֶל־הַזְּקָנִים אָמַר
שָׁבוּ לְנוּ בָּזָה עַד אֲשֶׁר־נִשּׁוּב אֲלֵיכֶם וְהִגְעָן
אֶחָדָן וְחוֹרֵל עַמּוּכֶם מִיְּבָעֵל דְּבָרִים יִגְשֶׁב
אֱלֹהִים:

¹⁵ וַיַּעַל מֹשֶׁה אֶל־הָרֶב וַיֵּבֶס הַעֲלָן אֶת־
הָרֶב: ¹⁶ וַיֵּשֶׁב בְּבוֹד־יְהֹוָה עַל־הָרֶב סִינְיָה
וַיַּכְפֵּהוּ הַעֲלָן שְׁשָׁת יְמִים וַיִּקְרָא אֶל־מֹשֶׁה
בַּיּוֹם הַשְׁבִיעִי מִתּוֹךְ הַעֲלָן: ¹⁷ וּמְרָאָה
בְּבוֹד יְהֹוָה בְּאֹשֶׁר אַכְלָת בְּרַאשׁ הָרֶב
לְעֵינֵי בְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: ¹⁸ וַיָּבֹא מֹשֶׁה בְּתוֹךְ
הַעֲלָן וַיַּעַל אֶל־הָרֶב וַיְהִי מֹשֶׁה בְּהָרֶב
אַרְבָּעִים יוֹם וַאֲרַבָּעִים לִילָה: פ

Another View

THE TITLE OF PARASHAT MISHPATIM (“Rules”) belies the diversity in form and content of its legal materials. For the most part, the principles of morality and ethical concern it contains reflect admirable humanitarian principles, especially when compared to similar legal materials from other ancient Near Eastern cultures. However, with respect to language, the consistent use of the masculine gender in verbal and nominal forms is problematic. Since Hebrew often uses masculine forms generically, how do we know when masculine language refers specifically to men as opposed to both men and women? The new translation in this volume is the result of scrupulous research conducted to identify masculine terms that should be understood inclusively. The English text now reads more accurately, for it reflects the fact that many legal principles apply to women as well as men.

Nonetheless, there is an important usage of the masculine singular that is not visible in this translation. The masculine singular pronoun atah is translated as “you.” The word “you” is gender inclusive in English; but in Hebrew atah sometimes refers generically to men and women, at other times, just to men.

According to the Bible, a marital couple forms a unity. The classic evidence for this is Genesis 2:24, which presents the astonishing statement—given the patrilocal nature of Israelite society, with brides moving to the grooms’ homes—that men are to leave their parents and become “one flesh” with their spouses. Despite a powerful concern with lineages and ancestry, the marital bond trumps the parental connection and expresses the merging of female and male.

Thus, many biblical passages using masculine language may refer to a conjugal pair. In such cases, mas-

Many biblical passages that use masculine language may refer to a conjugal pair.

cule singular pronouns like atah or masculine singular imperatives (“you”) are not simply inclusive terms, but reflect the special bond of husband and wife. For example, the injunction to cease from work on the seventh day (23:12) uses the masculine singular form but presumably applies to a man’s wife as well. Similarly, the prohibition against cooking a kid in its mother’s milk (23:19) is in the masculine singular but also applies to a man’s spouse; after all, women were largely responsible for preparing food in ancient Israel.

—Carol Meyers

Post-biblical Interpretations

When you acquire a Hebrew slave (21:2–11). Slavery was an accepted part of life in biblical and post-biblical times. Numerous Roman Empire documents and inscriptions demonstrate that Jews were slaves and slave owners. Slaves could be emancipated, but mostly within ongoing structured relationships between freed persons and their master’s/patron’s household. The provisions for treatment of slaves outlined in our parashah do not appear to have been applied by Jews in the post-biblical period, even when their slaves were also Jews.

Thus, female slaves in the post-biblical period did not enjoy the protections of Exodus 21:9–11, which considers female slavery as leading to marriage and refers to a woman’s conjugal rights. Rather, rabbinic legislation, like Roman law, considered slavery a deficient status. A Jewish slave woman could not form a legal marriage with her Jewish sexual partner, whether a slave or a free man, and the offspring of such a union were slaves (Mishnah Kiddushin 3:12). The likelihood of sexual relations between female slaves and various males in the master's household was assumed. Rabbinic texts tacitly recognized that women slaves were sexually available to their owners, as in the maxim "the more women slaves, the more unchastity" (Mishnah Avot 2:7). This warning addresses the distraction that female slaves posed to the male scholar.

Emancipation affected men and women differently. The Jewish historian Flavius Josephus (1st century C.E.) described a Jew who was taken as a slave to Rome and married a captive virgin at the command of his master, Emperor Vespasian (Life 414–15). At the moment that the male slave was freed, they separated, and later he married again. The first woman was apparently an appropriate wife for a slave, but not for a free man.

Rabbinic law presumed that female slaves and freed women were no longer virgins. Thus, even if a slave woman was emancipated, the legal minimum value of her marriage settlement (k'tubah) would be half that of an unmarried free woman. Although the liberation story of Exodus was always a central focus of Judaism, few commentators have struggled with the larger issues of enslavement that continued for centuries in Jewish societies.

Rabbinic Judaism did place a premium on pidyon sh'vuyim, the redemption of Jewish captives who were at risk of being sold into slavery. BT Bava Batra 8a–b asks: "Since Rabbi Samuel ben Judah has laid down that money for tzedakah is not to be levied from the fatherless 'even for the redemption of captives,' should we not conclude that redeeming captives is a religious duty of great importance?" The Rabbis insisted that in most cases women were to be redeemed from slavery before men, in order to preserve the women from disonor (Mishnah Horayot 3:7; BT Horayot 13a). If a woman testified that a fellow female prisoner, the wife of a priest, was not raped in captivity, her testimony was believed, even though women's testimony was generally not admissible in rabbinic courts (Mishnah K'tubot 2:6; BT K'tubot 27b). This meant the undefiled woman could return to her husband.

When [two or more] parties fight (21:22–25). The phrase if other damage ensues (v. 23) played a critical role in shaping rabbinic attitudes about abortion (Daniel Schiff, Abortion in Judaism, 2002). In the Torah, a miscarriage results, but no other damage (v. 22) is contrasted with the potential other damage (v. 23), an apparent reference to the death of the woman. This formulation suggests that only mortal injury to the pregnant woman is considered homicide. However, Jews who translated the Hebrew Bible into Greek (3rd century B.C.E.) understood the import of these verses differently. Instead of contrasting the death of the fetus and the death of the mother, the Septuagint (Greek translation) renders ason as "formed," distinguishing the death of an "imperfectly formed" fetus (v. 22) from that of a "perfectly formed" fetus (v. 23). Thus, this translation considers the violently induced miscarriage of a completely formed fetus as homicide.

Few commentators have struggled with the larger issues of enslavement.

Rabbinic interpretation, however, follows the Hebrew text; therefore, the Rabbis drew a clear distinction between the monetary penalty for one who kills a fetus, and the capital penalty for one who causes a woman's death. The Rabbis considered elsewhere the existence and formation of a fetus once it had reached forty days, but they stopped short of declaring it a nefesh, a legal human life. Despite the complexity and ambiguity in many of their discussions of abortion, the Rabbis specifically legislated aborting a fetus if its continued existence threatened the pregnant woman's life (Mishnah Ohalot 7:6 and BT Sanhedrin 72b).

—Susan Marks

Contemporary Reflection

PARASHAT MISHPATIM CONTAINS the Torah's first law collection, which—unlike all other ancient Near-Eastern law collections—begins with regulations concerning slavery. The Torah seems unable to imagine an economy without slaves, but it frowns upon Hebrew slavery. Consequently, for Israelites in debt, Exodus 21:2–6 prescribes indentured servitude, but limited to six years. If a man enters debt-slavery while married, the master must let his wife go when he is released. However, if the master gives him a slave wife, the master retains the wife and children. What happens if the debt-slave declares, “I love my master and my wife and children: I do not wish to go free” (21:5)? He then has his earlobe pierced with an awl, and he becomes a slave in perpetuity, which the Rabbis interpret to mean until the Jubilee, or fiftieth, year.

Liberal readers are often sympathetic to this noble fellow who relinquishes his freedom to stay with his slave wife and children. But how would this case look from the perspective of the slave wife? I will argue that it looks much different. Who is this slave woman? She is not the amah ivriyah (Hebrew indentured servant) the text speaks about in 21:7–12. In that case, a girl has been sold by a presumably impoverished Israelite parent into a wealthier family on the understanding that she will eventually be married to the master or one of his sons as a free woman. This practice is well attested in other ancient Near Eastern documents. Should the man take another wife, he must continue to support her. An Israelite woman may not be resold if her owner is displeased with her; instead, she must go free without any compensation to the master. Her servitude, too, is time limited.

In contrast, the slave woman in Exodus 21:5–6 is most likely a foreign bondswoman. As a non-Israelite, she will not become part of the master's family, and her slavery is perpetual, not limited. As property, she and a male Israelite slave can be mated by the master to breed more slaves, which cannot be done to an Israelite handmaiden. The foreign bondswoman does not choose her husband and cannot reject him. Both he and her children can be taken from her. As we learn from Exodus 21:20, 26–27, her very body is at risk, for masters may beat their own slaves without legal interference as long as they do not kill them or destroy a major body part. (Slave narratives from different parts of the world confirm that slaves were, and are, routinely battered and then expected to work.

How would this case look from the perspective of the slave wife?

They may work less efficiently, but historically this has not been a sufficient disincentive to masters. The law cannot be said to permit battery of slaves; it is simply uninterested in such battery unless it results in major damage or death.)

While the Israelite slave must be freed at the start of the seventh year, how might the foreign bondswoman obtain her freedom? There are three options: First, she could save money given to her as a reward or a wage. If, with her owner's permission, she contracts herself out for pay after finishing her other work, she might be able to accumulate money to buy her freedom. Mesopotamian records show that slaves were able to gain extra money as artisans and agents (see Gregory Chirichigno, Debt-Slavery in Israel and the Ancient Near East, 1993, p. 54); this practice might have existed in ancient Israel as well. Second, she could run away. Deuteronomy 23:16–17 says that a fugitive slave may not be returned to the owner. Third, an Israelite slave husband once released could buy his slave wife and children and free them. African-American history shows examples of former slaves who bought spouses and children or arranged for them to be secretly stolen and led to freedom. Harriet Tubman, whose code name was “Moses,” had a long career of gathering slaves and leading them North. Implicit in these narratives is a desperate determination to be free.

In contrast, what does the Israelite slave husband accomplish by pledging himself to perpetual slavery? When he declares that he loves his wife and children, it is not a happy, free family he is talking about. He cannot insure that his family will remain intact. His wife and children could be sold at any time. Even when his family is united, all will suffer the terrible humiliations of slavery: lack of choice, being objectified as property, being brutalized without recourse. Will the slave-wife appreciate his sinking into helplessness and hopelessness alongside her, especially if she was counting on his determination to free her once he was freed?

When the debt-slave professes his love for his master (whom he mentions before his slave family in v. 5), what kind of love is this? It is a love of dependency, of not having to make decisions, of not having to struggle for a living, to choose a wife, or take responsibility for one’s children. Beyond that, embracing slavery undoes the liberation from Egypt and rejects the liberating God. In BT Kiddushin 22b, Rabbi Yochanan ben Zakkai explains why this man’s ear is pierced with an awl: “The Holy One says, ‘The ear that heard on Mount Sinai when I said, ‘the people of Israel are my servants and not servants of servants’ and went and got himself a human master, let that ear be pierced.’”

The bondswoman is not where she is because she volunteered to be a slave. Most likely, she is a captive taken in war, well schooled in the corrosive bitterness of slavery. She might see the Hebrew slave’s renunciation of freedom not as a romantic gesture, but as a naïve, even stupid one. He has surrendered his power to free her or their children. He may have been her best chance for freedom.

The Torah is truthful with us, although that truth does not always make us happy. Ancient Near Eastern law could not imagine a world without slavery; yet Israelite law wanted the people to remain free of all human appropriation. That dilemma resulted in the preservation of this vignette about the conflicting loyalties of the Israelite slave. By highlighting the shadowy woman in the background, we get a rare, ironic glimpse of the dilemma from her usually invisible point of view.

—Rachel Adler

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

from After a Miscarriage: Hold Me Now

Vicki Hollander

Exodus 21:22

Hayotzer,
One who shapes,
Who formed us out of moistened clay,
Who rolled and pinched and sculpted the world,
hold me now.

You who enable wisps of seeds to grow,
Who partnered the life which grew inside me, shelter me.

Life was gifted.
Life removed.

Hayotzer,
shape me a place where I can weep,
and mourn the loss,
and let the blackness inside cry.

Help me say goodbye to the child
who was growing within me,
to the dreams I bore,
to the love I held within for that budding soul, plucked away.

Let my voice ring,
a mother's call,
wild to the universe.

And You,
stand by me,
stand at my side,
and watch my tear fall and touch the earth.
Hear my pain and hold me.

Under the Spell of Miscarriage

Jessica Greenbaum

Exodus 21:22

whatever I touched took on a lifelessness of its own, recomposed like a sentence to its letters or partisans to their hiding places.
The corn bread came out—a stone tablet—and the soup, puffing, grew as bland as its original pearly beans. Molecules spilled their promise like the string of beads
I was trying to clasp; bonds broke so fast it seemed no two entities could have rapport;
in the metropolis of my body all the friends en route to assignations turned for home, and outside it, even our speech fell bewitched—ideas skidded to a halt before they could be loved, and nothing we said generated a laugh or begot more conversation. How I wanted to talk up a storm, to spin a yarn, to harvest, like the fair's cotton candy, a wand of stuff from the kindness farmed in the plot between us

(because that is our defining nature).
A low bow to the one who forbids creation.
Now I see how powerful you are, and how neglected.

Psalm 5: A Lullaby for Courage

Debbie Perlman

Exodus 23:25

O Eternal, hold me with gentleness
 Through this long night of pain;
 Lay Your cool hand upon my body.
 As a mother strokes the fevered brow
 Of her beloved child,
 Give me succor.

O Eternal, clasp me to Your bosom,
 And rock me with quiet motion,
 To and fro as the seconds pass,
 Waiting, waiting for the next relief,
 Stretching endlessly toward the dawn.

O Eternal, sing me to calm,
 Humming a lullaby my grandmother sang
 As she arranged the soup bowl on the tray,
 And brought it to me with the warmth of her smile.
 Sing me that song to soothe my soul.

O Eternal, guard me through this darkness.
 Wrap me in a soft, warm quilt of Your regard
 That I might find a paragraph of flickering comfort
 To read and remember
 Within this long, grim novel.

O Eternal, keep me safe through this night;
 And let the morning come to renew me,
 To turn me, to heal me,
 To find me enfolded in the vigor of Your love.

Barren

Rahel (transl. Maurice Samuel)

Exodus 23:26

Oh, if I had a son, a little son,
 With black, curled hair and clever eyes,
 A little son to walk with in the garden
 Under morning skies
 A son,
 A little son!

I'd call him Uri, little, laughing Uri,
 A tender name, as light, as full of joy
 As sunlight on the dew, as tripping on the tongue
 As the laughter of a boy—“Uri!”
 I'd call him.

And still I wait, as mother Rahel waited,
 Or Hannah at Shiloh, she, the barren one,
 Until the day comes when my lips whisper,
 “Uri, my son!”

תְּרוּמָה ◆ T'rumah

EXODUS 25:1–27:19

A Place for God: Instructions for Building the Tabernacle

ALTHOUGH GOD is theoretically everywhere, the Israelites needed assurance of God's constant accessibility and availability. They accomplished this—as did the other peoples of the ancient Near East—by constructing an earthly residence for God, one that would mirror the heavenly prototype in which God was presumed to dwell. With God in their midst in an earthly shrine, God's power to protect the people and provide for their well-being would be guaranteed. Beginning with parashat T'rumah (“gifts”), virtually all of the rest of Exodus focuses on the portable shrine known variously as the Tabernacle (Mishkan) or Tent of Meeting (Ohel Mo'ed). Even though some of its structure and objects are reflected in today's synagogue furnishings, the Tabernacle should not be compared to a synagogue. It was not a house of worship; and it was off limits to all but the upper echelons of the priesthood. Instead of being a place of communal worship, it was conceived of as an elaborate and costly residence for the divine presence. The word Mishkan comes from the root meaning “to dwell” (sh-k-n), which gave rise also to the well-known term Shechinah (see at 25:8).

The wealth of seemingly exact details in the instructions for the Tabernacle belies the fact that such a structure probably never existed. The early Israelites may have had a relatively simple tent shrine—perhaps the Tent of Meeting—that was later incorporated into the Jerusalem Temple during the monarchy. Memories of the original shrine likely were expanded as the Exodus Tabernacle account took shape centuries later, influenced by knowledge of the First and Second Temples. This is a highly constructed account, and very little of it seems to be historical.

The Tabernacle texts in Exodus—much like the sacred building texts of other ancient peoples—begin with elaborate instructions for making the Mishkan, its furnishings, and the priestly vestments (Exodus 25–31); some Bible scholars call these instructions the prescriptive Tabernacle texts. Much of this information is repeated in another lengthy section relating how the instructions were implemented (Exodus 35–40); its passages are called the descriptive Tabernacle texts. The Golden Calf episode (Exodus 32–34) separates these two pieces. It is helpful to remember that behind the mass of arcane details lies a yearning for God's presence and an attempt to establish a relationship between divine immanence and transcendence, in other words, between God's abilities to be “right here” and “everywhere” at the same time.

Behind the mass of arcane details lies a yearning for God's presence.

Aside from God and Moses, the only other actors in this parashah are the “people” who collectively provide the building materials. While women are not explicitly mentioned in this Torah portion, parashat Vayak'heil specifies that both women and men donated their possessions for the construction of the Mishkan (35:22, 29; 36:6) and that women were involved in producing textiles (35:25–26) and performing tasks at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting (38:8). Such passages challenge the popular impression that this holy edifice is the result of exclusively male efforts.

—Carol Meyers

Outline—

I. INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT BUILDING MATERIALS (25:1–9)

II. INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT INTERIOR FURNISHINGS (25:10–40)

- A. Ark and its cover (vv. 10–22)
- B. Table and menorah (vv. 23–40)

III. INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT THE TABERNACLE STRUCTURE (26:1–37)

- A. Coverings (vv. 1–14)
- B. Frames (vv. 15–30)
- C. Textile partitions (vv. 31–37)

IV. INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT THE COURTYARD (27:1–19)

- A. Altar (vv. 1–8)
- B. Enclosure (vv. 9–19)

25:1

יְהוָה spoke to Moses, saying: ²Tell the Israelite people to bring Me gifts; you shall accept gifts for Me from every person whose heart is so moved. ³And these are the gifts that you shall accept from them: gold, silver, and copper; ⁴blue, purple, and crimson yarns, fine

כִּי וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי מֹשֶׁה לֵאמֹר: ²דְּבָרָךְ אֶל־בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיְקַח־וּלְלֵי תְּרוּמָה מֵאַת־כָּל־אִישׁ אֲשֶׁר יִדְבְּנֶנוּ לְפָנָיו תְּקֻחוּ אֶת־תְּרוּמָתֵיכִי: ³וְזֹאת הַתְּרוּמָה אֲשֶׁר תְּקֻחֵת מֵאַתִּים ذָהָב וְכָסֶף וְנָحָשֶׁת: ⁴וְתִבְלַחֲתָם

Instructions about Building Materials (25:1–9)

Because the Tabernacle is conceived of as God's abode, many of its features are highly symbolic. This is apparent in this introductory unit, which features seven categories of materials: metals, yarn, skins, wood, oil, spices, and gemstones. The number seven represents completeness in the Semitic world, so this group of materials signifies the totality of the supplies.

1. Yahweh spoke to Moses. The directions for the Tabernacle are presented as being given to Moses at Sinai, thus linking the remainder of the book of Exodus to the preceding narrative about the exodus from Egypt and the revelation at Sinai.

2. gifts. Heb. t'rumah, a collective term, provides the designation for this parashah. The resources for the Tabernacle are to be donated, not elicited as taxes.

people . . . every person. All members of the community, both female and male, are expected to contribute, as 35:22, 29 and 36:6 make explicit. This assumes that women had their own resources and control over them; presumably they could decide for themselves what to offer to the project.

3. gold, silver, and copper. Three metals will be used for the components of the Tabernacle according to their proximity to the most sacred space, the Holy of Holies. The most sacred objects will be made of gold, the most valuable metal.

copper. The Hebrew term also designates bronze (a copper-based alloy), which, given its strength and hardness, is more likely the intended meaning with regard to the Tabernacle.

4. blue, purple, and crimson yarns. The three colors specified for the woolen yarns—indigo blue, sea-snail purple, and cochineal red—were the most desirable and expensive in ancient Israel and the wider Near East. These particular dyes were self-fixing, meaning that they were relatively impervious to light and remained bright. Dying woolen strands with these colors was costly because the raw materials were difficult to use or rare. These three colors are probably listed in order of costliness. Textile production was largely the domain of women, as the Torah reflects in 35:25–26 (see also Another View, p. 467; P'kudei, Another View, p. 560).

- Most women spun and wove to satisfy household needs: clothing, blankets, bags, and more.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 467

- God is depicted as a father, longing to remain with his beloved daughter, Israel.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 468

- Imagine how these former slaves felt as they became builders of a dwelling for the Divine!

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 469

- one thing have I asked and it I seek / your dwelling in me your giving me a spirit....

VOICES ► 471

linen, goats' hair;⁵ tanned ram skins, dolphin skins, and acacia wood;⁶ oil for lighting, spices for the anointing oil and for the aromatic incense;⁷ lapis lazuli and other stones for setting, for the ephod and for the breastpiece.⁸ And let them make Me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them.⁹ Exactly as I show you—the pattern of the Tabernacle and the pattern of all its furnishings—so shall you make it.

וְאֶרְגָּמָן וְתִזְלָעָת שְׁנִי וְשֵׁשׁ וְעַזְבִּים :⁵ וְעֲרָתָה
אִילָם מִאָדָם וְעַרְתָּה תְּחִשִּׁים וְעַצְבִּים :⁶ שְׁמָן לְמַاءָר בְּשָׁמִים לְשָׁמָן
הַמְשֻׁחָה וְלִקְרָטָה הַסְּפִינִים :⁷ אַבְנִי-שָׁהָם
וְאַבְנִי מְלָאִים לְאַפְדָּה וְלִחְשָׁן :⁸ וְעַשְׂוֵו לִי
מִקְדָּשׁ וְשְׁכֹנֶתִי בְּתוֹכָם :⁹ בְּכָל אֲשֶׁר אָנֹכִי
מֵרָאָה אָוֹתָךְ אֶת תְּבִנָת הַמִּשְׁבָּן וְאֵת תְּבִנָת פֶּלֶגְלִיו וְכֵן תְּעַשֵּׂו :^ס linen. The word for linen is derived from an Egyptian term and denotes an especially fine grade of that fabric.

5. dolphin. The meaning of this term is uncertain; perhaps it represents a specific color—probably rust—of tanned and dyed sheep- or goat-skin, rather than a sea animal.

acacia. Wood from acacia trees is durable and relatively light in weight—ideal for a portable structure.

6. oil. Namely, olive oil to be used as lamp fuel, as explained later; see 27:20–21 and the comments there.

spices for the anointing oil and... incense. The oil is to be used to anoint the sacred objects and the priests, as explained later; for the ingredients, see 30:22–38.

7. lapis lazuli. More likely onyx or possibly carnelian.

ephod and... breastpiece. These are the paraphernalia of the vestments for the chief priestly official. (For more details, see at 28:6.)

8. sanctuary. Heb. mikdash, from the root k-d-sh ("to be hallowed"); the term emphasizes the Tabernacle's holiness.

that I may dwell among them. This key statement articulates the purpose of the Tabernacle.

dwell. The verb comes from the root sh-k-n. The usual word for "dwell" (y-sh-b) means to inhabit or live someplace. In contrast, the root sh-k-n indicates a moving, dynamic presence, not one tied to a fixed location. (The later concept of the Shechinah comes from the same root; see Post-biblical Interpretations, p. 468.)

among them. Or, "in the midst of" the people. Such language helps negotiate the tension between the freedom of God to be everywhere and the need of humans to have tangible evidence of God's immanence and accessibility.

9. pattern. Heb. tavnit, a noun formed from the verb "to build" (b-n-h). It probably refers to an archetypal heavenly structure rather than to a plan an architect would use. Thus, God's imagined heavenly abode provides the model for the Tabernacle.

Tabernacle. Heb. mishkan, from the root sh-k-n (see at v. 8 under "dwell"), which allows for the mobility inherent in the concept of a tent-shrine. The noun conveys the idea of a dwelling-place and is not simply a synonym for tent. The English word "Tabernacle" (which derives from Latin) refers only to this wilderness shrine, whereas mishkan is a more general term: when it refers to a structure occupied by human beings it is translated as "dwelling, abode, home" (for example, Leviticus 26:11; Numbers 16:24, 24:5). The Tabernacle is conceived of as a place on earth in which God will be readily accessible and from which God's protective power will emanate.

¹⁰They shall make an ark of acacia wood, two and a half cubits long, a cubit and a half wide, and a cubit and a half high. ¹¹Overlay it with pure gold—overlay it inside and out—and make upon it a gold molding round about. ¹²Cast four gold rings for it, to be attached to its four feet, two rings on one of its side walls and two on the other. ¹³Make poles of acacia wood and overlay them with gold; ¹⁴then insert the poles into the rings on the side walls of the ark, for carrying the ark. ¹⁵The poles shall remain in the rings of the ark: they shall not be removed from it. ¹⁶And deposit in the Ark [the tablets of] the Pact which I will give you.

¹⁰ וְעַשׂו אָרוֹן עַצִּים אֲמֻתִים וְחַזִּי
אֶרְכּוֹ וְאֵמָה וְחַצֵּל רְחַבּוֹ וְאֵפֶה וְחַזִּי
קְמַתּוֹ: ¹¹ וְעַפְתִּית אֹתוֹ וְהַבְּ תְּהֹור מִבֵּית
וּמִחוֹזֵק תְּعִפְנֵנוּ וְעַשְׂתִּית עַלְיוֹ זָר וְהַבְּ סְבִיבָה:
¹² וַיְצַקֵּת לֹא אָרֶב טְבֻעָת זָהָב וְנִתְחַתָּה עַל
אַרְבָּע פָּעָמִתִּוּ וְשְׁתִּי טְבֻעָת עַל-צְלָעוֹ
הָאַחַת וְשְׁתִּי טְבֻעָת עַל-צְלָעוֹ הַשְׁנִית:
¹³ וְעַשְׂתִּית בְּדֵי עַצִּים שְׁטִים וְעַפְתִּית אֶתְם
זָהָב: ¹⁴ וְהַבָּאֵת אֶת-הַבְּדִים בְּטְבֻעָת עַל
צְלָעַת הָאָרֶן לְשִׁיאָת אֶת-הָאָרֶן בָּהֶם:
¹⁵ בְּטְבֻעָת הָאָרֶן יְהִי הַבְּדִים לֹא יִסּוּר
מִמֶּנּוּ: ¹⁶ וְנִתְחַת אֶל-הָאָרֶן אֶת הַעֲדָת אֲשֶׁר
אָפַן אֲלֵיכָךְ:

Instructions about Interior Furnishings (25:10–40)

The prescriptive texts (those detailing what is to be done) begin with the contents of the Tabernacle, in contrast with the descriptive texts (those detailing what was done), which begin with its structure (see the introduction to Vayak'heil, p. 521). The first item in a series is arguably the most important. Here, the instructions for the furnishings begin with the most sacred object, the Ark, which will occupy the Holy of Holies, followed by the offering table and menorah in the outer room.

ARK AND ITS COVER (25:10–22)

The term aron (“Ark”) denotes a box or chest used as a container for valuables, probably similar to those known from ancient Egypt. The Ark is to contain a document understood to be the Decalogue (“Ten Commandments”) or some form of the covenant between God and the people. At the same time, the Ark symbolically suggests a throne for the invisible deity and signifies God’s presence in the Tabernacle’s inner sanctum. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 37:1–9.)

10. two and a half cubits . . . a cubit and a half . . . a cubit and a half. The Ark is to be nearly 4 feet long (a little more than 1 meter) and a bit more than 2 feet wide and deep (about $\frac{2}{3}$ meter). The cubit was a widely used measure in the ancient Near East but was never standardized.

11. pure gold. As part of the furnishings of the holiest zone, the Ark is to be covered with the most precious metal. The designation “pure” indicates that the highest quality of gold is to be used.

12. its four feet. The feet perhaps are added to ensure this sacred object will not rest directly on the ground.

13–14. poles . . . for carrying. Since the Ark was to be portable, it could be carried to battle to represent God’s presence (see I Samuel 4–7; Numbers 10:35–36).

16. [the tablets of] the Pact. Heb. edut, meaning “pact” or “treaty,” is likely an elliptical designation for “tablets of the Pact,” the document on which the agreement between God and Israel was said to have been inscribed (31:18). Elsewhere in the Torah, the word b’rit (“covenant”) is usually used for this treaty (as in 34:28).

¹⁷You shall make a cover of pure gold, two and a half cubits long and a cubit and a half wide. ¹⁸Make two cherubim of gold—make them of hammered work—at the two ends of the cover. ¹⁹Make one cherub at one end and the other cherub at the other end; of one piece with the cover shall you make the cherubim at its two ends. ²⁰The cherubim shall have their wings spread out above, shielding the cover with their wings. They shall confront each other, the faces of the cherubim being turned toward the cover. ²¹Place the cover on top of the Ark, after depositing inside the Ark the Pact that I will give you. ²²There I will meet with you, and I will impart to you—from above the cover, from between the two cherubim that are on top of the Ark of the Pact—all that I will command you concerning the Israelite people.

¹⁷וְעַשֵּׂית כְּפֹרֶת זָהָב טָהוֹר אֲמָתִים וְחַצִּי אֲרָפָה וְאַמָּה וְחַצִּי רְחַבָּה: ¹⁸וְעַשֵּׂית שְׁנִים בְּרָכִים זָהָב מִקְשָׁה תַּעֲשֶׂה אַתָּם מִשְׁנִי קָצֹות הַכְּפֹרֶת: ¹⁹וְעַשֵּׂה בָּרוּב אֶחָד מִקְצָה מִזָּה וּבָרוּב אֶחָד מִקְצָה מִזָּה מִן-הַכְּפֹרֶת תַּعֲשֵׂי אֶת-הַבְּرָכִים עַל-שְׁנִי קָצֹותיו: ²⁰וְהִי הַבְּרָכִים פְּרָשִׁי כְּנָפִים לְמַעַלָּה סְכִים בְּכִנְפֵיכֶם עַל-הַכְּפֹרֶת וּפְנֵיכֶם אִישׁ אֶל-אָחִיו אֶל-הַכְּפֹרֶת יְהִי פָנֵי הַכְּרָבִים: ²¹וְנִתְתֵּן אֶת-הַכְּפֹרֶת עַל-הָאָרֶן מִלְמָעָלָה וְאֶל-הָאָרֶן תַּתֵּן אֶת-הַעֲדָת אֲשֶׁר אָתָּנוּ אֶלָּךְ: ²²וְנוֹעֲדָתִי לְךָ שְׁם וְדִבְרָתִי אֶת-מַעַל הַכְּפֹרֶת מִבֵּין שְׁנֵי הַכְּרָבִים אֲשֶׁר עַל-אָרוֹן הַעֲדָת אֶת בְּלָאָשֶׁר אֲצֹוֹה אֶזְעָקָה אֶל-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: ב

17. cover. Heb. kaporet, whose meaning and etymology remain uncertain. Many understand it in relationship to the verb k-p-r, “to atone.” It also is possible that it is derived from an Egyptian phrase that would make it equivalent to a place for one’s feet to rest, a suggestion that gives it a tantalizingly close connection to the depiction of the ark in certain texts (I Samuel 4:4; Psalm 99:1–5), in which an invisible God seems to be present on a cherubim throne with a footstool.

18. cherubim. These fanciful beasts are well known in ancient Near Eastern culture. Composite creatures made up of human and animal features, they are not at all like the round-faced cherubs of Western art. Usually depicted with wings, they possessed the ability to move where humans cannot, which made them apt symbols of deities.

19–21. The placement of the cherubim on either side of the “cover” forms a throne, with the cover as a footstool for God’s unseen presence (see at v. 17). The Ark, with its cover surmounted by cherubim, serves as the visible locus of God’s invisible royal presence.

22. There I will meet with you. Another name for the Tabernacle, the Tent of Meeting (27:21 and frequently thereafter), is related to this concept of God’s interaction with the people at the place where the divine Presence rests. In ancient Israel, such meetings probably took the form of divine oracles delivered via qualified priests (see T’zaveh, Another View, p. 489), or via prophetic figures like Moses (see 34:34). While women did serve as prophets in Israel (see at 15:20), Israelite priests were male. In the Torah’s depiction of the Tabernacle, oracular meetings held there to mediate God’s will to the people are restricted to select male agents: only those from the family of Levi.

concerning the Israelite people. In the ancient world, people typically sought oracles when they turned to a deity to resolve an otherwise intractable legal dispute (see, for example, Numbers 27:1–5). Oracles also aided with political decisions, such as determining whether or when to go to war or levy taxes. According to the Torah, oracular decisions are achieved by mechanical means; see comments about the ephod (Exodus 28:6), priestly “breastpiece of decision” (28:15), and Urim and Thummim (28:30).

²³You shall make a table of acacia wood, two cubits long, one cubit wide, and a cubit and a half high. ²⁴Overlay it with pure gold, and make a gold molding around it. ²⁵Make a rim of a hand's breadth around it, and make a gold molding for its rim round about. ²⁶Make four gold rings for it, and attach the rings to the four corners at its four legs. ²⁷The rings shall be next to the rim, as holders for poles to carry the table. ²⁸Make the poles of acacia wood, and overlay them with gold; by these the table shall be carried. ²⁹Make its bowls, ladles, jars and jugs with which to offer libations; make them of pure gold. ³⁰And on the table you shall set the bread of display, to be before Me always.

²³וְעַשֵּׂת שְׁלֹחַן עָצִי שְׁטִים אֲמֹתִים אֶרְפָּנוּ
וְאַמָּה רְחָבוֹ וְאַמָּה וְחִצִּי קְמָתוֹ: ²⁴וְצְפִיתָ
אֲתָּנוּ זָהָב טָהָור וְעַשֵּׂת לֹו זָהָב סְבִיב:
²⁵וְעַשֵּׂת לֹו מִסְגָּרָת טָפֵח סְבִיב וְעַשֵּׂת
זְרִזְבָּחָב לְמִסְגָּרָת סְבִיב: ²⁶וְעַשֵּׂת לֹו
אַרְבָּע טְבֻעָת זָהָב וְנִתְתַּת אֲתִ-הַטְּבֻעָת עַל
אַרְבָּע הַפָּאָת אֲשֶׁר לְאַרְבָּע רְגָלָיו:
²⁷לְעַמֶּת הַמִּסְגָּרָת תְּהִיאֵן הַטְּבֻעָת לְבָתִים
לְבָדִים לְשָׁאת אֲתִ-הַשְּׁלֹחַן: ²⁸וְעַשֵּׂת
אֲתִ-הַבְּדִיט עָצִי שְׁטִים וְצְפִיתָ אֶתְם זָהָב
וּנְשָׁאָבָם אֲתִ-הַשְּׁלֹחַן: ²⁹וְעַשֵּׂת קָרְתָּיו
וּכְפָתָיו וּקְשׁוֹתָיו וּמְנִקְיָתָיו אֲשֶׁר יִסְפֶּר בְּהָנָן
זָהָב טָהָור תְּעַשֵּׂה אֶתְם: ³⁰וְנִתְתַּת עַל-הַשְּׁלֹחַן לְחַם פָּנִים לְפָנֵי תְּמִיד: פ

TABLE AND MENORAH (25:23–40)

The Tabernacle's main, outer room is furnished with a table and a lampstand. A third object—an incense altar—will be mentioned in an addendum, in the next parashah (30:1–10). All three golden items are suitable furnishings for a royal abode; together they provide food and drink, light, and aromatic smells. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 37:10–24.)

The lampstand's significance seems to lie less in its functional role as the bearer of a light source and more in its iconic significance, for it resembles sacred trees of other Near Eastern culture. Such trees conveyed the idea of the fertility granted by divine powers (see also at v. 31). Because those powers were associated with both male and female deities, the menorah's presence in the Tabernacle perhaps conveyed the metaphoric female as well as male aspects of God.

23. table. Tables for food and drink offerings were typical furnishings of ancient Near Eastern shrines, as known from depictions in art.

two cubits... one cubit... cubit and a half. This rectangular table is to be about 3 feet (nearly 1 meter) long, 1½ feet (nearly ½ meter) wide, and a bit more than 2 feet (about 2/3 meter) high.

29. bowls, ladles, jars and jugs. The Torah specifies four kinds of golden vessels for the table: “bowls” for serving the bread, cup-shaped “ladles” for the incense (frankincense), jars for pouring libations, and jugs into which the libations were poured.

30. bread. When the Israelites lived in the Land of Israel, roughly half of their caloric intake came from cereal products. Bread was the most important part of their diet, and so not surprisingly bread has primacy in the retrojected Tabernacle offerings. But the text does not tell us who baked the bread. As in most traditional societies, bread production in Israelite households was almost exclusively the task of women (see also at 16:3). However, in pre-modern cultures, male specialists were often responsible for baking and cooking in elite contexts (like palaces or temples)—just as master chefs today are predominantly male even though home cooks typically are female. Yet because I Samuel 8:13 indicates that royal bakers and cooks were women, it is possible that the text envisions women as preparing ³¹You shall make a lampstand of pure gold; the lampstand shall be made of hammered work; its base and its shaft, its cups, calyxes, and petals shall be of one piece. ³²Six branches shall issue from its sides; three branches from one side of the lampstand and three branches from the other side of the lampstand. ³³On one branch there shall be three cups shaped like almond-blossoms, each with calyx and petals, and on the next branch there shall be three cups shaped like almond-blossoms, each with calyx and petals; so for all six branches issuing from the lampstand. ³⁴And on the lampstand itself there

³¹וְעַשֵּׂית מִנְנוֹת טָהוֹר מִקְשָׁה תִּיעַשֶּׂה הַמְנוֹרָה יְרֻכָּה וּקְבָּה גְּבִיעַת בְּפִתְחָרִית וּפְרִיחָה מִפְנֵה יְהִי: ³²וְשָׁשָׁה קְנִים יָצְאִים מִצְדִּיקָה שֶׁלֶשֶׁת קְנִי מִנְנוֹת מִצְדָּה הַאָחָר וּשְׁלָשֶׁת קְנִי מִנְנוֹת מִצְדָּה הַשְׁנִי: ³³שֶׁלֶשֶׁת גְּבֻעִים מִשְׁקָרִים בְּקָנָה הַאָחָד בְּפִתְרָה וּפְרָה וּשְׁלָשֶׁת גְּבֻעִים מִשְׁקָרִים בְּקָנָה הַאָחָד בְּפִתְרָה וּפְרָה בְּן לְשָׁשֶׁת הַקְנִים הַיְצָאִים מִן־הַמְנוֹרָה: ³⁴וּבְמִנְנוֹת אַרְבָּעָה גְּבֻעִים מִשְׁקָרִים

this sacred bread for the tent shrine, although in a Second Temple text, this task is assigned to a levitical clan (I Chronicles 9:31). Leviticus 24:5–8 describes how the bread offering is to be prepared and presented (see also at Leviticus 7:12).

display. Literally, “face.” This term characterizes the bread offering. Because “face” indicates divine presence (see at 33:20), its association with the bread offering perhaps signifies that the bread is for God. (However, it is eventually eaten by priests; see Leviticus 24:9.)

always. The term tamid signifies that the loaves were to be on the table at all times, with fresh ones placed there weekly on the Sabbath (Leviticus 24:8).

31. lampstand of pure gold. The golden menorah has survived into post-biblical Judaism as one of the most recognizable Jewish symbols. The depiction of a single golden lampstand here conflicts with the description of ten lampstands in the First Temple (I Kings 7:49). It agrees, however, with the single lampstand of the Second Temple, which was carried off by the conquerors of Jerusalem and is depicted on the Arch of Titus in Rome. The lampstand of the Second Temple may recapture the single-menorah tradition of the pre-monarchic tent shrine. The terminology in the lampstand passage is replete with botanical terms, and its branched shape also implies a tree-like form. These features may signify the fertility provided by God or the idea of the eventual rise of a Davidic ruler as a “shoot” or “branch” (see Isaiah 11:1, Jeremiah 23:5, and Zechariah 3:8). The form may even allude to the female aspect of God’s presence, for female deities in the ancient Near East—such as the Canaanite goddess Asherah—may have been represented by sacred trees.

hammered work. According to the biblical description, the menorah seems to be made entirely of gold, but it is unclear whether it is solid gold or hollow. The translation “hammered” is conjectural, and the mode of the menorah’s fabrication is not specified.

its base and its shaft. The menorah’s central element is a thick cylinder or shaft, flared at the bottom to form a stable base, and not a slender one as in many depictions of the menorah from the post-biblical period.

cups. This term probably refers to a bulging shape (like the capital of a column): a decorative element of the shaft (v. 34) and its branches (v. 33).

calyxes, and petals. The first indication of botanical imagery, a calyx is the outer part of a flower.

32. branches. The term adds to the botanical imagery. The overall form likely would have looked like a tree, similar to depictions in Late Bronze and Iron Age Near Eastern art.

33. almond-blossoms. This additional information about the shape of the calyxes and petals provides another botanical term.

shall be four cups shaped like almond-blossoms, each with calyx and petals: ³⁵a calyx, of one piece with it, under a pair of branches; and a calyx, of one piece with it, under the second pair of branches, and a calyx, of one piece with it, under the last pair of branches; so for all six branches issuing from the lampstand. ³⁶Their calyxes and their stems shall be of one piece with it, the whole of it a single hammered piece of pure gold. ³⁷Make its seven lamps—the lamps shall be so mounted as to give the light on its front side—³⁸and its tongs and fire pans of pure gold. ³⁹It shall be made, with all these furnishings, out of a talent of pure gold. ⁴⁰Note well, and follow the patterns for them that are being shown you on the mountain.

26 As for the tabernacle, make it of ten strips of cloth; make these of fine twisted linen, of blue,

בְּפִתְנָרִיה֙ וּפְרַחִיה֙: ³⁵ וּכְפַתֵּר תְּחִת שְׁנִי הַקְנִים מִמְפֹנָה וּכְפַתֵּר תְּחִת שְׁנִי הַקְנִים מִמְפֹנָה לְשֵׁת הַקְנִים הַיְצָאִים מִן-הַמְנֻרָה: ³⁶ בְּפִתְרִיהם וּקְנָתָם מִמְפֹנָה יְהִי בְּלָה מִקְשָׁה אֶחָת זָהָב טָהוֹר: ³⁷ וּעֲשֵׂת אֶת נְרָתִיה֙ שְׁבָעָה וְהַעֲלָה אֶת-גִּנְעָתִיה֙ וְהָאֵיר עַל-עַבְרָ פְּנִيهָ: ³⁸ וּמֶלֶךְתִּיהְ וּמִחְתְּתִיהְ זָהָב טָהוֹר: ³⁹ כְּבָר זָהָב טָהוֹר יַעֲשֶׂה אֶת בְּל-דְּכָלִים הָאֱלָה: ⁴⁰ וּרְאֵה וַעֲשֵׂה בְּתַבְנִיתָם אֲשֶׁר-אַתָּה מְרַאָה בָּהָר: ס כו וְאֶת-הַמְשָׁבֵן תַּعֲשֵׂה עַשֶּׂר יְרִיעָת שְׁשָׁ מִשְׁׁזָּר וּתְכִלָּת וְאֶרֶגֶם וּתְלֻעָת שְׁנִי בְּרַבִּים

37. seven lamps. These were apparently not to be attached to the lampstand, nor is it specified that they were to be made of gold. According to Exodus 27:21 (see comment there), only one lamp may be involved. That is, the text may be describing a saucer lamp with seven spouts surmounting the central shaft, perhaps a simpler version of the complex visionary menorah of Zechariah 4:2.

light. The light-giving properties of the menorah are partly symbolic, connoting the cosmic power of God as the creator of heavenly lights.

38. tongs and fire pans. These were utensils for tending the lamp (or lamps).

39. talent. This term probably designates a weight of about 75 pounds (34 kilograms); see at 38:24.

Instructions about the Tabernacle Structure (26:1–37)

With the directions for the Tabernacle's interior furnishings complete, the narrative turns to the dwelling itself, which consists of two internal sections. The structure will have three components: coverings of textiles and animal skins, wooden frames, and two textile partitions. Despite the plethora of details, the specifications are incomplete and the directions for assembling the structure are unclear. Thus, it is unlikely that this section contains actual directions for making a real shrine. Information about flooring is lacking; perhaps a dirt floor is assumed (see Numbers 5:17).

COVERINGS (26:1–14)

The tent-like dwelling is to be made of two layers of fabric—decorated linen panels and unadorned goat-hair panels—which in turn will be covered with two layers of animal skins. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 36:8–19.)

1. tabernacle. The translation does not capitalize this word in this passage (vv. 1–14), to indicate that the Hebrew noun mishkan denotes only the inner fabric component of the dwelling, to be made of decorated linen. (Compare at 25:9.)

fine twisted linen. “Twisted” linen refers to purple, and crimson yarns, with a design of cherubim worked into them.² The length of each cloth shall be twenty-eight cubits, and the width of each cloth shall be four cubits, all the cloths to have the same measurements.³ Five of the cloths shall be joined to one another, and the other five cloths shall be joined to one another.⁴ Make loops of blue wool on the edge of the outermost cloth of the one set; and do likewise on the edge of the outermost cloth of the other set:⁵ make fifty loops on the one cloth, and fifty loops on the edge of the end cloth of the other set, the loops to be opposite one another.⁶ And make fifty gold clasps, and couple the cloths to one another with the clasps, so that the tabernacle becomes one whole.

⁷You shall then make cloths of goats' hair for a tent over the tabernacle; make the cloths eleven in number.⁸ The length of each cloth shall be thirty cubits, and the width of each cloth shall be four cubits, the eleven cloths to have the same measurements.⁹ Join five of the cloths by themselves, and the other six cloths by themselves; and fold over the sixth cloth at the front of the tent.¹⁰ Make fifty

מעשָׂה חַשְׁבָּב תַּעֲשֵׂה אֶתְכֶם: ² אַרְךָ
הַיְרִיעָה הַאַחַת שְׁמִינִיה וּשְׁנִירִים בְּאַמְתָּה
וּרְחֵב אַרְבָּע בְּאַמְתָּה הַיְרִיעָה הַאַחַת מִדָּה
אַחַת לְכָל-הַיְרִיעָה: ³ חַמְשָׁה הַיְרִיעָה
תַּהֲיוּן חֲבֻרָת אֲשֶׁר אַל-אַחֲתָה וְחַמְשָׁה
יְרִיעָת חֲבֻרָת אֲשֶׁר אַל-אַחֲתָה: ⁴ וּעֲשֵׂית
לְלֹאֶת תְּכִלָּת עַל שְׁפֵת הַיְרִיעָה הַאַחַת
מִקְצָה בְּחֲבֻרָת וּכְן תַּعֲשֵׂה בְּשְׁפֵת הַיְרִיעָה
הַקְּיַצְוָנָה בְּמִחְבָּרָת הַשְׁנִית: ⁵ חַמְשִׁים
לְלֹאֶת תַּעֲשֵׂה בְּיְרִיעָה הַאַחַת וְחַמְשִׁים
בְּמִחְבָּרָת הַשְׁנִית מִקְבִּילָת הַלְּאָת אֲשֶׁר
אַל-אַחֲתָה: ⁶ וּעֲשֵׂית חַמְשִׁים קְרָסִי זָהָב
וְחֲבֻרָת אֶת-הַיְרִיעָה אֲשֶׁר אַל-אַחֲתָה
בְּקָרְטִים וְהֵיחָה הַמִּשְׁבֵּן אֶחָד:
⁷ וּעֲשֵׂית יְרִיעָת עַזִּים לְאַהֲל עַל-הַמִּשְׁבֵּן
עַשְׁתִּירְעָשָׁרָה יְרִיעָת תַּעֲשֵׂה אֶתְכֶם: ⁸ אַרְךָ
הַיְרִיעָה הַאַחַת שְׁלָשִׁים בְּאַמְתָּה וּרְחֵב
אַרְבָּע בְּאַמְתָּה הַיְרִיעָה הַאַחַת מִדָּה אַחַת
לְעַשְׂתִּי עַשְׂרָה יְרִיעָת: ⁹ וְחֲבֻרָת אֶת-חַמְשָׁה
הַיְרִיעָת לְבַד וְאֶת-שְׁשָׁה הַיְרִיעָת לְבַד
וּכְפַלְתָּא אֶת-הַיְרִיעָה הַשְׁשִׁית אַל-מִול פָּנִי הַאַהֲל: ¹⁰ וּעֲשֵׂית חַמְשִׁים לְלֹאֶת עַל

the technique of spinning for preparing the linen thread. Women typically do this kind of work; compare 35:25–26.

yarns. Regally colored woolen yarns were apparently to be embroidered to make a design on the linen cloth.

design of cherubim. Images of these fanciful composite creatures would not only form the “throne” over the Ark (see at 25:18, 19–21) but also decorate the dwelling’s fabric sides.

2. twenty-eight cubits . . . four cubits. Each fabric panel is to be about 14 yards (nearly 13 meters) by 2 yards (nearly 2 meters).

3–6. As specific as the directions for joining the fabric panels seem, the exact procedures remain elusive. It seems that five of the panels were joined together, perhaps by sewing, and then the two resulting larger panels were connected.

7. cloths of goats’ hair. Goat hair can be spun into yarn and then woven into waterproof cloth. It has been used for tents in the Middle East for millennia.

tent. Heb. ohel denotes this second fabric layer, which is to cover and protect the linen tabernacle (vv. 1–6).

8. thirty cubits . . . four cubits. Each of the eleven panels is to be about 15 yards (nearly 14 meters) by 2 yards (nearly 2 meters).

loops on the edge of the outermost cloth of the one set, and fifty loops on the edge of the cloth of the other set.¹¹ Make fifty copper clasps, and fit the clasps into the loops, and couple the tent together so that it becomes one whole.¹² As for the overlapping excess of the cloths of the tent, the extra half-cloth shall overlap the back of the tabernacle,¹³ while the extra cubit at either end of each length of tent cloth shall hang down to the bottom of the two sides of the tabernacle and cover it.¹⁴ And make for the tent a covering of tanned ram skins, and a covering of dolphin skins above.

¹⁵You shall make the planks for the Tabernacle of acacia wood, upright.¹⁶The length of each plank shall be ten cubits and the width of each plank a cubit and a half.¹⁷Each plank shall have two tenons, parallel to each other; do the same with all the planks of the Tabernacle.¹⁸Of the planks of the Tabernacle, make twenty planks on the south side:¹⁹making forty silver sockets under the twenty planks, two sockets under the one plank for its two tenons and two sockets under each following plank for its two tenons;²⁰and for the other side wall of the Tabernacle, on the north side, twenty planks,²¹with their forty silver sockets, two sockets under the one plank and two sockets under each following

שְׁפַת הַיְרִיעָה הָאֶחָת הַקְיֻנָה בְּחַבְרַת
וְחַמְשִׁים לְלֹאֶת עַל שְׁפַת הַיְרִיעָה הַחֲבַרְתָ
הַשְׁנִית: ¹¹ וְעַשֵּׂת קְרֻסִים נְחַשָּׁת חַמְשִׁים
וְהַבָּאַת אֶת־הַקְרָסִים בְּלֹאֶת וְחַבְרַת
אֶת־הַאָהָל וְהַיְהָ אֶחָד: ¹² וְטַרְחַת הַעֲלֵף
בְּיַרְיעָה הַאָהָל חַצֵּי הַיְרִיעָה הַעֲלֵף
תְּסַלֵּחַ עַל אֶחָרִי הַמְשָׁבֵן: ¹³ וְהַאֲמָה מִזָּה
וְהַאֲמָה מִזָּה בְּעֶלְף בְּאֶרְךְ יְרִיעָה הַאָהָל
יְהִיָּה סְרוּוח עַל־צַדְיוֹ הַמְשָׁבֵן מִזָּה וּמִזָּה
לְכֹסְתוֹ: ¹⁴ וְעַשֵּׂת מַבְשָׁה לְאָהָל עַרְתָּה
אַילְםָמָדִים וּמַכְשָׁה עַרְתָּה תְּחַשִּׁים
מַלְמָעָלה: פ

¹⁵ וְעַשֵּׂת אֶת־הַקְרָסִים לְמַשְׁבֵן עַצִּי שְׁטִים
עַמְּדִים: ¹⁶ עַשְׂרָה אַמְּוֹת אַרְךְ הַקְרָשׁ וְאֲמָה
וְחַצֵּי הַאֲמָה רְחֵב הַקְרָשׁ הָאֶחָד: ¹⁷ שְׁתִי
יִדּוֹת לְקָרְשׁ הָאֶחָד מִשְׁלָבָת אַשָּׁה אַל־
אַחֲתָה כִּן תַּעֲשֵׂה לְכָל קָרְשִׁי הַמְשָׁבֵן:
¹⁸ וְעַשֵּׂת אֶת־הַקְרָסִים לְמַשְׁבֵן עַשְׂרִים
לְקָרְשׁ לְפָאַת נְגַבָּה תִּימְנָה: ¹⁹ וְאַרְבָּעִים
אֲדֻנִּים בְּסֻף תַּعֲשֵׂה תְּחִתְהַקְרָשׁ הָאֶחָד
שְׁנִי אֲדֻנִּים תְּחִתְהַקְרָשׁ הָאֶחָד לְשְׁתִי
יַדְתָּיו וּשְׁנִי אֲדֻנִּים תְּחִתְהַקְרָשׁ הָאֶחָד
לְשְׁתִי יַדְתָּיו: ²⁰ וְלֹצְלָעַ הַמְשָׁבֵן הַשְׁנִית
לְפָאַת צְפּוֹן עַשְׂרִים קָרְשׁ: ²¹ וְאַרְבָּעִים
אֲדֻנִּים בְּסֻף שְׁנִי אֲדֻנִּים תְּחִתְהַקְרָשׁ
הָאֶחָד וּשְׁנִי אֲדֻנִּים תְּחִתְהַקְרָשׁ הָאֶחָד:

FRAMES (26:15–30)

The structure's frame is to be constructed of a complex system of gilded boards and bars with metal fastenings; the frame is to be set into bases. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 36:20–34.)

15. planks. The Hebrew word translated here as “planks” is used in the Bible only with regard to the Tabernacle; its precise nuance is not clear. Apparently the four layers of textiles and skins that comprise the tent will be hung on a frame made of acacia wood.

16. ten cubits . . . a cubit and a half. The “planks” measure about 15 feet ($4\frac{1}{2}$ meters) by a bit more than 2 feet (about $\frac{2}{3}$ meter); their thickness is not specified. Despite the minutiae provided, it is not clear how the frame would be assembled.

19. silver sockets. The sockets, which were probably bases in which the “planks” (see at v. 15) were set, were likely made of a less precious metal because they were to rest on the ground.

plank.²² And for the rear of the Tabernacle, to the west, make six planks; ²³ and make two planks for the corners of the Tabernacle at the rear. ²⁴ They shall match at the bottom, and terminate alike at the top inside one ring; thus shall it be with both of them: they shall form the two corners. ²⁵ Thus there shall be eight planks with their sockets of silver: sixteen sockets, two sockets under the first plank, and two sockets under each of the other planks.

²⁶ You shall make bars of acacia wood: five for the planks of the one side wall of the Tabernacle, ²⁷ five bars for the planks of the other side wall of the Tabernacle, and five bars for the planks of the wall of the Tabernacle at the rear to the west. ²⁸ The center bar halfway up the planks shall run from end to end. ²⁹ Overlay the planks with gold, and make their rings of gold, as holders for the bars; and overlay the bars with gold. ³⁰ Then set up the Tabernacle according to the manner of it that you were shown on the mountain.

³¹ You shall make a curtain of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen; it shall have a

²² וְלִירְבָּתִי הַמִּשְׁבֵּן יְמָה תַּעֲשֶׂה שָׁשָׁה קָרְשִׁים: ²³ וְשִׁנִּי קָרְשִׁים תַּعֲשֶׂה לְמִקְצָעָת הַמִּשְׁבֵּן בִּירְכִּתִים: ²⁴ וְיִהְיוּ תְּאַמְּם מְלֻמְטָה וַיְחַזּוּ יְהִי תְּמִימִם עַל־רַאשׁוֹ אֶל־הַטְּבָעָת הָאַחַת בֶּן יְהִי לְשִׁנִּיהם לְשִׁנִּי הַמִּקְצָעָת יְהִי: ²⁵ וְהִי שְׁמַנִּי קָרְשִׁים וְאֶדְנִיָּם בְּסֶף שָׁשָׁה עַשֶּׂר אֶדְנִיָּם שִׁנִּי אֶדְנִיָּם תְּחַת הַקָּרֵשׁ הָאַחַד וְשִׁנִּי אֶדְנִיָּם תְּחַת הַקָּרֵשׁ הָאַחֲרִי:

²⁶ וְעַשְׂתָּה בְּרִיחָם עַצִּי שְׁטִים חַמְשָׁה לְקָרְשִׁי אֶלְעָד־הַמִּשְׁבֵּן הָאַחַד: ²⁷ וְחַמְשָׁה בְּרִיחָם לְקָרְשִׁי אֶלְעָד־הַמִּשְׁבֵּן הָשְׁנִית וְחַמְשָׁה בְּרִיחָם לְקָרְשִׁי אֶלְעָד הַמִּשְׁבֵּן לִירְכִּתִים יְמָה: ²⁸ וְהַבְּרִיחָם הַתִּיכְן בְּתוֹךְ הַקָּרְשִׁים מִבְּרָחָם מִן־דְּקָצָה אֶל־דְּקָצָה: ²⁹ וְאֶת־הַקָּרְשִׁים תַּצְפֵּה זָהָב וְאֶת־טְבֻעַתִּיהָם תַּעֲשֶׂה זָהָב בְּתִים לְבִרִיחָם וְצְפִית אֶת־הַבְּרִיחָם זָהָב: ³⁰ וְהַקְמָת אֶת־הַמִּשְׁבֵּן כְּמַשְׁפָטו אֲשֶׁר הָרְאִית בָּהּ:

³¹ וְעַשְׂתָּה פְּרַכֶּת תְּכִלָּת וְאֶرְגָּמָן וְתוֹלְעָת שְׁנִי וְיִשְׁשָׁ מִשְׁׁוֹר מַעֲשָׂה חַשְׁבָּב יְעַשֵּׂה אֶתְהָ

22. west. The rectangular interior space is to be oriented in an east-west direction, with its holiest rear wall at the west. If the entry partition (26:36–37) were open, the sun rising at the equinox would shine toward the Holy of Holies.

26. bars. Probably long horizontal rods or crossbars to stabilize the “planks” (see at v. 15).

30. Tabernacle. Now the term seems to refer to the entire structure, not just the tent coverings (see at v. 1).

to be divided into two parts by a textile partition hung on gilded posts. One of the areas is designated kodesh (“Holy”) and the other kodesh kodashim (“Holy of Holies”). Another textile partition, also hung on gilded posts, is to separate the interior space from the surrounding courtyard. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 36:33–38.)

31. make a curtain. The curtain for the Tabernacle is to be made with the best grade of linen embroidered in cherubim designs with royally dyed woolen threads.

The word for “curtain” (parochet) survives in contemporary Jewish life as the designation for the fabric hung in front of a synagogue ark.

TEXTILE PARTITIONS (26:31–37)

The textile and skin coverings are to hang over a gilded wooden structure. The space thus created is design of cherubim worked into it.³² Hang it upon four posts of acacia wood overlaid with gold and having hooks of gold, [set] in four sockets of silver.³³ Hang the curtain under the clasps, and carry the Ark of the Pact there, behind the curtain, so that the curtain shall serve you as a partition between the Holy and the Holy of Holies.³⁴ Place the cover upon the Ark of the Pact in the Holy of Holies.³⁵ Place the table outside the curtain, and the lampstand by the south wall of the Tabernacle opposite the table, which is to be placed by the north wall.

³⁶You shall make a screen for the entrance of the Tent, of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen, done in embroidery.³⁷ Make five posts of acacia wood for the screen and overlay them with gold—their hooks being of gold—and cast for them five sockets of copper.

27 You shall make the altar of acacia wood,

ברכבים: ³² ונתתה אתה על-ארבעה עמודי שטים מצפים זהב וויהם זהב על-ארבעה ארניךספּ: ³³ ונתתה אתה הפלכת תחת הקרטים והבאת שמה מבית לפרכת את ארון העדות והבדילה הפלכת לכם בין הקדש ובין קדש הקדשים: ³⁴ ונתת את-הכפרת על ארון העדרת בקדש הקדשים: ³⁵ ושמת את-השלוחן מchioץ לפרכת ואת-המנורה נבח השלוחן על צלע המשכן תימנה והשלוחן נתן על-צלע צפונ:

³⁶ ועשית מסך לפתח האהל תבלת וארגמן ותולעת שני וושש משזר מעשה רקס: ³⁷ ועשית לפטר חמשה עמודי שטים וצפית אתם זהב וויהם זהב וייצקתם להם חמשה ארני נחתת: ס

כז ועשית את-המזבח עצי שטים חמיש

32. gold...gold. This precious metal is most appropriate for features of the holiest space.

sockets of silver. The bases for the gilded posts are silver perhaps because the bases touch the ground.

33. carry the Ark of the Pact there. The most sacred space, the Holy of Holies, is where the most sacred object—the Ark—will be placed.

between the Holy and the Holy of Holies. The interior is thus divided into two zones of holiness.

35. The offering table and the menorah are situated outside the Holy of Holies, the table on the north side and the menorah on the south. The space directly in the center of the curtain in front of the Ark seems to be vacant; but in 30:1–10 we will learn that a third item, the incense altar, is to occupy that spot.

36. screen. The fabric partition or “screen” between the interior and exterior spaces is to be similar to the parochet except without cherubim designs.

37. gold...copper. The hooks and posts holding the screen are to be of gilded wood. The bases (“sockets”) in which they are to be set, however, are “copper” (probably bronze; see at 25:3), the least precious of the three metals, because these foundation pieces are on the ground and border on the courtyard, the outer zone of holiness.

Instructions about the Courtyard (27:1–19)

Like virtually every domicile in the ancient Near East, whether a village house or an urban palace, the Tabernacle is to have an unroofed outdoor space, a courtyard. Certain household functions, including roasting large pieces of meat, were performed more efficiently outdoors. Thus the altar for various types of offerings is to be placed in the courtyard.

five cubits long and five cubits wide—the altar is to be square—and three cubits high.² Make its horns on the four corners, the horns to be of one piece with it; and overlay it with copper.³ Make the pails for removing its ashes, as well as its scrapers, basins, flesh hooks, and fire pans—make all its utensils of אֲמֹות אַרְךָ וִחְמַשׁ אֲמֹות רֶחֶב רָבוּעַ יְהִי

הַמְזֻבָּח וְשָׁלַשׁ אֲמֹות קָמְתוּ: ² וְעַשֵּׂת
קָרְנַתָּיו עַל אַרְבָּע פְּנַתִּיו מִפְנֵי תְּהִינָּה
קָרְנַתָּיו וְצְפִיתָ אֲתָה נְחַשֵּׁת: ³ וְעַשֵּׂת
סִירְתָּיו לְדְשָׁנוֹ וְעַיְוֹן וּמְוֹרְקָתָיו וּמְזַלְגָתָיו
וּמְחַתָּתָיו לְכַלְפָלוֹ תַּעֲשֵׂה נְחַשֵּׁת:

Whereas the other parts of the Tabernacle were restricted to certain priests, the courtyard was a place where the rest of the people—including women—could enter and present their offerings.

ALTAR (27:1–8)

Only the altar is mentioned in this section; but another courtyard installation, the laver (or basin), appears in 30:17–21. The instructions say nothing about how the altar is to be used, though the following parashah mentions grain, oil, wine, and animals as offerings to be made on the altar (29:38–42). Leviticus and other biblical texts presume that women, like men, would approach the altar to present their offerings (see the introduction to Vayikra, p. 569). (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 38:1–8.)

i. of acacia wood. Because it is highly unlikely that a wooden altar, even one overlaid with metal, could have been functional, this must be a hypothetical item (see the parashah introduction, p. 451). A large-scale altar would have been made of stone, which would make it virtually impossible to build, dismantle, and transport. Features of known altars are integrated into the instructions for this somewhat imaginary wooden courtyard altar.

five cubits . . . five cubits . . . three cubits. At about 7½ feet (more than 2 meters) square and 4½ feet (almost 1½ meters) high, the height would have required steps, thus making the altar conceptually different from stone or earthen altars (see 20:21–23), which can be built anywhere.

2. horns on the four corners. The most striking feature of the courtyard altar is that horns are to protrude from its four corners. How they are to be placed is not clear, but the positioning of the horns on stone altars discovered by archeologists suggests that the horns would have turned upward from the altar's corners. Most of the excavated horned altars are quite small, like the incense altar of 30:1–10; but two massive ones have been found at Beersheba and Arad. In the Tabernacle, the altar and its horns are to play a role in the consecration ceremony (see 29:12).

copper. Since the courtyard is the least holy zone, its furnishings, utensils, and carrying poles are to be made of bronze (see at 25:3).

3. pails for removing its ashes. This anticipates the function of the altar, for the ashy remains of the wood fuel and of the offerings consumed by fire would need to be removed.

scrapers. These are probably for cleaning the altar after the sacrifice has been burnt.

basins. The word for “basin” is from the verb z-r-k (“to sprinkle”), indicating that the basins are to be used to carry the blood to be sprinkled (“dashed”) on the altar (see, for instance, Leviticus 7:2) or smeared on its horns (29:12).

flesh hooks. Probably long-handled meat forks for positioning the sacrificial flesh on the altar.

fire pans. These were used for carrying hot coals. The first step in preparing and using the altar comes last in the instructions, for the pails used for cleanup are specified first.

copper. ⁴Make for it a grating of meshwork in copper; and on the mesh make four copper rings at its four corners. ⁵Set the mesh below, under the ledge of the altar, so that it extends to the middle of the altar. ⁶And make poles for the altar, poles of acacia wood, and overlay them with copper. ⁷The poles shall be inserted into the rings, so that the poles remain on the two sides of the altar when it is carried. ⁸Make it hollow, of boards. As you were shown on the mountain, so shall they be made.

⁹You shall make the enclosure of the Tabernacle:

On the south side, a hundred cubits of hangings of fine twisted linen for the length of the enclosure on that side—¹⁰with its twenty posts and their twenty sockets of copper, the hooks and bands of the posts to be of silver.

¹¹Again a hundred cubits of hangings for its length along the north side—with its twenty posts

⁴וְעַשֵּׂת לֹא מִכֶּבֶר מַעֲשָׂה רְשָׁת נְחַשָּׁת וְעַשֵּׂת עַל־הָרֶשֶׁת אֶרְבָּעַ טְבֻעַת נְחַשָּׁת עַל אֶרְבָּעַ קָצֹוֹתיו: ⁵וְנִתְתַּחַת אַתָּה תְּחַת בָּרֶכֶב הַמּוֹזְבָּחָה מִלְמְטָה וְהִתְתַּחַת דָּרְשָׁת עַד חָצֵי הַמּוֹזְבָּחָה: ⁶וְעַשֵּׂת בְּדִיט לְמַבְּחָח בְּנֵי עָצֵי שְׁטִים וְצְפִיָּת אַתָּם נְחַשָּׁת: ⁷וְהַוּבָא אַתְּ-בְּקָרְבָּיו בְּطֻבָּעַת וְהִיו הַבְּלִים עַל-שְׁתִּי צְלָעֹת הַמּוֹזְבָּחָה בְּשַׁאת אֵתָה: ⁸גְּבוּב לְחוֹת תְּעַשָּׂה אֵתָו בְּאַשְׁר הַרְאָה אַתָּךְ בְּהָר בָּן יִעָשֵׂו: ס

⁹וְעַשֵּׂת אֶת חָצֵר הַמְשֻׁבָּן לְפָאַת גַּגְבָּה תִּימְנָה קָלְעִים לְחַצֵּר שֶׁשׁ מִשְׁׂרוֹ מִאָה בָּאָמָה אַרְךְ לְפָאַת הָאַחַת: ¹⁰וְעַמְּדוּ עַשְׁרִים וְאֶדְנִיָּהָם עַשְׁרִים נְחַשָּׁת וְוִי הַעֲמְדוּם וְחַשְׁקִיָּהָם קָסְף:

¹¹וְכָל לְפָאַת צְפּוֹן בְּאַרְךְ קָלְעִים מִאָה אַרְךְ וְעַמְּדוּ וְעַמְּדוּ עַשְׁרִים וְאֶדְנִיָּהָם

4–5. It is not clear whether the bronze “grating of meshwork” and the “ledge” are meant to be decorative or functional elements of the altar, or both.

6. poles. These bronze poles, inserted into rings attached at each of the corners, make the altar hypothetically portable.

8. hollow. This is another vague feature of the altar. Perhaps it is an attempt to deal with the conceptual problem of how an enormous object could be carried, or it may be related to the fact that no upper surface or top for the altar is specified.

ENCLOSURE (27:9–19)

In the Land of Israel at the time of the Bible, people typically surrounded the courtyards of homes and palaces with enclosure walls that marked the limits of the premises. The enclosure also controlled the movement of animals and small children and protected the domestic and productive space and its contents from intruders. As the text describes the sacred Tabernacle precinct, its courtyard enclosure also serves as the boundary between holy space within and profane space outside. Despite the many details, directions for positioning the Tabernacle within the enclosure are not provided. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 38:9–20.)

9. hangings of fine twisted linen. Undecorated linen fabrics form the courtyard walls. They are to be made of the highest quality linen; but unlike the linen used for the interior fabrics (26:1, 31), they are not to be decorated with colored wool and designs. The least sacred zone, the courtyard has less elaborate materials.

10. hooks...bands...silver. It is not clear why these fastening devices use a higher grade of metal, while the poles are to be of bronze, a lesser grade substance.

and their twenty sockets of copper, the hooks and bands of the posts to be of silver.

¹²For the width of the enclosure, on the west side, fifty cubits of hangings, with their ten posts and their ten sockets.

¹³For the width of the enclosure on the front, or east side, fifty cubits: ¹⁴fifteen cubits of hangings on the one flank, with their three posts and their three sockets; ¹⁵fifteen cubits of hangings on the other flank, with their three posts and their three sockets; ¹⁶and for the gate of the enclosure, a screen of twenty cubits, of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen, done in embroidery, with their four posts and their four sockets.

¹⁷All the posts round the enclosure shall be banded with silver and their hooks shall be of silver; their sockets shall be of copper.

¹⁸The length of the enclosure shall be a hundred cubits, and the width fifty throughout; and the height five cubits—[with hangings] of fine twisted linen. The sockets shall be of copper: ¹⁹all the utensils of the Tabernacle, for all its service, as well as all its pegs and all the pegs of the court, shall be of copper.

14-15. fifteen cubits...fifteen cubits. The entrance space left between enclosure hangings is to be about 10 yards (9 meters) across.

16. gate of the enclosure. That is, the entrance to the sacred precinct.

screen...embroidery. The entrance to the courtyard is to be spanned by a textile panel of a more elaborate fabric, apparently the same as the screen for the entrance to the interior space (26:36).

18. hundred cubits...fifty...five cubits. Like the tent within, the courtyard is to be rectangular, about 50 yards (46 meters) by 25 yards (23 meters), with fabric walls more than 7 feet (more than 2 meters) high.

עֲשָׂרִים נְחַשֶּׁת וְוֵי הַעֲמֹדִים וְחַשְׁקִיהם
בְּסֻף:

¹²וְרַחֲבַת הַחֶצֶר לְפָאַתִּים קָלָעִים חַמְשִׁים
אַמְתָּה עַמְدִים עַשְׂרָה וְאֶדְנִים עַשְׂרָה:

¹³וְרַחֲבַת הַחֶצֶר לְפָאַת קְרֻמָּה מִזְרָחָה
חַמְשִׁים אַמְתָּה: ¹⁴וְחַמְשָׁש עַשְׂרָה אַמְתָּה
קָלָעִים לְכַתֵּף עַמְדִים שֶׁלֶשׁ וְאֶדְנִים
שֶׁלֶשׁ: ¹⁵וְלְכַתֵּף הַשְׁבִּית חַמְשָׁש עַשְׂרָה:
קָלָעִים עַמְדִים שֶׁלֶשׁ וְאֶדְנִים שֶׁלֶשׁ:

¹⁶וְלִשְׁעָר הַחֶצֶר מִסְּרָה | עֲשָׂרִים אַמְתָּה
תְּבִלָּת וְאֶרְגָּמָן וְתוֹלְעָת שְׁנִי וְשֶׁשׁ מִשְׂרוֹ
מַעֲשָׂה רַקְם עַמְדִים אֶרְבָּעָה וְאֶדְנִים

אֶרְבָּעָה:

¹⁷כָּל-עַמּוֹדי הַחֶצֶר סְבִיב מְחַשְׁקִים בְּסֻף
וְוִיהָם בְּסֻף וְאֶדְנִים נְחַשֶּׁת:

¹⁸אַרְך הַחֶצֶר מִמְּאַה בָּאַמְתָּה וְרַחֲבַת חַמְשִׁים
בְּחַמְשִׁים וְקָמָה חַמְשָׁש אַמְתָּה שְׁשׁ מִשְׂרוֹ
וְאֶדְנִים נְחַשֶּׁת: ¹⁹לְכָל בְּלִי הַמְשִׁבְנָן בְּכָל
עַבְדָּתוֹ וּכְלִי-תְּדָתָיו וּכְלִי-תְּדָתָה הַחֶצֶר

נְחַשֶּׁת: ס

19. utensils of the Tabernacle. In this summary statement, the word mishkan seems to refer to the Tabernacle precinct—that is, the courtyard—and not the tent structure inside.

service. Heb. avodah can mean “labor” or “tasks” (as in 1:14), but it more often refers to devotional service such as the offerings on the courtyard altar.

pegs...of copper. Almost as an afterthought, the instructions mention copper stakes to which guy wires were presumably to be attached, to hold taut the enclosure fabrics and perhaps also the tent coverings.

—Carol Meyers

Another View

PARASHAT T'RUMAH PROVIDES specifications for constructing the Tabernacle and its furnishings. Although the gender of the artisans is not mentioned, other biblical passages indicate that metallurgy was a male domain (I Samuel 8:12), while spinning and weaving were women's work (Judges 16:13–14; II Samuel 3:29; Proverbs 31:19). Producing and dyeing yarns, weaving, and embroidering textiles for the Tent of Meeting and officiating priests' clothing thus provided an avenue for women of the Exodus account to participate in this public and communal religious practice. According to II Kings 23:7, women continued producing textiles as devotional service also during the time of the Jerusalem Temple: while working in a room within the Temple precinct, "the women wove coverings" for the wooden pole of Asherah that stood in the Temple. (On worship of the goddess Asherah, see at Exodus 34:13.)

Archeological evidence of weaving abounds in both domestic and industrial contexts in the biblical period. Ceramic loom weights, indicative of an upright warp-weighted loom, stone or ceramic spindle whorls for twisting fibers into continuous yarn, and bone shuttles for weaving are common finds in domestic contexts. Loom weights found in rows suggest that looms, consisting of a crossbeam supported by two upright beams, rested against a room or courtyard wall. The weights pulled taut the vertical warp strings tied to the cross-beam above. Most women spun and wove to satisfy household needs: clothing, cloaks that also served as blankets, bags to transport grain, and waterproof coverings of goats' hair. Sheep and goats from one's flocks, the two most common domesticated animals, provided wool and hair; linen was produced from flax fibers.

While Israelite women wove cloth at home, the highly prized dye denoting sovereignty that was mandated for the Tabernacle curtains and vestments—t'cheilet (blue-violet) and argaman (purple)—was manufactured in specialized installations at coastal sites. A Mediterranean mollusk, Murex, secretes the main ingredient of the dye used to manufacture t'cheilet and argaman. Dye vats with accompanying mounds of broken murex shells have been uncovered in 9th-century-B.C.E. excavations at Tel Shiqmona, and in Persian Period Tel Dor, both located in Phoenician-controlled territory along the coast south of present-day Haifa. Tolaat shani (crimson/scarlet) was likely derived from the body of a female insect, Kermococcus/Kermes, or her eggs. Since wools took the dye but linen did not, those who produced the Tabernacle curtains and priests' ceremonial clothing likely combined decorative dyed wool with linen threads and then wove gold threads into the cloth (Exodus 39:2–3, 8). While mixing wool and linen was specified for Tabernacle draperies and curtains, the high priest's vestments, and for tzitzit (Exodus 26:1, 31, 36; 27:16; 28:4–5; Numbers 15:38; Deuteronomy 22:11–12), it was forbidden for common clothing and labeled shaatnez (see at Leviticus 19:19; Deuteronomy 22:9–11).

Biblical passages indicate that spinning and weaving were women's work.

—Elizabeth Bloch-Smith

Post-biblical Interpretations

 every person (25:2). Heb. kol ish, which is often translated as “every man,” but as Nachmanides commented on “whole Israelite community” (35:1), the expression kol ish here includes women as well.

whose heart is so moved (25:2). Sforso said that God specifically included the phrase “whose heart so moves” in order to differentiate this freely given offering from tzedakah, an obligation that everyone is obligated to fulfill.

that I may dwell among them . . . the Tabernacle (25:8–9). The two key Hebrew words, v'shachanti (“that I may dwell”) and mishkan (“Tabernacle”), are related linguistically to the feminine noun Shechinah. The Rabbis used that term for the indwelling and intimately felt presence of God, believing that the Shechinah was present in the Tabernacle and, later, in the Temple in Jerusalem. According to the Talmud, the Shechinah also accompanied Israel into exile (BT M'gillah 29a) and becomes manifest during communal worship (BT Sanhedrin 39a) and moments of individual need (BT Shabbat 12b). [As Sharon Faye Koren explains (“Shekhinah as Female Symbol,” Encyclopaedia Judaica, 2nd ed., 2006), medieval Jewish mysticism (Kabbalah) often represented the Shechinah as a female aspect of God. The Shechinah mediated between heaven and earth and served as the passive eye or door through which a mystic could achieve divine vision. The mystics believed that sexual relations between the Shechinah and a male aspect of the divine brought about cosmic harmony. (Similarly, intercourse between a male mystic and his wife on earth, especially on Shabbat night, could foster both divine and mystical union.) Some contemporary Jewish feminists have reclaimed the symbol of the Shechinah to counter what they perceive to be the patriarchal bias of Jewish theology; they have reinterpreted mystical themes and emphasize the symbol of the feminine Shechinah in innovative new liturgies. —Ed.]

so shall you make it (25:9). God’s instructions concerning the building of the Tabernacle are recounted in the Torah prior to the incident of the Golden Calf (Exodus 32–34). However, some rabbinic commentators believed that these directions were given after that shameful event; and they interpret God’s command to create the Tabernacle as a sign of divine forgiveness. According to Midrash Sh'mot Rabbah 51.4, the nations of the world had declared that God would never be reconciled with Israel after Israel rejected God in favor of an idol. However, Moses successfully pleaded for mercy on the people’s behalf. At that moment, God said to Moses, “I will let my Shechinah dwell among [the Israelites], so that all may know that I have forgiven Israel. My sanctuary in their midst will be testimony of My forgiveness—and from this time on may be called a ‘Tabernacle of Testimony.’” (On the Shechinah, see the previous comment.) Nachmanides, however, did not accept this tampering with chronology. He suggested that the commandment to build the Tabernacle was divine acknowledgment of Israel’s merit in having freely accepted the Decalogue (comment to 35:1).

All the Torah's commandments are in the form of the mystery of male and female.

P'sikta D'Rav Kahana 1.1–2 understands the Tabernacle as a sign of God’s love for Israel and portrays it as a bridal chamber for the bride (Israel) and groom (God), patterned on the heavenly Tabernacle. A parable in Sh'mot Rabbah 33.1 utilizes somewhat different symbolism: When the beloved daughter of a king married another king, her father could not bear to part from her and so requested that his son-in-law build him a room so he could dwell with her. Here, God is depicted as a father and the Tabernacle as a place for the father to remain with his beloved daughter, Israel.

T'RUMAH

Make two cherubim of gold (25:18). According to BT Chagigah 13b, the cherubim had the forms of winged human beings. One represented divine mercy and the other represented divine justice.

There I will meet with you (25:22). The Rabbis acknowledged that God is everywhere. Nevertheless, they also understood that through an act of tzimtzum, contraction, God could meet with Moses from between the cherubim, which were ten spans above the earth (Sh'mot Rabbah 34.1).

make fifty gold clasps, and couple the cloths to one another with the clasps, so that the Tabernacle becomes one whole (26:6). Ibn Ezra compared the interconnected components of the Tabernacle to the intricacies and interdependence of the parts of the human body, as well as to the similar interlocking segments of the entire world. The Zohar elaborates: “The mystery of the Tabernacle which is [composed of] limbs and joints—they all amount to the mystery of the human being, on the pattern of the commandments in the Torah, for all the commandments in the Torah are in the form of the mystery of the human being, male and female, for when they are joined together they are the single mystery of humanity” (Zohar 2:162b).

You shall make the planks for the Tabernacle of acacia wood, upright (26:15). Sh'mot Rabbah 35.1 asks why the Hebrew reads “the planks” rather than just “planks.” One answer is that God concealed some things after the Creation until they were specifically required. These particular cedar trees were hidden until they could be used to construct a dwelling place for the Shechinah.

—Ruth Gais

• • • • •

Contemporary Reflection

PARASHAT T'RUMAH FOCUSES on building the symbolic core of the Israelites: the Tabernacle (Mishkan), which will become the central shrine and sacred symbol of God's dwelling amidst the people. The Mishkan will be a physical entity, but it will spiritually link the Israelites into a nation through God's divine Presence. This portable structure is considered the forerunner of the Temple built in Jerusalem many generations after the wilderness experience. Today, the synagogue, with its distinct reminders of the Tabernacle and Temple, functions as the communal focal point for the Jewish people. It, too, serves as the spiritual center connecting Jews of all generations to our history, people, and covenant.

The building of the Mishkan will force the Israelites to work together in order to fulfill a common goal and prepare for a common future. Although they have just been given the Decalogue—the precepts that bind the Israelites to God and one another—the people's participation in the making of the Tabernacle will unify the nation in a different way. It will elevate the seemingly mundane work of construction into a sacred vocation, dedicated to the service of the One God who freed them from Egypt and revealed the terms of the covenant.

These former slaves are no strangers to building monuments and cities. The backbreaking labor of the Israelites in Egypt glorified the pharaoh and the Egyptian gods; but this certainly was not a sacred endeavor. In contrast, constructing the Tabernacle and all its finery will be holy work that aims to create sacred space and sacred instruments of worship.

Parashat T'rumah goes into great detail about the various parts of the Tabernacle, describing the Ark of the Covenant, the special table for the bread of display, the menorah, the curtains of the tent, the parochet (partition that screens off the sacred inner sanctum), and the altar for delivering offerings to God. In this Torah portion and the ones that follow, the design of the Tabernacle and its contents are laid out with precise measurements and great specificity. A number of these objects can be found in contemporary synagogues, reminders of the sacred structures of our biblical ancestors. Then and now, the ark stands as the epicenter of God's presence and the container for the divine word. Many arks contain a special curtain or partition called a parochet, as in the Tabernacle. In sanctuaries today, the menorah shines as a symbol of the Jewish people, just as the ner tamid (27:20; understood as an eternal light) provides a sign of God's indwelling presence.

According to parashat T'rumah, the Israelites—women and men alike—provide not only the labor, but also the raw materials for the Mishkan. Their gifts, brought as voluntary offerings, are gathered and transformed into a place for God to reside in their midst. Imagine how these former slaves felt as they became both builders of a nation and builders of a dwelling place for the Divine!

God instructs Moses: “Tell the Israelite people to bring Me gifts; you shall accept gifts for Me from every person whose heart is so moved” (25:2). This kind of giving, a freewill offering, does not come through guilt, coercion, or competition, but from the deepest recesses of the soul. The Israelites bring yarns, precious metals, cloth, and tanned skins—an array of earthly objects that will eventually become the sacred space where Israel can seek God's presence.

Today, it is important for all of us to continue to make freewill offerings to the institutions that unify the Jewish people. Along with tzedakah (required giving), t'r umah (voluntary giving) is vital for sustaining our community. Synagogues, Jewish centers, and Jewish communal agencies cannot survive on membership fees or dues alone. As they struggle to meet their financial needs, these institutions require our heartfelt support through the freewill gifts that are necessary to fulfill the good and holy work of these organizations.

The synagogue, in particular, lies at the intersection of the earthly and heavenly realms. The heir to the Ohel Mo'ed (Tent of Meeting), the contemporary synagogue is the place where Jews most often seek out God. Through study, prayer, and communal gatherings, the synagogue provides the necessary environment for Jewish connection, renewal, and survival. When we bring our voluntary gifts of money, time, and other resources, we bring the realm of the holy into our lives.

Just as our ancestors were transformed from ordinary slaves into builders of God's home on earth, we too are transformed through this sacred endeavor. We bring more peace, more hope, and more faith into our own lives and the life of our community when we support and build the synagogue. We strengthen the Jewish people even as we strengthen ourselves as Jews.

When we bring our voluntary gifts, we bring the realm of the holy into our lives.

Voluntary giving is different for each and every person; it is not simply a percentage or flat rate. A person of substantial means has the ability to give greater sums, while a person of more modest means might not have the capacity to give at such large levels. Nevertheless, each person can and should give significantly. The definition of a “meaningful gift” varies for each individual, depending on one's circumstances. But regardless of the quantity of the offering, the quality is the same: giving a meaningful voluntary offering to a synagogue or other Jewish institution is a privilege, not a burden. This kind of giving—be it of money or time and effort—is cheerful giving, giving that makes a difference, giving that matters. Our parashah teaches that the t'r umah-gift is an offering that comes from the deep recesses of the heart. Then and now, it is a privilege to be involved in the sacred work of building community and constructing a dwelling place for the Divine.

—Denise L. Eger

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

Before

Yocheved Bat-Miriam (transl. Wendy Zierler)

Exodus 25:2–8

Before, in this way, in bygone days,
Women, like me, in silence
Would bear supplications, hidden flames,
With a throbbing spirit.

They would—and in splintering wails would prostrate themselves over ancestors' graves.

And raise candles for the souls of the dead with trembling hearts.

They would—for the holy arks
they would volunteer precious curtains.
On silk and velvet, in silver thread were interwoven secret hopes.

Many and varied were the women unfortunate, beaten, desolate.
Only one, only one nowadays is close to my yearning heart:—

Hannah who went up for the festival year after year to the tabernacle, to pray, to speak her heart,
her prayer without sound and without tear.

Different from her am I and different also is my expression
But like her longing among the shadows
I will stand and speak my heart.

T'rumah

Laurie Patton

Exodus 26:1–14

We've always known
that clothing makes a world;
tents on our mother's beds, earth and sky made of quilts letting the light in so that we are small makers of tiny suns and miniature moons, each requiring new stories.

We've always known that our shawls are second skins,
which, unlike snakes,
we have the blissful choice of removing at will.

We've always known that blankets
have an inch of heat that can be the difference between life and death for someone newly nameless searching for a subway vent.

We make tiny worlds,
and shed skins,
and seek warm winds:
in these ways
we cry to You,
and You hear,
because You are gracious.

from please with gentleness

Haviva Pedaya (transl. Harvey Bock)

Exodus 25:8

one thing have I asked and it I seek your dwelling in me your giving me a spirit one thing I cried when I remembered myself for then when I prayed I lacked nothing and now that I desire nothing everything is trampled in me please be gracious to me and pity bless my days purify them raise them like a daughter crying over the apple of her eye
please if you can

Creation

Nechama Gottschalk

Exodus 25:8

In this place I am filled with wonder and awe at Your Creation.

How can I feel such ecstasy when I know that babies starve daily;
rulers abuse their peoples for the sake of power;
species become extinct at each setting sun;
and we humans spend our days destroying our world and its inhabitants, including ourselves?

Yet here I am and I see You in this place,
and for the moment,
my heart opens and I touch You and know Love for all Your Creation.

The Compassion of Shekhinah

Ellen Frankel

Exodus 25:8

ESTHER THE HIDDEN ONE REVEALS: Shekhinah, the Holy-One-Who-Dwells-in-This-World, represents the mystical Community of Israel. All Israel constitutes her limbs. She is our intimate link with God-Who-Dwells-on-High and our companion as we wander in exile. As it is written: “and let them make me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them (Exodus 25:8). Not ‘I will dwell below,’ but among you—just as a wanderer would. In other words, wherever Israel wanders, I will go with them and I will dwell among them, but not in a permanent place.” Mercifully, She holds back God’s upraised hand when it threatens to harm Her children, but She does not hesitate to punish us Herself when we stray.

from An Interrupted Life

Etty Hillesum (transl. Arnold J. Pomerans)

Exodus 25:1–8

There is a strange little melody inside me that sometimes cries out for words. But through inhibition, lack of self-confidence, laziness and goodness knows what else, that tune remains stifled, haunting me from within. Sometimes it wears me out completely. And then again it fills me with gentle, melancholy music. Sometimes I want to flee with everything I possess into a few words, seek refuge in them. But there are still no words to shelter me. That is the real problem. I am in search of a haven, yet I must first build it for myself, stone by stone. Everyone seeks a home, a refuge. And I am always in search of a few words.

תְּzֵבֶה ◆ T'tzaveh

EXODUS 27:20–30:10

Further Instructions: Consecration of Priests and Tabernacle

PARASHAT T'TZAVEH ("you shall instruct") adds to the previous parashah's elaborate instructions for constructing the Tabernacle complex and furnishings, by giving detailed information about the vestments for the priests (28:1–43). Most of this information concerns the sacral garments for the chief priestly official, Aaron. As the one whose priestly functions bring him closest to the invisible presence of God in the Holy of Holies, his apparel must be of the same order of sanctity as the materials used for the holiest areas of the tent shrine.

The next order of business concerns the consecration service (29:1–37). An investiture (or ordination) ceremony will be necessary to confer upon Aaron and his subordinates the requisite sanctity for approaching God and performing their priestly tasks. A supplement (29:38–46) gives advance information about the regular sacrifices that will take place at the Tabernacle, and about God's availability there once the whole complex and its priests are sanctified.

Flanking the lengthy materials about vestments and consecration are two brief passages: one involves the oil for the daily ritual of lighting the lamps in the sacred tent (27:20–21), and the other the incense altar (30:1–10); both items are functionally related to the priests' role.

The wealth of detail about Aaron and his sons provides a stark portrayal of how males dominated the communal sacred lives of the ancient Israelites. Only later, in parashat Vayak'heil, will the minor presence of some female personnel at the communal religious shrine become apparent. There, we read about the women who are experts in making textiles (35:25–26) and "the women who performed tasks at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting" (38:8).

In contrast to the seemingly limited participation of women in the institutions of the Tabernacle or Temple, women did play a prominent role in household religious life—carrying

Women did play a prominent role in household religious life.

out religious practices deemed necessary for the well-being and survival of their families, such as rituals to achieve fertility, healthy pregnancy, and safe childbirth. Reproduction in the modern world has been medicalized; but traditional societies—including ancient Israel—addressed barrenness, difficult pregnancies and births, and infant mortality via religious practices carried out in the home. Although this information almost never emerges in the Bible, archeological and ethnographic data now provide strong evidence for these essential functions of Israelite women. (See further Vayikra, Another View, p. 587.)

—Carol Meyers

Outline—

I. INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT OIL FOR LIGHT (27:20–21)

II. INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT PRIESTLY VESTMENTS (28:1–43)

- A. Introduction (vv. 1–5)
- B. Ritual items for Aaron (vv. 6–30)
- C. Apparel for Aaron and other priests (vv. 31–43)

III. INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT CONSECRATION (29:1–46)

- A. Installation rites (vv. 1–37)
- B. Directions for regular sacrifice (vv. 38–42a)
- C. Summation (vv. 42b–46)

IV. INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT THE INCENSE ALTAR (30:1–10)

27:20

You shall further instruct the Israelites to bring you clear oil of beaten olives for lighting, for kindling lamps regularly.²¹ Aaron and his sons shall

כז וְאֶת־תְּצִוָּה אֶת־בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל
וַיֹּקְרַב אֶלְיךָ שְׂמָן זִית וְעֵץ בְּתִית לְמַאוֹר
לְהַעֲלָת נֵר תְּמִיד: ²¹ בְּאֹהֶל מוֹעֵד מִחוֹז

Instructions about Oil for Light

(27:20–21)

The instructions for making the menorah in Exodus 25 did not mention how it is to be used; instead, the directions for the lamp oil and its use appear here, as a prelude to the units on priestly vestments and investiture. Like the concluding unit of the parashah (instructions about the altar in 30:1–10), this passage might seem out of place. However, the arrangement makes sense since both passages concern specific rites to be performed inside the shrine by Aaron and his sons. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive unit, see 35:8, 28.)

20. clear oil of... olives. Olive oil was one of the major agricultural products of the Land of Israel. Not only did it serve as a clean-burning lamp fuel, but it provided the basic fat source for the ancient diet in the Mediterranean region. Olive oil also had cosmetic and medicinal uses; and it was used to consecrate objects and individuals (see at 29:7). Like blood and water, oil was a liquid associated with transformation and holiness. Olive trees provided relatively stable crops since they were not susceptible to the variations in rainfall and temperature that could harm other food supplies; thus they symbolize fertility in many biblical texts, like Psalm 128:3.

beaten. Better, “crushed.” Small quantities of oil, as in this context, were probably extracted from olives by placing them in a stone basin or a depression in a rock and then pounding them repeatedly with a stone tool. Because the technology for producing olive oil was similar to the grinding of grain for bread, which was done almost entirely by women (see at 16:3 and 25:30), and because women may have produced stone tools of this sort, the preparation of olive oil—at least in village settings in the Land of Israel—was likely a woman’s task.

lamps. Heb. ner (lamp), in the singular. The plural translation here may reflect an attempt to align this passage with the idea of seven lamps at the end of the branches of the menorah—perhaps a Second Temple reality, as opposed to a simpler single-lamp tradition for the pre-monarchic tent shrine (see at 25:37).

regularly. Heb. tamid, which refers to the regular, daily ritual of lamp lighting. The term sometimes means “continually,” but that is not its plain sense here (see next verse).

Later, Jews paired tamid (“regularly”) with the preceding word ner (“lamp”) to form the term ner tamid, the name for the ever-burning, or “eternal,” light that is suspended in front of a synagogue’s ark.

- There is no evidence of Israelite priestesses.

ANOTHER VIEW ➤ 489

- The poet Yannai linked the priestly regulations for maintaining the Tabernacle’s lights with women’s kindling lamps for Shabbat.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ➤ 490

- This parashah and the book of Esther, each in its own way, ask us to confront an absence.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ➤ 491

- we stand riveted before the lamp / as flame gutters in the wind...

VOICES ➤ 493

set them up in the Tent of Meeting, outside the curtain which is over [the Ark of] the Pact, [to burn] from evening to morning before יְהוָה. It shall be a due from the Israelites for all time, throughout the ages.

28 You shall bring forward your brother Aaron, with his sons, from among the Israelites, to serve Me as priests: Aaron, Nadab and Abihu,

לִפְרָכֶת אֲשֶׁר עַל-הַעֲדָה יִעַרְךָ אַתָּה אַהֲרֹן
וּבָנָיו מִעֵרֶב עַד-בָּקָר לִפְנֵי יְהוָה חֲקַת עוֹלָם לְדוֹרָתֶם מֵאַת בָּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: ס
כְּתָחַ וְאַתָּה קָרְבָּא אֲלֵיכָךְ אַת-אַהֲרֹן אֲחִיךָ
וְאַת-בָּנָיו אַתָּה מִתּוֹךְ בָּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְכָהָנוֹ-לִי
אַהֲרֹן נְדָב וְאַבְיָהוּא אַלְעֹזָר וְאִיתְמָר בָּנָיו

21. Tent of Meeting. This designation for the sacred tent shrine appears here for the first time in Exodus. The term “meeting” (mo’ed) reflects the oracular function of such a shrine, in which God would “meet” with a human leader in order to communicate the divine will or provide answers to questions (see 33:7–11). The elaborate and costly Tabernacle (Mishkan) may be fictive, yet it seems to incorporate authentic traditions about a relatively small and simple tent shrine (Tent of Meeting) dating to the pre-monarchic era (see also the introduction to Trumah, p. 451).

the Pact. An elliptical reference to the “tablets of the Pact”—the covenant document to be placed in the Ark (see at 25:16).

[to burn] from evening to morning. That is, overnight during the dark hours (see 30:7–8).

for all time, throughout the ages. In the Torah, such language usually signifies an etiology that would give divine sanction to an existing custom by attributing it to the era of Moses and the authority of the Sinai revelation (as in 12:14 and 40:15).

Instructions about Priestly Vestments (28:1–43)

Like palaces, sacred shrines in the biblical world had coteries of servants to tend the needs of the occupant; in this case, the priests served God’s unseen presence. Appropriate garb for entry into the sacred space of the Tabernacle structure is specified for Aaron, who functions as chief or head priest. Aaron’s name appears many times in this priest-oriented text, in contrast to its virtual absence from the equivalent unit in the Tabernacle descriptive texts (see at 39:1–31). The focus here is on Aaron’s garments; only three verses provide instructions for Aaron’s sons’ garments (28:40–43). Less elaborate clothing for the other priests, many of whom are to perform menial and messy tasks associated with the slaughter of animals in the courtyard, is also briefly mentioned.

The text does not indicate who will make the priestly apparel. However, because women were probably responsible for making textiles and clothing in ancient Israel, it is likely that they were responsible for producing the sacral garments, just as they were the ones who produced fabrics for the Tabernacle (see at 35:25).

INTRODUCTION (28:1–5)

This brief introduction names the priestly family, calls for the services of skilled artisans, and lists the items of clothing and materials to be used to make the priestly vestments. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 39:1.)

i. your brother Aaron... to serve Me as priests. Although Aaron appears frequently in Exodus up to this point, this is the first place that his name is used together with the word “priest.” Aaron’s responsibilities as priest are said to include various matters of ritual (for example, 27:21; 28:35; 30:7–8), judicial proceedings (28:29–30), and instruction (Leviticus 10:11). The Bible never refers to Aaron by the title “high priest”—a term that seems to refer to an office

Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron.² Make sacral vestments for your brother Aaron, for dignity and adornment. ³ Next you shall instruct all who are skillful, whom I have endowed with the gift of skill, to make Aaron's vestments, for consecrating him to serve Me as priest. ⁴ These are the vestments they are to make: a breastpiece, an ephod, a robe, a fringed tunic, a headdress, and a sash. They shall make those sacral vestments for your brother Aaron and his sons, for priestly service to Me; ⁵ they, therefore, shall receive the gold, the blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and the fine linen.

⁶ They shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and of fine twisted that developed over time so that its responsibilities included also temple finance and management.

As the narrative presents it, Aaron seems to have become the head of the priestly line by virtue of being Moses' brother. Both are from the family of Levi, and their association with Sinai serves to legitimate the Aaronide priesthood. We know from Exodus 6:20 that Aaron's mother was Jochebed, and from 6:23 that his wife was "Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab and sister of Nahshon."

3. all who are skillful. More information about the textile workers appears in 35:25–26 and 36:6, where it is clear that female artisans are involved. "Skillful" is literally "wise of heart." In Israelite society, artisans were held in higher esteem than manual laborers; and their ability to apply unusual talent to create beautiful items was attributed to God.

4. Altogether, Aaron will wear seven items (the six mentioned here plus the frontlet in 28:36–37), seven being a symbol of perfection and totality. He will wear breeches too (v. 42), but they would not be visible and probably were not considered sacred. Note the absence of footwear, implying that priests wore no shoes on holy ground (see 3:5).

5. gold, the blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and the fine linen. The sumptuous materials to be used for the textiles of the Tabernacle and its partitions (see at 25:4) are also to be used for the garments worn by the one entering that holy space.

אַהֲרֹן: ² וְעַשֵּׂת בָגָד יְקָדֵשׁ לְאַהֲרֹן אֲחִיךָ לְכָבֹוד וְלִתְפָּארָת: ³ וְאַתָּה תֹּרֶבֶר אֶל-כָּל-חַכְמִי-לֵב אֲשֶׁר מִלְאָתַי רֹיתָ חַכְמָה וְעֹשָׂו אֲתִ-בָגָד אַהֲרֹן לְקָדְשׁו לְבָהָנוֹ-לִי: ⁴ וְאַלְהָ הַבְגָדִים אֲשֶׁר יַעֲשֶׂו חֶשֶׁן וְאַפְוד וּמְעַל וְכַתְנַת תְּשִׁבֵּן מִצְנַפְתָּה וְאַבְנַט וְעֹשָׂו בָגָד לְקָדֵשׁ לְאַהֲרֹן אֲחִיךָ וְלְבָנָיו לְבָהָנוֹ-לִי: ⁵ וְהָם יִקְחוּ אֲתִ-הַזְבָּב וְאֲתִ-הַתְּכִלָּת וְאֲתִ-הַאֲרָגָן וְאֲתִ-תּוֹלְעָת הַשְׁנִי וְאֲתִ-

הַשְׁשָׁה: פ

וְעֹשֶׂו אֲתִ-הַאֲפָד זָהָב תְּכִלָּת וְאֲרָגָן תּוֹלְעָת שְׁנִי וְשֶׁשׁ מְשׂוּר מַעֲשָׂה חָשֶׁב:

RITUAL ITEMS FOR AARON (28:6–30)

Two highly specialized and somewhat enigmatic items of Aaron's apparel, the ephod and breastpiece, will have a role in ritual practice. Their collective importance is signaled by the length of the passages devoted to instructions for making these two items; but how they are to be used is never explained. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 39:2–21.)

6. ephod. The English noun is simply a transliteration of the Hebrew term. A number of diverse sources (Judges 8:24–27; I Samuel 2:18; II Kings 8:8–14) indicate that the ephod's appearance and function changed over time. It was a ritual garment, a divinatory device, or sometimes both—as seems to be the case here, because of the ephod's attachment to the "breastpiece of decision."

of gold. That is, using gold thread (Exodus 39:3). Fabrics with gold are known from Mesopotamian texts describing garments made to clothe statues of the gods. Golden garments are fit for deities or for their human attendants.

linen, worked into designs.⁷ It shall have two shoulder-pieces attached; they shall be attached at its two ends.⁸ And the decorated band that is upon it shall be made like it, of one piece with it: of gold, of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and of fine twisted linen.⁹ Then take two lazuli stones and engrave on them the names of the sons of Israel:¹⁰ six of their names on the one stone, and the names of the remaining six on the other stone, in the order of their birth.¹¹ On the two stones you shall make seal engravings—the work of a lapidary—of the names of the sons of Israel. Having bordered them with frames of gold,¹² attach the two stones to the shoulder-pieces of the ephod, as stones for remembrance of the Israelite people, whose names Aaron shall carry upon his two shoulder-pieces for remembrance before Yahweh.

¹³ Then make frames of gold¹⁴ and two chains of pure gold; braid these like corded work, and fasten the corded chains to the frames.

¹⁵ You shall make a breastpiece of decision,

וְשִׁתֵּי כַּתְّפָת חֲבָרָת יְהִי־לֹו אֶל־שְׁנִי קְצֻוֹתָיו וְחֲבָר :⁸ וְחַשְׁבָ אַפְקָתוֹ אֲשֶׁר עַלְיוֹ בְּמַעֲשָׂהוּ מִמְּנִי יְהִי זָהָב תְּכָלָת וְאַרְגָּמָן וְתּוּלָעָת שְׁנִי וְשֶׁשׁ מִשּׁׂוֹר :⁹ וְלִקְחָתָ אֶת־שְׁתֵּי אֲבָנֵי־שְׁנָם וְפִתְחָת עַל־הַלְּבָד שְׁמוֹת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל :¹⁰ שְׁשָׁה מִשְׁמָתָם עַל־הַאֲבָן הָאַחַת וְאֶת־שְׁמָתָה הַשְׁשָׁה הַנּוֹתָרִים עַל־הַאֲבָן הַשְׁנִית בְּתַולְדָתָם :¹¹ מְעָשָׂה חֶרֶשׁ אָבָן פָּתוּחָה חֲתָם תְּפִתָּח אֶת־שְׁתֵּי הַאֲבָנִים עַל־שְׁמָתָה בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִסְבָּתָה מִשְׁבָּצָות זָהָב תַּעֲשֶׂה אֲתֶם :¹² וְשֶׁמֶת אֶת־שְׁתֵּי הַאֲבָנִים עַל בְּתַפְתָּה הַאֲפָד אֲבָנִי וּפְרָז לְבָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וּנְשָׁא אֲהָרֹן אֶת־שְׁמוֹתָם לִפְנֵי יְהֹוָה עַל־שְׁתֵּי בְּתַפְיָו לִזְבָּח :¹³

וְעַשְׂתִּית מִשְׁבָּצָת זָהָב :¹⁴ וְשִׁתֵּי שְׁרָשָׂרָת זָהָב טָהוֹר מִגְבָּלָת תַּעֲשֶׂה אֲתֶם מְעָשָׂה עֲבָת וְנִתְתָּה אֶת־שְׁרָשָׂרָת הַעֲבָתָת עַל־הַמִּשְׁבָּצָת :¹⁵ וְעַשְׂתִּית חֶשֶׁן מִשְׁפָּט מְעָשָׂה חַשְׁבָ worked into designs. Like the fabrics of the Tabernacle (26:31, 36; 27:16), the ephod is to have embroidered work.

7. shoulder-pieces. Perhaps shoulder straps of a vest-like garment.

9. lazuli stones. More likely onyx or possibly carnelian.

engrave on them the names of the sons of Israel. Engraving gemstones with their owners' names, and sometimes with a design, was a highly developed craft in the ancient Near East. Engraved stones served as signets or seals and were used for legal or economic documents. Here, engraving the names of the twelve tribes—six on each stone—symbolizes the presence of all Israel in the decisions made with the ephod and gives authority to those rulings; it also carries the implicit hope for divine awareness of the people and their needs (see also at v. 12).

10. in the order of their birth. This implies knowledge of the matriarchal narratives of Genesis.

11. lapidary. Literally, a “cutter,” meaning an engraver.

12. stones for remembrance... names... for remembrance. Ancient inscriptions asking that God “remember” supplicants for good attest to the implicit hope that God will always be mindful of the people and presumably bring them blessings.

15. breastpiece. This ornate pouch, square when viewed from the front (v. 16), is attached to the ephod. It contains the enigmatic Urim and Thummim, which probably were lots cast to determine God's will in legal, military, and other situations (see at v. 30).

decision. Heb. mishpat, meaning “judgment”; this term provides a clue to the breastpiece's ritual function. Like most ancient peoples, the Israelites worked into a design; make it in the style of the ephod: make it of gold, of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and of fine twisted linen.¹⁶ It shall be square and doubled, a span in length and a span in width.¹⁷ Set in it mounted stones, in four rows of stones. The first row shall be a row of carnelian, chrysolite, and emerald;¹⁸ the second row: a turquoise, a sapphire, and an amethyst;¹⁹ the third row: a jacinth, an agate, and a crystal;²⁰ and the fourth row: a beryl, a lapis lazuli, and a jasper. They shall be framed with gold in their mountings.²¹ The stones shall correspond [in number] to the names of the sons of Israel: twelve, corresponding to their names. They shall be engraved like seals, each with its name, for the twelve tribes.

²²On the breastpiece make braided chains of corded work in pure gold.²³ Make two rings of gold on the breastpiece, and fasten the two rings at the two ends of the breastpiece,²⁴ attaching the two golden cords to the two rings at the ends of the breastpiece.²⁵ Then fasten the two ends of the cords to the two frames, which you shall attach to the shoulder-pieces of the ephod, at the front.²⁶ Make two rings of gold and attach them to the two ends of the breastpiece, at its inner edge, which faces the ephod.²⁷ And make two other rings of gold and fasten them on the front of the ephod, low on the two shoulder-pieces, close to its seam above the deco-

בְּמַעֲשֵׂה אֶפְדָּתְךָ תִּעֲשֶׂנּוּ זָהָב תְּכִלָּת וְאַרְגָּמָן
וְתוֹלְעָת שְׁנִי וְשֵׁשׁ מִשְׁׁוֹר תְּعַשָּׂה אֶת־
¹⁶ רְבוּעָה יְהִיא כְּפֻלָּה זְרַת אַרְבָּנוֹ זְרַת
רְחַבּוֹ: ¹⁷ וּמְלָאת בָּוֹ מְלָאת אֶבְנָה אַרְבָּעָה
טוֹרוֹם אֶבְן טוֹר אָדָם פְּטָה וּבְלָקָת
הַטּוֹר הַאָחָד: ¹⁸ וְהַטּוֹר הַשְׁנִי נֶפֶךְ סְפִיר
וַיְהִלּוּם: ¹⁹ וְהַטּוֹר הַשְׁלִישִׁי לְשֵׁם שְׁבּוֹ
וְאַחֲלָמָה: ²⁰ וְהַטּוֹר הַרְבִּיעִי תְּרַשִּׁישׁ וְשֵׁם
וְיִשְׁפָּה מִשְׁׁבְּצִים זָהָב יְהִיוּ בְּמַלְוִאותָם:
וְיִשְׁפָּה מִשְׁׁבְּצִים זָהָב יְהִיוּ בְּמַלְוִאותָם:
²¹ וְהַאֲבָנִים תְּהִלֵּן עַל־שְׁמָת בְּנֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל
שְׁתִים עַשְׂרָה עַל־שְׁמָת פָּתּוֹחַ חֹתֶם
אִישׁ עַל־שְׁמוֹ תְּהִלֵּן לְשֵׁנִי עַשְׂרָה שְׁבַט:
²² וְעַשְׂרִית עַל־הַחַשֵּׁן שְׁרָשֶׁת גְּבֻלָּת מַעֲשָׂה
עַבְתָּה זָהָב טְהוֹר: ²³ וְעַשְׂרִית עַל־הַחַשֵּׁן שְׁתִי
טְבֻעוֹת זָהָב וְנִתְחַתָּה אֶת־שְׁתִי הַטְּבֻעוֹת עַל־
שְׁנִי קָצֹות הַחַשֵּׁן: ²⁴ וְנִתְחַתָּה אֶת־שְׁתִי
עַבְתָּה זָהָב עַל־שְׁתִי הַטְּבֻעוֹת אֶל־קָצֹות
הַחַשֵּׁן: ²⁵ וְאֶת שְׁתִי קָצֹות שְׁתִי הַעֲבָתָה
תַּתְנִין עַל־שְׁתִי הַמִּשְׁבְּצֹות וְנִתְחַתָּה עַל־
כְּתָפֹת הַאֶפְדָּת אֶל־מַוְלָּפָנוֹ: ²⁶ וְעַשְׂרִית
שְׁתִי טְבֻעוֹת זָהָב וְשְׁמַת אֶתְם עַל־שְׁנִי
קָצֹות הַחַשֵּׁן עַל־שְׁפָטוֹ אֲשֶׁר אֶל־עַבְרָה
הַאֲפֹוד בֵּיתָה: ²⁷ וְעַשְׂרִית שְׁתִי طְבֻעוֹת
זָהָב וְנִתְחַתָּה אֶתְם עַל־שְׁתִי כְּתָפֹת הַאֲפֹוד
מְלַמְּטָה מַמְוֹל פָּנוּי לְעַמָּת מִחְבָּרוֹת מִפְּעָל turned to their deity to resolve judicial proceedings that had reached an impasse, often involving the word of one individual against another (see 22:8 and at 25:22).

16. a span... a span. The breastpiece is to be about nine by nine inches (a little more than 20 centimeters square).

17–21. A total of twelve stones, three each in four rows, are to adorn the breastpiece. The mineralogical identity of most of the stones is uncertain. (Thus, many of the names used in the translation are not necessarily accurate.) They seem to be the kind of semiprecious stones that were regularly engraved for use to mark the seals on official documents in the ancient world. Most of the Hebrew seals discovered in the Land of Israel by archeologists bear men's names; but a small percentage have women's names, attesting to the fact that some women performed legal or economic transactions.

22–28. Golden rings, chains, and frames along with a blue cord are to form an elaborate mechanism for securing the breastpiece to the ephod and for assuring the stability of this weighty item.

rated band.²⁸The breastpiece shall be held in place by a cord of blue from its rings to the rings of the ephod, so that the breastpiece rests on the decorated band and does not come loose from the ephod.²⁹Aaron shall carry the names of the sons of Israel on the breastpiece of decision over his heart, when he enters the sanctuary, for remembrance before Yahweh at all times.³⁰Inside the breastpiece of decision you shall place the Urim and Thummim, so that they are over Aaron's heart when he comes before Yahweh. Thus Aaron shall carry the instrument of decision for the Israelites over his heart before Yahweh at all times.

³¹You shall make the robe of the ephod of pure blue.³²The opening for the head shall be in the middle of it; the opening shall have a binding of woven work round about—it shall be like the opening of a coat of mail—so that it does not tear.³³On

לְחַשֵּׁב הָאָפֹוד: ²⁸ וַיַּרְכֵּסֶוּ אֲתִיהָחָשָׁן מִטְבָּעָתָיו אֲלִטְבָּעָת הָאָפֹוד בְּפִתְּחִילָה תְּכִלָּת לְהִזְמִין עַל-חַשֵּׁב הָאָפֹוד וְלֹא-יִזְחַק הַחַשֵּׁן מִעַל הָאָפֹוד: ²⁹ וַיְנַשֵּׁא אֶחָדָן אֲתִישָׁמוֹת בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּחַשֵּׁן הַמְשֻׁפֵּט עַל-לְבּוֹ בְּבַאוֹ אֲלִיכָּדֵש לַזְבָּחָן לְפָנֵי-יְהָוָה תְּמִיד: ³⁰ וַיְנַתֵּת אֲלִחַשֵּׁן הַמְשֻׁפֵּט אֲתִיהָאָרוּם וְאֲתִיהָתָמִים וְהַיּוֹלֵד עַל-לְבּוֹ אֶחָדָן בְּבַאוֹ לְפָנֵי יְהָוָה וַיְנַשֵּׁא אֶחָדָן אֲתִמְשֻׁפֵּט בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל עַל-לְבּוֹ לְפָנֵי יְהָוָה תְּמִיד: ס

³¹ וַיַּעֲשֵׂת אֲתִימָעֵיל הָאָפֹוד בְּלִיל תְּכִלָּת: ³² וְהִיא פִּירָאָשׁוּ בְתֹבוֹ שֶׁפָּה יְהִיא לְפִיו סְבִיב מַעֲשָׂה אַיִלָּג כַּפִּי תְּחִרְאָה יְהִיא-לָלוּ לֹא יִקְרַע: ³³ וַיַּעֲשֵׂת עַל-שׁוֹלִיו רַמְנִי תְּכִלָּת

28. cord of blue. Blue seems to have been the most highly prized color—and thus the most fitting for priestly vestments—apparently because blue dyes were more difficult to obtain and prepare than those used for purple and crimson (see at 25:4; Trumah, Another View, p. 467).

29. over his heart. The heart represents the identity of a human being in the Bible; it was considered the locus of various human functions, including memory.

30. Urim and Thummim. No translation is given for these terms because their meaning is so uncertain. They refer to stones, perhaps similar to dice or lots, to be kept in the breastpiece. Their function seems clear: they served as a medium for ascertaining a divine ruling on human problems. (See, for example, Numbers 27:21; I Samuel 14:41–42.)

when he comes before Yahweh. That is, when he approaches the sacred space closest to God's invisible presence over the Ark.

APPAREL FOR AARON AND OTHER PRIESTS (28:31–43)

The first two ritual vestments, a special robe and an adornment for the headgear, are for the chief priestly official alone. The other items—tunic, headdress, and sash—are for both the head of the priesthood and the next tier of priests. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 39:22–31.)

31. robe of the ephod of pure blue. Probably a full-length garment, the robe is blue, a color indicating an especially costly fabric. In other biblical texts, this kind of garment is associated with royalty or other high officials only.

32. Somewhat like a long vest (sleeves are not mentioned), the robe is pulled on through a reinforced opening for the head. According to I Samuel 2:19, Hannah made a new robe for her son Samuel each year while he served as a priest's assistant.

its hem make pomegranates of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, all around the hem, with bells of gold between them all around:³⁴ a golden bell and a pomegranate, a golden bell and a pomegranate, all around the hem of the robe.³⁵ Aaron shall wear it while officiating, so that the sound of it is heard when he comes into the sanctuary before יהוה and when he goes out—that he may not die.

³⁶You shall make a frontlet of pure gold and engrave on it the seal inscription: “Holy to יהוה.”

³⁷Suspend it on a cord of blue, so that it may remain on the headdress; it shall remain on the front of the headdress.³⁸ It shall be on Aaron’s forehead, that Aaron may take away any sin arising from the holy things that the Israelites consecrate, from any of their sacred donations; it shall be on his forehead at all times, to win acceptance for them before יהוה.

³⁹You shall make the fringed tunic of fine linen.

33. pomegranates...yarns. The pomegranate was a symbol of fertility and a well-known decorative element in ancient Near Eastern art. Here, they are to be made of woolen yarn that is colored with the same three dyes adorning both the Tabernacle fabrics and the ritual items of Aaron’s garb. That is, these pomegranates would be elaborate tassels to be attached to the robe along with the golden bells.

all around the hem. The distinctive feature of this robe is its lower portion or “skirt” (rather than “hem”), which is to be specially embellished.

35. Bells, which incorporate the sense of hearing into the sensory array of the shrine’s features, apparently had an apotropaic effect, meaning that they were intended to ward off evil. Sounds were believed to protect people, hence the notice that Aaron “will not die” as long as the noise can be heard. In this case, the danger would have been the intense holiness emanating from the presence of God as Aaron entered the holy zone of the Tabernacle.

36. frontlet of pure gold. All priests wore head coverings, but the chief priestly official also had an inscribed golden medallion hanging on the

וְאֶרְגָּמָן וְתוֹלֵעַת שְׁנִי עַל-שׂוֹלֵיו סְבִיב
יַפְעַמְנִי זָהָב בְּתוֹכָם סְבִיב: ³⁴ פֻעַמְנִי זָהָב
וַרְמֹונִי פֻעַמְנִי זָהָב וַרְמֹונִי עַל-שׂוֹלֵי הַמְעִיל
סְבִיב: ³⁵ וְהִיא עַל-אַהֲרֹן לְשָׁרֶת וּנְשָׁמָע
קֹלוֹ בְּבָאוֹ אֶל-הַקְדֵּשׁ לְפָנֵי יְהָוָה וּבְצָאתוֹ וְלֹא יָמוֹת: ס

³⁶ וְעַשְׂתִּית צַיֵּץ זָהָב טָהוֹר וּפְתַחַת עַלְיוֹן
פָּתֹוחַ חַתֵּם קָדֵשׁ לְיהָוָה: ³⁷ וּשְׁמַתָּה אֹתוֹ
עַל-פְּתִיל תְּכִלָּת וְהִיא עַל-הַמְצֻנָּפָת אֶל-
מַול פָּנֵי הַמְצֻנָּפָת וְהִיא: ³⁸ וְהִיא עַל-מַעַח
אַהֲרֹן וְנֶשֶׁא אַהֲרֹן אֲתִידָעָן הַקְדְּשִׁים אֲשֶׁר
יַקְדִּישׁוּ בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְכָל-מִתְחַנֶּת קָדְשֵׁים
וְהִיא עַל-מַעַח תְּמִיד לְרַצְוֹן לָהּם לְפָנֵי
יְהָוָה:

³⁹ וְשַׁבְּצָתְּ הַבְּרִנָּת שָׁשׁ headdress, or perhaps an actual diadem surmounting it.

frontlet. Literally, “flower” or “blossom,” referring perhaps to a rosette-shaped piece of metal. Rosettes, which are depicted as an ornament on the headdresses of deities in Assyrian art, perhaps indicate the high status of the one who wore it.

“Holy to יהוה.” The intent of the inscribed phrase is ambiguous; the inscription may indicate the sanctity of the headdress, the priest, the priest’s tasks in the shrine, or some combination of these.

38. that Aaron may take away any sin. This clause either suggests an apotropaic (protective) function for the frontlet, or it refers to the expiatory role of the head priest. The term “take away” can also mean “bear, carry”; that is, the priest either carries or removes any sinful aspect of what the Israelites bring as holy offerings to God.

39. fringed. The meaning of the Hebrew term is uncertain; it might represent some kind of decorative work.

tunic. This garment, mentioned many times in the Bible, was the main item of clothing worn by Israelite women as well as men.

You shall make the headdress of fine linen.

You shall make the sash of embroidered work.

⁴⁰ And for Aaron's sons also you shall make tunics, and make sashes for them, and make turbans for them, for dignity and adornment. ⁴¹ Put these on your brother Aaron and on his sons as well; anoint them, and ordain them and consecrate them to serve Me as priests.

⁴² You shall also make for them linen breeches to cover their nakedness; they shall extend from the hips to the thighs. ⁴³ They shall be worn by Aaron and his sons when they enter the Tent of Meeting or when they approach the altar to officiate in the sanctuary, so that they do not incur punishment and die. It shall be a law for all time for him and for his offspring to come.

29 This is what you shall do to them in consecrating them to serve Me as priests: Take a young 40. tunics...sashes...turbans. The garb of the other priests does not include the special touches accorded to that of the chief priestly official. Their headdress is to be more of a “cap” than a turban.

42. linen breeches. The text prescribes breeches to function as an undergarment worn by all priestly ranks, for reasons of modesty; the Bible does not mention breeches being worn by most people.

43. incur punishment and die. Because of the great sanctity of the shrine, proper attire would be essential, and the consequences of having improper vestments would be dire.

law for all time. See at 27:21.

Instructions about Consecration

(29:1–46)

The ornate vestments provide the priests with authority for their roles only through elaborate and lengthy installation rituals. These instructions are not implemented until Leviticus 8–9,

וְשִׁבְעַת מֵצְנֵפֶת שָׁשׁ
וְאֲבָנִיט תְּעֵשָׂה מַעֲשָׂה רְקִם:
⁴⁰ וְלֹבֶןִי אֶחָרֶن תְּעֵשָׂה בְּתִנְתָּת וְעַשְׂתָּה לָהֶם
אֲבָנִיטים וּמְגַבְעָוֹת תְּעֵשָׂה לָהֶם לְכֻבּוֹד
וְלְתְּפָאָרָת: ⁴¹ וְהַלְבָשָׁת אֶתְכָּם אֶת־אֶחָרֶן
אֲחִיךְ וְאַתְּבָנִיו אֶתְכָּו וּמְשִׁחָת אֶתְכָּם
וּמְלָאת אֶת־יְקִם וּקְדִשָּׁת אֶתְכָּם וּכְהַנוּ
לֵי:
⁴² וְעֵשָׂה לָהֶם מַכְנִיס־בָּד לְכַסּוֹת בָּשָׂר
שְׁרוֹדָה מִפְרָנָנִים וּעֲדִירָכִים יְהִיוּ ⁴³ וְהִי
עַל־אֶחָרֶן וְעַל־בָּנָיו בְּבָאָם | אֶל־אָחֶל מוֹעֵד
או בְּגַשְׁתָּם אֶל־הַמּוֹבֵח לְשִׁרְתָּ בְּקָדְשָׁ
וְלְאִישָׁאָו עָזָן וּמְתוֹחַת עֲזָת עָזָלָם לוֹ
וְלִזְרָעוֹ אַחֲרָיו: ס

כט וְזֹה הַדָּבָר אֲשֶׁר־תְּعֵשָׂה לָהֶם לְקַרְבָּן
אֶתְכָּם לְכַהֵן לֵי לְקָח פָּר אֶחָד בְּנִבְקָרָ which parallels this prescriptive unit as a descriptive text: it records the investiture and consecration of the priests.

INSTALLATION RITES (29:1–37)

The installation rites are to include three kinds of sacrifices: purgation offering (vv. 10–14), burnt offering (vv. 15–18), and elevation offering (vv. 22–26). The rites will also feature four procedures that focus on the persons involved: washing (v. 4), dressing (vv. 5–6, 8), anointing (v. 7), and carrying out a blood rite (vv. 19–21).

1. you. The instructions are addressed to Moses, who himself is to act as priest in ordaining his brother and nephews.

consecrating. The form of the verb k-d-sh that means “consecrate, make holy” appears seven times in this unit (vv. 1–46), thus indicating the complete sanctity endowed upon the priestly line. Holiness in the ancient world was not an abstract concept, as it is today. A highly positive quality linked with the bull of the herd and two rams without blemish;² also unleavened bread, unleavened cakes with oil mixed in, and unleavened wafers spread with oil—make these of choice wheat flour.³ Place these in one basket and present them in the basket, along with the bull and the two rams.⁴ Lead Aaron and his sons up to the entrance of the Tent of Meeting, and wash them with water.⁵ Then take the vestments, and clothe Aaron with the tunic, the robe of the ephod, the ephod, and the breastpiece, and gird him with the decorated band of the ephod.⁶ Put the headdress on his head, and place the holy diadem upon the headdress.⁷ Take the anointing oil and pour it on his head and anoint him.⁸ Then bring his sons forward; clothe them with tunics⁹ and wind turbans upon them. And gird both Aaron and his sons with sashes. And so they shall have priesthood as their right for all time.

You shall then ordain Aaron and his sons.¹⁰ Lead the bull up to the front of the Tent of וְאַיִלָם שְׁנֵים תְמִימִים: ² וְלֹחֶם מְצֻוֹת

וְחֲלַת מְצֹת בְּלִילָת בְשָׂמְן וּרְקִיקִי מְצֹוֹת
מְשֻׁחִים בְשָׂמְן סְלָת חֲטִים תְעַשָּׂה אֶתְכֶם:
³ וְנִנְתַת אֶתְכֶם עַל-סְלָל אָזְד וְהַקְרְבָת אֶתְכֶם
בְּسֶל וְאַתְהִ הַפֵּר וְאַתְהִ שְׁנֵי הַאַיִלִם: ⁴ וְאַתְהִ
אַהֲרֹן וְאַתְ-בְּנֵינו פְקָרֵיב אַל-פְּתָח אַהֲל
מוֹעֵד וְרַחֲצַת אֶתְכֶם בְמִים: ⁵ וְלַקְחַת אַתְהִ
הַבְגָדִים וְהַלְבָשָׂת אַתְ-אַהֲרֹן אַתְ-הַכְפִנָת
וְאַתְהִ מַעַיל הַאַפְד וְאַתְ-הַאַפְד וְאַתְהִ
הַחֶשֶׁן וְאַפְדַת לֹא בְחַשֵּׁב הַאַפְד: ⁶ וְשִׁמְתָת
הַמְצֻנָּפָת עַל-רָאשׁו וְנִנְתַת אַתְ-ינֹר הַקְדָש
עַל-הַמְצֻנָּפָת: ⁷ וְלַקְחַת אַתְ-שָׂמְן הַמְשִׁחָה
וְנִצְקַת עַל-רָאשׁו וְמִשְׁחַת אַתְהִ: ⁸ וְאַתְהִ
בְּנֵיו פְקָרֵיב וְהַלְבָשָׂת כְתָנָת: ⁹ וְחִגְרָת
אֶתְכֶם אַבְנַט אַהֲרֹן וּבְנֵיו וְחִבְשָׂת לְהַט
מְגֻבָעָת וְהִתָּה לְהַט בְּהִנָּה לְחַקְת עַולְם וּמְלָאת יְד-אַהֲרֹן וַיְד-בְּנֵיו: ¹⁰ וְהַקְרְבָת nature of God, holiness could be acquired through ritual acts by people, animals, places, and things; only then could they approach the powerful sanctity of God, which paradoxically could be dangerous as well as beneficent because of its extreme power.

bull of the herd and two rams. The Israelite custom of sacrificing these two kinds of animals is given extra significance by relating it to Sinai and the wilderness shrine. All three animals are male probably because killing females would jeopardize milk supplies and breeding.

4. wash them with water. Ablutions before approaching the sacred realm were meant to remove impurity. It is not certain whether washing was believed to actually wash off contaminating substances or only to signify their removal.

7. Take the anointing oil. Anointing with olive oil had cosmetic and even magical functions in daily life in ancient Israel and in the wider Near East (see also at 27:20). In ceremonial use, anointing served to formalize an elevation in status. Kings and priests were anointed as they took office. Eventually, the eschatological king is called the “messiah” (mashiach), meaning “anointed one.”

9. priesthood as their right for all time. Making the priesthood the hereditary right of Aaron and his male offspring effectively precludes women from serving as officiants in the holy precinct. In this regard, the Israelites differed from other ancient peoples, for whom priestesses are mentioned. One possible explanation for the exclusion of women is a demographic one; that is, because infant mortality was high and women risked death in childbirth, women were needed for normal family life and thus were not separated out for Temple or Tabernacle service. (See further Another View, p. 489.) Establishing a hereditary priesthood meant that most males, those not from the tribe of Levi, were also denied the right to officiate.

ordain. Literally, “to fill the hand” of Aaron and his sons. This idiom, known in other ancient texts, probably refers to the placing of a scepter in Meeting, and let Aaron and his sons lay their hands upon the head of the bull.¹¹ Slaughter the bull before יְהוָה, at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting,¹² and take some of the bull's blood and put it on the horns of the altar with your finger; then pour out the rest of the blood at the base of the altar.¹³ Take all the fat that covers the entrails, the protuberance on the liver, and the two kidneys with the fat on them, and turn them into smoke upon the altar.¹⁴ The rest of the flesh of the bull, its hide, and its dung shall be put to the fire outside the camp; it is a purgation offering.

¹⁵ Next take the one ram, and let Aaron and his sons lay their hands upon the ram's head.¹⁶ Slaughter the ram, and take its blood and dash it against all sides of the altar.¹⁷ Cut up the ram into sections, wash its entrails and legs, and put them with its quarters and its head.¹⁸ Turn all of the ram into smoke upon the altar. It is a burnt offering to יְהוָה, a pleasing odor, an offering by fire to יְהוָה.

¹⁹ Then take the other ram, and let Aaron and his sons lay their hands upon the ram's head.²⁰ Slaughter the ram, and take some of its blood and put it on the ridge of Aaron's right ear and on the ridges of his sons' right ears, and on the thumbs of their right hands, and on the big toes of their right feet; and dash the rest of the blood against every side of the altar round about.²¹ Take some of the blood that is on the altar and some of the

אֶת-הַפֵּר לִפְנֵי אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וְסָמֶךְ אֶחָרֶן
וּבְנֵיו אֶת-יִדֵּיהֶם עַל-רֹאשׁ הַפֵּר: ¹¹ וְשִׁחְטָתָ
אֶת-הַפֵּר לִפְנֵי יְהוָה פָּתָח אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד:
¹² וְלִקְחָתָ מִדְםֵי הַפֵּר וְנִתְתָּה עַל-קְרֻנוֹת
הַמִּזְבֵּחַ בְּאַצְבָּעָה וְאֶת-כָּל-הַדָּם תִּשְׂפַּךְ
אֶל-יָסּוֹד הַמִּזְבֵּחַ: ¹³ וְלִקְחָתָ אֶת-כָּבֵל-
הַחֶלְבָּה הַמִּכְסֶה אֶת-הַקָּרְבָּן וְאֶת-הַיְתָרָה
עַל-הַכְּבֵד וְאֶת שְׁתֵּי הַכְּלִילִת וְאֶת-
הַחֶלְבָּה אֲשֶׁר עַל-יְהִינָּן וְהַקְּטָרָת הַמִּזְבֵּחַ:
¹⁴ וְאֶת-בָּשָׂר הַפֵּר וְאֶת-עַרוֹן וְאֶת-פְּרָשָׁוֹת
תִּשְׂרַף בְּאָשׁ מְחוּזָן לְמִתְחַנָּה חֲטֹאת הוּא:
¹⁵ וְאֶת-הַאֲיָל הַאָחֵד תִּקְרַב וְסָמֶךְ אֶחָרֶן
וּבְנֵיו אֶת-יִדֵּיהֶם עַל-רֹאשׁ הַאֲיָל:
¹⁶ וְשִׁחְטָתָ אֶת-הַאֲיָל וְלִקְחָתָ אֶת-קְדָמוֹ
וּוּרְקָתָ עַל-הַמִּזְבֵּחַ סְבִיבָה: ¹⁷ וְאֶת-הַאֲיָל
תִּנְתַּחַת לְנִתְחַיו וּרְחַצְתָּ קְרֻבָּו וּכְרֻעָיו וּגְנִתָּתָ עַל-נִתְחַיו וּעַל-רֹאשׁוֹ: ¹⁸ וְהַקְּטָרָת אֶת-
כָּל-הַאֲיָל הַמִּזְבֵּחַ עַל-הָהּ הוּא לִיהוָה רַיִחַ
נִיחּוֹת אֲשֶׁר לִיהוָה הוּא:
¹⁹ וְלִקְחָתָ אֶת הַאֲיָל דִּשְׁנִי וְסָמֶךְ
אֶחָרֶן וּבְנֵיו אֶת-יִדֵּיהֶם עַל-רֹאשׁ הַאֲיָל:
²⁰ וְשִׁחְטָתָ אֶת-הַאֲיָל וְלִקְחָתָ מִדְמֵי וְנִתְתָּה
עַל-תְּנֻנוֹלָ אֵין אֶחָרֶן וּעַל-תְּנֻנוֹלָ אֵין בְּנֵי
הַיּוֹמָנִית וּעַל-בְּנֵי יִדְמָ הַיּוֹמָנִית וּעַל-בְּנֵי
רְגִלִּים הַיּוֹמָנִית וּוּרְקָתָ אֶת-יִדֵּים עַל-הַמִּזְבֵּחַ סְבִיבָה: ²¹ וְלִקְחָתָ מִן-הַדָּם אֲשֶׁר עַל-

the hands of an official who is being installed into office; it later comes to mean more generally “to install” or “ordain.”

10. lay their hands upon the head of the bull. The purpose for this action is unclear. Laying hands upon the bull may transfer their impurity to the animal, which is then destroyed; or it may indicate the transfer of ownership of the bull to God, or both.

12. take some of the bull's blood. The significance of blood as the life force is apparent in many biblical texts; here it may purify the altar.

14. purgation offering. See Leviticus 6:17–23.

15–32. The first of the two rams is a “burnt offering” (vv. 15–18; see at Leviticus 1:3; 6:2); the second ram is the “ordination” offering (29:19–26, 31–32). Likewise, as documents from other ancient Near Eastern cultures indicate, the major sanctuaries of Israel's neighbors typically featured similarly complex and lengthy procedures using the blood and parts of animals along with cereal offerings.

anointing oil and sprinkle upon Aaron and his vestments, and also upon his sons and his sons' vestments. Thus shall he and his vestments be holy, as well as his sons and his sons' vestments.

²²You shall take from the ram the fat parts—the broad tail, the fat that covers the entrails, the protuberance on the liver, the two kidneys with the fat on them—and the right thigh; for this is a ram of ordination. ²³Add one flat loaf of bread, one cake of oil bread, and one wafer, from the basket of unleavened bread that is before יהוה. ²⁴Place all these on the palms of Aaron and his sons, and offer them as an elevation offering before יהוה. ²⁵Take them from their hands and turn them into smoke upon the altar with the burnt offering, as a pleasing odor before יהוה; it is an offering by fire to יהוה.

²⁶Then take the breast of Aaron's ram of ordination and offer it as an elevation offering before יהוה; it shall be your portion. ²⁷You shall consecrate the breast that was offered as an elevation offering and the thigh that was offered as a gift offering from the ram of ordination—from that which was Aaron's and from that which was his sons'—²⁸and those parts shall be a due for all time from the Israelites to Aaron and his descendants. For they are a gift; and so shall they be a gift from the Israelites, their gift to יהוה out of their sacrifices of well-being.

²⁹The sacral vestments of Aaron shall pass on to his sons after him, for them to be anointed and ordained in. ³⁰He among his sons who becomes priest in his stead, who enters the Tent of Meeting to officiate within the sanctuary, shall wear them seven days.

המזבח ומשמן המשחה והחית על-אַהֲרֹן
יעל-בְּגָדָיו ועל-בְּנֵיו ועל-בְּגָדָי בְּנֵיו אֶתְךָ
וקדש הוא ובגדיו ובנוי ובגדי בנויך אהו:
²² ולקחת מן-הָאֵיל הַחִלְבָּן וְהַאֲלִיהָ וְאֶת-
הַחִלְבָּן | הַמְכֻסָּה אֶת-הַקָּרְבָּן וְאֶת-הַחִלְבָּן אֲשֶׁר
הַכָּבֵד וְאֶת-שְׁתֵּי הַכְּלִיּוֹת וְאֶת-הַחִלְבָּן
עַל-יְהוָה וְאֶת שָׂوك הַיְמִין כִּי אֵיל מְלָאִים
הוּא: ²³ וּכְבָר לְחֵם אֶתְךָ וְחַלְתָּ לְחֵם שְׁמַן
אֶחָת וּרְקִיק אֶחָד מִסְלָה מִמְצֹות אֲשֶׁר לִפְנֵי
יהָוָה: ²⁴ וּשְׁמַת הַכְּלָל עַל כִּפְרִי אַהֲרֹן וְעַל
בְּפִי בְּנֵי וְהַנְּפָטָת אֶתְכָם תְּנוּפָה לִפְנֵי יהָוָה:
²⁵ וּלְקַחְתָּ אֶתְם מִידָּם וְהַקְרְבָת הַמְזֻבָּח
עַל-הַעַלְלָה לְרִיחַ נִיחּוֹת לִפְנֵי יהָוָה אֲשֶׁר
הוּא לִיהָוָה:

²⁶ וּלְקַחְתָּ אֶת-הַחַזְזָה מִאֵיל הַמְלָאִים אֲשֶׁר
לְאַהֲרֹן וְהַנְּפָטָת אֶתְךָ תְּנוּפָה לִפְנֵי יהָוָה
וְהִיא לְךָ לְמִנְחָה: ²⁷ וּקְדַשְּׁת אֶת-חִזְזָה
הַתְּנוּפָה וְאֶת שָׂוק הַתְּרוּמָה אֲשֶׁר הוֹנִף
וְאֲשֶׁר הוֹרֵם מִאֵיל הַמְלָאִים מִאֲשֶׁר
לְאַהֲרֹן וּמִאֲשֶׁר לְבָנָיו: ²⁸ וְהִיא לְאַהֲרֹן
וְלְבָנָיו לְחַק-עוֹלָם מִאֶת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל
בְּיִרְשָׁה הַוָּה וְתְרוּמָה יהָוָה מִאֶת
בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִזְבְּחֵי שְׁלֹמִיָּהוּ תְרוּמָתָם
לִיהָוָה:

²⁹ וּבְגָדִי הַקְדֵש אֲשֶׁר לְאַהֲרֹן יְהוָה לְבָנָיו
אַחֲרֵי לְמִשְׁחָה בָּהָם וְלִמְלָאִים אֶת-יְדָם ³⁰ שְׁבַעַת יְמִים וְלִבְשָׁם הַפְּהָנָה תְּחִתָּיו
מִבְּנֵי אֲשֶׁר יָבָא אֶל-אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד לְשִׁרתָה
בְּקָדְשָׁה:

28. those parts . . . to Aaron and his descendants. Because priests had no land or herds, and thus no source of the agricultural products that provided sustenance, part of the sacrificial offerings were to be set aside as food for priests and their families. “Descendants” typically would include female as well as male offspring who were living in the priest’s household, though vv. 31–34 specify that consumption of the sacrificial offerings is limited to the priests themselves.

³¹You shall take the ram of ordination and boil its flesh in the sacred precinct; ³²and Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting. ³³These things shall be eaten only by those for whom expiation was made with them when they were ordained and consecrated; they may not be eaten by a lay person, for they are holy. ³⁴And if any of the flesh of ordination, or any of the bread, is left until morning, you shall put what is left to the fire; it shall not be eaten, for it is holy.

³⁵Thus you shall do to Aaron and his sons, just as I have commanded you. You shall ordain them through seven days, ³⁶and each day you shall prepare a bull as a purgation offering for expiation; you shall purge the altar by performing purification upon it, and you shall anoint it to consecrate it. ³⁷Seven days you shall perform purification for the altar to consecrate it, and the altar shall become most holy; whatever touches the altar shall become consecrated.

³⁸Now this is what you shall offer upon the altar: two yearling lambs each day, regularly. ³⁹You shall offer the one lamb in the morning, and you shall offer the other lamb at twilight. ⁴⁰There shall be a tenth of a measure of choice flour with a quarter of a hin of beaten oil mixed in, and a libation of a quarter hin of wine for one lamb; ⁴¹and you shall offer the other lamb at twilight, repeating with it the meal offering of the morning with its libation—an offering by fire for a pleasing odor to ⁴²יהוה, a regular burnt offering throughout the generations, at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting before ⁴²יהוה.

DIRECTIONS FOR REGULAR SACRIFICE (29:38-42a)

Once the priests have been consecrated, they will be able to perform the obligatory daily offerings, which include meat, cereal, oil, and wine. The basic foodstuffs of the Israelite diet also become foods of ³¹וְאֵת אַיִל הַמְלָאִים תַּקְרֹב וּבְשָׁלַת אֶת־

בָּשָׂר בָּمְקוּם קָדֵשׁ: ³²וְאֶכְלֶל אַהֲרֹן וּבָנָיו
אֶת־בָּשָׂר הַאַיִל וְאֶת־הַלְּחֵם אֲשֶׁר בְּسֶל
פָּתָח אַهֲל מֹועֵד: ³³וְאֶכְלֶוּ אֶת־מִשְׁרָב
כְּפָר בָּהֶם לְמִלְאָאת יְדֵיכֶם לְקַדֵּשׁ אֶת־
וּזְרֻלָּאֵיל בְּיִקְרָב הַמִּזְבֵּחַ: ³⁴וְאֶמְרַתְּךָ
מִבְשָׂר הַמְלָאִים וּמִנְחַת עַד־הַבָּקָר
וְשְׁרֶפֶת אֶת־הַגּוֹטֶר בְּאֵשׁ לֹא יָאֵל כִּי־
קָדֵשׁ הוּא:

³⁵וְעִשֵּׂית לְאַהֲרֹן וּלְבָנָיו בְּכָה בְּכָל אֲשֶׁר־
צִוִּיתִי אֶתְכֶם שְׁבָעַת יְמִים תִּמְלָא יְדֵיכֶם:
³⁶וְפָר חַטֹּאת תַּעֲשֶׂה לַיּוֹם עַל־הַכְּפָרִים
וְחַטֹּאת עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ בְּכָפְרָה עַל־יְהוָה וּמִשְׁחָת
אָתוֹ לְקָדְשׁוֹ: ³⁷שְׁבָעַת יְמִים תַּכְפֵּל עַל־
הַמִּזְבֵּחַ וְקִדְשָׁת אָתוֹ וְהִיא הַמִּזְבֵּחַ קָדֵשׁ

³⁸קָדְשִׁים בְּלַהֲגָגָע בְּמִזְבֵּחַ יְקָדֵשׁ:
וְזֹה אֲשֶׁר תַּعֲשֶׂה עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ בְּשִׁים
בְּנִינִשְׁנָה שָׁנִים לַיּוֹם תִּמְיד: ³⁹אֶת־הַכְּבָשׂ
הַאֶחָד תַּעֲשֶׂה בְּבָקָר וְאֶת הַכְּבָשׂ הַשְׁנִי
תַּעֲשֶׂה בֵּין הַעֲרָבִים: ⁴⁰וְעַשְׂרֵן טָלַת בְּלִיל
בְּשֶׁמֶן בְּתִית רְבָע הַחִין וְגַסְךָ רְבִיעַת הַחִין
יְיַיְן לְכָבֵשׂ הַאֶחָד: ⁴¹וְאֶת הַכְּבָשׂ הַשְׁנִי
תַּעֲשֶׂה בֵּין הַעֲרָבִים בְּמִנְחַת הַבָּקָר
וּבְנִסְכָּה תַּעֲשֶׂה־לָה לְרִיחַ נִיחַח אֲשֶׁר
לִיהְוָה: ⁴²עַלְתָּת תִּמְיוֹן לְדוֹרִינִיכֶם פָּתָח אַהֲל־מוֹעֵד לְפָנֵי יְהוָה

ferred to God, the exalted resident of this resplendent earthly residence.

38. yearling lambs. Animals of this age are fully grown; they are sacrificed at this point, before additional investment in maintaining and feeding them is made. Thus, the more expendable male animal is to be used.

For there I will meet with you, and there I will speak with you,⁴³ and there I will meet with the Israelites, and it shall be sanctified by My Presence.⁴⁴ I will sanctify the Tent of Meeting and the altar, and I will consecrate Aaron and his sons to serve Me as priests.⁴⁵ I will abide among the Israelites, and I will be their God.⁴⁶ And they shall know that I am their God, who brought them out from the land of Egypt that I might abide among them, I their God. יהוה.

30 You shall make an altar for burning incense; make it of acacia wood.² It shall be a cubit

אֲשֶׁר אָוֹעֵד לְכַט שְׁמָה לְדִבֶּר אֱלֹהִים שֵׁם:
43 וְנִعְדָּתִי שְׁמָה לְבָנַי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְנִקְדַּשְׁ
 בְּכָבְדִּי:
44 וְקִדְשָׁתִי אֶת־אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וְאֶת־
 הַמִּזְבֵּחַ וְאֶת־אַחֲרֵן וְאֶת־בְּנֵי אַכְדֵּשׁ לְכָהּ
 לֵי:
45 וְשִׁכְנַתִּי בְּתוֹךְ בָּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְקִיּוּתִי
 לָהֶם לְאֱלֹהִים:
46 וַיַּדְעֵי כִּי אָנִי יְהוָה
 אֱלֹהֵיכֶם אֲשֶׁר הַצָּאתִי אֶתְכֶם מִמָּרָץ
 מִצְרָיִם לְשִׁבְנֵי בְּתֹוכֶם אָנִי יְהוָה
 אֱלֹהֵיכֶם:

פ

וְעַשֵּׂת מִזְבֵּחַ מִקְטָר קָטָרָת עַצִּי שְׁטִים
 תַּעֲשֵׂה אֹתוֹ:² אָמָה אַרְבָּוֹ וְאָמָה רַחֲבוֹ

ל

SUMMATION (29:42b–46)

Once the tent and its furnishings have been made and the priests consecrated, God will consecrate the Tent of Meeting and the whole establishment will become functional.

42. there I will meet with you, and . . . speak with you. God's communication with humans will take place at the shrine. The "you" in this verse is singular, referring to Moses. The location of this meeting place seems to be the courtyard altar, at the entrance to the Tent of Meeting, or in front of the curtain that screens off the Ark (see 30:6, 36).

43. I will meet with the Israelites. The verb "meet" from the previous verse is repeated, making it clear that God will be available to everyone there. The mechanism for the meeting is not clear; it is possible that Moses or Aaron is to be the intermediary.

44. I will sanctify. Here it is God who sanctifies; earlier, Moses is the one to do so (see 29:21, 35–36; 30:29–30). Is Moses the alter ego for God? Or are these variant traditions?

45. I will be their God. This is covenant language, the elliptical half of the statement that the people will be God's, and God will be their deity (see 20:2).

46. Again, covenant language appears in this succinct summary of the entire book of Exodus:

God has brought the people out of Egypt, as recounted in Exodus 1–24; then, the people construct a dwelling for God, who will then "dwell" (25:8; or, as the present translation has it here, "abide") among them, as set forth in Exodus 25–40.

Instructions about the Incense Altar (30:1–10)

Why is the small gilded incense altar discussed here, rather than in Exodus 25 along with the lampstand and offering table that are also supposed to occupy the Holy place? Scholars have offered many answers, yet their explanations of this seemingly anomalous placement remain somewhat speculative. (For the descriptive text later in Exodus that parallels this prescriptive section, see 37:25–28.)

1. altar for burning incense. Incense altars were standard items in shrines in the ancient Near East, just as some mechanism for freshening the air was part of every household. This completes the sensory repertoire of items to be used in the interior space of the Tabernacle: sight, taste, sound, and now smell.

2. a cubit... a cubit... two cubits. The altar is to be about 1½ feet (½ meter) square and 3 feet (1 meter) high.

long and a cubit wide—it shall be square—and two cubits high, its horns of one piece with it.³ Overlay it with pure gold: its top, its sides round about, and its horns; and make a gold molding for it round about.⁴ And make two gold rings for it under its molding; make them on its two side walls, on opposite sides. They shall serve as holders for poles with which to carry it.⁵ Make the poles of acacia wood, and overlay them with gold.

⁶Place it in front of the curtain that is over the Ark of the Pact—in front of the cover that is over the Pact—where I will meet with you.⁷On it Aaron shall burn aromatic incense: he shall burn it every morning when he tends the lamps,⁸and Aaron shall burn it at twilight when he lights the lamps—a regular incense offering before Yahweh throughout the ages.⁹You shall not offer alien incense on it, or a burnt offering or a meal offering; neither shall you pour a libation on it.¹⁰Once a year Aaron shall perform purification upon its horns with blood of the purgation offering of purification; purification shall be performed upon it once a year throughout the ages. It is most holy to Yahweh.

orns. Like the courtyard altar and the many small incense altars found in the Land of Israel by archeologists, the gilded incense altar's horns probably would be at the upper corners, projecting upward (see at 27:2).

6. The incense altar's central placement, directly in front of the textile panel that screens the Ark (and the unseen presence of God above it), will make it the most important of the three items of furniture in the room: incense altar, lampstand, and offering table. (On the latter two items, see at 25:23–40.)

7. aromatic incense. The wafting upward of the smoke of burning incense may represent a primitive metaphor in which God “smells” the incense in the earthly shrine and thereby notices the ربוע יהוה ואפתים קמתו ממענו קרנתיו:

³ צפיתו אותו זהב טהור אתגנו ואתה-קירתיו סכיב ואת-קרנתיו ועשית לו זר
 זהב סכיב: ⁴ ושתי טבעת זהב תעשה-לו-
 מתחת לזר על שתי צלעותיו תעשה על-שני צדיו והיה לבטים לבדים לשאת אותו
 בהמה: ⁵ ועשית את-הבדים עצים שטים
 ועפית אתם זהב:
⁶ ונתקה אותו לפניו הפלכת אשר על-ארן
 העדת לפניו הכפרת אשר על-העדת אשר
 אונד לך שמה: ⁷ והקтир עליו אהרן
 קטרת סמים בבקר בבקר בהיטיבו את-
 הנרת יקתרנה: ⁸ ובעהלה אהרן את-הנרת בין העربים יקתרנה קטרת תמיד
 לפניו יהוה לזריכם: ⁹ לא-תעלז עליו
 קטרת זהה ועלה ומנחה וגסך לא תסכו
 עליו: ¹⁰ וכפר אהרן על-קרנתיו אחת
 בשנה מדם חטאת הכהנים אחת בשנה
 יכפר עליו לזריכם קדש-קדושים הוא ליהוה: פ

officiants and comes to meet them. Perhaps it also represents an attempt to communicate with the unseen Deity via something as ethereal as smoke. At the same time, the smoke conceals God's presence from the officiant, for seeing God can be lethal (see Leviticus 16:12–13). (For another perspective, see at 30:34–38.)

when he tends the lamps. Of the lampstand (menorah); see at 27:20–21.

10. blood of the purgation offering. This substance is to be brought from the courtyard altar, a less holy zone, and applied to the horns of the incense altar. Perhaps this is one reason that the instructions for the incense altar are separated from those prescribing the other items of utmost sanctity.

—Carol Meyers

Another View

CERTAIN BIBLICAL PASSAGES show that women served in some capacity at the sanctuary. The clearest case is that of the women attendants at the Tent of Meeting (38:8; I Samuel 2:22). Yet, in contrast to some other ancient cultures, there is no evidence of priestesses in ancient Israel. Scholars have proposed several theories to explain this absence, but none solves the mystery.

One theory is that women could not be priests because they menstruated, making them periodically ritually unclean. However, menstruation is not considered any more defiling than other causes of ritual impurity (see Leviticus 15). Priests could become ritually impure on occasion, yet once the period of impurity passed, they could go back to their priestly duties after performing the necessary ablutions. If menstrual impurity were the issue, why could women not perform communal religious functions during the rather lengthy times in their lives when they were not menstruating?

A second theory is that the absence of women reflects a division of labor along gender lines and the needs of a pre-modern, agricultural community. Because women were needed to bear and raise children and to perform essential household tasks, they could not be spared for temple service. But then why did women function as priestesses in surrounding cultures?

A third theory suggests that the women were priestesses elsewhere because they served in the sanctuaries of goddesses; but since Israel's official religion did not sanction the worship of goddesses, there was no place in it for priestesses. However, a weakness of this theory is that priestesses in other ancient cultures served in sanctuaries of gods and goddesses alike.

A fourth theory suggests that excluding women from the priesthood meant to distinguish Israel from her neighbors, who often employed women in rituals of a sexual nature. Note, however, that in all the surrounding cultures, female functionaries filled a diverse number of roles, not all of which were sexual in nature. Some women functioned as priestesses; others filled maintenance and support roles or served as singers, dancers, and musicians.

A fifth theory is based on the claim that priestesses in the surrounding cultures did not conduct animal sacrifice—and that Israel followed its neighbors in this respect: women were not included because animal sacrifices constituted a central part of Israelite ritual. However, as Mayer Gruber notes, pictorial illustrations and written references to women slaughtering sacrifices are extant from all over the ancient Near East ("Women in the Cult According to the Priestly Code," 1987, n. 37).

Scholars have proposed several theories, but none solves the mystery.

In evaluating these theories, one should take into account the fact that many of the surrounding cultures where we find priestesses were more economically developed and socially complex than was Israel. The smaller sanctuary that likely existed in ancient Israel—and the simpler procedures there—would have limited the number of functionaries in general. Furthermore, while the Bible legitimizes only male priests (from Aaron's family), Israelite religion was surely more complex than what the text describes. Women probably had more roles in local sanctuaries than the Bible records.

—Hilary Lipka

Post-biblical Interpretations

You shall further instruct the Israelites to bring you clear oil...for kindling lamps regularly (27:20). Reflecting on this commandment about kindling lights, medieval commentators offered two possible interpretations of the phrase ner tamid (literally “light regularly” but understood to mean “eternal lamp”). Rashi suggested it meant “routinely kindled,” while Nachmanides understood it as “continually burning.” In general, the latter interpretation—the image of an eternal, rather than a regularly kindled, light—predominated. In the rabbinic imagination, the eternal lamp of the synagogue recalled the menorah of Temple times, since rabbinic tradition associated the ner tamid with the westernmost or central lamp of the menorah in the Temple (Sifra Emor 13.7). In a poem composed for the occasion of this Torah reading, the Byzantine Jewish liturgical poet Yannai drew a parallel between the synagogue’s eternal lamp and that of the “woman of valor,” whose “lamp never goes out at night” (Proverbs 31:18).

The Rabbis understood the eternal lamp as an important symbol with multiple meanings. First, they associated the light with Torah. For example, BT B'rachot 57a teaches: “If one sees olive oil in a dream, one may hope for the light of the Torah, as it is written, You shall further instruct...” This association derives from Proverbs 6:23, which states: The commandment is a lamp / And the Torah is a light. The song “Torah Orah (The Torah is a Light),” popular in many contemporary synagogues during the Torah services, reflects this symbolism.

The Rabbis frequently represented the eternal lamp as symbolic of the divine presence, or Shechinah. In BT M'nachot 87b, the Rabbis wonder why God would need a light; they then deduce that the eternal lamp commemorated the divine light that had led Israel through the wilderness. The reason the eternal lamp was the “western lamp” was because “the divine presence will never depart from the Western Wall” (Midrash Sh'mot Rabbah 2.2). Over time, the ritual of the Temple lamp was transferred to the home. Thus, Mishnah Shabbat 2:1 offers instructions for kindling Shabbat lights, which 2:6 then characterizes as a specifically female commandment. Yannai read those Mishnaic passages back into Exodus, linking the priestly rules for maintaining the Tabernacle’s lights with women’s command of hadlakat nerot, kindling lamps.

The eternal lamp was also understood in post-biblical Judaism as foreshadowing the light of the messianic age. The lamps described in this parashah were popular in Byzantine and medieval synagogue art. These images, themselves multivalent, may have both memorialized the Temple destroyed in 70 C.E. and also anticipated a time when the Temple lamps would be rekindled. As the poet Yannai wrote of those days to come, “And our light will no longer be quenched / and our flames no longer extinguished / and You shall be our everlasting light.”

Together, soul and spirit represent a perfect union of masculine and feminine.

The medieval mystical compilation Zohar (2:99b) offers a spiritual understanding of the ner tamid when it states that “ner” is an acronym for n'shamah-ruach (“soul-spirit”). Together, soul and spirit represent a perfect union of masculine and feminine. Together, they can bring forth light; but separated, they are powerless and in the dark.

Make sacral vestments for your brother Aaron (28:2). The Rabbis taught that each item of the head priest’s ritual garb possessed symbolic value. The fringed tunic atoned for bloodshed; the robe, for slander; the breeches, for sexual impropriety; the headdress, for arrogance; the frontlet, for brazenness; the sash, for impure thoughts; the breastplate, for neglect of the civil laws; and the ephod, for idolatry (BT Zvachim 88b; Vayikra Rabbah 10.6; Shir HaShirim Rabbah 4.8). According to BT Sotah 36b, it was Joseph's desire to have his name engraved upon the ephod (along with the names of his brothers) that restrained him from succumbing to temptation with Potiphar's wife (Genesis 39).

T'TZAVEH

According to the Zohar, "All the priestly garments were emblematic of supernal mystery" (2:231a). This mystical reading focuses on the layered nature of the vestments, which indicate a balancing of dualities: left and right, soul and body, and male and female.

The primordial human whom God created (Genesis 1)—this passage teaches—was a singular creature, both male and female, but the two halves were joined at the back, facing away from each other. God separated this single entity into two, and "thus they [the first woman and first man] were brought face to face, [and] love was multiplied in the world." Unfortunately, this physical division also led to emotional estrangement, jealousy, and strife. The unity of the ephod and breastplate (which were worn together) recalled the original unity of the first woman and the first man and, by extension, of all humankind.

—Laura Lieber

• • • • •

Contemporary Reflection

MOST YEARS, this Torah portion is read during the week preceding Purim. The connection between the parashah and Purim is not immediately apparent. T'zaveh is filled with exacting details about the assembly of the priestly garments and the ritual role Aaron and his sons are to perform as anointed priests. The book of Esther is a melodramatic tale of threat, intrigue, and ultimate redemption through plot twists and the reluctant heroism of a beautiful queen.

While the plots and purposes of these texts are vastly different, each in its own way, asks us to confront an absence. T'zaveh is the only parashah from the beginning of the book of Exodus until the end of Deuteronomy where the name of Moses does not appear. And Esther is one of only two books of the Bible where the name of God does not appear. These absences are cause for abundant commentary in each individual case, but the relationship between the two texts seems to receive only passing mention.

What insight can this parallel presence of absence convey?

Many commentators speculate as to why Moses' name is absent from parashat T'zaveh. One theory is that the omission is meant to acknowledge the anniversary of his death, which is said to be the seventh of Adar, just one week before Purim. Another theory is that Moses' name is left out as divine admonishment for his jealousy over Aaron's appointment as chief priest. Still others maintain that in his humility and self-effacement, Moses graciously cedes the role to his brother and absents himself from the narrative, so to speak, to make this clear.

Regardless of the reaction that Moses may or may not have experienced when his brother became the head priest instead of him, the narrative suggests that although his name is not mentioned, Moses remains God's agent—the enabler for all that is to happen. This is made evident through an unusual grammatical formulation found in the parashah's opening verses. Elsewhere in Torah, God's commands to Moses are stated in the simple imperative: "instruct" (tzav) or "speak" (dabber). In T'zaveh, however, three instances of an additional pronoun appear, giving extra emphasis to the actor responsible for the actions. Translating the text more literally, the first verse of the parashah (27:20) reads: “And you, yourself shall command the children of Israel.” Shortly thereafter, we read: “And you, bring near to yourself your brother Aaron, with his sons, from among the Israelites, to serve Me as priests” (28:1). The same grammatical form appears two lines later: “You, yourself speak to all who are skillful, whom I have endowed with the gift of skill, to make Aaron’s vestments” (28:3). The 16th-century commentator Moshe Alshekh suggests that this repeated double emphasis is God’s way of saying to Moses, “It’s all really you. You have a greater share in it than anyone. All fulfill themselves through you” (cited in Nehama Leibowitz, Studies in Shemot, 1980, p. 526). Perhaps such language means to tell us that Moses is not absent at all. Rather, his presence is momentarily diminished so that other leaders can step forward to serve the broader needs of the community.

Just as we can see Moses as a behind the scenes mover in the parashah, so too, can we see God as filling a similar role in the Purim narrative. While many interpret the Purim story as an instance when the Jews achieved victory through their own actions—without waiting for divine intercession—the classic rabbinic interpretation is that God was hidden from view, but not absent. In BT Chullin 139b, the Rabbis made this point through a biblical proof text, asking: “Where is Esther indicated in the Torah? In the verse ‘I will surely hide (astir) My face’ (Deuteronomy 31:18).” The Hebrew word astir (“I will hide”) serves as a wordplay on Esther’s name.

We can extend the wordplay even further by considering that the Hebrew word m'gillah shares the same root as the verb “to reveal” (g-l-h). Thus, M'gillat Ester (“Scroll or Book of Esther”) can be read playfully as “revealing the hidden.” God’s presence is revealed through Mordecai’s conviction and Esther’s courage. God’s presence is revealed in the triumph of good over evil, in the flawed but ultimately responsible actions of human beings.

In a typical Purim twist, the biblical text also reinforces the presence of God’s absence by pointing out the consequences of the absence of God’s presence. The story opens with a drunken debauchery hosted by King Ahasuerus, where “he displayed the glory of his kingdom and the richness of his magnificent splendor for many days, for 180 days” (Esther 1:4). The words used to describe the “glory” and “splendor” of his kingdom are the same words, kavod u'tiferet, that are used in T'zaveh to describe the priestly garments (28:2, 40; there translated as “dignity and adornment”). In T'zaveh, the lavish garments are designed to serve and honor God. In Esther, the King’s wealth is evidence of his corruption. The midrash draws an even more powerful connection by claiming that the riches of Ahasuerus’ kingdom were made up of the spoils of the Temple, including the priestly garments themselves (Ester Rabbah 2.1).

T'zaveh and the book of Esther show us how to feel the glory of God's presence.

The Purim message that sometimes gets lost in all of the revelry is that a sense of God’s presence in the world, even if hidden and obscure, gives us the strength and moral purpose to cope with uncertainties and imperfections. Parashat T'zaveh paints a picture of the detail and exacting effort it took for the Israelites to feel God’s presence in their midst. Today, we have no priests and no Temple. The only vestige we have of this experience is the ner tamid, the eternal light, the first thing that God instructs Moses to establish in the opening verses of the parashah. This light has come to symbolize the light of Torah. For us, then, the glory and splendor of God’s presence must be felt through the study of Torah and the constant striving to live in its light.

—Lisa D. Grant

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

from This Tkhnine Is Said before Kedusha

Beyle Hurvits (transl. Devra Kay)

Exodus 27:20–21

Near You, God, there is no night,
And candles are not needed beside You,
For You light up the whole world with Your light.
And the morning speaks of Your mercy,
And the night speaks of Your truth,
And all creatures acknowledge Your wonder.
God, You help us every day.

River of Light

Zelda (transl. unknown)

Exodus 27:20–21

To light candles in all the worlds—that is Shabbat.

To light Shabbat candles is a soul-leap pregnant with potential into a splendid sea, in it the mystery of the fire of sunset.

Lighting the candles transforms my room into a river of light, my heart sets in an emerald waterfall.

Baruch Hu

Amy Blank

Exodus 27:20–21

We look into the chambers of the Unknown along a scimitar of light and say, “Be blessed...”
It is our utmost flight.

Offering

Grace Schulman

Exodus 27:20–21

You said: “Driven from homes in the pogroms, women took only their brass candlebra for Sabbath lights.” You never kindled them, but kept a pair because their reedy limbs promised to dance in flame. Dying, you yearned for light to read by, to see roses burn in a white bowl, to see what life was left.

I give you now June bugs, a sunlit leaf, snowfalls in slanted lines, a great white egret’s scarflike wing flaps, and I laugh with your laughter

at amber lamps that shone by seldom lit
the page, harsh neon signs that winked at night.
I give you metaphor in place of prayer:
May you hear “Let there be light!” where there’s light.

Menorah

Jill Hammer

Exodus 27:20–21

as the high priest rises to light the lamps
the tree of life comes to life with seven branches like the seven days again we are born in the flash of creation we play in the dust of the garden the snakes are our teachers the sun and moon are our bellhops carrying suitcases of light to where we slumber on the grass again we discover one another naked as twigs the flowers opening are our twin siblings the cherubim, still as noon, soak up gold in their wings

we plant seeds of light and they grow into people the tree grows seven souls for each of us we lack nothing

again one crumb of earth reigns over each of us jealousy has not yet been invented the night owl hoots like a ram's horn over the land no one has eaten anyone else yet a bat has not swallowed a gnat a human has not tasted fruit

we stand riveted before the lamp as flame gutters in the wind the high priest steps down eden vanishes
the ritual of sacrifice begins

from Letter to Mala Laaser, 1938

Regina Jonas (transl. Toby Axelrod)

Exodus 29:9

I hope a time will come for all of us in which there will be no more questions on the subject of "woman": for as long as there are questions, something is wrong. But if I must say what drove me as a woman to become a rabbi, two elements come to mind: My belief in the godly calling and my love for people. God has placed abilities and callings in our hearts, without regard to gender. Thus each of us has the duty, whether man or woman, to realize those gifts God has given. If you look at things this way, one takes woman and man for what they are: human beings.

NOTE

Regina Jonas was the first woman to be ordained as a rabbi. She was killed in Theresienstadt in 1944 at age 42.

from Women Who Would Be Rabbis

Pamela S. Nadell

Exodus 29:9

On 3 June 1972, the high school junior of a decade before who had written, "Although I am a girl, I would like very much to study for a rabbinical degree," was ordained rabbi, teacher, and preacher in American Israel. When HUC President Alfred Gottschalk... placed his hands upon her head to confer ordination, [Sally] Priesand's classmates rose to honor the first woman rabbi.... The year 1972 thus came to stand then and forevermore as a benchmark for those crusading for gender equality in Judaism.

NOTE

Although Jonas was the first woman to be ordained, Priesand was the first to be ordained by a seminary.

כִּי תִשְׁאַל ◆ Ki Tisa

EXODUS 30:11–34:35

Tablets, Calf, and Covenant: Mediating the Relationship with God

KARASHAT KI TISA (“when you take”) is the fulcrum of a larger portion of Exodus that is concerned with figuring out how God and Israel will co-exist. The parashah begins with instructions regarding census taking and the Tabernacle furnishings, moves on to the narrative of the Golden Calf, and concludes with a series of covenantal stipulations. While these units do not present a seamless narrative, they do contain a series of thematically related scenes that all negotiate the central issue catalyzed by the Sinai event: How can God and Israel maintain a relationship that takes into account the enormous disparities between the two parties—God, who is utterly holy, and Israel, a “stiffnecked” and back-sliding nation that can achieve holiness but not maintain it?

By the end of the parashah, the text has affirmed three strategies for sustaining the relationship between God and Israel:

1. Tabernacle: The story of the Golden Calf is situated between the instructions for the Tabernacle (25:1–30:10) and the description of its construction (35:1–40:38). This arrangement affirms that the Tabernacle, unlike the calf, is an appropriate response to the people’s needs for a physical location where they can gain access to God.

2. Covenant: The parashah concludes with a reiteration of the covenant, thus providing Israel with laws to help keep its conduct acceptable to God.
3. Moses: While the other two strategies are more permanent, Moses emerges as the most crucial mediating strategy between

How can God and Israel maintain a relationship given their disparities?

God and Israel, the go-between who repeatedly pleads to God on behalf of Israel. Although Moses is resoundingly human, the voices of this parashah conspire to identify Moses more and more closely with God until even his physical being is supernaturally transformed (34:29–35).

The parashah refers to women directly in only a few places. In the account of the construction of the calf, Aaron directs the men to remove the jewelry from their wives, sons, and daughters (32:2). The legal section at the end of the parashah prohibits marriages between Israelite men and indigenous Canaanite women (34:16) and includes a polemic against asherim (34:13)—ritual objects probably related to the worship of the goddess Asherah.

Nevertheless, the parashah engages two issues that are central to feminist theology and theory. In wrestling with the question of how close God can be to humanity, the text raises the issue of divine immanence and transcendence, a central concern of contemporary feminist theology (see Vayak'heil, Another View, p. 538). The parashah also highlights the importance of narrative perspective and point of view. The crucial events of the Exodus and construction of the calf are described differently by different characters. These tellings not only highlight the disparate experiences of the speakers but also serve to articulate multiple perspectives on the text's central concerns.

—Elsie R. Stern

Outline

I. INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE TABERNACLE (30:11–31:18)

- A. Census (30:11–16)
- B. Laver (30:17–21)
- C. Anointing oil (30:22–33)
- D. Incense (30:34–38)
- E. Artisans (31:1–11)
- F. Shabbat observance (31:12–17)
- G. Conclusion (31:18)

II. CRISIS: THE GOLDEN CALF EPISODE (32:1–35)

- A. Construction of the calf (vv. 1–6)
- B. God's anger and Moses' intercession (vv. 7–14)
- C. Moses' anger at the people and Aaron (vv. 15–29)
- D. Moses' intercession and God's response (vv. 30–35)

III. AFTERMATH (33:1–23)

- A. God's refusal to accompany the Israelites (vv. 1–6)
- B. God's concessions and forms of revelation (vv. 7–23)
 - 1. Tent of Meeting (vv. 7–11)
 - 2. Moses' request for revelation and God's response (vv. 12–23)

IV. RESTORATION OF THE COVENANT (34:1–35)

- A. Revelation of God's name (vv. 1–9)
- B. Terms of the Covenant (vv. 10–28)
- C. A visible change in Moses (vv. 29–35)

30:11

יְהוָה spoke to Moses, saying: ¹²When you take a census of the Israelite men according to their army enrollment, each shall pay a ransom for himself on being enrolled, that no plague may come upon them through their being enrolled. ¹³This is what everyone who is entered in the records shall pay: a half-shekel by the sanctuary weight—twenty gerahs to the shekel—a half-shekel as an offering to יְהוָה. ¹⁴Everyone who is entered in the records, from the age of twenty years up, shall give יְהוָה's offering: ¹⁵the rich shall not pay more and the poor shall not pay less than half a shekel when giving יְהוָה's offering as expiation for your persons. ¹⁶You shall take the expiation money from the Israelites and assign it to the service of the Tent of Meeting; it shall serve the Israelites as a reminder before יְהוָה, as expiation for your persons.

ל וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹמֶשֶׁה לֵאמֹר: ¹² כִּי תְשַׁא אֲתִירָאשׁ בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְפִקְדֵיכֶם וְנַתְנוּ אִישׁ בְּפִרְשָׁה נְפִשּׁוֹ לִיהוָה בְּפִקְדֵ אֶתְכֶם וְלֹא־יִהְיוּ בָּהֶם נְגֻף בְּפִקְדֵ אֶתְכֶם: ¹³ זֶה יְתַנְנֵי בְּלָד־הָעָבֵר עַל־הַפְּקָדִים מִחְצִית הַשָּׁקֵל בְּשָׁקֵל הַקָּדֵשׁ עַשְׂרִים גָּרוֹת הַשָּׁקֵל מִחְצִית הַשָּׁקֵל תְּרֹומָה לִיהוָה: ¹⁴ בְּלַעַת־הַפְּקָדִים מִבֵּן עַשְׂרִים שָׁנָה וּמִעַלָּה יִתְعַטֵּן תְּרֹומָת יְהוָה: ¹⁵ הַעֲשֵׂיר לֹא־יַרְבֶּה וְהַדָּלֶל לֹא־יַמְעַט מִמִּחְצִית הַשָּׁקֵל לְתַת אֲתִתְרֹומָת יְהוָה לְכֹפֵר עַל־נְפָשֹׁתיכֶם: ¹⁶ וְלֹקַחְתָּ אֲתִיכְסַף הַכְּפָרִים מֵאַת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וְנַתְתֵת אֹתוֹ עַל־עֲבֹרַת אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וְהִיא לְבָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לִזְכָּרוֹן לִפְנֵי יְהוָה לְכֹפֵר עַל־נְפָשֹׁתיכֶם: פ

Instructions for the Tabernacle (30:11–31:18)

The parashah starts with several supplemental instructions concerning the construction of the Tabernacle, an appendix to the detailed prescriptive texts in the prior two Torah portions.

CENSUS (30:11–16)

Census taking, which was usually a prelude to military conscription or taxation, was considered an inherently dangerous act in the biblical world (see II Samuel 24). Its negative consequences must be pre-empted by paying a half-shekel ransom. Only the men of fighting age (twenty and older) are counted in the census and required to pay the tax, which in this case is to be used for the operation of the Tabernacle; women are not part of Israel's military and not counted in the census. The high concentration of expiation language in this passage (note the four-fold repetition of the root k-p-r [atone, propitiate], translated here as “ransom” or “expiation”) underscores the text's anxiety about the supernatural and societal dangers of the census.

- The justification for prohibiting foreign wives... should be understood in broader terms.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 514

- This means that Bezalel was also Miriam's great-grandson.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 514

- Ki Tisa is about a spectacular wedding feast between God and the people Israel.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 516

- I haven't seen you in a long time God / where've you been keeping yourself?

VOICES ► 518

¹⁷ spoke to Moses, saying: ¹⁸Make a laver of copper and a stand of copper for it, for washing; and place it between the Tent of Meeting and the altar. Put water in it, ¹⁹and let Aaron and his sons wash their hands and feet [in water drawn] from it. ²⁰When they enter the Tent of Meeting they shall wash with water, that they may not die; or when they approach the altar to serve, to turn into smoke an offering by fire to ²¹Yahweh, they shall wash their hands and feet, that they may not die. It shall be a law for all time for them—for him and his offspring—throughout the ages.

²² spoke to Moses, saying: ²³Next take choice spices: five hundred weight of solidified myrrh, half as much—two hundred and fifty—of fragrant cinnamon, two hundred and fifty of aromatic cane, ²⁴five hundred—by the sanctuary weight—of cassia, and a bin of olive oil. ²⁵Make of this a sacred anointing oil, a compound of ingredients expertly blended, to serve as sacred anointing oil. ²⁶With it anoint the Tent of Meeting, the Ark of the Pact, ²⁷the table and all its utensils, the lampstand and all its fittings, the altar of incense, ²⁸the altar of burnt offering and all its utensils, and the laver and its stand. ²⁹Thus you shall consecrate them so that they may be most holy; whatever touches them shall be consecrated. ³⁰You shall also anoint Aaron and his sons, consecrating them to serve Me as priests.

LAVER (30:17–21)

The laver, or basin, is to be placed in the Tabernacle courtyard, between the altar for burnt offerings and the entrance to the Tabernacle itself. It is to be used by the priests to wash their hands and feet, thus ensuring that they approach the altar in a state of ritual purity. According to 38:8, this basin was made from mirrors donated by “the women who performed tasks at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting.”

¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לֵאמֹר: ¹⁸ וְעַשֵּׂת בְּיוֹר נְחַשָּׁת וּבְנֵו נְחַשָּׁת לְרֹחֶצֶת וְנִתְתַּת אֹתוֹ בֵּין־אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וּבֵין הַמִּזְבֵּחַ וְנִתְתַּת שְׁמָה מִים: ¹⁹ וְרֹחֶצֶת אַהֲרֹן וּבָנָיו מִמְּנָנוּ אֶת־יְדֵיכֶם וְאֶת־רְגָלֵיכֶם: ²⁰ בְּבָאָם אֶל־אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וְרֹחֶצֶרְמִים וְלֹא יִמְתֹּטו אָוֹב גַּשְׁתָּם אֶל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ לְשָׁרֶת לְהַקְרֵב אֲשֶׁר לְיְהוָה: ²¹ וְרֹחֶצֶת יְדֵיכֶם וְרְגָלֵיכֶם וְלֹא יִמְתֹּטו וְהִתְהַלֵּל לָהֶם חֲקֻעָוּלִים לוֹ וְלֹזְרָעִוּלִים: ²² פ

²² וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לֵאמֹר: ²³ וְאַתָּה קְחַלֵּךְ בְּשָׂמִים רָאשׁ מִרְדָּרוֹל חַמְשָׁ מָאוֹת וּקְנָמְנִיבָשָׁם מִחְצִיתוֹ חַמְשָׁ מָמוֹת וּמָאתִים וּקְנָהָבָשָׁם חַמְשָׁ מָמוֹת וּמָאתִים: ²⁴ וְקָדְחָה חַמְשָׁ מָאוֹת בְּשֶׁקֶל הַקְדֵּשׁ וּשְׁמַנֵּן זַיְתְּ קַיְן: ²⁵ וְעַשֵּׂת אֹתוֹ שְׁמַנֵּן מִשְׁחַת־קָדֵשׁ רְקֵחַ מִרְקַחַת מִעְשָׂה רְקֵחַ שְׁמַנֵּן מִשְׁחַת קָדֵשׁ יְהִיָּה: ²⁶ וּמִשְׁחַת בָּוּ אֶת־אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וְאֶת אַרְנוֹן הַעֲדרָת: ²⁷ וְאֶת־הַשְּׁלָחָן וְאֶת־בְּלָכְלִיו וְאֶת־הַמְּנֻרָה וְאֶת־בְּלִילָה וְאֶת־מִזְבֵּחַ הַקְרֵבָת: ²⁸ וְאֶת־מִזְבֵּחַ הַעַלְלָה וְאֶת־בְּלָכְלִיו וְאֶת־הַכְּבֵד וְאֶת־בְּנֵן: ²⁹ וְקִדְשָׁת אֶתְכֶם וְהִזְמִין קָדֵשׁ קְדָשִׁים בְּלַהֲנָגָע בָּהֶם יִקְדַּשׁ: ³⁰ וְאֶת־אַהֲרֹן וְאֶת־בָּנָיו תִּמְשַׁח וְקִדְשָׁת אֶתְכֶם לְכָהָן לִי:

20. Tent of Meeting. See at 33:7–11.

ANOINTING OIL (30:22–33)

The oil used to anoint the sacred objects and the priests is to be made of four precious spices—myrrh, cinnamon, cane, and cassia—combined with olive oil. Because the oil conveys holiness to whatever it touches, there are severe penalties for its use on profane objects and laypeople.

³¹And speak to the Israelite people, as follows: This shall be an anointing oil sacred to Me throughout the ages. ³²It must not be rubbed on any person's body, and you must not make anything like it in the same proportions; it is sacred, to be held sacred by you. ³³Whoever compounds its like, or puts any of it on a lay person, shall be cut off from kin.

³⁴And said to Moses: Take the herbs stacte, onycha, and galbanum—these herbs together with pure frankincense; let there be an equal part of each. ³⁵Make them into incense, a compound expertly blended, refined, pure, sacred. ³⁶Beat some of it into powder, and put some before the Pact in the Tent of Meeting, where I will meet with you; it shall be most holy to you. ³⁷But when you make this incense, you must not make any in the same proportions for yourselves; it shall be held by you sacred to יְהוָה. ³⁸Whoever makes any like it, to smell of it, shall be cut off from kin.

31 spoke to Moses: ²See, I have singled out by name Bezalel son of Uri son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah. ³I have endowed him with a divine spirit of skill, ability, and knowledge in every kind of craft; ⁴to make designs for work in gold, silver, and copper, ⁵to cut stones for setting and to carve wood—to work in every kind of craft. ⁶Moreover, I have assigned to him Oholiab son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan; and I have also granted skill to all who are skillful, that they may make everything

³¹ וְאֶל-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל תֹּרֶבֶר לְאמֹר שֶׁמֶן מְשֻׁחַת-קָדֵשׁ יְהוָה זֶה לִי לְדָرְתֵיכֶם: ³² עַל-בָּשָׂר אֲדָم לֹא יִסְךְ וּבְמִתְכְּנָתוֹ לֹא תַעֲשֶׂו בָּמָהוּ קָדֵשׁ הוּא קָדֵשׁ יְהוָה לְכֶם: ³³ אִישׁ אֲשֶׁר יַרְקַח בָּמָהוּ וְאֲשֶׁר יַתֵּן בָּמָהוּ עַל-זָרַב וּגְכְרַת מְעַמְּפָיו: ס ³⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה קְח־לְךָ סְפִים גַּטְף וְשְׁתָלָת וְחַלְבָנָה סְפִים וְלִבְנָה זֶבֶח בְּרֵד בְּדֵד יְהוָה: ³⁵ וְעַשְׂתָּה אַתָּה קָטְרָת רְקָח מְעֵשָׂה רְוָקָח מִמְלָח טְהוֹר קָדֵשׁ: ³⁶ וְשִׁחְקַת מִמְנָה הַדָּק וְנִתְתַּחַת מִמְנָה לִפְנֵי הַעֲדָת בְּאַهֲל מוֹעֵד אֲשֶׁר אָנוּעַד לְכָךְ שְׁפָה קָדֵשׁ קָדְשִׁים תְּהִיא לְכֶם: ³⁷ וְהַקְטָרָת אֲשֶׁר תַּעֲשֶׂו בְּמִתְכְּנָתוֹ לֹא תַהֲרִיחַ לְכֶם קָדֵשׁ תְּהִיא לְכָךְ לִיהְוָה: ³⁸ אִישׁ אֲשֶׁר יַרְקַח בָּה וּגְכְרַת מְעַמְּפָיו: ס

לָא וַיֹּדַבֵּר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה לְאמֹר: ² רָאָה קָרָאתִי בְשָׁם בְּצַלָּל בְּנָאוֹרִי בְּנִיחּוֹר לִמְطָה יְהוָה: ³ וְאַמְלָא אָתוֹ רָוחַ אֱלֹהִים בְּחַכְמָה וּבְתִבוֹנָה וּבְרָעָת וּבְכָל־מְלָאכָה: ⁴ לְחַשֵּׁב מִחְשָׁבָת לְעֹשָׂות בְּזָהָב וּבְכֶסֶף וּבְנָזְחָשָׁת: ⁵ וּבְחַרְשָׁת אָבִן לְמִלְאָת הַנֶּהָרֶת עַז לְעֹשָׂות בְּכָל־מְלָאכָה: ⁶ וְאַנְּיִ נְהַנְּתִי אֶתְךָ אֶתְךָ אֶתְךָ בְּנֵר־אַחִיךְ מְלָאכָה לִמְטָה־דָּן וּבְלֵב פְּלִ-חַכְמַ-לְבָב נְתִתִּי חַכְמָה

INCENSE (30:34–38)

The incense contains three precious spices combined with frankincense. As v. 36 indicates, the incense created a cloud of smoke that was perceived as the manifestation or sign of God's presence. (See also at 30:7.)

ARTISANS (31:1–11)

This passage identifies the artisans—Bezalel and Oholiab—who are to make the Tabernacle and its furnishings. Their tasks will include directing and supervising the involvement of other artisans, including women (see 35:25–26; 36:1–4). The passage then gives a summary list of the components of the Tabernacle.

3. divine spirit. This phrase (ruach elohim) also appears in Genesis 1:2. Its use here strengthens the connection between the Tabernacle and the cosmos, and likewise between the creative work of God and of the artisans (see also at Exodus 40).

that I have commanded you:⁷ the Tent of Meeting, the Ark for the Pact and the cover upon it, and all the furnishings of the Tent;⁸ the table and its utensils, the pure lampstand and all its fittings, and the altar of incense;⁹ the altar of burnt offering and all its utensils, and the laver and its stand;¹⁰ the service vestments, the sacral vestments of Aaron the priest and the vestments of his sons, for their service as priests;¹¹ as well as the anointing oil and the aromatic incense for the sanctuary. Just as I have commanded you, they shall do.

¹²And said to Moses: ¹³Speak to the Israelite people and say: Nevertheless, you must keep My sabbaths, for this is a sign between Me and you throughout the ages, that you may know that I יהוה have consecrated you. ¹⁴You shall keep the sabbath, for it is holy for you. One who profanes it shall be put to death: whoever does work on it, that person shall be cut off from among kin. ¹⁵Six days may work be done, but on the seventh day there shall be a sabbath of complete rest, holy to יהוה; whoever does work on the sabbath day shall be put to death. ¹⁶The Israelite people shall keep the sabbath, observing the sabbath throughout the ages as a covenant for all time: ¹⁷it shall be a sign for all time between Me and the people of Israel. For in six days made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day [God] ceased from work and was refreshed.

וְעַשׂ אֶת בְּלָאשֶׁר צוִיתֶךָ: ⁷ אֶת אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וְאֶת־הָאָרֶן לְעֹדָת וְאֶת־הַכְּפָרָה אֲשֶׁר עַלְיוֹ וְאֶת בְּלָבְלִי הַאֲהָל: ⁸ וְאֶת־הַשְׁלֹחַן וְאֶת־בְּלִי וְאֶת־הַמִּנְחָה הַטְהָרָה וְאֶת־בְּלִי־בְּלִיה וְאֶת מִזְבֵּחַ הַקְטָרָת: ⁹ וְאֶת־מִזְבֵּחַ הַעֲלָה וְאֶת־בְּלִי־בְּלִי וְאֶת־הַפִּירּוֹ וְאֶת־כְּפָנוֹ: ¹⁰ וְאֶת־בְּגִדי הַשְּׂרֵד וְאֶת־בְּגִדי הַקָּדְשָׁה לְאַהֲרֹן הַכֹּהֵן וְאֶת־בְּגִדי בְּנֵיו לְכָהֵן: ¹¹ וְאֶת שְׁמַן הַמְשִׁחָה וְאֶת־קָטָרָת הַסְּמִים לְקָדֵש בְּכָל אֲשֶׁר־צִוִיתֶךָ יֻשְׁעוֹ: פ
וַיֹאמֶר יהָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה לֵאמֹר: ¹³ וְאַתָּה דִבֶר אֶל־בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לֵאמֹר אָרֶךְ אַתָּה שְׁבָתוּנִי תְשִׁמְרוּ כִּי אָזְנוּ לְהַעֲלָתָם לְדֹרְתֵיכֶם לְנֶעֱלָתָם כִּי אַנְיִ יהָה מַקְדְשָׁכֶם: ¹⁴ וְשִׁמְרָתֶם אֶת־הַשְׁבָתָת כִּי קָדֵשׁ הוּא לְכֶם מְחֻלָּלָה מוֹת יוֹמָת בְּפָלָדָה כִּי מְלָאכָה וְבַיּוֹם הַשְׁבָתָה הַגְּנִיפָשׁ הַהּוּא מִקְרָב עַמִּיךָ: ¹⁵ שְׁשַׁת יְמִים יַעֲשֶׂה מְלָאכָה וְבַיּוֹם הַשְׁבָתָה לְיהָה בְּלָדָה כִּי מְלָאכָה וְבַיּוֹם הַשְׁבָתָה שְׁבַת שְׁבַתּוֹן קָדֵשׁ לְיהָה בְּלָדָה כִּי מְלָאכָה וְבַיּוֹם הַשְׁבָתָה שְׁבַת שְׁבַת בְּרִית מוֹת יוֹמָת: ¹⁶ וְשִׁמְרָוּ בְנֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת־הַשְׁבָתָה לְעֹשָׂות אֶת־הַשְׁבָתָה לְדֹרְתֵיכֶם בְּרִית עֽוֹלָם: ¹⁷ בְּנִי וּבְנֵי בְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אָזְנוּ לְעָלָם בְּיִשְׁשָׁת יְמִים עָשָׂה יהָה אֶת־הַשְׁמִים וְאֶת־הָאָרֶץ וּבַיּוֹם הַשְׁבִּיעָה שְׁבָתָה וַיַּנְפֵשׁ: ס

SHABBAT OBSERVANCE (31:12-17)

The placement of the Shabbat commandment here connects the realms of holy space (the Tabernacle) and of holy time (Shabbat). A central concern of the Torah's priestly theology is the maintenance of these holy realms.

^{14.} person. See at Leviticus 2:1.

kin. Heb. ammim; see at Genesis 25:8.

^{16-17.} In rabbinic Judaism, these verses form the text of the V'shamru ("[they] shall keep") prayer, which is recited as part of the Shabbat liturgy and as a prelude to Kiddush, the blessing of the wine, on Shabbat morning.

¹⁸Upon finishing speaking with him on Mount Sinai, [God] gave Moses the two tablets of the Pact, stone tablets inscribed with the finger of God.

32 When the people saw that Moses was so long in coming down from the mountain, the people gathered against Aaron and said to him,

וַיִּתְּנֵן אֱלֹהִים בְּכָלְתוֹ לְדַבָּר אֲתֶךָ בָּהָר סִינְיָה שְׁנִי לְחֵזֶת הַעֲדָת לְחֵזֶת אֲבָנִים פְּתֻבִים בְּאַצְבֵּעַ אֶלְחִים:

לְבָהָר וַיַּרְא דָּעַם כִּי־בָשָׂעֵשׂ מֹשֶׁה לְרֹאשׁ מִנְחָה וַיַּקְרַב הַלְּבָב עַל־אַהֲרֹן וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹן

CONCLUSION (31:18)

18. inscribed with the finger of God. This image fits with the pervasive anthropomorphic depiction of God in this parashah. Functionally speaking, it portrays the tablets as concrete products and extensions of God's will.

Crisis: The Golden Calf Episode (32:1–35)

The Golden Calf episode reveals the challenge of maintaining a relationship between “stiff-necked” Israel and its holy God. For the Rabbis, this incident functions as a “fall” story (akin to how the Garden of Eden story in Genesis 3 functions for Christian and some later Jewish interpreters), meaning that this episode represents a rupture in the intimate connection between God and Israel and necessitates a more distant and mediated relationship.

The placement of this episode highlights the ironic link between the calf and the Tabernacle. In both instances, the people are invited to donate gold for the construction and do so willingly. The gold is then used to manufacture the ritual object and, upon its completion, the people offer sacrifices and celebrate. These similarities set into sharp relief the crucial difference between the Tabernacle, which is sanctioned by God, and the calf, which is condemned as a fatally inappropriate ritual object.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE CALF (32:1–6)

The word eigel (commonly translated as “calf”) refers to a young bull or ox (see Psalm 106:19–20), both of which were symbols of power and virility and associated with the God of Israel and other gods of the ancient Near East. According to I Kings 12:25–33, King Jeroboam—the first king of the northern kingdom of Israel—erected two golden calves, one at Bethel and one at Dan. Historically, these sacred objects probably functioned like the ark and cherubim in the Jerusalem Temple: as thrones or symbols for the God of Israel who was worshipped at those shrines (see at 25:17–21). However, in the biblical text, which reflects a Judean perspective and a later centralization of worship, the calves are condemned as inappropriate and idolatrous.

This biblical polemic provides a context for the Golden Calf episode and demonstrates the complexity of the question of “idolatry.” The Bible and later rabbinic texts imagine that visual representations of God are “idols” that are worshipped as gods by their devotees. However, in most ancient and modern cases, images of gods are understood as symbols or accessories of the god, forms of mediation that help worshippers connect to the deity. Within the parashah, the calf shares many features of the Tabernacle: both are associated with the God of Israel and are constructed out of freewill offerings of the Israelites. However, the calf is condemned while the Tabernacle is legitimated. The overlap between these two forms of mediation demonstrates "Come, make us a god who shall go before us, for that fellow Moses—the envoy who brought us from the land of Egypt—we do not know what has happened to him."² Aaron said to them, "[You men,] take off the gold rings that are on the ears of your wives, your sons, and your daughters, and bring them to me."³ And all the people took off the gold rings that were in their ears and brought them to Aaron.⁴ This he took from them and cast in a mold, and made it into a molten calf. And they exclaimed, "This is your god, O Israel, who brought you out of the land of Egypt!"⁵ When Aaron saw this, he built an altar before it; and Aaron announced: "Tomorrow shall be a festival of Yahweh!"⁶ Early next day, the people offered up burnt offerings and brought sacrifices of well-being; they sat down to eat and drink, and then rose to dance.

how complex the questions of divine mediation and religious representation are.

1. "make us a god." The word elohim (translated here as "god") is a plural noun (literally "gods") that can refer to either a single deity or more than one god. The God of Israel is often called elohim, but with singular verb forms used with that divine name. In this verse, the noun is paired with a plural verb, which might imply that the Israelites ask Aaron to make them more than one god. Or, as this translation suggests, the plural verb is used to signal that the Israelites are demanding a god, rather than the God.

"that fellow Moses... who brought us from the land of Egypt." Elsewhere in the Torah, the identification of God as the agent of the Exodus is central to God's claim to authority over Israel (as in 20:2). But here Moses is identified as the one responsible for the Exodus.

2. "take off the gold rings that are on the ears of your wives, your sons, and your daughters." Aaron directs the men to take jewelry off the members of their household under their control.

3. all the people took off. This statement im-

קָוָם | עֲשֵׂה־לְנוּ אֱלֹהִים אֲשֶׁר יַלְכֹּו לִפְנֵינוּ
בִּירּוּת | מֹשֶׁה הָאִישׁ אֲשֶׁר הָעָלָנוּ מִאֶרֶץ
מִצְרַיִם לֹא יַדְעָנוּ מִה־הִיא
אֱלֹהִים אֶחָד פְּרָקוּ נָזְמִינְתָּה אֲשֶׁר בָּאָנוּ
נְשִׁיכָם בְּנֵיכָם וּבְנָתִיכָם וְהַבְיאוּ אֵלֵינוּ
וַיַּתְפִּרְקּוּ כָּל־הָעָם אֶת־גִּנְזָרֵי הַזָּהָב אֲשֶׁר
בָּאָזְנוֹתֵיכֶם וַיִּבְיאוּ אֶל־אֶחָד: ⁴ וַיַּקְרֵחַ מִידָּם
וַיַּעֲצֵר אֹתוֹ בָּחֶרֶת וַיַּעֲשֵׂהוּ עֲגָל מִסְכָּה
וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֱלֹהָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲשֶׁר הַעֲלוֹת
מִאֶרֶץ מִצְרַיִם: ⁵ וַיַּרְא אֶחָד וַיַּבְןֵן מִזְבֵּחַ
לִפְנֵינוּ וַיַּקְרֵא אֶחָד וַיֹּאמֶר תָּגֵל לִיהְוָה
מַחְרָה: ⁶ וַיַּשְׁבִּימֹו מִמְּחֻרָת וַיַּעֲלוּ עַלְתָּה
וַיַּגְשׂוּ שְׁלָמִים וַיַּשְׁבַּב הָעָם לְאַכְלָה וְשָׁתָּה וַיַּקְמוּ לַצְּחָק: ^פ

plicates everyone, not only the men, in the construction of the calf.

4. And they exclaimed, "This is your god... who brought you out of the land of Egypt!" While the ambiguity of the word elohim (see at v. 1) raises the possibility that the Israelites sought to worship another deity, the phrase "who brought you out of the land of Egypt" and Aaron's explicit mention of "Yahweh" in v. 5 suggest that the people craved a visible symbol of God's presence. Nevertheless, by attributing these words to the Israelites, the authors of the text portray the people as idolators, who identify and worship the calf as a god.

5. Aaron's response is complex. By constructing an altar, he facilitates the inappropriate, idolatrous understanding of the calf. Yet by declaring a "festival of Yahweh," he redirects the Israelites' attention to the God of Israel.

6. Of the three activities mentioned in this verse, sacrificial offerings and ritual feasting are part of authorized Israelite worship. However, dancing (literally "laughing") is non-normative and perhaps signals the deviant nature of this impromptu festival.

⁷ spoke to Moses, “Hurry down, for your people, whom you brought out of the land of Egypt, have acted basely.⁸ They have been quick to turn aside from the way that I enjoined upon them. They have made themselves a molten calf and bowed low to it and sacrificed to it, saying: ‘This is your god, O Israel, who brought you out of the land of Egypt!’”

⁹ further said to Moses, “I see that this is a stiffnecked people.¹⁰ Now, let Me be, that My anger may blaze forth against them and that I may destroy them, and make of you a great nation.”

¹¹ But Moses implored his God, saying, “Let not Your anger, יהוה, blaze forth against Your people, whom You delivered from the land of Egypt with great power and with a mighty hand.¹² Let not the Egyptians say, ‘It was with evil intent that he delivered them, only to kill them off in the mountains and annihilate them from the face of the earth.’ Turn from Your blazing anger, and renounce the plan to punish Your people.¹³ Remember Your servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, how You swore to them by Your Self and said to them:

GOD'S ANGER AND
MOSES' INTERCESSION (32:7–14)

While the Golden Calf may be defensible as a legitimate, non-idolatrous religious object from the point of view of ancient Israelite history and theology (see above), the Torah unambiguously identifies its creation as transgressive. This is clear from the fury expressed by both God and Moses.

8. “They have made themselves a molten calf.”

This verse deflects blame for the calf from Aaron to the people. Throughout the parashah, the degree of blame attributed to Aaron fluctuates. In vv. 2–5, Aaron is portrayed as responsible for creating the calf. Yet here and in vv. 22–24, the people are identified as the creators of the calf. Some scholars have seen this contradiction as evidence for two earlier versions of this story, one pro-Aaron and the other

⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֲלֵي-מֹשֶׁה לְקָרְבָּן בַּי שְׁחַת עַמְּךָ אֲשֶׁר הָעַלְיתָ מִאֶרְצָן מִצְרָיִם: ⁸ סְרוּ מִהָּר מִן-הַדָּרָר אֲשֶׁר צִוִּיתֶם עַשׂוּ לָהֶם עַגֵּל מִסְכָּה וִישְׁתְּחֻווּלָו וִיזְבְּחוּלָו וַיֹּאמְרוּ אֱלֹהָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲשֶׁר הָעָלוּךְ מִאֶרְצָן מִצְרָיִם:

⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֲלֵי-מֹשֶׁה רְאֵיתִי אֶת-הָעָם הַזֶּה וְהַגֵּה עַמְּקָשָׁה-עַרְף הַזֶּה: ¹⁰ וַיַּעֲתַה הַנִּיחָה לִי וַיַּחֲרַב אֶפְרַיִם בָּהֶם וְאֶכְלָם וְעָשָׂה אֶת-פְּנֵי אֱלֹהֵיכֶם לְגֹוי גָּדוֹל: ¹¹ וַיַּחֲלַל מֹשֶׁה אֶת-פְּנֵי יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵיכֶם וַיֹּאמֶר לְמַה יִחְרַב יְהוָה אֶפְרַיִם בָּעַמְּךָ אֲשֶׁר הָזְאת מִאֶרְץ מִצְרָיִם בְּכָח גָּדוֹל וּבְכִיד חִזְקָה: ¹² לְמַה יֹּאמְרוּ מִצְרָיִם אֶתְּנָתַן לְאָמֶר בְּרָעָה הַזֶּה אֶתְּנָתַן לְחַרְגָּן אֶתְּנָתַן לְאָלָלָתָם מִעַל פִּנְיוֹן הָאָדָמָה שׁוֹב מִחְרָזָן אֶתְּנָתַן וְהַנְּחָת עַל-הָרָעָה לְעַמְּךָ: ¹³ זָכָר לְאָבָרָהָם לִיצְחָק וּלְיִשְׂרָאֵל עַבְרִי אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּעַת לָהֶם בָּהֶם וַתִּדְבֵּר אֱלֹהֶם אֶרְבָּה anti-Aaron. It is also possible to read the contradictions as a reflection of the difficulty involved in definitively identifying agency and responsibility.

9. “stiffnecked people.” This epithet suggests that the calf is not a sign of Israelite fickleness, but rather of their stubbornness and their inability to adapt to the covenantal relationship with God that was established at Sinai (Avivah Gottlieb Zornberg, The Particulars of Rapture, 2001, pp. 408–9).

11–14. But Moses implored. Moses uses two rhetorical strategies to successfully dissuade God from destroying the people. First, he argues that God’s reputation will be sullied if God annihilates the very people that God rescued from Egypt (vv. 11–12). Then, he reminds God of the covenant with the ancestors (v. 13). The success of Moses’ intervention is underscored by the reference to Israel as God’s people in v. 14.

I will make your offspring as numerous as the stars of heaven, and I will give to your offspring this whole land of which I spoke, to possess forever.”¹⁴ And renounced the punishment planned for God’s people.

¹⁵ Thereupon Moses turned and went down from the mountain bearing the two tablets of the Pact, tablets inscribed on both their surfaces: they were inscribed on the one side and on the other.

¹⁶ The tablets were God’s work, and the writing was God’s writing, incised upon the tablets. ¹⁷ When Joshua heard the sound of the people in its boisterousness, he said to Moses, “There is a cry of war in the camp.” ¹⁸ But he answered,

“It is not the sound of the tune of triumph,
Or the sound of the tune of defeat;
It is the sound of song that I hear!”

¹⁹ As soon as Moses came near the camp and saw the calf and the dancing, he became enraged; and he hurled the tablets from his hands and shattered them at the foot of the mountain. ²⁰ He took the calf that they had made and burned it; he ground it to powder and strewed it upon the water and so made the Israelites drink it.

²¹ Moses said to Aaron, “What did this people do to you that you have brought such great sin

MOSES’ ANGER AT THE PEOPLE AND AARON (32:15–29)

Moses descends from the mountain with two tablets—which he furiously hurls to the ground. The detailed description of the tablets and their identification as “God’s work” (v. 16) highlight their sacrality and underscore the drama of their destruction.

19. dancing. The term here for dancing (m’cholot) probably refers to women’s circle dancing rather than men’s leaping dances, indicating women’s participation in the transgressive acts. In all eight instances where the Bible specifies the performers of this activity, they are women (Exodus

אֶת־זָרַעֲכֶם בְּכֹכְבֵי הַשְׁמִינִים וּבְלְהָאָרֶץ
הַזֹּאת אֲשֶׁר אָמַרְתִּי אֶתְנֵן לָזְרָעָכֶם וּנְחַלּוּ
לְעַלְמֵם:¹⁴ וַיַּנְחַם יְהוָה עַל־הָרָעָה אֲשֶׁר
דָּבָר לְעַשׂוֹת לְעַמּוֹ: פ
¹⁵ וַיַּפְּנֵן וַיַּרְדֵּךְ מִשְׁלֵחָה מִן־הָהָר וַיַּשְׁגַּן לְחוֹתָם
הַעֲדָת בְּיָדוֹ לְחַתְּבִים מִשְׁנֵי עֲבָרִים
מִזְהָה וּמִזְהָה הַם פְּתֻבִים: ¹⁶ וְהַלְלוֹת מִעֲשָׂה
אֱלֹהִים הַמָּה וְהַמְּכַתֵּב מִכְתֵּב אֱלֹהִים הַזָּא
חֲרוּתָה עַל־הַלְלוֹת:¹⁷ וַיַּשְׁמַע יְהוָשָׁע אֶת־
קוֹל הָעָם בְּרָעָה וַיַּאֲמַל אֶל־מֹשֶׁה קוֹל
מִלְחָמָה בְּמִחְנָה:¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר
אֵין קוֹל עֲנוֹת גִּבְוָרָה
וְאֵין קוֹל עֲנוֹת חֲלוֹשָׁה
קוֹל עֲנוֹת אָנְכִי שָׁמַע:
¹⁹ וַיַּרְא בְּאֲשֶׁר קָרְבָּא לְהַמְחָנָה וַיַּרְא אֶת־
הָעָגָל וּמִחְלָת וַיַּחֲרַט־אָף מֹשֶׁה וַיַּשְׁלַח מִידָּר
מִידָּיו אֶת־הַלְלוֹת וַיַּשְׁבַּר אֶתְמָת תְּחַת הָהָר:
²⁰ וַיַּקְרַח אֶת־הָעָגָל אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂו וַיַּשְׁרַף בְּאַש
וַיַּתְּחַנֵּן עַד אֲשֶׂר־דַּק וַיַּזְרַע עַל־פָּנָי הַמִּים
וַיַּשְׁק אֶת־בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל:
²¹ וַיֹּאמֶר מִשְׁה אֶל־אַהֲרֹן מִה־עָשָׂה לְךָ
הָעָם הַזֶּה כִּי־הָבָאת עַלְיוֹ חַטָּאת גְּדוֹלָה:

15:20; Judges 11:34, 21:21, 23; I Samuel 18:6, 21:12; Jeremiah 31:4, 13).

20. He took the calf...and so made the Israelites drink it. This punishment resembles the ordeal of the suspected adulteress in Numbers 5:11–31, in which the woman suspected of adultery is forced to swallow a potion made with ink from a ritual scroll and with dirt from the Tabernacle floor. While it is doubtful that there is a historical connection between the two cases, the similarities between these texts form the basis of midrashic comments that understand the construction of the Golden Calf to be a form of theological adultery (see further the Post-biblical Interpretations at 32:19, p. 515).

upon them?”²² Aaron said, “Let not my lord be enraged. You know that this people is bent on evil.

²³ They said to me, ‘Make us a god to lead us; for that fellow Moses—the envoy who brought us from the land of Egypt—we do not know what has happened to him.’²⁴ So I said to them, ‘Whoever has gold, take it off!’ They gave it to me and I hurled it into the fire and out came this calf!’

²⁵ Moses saw that the people were out of control—since Aaron had let them get out of control—so that they were a menace to any who might oppose them.²⁶ Moses stood up in the gate of the camp and said, “Whoever is for יהוה, come here!” And all the men of Levi rallied to him.²⁷ He said to them, “Thus says יהוה, the God of Israel: Each of you put sword on thigh, go back and forth from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay sibling, neighbor, and kin.”²⁸ The men of Levi did as Moses had bidden; and some three thousand of the people fell that day.²⁹ And Moses said, “Dedicate yourselves to this day—for each of you has been against blood relations—that [God] may bestow a blessing upon you today.”

22–24. Aaron said. Aaron shifts the blame away from himself by identifying Moses’ prolonged absence as the root of the problem and limiting his involvement to the hurling of the gold into the fire (compare v. 8). Ironically, in his attempt to absolve himself, Aaron ascribes supernatural power to the calf.

27. “Each of you put sword on thigh.” The violence perpetrated by the Levites—which contemporary readers may find disturbing—resonates interestingly with the violence perpetrated by their ancestor Levi following the violation of his sister Dinah (Genesis 34). There, Levi and his brother Simeon massacre the residents of Shechem. In Genesis 49:5–7, Levi is also portrayed as violent. While the earlier acts of violence are condemned, this one is praised. (See also Vayikra, Contemporary Reflection, p. 589.)

29. “Dedicate yourselves.” Literally, “fill your hands”—a term that is usually used for the ordination of priests. According to some interpreters, this verse means that by killing their kin, the Levites consecrated themselves to God and earned God’s blessing. Others conclude the opposite: because of their actions, the Levites must dedicate themselves in atonement in order to receive God’s blessing. Note that the massacre does not suffice as punishment or atonement for the people’s transgression, for Moses still needs to beg for the people’s forgiveness and God still sends a plague as punishment (see 32:30–35).

²² וַיֹּאמֶר אַהֲרֹן אֱלֹהִים אָף אַדְנֵי אַתָּה יְדֻעַת אֶת-הָעָם כִּי בָּרוּךְ הוּא: ²³ וַיֹּאמֶר לֵי עֲשֵׂה-לְنִנוּ אֱלֹהִים אֲשֶׁר יָלְכוּ לִפְנֵינוּ בְּיַזָּה וּמֹשֶׁה הַאֲישׁ אֲשֶׁר הָעַלְנוּ מִאֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם לֹא יָדַעַנוּ מִה-הִיא לֹז: ²⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר לָהֶם לִמְיוֹן זָהָב הַתְּפִירְקֹו וַיִּתְנוּלְיִי וַיַּאֲשַׁלְבָהוּ בָּאַשׁ וַיֵּצֵא הַעֲגֵל הַזֶּה:

²⁵ וַיֹּירַא מֹשֶׁה אֶת-הָעָם כִּי בָּרוּךְ הוּא בַּיּוֹם פְּרֻעָה אַהֲרֹן לְשִׁמְצָה בְּקִמְיָהּ: ²⁶ וַיַּעֲמֹד מִשְׁלָח בְּשַׁעַר הַמִּחְנָה וַיֹּאמֶר מַיִם לִיהְוָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹן בְּלִבְנֵי לֵי: ²⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר לָהֶם כִּי-אָמַר יהָה אֱלֹהֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל שִׁמְמוֹ אִישׁ-חַרְבָּבוֹ עַל-יָרְכָּבוֹ עַבְרוֹ וְשׁוּבוּ מִשְׁעָר לְשַׁעַר בְּמִחְנָה וְהִרְגְּוּ אִישׁ-אֶת-אֲחֵיכֶם וְאִישׁ אֶת-דָּעָהוּ וְאִישׁ אֶת-קָרְבָּוּ: ²⁸ וַיַּעֲשׂוּ בְנֵי לְוִי בְּדָבָר מֹשֶׁה וַיַּפְלֵל מִן-הָעָם בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא כְּשַׁלְשָׁת אַלְפִי אִישׁ: ²⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה מַלְאָוֹ יְרַכְּבָם הַיּוֹם לִיהְוָה כִּי אִישׁ בְּבָנָו וּבָאֶחָיו וְלִתְתַּחַת עַלְיָכֶם הַיּוֹם בָּרְכָה:

“blood relations.” [Literally, “his son and his brother.”] Grammatically speaking, the reference is indefinite and nonspecific; hence the language does not specify social gender. The present translation presumes that the expression refers to fellow Israelite victims, women or men, to whom the Levites had felt personal devotion. —Ed.]

³⁰The next day Moses said to the people, “You have been guilty of a great sin. Yet I will now go up to יְהוָה; perhaps I may win forgiveness for your sin.” ³¹Moses went back to יְהוָה and said, “Alas, this people is guilty of a great sin in making for themselves a god of gold.” ³²Now, if You will forgive their sin [well and good]; but if not, erase me from the record which You have written!” ³³But said to Moses, “Only one who has sinned against Me will I erase from My record.” ³⁴Go now, lead the people where I told you. See, My angel shall go before you. But when I make an accounting, I will bring them to account for their sins.”

³⁵Then יְהוָה sent a plague upon the people, for what they did with the calf that Aaron made.

33 Then said to Moses, “Set out from here, you and the people that you have brought up from the land of Egypt, to the land of which I swore to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, saying, ‘To your offspring will I give it’”—²I will send an angel before you, and I will drive out the Canaanites, the Amorites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites—³a land flowing with milk and honey. But I will not go in your midst, since you are a stiffnecked people, lest I destroy you on the way.”

³⁰ וַיֹּהִי מִמְחָרֶת וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל-הָעָם אַתֶּם חַטָּאתֶם חַטָּאתָה גְּדוֹלָה וְעַתָּה אַעֲלֵה אֶל-יְהוָה אֲוָלִי אַכְפָּרָה בְּعֵד חַטָּאתֵיכֶם: ³¹ וַיֵּשֶׁב מֹשֶׁה אֶל-יְהוָה וַיֹּאמֶר אֶזְעָן חַטָּאת הָעָם הַזֶּה חַטָּאתָה גְּדוֹלָה וַיַּעֲשֶׂוּ לְהָם אֶלְهִי זֶהב: ³² וְעַתָּה אַסְמְתָשָׁא חַטָּאתֶם וְאַמְּאִין מְחַנִּי נָא מִסְפָּרֶךָ אֲשֶׁר פָּתַבְתָּ: ³³ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה מַיִּד אֲשֶׁר חַטָּאתְלִי אַמְּחָנוּ מִסְפָּרִי: ³⁴ וְעַתָּה לֹךְ וְנַחַת אֶת-הָעָם אֶל-אֲשֶׁר-דִּבְרָתִי לְךָ הַנֵּה מַלְאָכִי יַלְךָ לִפְנֵיךְ וּבַיּוֹם פְּקֻדִּי וּפְקֻדָּתִי עַל-הָעָם חַטָּאתֶם: ³⁵ וַיֹּגֶף יְהוָה אֶת-הָעָם עַל-אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂו אֶת-הָעָלָג אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה אֶחָרֶن: ס

לֹג וַיֹּדֶבֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה לֵךְ עַלְהָ מִזְבֵּחַ אַתָּה וְהָעָם אֲשֶׁר הַעֲלִית מִארֶץ מִצְרָיִם אֶל-הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁבַּעְתִּי לְאָבָרָהּ לִיצְחָק וּלְיעַקְּבָּרְלָהּ לְאָמֹר לְזֹרֻעָךְ אֶת-נַּגְּנָה: ² וְשַׁלְּחוּתִי לִפְנֵיךְ מַלְאָךְ וּגְרוּשָׁתִי אֶת-הַכְּנֻעָנִי הַאֲמֹרִי וּהַחֲתִי וּהַפְּרִזִּי הַחֲזִי וּהַיְבוֹסִי: ³ אֶל-אָרֶץ זֹבֵת חָלֵב וּדְבָשָׂר כִּי לֹא אַעֲלָה בְּקָרְבָּךְ פִּי עַמְּקָשָׁה-עַרְלָךְ אַתָּה פָּז-אַכְלָךְ בְּדָרָךְ:

MOSES' INTERCESSION AND GOD'S RESPONSE (32:30–35)

Moses again intercedes on behalf of the people, pleading with God to forgive them. In response, God grants a suspended sentence, but not complete atonement. In the context of the parashah, this “atonement” forms a stark contrast with the expiation of 30:11–16 with which the parashah began.

31. “Alas, this people.” Compare the way that blame is assigned in 32:4–5, 8, 24.

35. Then sent a plague. This verse is in tension both with the preceding one, which indicates that God will reserve punishment until a later time, and with v. 14, which reported God’s decision not to annihilate the people.

Aftermath (33:1–23)

This unit describes the reconciliation between God and Israel that takes into account the lessons learned during the Golden Calf episode.

GOD'S REFUSAL TO ACCOMPANY THE ISRAELITES (33:1–6)

God reaffirms the promise of land made to the ancestors. However, God refuses to accompany the ⁴When the people heard this harsh word, they went into mourning, and none put on finery.

⁵ said to Moses, “Say to the Israelite people, ‘You are a stiffnecked people. If I were to go in your midst for one moment, I would destroy you. Now, then, leave off your finery, and I will consider what to do to you.’” ⁶So the Israelites remained stripped of their finery from Mount Horeb on.

⁷Now Moses would take the Tent and pitch it outside the camp, at some distance from the camp. It was called the Tent of Meeting, and whoever sought יְהוָה would go out to the Tent of Meeting that was outside the camp. ⁸Whenever Moses went out to the Tent, all the people would rise and stand, at the entrance of each tent, and gaze after Moses until he had entered the Tent. ⁹And when Moses entered the Tent, the pillar of cloud would descend and stand at the entrance of the Tent, while [God] spoke with Moses. ¹⁰When all the people saw the

⁴ וַיִּשְׁמַע הָעָם אֶת-הַדָּבָר הַרְעָה הַזֹּה
וַיִּתְאַבֵּל וְלֹא-שָׁתוֹ אִישׁ עָדִיו עַלְיוֹ:
⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה אָמַר אֱלֹהִים
יִשְׂרָאֵל אַתָּם עִם-קֶשֶׁת-עֲרָף רָגֻע אֶחָד
אֲלֹהָה בְּקָרְבָּךְ וּבְלִיטָּוּר וְעַתָּה הַוְּרָד עַדְיוֹ
מַעֲלִיךְ וְאַדְעָה מִמֶּה אָשָׁה-לְךָ: ⁶ וַיִּתְנַצְּלֹ
בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת-עֲדרִים מִתְּחַרְבָּבָן:

⁷ וּמֹשֶׁה יָקַח אֶת-הַאֲהָל וְנַטְהַלּוּ | מִחוֹזָ
לְמִחְנָה הַרְחֵל מִן-הַמִּחְנָה וְקָרָא לוֹ אֲהָל
מוֹעֵד וְהִיָּה בְּלִמְבָקֵש יְהוָה יִצְא אֶל-אֲהָל
מוֹעֵד אֲשֶׁר מִחוֹזָ לְמִחְנָה: ⁸ וְהִיָּה בְּצָאת
מֹשֶׁה אֶל-הַאֲהָל יָקָומוּ בְּלִדְעָם וְנַצְבוּ
אִישׁ פָּתַח אַהֲלֵי וְהַבִּיטוּ אַחֲרֵי מֹשֶׁה עַד
בָּאוּ הַאֲהָלָה: ⁹ וְהִיָּה כִּבְאָמָשָׁה הַאֲהָל
יַרְדֵּן עַמּוֹד הַעֲנָן וְעַמְדֵד פָּתַח הַאֲהָל וְדַבֵּר עִם-מֹשֶׁה: ¹⁰ וַיָּרֹא הַלְּדָעָם אֶת-עַמּוֹד

current generation, lest their wayward actions prompt divine retribution.

4–6. finery. Adornment is a prominent motif in the parashah. Jewelry is misused in the construction of the calf (32:2–3), and here “finery” is removed as a sign of penance.

6. from Mount Horeb. The Golden Calf episode transpired at Horeb (3:1, 12), also called Sinai (31:18), the very site of the formation of the covenant (Exodus 19 and 24). See also at 18:5.

GOD'S CONCESSIONS AND FORMS OF REVELATION (33:7–23)

The focus now shifts to the question of how God will continue to become manifest to Israel and Moses. Several forms of divine revelation are presented, options that span a range of theological thinking, from the abstract—such as God’s name or goodness—to the highly anthropomorphic—like God’s back.

Tent of Meeting (33:7–11)

In the Torah, two different terms are used to refer to Israel’s portable wilderness sanctuary: Tabernacle and Tent of Meeting. The tent described here represents an alternate tradition that differs significantly from the Tabernacle tradition that dominates Exodus 25–31 and 35–40 (see also at 27:21; Vayak’heil, Another View, p. 538). In the texts that refer to the sanctuary as “Tabernacle,” God’s presence is very powerful and potentially very dangerous; nevertheless, by rigorously maintaining the purity of the shrine, the Israelites can safely preserve the vital presence of God in their midst. Here, the Tent tradition—which is perhaps much older than the Tabernacle one—expresses a different perspective, one in which the stiffnecked nature of the Israelites is incompatible with the divine presence. Therefore, the Tent of Meeting stands outside the camp and only Moses and Joshua can enter it. While this view distances God further from the people, it imagines pillar of cloud poised at the entrance of the Tent, all the people would rise and bow low, at the entrance of each tent.¹¹ יהוה would speak to Moses face to face, as one person speaks to another. And he would then return to the camp; but his attendant, Joshua son of Nun, [serving as] deputy, would not stir out of the Tent.

¹²Moses said to God, “See, You say to me, ‘Lead this people forward,’ but You have not made known to me whom You will send with me. Further, You have said, ‘I have singled you out by name, and you have, indeed, gained My favor.’¹³Now, if I have truly gained Your favor, pray let me know Your ways, that I may know You and continue in Your favor. Consider, too, that this nation is Your people.”¹⁴And [God] said, “I will go in the lead and will lighten your burden.”¹⁵And he replied, “Unless You go in the lead, do not make us leave this place.¹⁶For how shall it be known that Your people and I have gained Your favor unless You go with us, so that we may be distinguished, Your people and I, from every people on the face of the earth?”

¹⁷And God said to Moses, “I will also do this thing that you have asked; for you have truly gained My favor and I have singled you out by name.”¹⁸He said, “Oh, let me behold Your Presence!”¹⁹And [God] answered, “I will make all My good-a far more direct relationship between God and Moses.

II. face to face. The word panim (face) is a key term in Exodus 33 (vv. 11, 14–16, 20, 23), appearing seven times. Here it signals a deeply intimate relationship between God and Moses.

Moses' Request for Revelation and God's Response (33:12–23)

This passage resumes the action from v. 6, as Moses challenges God's refusal to accompany the people. In his continued persistence in seeking God's support for the people (see also 32:11–13, 31–32), the ענן עמד פָתֵח הַאֲהָל וְקִם בֶּלְחָעַם והשְׁתַחַחוּ אֲישׁ פָתֵח אֲהָלׁוֹ:¹¹ וְדָבַר יְהָוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה פִנְים אֶל־פִנְים כַּאֲשֶׁר יְדַבֵּר אֲישׁ אֶל־רֹעָהוּ וְשָׁב אֶל־הַמִּחְנָה וּמִשְׁרָתוֹ יְהָוָשָׁע בְּנֵינוֹ נָעַר לֹא יְמִיש מִתּוֹךְ הַאֲהָל:¹² ב

¹² וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל־יְהָוָה רָאָה אַתָּה אַנְגָּל הַעַל אֶת־הָעַם הַזֶּה וְאַתָּה לֹא הָדוּעַתָּנִי אֶת אֲשֶׁר־תְּשַׁלֵּח עַמִּי וְאַתָּה אָמַרְתָּ יְדַעְתִּיךְ בְּשָׁם וְגַם־מֵצָאת חַן בְּעִינֵךְ וְעַתָּה אָמַנָּא מֵצָאת חַן בְּעִינֵךְ הָדוּעַנִי נָא אֶת־זְרַכְךָ וְאֶדְעֶךָ לְמַעַן אָמַצָּא־חַן בְּעִינֵךְ וְרָאָה כִּי עַמְקָה הַגּוֹנוֹ הַזֶּה:¹³ וַיֹּאמֶר פָנִי יָלְכוּ וְהַנְחָתִי לְךָ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶלְיוֹ אָסִיאָן פָנִיר הַלְכִים אֶל־תַּעֲלִנוּ מִזָּה:¹⁴ וּבְמַה אַיְדָע אֶפְ�וֹא כִּי־מֵצָאת חַן בְּעִינֵךְ אַנְיָ וְעַמְקָה הַלְוֹא בְלַכְתָּךְ עַמְנוּ וּנְפָלִינוּ אַנְיָ וְעַמְקָה מַפְלָלָה הַעַם אֲשֶׁר עַל־פִנֵי הַאֲדָמָה:¹⁵ ב

¹⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהָוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה גַם אֶת־הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה אֲשֶׁר דָבַרְתָ אַעֲשָׂה כִּי־מֵצָאת חַן בְּעִינֵךְ וְאֶדְעֶךָ בְשָׁם:¹⁸ וַיֹּאמֶר הַרְאָנִי נָא אֶת־בְּבָדָק:¹⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אַנְיָ אַעֲבֵר בֶּל־טוֹבִי

Moses leverages God's acknowledged special affection for him in order to benefit the people as a whole. God agrees to once again personally lead the people.

14. “I will go in the lead.” Literally, “My face (panai) will lead.” Here and in v. 15, panim is used to signal a degree of divine presence.

18. “Presence.” Heb. kavod, which refers here (as in 16:7; 24:17; 40:34–38) to a visible manifestation of God, usually in the form of cloud or fire.

19. Here God offers to reveal four aspects of the divine presence: goodness, the name יהוה, grace, and compassion. These terms represent at-ness pass before you, and I will proclaim before you the name Eternal, and the grace that I grant and the compassion that I show,”²⁰ continuing, “But you cannot see My face, for a human being may not see Me and live.”²¹ And יהוה said, “See, there is a place near Me. Station yourself on the rock²² and, as My Presence passes by, I will put you in a cleft of the rock and shield you with My hand until I have passed by.²³ Then I will take My hand away and you will see My back; but My face must not be seen.”

34 said to Moses: “Carve two tablets of stone like the first, and I will inscribe upon the tablets the words that were on the first tablets, which you shattered.² Be ready by morning, and in the morning come up to Mount Sinai and present yourself there to Me, on the top of the mountain.³ No one else shall come up with you, and no one else shall be seen anywhere on the mountain; nei-

על-פָנֶיך וְקָרָאתִי בְשֵם יְהוָה לְפָנֶיך
וְחִנַתִי אֶת-אֲשֶׁר אָחָן וּרְחַמְתִי אֶת-אֲשֶׁר
אָרְחָם:²⁰ וַיֹאמֶר לֹא תַוקֵל לְרֹאשֵׁת אֶת-
פָנֵי כִי לְאִזְרָאֵל הָאָדָם וְחַי:²¹ וַיֹאמֶר
יְהוָה הַנֶּה מָקוֹם אֹתִי וְנִצְבַּת עַל-הַצּוֹר:
²² וְהַיְה בַעֲבָר בְבָדֵי וְשְׁמַטֵּך בְּנִקְרַת
הַצּוֹר וְשָׁכַתִי כַפֵּי עַלְיךָ עַד-עֲבָרִי:
²³ וְהִסְרַתִי אֶת-כְּפֵי וְרַאֲית אֶת-אֲחָרִי
וּפָנֵי לֹא יִרְאָו: פ
לְד וַיֹאמֶר יְהוָה אֶל-מֹשֶׁה פְסַל-לְךָ שְׁנִי-
לְחוֹת אֶבֶןִים כְּרָאשִׁים וּכְתַבְתִּי עַל-הַלְחָת אֶת-הַדְבָרִים אֲשֶׁר הִיו עַל-הַלְחָת
הַרְאָשִׁים אֲשֶׁר שִׁבְרָת:² וְהִי נִכְזֵן לְבָקָר
וּשְׂלִית בְבָקָר אֶל-הָר סִינֵי וְנִצְבַּת לֵי שָׁם עַל-רֹאשׁ הַהָר: ³ וְאִישׁ לְאִיעֵלָה עַמְקָה

tributes of God that seem to be more abstract manifestations of the Divine than the kavod that Moses asked for.

20. “But you cannot see My face.” Here panim (“face”) refers to a manifestation of the Divine that is too intense for a human to experience safely. This verse seems to contradict the earlier account of Moses’ encounters with God “face to face” in the Tent of Meeting (33:11), although that phrase may not be meant literally but rather may denote intense intimacy.

23. “My hand . . . My back . . . My face.” Verses 21–23 present one of the most rigorously anthropomorphic representations of God in the Torah. The references to God’s face, hand, and back must be understood in literal terms. The radical anthropomorphism communicates a vision of God that is simultaneously dangerously transcendent and intimately protective: God’s body shields Moses from God’s face (panim), which is portrayed as so intense that viewing it would be fatal.

Restoration of the Covenant (34:1–35)

Tin the final unit of the parashah, God restores the covenant with Israel, thus affirming that reconciliation is possible, even after a dramatic violation of their relationship. Unlike in Exodus 32, when Moses descends the mountain in fury and breaks the two tablets inscribed by God, this time Moses comes down from Mount Sinai with the new tablets he wrote himself and with his face radiant with his encounter with the Divine.

REVELATION OF GOD’S NAME (34:1–9)

The preparations for this divine encounter resemble the first Sinaitic revelation in Exodus 19–20, but now only Moses can set foot anywhere on the mountain. After exploring various means of divine revelation in Exodus 33, the text reverts to the revelation of the divine name as a central means of divine revelation. (On God’s name, see at 3:14 and 6:2.)

ther shall the flocks and the herds graze at the foot of this mountain.”

⁴So Moses carved two tablets of stone, like the first, and early in the morning he went up on Mount Sinai, as יהוה had commanded him, taking the two stone tablets with him. ⁵came down in a cloud—and stood with him there, proclaiming the name Eternal. ⁶passed before him and proclaimed: “⁷יהוה! a God compassionate and gracious, slow to anger, abounding in kindness and faithfulness, ⁷extending kindness to the thousandth generation, forgiving iniquity, transgression, and sin—yet not remitting all punishment, but visiting the iniquity of parents upon children and children’s children, upon the third and fourth generations.”

⁸Moses hastened to bow low to the ground in homage, ⁹and said, “If I have gained Your favor, O my lord, pray, let my lord go in our midst, even though this is a stiffnecked people. Pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for Your own!”

¹⁰[God] said: I hereby make a covenant. Before all your people I will work such wonders as have not been wrought on all the earth or in any nation; and all the people who are with you shall see how awesome are יהוה’s deeds which I will perform for you. ¹¹Mark well what I command you this day. I will drive out before you the Amorites, the Canaanites,

וְגַם־אִישׁ אֶלְיָהּ אֲלֵיכָהּ בְּכָל־הָהָר גַּם־הַצָּאן
וְהַבָּקָר אֶל־יְרֻעָה אֶל־מִזְבֵּחַ הָהָר הַהָּיוֹ:
⁴ וַיַּפְסֵל שְׁנִינְלְחָת אֶבְנִים פְּרָאשְׁנִים
וַיִּשְׁבַּם מֹשֶׁה בְּבָקָר וְיַעַל אֶל־הָרָסְטִינִי
בְּאַשְׁר צָבָה יְהֹוָה אָתוֹ וַיַּקְרֵב יְדָיו שְׁנִי לְחֹתֶן
אֶבְנִים: ⁵ וַיָּרַד יְהֹוָה בְּעַנְןָ וַיִּתְאַכֵּב עַמּוֹ
שָׁם וַיִּקְרֵא בְּשֵׁם יְהֹוָה: ⁶ וַיַּעֲבֵר יְהֹוָה עַל־
פָּנָיו וַיִּקְרֵא יְהֹוָה יְהֹוָה אֱלֹהִים וְתִנְנָן
אָרֶךְ אֲפִים וּרְבִ-חֶסֶד וְאֶמֶת: ⁷ נִצְרָהָד
לְאַלְפִּים נְשָׁא עָזָן וְפִשְׁעָז וְחַטָּאת וְנִקְהָה לְאָ
יִנְקָה פָּקָד | עָזָן אֲבוֹת עַל־בָּנִים וְעַל־בָּנִי
בָּנִים עַל־שְׁלִשִּׁים וְעַל־רְבָעִים:
⁸ וַיִּמְהָר מֹשֶׁה וַיִּקְרֵב אֶרְצָה וַיִּשְׁתַּחַווּ:
⁹ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶסְמָנָא מִצְאָתִי חַן בְּעִינֵיכֶם אֲדֹנָי
וְלֹךְ-נָא אֲדֹנִי בְּקָרְבָּנוּ כִּי עַמְּקָשָׁה
עָרָף הוּא וְסִלְחוֹת לְעַונֵּנוּ וְלְחַטָּאתֵנוּ
וְנִחְלַתְנוּ:
¹⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר הָנָה אָנֹכִי פְּרִתְתְּ בְּרִית נְגֻד בְּלַ- עַמְּקָעֵשָׂה נְפָלָות אֲשֶׁר לְאַ-נְבָרָאוּ
בְּכָל־הָאָרֶץ וּבְכָל־הָגּוֹיִם וּרְאָה בְּלִזְעָם
אֲשֶׁר־אָתָה בְּקָרְבָּו אֶת־מְעָשָׂה יְהֹוָה כִּי
נוֹרָא הוּא אֲשֶׁר אָנֹכִי עָשָׂה עַמָּךְ: ¹¹ שְׁמָר־
לְךָ אֶת אֲשֶׁר אָנֹכִי מִצְוָה תְּהִימָה דָּנִי גַּרְשָׁ

6–7. This divine self-description, referred to in the post-biblical period as the “Thirteen Attributes,” becomes a core part of the Jewish penitential liturgy for the High Holy Days, festivals, and fast days. This declaration asserts that God grants abundant mercy to the faithful and also inflicts trans-generational punishment for transgressors. (This last point is omitted from the liturgical uses of this passage.)

TERMS OF THE COVENANT (34:10–28)

God responds to Moses’ request to accompany and pardon the people by restoring the covenant. This passage begins with God’s promise to drive out the current inhabitants of Canaan. In exchange, the Israelites are to refrain from forming alliances with these inhabitants and to commit to a set of commandments similar, but not identical, to those in Exodus 24.

11–12. I will drive out... Beware of making a covenant. If God drives out all the inhabitants, how can the Israelites make covenants with them? The conflict in this promise and admonition reflects a tension between two accounts of the settlement of the Promised Land in Joshua and Judges. In one version, the indigenous people are utterly displaced or destroyed; in the other, the Israelites live alongside them in the land.

the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites.¹² Beware of making a covenant with the inhabitants of the land against which you are advancing, lest they be a snare in your midst.¹³ No, you must tear down their altars, smash their pillars, and cut down their sacred posts;¹⁴ for you must not worship any other god, because יהוה, whose name is Impassioned, is an impassioned God.¹⁵ You must not make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, for they will lust after their gods and sacrifice to their gods and invite you, and you will eat of their sacrifices.¹⁶ And when you take wives from among their daughters for your sons, their daughters will lust after their gods and will cause your sons to lust after their gods.

¹⁷You shall not make molten gods for yourselves.

¹⁸You shall observe the Feast of Unleavened Bread—eating unleavened bread for seven days, as I have commanded you—at the set time of the month of Abib, for in the month of Abib you went forth from Egypt.

¹⁹Every first issue of the womb is Mine, from all

מִפְנִיק אֲתִיהָאָמֶרֶי וְהַבְנֵנִי וְהַחֲתִי וְהַפְרֹאָז
וְהַחֲנִי וְהַבְּוֹסִי :¹² הַשְׁמָר לְךָ פְּנִיתְכְּרָתָ
בְּרִית לְיוֹשֵׁב הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר אַתָּה בָּא
עַלְיהָ פְּנִיהִיהָ לְמוֹקֵשׁ בְּקָרְבָּךְ :¹³ כִּי אַתָּה
מִזְבְּחָתֶם תַּתְצֹו וְאַתָּמִצְבָּתֶם תַּשְׁבְּרוֹן
וְאַתָּא-אֲשֶׁרְיוֹ תַּכְּרִתּוֹן :¹⁴ כִּי לֹא תִשְׂתְּחוּה
לְאַלְּאָחָר כִּי יְהוָה קָנָא שְׁמוֹ אֶל קָנָא
הָוֹא :¹⁵ פְּנִיתְכְּרָתָ בְּרִית לְיוֹשֵׁב הָאָרֶץ וְנוֹנוֹ
וְאַחֲרֵי אֱלֹהִים וְזָבְחוֹ לְאֱלֹהִים וְקָרָא
לְךָ וְאָכַלְתָּ מִזְבְּחָוֹ :¹⁶ וְלִקְחָתָ מִבְנְטוֹ
לְבִנְיָךְ וְנָנוֹ בְּנָטוֹי אַחֲרֵי אֱלֹהִים וְהַזְנוֹ
אַתְּ-בְּנֵיךְ אַחֲרֵי אֱלֹהִים :

¹⁷ אֱלֹהֵי מִסְכָּה לֹא תִעַשֵּׂה לְךָ :

¹⁸ אַתְּ-חַג הַמְצֻוֹת תִּשְׁמַר שְׁבָעַת יְמִים
תַּאֲכַל מִצּוֹת אֲשֶׁר צִוְּתָךְ לְמַוְעֵד חֶדֶש
הָאָבִיב כִּי בְּחֶדֶש הָאָבִיב יִצְאֶת
מִפְצְרִים :

¹⁹ בְּלִפְטֵר רַחֲם לֵי וּבְלִמְקָנֶל תַּזְכֵּר פְּטֵר

12–15. Covenants with the indigenous people are viewed as dangerous because they will lead to the worship of foreign gods.

13. sacred posts. Heb. asherim (which appears in the Bible also with a feminine plural, asherot; singular asherah). These ritual objects were probably associated with the goddess Asherah, a goddess who is identified in 14th-century-B.C.E. Ugaritic (northern Canaanite) texts as the consort of the high god El, and who is mentioned in the Bible in conjunction with the Canaanite god Baal. In addition, inscriptions from ancient Israel identify Asherah apparently as the companion of the God of Israel. These inscriptions, and the repeated polemics against the asherim in the Bible, suggest that worship of Asherah through prayers and ritual objects was once a common part of Israelite worship. The rise of strict monotheism in ancient Israel and its insistence on the legitimacy of only one God mandated Asherah's elimination.

16. And when you take wives. The Bible expresses a range of views about marriage between Israelites and non-Israelites, from the prohibition of all marriages between Israelites and non-Israelites, to the ban on marriages between Israelite men and indigenous women of Canaan as seen here. Such marriages are viewed as risky because the women might lure their husbands into the worship of other gods. (See also Another View, p. 514.)

19. Every first issue. In ancient Israel, as similarly in many ancient cultures, the “first-born” of select animals and humans—males only—were perceived as belonging to God and were returned to the deity either through sacrifice or a redemptive substitution. (See also at 13:2, 15; Leviticus 27:26–27; Deuteronomy 15:19–23.)

your livestock that drop a male as firstling, whether cattle or sheep.²⁰ But the firstling of an ass you shall redeem with a sheep; if you do not redeem it, you must break its neck. And you must redeem every male first-born among your children.

None shall appear before Me empty-handed.

²¹ Six days you shall work, but on the seventh day you shall cease from labor; you shall cease from labor even at plowing time and harvest time.

²² You shall observe the Feast of Weeks, of the first fruits of the wheat harvest; and the Feast of Ingathering at the turn of the year.²³ Three times a year all your males shall appear before the Sovereign יהוה, the God of Israel.²⁴ I will drive out nations from your path and enlarge your territory; no one will covet your land when you go up to appear before your God יהוה three times a year.

²⁵ You shall not offer the blood of My sacrifice with anything leavened; and the sacrifice of the Feast of Passover shall not be left lying until morning.

²⁶ The choice first fruits of your soil you shall bring to the house of your God יהוה.

You shall not boil a kid in its mother's milk.

²⁷ And said to Moses: Write down these commandments, for in accordance with these commandments I make a covenant with you and with Israel.

²⁸ And he was there with יהוה forty days and forty nights; he ate no bread and drank no water; and he wrote down on the tablets the terms of the covenant, the Ten Commandments.

²⁹ So Moses came down from Mount Sinai. And as Moses came down from the mountain bearing

שׂוֹר וְשֵׁה:²⁰ וַיַּטֶּר חָמָר תִּפְקָה בְּשֵׁה
וְאַסְלָא תִּפְקָה וְעַרְפָּתָו כָּל בְּכָור בְּנֵי
תִּפְקָה

וְלֹא־יָרָא פָּנֵי רַיקָּם:²¹ שְׁשָׁת יְמִים תַּעֲבֹד וּבְיוּם הַשְׁבִיעִי
תִּשְׁבַּת בְּחִרִישׁ וּבְקָצֵר תִּשְׁבַּת:

²² וְתַהְגֵּשׁ שְׁבָעָת תַּעֲשֵׂה לְךָ בְּפּוּרִי קָצֵר
חָטִים וְתַהְגֵּל הָאָסְלִיף תִּקְוֹפַת הַשְׁנָה:²³ שְׁלָשׁ
פָּעָמִים בְּשָׁנָה יְרָאֶה בְּלִזְכּוֹר אֶת־פָּנֵי
הָאֱלֹהִים וְיהֹהָן אֶלְהִי יִשְׂרָאֵל:²⁴ קְרִיאֹוּרִישׁ
גּוֹיִם מִפְנִיק וְהַרְחַבְתִּי אֶת־גְּבוּלָךְ וְלֹא־
יִחְמֹד אִישׁ אֶת־אָרֶצָךְ בְּעַלְתָּךְ לְרָאֹת
אֶת־פָּנֵי יהֹהָן אֶלְהִיךְךְ שְׁלָשׁ פָּעָמִים
בְּשָׁנָה:

²⁵ לְאַתְּשַׁחַט עַל־חַמֵּץ דְּסִזְבָּחַי וְלֹא־יַלְעַזֵּן
לְבָקָר זָבֵחׁ חַג הַפְּסִחָה:

²⁶ רְאִשְׁתָּה בְּפּוּרִי אַדְמַתָּךְ תְּבִיא בֵּית יהֹהָן
אֶלְהִיךְךְ

לְאַתְּבָשֵׁל גָּדִי בְּחַלֵּב אָמוֹן:²⁷ פָּ

וְלֹא־מֹר יְהֹוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה בְּרַבְּלָקָה אֶת־

הַדְּבָרִים הָאֱלֹהִים בְּיַעֲלֵמִי הַדְּבָרִים הָאֱלֹהִים
בְּרַתִּי אֶתְּךָ בְּרִית וְאֶת־יִשְׂרָאֵל:

²⁸ וְיִהִי־שָׁם עַמִּיהָן אֶרֶבֻּעִים יוֹם
וְאֶרֶבֻּעִים לִילָּה לְחַם לֹא אֶכְל וְמַיִם לֹא

שָׁתָה וְיִכְתְּבֵן עַל־חֲלֹחוֹת אֶת דְּבָרַי הַפְּנִי
עַשְׂרַת הַדְּבָרִים:

²⁹ וְיִהָיָה בְּרַדְתָּה מֹשֶׁה מִתְּרַסֵּן וְשָׁנִי לְחַות
הַעֲדָת בְּיַד־מֹשֶׁה בְּרַקְטוּ מִן־הַהָר וּמֹשֶׁה

23. all your males shall appear. The requirement to celebrate these three festivals is limited to men here and in 23:17. In contrast, Deuteronomy 16:11–16 requires women to participate in the festivals, although only men are required to make pilgrimage to Jerusalem.

A VISIBLE CHANGE IN MOSES (34:29–35)

Moses is physically transformed by his intimate encounter with God. The rays of light radiating from his face provide evidence of his relationship with God; and they inspire fear and, at least tempo-the two tablets of the Pact, Moses was not aware that the skin of his face was radiant, since he had spoken with God.³⁰ Aaron and all the Israelites saw that the skin of Moses' face was radiant; and they shrank from coming near him.³¹ But Moses called to them, and Aaron and all the chieftains in the assembly returned to him, and Moses spoke to them.³² Afterward all the Israelites came near, and he instructed them concerning all that had imparted to him on Mount Sinai.³³ And when Moses had finished speaking with them, he put a veil over his face.

³⁴ Whenever Moses went in before יְהוָה to converse, he would leave the veil off until he came out; and when he came out and told the Israelites what he had been commanded,³⁵ the Israelites would see how radiant the skin of Moses' face was. Moses would then put the veil back over his face until he went in to speak with God.

rarily, respectful obedience from the Israelites. This supernatural transformation validates Moses' role as a legitimate mediator between God and Israel, the third strategy for maintaining a relationship with God.

29. the skin of his face was radiant. Heb. karan or panav, literally probably “the skin of his face radiated.” The words karan or were understood by Christian interpreters to mean “horns of light,” which led to the depiction of Moses with horns

לֹא־יַרְעֵעْ בְּפִנֵּיו עֹור פָּנָיו בְּדָבְרוֹ אֶת־
³⁰ וַיָּרַא אַהֲרֹן וּכָל־בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת־מִשְׁהָ
 וְהַגָּה קָרְנוֹן עֹור פָּנָיו וַיַּירְאוּ מִגְשָׁת אֱלֹהִים:
³¹ וַיַּקְרָא אֱלֹהִם מִשְׁהָ וַיִּשְׁבַּו אֱלֹהִים אַהֲרֹן
 וּכָל־הַנְּשָׂאִים בְּעֵדָה וַיְדַבֵּר מִשְׁהָ אֱלֹהִם:
³² וְאַחֲרֵיכֶן נִגְשׁוּ בְּלִבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיַּצְוֹם
 אֶת־בְּלִאשְׁר דִּבֶּר יְהוָה אֲתָנוּ בְּהָרָ סִינִי:
³³ וַיַּכְלֵל מִשְׁהָ מִדְבָּר אֶתְם וַיַּתֵּן עַל־פָּנָיו
 מִסְׁוֹהָ:

וּבָבָא מִשְׁהָ לְפָנֵי יְהוָה לְדִבֶּר אֲתָנוּ יְסִיר
 אֶת־הַמִּסּוֹה עַד־צָאתוֹ וַיָּצֹא וַיְדַבֵּר אֶל־בְּנֵי
 יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת־אֲשֶׁר יִצְוֹה:³⁴ וְרָאָה בְּנֵי
 יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶת־פָּנֵי מִשְׁהָ כִּי קָרְנוֹן עֹור פָּנִי
 מִשְׁהָ וְהַשִּׁיב מִשְׁהָ אֶת־הַמִּסּוֹה עַל־פָּנָיו עַד־בָּאוֹ לְדִבֶּר אֲתָנוּ ס

by many Christian Renaissance artists. Other scholars have argued that “horns” is in fact the correct translation. According to such a reading, as a result of his intimate encounter with God, Moses is supernaturally marked with the sacred symbol of Israel’s God.

30. they shrank from coming near him. In 33:12–23, concern was expressed about the revelation of God’s face; here it is Moses’ face that bears the fearsome mark of his intimacy with God.

—Elsie R. Stern

Another View

THE VERSE in this parashah forbidding Israelite “sons” to marry non-Israelite “daughters” (34:16) has troubled many readers, both because of its negative view of outsiders and because of the way it denigrates the religious beliefs of foreign women. On each count, however, closer scrutiny provides a more nuanced, less problematic understanding.

The one-sided nature of this mandate—forbidding men but not women from marrying out (exogamy)—differs from other biblical texts (like Deuteronomy 7:3) that proscribe exogamy for both women and men. Such gender-inclusive prohibitions express larger concerns for setting ethnic boundaries. Forbidding only non-Israelite wives may represent a different practice or tradition, one sensitive to the family dynamics of agrarian societies.

The justification for prohibiting foreign wives in Exodus 34:16 is that it will prevent the worship of foreign gods. This religious reason should be understood in broader terms, with foreign religion standing for the cultural patterns of another people. Endogamous marriages—in which wives shared the same culture as their husbands—perhaps better served community needs. Such brides would be well versed in the particular social customs and technologies necessary for household life, an important consideration in the precarious environment of the farming communities of the biblical period. Thus, marrying an Israelite woman was likely a strategy for survival, not an expression of cultural disdain.

In this respect, note that none of the biblical statements against intermarriage (like Genesis 24:3 or Nehemiah 13:25–27) are absolute prohibitions; they are concerned only with marrying members of local populations. After all, several prominent biblical figures—both women (such as Bathsheba and Esther) and men (such as Moses, David, and Solomon)—have foreign spouses.

In Israelite households, it was women who dominated religious praxis.

Although the religious motivation given in 34:16 for eschewing foreign brides may represent an aversion to foreign culture more generally, it is nonetheless instructive to note that the verse depicts the religious (cultural) practices of women as being more powerful than those of their husbands. Such a view is consonant with what is known about the dynamics of Israelite households: women dominated household religious praxis and exercised considerable managerial control over household life.

—Carol Meyers

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

See, I have singled out by name Bezalel... I have endowed him with... skill, ability, and knowledge (31:2–3).

According to rabbinic midrash, Miriam’s husband was Caleb (Sh’mot Rabbah 1.17; Sifrei B’midbar 78; BT Sotah 12a); given that Bezalel—the craftsman who designed the Tabernacle and supervised its construction—was Caleb’s great-grandson (I Chronicles 2:18–20), this means that he was also Miriam’s great-grandson. In Sh’mot Rabbah 48:3–4, the Rabbis connected Exodus 31:2–3 with Job 28:28, “See! Fear of Adonai is wisdom (chochmah); / To shun evil is understanding (binah).” They explained that “fear of Adonai” referred to Jochebed and Miriam, whom the Rabbis identified with the God-fearing midwives of Exodus 1:21. Since the reward for fearing God is Torah, Jochebed gave birth to Moses, through whom the Torah was revealed. As for Miriam, because she “shunned evil” she became the great-grandmother of Bezalel, known for his “skill (chochmah), ability (t’vunah—a noun related to binah), and knowledge” (31:3).

KI TISA

Upon finishing speaking with him . . . , [God] gave Moses the two tablets (31:18). The Hebrew expression rendered here as “upon finishing” (k’chaloto) is almost identical to a term that means “as his bride.” (The two words differ by one vowel.) Based on that wordplay, the Rabbis sometimes understood part of this verse as: [God] gave Moses, as his bride, the two tablets. The feminine personification of the Torah as the bride of Israel is an ancient tradition. In Sh’mot Rabbah 41.5, the Rabbis declared that when God “gave the Torah to Israel, it was then as dear to them as a bride is to her spouse.”

The Israelite women refused to surrender their earrings for the Golden Calf.

all the people took off the gold rings that were in their ears (32:2–3). According to Midrash Pirkei D’Rabbi Eliezer 45, only the men contributed jewelry; the Israelite women refused to surrender their earrings for the forging of the Golden Calf, rejecting it as “a graven and molten image without any power.” In recognition of their faithfulness, God rewarded the women both in this world and the world-to-come. In this world, they received special privileges on Rosh Chodesh (the New Moon), traditionally a day on which Jewish women abstained from work. And in the world-to-come, “women are destined to be renewed like the new moons.” (For more on women and Rosh Chodesh, see P’kudei, Post-biblical Interpretations, p. 560.)

As soon as Moses came near the camp . . . he hurled the tablets from his hands (32:19). The Rabbis repeatedly compared Israel’s rejection of God in favor of the Golden Calf to a woman’s sexual betrayal of her fiancé or husband. In Sh’mot Rabbah 43.1, they likened Moses’ decision to destroy the tablets to the act of a marriage broker, sent by a king to betroth a certain woman. While the broker was en route with the marriage document, the woman “corrupted herself with another man.” The broker immediately destroyed the marriage document, saying it was better that she be judged as an unattached wanton woman than as a married woman who had been unfaithful. Similarly, Moses destroyed the tablets, saying it was better that Israel be judged as ignorant and foolish rather than as having deliberately disobeyed the commandments forbidding idolatry that they had just received.

And יהוה said to Moses: Write down these commandments (34:27). Midrash D’varim Rabbah 3.17 asks why the first tablets were written by God and the second set were inscribed by a human being. The reply is another analogy: This is like a king who married a woman and gladly paid for all the expenses of preparing the marriage contract. When he saw his wife behaving in an inappropriate manner with one of his servants, he was enraged and sent her away. His groomsman pled on her behalf and explained that since she was brought up among servants, she did not know her actions were wrong. The king agreed to be reconciled with his wife, but he required the groomsman to pay the costs for a new marriage contract. Similarly, Moses beseeched God to remember that Israel had spent many years in “Egypt, the house of idolatry,” and to forgive the lapse with the Golden Calf. Although God agreed to the reconciliation, God’s ardor was now cooled and Moses was required to prepare and inscribe the tablets himself. (So also Sh’mot Rabbah 47.2.)

—Judith R. Baskin

Contemporary Reflection

YEARS AGO, my boyfriend and I climbed the alleged Mount Sinai, with the shower of Perseus streaking the Egyptian night sky with shooting stars. At the summit, as God pulled the sun up from the fragrant desert floor, Jonathan held up a ring and proposed. It is written in Pirkei Avot, “Every day a voice goes forth from Sinai” (6:2). That dawn, I heard the reverberation of a sacred voice in the words, “Would you be willing to spend your life with me?”

The revelation at Mount Sinai was a wedding—an eternal, loving joining between God and Israel. The story we read is but a veil covering a radiance we must allow ourselves to know.

This Torah portion, Ki Tisa, begins with Moses taking a census. God then chooses Bezalel to be the artisan of the Tabernacle. Moses climbs Mount Sinai, shrouded in mist and mystery, while the Israelites below build their golden idol. When Moses sees this, he breaks the stone tablets, grinds up the golden calf, and makes the Israelites drink it. Moses ascends the mountain a second time. When he descends, his face is so radiant that he must wear a veil.

But a light ruach (wind) blows from the west, disturbing the mist, and we see the radiant face just beneath the veil of text.

Moses is the master alchemist. He climbs the mountain, hides in the cleft of the tzur (rock). He speaks with the philosopher’s stone face to face. He holds the two tablets of prime matter in his hands. When he grinds up the calf into a fine powder, stirs it into water, holds it up into the air, a brilliant liquid shimmering with flakes of gold, he creates a dizzyingly potent potion, a love potion, an elixir of life. A toast!

We drink of it. Our eyes are opened to see beneath the veil. Ki Tisa is not about frenzied idol worship, but the detailed description of a spectacular wedding feast between God and the people Israel. God-the-Lover and Moses-the-beloved take a census of who shall be invited, and they make the long guest list: 600,000 and growing. Bezalel is singled out to decorate the Tent, arrange the flowers, and adorn the feast.

Time passes, and we find ourselves in the whirl of the banquet festivity. There is dancing and singing, and in the very center, what seems to be a golden calf. But blink your eyes! It is the glittering pile of precious wedding gifts.

High on the bimah (platform), under a chuppah (wedding canopy) of cloud, God presents Moses with the marriage contract, our ketubah. One commentator

“Would you be willing to spend your life with me?”

points out that 31:18, which is translated “Upon finishing (ke-challato) speaking with him . . . [God] gave Moses the two tablets,” could also be read, with the slight change of one vowel: “And [God] gave Moses as [God’s] bride (ke-challato) . . . the two tablets.” Moses, our symbolic bride, turns around in the chuppah and faces the guests. He lifts the contract for all to see—and then smashes the glass beneath his foot.

Now it is time for yichud, when husband and wife are alone together for the first time. In 33:12–23, we read excerpts from a conversation between God and Moses that sound particularly romantic: “Pray let me know Your ways, that I may know You and continue in Your favor” (v. 13). “You have truly gained My favor and I have singled you out by name” (v. 17). “Oh, let me behold Your Presence!” (v. 18). “I will make all My goodness pass before you,” (v. 19). And, at the end, God’s hand reaches out for Moses (v. 22).

Moses comes down from the mountain blushing, a crimson glow in his cheeks. Earlier, when he went into the Tent to meet our Love, he removed his veil, so only God should see his glowing face; but when he leaves the Tent, he lowers the veil.

KI TISA

But this is only one way to imagine this mythic wedding. Instead of seeing Moses (representing all the Israelites) as the bride and God as the groom, some commentators understand Israel to be the groom and Torah the bride. In Midrash HaGadol, for example, it is written:

In the third month... they entered the wilderness of Sinai (19:1)... [This may be compared] to a king who betrothed a woman, and set a time [for the marriage]. When the time arrived they said: "It is time for the woman to enter the chuppah." Similarly, when the time arrived for the Torah to be given, they said, "It is time for the Torah to be given to Israel" (Elliot R. Wolfson, Circle in the Square, 1995, p. 4).

Here, Torah is the bride and Israel is the groom.

On the summit of the mountain, within the curtain of cloud, the question of who is marrying whom is enveloped in dreamlike fog. We might even wonder if the true union taking place upon Mount Sinai is perhaps the revelatory union of heavenly Adonai with earthbound Shechinah: God's masculine and feminine Presence united through Israel, in love.

When the potion wears off, the children of Israel look around them. Once again they are in the desert, long dragged-out footsteps stretching behind them. And they say one to the other, "Love is in this place, and we did not know it! What have we been doing all of this time? Where have we been? Is this the desert, or is it gan eiden (Garden of Eden)? Are we lost and alone, or are we this moment caught up in a fierce union with God? Are we wandering with sandals filled with dust, or are we soaring on eagles' wings?"

We look from one to the other—and wonder what is the face beneath the face beneath the face we wear every day. Sometimes the beauty of the other is as allusive as a sunray on the water. We seek the radiant face beneath the veil.

Messy world. Angry, idolatrous world. Tired, hungry, sick, and sorry world. But if we could lift the sooty, splattered veil... we might see...

This thing between God and Israel—it is not that we are in covenant. It is that we are in love. Every day a voice comes forth from Sinai and begs your answer, "Would you be willing to spend your life with Me?"

Yes.

—Zoë Klein

Voices

We reach for You, our God

Priscilla Stern

Exodus 31:12–17

We reach for You, our God
from our quiet places.

May we stand still,
for a brief moment, and listen to the rain—

Stand still, for a brief moment, and watch the play of sunlight and shadow on the leaves.

For a brief moment—
listen to the world.

Let us stop the wheels of every day to be aware of Shabbat. Find the stillness of the sanctuary
which the soul cherishes.

Renew the covenant of an ancient people.

We need a quiet
space to test the balance of our days. The weight of our own needs against the heaviness
of the world's demands.

The balance is precarious—steady us with faith.

Quiet places and stillness—where we will hear our own best impulses speak.

Quiet places and stillness—from which we will reach out to each other.

We will find strength in silence and with this strength we will turn again to Your service.

Will

Marcia Falk

Exodus 31:12–17

Three generations back my family had only to light a candle

and the world parted.

Today, Friday afternoon,
I disconnect clocks and phones.

When night fills my house with passages,

I begin saving
my life.

A Song of Descent

Sue Levi Elwell

Exodus 32:1–6

Remembering Egyptian nights of seductive scents and throbbing drums, we rubbed the sand from our feet and prepared to celebrate Your presence among us.

Adorned in jewelry long hidden away,
we claimed beauty again.
Slaves no more,
we stepped into the circle and began a chant
to glorify You.

Drunk with the first taste of freedom we thought we saw the gold in our ears reflected in Your bovine eyes.

Somewhere in Samaria

Lea Goldberg (transl. Rachel Tzvia Back)

Exodus 33

I picked a wildflower and tossed it away.
I waited
two days in the rain at a forgotten station.
My God, you'll never believe in me again!
I passed by so close and didn't recognize you.

Sinai Again

Merle Feld

Exodus 33

I'm coming back to this mountain now alone.
It's quiet,
the barren brush,
the stillness,
match my mood.

I haven't seen you in a long time God, where've you been keeping yourself?

Me, I've had two kids,
work has its ups and downs,
I'm still married to the same man.

I don't know if you noticed,
but I stopped talking to you.
I called to you,
I called and called,
but you didn't answer,

you pushed me far away,
so far that even I who has so little pride after all, even I couldn't bring myself to come crawling back—
I don't know if you noticed.

I only returned now to walk around, kick the brush across the sand, to walk around and think about us.

This could be a holy place again if you would just give me a sign—a thrush or a hare or a mountain goat gracefully coming toward me.

In Your Image

Shulamis Yelin

Exodus 34:6–7

In your image,
in your image, God,
You made me in your image, and I reach upward, seeking—to be like You, God.

Just? Like You I'm vengeful.
Merciful? Like You I seek an understanding heart.

Jealous? Yes, I'm jealous and iniquitous and long suffering—and like You
I dream to make a world,
(in miniature, God),
to do my bidding.

And loving I can be, yes, loving,
to a penitent punished child.

Yet clearly, God, most clearly,
do I see in me your oneness,
your all-oneness,
your aloneness—
in my heart.

To God

Else Lasker-Schüler (transl. Janine Canan)

Exodus 33:13; 34:9

You restrain neither the good, nor the evil stars;
all their moods stream forth.
In my brow the furrow aches, this deep crown of dusky light.

And my world is silent—
You have not restrained my mood.
God, where are You?

I'd like to lean upon your heart and listen, immerse myself in your vast presence, when gold-transfigured in your Realm of infinitely blissful Light all the good and the evil fountains roar.

Elul

Rivka Miriam (transl. Linda Stern Zisquit)

Exodus 34:9

Here the rocks came to be forgiven because they couldn't move and the heights came to receive compassion for being so distant from earth.
The sea swallowed its waves, embarrassed for being restless.
Only forgiveness itself, weak-finned pure as lightning that doesn't burn, didn't know from whom to beg forgiveness.
Only forgiveness itself blurred as the line between dusk and sunset fell on its knees before itself.

וַיִּקְהֶל ◆ Vayak'heil

EXODUS 35:1–38:20

Making a Place for God: The Tabernacle's Components

PARASHAT VAYAK'HEIL ("he convoked") begins the portion of Exodus known as the descriptive Tabernacle texts (Exodus 35–40) because they describe the implementation of the earlier instructions. God gives detailed instructions to Moses about the Tabernacle, its materials, and its personnel in Exodus 25–30, known as the prescriptive Tabernacle texts because they prescribe what is to be done. While the Golden Calf episode in Ki Tisa seems to interrupt the Tabernacle account, its overall message—that the people can sin and still have their covenant with God affirmed—may be an integral part of the Tabernacle concept. The Golden Calf incident indicates that the people seem to doubt God's presence among them and God's commitment to them. Only after that incident is resolved, with God and the people reconciled, can they proceed to build the shrine. The people now feel sure that God will be with them even if they do disobey God's word.

The disobedience that marks the preceding parashah now contrasts sharply with the people's willing complicity in carrying out the directives for building the Tabernacle. An introductory unit (35:1–36:7) reviews the Sabbath precept, describes the collection of donations, and designates the artisans who are to collect and use the materials. The next three units report the implementation of God's commands to build the Tabernacle: the tent (36:8–38), its furnishings (37:1–29), and the courtyard with its installations (38:1–20).

Much of the information presented in the elaborate instructions for making the Tabernacle and priestly vestments (the prescriptive texts in Exodus 25–31) is repeated, at times word-for-word, in this parashah and the next. While the content of the accounts is almost identical, the order is significantly different. Instead of presenting the components in order of degree of sanctity—starting with the Ark and the other golden furnishings—the description of their fabrication proceeds according to technological logic: first the structure itself is erected (36:8–38), then the interior furnishings are made (37:1–29), and finally the courtyard and its installations are constructed (38:1–20). The descriptive texts are somewhat briefer because they omit information about how items are to be used, indicating an interest in fabrication rather than function. Another major difference is that in the descriptive texts Moses is much more prominent than Aaron—the dominant figure in the prescriptive passages. It is fitting that Aaron is less important following the Golden Calf episode, since he was considered complicit in the people's sinfulness.

The willingness to build the Tabernacle contrasts with the earlier disobedience.

Although the priestly personnel apparently are all men, as are the chief artisans, women appear in this parashah as significant contributors of materials. They also are the ones who turn the raw materials of textile production into the requisite fabrics. Because woven fabrics are key components of the tent shrine, the skilled labor of female artisans (35:25–26) is integral to the construction of the Tabernacle (see also Trumah, Another View, p. 467; P'kudei, Another View, p. 560). In addition, the surprising mention of "women who performed tasks at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting" (38:8) hints at roles performed by women at the sanctuary.

—Carol Meyers

Outline—

I. INTRODUCTORY PROCEDURES (35:1–36:7)

- A. Sabbath observance (35:1–3)
- B. Donations for the Tabernacle (35:4–29)
- C. Appointment of artisans (35:30–36:7)

II. BUILDING THE TABERNACLE STRUCTURE AS A PLACE OF GOD (36:8–38)

- A. Coverings (vv. 8–19)
- B. Frames (vv. 20–34)
- C. Textile partitions (vv. 35–38)

III. CONSTRUCTING THE INTERIOR FURNISHINGS (37:1–29)

- A. Ark and its cover (vv. 1–9)
- B. Table and menorah (vv. 10–24)
- C. Incense altar (vv. 25–28)
- D. Anointing oil and incense (v. 29)

IV. COMPLETING THE COURTYARD (38:1–20)

- A. Altar and laver (vv. 1–8)
- B. Enclosure (vv. 9–20)

35:1

Moses then convoked the whole Israelite community and said to them:

These are the things that יהוה has commanded

לה וַיְקֹהֶל מֹשֶׁה אֶת-כָּל-עֵדָה בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וַיֹּאמֶר אֲלֵיכֶם אֱלֹהָה הַדְּבָרִים אֲשֶׁר-צִוָּה יְהוָה לְעֹשָׂת

Introductory Procedures (35:1–36:7)

Before the Israelites begin carrying out the instructions for constructing the Tabernacle, several introductory steps must be taken. The first part of this parashah begins with two directives, the first concerning the Sabbath (35:1–3) and the second concerning materials (35:4–19). Next comes an account of the people's response to this call for contributions (35:20–29). Finally, the appointment of artisans to work with the materials that begin pouring in is announced (35:30–36:7).

SABBATH OBSERVANCE (35:1–3)

The prescriptive texts containing the instructions for the Tabernacle (Exodus 25–31) concluded with a passage about the Sabbath (31:12–17); the descriptive texts now begin with a somewhat briefer passage on the same subject. The prominence of the day of rest after six days of labor, a contrast to the intensity of the work on the Tabernacle, may relate to the importance of the Sabbath as part of Israelite identity at the time—during or after the exile—when these texts were being collected and redacted. (For the prescriptive text earlier in Exodus that parallels this descriptive section, see 31:12–17.)

i. Moses. It is fitting that Moses' name appears at the beginning of Vayak'heil, for he is mentioned often in this parashah and the next, whereas Aaron's name appears infrequently in these last two parashot of Exodus. Here, Mosaic (that is, prophetic) leadership dominates rather than priestly leadership.

the whole Israelite community. The word for community (edah) sometimes refers narrowly to adult males or to officers (as in Numbers 1:2; 27:21); in other instances the term signifies the entire people (see at Exodus 12:3). That the broader sense operates here is indicated by the fact that the Sabbath observance, about which Moses is to speak, includes everyone. Furthermore, when the “whole community” is enjoined to bring materials in v. 4, both women and men explicitly do so (vv. 20, 22). Although (male) priests largely will carry out the cultic activities (see T'zaveh, Another View, p. 489), the sacred shrine itself will belong to the entire community; and the resultant presence of God will benefit everyone.

things. Heb. d'varim, which is the same term used for the stipulations (“words”) of the Decalogue (“Ten Commandments”; see 20:1 and 34:1). Thus, the Sabbath and Tabernacle directives that follow are conceptually linked to the most significant of all divine commands, the Decalogue, as emblematic of the covenant between God and Israel.

► Scholars debate the relationship between the Tabernacle and the Jerusalem Temple.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 538

► The Israelite women had used those mirrors for a most holy purpose.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 538

► The Menorah is yet a different sort of tree. Who ever heard of a tree perpetually on fire?

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 539

► Those who worship carry away with them / more than they bring.

VOICES ► 542

you to do: ²On six days work may be done, but on the seventh day you shall have a sabbath of complete rest, holy to יהוה; whoever does any work on it shall be put to death. ³You shall kindle no fire throughout your settlements on the sabbath day.

⁴Moses said further to the whole community of Israelites:

This is what יהוה has commanded: ⁵Take from among you gifts to יהוה; everyone whose heart is so moved shall bring them—gifts for יהוה: gold, silver, and copper; ⁶blue, purple, and crimson yarns, fine linen, and goats' hair; ⁷tanned ram skins, dolphin skins, and acacia wood; ⁸oil for lighting, spices for the anointing oil and for the aromatic incense;

אתם: ² שְׁשַׁת יَמִים תַּעֲשֶׂה מֶלֶאכָה וּבַיּוֹם הַשְׁבִיעִי יְהוָה לְכָם קָדֵשׁ שְׁבָתוֹן לִיהוָה כָּל־חֻנָּשָׁה בָּו מֶלֶאכָה יוֹמָת: ³ לְאַתְּבָעַר אֵשׁ בְּכָל מִשְׁבְּתֵיכֶם בַּיּוֹם

הַשְׁבָתוֹן: פ

⁴ וַיֹּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל־כָּל־עָדָת בְּנֵי־יִשְׂרָאֵל

לְאֹמֶר

זֶה הַדָּבָר אֲשֶׁר־צִוָּה יְהוָה לְאֹמֶר: ⁵ קָדוֹם מִתְּכֶם תְּרוּמָה לִיהוָה כָּל נְדִיבָה לְבוֹ יְבִיאָה אֶת תְּרוּמָת יְהוָה זָהָב וּכְסֵף וּונְחַשָּׁת: ⁶ וּתְכַלֵּת וְאַרְגְּמָן וְתוֹלְעָת שְׁנִי וְשָׁׁׁעַזְים: ⁷ וְעָרָת אִילָם מְאַדְמִים וְעַרְתָּה תְּחַשִּׁים וְעַזְיִ שְׁטִים: ⁸ וְשָׁמְן לְפָנָoor וּבְשָׁמִים לְשָׁמֵן הַמְשָׁחָה וְלְקַטְּרָת הַסְּמִים:

DONATIONS FOR THE TABERNACLE (35:4–29)

This unit, which elicits the donation of materials for the Tabernacle, is longer and also more systematic than the parallel prescriptive passage in 25:1–9. It specifies not only the materials that are to be collected but also the purposes for which they are to be used. It anticipates the somewhat fuller listing that comes at the completion of the project (39:33–43; compare 31:7–11).

4. whole community of Israelites . . . has commanded. The language here again indicates that both women and men are included, and it underscores God's role in this project.

5. heart is so moved. When the root n-d-b ("to be willing, be moved") is used with "heart," it treats the heart as the source of human motivation. In biblical antiquity, people believed the heart to be the identity or essence of a person (see also at 28:29).

for יהוה. The notion that the gifts are for God, which appears twice in this verse and again in v. 24, emphasizes the purpose for which they will be used, namely, to construct God's dwelling place.

gold, silver, and copper. These three metals will be used for the components of the Tabernacle according to their proximity to the Holy of Holies. The most sacred objects will be made of gold.

copper. The Hebrew term also designates bronze (a copper-based alloy), which, given its strength and hardness, is more likely the intended meaning with regard to the Tabernacle.

6. blue, purple, and crimson yarns. These were the most desirable and expensive yarns in ancient Israel and the wider Near East. (On the manufacture of these yarns and on women's role in this process, see at 25:4; at 35:25–26; T'rumerah, Another View, p. 467; P'kudei, Another View, p. 560.)

7. dolphin. This meaning of this Hebrew term is uncertain; perhaps it represents a specific color—probably rust—of tanned and dyed sheep- or goat-skin, rather than a sea animal.

8. oil. Along with its many other vital uses in daily life, olive oil served as a clean-burning lamp fuel, and it was used to consecrate objects and individuals (see at 29:7). Like blood and water, oil was a liquid associated with transformation and holiness. The preparation of olive oil—at least in village settings in the Land of Israel—was likely a woman's task. See further at 27:20.

⁹lapis lazuli and other stones for setting, for the ephod and the breastpiece.

¹⁰And let all among you who are skilled come and make all that has commanded: ¹¹the Tabernacle, its tent and its covering, its clasps and its planks, its bars, its posts, and its sockets; ¹²the ark and its poles, the cover, and the curtain for the screen; ¹³the table, and its poles and all its utensils; and the bread of display; ¹⁴the lampstand for lighting, its furnishings and its lamps, and the oil for lighting; ¹⁵the altar of incense and its poles; the anointing oil and the aromatic incense; and the entrance screen for the entrance of the Tabernacle; ¹⁶the altar of burnt offering, its copper grating, its poles, and all its furnishings; the laver and its stand; ¹⁷the hangings of the enclosure, its posts and its sockets, and the screen for the gate of the court; ¹⁸the pegs for the Tabernacle, the pegs for the enclosure, and their cords; ¹⁹the service vestments for officiating in the sanctuary, the sacral vestments of Aaron the priest and the vestments of his sons for priestly service.

²⁰So the whole community of the Israelites left Moses' presence. ²¹And everyone who excelled in ⁹ וְאֶבְנֵי-שָׂדָם וְאֶבְנֵי מַלְאִים לְאָפֹוד

וְלִחְשָׁן:

¹⁰ וּכֶל-חֲכָמִים-לֵב בְּכֶם יָבֹא וַיַּעֲשֶׂוּ אֶת כָּל-אֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה: ¹¹ אֶת-הַמִּשְׁבֵּן אֶת-הַאֲלֹוֹת
וְאֶת-מִבְטָחוֹ אֶת-קְרָסִיו וְאֶת-קְרָשִׁיו אֶת-
בָּرִיחָו בְּרִיחָיו אֶת-עַמְדָיו וְאֶת-אַדְנָיו:
¹² אֶת-הַאֲרֹן וְאֶת-בְּקָרְבָּיו אֶת-הַפְּרָתָה וְאֶת-
פָּרָכָת הַמִּסְךָ: ¹³ אֶת-הַשְּׁלָחָן וְאֶת-בְּקָרְבָּיו
וְאֶת-כְּלָל-בְּלִיו וְאֶת-לְחֵם הַפְּנִים: ¹⁴ וְאֶת-
מִנְרָת הַמְּאוֹר וְאֶת-בְּלִילָה וְאֶת-בְּרִיתָה וְאֶת-שְׁמָן הַמְּאוֹר: ¹⁵ וְאֶת-מִזְבֵּח הַקְּטָרֶת וְאֶת-בְּדָיו וְאֶת שְׁמָן הַמְשָׁחָה וְאֶת קְטָרֶת
הַסְּמִים וְאֶת-מִסְך הַפְּתָח לְפִתְחַת הַמִּשְׁבֵּן:
¹⁶ אֶת | מִזְבֵּח הַעַלְה וְאֶת-מִכְבֵּר הַנְּחַשָּׁת
אֲשֶׁר-לֹא אֶת-בְּקָרְבָּיו וְאֶת-כְּלָל-בְּלִיו אֶת-הַבְּרִיא
וְאֶת-כְּבָנו: ¹⁷ אֶת קְלֵי הַחֶצֶר אֶת-עַמְדָיו
וְאֶת-אַדְנָה וְאֶת מִסְך שַׁעַר הַחֶצֶר:
¹⁸ אֶת-יִתְרָת הַמִּשְׁבֵּן וְאֶת-יִתְרָת הַחֶצֶר
וְאֶת-מִתְרִיהָם: ¹⁹ אֶת-בְּגָדִי הַשְׁרוּד לְשֻׁרְתָּה
בְּקֹש אֶת-בְּגָדִי הַקְּדָש לְאַחֲרֵן הַכְּבָן
וְאֶת-בְּגָדִי בְּנֵי לְכָהָן:

²⁰ וַיַּצְאוּ כָל-עֵדָת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל מִלְפָנֵי
מֹשֶׁה: ²¹ וַיָּבֹא כָל-אָיש אֲשֶׁר-גִּנְשָׂא לְבָבוֹ

9. lapis lazuli. More likely onyx or possibly carnelian.

10. skilled. Although the commissioning of the artisans does not appear until the end of this parashah, their work is anticipated here. The word “skilled” translates the expression chacham lev (literally “wisdom of heart”), a phrase that treats the heart as the source of technical expertise and of wisdom more generally (compare at v. 5).

11. Tabernacle, its tent and its covering. The term Tabernacle (“dwelling”; see at 25:8 and 9) here has two components: the tent and its coverings.

12–15. The internal furnishings—the ark, table, lampstand, and altar—are listed in the same order as in Exodus 25, with the exception of the gilded incense altar, which in the prescriptive texts is not mentioned until 30:1–10.

19. service vestments. Even though the ceremonial priestly garments are not structural items, they are appended to the list of its components because they are considered part of the shrine.

20. whole community. As in vv. 1 and 4, this phrase includes women and men. Here, this designation for the people introduces the response to the call for contributions.

21. everyone. Heb. ish, which sometimes means “man” but here is used generically, as is confirmed in 35:22, 29, and 36:6.

ability and everyone whose spirit was moved came, bringing to יהוה an offering for the work of the Tent of Meeting and for all its service and for the sacral vestments.²² Men and women, all whose hearts moved them, all who would make an elevation offering of gold to יהוה, came bringing brooches, earrings, rings, and pendants—gold objects of all kinds.²³ And everyone who possessed blue, purple, and crimson yarns, fine linen, goats' hair, tanned ram skins, and dolphin skins, brought them;²⁴ everyone who would make gifts of silver or copper brought them as gifts for יהוה; and everyone who possessed acacia wood for any work of the

וְכֹל אֲשֶׁר נִדְבָּה רְוחָו אֲתָּו הַבֵּיאוּ אֶת־
תְּרוּמָת יְהֹוָה לְמִלְאָכָת אַחֲלָל מוֹעֵד וְלְכָל־
עַבְרָתוֹ וְלְבָגְדִּי הַקָּדֵשׁ :²² וַיָּבֹאוּ הָאֲנָשִׁים
עַל־הַנְּשָׁים כָּל־| נִדְבַּב לְבָב הַבֵּיאוּ חַח וְנוּזָם
וְטֻבָּעַת וְכוֹמָן בְּלַבְלִי זָהָב וְכָל־אִישׁ אֲשֶׁר
הַנִּיעַף תְּנוּפָת זָהָב לְיהֹוָה :²³ וְכָל־אִישׁ
אֲשֶׁר־גִּמְצָא אֲתָּו תְּכִלָּת וְאַרְגָּמָן וְתְזֻלָּעָת
שְׂנִי וְשַׁשׁ וְעַזְזִים וְעַרְלָת אַיִּלָּם מִאֲדָמִים
וּרְעַת תְּחִשָּׁים הַבֵּיאוּ :²⁴ בְּלַמְרִים
תְּרוּמָת בְּסָךְ וְנִחְשָׁת הַבֵּיאוּ אֲתָּו תְּרוּמָת
יְהֹוָה וְכָל אֲשֶׁר נִמְצָא אֲתָּו עַצִּי שְׁטִים who excelled in ability. The Hebrew expression (literally “whose heart was lifted”) is similar to “skilled” (literally “wise of heart”) in v. 10.

spirit. Heb. ruach, which refers to the vitalizing force given by God, the “divine spirit” mentioned in 31:3 and 35:31—and manifest in human mental abilities, talents, and emotions.

Tent of Meeting. The term ohel mo’ed is an alternate, perhaps more ancient, name for the tent shrine usually called the Tabernacle (see at 27:21 and at 33:7–11).

22. Men and women. The plural Hebrew word for “women” (nashim) appears rarely in Exodus, only six times: in 1:19 in reference to Egyptian women giving birth; in 15:20 to denote the women who performed with Miriam after crossing the sea; in 22:23 (translated “wives”) to indicate those who will become widows if their husbands disobey God; in 32:2 to signify the female donors of gold used to make the Golden Calf; here, to designate the female contributors of materials for the Tabernacle (note the singular used in 35:29 and 36:6); and in 35:26 to point out female artisans. More often, women are subsumed under collective “masculine” terminology that is employed inclusively, such as ish (in this book often translated generically as “everyone,” as in vv. 21, 23, 24) and b’nei yisrael (“Israelites”—literally “sons of Israel”). Nevertheless, female terms sometimes are essential, as is the case here because of the gender-specific ownership of the costly items to be donated. That is, women owned valuables and could make decisions, independently of their husbands or fathers, about using them as donations (see also at 25:2). The English translation “men and women” obscures the Hebrew (ha-anashim al ha-nashim), which seems to say that the men came “in addition to” the women, perhaps indicating primacy of women as donors.

whose hearts moved them. The narrative underscores that women were motivated to contribute their resources to this sacred endeavor (see at 35:5).

elevation offering. Heb. t’nuah, which denotes food offerings in 29:24–27, refers to a special sanctification ritual employed when dedicating something to God. Here, it indicates the special status of the objects to be used for God’s dwelling.

brooches, earrings, rings, and pendants. Textual and archeological evidence shows that men as well as women wore various kinds of jewelry in the ancient world. The impulse for self-decoration transcended gender, whether to connote status, to offer protection (because shiny jewelry was believed to keep harmful spirits at bay), to indicate a social or political position, to function in economic transactions, or to indicate piety. Note that in 3:22 both sons and daughters wear the precious metal objects taken from the Egyptians.

23–24. possessed...possessed. The verb (m-tz-a, service brought that.²⁵ And all the skilled women spun with their own hands, and brought what they had spun, in blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and in fine linen.²⁶ And all the women who excelled in that skill spun the goats' hair.²⁷ And the chieftains brought lapis lazuli and other stones for setting, for the ephod and for the breastpiece;²⁸ and spices and oil for lighting, for the anointing oil, and for the לְכָל-מִלְאָכֶת הַעֲבֹדָה הַבְּיֹאוֹ: ²⁵ וְכֹל-אֲשֶׁר חִכְמָת-לְבָב בִּידֵיכֶת טוֹן וַיְבִיאוּ מִטְפָּה

אֲתִיה-תְּכִלָּת וְאֲתִיה-אַרְגְּמָן אֲתִיה-תּוּלָעָת
הַשְׁנִי וְאֲתִיה-הַשְׁשָׁה: ²⁶ וְכֹל-הַגְּשָׁים אֲשֶׁר
נִשְׂאָלְבָן אֲתָנָה בְּחִכְמָה טוֹן אֲתִיה-הַעֲיוּם:
וְהַגְּשָׁם הַבְּיֹאוֹ אֲתִיה-הַשְׁהָם וְאֲתִיה-²⁷
אַבְנֵי הַמְלָאִים לְאַפּוֹד וְלְחַשֵּׁן: ²⁸ וְאֲתִיה-
הַבְּשָׁם וְאֲתִיה-הַשְׁמָן לְמַאוֹר וְלְשָׁמָן

“to find”) is used here in a passive form to indicate something that “is found” in a given place or with a given person. As shown by the way this verb is used in the legal prescriptions of Exodus (such as 21:16; 22:3), it indicates possession and is tantamount to ownership. Thus, women and men each owned and had the right to dispose of the items listed here.

25. This verse and the next one confirm the vital role of women in textile production in the ancient world, a fact confirmed by archeological evidence (see T'rumah, Another View, p. 467; P'kudei, Another View, p. 560).

skilled women. Literally, “every woman [with] wisdom of the heart,” thus indicating technological know-how, as in v. 10. Like other female professionals in ancient Israel (such as midwives and musicians), women who were experts in textile production made important contributions to community life and would have experienced the respect of others for their work and concomitant self-esteem.

spun with their own hands... spun. The word for “spin” occurs in the Bible only here and in the next verse, although references to spindles are found in Proverbs 31:19 and elsewhere. Plant and animal fibers, usually no more than a few inches long, cannot be used directly to make textiles; they must first be twisted tightly, by spinning them on a wooden stick (spindle), to form string or yarn. Spinning techniques, developed and carried out almost exclusively by women, were highly developed in ancient Israel and the wider Near East. Because it is such a time-consuming task, women typically gathered together to spin; such gender-specific group activities likely contributed to female bonding and networks. Proverbs 31 presents an idealized but accurate depiction of an adult woman (eishet chayil) in a settled community who produces textiles for domestic use and market.

with their own hands. Spinning requires the use of both hands—one to hold the spindle and the other to feed fibers onto it—and even then it is difficult to maintain the separate actions of each hand.

brought...linen. The text is elliptical, in that it has mentioned spinning and now specifies the colored woolen and the linen fabrics; it omits the elaborate dying process required to produce the colored yarns. (For more details on this process, see T'rumah, Another View, p. 467.)

26. excelled. As in v. 21, a higher level of expertise is indicated for the female spinners.

spun the goats' hair. Extra skill was needed for spinning goats' hair, perhaps because the hairs tend to be shorter than those of sheep and thus more difficult to pull onto a spindle.

27. chieftains. The term for these officials (nasi in the singular) is used throughout the priestly literature of the Torah to designate tribal leaders (as in Numbers 1:16). As in any society with different socio-political ranks, gifts and tribute collected by leaders make them more affluent and thus able to provide the costly gemstones mentioned in this verse.

28. spices and oil. These substances for different parts of the ritual are mentioned together here. Although the chieftains bring these items, they likely were prepared by women, who were typically aromatic incense.²⁹ Thus the Israelites, all the men and women whose hearts moved them to bring anything for the work that יהוה, through Moses, had commanded to be done, brought it as a freewill offering to יהוה.

³⁰And Moses said to the Israelites: See, יהָנָה has singled out by name Bezalel, son of Uri son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, ³¹endowing him with a divine spirit of skill, ability, and knowledge in every kind of craft, ³²and inspiring him to make designs for work in gold, silver, and copper, ³³to cut stones for setting and to carve wood—to work in every kind of designer's craft—³⁴and to give directions. He and Oholiab son of Ahisamach of the tribe of Dan ³⁵have been endowed with the skill to do any work—of the carver, the designer, the embroiderer in blue, purple, crimson yarns, and in fine linen, and of the weaver—as workers in all crafts and as the “perfumers” in ancient Israel (see I Samuel 8:13). Women’s skills in food preparation probably suited them to be the keepers of the special formulas used to produce aromatic substances and fine oils (but see I Chronicles 9:30).

29. men and women. This summary of the donation of materials again emphasizes that everyone—women as well as men—participated (see at v. 22 and 36:6).

freewill offering. Heb. n'davah, which refers to private and voluntary offerings to God. Although Moses has called for contributions, the gifts are considered voluntary.

APPOINTMENT OF ARTISANS (35:30–36:7)

With an abundance of materials in hand, the commissioning of the artisans is the last step before the actual construction of the Tabernacle can begin. The designation of these workers, given to Moses

המְשֻׁחָה וּלְקַטְרָת הַסְּמִים: ²⁹ בְּלֹא-אִישׁ
וְאֵשֶׁת אֲשֶׁר נִדְבֵּט לִבָּם אַתֶּם לְהַבִּיא
לְכָל-הַמְּלָאכָה אֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה לְעֵשָׂות
בִּידֵי-מֹשֶׁה הַבִּיאוּ בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל נִדְבָּה
לְיהוָה: פ

וַיָּאמֶר מֹשֶׁה אֶל-בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל רְאוּ קָרְא
יְהוָה בְּשֵׁם בְּצַלָּל בְּנֵי-אֹורי בְּנֵי-חוּרוֹ לְמַטְהָ
יְהוּדָה: ³¹ וַיָּמִילָא אָתוֹ רָוחַ אֱלֹהִים
בְּחַכְמָה בַּתְבּוֹנָה וּבְרָעָת וּבְכָל-מְלָאכָה:
וַיָּחַשֵּׁב מְחַשְּׁבָת לְעֵשָׂת בְּזַהָב וּבְכַפְסָף
וּבְנִזְחָשָׁת: ³³ וּבְחַרְשָׁת אָבוֹן לְמַלְאָת
וּבְחַרְשָׁת עֵץ לְעֵשָׂות בְּכָל-מְלָאכָת
מְחַשְּׁבָת: ³⁴ וְלְהֹוֶת נִתְןֵן בְּלִבּוֹ הַוָּא
וְאַהֲלִי אָב בְּנֵי-חִיטָּמָן לְמַטְהָ-יְהוָה: ³⁵ מִילָא
אַתֶּם חִכְמָת-לִבּוֹ לְעֵשָׂות בְּלַ-מְלָאכָת
חִרְשָׁן וּחַשְׁבָּן וּרְקָם בַּתְכִלָּת וּבְאַרְגָּמָן בְּתוּלָת הַשְׁנִי וּבְשָׁשׁ וּאַרגְעָלָן בְּלַ- prescriptively in 31:1-11, is now announced to the community; and the materials are handed over to the artisans so that they can begin their task.

32. inspiring him. The Hebrew here consists of a verb-noun pair from the root ch-sh-b ("to think"), thus emphasizing the creativity and brilliance of Bezalel's designs, artisanship, and leadership.

34. give directions. Although the translation says “directions,” the term generally means basic instruction, which is relevant here. The other workers will owe their artisanship to the teaching abilities of Bezalel and perhaps to those of Bezalel’s second-in-command, Oholiab (36:1), who are not only skilled artisans themselves but also skilled teachers.

35. as workers in all crafts and as makers of designs. This phrase divides the procedures into execution and planning. Four procedures have been mentioned: carving, designing, embroidering, and weaving.

makers of designs. 36 Let, then, Bezalel and Oholiab and all the skilled persons whom יְהוָה has endowed with skill and ability to perform expertly all the tasks connected with the service of the sanctuary carry out all that יְהוָה has commanded.

²Moses then called Bezalel and Oholiab, and every skilled person whom יְהוָה had endowed with skill, everyone who excelled in ability, to undertake the task and carry it out. ³They took over from Moses all the gifts that the Israelites had brought, to carry out the tasks connected with the service of the sanctuary. But when these continued to bring free-will offerings to him morning after morning, ⁴all the artisans who were engaged in the tasks of the sanctuary came, from the task upon which each one was engaged, ⁵and said to Moses, “The people are bringing more than is needed for the tasks entailed in the work that יְהוָה has commanded to be done.” ⁶Moses thereupon had this proclamation made throughout the camp: “Let no man or woman make further effort toward gifts for the sanctuary!” So the people stopped bringing: ⁷their efforts had been more than enough for all the tasks to be done.

מֶלֶאכָה וְחַשְׁבֵי מִחְשָׁבָת: לו וְעַשָּׂה
בְּצַלְאֵל וְאַהֲלֵי אָב וְכָל אִיש חַכְמִילָב
אֲשֶׁר נָתַן יְהוָה חַכְמָה וִתְבוֹנָה בְּהַפְּנֵי
לְדֻעָת לְעֵשָׂת אֶת־כָּל־מֶלֶאכָה עֲבָדָת
הַקָּדֵש לְכָל אֲשֶׁר־צָוָה יְהוָה:
² וַיָּקֹרְא מֹשֶׁה אֶל־בְּצַלְאֵל וְאֶל־אַהֲלֵי אָב
וְאֶל כָּל־אִיש חַכְמִילָב אֲשֶׁר נָתַן יְהוָה
חַכְמָה בְּלֹבֶן פֶּל אֲשֶׁר נִשְׂאוּ לִבְוֹן לְקַרְבָּה
אֶל־הַמֶּלֶאכָה לְעֵשָׂת אַתָּה: ³ וַיַּחֲזֹק
מִלְפָנֵי מֹשֶׁה אֵת כָּל־הַתְּרוּמָה אֲשֶׁר
הָבִיאוּ בְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְמִלְאָכָת עֲבָדָת הַקָּדֵש
לְעֵשָׂת אַתָּה וְהֵם הָבִיאוּ אֶלְיוֹן עוֹד
נִרְבָּה בְּבָקָר בְּבָקָר: ⁴ וַיַּבְאֹו כָּל־חַכְמָמִים
הָעֲשִׂים אֵת כָּל־מֶלֶאכָת הַקָּדֵש אִיש־אִיש
מִמֶּלֶאכָתוֹ אֲשֶׁר־הַמָּה עֲשִׂים: ⁵ וַיֹּאמֶר
אֶל־מֹשֶׁה לְאָמֵר מְרַבִּים הַעַם לְהַבְיא מִקְדָּש
הַעֲבָדָה לְמֶלֶאכָה אֲשֶׁר־צָוָה יְהוָה לְעֵשָׂת
אַתָּה: ⁶ וַיַּצְוֹן מֹשֶׁה וַיַּעֲבִירוּ קָוֶל בְּמִחְנָה
לְאָמֵר אִיש וְאִשָּׁה אֶל־יְעַשׂ־וְעוֹד מֶלֶאכָה
לְתְרוּמָת הַקָּדֵש וַיַּבְלִיא הַעַם מִהְבֵיא:
⁷ וְהַמֶּלֶאכָה הִיְתָה דִים לְכָל־הַמֶּלֶאכָה
לְעֵשָׂת אַתָּה וְהוֹתֵר: ס

36:1. all the skilled persons. Literally, “every ish [with] wisdom of heart.” The word ish sometimes means “man” but is often used generically when it refers to a category of persons (see at 35:21), as it does here. Because of the mention of “the weaver” in the previous verse, and because the quality of being “wise of heart” was associated specifically with women in 35:25, the present translation presumes that women were among the artisans discussed here.

2. Moses then called. God has proclaimed who the artisans will be and has given them the requisite abilities, but it is up to Moses to assemble them.

3. continued to bring. Contributions arrive even after construction begins. It seems likely that they are going directly to the artisans, for the builders need to make Moses aware of this over-abundance.

6. proclamation. Only an official decree from Moses can stop the flow of donations.

“no man or woman.” Instead of using a generic term for those receiving the injunction to cease bringing materials, for the third time the genders are mentioned separately, probably because of the prominence of women in contributing items for the Tabernacle (see also at 35:22, 29).

⁸Then all the skilled among those engaged in the work made the tabernacle of ten strips of cloth, which they made of fine twisted linen, blue, purple, and crimson yarns; into these they worked a design of cherubim. ⁹The length of each cloth was twenty-eight cubits, and the width of each cloth was four cubits, all cloths having the same measurements. ¹⁰They joined five of the cloths to one another, and they joined the other five cloths to one another. ¹¹They made loops of blue wool on the edge of the outermost cloth of the one set, and did the same on the edge of the outermost cloth of the other set: ¹²they made fifty loops on the one cloth, and they made fifty loops on the edge of the end cloth of the other set, the loops being opposite one another. ¹³And they made fifty gold clasps and coupled the units to one another with the clasps, so that the tabernacle became one whole.

¹⁴They made cloths of goats' hair for a tent over the tabernacle; they made the cloths eleven in number. ¹⁵The length of each cloth was thirty cubits, and the width of each cloth was four cubits, the eleven cloths having the same measurements. ¹⁶They joined five of the cloths by themselves, and

⁸וַיַּעֲשׂוּ כָל־חֶכְמֵלָב בְּעִשֵּׂי הַמְלָאָכָה אַתָּה־
הַמְשֻׁבֵּן עֶשֶׂר יְרִיעָת שְׁשׁ מְשׂוֹר וִתְכַלָּת
וְאַרְגָּמָן וְתוֹלְעָת שְׁנִי בְּרַבִּים מִעֲשֵׂה חַשְׁבָּ
עֲשָׂה אֶתְּם: ⁹אֶרְךְ הַיְּרִיעָה הַאַחַת שְׁמִינִית
וְעַשְׂרִית בָּאָמָה וּרְחֵב אַרְבָּע בָּאָמָה
הַיְּרִיעָה הַאַחַת מִקְהָא אַחַת לְכָל־הַיְּרִיעָת:
¹⁰וַיְחַבֵּל אַתִּחְמַשׁ הַיְּרִיעָת אַחַת אֶל־
אַחַת וְחַמֵּשׁ יְרִיעָת חָבֵר אַחַת אֶל־אַחַת:
¹¹וַיְعַשׂ לְלָאת תְּבָלָת עַל שְׁפַת הַיְּרִיעָה
הַאַחַת מִקְצָה בְּמִחְבָּרָת בֵּין עַשְׁל בְּשִׁפְתָּה
הַיְּרִיעָה הַקְּיצָנָה בְּמִחְבָּרָת הַשְׁנִית:
¹²חַמֵּשִׁים לְלָאת עַשְׁה בַּיְּרִיעָה הַאַחַת
וְחַמֵּשִׁים לְלָאת עַשְׁה בְּקָצָה הַיְּרִיעָה אֲשֶׁר
בְּמִחְבָּרָת הַשְׁנִית מִקְבִּילָת הַלְּלָאות אַחַת אֶל־אַחַת: ¹³וַיְעַשׂ חַמֵּשִׁים קְרָטִי זָהָב
וַיְחַבֵּר אַתִּי־הַיְּרִיעָת אַחַת אֶל־אַחַת
בְּקָרְסִים וְיָהִי הַמְשֻׁבֵּן אֶחָד: ¹⁴וַיְעַשׂ יְרִיעָת עַזְוִים לְאַחַל עַל־הַמְשֻׁבֵּן
עַשְׁתִּירְעָשָׂרָה יְרִיעָת עַשְׁה אֶתְּם: ¹⁵אֶרְךְ
הַיְּרִיעָה הַאַחַת שְׁלָשִׁים בָּאָמָה וְאַרְבָּע
אַמּוֹת רָחֵב הַיְּרִיעָה הַאַחַת מִקְהָא אַחַת
לְעַשְׂתִּי עָשָׂרָה יְרִיעָת: ¹⁶וַיְחַבֵּר אַתִּחְמַשׁ
הַיְּרִיעָת לְבָרֵד וְאַתִּשְׁשֵׁה הַיְּרִיעָת לְבָרֵד:

Building the Tabernacle Structure as a Place of God

(36:8–38)

With materials and artisans assembled, construction work can begin. The narrative proceeds in a fashion that makes sense technologically: here, the components for the structure are fabricated before its furnishings are crafted, whereas in the earlier, prescriptive texts the furnishings come first. However, the internal order of this unit is the same as in the corresponding unit in Exodus 26: first the coverings (36:8–19), then the frames (36:20–34), and finally the textile partitions (36:35–38).

COVERINGS (36:8–19)

The Tabernacle is a tent. Its major components are two layers of woven textiles (one of a linen-wool mix, the other of goats' hair) covered by two layers (one of ram skins, the other of "dolphin" skins). The various fastening devices are also enumerated. (See further at the prescriptive text that parallels this descriptive section, 26:1–14. On women's roles as textile artisans, see at 35:25.)

8. tabernacle. The translation does not capitalize this word in this passage (vv. 8–19), to indicate that here the Hebrew noun mishkan denotes only the dwelling's inner fabric component, which is made of decorated linen.

the other six cloths by themselves.¹⁷ They made fifty loops on the edge of the outermost cloth of the one set, and they made fifty loops on the edge of the end cloth of the other set.¹⁸ They made fifty copper clasps to couple the tent together so that it might become one whole.¹⁹ And they made a covering of tanned ram skins for the tent, and a covering of dolphin skins above.

²⁰They made the planks for the Tabernacle of acacia wood, upright.²¹ The length of each plank was ten cubits, the width of each plank a cubit and a half.²² Each plank had two tenons, parallel to each other; they did the same with all the planks of the Tabernacle.²³ Of the planks of the Tabernacle, they made twenty planks for the south side,²⁴ making forty silver sockets under the twenty planks, two sockets under one plank for its two tenons and two sockets under each following plank for its two tenons;²⁵ and for the other side wall of the Tabernacle, the north side, twenty planks,²⁶ with their forty silver sockets, two sockets under one plank and two sockets under each following plank.²⁷ And for the rear of the Tabernacle, to the west, they made six planks;²⁸ and they made two planks for the corners of the Tabernacle at the rear.²⁹ They matched at the bottom, but terminated as one at the top into one ring; they did so with both of them at the two corners.³⁰ Thus there were eight planks with their sockets of silver: sixteen sockets, two under each plank.

¹⁷ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה לְלֹאֹת חָמְשִׁים עַל שְׁפַת הַיְרִיעָה הַקִּיצָנָה בְּמִחְבָּרָת וְחָמְשִׁים לְלֹאֹת עָשָׂה עַל-שְׁפַת הַיְרִיעָה הַחֲבָרָת הַשְׁנִית: ¹⁸ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה קְרֻשִׁי נְחַשֶּׁת חָמְשִׁים לְחֶבֶר אֶת-הַאֲדָל לְהִלִּת אֶחָד: ¹⁹ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה מַבְטָה לְאֶדֶל עֲרָת אִילָם מְאַדְמִים וּמַכְתָּה עֲרָת תְּחִשִּׁים מַלְמָעָלה: ס

²⁰ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה אֶת-הַקְרָשִׁים לְמִשְׁכָּן עַצִּי שְׁטִים עַמְּדִים: ²¹ עַשֶּׂר אַמְתָּה אַרְזָה הַקְרָשָׁה וְאַמְתָּה וְחַצִּי הַאַמְתָּה רַחֲבָה הַקְרָשָׁה הַאֶחָד: ²² שְׁתִּי יָדַת לְקָרְשָׁה הַאֶחָד מַשְׁלָבָת אֶחָת אֶל-אֶחָת בֵּין עָשָׂה לְכָל קְרָשִׁי הַמִּשְׁכָּן: ²³ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה אֶת-הַקְרָשִׁים לְמִשְׁכָּן עַשְׂרִים קְרָשִׁים אֶת-הַקְרָשִׁים לְמִשְׁכָּן תְּפִאָת נֶגֶב תִּקְנָה: ²⁴ וְאַרְבָּעִים אַדְנִי-בָּשָׂר כֶּסֶף עָשָׂה תַּחַת עַשְׂרִים הַקְרָשִׁים שְׁנִי אַדְנִים תַּחַת-הַקְרָשָׁה הַאֶחָד לְשְׁתִּיו יְדָתִיו וְשְׁנִי אַדְנִים תַּחַת-הַקְרָשָׁה הַאֶחָד לְשְׁתִּיו יְדָתִיו: ²⁵ וְלֹאֲלֹעַ הַמִּשְׁכָּן הַשְׁנִית לְפִאָת אַדְנִים כֶּסֶף שְׁנִי אַדְנִים תַּחַת הַקְרָשָׁה הַאֶחָד וְשְׁנִי אַדְנִים תַּחַת הַקְרָשָׁה הַאֶחָד: ²⁶ וְאַרְבָּעִים צְפָן עָשָׂה עַשְׂרִים קְרָשִׁים אַדְנִים כֶּסֶף שְׁנִי אַדְנִים תַּחַת הַקְרָשָׁה הַאֶחָד וְלִירְבָּתִי הַמִּשְׁכָּן יְמָה עָשָׂה שְׁחָה קְרָשִׁים וְשְׁנִי קְרָשִׁים עָשָׂה לְמִקְצָעָת הַמִּשְׁכָּן בִּירְכִּים: ²⁹ וְהִיוּ תְּמִימִים אֶל-רוֹאשׁוֹ מַלְמָטָה וַיַּחֲנוּ יְהִיוּ תְּמִימִים אֶל-רוֹאשׁוֹ אֶל-הַטְּבָעָת הַאֶחָת בֵּין עָשָׂה לְשְׁנִיהם וְאַדְנִים שְׁנִי הַמִּקְצָעָת: ³⁰ וְהִיוּ שְׁמֹנָה קְרָשִׁים אַדְנִים שְׁנִי אַדְנִים תַּחַת הַקְרָשָׁה הַאֶחָד:

FRAMES (36:20–34)

The structure's frame is to be constructed of a complex system of gilded boards and bars with metal fastenings; the frame is to be set into bases (see at 26:15–30).

³¹They made bars of acacia wood, five for the planks of the one side wall of the Tabernacle,³²five bars for the planks of the other side wall of the Tabernacle, and five bars for the planks of the wall of the Tabernacle at the rear, to the west;³³they made the center bar to run, halfway up the planks, from end to end.³⁴They overlaid the planks with gold, and made their rings of gold, as holders for the bars; and they overlaid the bars with gold.

³⁵They made the curtain of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen, working into it a design of cherubim.³⁶They made for it four posts of acacia wood and overlaid them with gold, with their hooks of gold; and they cast for them four silver sockets.

³⁷They made the screen for the entrance of the Tent, of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen, done in embroidery;³⁸and five posts for it with their hooks. They overlaid their tops and their bands with gold; but the five sockets were of copper.

37 Bezalel made the ark of acacia wood, two and a half cubits long, a cubit and a half wide, and a cubit and a half high.²He overlaid it with pure gold, inside and out; and he made a gold molding for it round about.³He cast four gold rings for it, for its four feet: two rings on one of its side walls

³¹וַיִּעַשׂ בְּרִיחַ עָצֵי שְׁטִים חַמְשָׁה לְקָרְשֵׁי אֶלְעִיהַמְשָׁבֵן הַאֲחַת: ³²וְחַמְשָׁה בְּרִיחַ לְקָרְשֵׁי אֶלְעִיהַמְשָׁבֵן הַשְׁנִית וְחַמְשָׁה בְּרִיחַ לְקָרְשֵׁי המְשָׁבֵן לִירְכָּתִים יִמְחַזֵּה: ³³וַיִּעַשׂ אֶת־הַבְּرִיחַ הַתְּיִיכֵן לְבָרֶךְ בְּתוֹךְ הַקְּרָשִׁים מִן־הַקָּצָחָה אֶל־הַקָּצָחָה: ³⁴וְאֶת־הַקְּרָשִׁים צְפָה זָהָב וְאֶת־תְּבֻעַת עָשָׂה זָהָב בְּתַחַת לְבִרְיכָם וַיַּצַּפֵּן אֶת־הַבְּרִיחַם זָהָב: ³⁵וַיִּעַשׂ אֶת־הַפְּרָכָת תְּכִלָּת וְאֶרְגָּמָן וְתוֹלָעָת שְׁנִי וְשִׁשׁ מִשְׁזָר מִעָשָׂה חַשְׁבָּה עָשָׂה אֶתְהָ כְּרָבִים: ³⁶וַיִּעַשׂ לְהָ אֶרְבָּעָה עַמּוֹדִי שְׁטִים וַיַּצְפֵּם זָהָב וְוַיַּחַם זָהָב וַיַּצְקַע לְהָם אֶרְבָּעָה אֶדְנִי־כְּסֶף: ³⁷וַיִּעַשׂ מִסְלָל לְפָתָח הַאֲדָל תְּכִלָּת וְאֶרְגָּמָן וְתוֹלָעָת שְׁנִי וְשִׁשׁ מִשְׁזָר מִעָשָׂה רַקְם: ³⁸וְאֶת־עַמּוֹדִי חַמְשָׁה וְאֶת־זְנוּדָם וְצְפָה רַאשֵׁיהם וְחַשְׁקִיעָם זָהָב וְאֶת־נִידָּם חַמְשָׁה נְחַשָּׁת: פ

לוּ וַיִּעַשׂ בְּצַלָּל אֶת־הָאָרֶן עָצֵי שְׁטִים אֶמְתִּים וְחַצִּי אֶרְבוֹן וְאַמְּהָ וְחַצִּי רְחַבּוֹן וְאַמְּהָ וְחַצִּי קְמָתוֹ: ²וַיַּצְפַּחוּ זָהָב טְהוֹר מִבְּית וּמִחְווֹן וַיִּعַשׂ לוּ זָהָב סְבִיבָה: ³וַיַּצְקַע לוּ אֶרְבָּעָה טְבֻעָת זָהָב עַל אֶרְבָּעָה פְּעַמְתִּיו וְשְׁתִּי טְבֻעָת עַל־צְלָעוֹ הַאֲחַת

TEXTILE PARTITIONS (36:35–38)

This passage describes the construction of the fabric divider (“curtain” or parochet) that will separate the large interior space into two main sections: the Holy of Holies, and the Holy space—where the daily and weekly rituals of light, incense, and bread are to take place. The other divider (“screen”) will separate the interior space from the surrounding courtyard. (See further at the prescriptive text that parallels this descriptive section, 26:31–37.)

Constructing the Interior Furnishings (37:1–29)

Once the directions for making the tent’s components have been obeyed, the narrative turns to the furnishings for its interior. The furnishings are made in the order for which instructions have been given in Exodus 25: first the Ark and its cover, followed by the offering table, and then the menorah. However, this unit differs from the prescriptive texts in that it includes the golden incense altar, and two rings on the other.⁴ He made poles of acacia wood, overlaid them with gold,⁵ and inserted the poles into the rings on the side walls of the ark for carrying the ark.

⁶He made a cover of pure gold, two and a half cubits long and a cubit and a half wide. ⁷He made two cherubim of gold; he made them of hammered work, at the two ends of the cover: ⁸one cherub at one end and the other cherub at the other end; he made the cherubim of one piece with the cover, at its two ends. ⁹The cherubim had their wings spread out above, shielding the cover with their wings. They faced each other; the faces of the cherubim were turned toward the cover.

¹⁰He made the table of acacia wood, two cubits long, one cubit wide, and a cubit and a half high; ¹¹he overlaid it with pure gold and made a gold molding around it. ¹²He made a rim of a hand's breadth around it and made a gold molding for its rim round about. ¹³He cast four gold rings for it and attached the rings to the four corners at its four legs. ¹⁴The rings were next to the rim, as holders for the poles to carry the table. ¹⁵He made the poles of acacia wood for carrying the table, and overlaid them with gold. ¹⁶The utensils that were to be upon which is to be placed between the table and the menorah, and also the oil and incense.

ARK AND ITS COVER (37:I=9)

The first item, the Ark, is the holiest. It will be placed in the most sacred space in the Tabernacle—the Holy of Holies—and it will serve as the repository for the covenant document, referred to as the “tablets of the Pact” (31:18). For a people generally reluctant to use anthropomorphic images of a deity, the Ark serves as a symbol of God’s presence. The Ark and its cover (kaporet) also seem to represent a

ושתי טבאות על-צלעו השנית: ⁴ ויעש
בדי עצי שטים ויצוף אתם זהב: ⁵ ויבא
את-הבדים בטבעת על צלעתן הארון:
לשאת את-הארון:

ויעש בפרט זהב אמרתים וחיצי ארכיה ואמנה וחיצי רחבה: 7 ויעש שני ברבים זהב מקשלה עשה אתם משני קצות הפרט: 8 ברוב אחד מקצת מהו וברוב אחד מקצת מזה מניה הפרט עשה את הברים משני קצותו: 9 ויהיו הברים פרשי נפחים למעלה סכימים ובנפיהם על-הפרט ופניהם איש אל-

אֲחִיו אֶל-הכְּפָרָת הַיּוֹ פְנֵי הַכְּרָבִים: ב
וַיַּעַשׂ אֶת-הַשְׁלֹחַן עַצִּי שָׁטִים אִמְתִּים
אֶרְבּוֹן וְאֶמְהָ רְחָבוֹן וְאֶמְהָ זְחָצִי קְמָרָתוֹ:
וַיַּצְפַּ אֶתְנוֹ זָהָב טָהוֹר וַיַּעַשׂ לוֹ זָהָב
סְבִיבָה:¹² וַיַּעַשׂ לוֹ מִסְגָּרָת טֶפֶח סְבִיב וַיַּעַשׂ
וּרְזֶהֶב לְמִסְגָּרָתוֹ סְבִיב:¹³ וַיַּצְקַק לוֹ אֶרְבּוֹן
טָבָעַת זָהָב וַיִּתְן אֶת-הַטְּבָעַת עַל אֶרְבּוֹן
הַפְּאַת אֲשֶׁר לְאֶרְבּוֹן וּגְלִילוֹ:¹⁴ לְעַמֹּת
הַמִּסְגָּרָת הַיּוֹ הַטְּבָעַת בְּתִים לְבִדִים
לְשֹׁאת אֶת-הַשְׁלֹחַן:¹⁵ וַיַּעַשׂ אֶת-הַבְּדִים
עַצִּי שָׁטִים וַיַּצְפַּ אֶתְם זָהָב לְשֹׁאת אֶת-
הַשְׁלֹחַן:¹⁶ וַיַּעַשׂ אֶת-הַכְּבָלִים | אֲשֶׁר עַל-footrest for the invisible God enthroned above it. (See further at the prescriptive text that parallels this descriptive section, 25:10-22.)

TABLE AND MENORAH (37:10-24)

The table and the lampstand are to be placed in the second most holy zone, the main room of the tent shrine, along with the incense altar. These items provide two essential needs of a residence: food and drink, and light. (See further at the prescriptive text that parallels this descriptive section, 25:23–40.)

the table—its bowls, ladles, jugs, and jars with which to offer libations—he made of pure gold.

¹⁷He made the lampstand of pure gold. He made the lampstand—its base and its shaft—of hammered work; its cups, calyxes, and petals were of one piece with it. ¹⁸Six branches issued from its sides: three branches from one side of the lampstand, and three branches from the other side of the lampstand. ¹⁹There were three cups shaped like almond-blossoms, each with calyx and petals, on one branch; and there were three cups shaped like almond-blossoms, each with calyx and petals, on the next branch; so for all six branches issuing from the lampstand. ²⁰On the lampstand itself there were four cups shaped like almond-blossoms, each with calyx and petals: ²¹a calyx, of one piece with it, under a pair of branches; and a calyx, of one piece with it, under the second pair of branches; and a calyx, of one piece with it, under the last pair of branches; so for all six branches issuing from it. ²²Their calyxes and their stems were of one piece with it, the whole of it a single hammered piece of pure gold. ²³He made its seven lamps, its tongs, and its fire pans of pure gold. ²⁴He made it and all its furnishings out of a talent of pure gold.

²⁵He made the incense altar of acacia wood, a cubit long and a cubit wide—square—and two cubits high; its horns were of one piece with it. ²⁶He overlaid it with pure gold: its top, its sides round about, and its horns; and he made a gold molding for it round about. ²⁷He made two gold rings for it under its molding, on its two walls—on opposite sides—as holders for the poles with which

השְׁלַחַן אֲתִיקָרְתֵּיו וְאֲתִיבְפְּתֵיו וְאֶת־
מִנְקִיתֵּיו וְאֲתִיכְקֹשְׁתֵּי אֲשֶׁר יִסְפֶּךְ בָּהּ
זָהָב טָהוֹר: פ

¹⁷וַיַּעֲשֵׂה אֲתִיהְמִנְרָה זָהָב טָהוֹר מִקְשָׁה
עָשָׂה אֲתִיהְמִנְרָה יְרָכָה וּקְנָה גִּבְיעִידָה
בְּפִתְרוֹתָה וּפְרַחִיתָה מִמְפָנָה הַיּוֹ: ¹⁸וְשָׁשָׁה
קְנִים יִצְאִים מִצְדִּיחָה שֶׁלֶשֶׁה | קְנִים מִנְרָה
מִצְדִּיחָה הַאָחֵר וּשְׁלַשֶּׁה קְנִים מִנְרָה מִצְדִּיחָה
הַשְׁנִי: ¹⁹שֶׁלֶשֶׁה גָּבֻעִים מִשְׁקָדִים בְּקָנָה
הַאָחֵד בְּפִתְרָה וּפְרָחָה וּשְׁלַשֶּׁה גָּבֻעִים
מִשְׁקָדִים בְּקָנָה אָחֵד בְּפִתְרָה וּפְרָחָה בָּנוֹ
לְשִׁשָּׁת הַקְנִים הַיִצְאִים מִנְיָהְמִנְרָה:
²⁰וּבְמִנְרָה אַרְבָּעָה גָּבֻעִים מִשְׁקָדִים
בְּפִתְרוֹתָה וּפְרַחִיתָה: ²¹וּכְפִתְרָה תְּחִתְּ שְׁנִי
הַקְנִים מִמְפָנָה וּכְפִתְרָה תְּחִתְּשְׁנִי הַקְנִים
מִמְפָנָה לְשִׁשָּׁת הַקְנִים הַיִצְאִים מִמְפָנָה:
²²בְּפִתְרוֹתָם וּקְנִתָּם מִמְפָנָה הַיּוֹ בְּלָה
מִקְשָׁה אָחֵת זָהָב טָהוֹר: ²³וַיַּعֲשֵׂה אֶת־
נְרָתִיתָה שְׁבָעָה וּמְלָקְתִּיתָה וּמְחִתְתִּיתָה זָהָב
טָהוֹר: ²⁴בְּפִרְבָּר זָהָב טָהוֹר עָשָׂה אֶתְּה וְאֶת־
כָּלְכָלִיתָה: פ

²⁵וַיַּעֲשֵׂה אֶת־מִזְבֵּחַ הַקְטָרָת עַצִּי שְׁטִים
אַמְּה אַרְכּוֹ וְאַמְּה רְחַבּוֹ רְבֻועַ וְאַמְּתִימַ
קְמֻנוֹ מִמְפָנָה הַיּוֹ קְרָנוֹתִיו: ²⁶וַיֵּצֵא אָתוֹ זָהָב
טָהוֹר אֲתִיגָּזוֹ וְאֲתִיכְרָתִיטִי סְבִיב וְאֶת־
קְרָנוֹתִיו וַיַּעֲשֵׂה לוֹ וְרַא זָהָב סְבִיב: ²⁷וְשְׁתִּי
טְבֻעָת זָהָב עָשָׂה־לָוֹ | מִתְחַת לִירּוֹ עַל שְׁתִּי
עַלְעַתִּיו עַל שְׁנִי צְדִיקָיו לְבִתִּים לְבִדִּים

INCENSE ALTAR (37:25-28)

Incense altars were standard items in shrines in the ancient Near East, just as some mechanism for freshening the air was part of every household. (See further at the prescriptive text that parallels this descriptive section, 30:1-10.)

to carry it.²⁸He made the poles of acacia wood, and overlaid them with gold.²⁹He prepared the sacred anointing oil and the pure aromatic incense, expertly blended.

38 He made the altar for burnt offering of acacia wood, five cubits long and five cubits wide—square—and three cubits high.²He made horns for it on its four corners, the horns being of one piece with it; and he overlaid it with copper.³He made all the utensils of the altar—the pails, the scrapers, the basins, the flesh hooks, and the fire pans; he made all these utensils of copper.⁴He made for the altar a grating of meshwork in copper, extending below,

לְשִׁיאת אַתָּה בָּהֶם :²⁸ וַיַּעֲשֵׂנִים אֶת־הַבְּקָרִים עֲצֵי שְׂطִים וַיַּצְפֵּן אֶתְמֵן זָהָב :²⁹ וַיַּעֲשֵׂנִים שְׂמֹן הַמְשֻׁחָה קָדֵשׁ וְאֶת־קְטֻרָת הַסְּפִים טָהוֹר מְעָשָׂה רְקַח : ס לְנִזְבֵּחַ וַיַּעֲשֵׂנִים אֶת־מִזְבֵּחַ הַעַלְלָה עֲצֵי שְׂطִים חַמְשׁ אַמְוֹת אֶרְפָּוֹ וְחַמְשׁ־אַמְוֹת רְחִבָּו רְבּוּעַ וְשֶׁלֶשׁ אַמְוֹת קְמָתוֹ :² וַיַּעֲשֵׂנִים קְרָנְתִּיו עַל אַרְבָּע פְּנִיתִיו מִפְנוּ דָּרוּ קְרָנְתִּיו וַיַּצְפֵּן אַתָּה נְחַשָּׁת :³ וַיַּעֲשֵׂנִים אֶת־כְּלָי הַמִּזְבֵּחַ אֶת־הַשִּׁירָת וְאֶת־הַיּוּם וְאֶת־הַמְּזֹרְקָת אֶת־הַמְּזֹלָגָת וְאֶת־הַמְּחַתָּת כְּלָ-כְּלִיו עֲשָׂה נְחַשָּׁת :⁴ וַיַּעֲשֵׂנִים לְמִזְבֵּחַ מִכְבָּר מְעָשָׂה רְשָׁת נְחַשָּׁת תִּתְחַת כְּרֶבֶב

ANOINTING OIL AND INCENSE (37:29)

The section on the furnishings concludes with a single verse concerning two of the substances to be used in the Tabernacle: the anointing oil and the incense. Perhaps the anointing oil is paired with the incense because the two items are similarly associated in the prescriptive text of 30:22–38 and because anointing oil is blended with aromatic substances similar to those used in compounding incense. (See further at 30:22–28.) How the anointing oil is to be used is described in 40:9–15 (see also at 27:20–21); and the burning of incense is mentioned in 40:27 (see also at 30:7).

Completing the Courtyard (38:1–20)

With the components of the tent prepared and the furnishings constructed, the narrative now turns to the one remaining part of the sacred precinct, the courtyard. Like most households and palaces in the ancient Near East, the Tabernacle is to have an unroofed outdoor space, a courtyard. Whereas the other parts of the Tabernacle were reserved for the priests, the courtyard was a place where the rest of the people, including women, could enter and offer sacrifices.

ALTAR AND LAVER (38:1–8)

The altar and laver are to be placed in the courtyard, the third and least holy zone of the Tabernacle. (For the parallel prescriptive texts earlier in Exodus, see 27:1–8 and 30:17–21.)

i. altar for burnt offering. The horned altar is made of acacia wood and overlaid with bronze. It is described in 27:1 as being about $7\frac{1}{2}$ feet (more than 2 meters) square and $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet (almost $1\frac{1}{2}$ meters) high. Such a massive wooden altar, even one covered with metal, is unlikely to have been functional; it is possible that altars familiar from a later period have been retrojected onto the image of the Tabernacle altar.

under its ledge, to its middle.⁵ He cast four rings, at the four corners of the copper grating, as holders for the poles.⁶ He made the poles of acacia wood and overlaid them with copper;⁷ and he inserted the poles into the rings on the side walls of the altar, to carry it by them. He made it hollow, of boards.

⁸He made the laver of copper and its stand of copper, from the mirrors of the women who performed tasks at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting.

מלומשה עד-חציו: ۵ ויצק ארבע טבעות
 באربع הקומות למכבר הנחשת בתיים
 לבדים: ۶ ויעש את-הבדים עצי שטים
 ויצו אתם נחשת: ۷ ויבא את-הבדים
 בטבעות על צלעת המזבח לשאת אותו
 בhem נבוב לחות עשה אותו: ۸
 ויעש את הפייר נחשת ואת בנו נחשת
 בראשת העבאות אשר צבאו פתח אנל
 מועד: ס

8. laver. Placed between the altar and the entrance to the tent, the bronze ("copper") laver would be filled with water so that priests entering the tent or serving at the altar could perform the purifying and protective measure of washing their hands and feet.

mirrors. Handheld mirrors made of highly polished metal such as copper were highly valued in the biblical world. That these women owned them indicates they were persons of means.

women who performed tasks. The word “women” does not actually appear in the Hebrew, for these English words translate ha-tzovot asher tzavu, meaning “those who were doing service.” Because tzovot is grammatically feminine, these persons—sometimes called “servitors” or “women who serve”—are clearly female. (The word “women” actually appears in a similar passage in I Samuel 2:22.) The unusual Hebrew phrase, using a root that otherwise indicates military service, is used in a Tabernacle context both here and for the work of some (male) Levites in Numbers 4. The term seems to indicate the work of a support staff (rather than of officiating priests) that performed menial labor to maintain the sanctuary. This verse thus challenges the prevailing assumption that only men worked in the tent shrine. Moreover, the fact that these women are mentioned in an aside in relation to their mirrors, rather than in a listing of Tabernacle jobs, raises the possibility that there were other female workers in the sacred complex.

at the entrance. The fact that the narrator felt the need to identify these women on the basis of where they did their job suggests that there may have been other women working elsewhere in the holy precinct. This particular location, most likely in front of the tent and visible to the community, was an important part of the sacred space; certain rituals are carried out there (see, for instance, 29:4, 32, 42), and it is where the pillar of cloud rests when Moses enters the tent to meet with God (33:9–10). This location, at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting, was not off-limits to women (see Numbers 27:1–2).

⁹He made the enclosure:

On the south side, a hundred cubits of hangings of fine twisted linen for the enclosure—¹⁰with their twenty posts and their twenty sockets of copper, the hooks and bands of the posts being silver.

¹¹On the north side, a hundred cubits—with their twenty posts and their twenty sockets of copper, the hooks and bands of the posts being silver.

¹²On the west side, fifty cubits of hangings—with their ten posts and their ten sockets, the hooks and bands of the posts being silver.

¹³And on the front side, to the east, fifty cubits: ¹⁴fifteen cubits of hangings on the one flank, with their three posts and their three sockets, ¹⁵and fifteen cubits of hangings on the other flank—on each side of the gate of the enclosure—with their three posts and their three sockets.

¹⁶All the hangings around the enclosure were of fine twisted linen. ¹⁷The sockets for the posts were of copper, the hooks and bands of the posts were of silver, the overlay of their tops was of silver; all the posts of the enclosure were banded with silver.—

¹⁸The screen of the gate of the enclosure, done in embroidery, was of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen. It was twenty cubits long. Its height—or width—was five cubits, like that of the hangings of the enclosure. ¹⁹The posts were four; their four sockets were of copper, their hooks of silver; and the overlay of their tops was of silver, as were also their bands.—²⁰All the pegs of the Tabernacle and of the enclosure round about were of copper.

ENCLOSURE (38:9–20)

This parashah concludes with the fabrication of the enclosure, made of fabric panels attached to wooden posts set into metal bases, that surrounds

⁹וַיַּעֲשֵׂה אֹתֶה הַחִזְבָּרֶל לְפָאַת | נֶגֶב תִּמְנָה קְלֻעִי הַחִזְבָּרֶל שְׁשָׁ מְשׂוּרָ מֵאָה בְּאָמָה: ¹⁰עַמּוֹדֵיָהּ עֲשָׂרִים וְאֶדְנֵיָהּ עֲשָׂרִים נְחַשָּׁת וְוִי הַעֲמֹודִים וְחַשְׁקֵיָהּ כָּסֶף:

¹¹וְלְפָאַת צְפָן מֵאָה בְּאָמָה עַמּוֹדֵיָהּ עֲשָׂרִים וְאֶדְנֵיָהּ עֲשָׂרִים נְחַשָּׁת וְוִי הַעֲמֹודִים וְחַשְׁקֵיָהּ כָּסֶף:

¹²וְלְפָאַת־זָהָם קְלֻעִיט חֲמִשִּׁים בְּאָמָה עַמּוֹדֵיָהּ עֲשָׂרִים וְאֶדְנֵיָהּ עֲשָׂרִים עַשְׂרָה וְוִי הַעֲמֹודִים וְחַשְׁקֵיָהּ כָּסֶף:

¹³וְלְפָאַת קְרֵדָה מִזְרָחָה חֲמִשִּׁים אַמָּה:

¹⁴קְלֻעִים חֲמִשִּׁים עַשְׂרָה אַמָּה אֶל־הַכְּתָף עַמּוֹדֵיָהּ שְׁלָשָׁה וְאֶדְנֵיָהּ שְׁלָשָׁה:

¹⁵וְלְכָתָף הַשְׁנִית מֵזָה וּמֵזָה לְשַׁעַר הַחִזְבָּרֶל קְלֻעִים חֲמִשִּׁים עַשְׂרָה אַמָּה עַמּוֹדֵיָהּ שְׁלָשָׁה וְאֶדְנֵיָהּ שְׁלָשָׁה:

¹⁶בְּלַקְלֻעִי הַחִזְבָּרֶל סְבִיב שְׁשָׁ מְשׂוּרָ:

¹⁷וְהַאֲדָנִים לְעַמְרוֹדִים נְחַשָּׁת וְוִי הַעֲמֹודִים וְחַשְׁקֵיָהּ כָּסֶף וְהַט מְחַשְׁקִים כָּסֶף וְצַפְנוּ רַאשֵׁיָהּ כָּסֶף וְהַט שַׁעַר הַחִזְבָּרֶל מְעַשָּׂה רַקְם תְּכִלָּת וְאַרְגָּמָן וְתוֹלְעָת שְׁנִי וְשָׁשָׁ מְשׂוּרָ וְעֲשָׂרִים אַמָּה אַרְךְ וְקוֹמָה בְּרַחְבָּה חֲמִשָּׁ אַמָּה קְלֻעִי הַחִזְבָּרֶל: ¹⁹וְעַמּוֹדֵיָהּ אַרְבָּעָה וְאֶדְנֵיָהּ אַרְבָּעָה רַאשֵׁיָהּ וְחַשְׁקֵיָהּ כָּסֶף וְצַפְנוּ כָּסֶף וְכָל־הִתְהִתָּה לְמַשְׁפֵן וְלְחִזְבָּרֶל סְבִיב נְחַשָּׁת: ס the Tabernacle courtyard and serves as the boundary between the holy space within and the profane space outside. (For the prescriptive text earlier in Exodus that parallels this descriptive section, see 27:9–19.)

—Carol Meyers

Another View

THERE IS MUCH DEBATE among scholars about the relationship between the Tabernacle and the Jerusalem Temple. Some scholars think that the Tabernacle is a completely mythic structure whose description is based on the Temple constructed early in the 1st millennium B.C.E. These scholars argue that the Tabernacle tradition evolved to justify and provide a pedigree for the Temple. Other scholars argue that there existed a portable Tabernacle that pre-dated the Temple. Although it would not have been as elaborate as the Tabernacle described in the Torah, this structure must have formed the basis for the portable divine dwelling recounted in Exodus 25–40.

While it is currently impossible to determine the historicity of the Tabernacle texts, it is clear that within the Bible, the Tabernacle and the Temple provide two models of sacred space. The Temple model was particularly resonant when Israel/Judea was a sovereign kingdom (10th–6th centuries B.C.E.). The Temple was a symbol of God's sanction of the Davidic monarchy, and it functioned as a key element in the Judean monarchy's attempts to centralize national and religious authority (II Samuel 7:11–16; I Kings 8; 12:26–27).

The Tabernacle model was particularly resonant in the absence of Judean—and later, Jewish—sovereignty (after the Babylonian conquest in 587 B.C.E.). According to the Tabernacle model, God is manifest in the community no matter where the community resides. In order to come into contact with God, the people do not need to make pilgrimages to a fixed location. Instead, they need only maintain a set of behaviors that will allow God to reside in their midst no matter where they are. According to the Rabbis, when the Jews went into exile, God's presence (Shechinah) went with them and continues to manifest itself wherever Jews pray or study Torah. The medieval Kabbalists understood the Shechinah to be a feminine aspect of God. The idea of the Shechinah as an immanent and feminine divine presence has been a source of reflection and inspiration for feminist theologians like Judith Plaskow and Lynn Gottlieb.

According to the Tabernacle model, God is manifest wherever the community resides.

—Elsie R. Stern

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

Men and women...came bringing...gold objects of all kinds (35:22).

Because the Hebrew wording is unusual, literally “the men on [or: over] the women came...,” many medieval commentators understood it as referring to relations between men and women. Rashi and Ibn Ezra understood the passage simply as “the men came with the women.” Nachmanides explained that the men followed the women’s example and donated jewelry only after the latter had already done so. Chizz’kuni said that the men collected the jewelry from the women in order to then donate it for the building effort. And Sforno interpreted the words to mean that husbands accompanied wives who were bringing gift offerings in order to indicate their approval. (Two other verses in this parashah, 35:25 and 38:8, also mention women bringing gifts for the building of the Tabernacle.)

VAYAK'HEIL

all the skilled women spun with their own hands (35:25). “Skilled” in this verse is literally “wise-hearted.” This beautiful tribute to the work of women’s hands provides the proof text for Rabbi Eliezer’s infamous statement: “A woman’s wisdom is only in (connection with) the spindle” (BT Yoma 66b). Rabbi Eliezer believed that women were unfit for Torah study, declaring that “anyone who teaches his daughter Torah, it is as if he taught her tiflut (licentiousness)” (BT Sotah 21b). His opinion expressed the dominant rabbinic attitude which limited Jewish women’s access to traditional Jewish learning for centuries. The sage Ben Azzai expressed the opposite point of view, “A man is obligated to teach his daughter Torah” (BT Sotah 20a); however, this remained a minority view.

The men donated jewelry only after the women had already done so.

He made the laver of copper and its stand of copper, from the mirrors of the women who performed tasks at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting (38:8). Who were these women and what were they doing? Ibn Ezra, Chizz’kuni, and Sforno all agreed that this verse refers to women who had cast away their jewelry in order to devote themselves to God. They came to the Tent of Meeting to pray and hear either “words of the living God” (Sforno), the praises of God pronounced by the priests (Chizz’kuni), or words of mitzvot (commandments) (Ibn Ezra). By donating their mirrors they also renounced personal vanity. Ibn Ezra explained that the reference to their gathering at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting indicated that there was a large group of such women.

Rashi explained the significance of the mirrors through a midrashic tradition, in which Moses first rejected the mirrors, angry that objects associated with vanity and the Evil Inclination would be used in constructing something holy. But God told Moses to accept the mirrors because the Israelite women had used them for a most holy purpose during their enslavement in Egypt: When Pharaoh decreed that the men could not return home from the fields at the end of the day, the women went out to the fields, bringing their husbands hot food and drink. After their husbands had eaten, each woman pulled out her mirror and held it up to catch the image of her husband’s face together with her own. “I am more beautiful than you,” she flirted with him. In this way, God explained, the women awakened desire in their exhausted husbands and ensured the Israelites a future generation of children. BT Sotah 11b cites this midrash along with other examples of women’s contributions to Israel’s survival and redemption, stating that it was on account of the righteousness of the women during the generations of slavery that the Israelites were taken out of Egypt.

—Ruth H. Sohn

• • • • •

Contemporary Reflection

PARASHAT VAYAK’HEIL GIVES US a detailed description of the construction and furnishings of the Tabernacle; in fact, more than most of us wish to hear. Why include this data? Why does it matter? It matters because in the ancient world, a temple was a model of the cosmos (Mircea Eliade, The Myth of the Eternal Return, 1954). How the temple is designed and furnished and where objects are positioned express symbolically what its builders believe about the nature of the cosmos. Vayak'heil gives us the specifications for these symbols, but it cannot tell us all that they mean. Symbols and metaphors exist precisely because they point toward what cannot be entirely expressed. Moreover, symbols and rituals are not static. They grow and change along with the people who use them, acquiring new layers of meaning along the way.

As an example, let's look at a symbolic object from the Tabernacle that we recognize, the Menorah (lampstand). What does it mean? The Menorah's function is to give light, and light is an important element in our own ritual acts as well. We kindle lights for Shabbat, Havdalah, Yom Tov (holiday), yortsayt (or yahrzeit, memorial occasion). The philosopher Ernst Cassirer says that the creation of light, which begins many creation myths, represents the creation of consciousness (Language and Myth, 1946). Perhaps, when we ritually kindle light, we reenact the dawning of consciousness that enables us both to know God and to be aware of ourselves. Is the Menorah a lamp representing the light-giving or knowledge-giving aspect of the cosmos?

The Menorah is not just any lamp, however. It is a giant lamp of unusual design, so tall that a priest must ascend a ramp to light it. Twice, in 25:31–40 and then in our parashah (37:17–24), the Menorah is painstakingly described: a golden base, a tall shaft, six golden branches issuing from the sides, each branch bearing cups shaped like almond blossoms, detailed with calyx and petals, plus more blossom-cups on the shaft itself. Atop these branches are seven golden lamps.

Clearly the Menorah embodies some kind of metaphor. But metaphor has rules, just like tennis or Scrabble®. One rule is that there has to be some link between the tenor (the topic under discussion) and the vehicle (the concrete object to which it is being compared). What, then, is tall, has a kaneh (stem), with kanim (branches) extending from it, and p'rachim (flowers) intermixed with bud-like swellings (kaftirim)? The Menorah is a representation of a flowering almond tree!

The almond tree is distinctive not only in that it blossoms early, but also in that it then rapidly buds leaves, develops new branches, and forms its sustaining fruit—all before the flowers' calyx drops off (Nogah Hareuveni, Nature in Our Biblical Heritage, 1980, p. 130). Its Hebrew name, shaked, means “the early waker,” and it may symbolize God’s watchfulness or the speed with which God responds (see Jeremiah 1:11). It is also the legitimating emblem of the Aaronite priesthood. At the end of Korah's rebellion in Numbers 17,

Why does the Torah include a detailed description of the Tabernacle?

Moses deposits the staffs of all the Israelite chieftains in the Tent of Meeting, “and there the staff of Aaron . . . had sprouted: it had brought forth sprouts, produced blossoms and borne almonds” (17:23).

Trees, as well as light, are associated with consciousness for Jews. Our moral consciousness comes from having eaten the fruit of a tree (Genesis 3). The Torah is “a tree of life to all who hold fast to her” (Proverbs 3:18). Trees are elders of the living earth. Their rootedness, endurance, and capacity for renewal is a blessing extended to the righteous: “The righteous shall flourish like the date palm” (Psalm 92:13). The righteous too shall be trees of life.

But the Menorah is yet a different sort of tree, because its branches are crowned with bowls filled with oil that are lit regularly by the priests. Who ever heard of a tree perpetually on fire?

He gazed and there was a bush all aflame, yet the bush was not consumed. . . . God called to him out of the bush: “Moses! Moses!” He answered, “Here I am.” And [God] said, “Do not come closer! Remove your sandals from your feet, for the place on which you stand is holy ground!” (3:2–5).

In his book Sinai and Zion (1985), Jon Levenson describes how the religion of Sinai was transformed into the religion of Zion. In the Tanach's account of the settlement of the Land of Israel, Sinai—the wilderness mountain of the s'neh (thornbush), the site of Israel's revelation and covenant—was refashioned as Zion, the holy mountain of the Jerusalem temple. The Burning Bush itself was reproduced as a golden tree lit by priests. Levenson speculates that the emblem of the deity of Sinai was some sort of tree. He points out that the blessing in Deuteronomy 33:16 identifies God as shochni s'neh, "the Presence in the Bush."

VAYAK'HEIL

The feminist theologian Nelle Morton describes metaphor as an explosive process with a trajectory, like a meteor (The Journey is Home, 1985). The tree on fire that is not consumed—this is an image on an immense journey. The metaphor has traveled from Sinai to Zion, to Exile and beyond, and we have not even begun to exhaust its resonances.

A tree on fire embraces what we misperceive as antitheses: earth and heaven, matter and energy. What we are accustomed to polarize is revealed to us in blazing union. A tree on fire unconsumed proclaims that what is material, temporal, perishable, can sustain what the Christian theologian Rudolf Otto calls the "fearsome and fascinating mystery" of the presence of God (The Idea of the Holy, 1923). If we were only able to see, the whole earth would appear to us like a tree on fire, and we would see a tree on fire in every human frame.

We cannot relive the moment when a startled shepherd sees a terrible and wonderful sight: a tree on fire, unconsumed. We can only make a memory-tree to remind us of that moment, an artifice that we ourselves ceremoniously set afire amidst song and liturgy. The memory tree is a tree of wonder only and not a tree of terror. We take our chances, stubbornly continuing to set our memory-tree on fire—real fire, with all its potential for enlightenment and danger, reproducing the encounter with that fiery presence we seek and yet fear: the revealer of mysteries, the dweller in the bush.

—Rachel Adler

Voices

Delight

Dahlia Ravikovitch

(transl. Chana Bloch and Chana Kronfeld)

Exodus 35:1–3

There did I know a delight beyond all delight,
And it came to pass upon the Sabbath day
As tree boughs reached for the sky with all their might.

Round and round like a river streamed the light,
And the wheel of the eye craved the sunwheel that day.

Then did I know a delight beyond all delight.

The heads of the bushes blazed, insatiable bright Sunlight striking the waves, igniting the spray.
It would swallow my head like a golden orange,
that light.

Water lilies were gaping their yellow bright Mouths to swallow the ripples and reeds in their way.

And indeed it came to pass on the Sabbath day
As tree boughs lusted for the sky with all their might,

And then did I know a delight beyond all delight.

First a Spark

Sandy Eisenberg Sasso

Exodus 35:1–3

First a spark
then candle glow.

I watched you at sunset time eyes sparkling in Shabbat light.

Circling above the flames, my hands pulled
the warmth of Shabbat peace inside.

Praying for a good week and for blessing.

Take time—the lights beckon for dreams and wonder,
for the candles grow smaller,
the children taller,
even as we pray.

Hold this sunset moment and let it go into morning light.

Another generation's candlesticks receive the next generation's lights.

And somewhere in the middle we stand, holding hands with yesterday and tomorrow, linking echoes of ancient melodies with the breath of our children.

Finding God and hope in their embrace, renewing days of creation.

In ordinary time—remember—
First a spark
and then candle glow.

VAYAK'HEIL

They Build the Tabernacle

Ruth Brin

Exodus 35:4–29

To devotion God set no limits, and to dedication of the spirit
God set not bounds;

But great quantities of tribute God did not demand, and the people were restrained from bringing too much gold for the Tabernacle.

Though the Temples of Solomon and Herod were far more costly, it is written that the Divine Presence was found more constantly in the humbler structure.

To dedicate the spirit to God is more difficult than to give money,
to devote the whole heart to God is more difficult than bringing gifts.

Not because of the gold on the walls does the light of the sanctuary shine forth, but because of the spirit within.

Those who worship carry away with them more than they bring for they find there the light to illumine their lives.

Earrings

Annette Bialik Harchik

Exodus 35:22

A Bialik tradition back home was for a woman to wear earrings from birth to death.

Ears pierced in infancy were adorned with string;
golden hoops for girlhood;
diamond studs for marriage.

When the trains pulled up at Auschwitz
my mother was stripped, shorn, tattooed, and commanded to leave her earrings in a huge glitter pile of jewelry.

Under her wavy white hair her lobes hang heavy,
the empty holes
grown shut.

Prescience

Ruth Fainlight

Exodus 38:8

Long ago, when I was a girl, constantly, obsessively, I drew faces of uncertain gender:
philosophers who'd lost conviction, blocked, bitter artists, or ageing women with the deep eye-sockets and bony structures I aspired to, strong vertical lines marking each side of a mouth that once was softer, a face which only now (flinching from the prospect of what's still to come)

I recognize reflected back from the mirror—and must acknowledge the prescience of that young girl whose hand, as though it held a wicked fairy's wand or Clotho's spindle and not a brush or pen, unerringly created this face, that future.

From My Mother's Home

Lea Goldberg (transl. Ezra Spicehandler)

Exodus 38:8

My mother's mother died
In the spring of her days.
And her daughter
Did not remember her face.
Her portrait, engraved
Upon my grandfather's heart,
Was erased from the world of images
After his death.
Only her mirror remained in the home,
Sunken with age into the silver frame.
And I, her pale granddaughter, who does not resemble her,
Look into it today as into
A pool which conceals its treasures
Beneath the waters.
Very deep down, behind my face,
I see a young woman
Pink-cheeked, smiling.
And a wig on her head.
She puts
An elongated earring on her ear-lobe, threading it
Through a tiny hole in the dainty flesh
Of her ear.
Very deep down, behind my face, the bright goldness of her eyes sends out rays,
And the mirror carries on the tradition of
The family: That she was very beautiful.

The Mirror

Rachel Hadas

Exodus 38:8

Paradise: first the world within the mirror and then the knowledge that the mirror mother and father faithfully would render back the world and never waver or crack. So that the lesson of the broken world needs to be taught remedially to us big oafs who saw ourselves in surfaces that never seemed to tremble.
Visions from which they scrupulously shaded our infant eyes light up belatedly. The atmosphere we bathed our little kids in dries; unfamiliar absences take shape and death's black hole. But wait, absence is the other side of love.
All of us, confronting—sooner, later—some version of the mirror recognize our faces cracked with age suspended in solution for our children to find themselves within our steady gaze.

'תְּקִדְמָה ◆ P'kudei

EXODUS 38:21–40:38

Completing and Consecrating the Tabernacle

PARASHAT P'KUDEI ("records [of]") brings to a conclusion the long Tabernacle narrative and the book of Exodus. In this book, the Israelites have been transformed from slaves building store cities for Pharaoh (1:11–14) into a free people building a "home" for the God who will now dwell among them (25:8). Once the Tabernacle is completed, God's presence fills the sacred space. Just as God's cloud and fire led the Israelites from the Sea of Reeds to Sinai and then hovered over the holy mountain, God will now be with them when the wilderness journey resumes, as recounted in the book of Numbers.

As the parashah begins, the Israelites have fabricated all the components of the tent and its enclosure, interior, and courtyard furnishings (see parashat Vayak'heil); now they inventory the collected materials (38:21–31). Only the instructions for the priestly vestments given in parashat T'tzaveh (28:1–43) have not yet been fulfilled. Thus, before the Israelites erect and dedicate the Tabernacle, they must make the garments for Aaron and his descendants (39:1–31). The description of the vestments here is quite similar to that of the earlier instructions. However, there are some differences, most notably the virtual absence of Aaron's name, even though he serves as the chief priestly official (the "high priest"). Instead, the final part of Exodus returns to highlighting Aaron's brother, Moses, and his special relationship with God.

After reporting that the vestments are completed, the text presents a final summation of the construction work (39:33–43), after which the actual assembly of the shrine can begin. God gives Moses the orders to set up the Tabernacle and install its furnishings (40:1–8) and

Once the Tabernacle is completed, God's presence fills the sacred space.

then to consecrate them and also the priests (40:9–16). All the pieces now come together under the leadership of Moses, who carries out God's commandments to erect the shrine and place its furnishings in the proper place (40:17–33). With the Tabernacle complete, God's presence enters this sumptuous earthly abode (40:34–38). Some of the language here evokes the creation of the world in Genesis 1, reflecting the momentous significance that the text bestows upon this event.

Once everything is complete, Moses reviews the work and blesses the Israelites (39:43). Finally, God's invisible presence fills the Mishkan (40:34–35). In contrast to the prior Torah portion, where women (and men) are mentioned explicitly as contributors to the Tabernacle and as participants in essential aspects of its construction and service, here neither women nor men are directly visible as such, apart from three specified leaders. Rather, those women (and men) remain in view while their gender recedes into the background. Indirectly—as previously mentioned donors, fabricators, and members of the collective Israelite community—they are included in the final account of the sacred portable structure erected so that God “may dwell among them” (25:8; 29:46).

—Carol Meyers

Outline—

I. INVENTORY OF DONATED METALS AND THEIR USE (38:21–31)

II. PRIESTLY VESTMENTS (39:1–31)

- A. Introduction (v. 1)
- B. Ritual items (vv. 2–21)
- C. Apparel (vv. 22–31)

III. SUMMARY OF THE COMPLETED COMPONENTS (39:32–43)

- A. Announcement of completion (v. 32)
- B. General inventory of completed components (vv. 33–43)

IV. ERECTION AND CONSECRATION OF THE TABERNACLE (40:1–38)

- A. Directions for erecting the Tabernacle complex (vv. 1–8)
- B. Directions for anointing the Tabernacle complex and personnel (vv. 9–16)
- C. Execution of the directions (vv. 17–33)
- D. Entry of God’s presence (vv. 34–38)

38:21

These are the records of the Tabernacle, the Tabernacle of the Pact, which were drawn up at Moses' bidding—the work of the Levites under the direction of Ithamar son of Aaron the priest.
²²Now Bezalel, son of Uri son of Hur, of the tribe

ל
 21 אלה פקודי המשכן משכון העדות
 אשר פקד על־פי משה עבדת הלוים ביד
 איתמר בן־אהרן הפקהן ²² ובצלאל בן־
 אורי בזיהור למשטה יהודה עשה את

Inventory of Donated Metals and Their Use (38:21–31)

This section, which takes the form of archival data recorded by levitical priests, is an inventory of the metals—gold, silver, and “copper” (see at v. 29)—used for the Tabernacle. The kind of information provided about each metal varies. Prior to the tally, vv. 21–23 reiterate that specially designated artisans used these materials.

21. records. More precisely, this term probably refers to a record of things that are counted up, as in a tally. The verbal root of this noun (p-k-d), which gives this parashah its name, also is used in Numbers in reference to the census count (as in Numbers 1:3).

Tabernacle of the Pact. This is the only verse in Exodus in which the words mishkan (Tabernacle) and edut (Pact) are used together (see at 25:9 and 25:16); and the combination is found only three times elsewhere in the Torah (Numbers 1:50, 53; 10:11). The phrase emphasizes that the Tabernacle is the repository for God’s covenant with Israel as well as the place for God’s presence to abide. With this statement, the meaning of Sinai is transferred to the Tabernacle, ready to accompany the Israelites on their journey.

at Moses' bidding. This emphasizes Moses' involvement in administrative concerns, as well as in priestly and prophetic matters.

work. This refers to the job of producing the tally.

Levites. The Levites are entrusted with record-keeping for the Tabernacle, perhaps in anticipation of the role they will be given in Numbers 3:6–10.

Ithamar. One of Aaron’s four sons, he appears first in the genealogical passage in 6:23 and again in 28:1, at the beginning of the instructions for the priestly vestments.

Aaron the priest. This designation for Aaron rarely appears in Exodus. Aaron’s responsibilities as “the priest” are said to include various matters of ritual (for example, 27:21, 28:35, 30:7–8), judicial proceedings (28:29–30), and instruction (Leviticus 10:11). The Bible never refers to Aaron by the title “high priest”—a term that seems to refer to an office that developed over time so that its responsibilities included also finance and management.

- What kind of staff maintained the Tabernacle, and later the Jerusalem Temple?

ANOTHER VIEW ► 560

- The source of Bezalel’s inspiration was none other than his great-grandmother, Miriam.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 560

- What would happen if we started looking for God’s presence in fire and clouds once more?

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 562

- By the well they’re sitting, spinning, / ... Whispering the story, never-ending.

VOICES ► 564

of Judah, had made all that יהוה had commanded Moses;²³ at his side was Oholiab son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, carver and designer, and embroiderer in blue, purple, and crimson yarns and in fine linen.

²⁴All the gold that was used for the work, in all the work of the sanctuary—the elevation offering of gold—came to 29 talents and 730 shekels by the sanctuary weight.²⁵The silver of those of the community who were recorded came to 100 talents and 1,775 shekels by the sanctuary weight:²⁶a half-shekel a head, half a shekel by the sanctuary weight, for each one who was entered in the records, from the age of twenty years up, 603,550 men.²⁷The 100

כָל־אֲשֶׁר־צִוָּה יְהוָה אֲתִ־מְשַׁה: ²³ וְאַתָּה
אַהֲלִיָּאֵב בֶּן־אַחִיכִסְמָר לְמַטְהָדָן חֶרֶשׁ
וְחַשְׁבָ וּרְקָם בְּתַכְלָת וּבְאַרְגָּמָן וּבְתֻלְעָתָה
הַשְׁנִי וּבְשָׁשׁ: ²⁴

כָל־הַזָּהָב הַעֲשֵׂי לְמַלְאָכָה בְּכָל
מַלְאָכָת הַקָּדָשׁ וְיִהְיָה | זָהָב הַתְּנוּפָה תְּשֻׁעָה
וּשְׁרִים בְּפָר וּשְׁבָעַ מְאוֹת וּשְׁלֹשִׁים שָׁקָל
בְשָׁקָל הַקָּדָשׁ: ²⁵ וּכְסָף פְּקוּדִי הַעֲדָה מִאַת
בְּכָר וְאַלְפָן וּשְׁבָעַ מְאוֹת וְחַמֵּשׁ וְשְׁבָעִים
שָׁקָל בְשָׁקָל הַקָּדָשׁ: ²⁶ בְּקֻעַ לְגַלְגָלָת
מִחְצִית הַשָּׁקָל בְשָׁקָל הַקָּדָשׁ לְכָל הָעָרָה
עַל־הַפְּקָדִים מִבֵּן עֲשָׂרִים שָׁנָה וּמַעַלָּה
לְשָׁשׁ־מֵאוֹת אַלְפָן וּשְׁלֹשֶׁת אַלְפִים וְחַמֵּשׁ
מֵאוֹת וְחַמֵּשִׁים: ²⁷ וְיִהְיָה מִאַת בְּכָר הַבָּסָף

22. all that יהוה had commanded Moses. This clause appears only a few times in Exodus up to this point. Now it recurs in rapid-fire succession, fourteen times in this parashah, especially in Exodus 39–40. The phrase emphasizes that the Tabernacle project is the result of Moses' unique role as intermediary between God and the people.

24. elevation offering. Heb. t'nuah (“elevation offering”), which refers to a ritual used to dedicate something to God. Elevation offerings of food appear in 29:24–27 and of gold here and in 35:22. This phrase is also used for “copper” (bronze) donations in this inventory (v. 29), but silver is inexplicably omitted.

29 talents and 730 shekels. Calculating the modern equivalents of biblical weights is imprecise; but it is estimated that a talent, which in the ancient Near East equaled three thousand shekels, would have weighed about seventy-five pounds (33 kilograms). The amassed gold would have weighed more than two thousand pounds (roughly a thousand kilograms), an unlikely amount. Thus, this inventory apparently deals in symbolic numbers, although the nature of the symbolism is no longer clear.

sanctuary weight. This may be different than the normal weight, but it may also be asserting that the priestly officials were the ones who set weights (see 30:13).

25. 100 talents and 1,775 shekels. Another unlikely large and presumably symbolic amount—more than three times the quantity in the previous verse—is given for the quantity of donated silver.

26. a half-shekel a head. The military census that involved individual men's contributions to the Tabernacle, mandated in 30:11–16, accounts here for all of the silver collected. For some reason, the free-will contributions of silver that presumably came from both women and men (35:24; compare 11:2) are not tallied.

603,550. This figure is equivalent to that of the military census in Numbers 1:46; both count only males above the age of twenty. This impossibly large and thus symbolic number, perhaps meant to include all Israelites in times to come, is slightly larger than the number of men who left Egypt: 600,000 men (Exodus 12:37).

men. Specification of gender does not appear explicitly in the Hebrew here, but it is implied by the act of a military census (see at 30:11–16).

talents of silver were for casting the sockets of the sanctuary and the sockets for the curtain, 100 sockets to the 100 talents, a talent a socket.²⁸ And of the 1,775 shekels he made hooks for the posts, overlay for their tops, and bands around them.

²⁹The copper from the elevation offering came to 70 talents and 2,400 shekels.³⁰ Of it he made the sockets for the entrance of the Tent of Meeting; the copper altar and its copper grating and all the utensils of the altar;³¹ the sockets of the enclosure round about and the sockets of the gate of the enclosure; and all the pegs of the Tabernacle and all the pegs of the enclosure round about.

39 Of the blue, purple, and crimson yarns

לְצַקֶת אֶת אֱדֹנִי הַקָּדֵשׁ וְאֶת אֱדֹנִי הַפְּרָכָת
מֵאַת אֲדֹנִים לְמִائָה הַכְּפָר בְּפָר לְאַחֲן:²⁸
וְאֶת-הַאֲלָף וְשָׁבָע הַמְאוֹת וְחַמְשָׁה
וְשְׁבָעִים עֲשָׂה וְוִים לְעַמּוֹדִים וְצָפָה
רְאִשְׁיָם וְחַשְׁקָק אֲתֶם:²⁹
וְנִנְחַשְׁת הַתְּנוּפָה שְׁבָעִים בְּפָר וְאַלְפִים
וְאַרְבָּע-מֵאוֹת שָׁקָל:³⁰ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה בְּהָ אַתֶּ
אֱדֹנִי פָתֵח אַחֲל מַזְעֵד וְאֶת מִזְבֵח הַנִּחְשָׁת
וְאֶת-מִכְבָּר הַנִּחְשָׁת אֲשֶׁר-לֹו וְאֶת פֶלְבָלִי
הַמִזְבֵח:³¹ וְאֶת-אֱדֹנִי הַחַצֵל סְבִיב וְאֶת
אֱדֹנִי שַׁעַר הַחַצֵר וְאֶת בְּלִיתְדַת הַמְשֻׁבָן
וְאֶת-כְּלִי-תִדְתַת הַחַצֵר סְבִיב:
לְט וּמְזִינְתְּכָלָת וְהַאֲרָגְמָן וְתוֹלְעָת

29. copper. The Hebrew term probably refers more precisely to bronze; see at 25:3.

elevation offering. Like gold (v. 24), the “copper” (or bronze) is dedicated through the ritual of the wave offering. The “copper” (or bronze) from the mirrors of the women serving “at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting” (38:8) is not mentioned, perhaps because the laver for which they donated their mirrors is omitted in the list of uses for the “copper” in the next two verses.

70 talents and 2,400 shekels. The quantity of “copper” (bronze) is more than double the amount of gold; on the import of this quantity, see at v. 24.

Priestly Vestments

(39:1–31)

The catalogue of priestly vestments is similar to that of the earlier prescriptive texts that provide instructions for making these items (28:1–43). Apparently because of the focus in this parashah on construction rather than use, this unit adds technical details but omits some information about function. The most remarkable difference between the two accounts is the almost complete absence of any mention of Aaron, whose name appears some sixteen times in the equivalent unit in parashat T'zaveh but only twice here (vv. 1, 27). In contrast, Moses’ name, which is absent from the earlier account of the vestments, appears repeatedly here.

INTRODUCTION (39:1)

The introductory verse mentions only the apparel of the chief priestly officer, whose elaborate vestments are described in considerable detail in the next section. (For the parallel prescriptive text earlier in Exodus, see 28:1–5.)

1. yarns. Although other materials are involved in making the priestly apparel, only the dyed woolen yarns, and not even the gold or the linen threads (which appear in subsequent verses), are mentioned.

they also made the service vestments for officiating in the sanctuary; they made Aaron's sacral vestments—as had commanded Moses.

²The ephod was made of gold, blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen. ³They hammered out sheets of gold and cut threads to be worked into designs among the blue, the purple, and the crimson yarns, and the fine linen. ⁴They made for it attaching shoulder-pieces; they were attached at its two ends. ⁵The decorated band that was upon it was made like it, of one piece with it; of gold, blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen—as had commanded Moses.

⁶They bordered the lazuli stones with frames of gold, engraved with seal engravings of the names of the sons of Israel. ⁷They were set on the shoulder-

השְׁנִי עַשׂו בְגִדֵּי שָׂרֵד לְשִׁרְתָ בְקָדֵש וַיַּעֲשׂו
אֶת־בְגִדֵי הַקָּדֵש אֲשֶׁר לְאֹהֶן כַאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה
יְהֹוָה אֶת־מְשֹׁה: פ

²וַיַּעֲשֵׂה אֶת־הַאֲפָד זָהָב תְכִלָת וְאַרְגָּמָן
וְתוֹלָעָת שְׂנִי וְשֶׁשׁ מְשֹׁרֶק: ³וַיַּרְקְעוּ אֶת־
פְתִיחַי הַזָּהָב וְקָצֵץ פְתִילָם לְעִשּׂוֹת בְתֻורָ
הַתְכִלָת וּבְתוֹךְ הָאַרְגָּמָן וּבְתוֹךְ תְוּלָעָת
הַשְׁנִי וּבְתוֹךְ הַשֶּׁשׁ מְעֻשָּׂה חָשֶׁב: ⁴בְתִפְתָּחָה
עֲשִׂירָלוֹן חֶבְרוֹת עַל־שְׂנִי קְצֻוֹתָיו
חָבֵר: ⁵וְחָשֶׁב אֶפְקָדוֹ אֲשֶׁר עַלְיוֹ מְמָנוֹ
הוּא בְמַעַשְׂהוֹ זָהָב תְכִלָת וְאַרְגָּמָן וְתוֹלָעָת
שְׂנִי וְשֶׁשׁ מְשֹׁרֶק כַאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהֹוָה אֶת־ מְשֹׁה: ס

⁶וַיַּעֲשֵׂו אֶת־אָבִנִי הַשְׁׂהָם מִסְבָּת מִשְׁבָּצָת
זָהָב מִפְתָּחוֹת פִתְחָה חֹזֶקְמָן עַל־שְׁמוֹת בְנֵי
יִשְׂרָאֵל: ⁷וַיִּשְׁמַם אֲתֶם עַל בְּחִפְתָּחָה הַאֲפָד

they . . . made the service vestments. Although women are not explicitly mentioned, they are likely in view here, given that women were typically the textile workers in ancient Israel (see at 35:25), just as Hannah is said to have made her son Samuel's robe when he served as a priest at Shiloh (I Samuel 2:19).

Aaron. This is one of only two places where Aaron's name is used in this narrative (Exodus 39), in contrast to his prominence in the equivalent prescriptive texts. His complicity in the Golden Calf incident may account for his near absence here. In effect, the text emphasizes the enduring office, not one particular officeholder. It does, however, give Moses a relatively exalted place.

as יהוה had commanded Moses. This clause appears seven times in this unit (see at 38:22). With seven denoting totality or completeness in Semitic parlance, such repetition gives prominence to the role of Moses, not Aaron, as the authoritative conduit of God's will, even for making the priestly garments.

RITUAL ITEMS (39:2–21)

The vestments of the chief priestly official are not simply items of clothing; rather, they have ritual functions. This description differs from that of the earlier, prescriptive instructions (28:6–30) in adjusting to the different context and in being somewhat less detailed, especially by omitting information about the use of these items.

2. The ephod. The biblical sources that mention the ephod (such as Judges 8:24–27, I Samuel 30:7, and Hosea 3:4) contain such disparate information that it is difficult to understand what an ephod looked like or how it was used. Although the appearance and use of the ephod varied over time, what is constant is that the ephod always is related to ritual matters—sometime as a ritual garment, sometimes as a divinatory device, and sometimes as both. In Exodus, its details and its association with the breastpiece of decision make it likely that the ephod was worn by the priest and used for oracular (divinatory) purposes.

3. Costly garments embroidered with gold pieces of the ephod, as stones of remembrance for the Israelites—as יְהוָה had commanded Moses.

⁸The breastpiece was made in the style of the ephod: of gold, blue, purple, and crimson yarns, and fine twisted linen. ⁹It was square; they made the breastpiece doubled—a span in length and a span in width, doubled. ¹⁰They set in it four rows of stones. The first row was a row of carnelian, chrysolite, and emerald; ¹¹the second row: a turquoise, a sapphire, and an amethyst; ¹²the third row: a jacinth, an agate, and a crystal; ¹³and the fourth row: a beryl, a lapis lazuli, and a jasper. They were encircled in their mountings with frames of gold. ¹⁴The stones corresponded [in number] to the names of the sons of Israel: twelve, corresponding to their names; engraved like seals, each with its name, for the twelve tribes.

¹⁵On the breastpiece they made braided chains of corded work in pure gold. ¹⁶They made two frames of gold and two rings of gold, and fastened the two rings at the two ends of the breastpiece, ¹⁷attaching the two golden cords to the two rings at the ends of the breastpiece. ¹⁸They then fastened the two ends of the cords to the two frames, attaching them to the shoulder-pieces of the ephod, at the front. ¹⁹They made two rings of gold and attached them to the two ends of the breastpiece, at threads, which other ancient Near Eastern cultures used to clothe the statues of deities, were considered to have special sanctity.

7. stones of remembrance. According to the earlier, prescriptive text, God had specified that both the ephod and breastpiece be adorned with gemstones engraved for “remembrance” (28:12, 29) with the names of the Israelite tribes. This feature has commemorative symbolic value, bringing all Israel into the Tabernacle with the chief priestly officer as he carries out the rituals thought to help

אֲבֹנִי וּכְרוֹן לְבָנִי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּאַשְׁר צֹהֶה יְהוָה
אֶת-מְשֻׁחָה: פ

וַיַּעֲשֵׂה אֶת-הַחֶשֶׁן מִעֲשָׂה חַשְׁבָּב בְּמִיעָשָׂה
אָפָד זָהָב תְּכִלָּת וְאַרְגָּמָן וְתוֹלָעָת שְׁנִי
וְשֶׁשׁ מְשֻׁקָּר: ⁹רְבוּעַ דָּהָה בְּפּוֹל עַשְׂוֵה אֶת-הַחֶשֶׁן זְרַת אַרְפָּדוּ וּוְרַת רְחַבּוּ בְּפּוֹל:
¹⁰וַיִּמְלָא-וּבוּ אַרְבָּעָה טָוִרִי אַבְנָן טָוֵר אַדְם
פְּטָרָה יְבָרָקָת הַטּוֹר הַאָחָד: ¹¹וְהַטּוֹר
הַשְׁנִי נְפָרָסְפִּיר וְיְהָלָם: ¹²וְהַטּוֹר
הַשְׁלִישִׁי לְשֵׁם שְׁבּוּ וְאַחֲלָמָה: ¹³וְהַטּוֹר
הַרְבִּיעִי תְּרַשְׁישָׁ שְׁהָם וְיְשָׁפָה מוֹסְבָּת
מִשְׁבָּצָת זָהָב בְּמַלְאָתָם: ¹⁴וְהַאֲבָנִים עַל-
שְׁמָת בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל הַנֶּהָה שְׁתִים עַשְׂרָה עַל-שְׁמָתֶם פָּתּוּחַ חֹתֶם אִישׁ עַל-שְׁמוֹ לְשָׁנִים

עַשְׂרֵה שְׁבָט:

¹⁵וַיַּעֲשֵׂו עַל-הַחֶשֶׁן שְׁرַשְׂרַת גְּבַלָּת מִיעָשָׂה
עֲבָת זָהָב טָהוֹר: ¹⁶וַיַּעֲשֵׂו שְׁתִי מִשְׁבָּצָת
זָהָב וְשְׁתִי טְבֻעָת זָהָב וַיִּתְנוּ אֶת-שְׁתִי
הַטְּבֻעָת עַל-שְׁנִי קְצֹות הַחֶשֶׁן: ¹⁷וַיִּתְנוּ
שְׁתִי הַעֲבֹתָה הַזָּהָב עַל-שְׁתִי הַטְּבֻעָת עַל-קְצֹות הַחֶשֶׁן: ¹⁸וְאֶת שְׁתִי קְצֹות שְׁתִי
הַעֲבֹתָה נִתְנוּ עַל-שְׁתִי הַמִּשְׁבָּצָת וַיִּתְנוּ
עַל-בְּתַפְתָּה הָאָפָד אֶל-מַול פָּנָיו: ¹⁹וַיַּעֲשֵׂו
שְׁתִי טְבֻעָת זָהָב וַיִּשְׁמוּ עַל-שְׁנִי קְצֹות הַחֶשֶׁן עַל-שְׁפָנוֹ אֲשֶׁר אֶל-עֶבֶר הָאָפָד secure the well-being of the people or to adjudicate their conflicts.

8. The breastpiece was made. The description of the breastpiece’s manufacture does not use the longer phrase “breastpiece of decision” (28:15, 29, 30), which indicates that the breastpiece plays a role in the judicial functions of the priesthood. Also missing from this passage is any mention of two associated items, the Urim and Thummim (see at 28:30), used by the priest to discern God’s will.

its inner edge, which faced the ephod.²⁰ They made two other rings of gold and fastened them on the front of the ephod, low on the two shoulder-pieces, close to its seam above the decorated band.²¹ The breastpiece was held in place by a cord of blue from its rings to the rings of the ephod, so that the breastpiece rested on the decorated band and did not come loose from the ephod—as יְהוָה had commanded Moses.

²²The robe for the ephod was made of woven work, of pure blue.²³ The opening of the robe, in the middle of it, was like the opening of a coat of mail, with a binding around the opening, so that it would not tear.²⁴ On the hem of the robe they made pomegranates of blue, purple, and crimson yarns, twisted.²⁵ They also made bells of pure gold, and attached the bells between the pomegranates, all around the hem of the robe, between the pomegranates:²⁶ a bell and a pomegranate, a bell and a pomegranate, all around the hem of the robe for officiating in—as יְהוָה had commanded Moses.

²⁷They made the tunics of fine linen, of woven work, for Aaron and his sons;²⁸ and the headdress of fine linen, and the decorated turbans of fine

בִּיתָה :²⁰ וַיַּעֲשֵׂ שְׁתִי טְبֻעַת זָהָב וַיַּתֶּן
עַל־שְׁתִי כְּתָפַת הַאֱפֹד מִלְמְטָה מִמּוֹלֵ פָנָיו
לְעַמְתָה מִחְבְּרָתוֹ מִמְעַל לְחַשֵּׁב הַאֱפֹד :²¹
וַיַּרְבֵּטוּ אֶת־הַחֶשֶׁן מִשְׁבֻעָתוֹ אֶל־טְבֻעַת
הַאֱפֹד בְּפְתִיל תְּכִלָת לְהִתְعַל־חַשֵּׁב
הַאֱפֹד וְלֹא־יַזְחַק הַחֶשֶׁן מִעַל הַאֱפֹד בְּאַשְׁר
צָוָה יְהוָה אֶת־מִשְׁׁה : פ

²² וַיַּעֲשֵׂ אֶת־מְעַיל הַאֱפֹד מִעַשָּׂה אַגְּבָלִיל תְּכִלָת :²³ וַיַּפְרִיד־מְעַיל בְּתֹוכוֹ בְּפִי
תְּחַרְאָ שָׁפָה לְפִוּ סְבִיב לֹא יִקְרַעַ :²⁴
וַיַּעֲשֵׂ עַל־שְׁוֹלֵי הַמְעַיל רְמוֹנִי תְּכִלָת
וְאַרְגָּמָן וְתְוֹלַעַת שְׁנִי מִשְׁׁזָר :²⁵ וַיַּעֲשֵׂ
פְעָמָנִי זָהָב טָהָר וַיַּתֶּן אֶת־הַפְּעָמָנִים
בְּתוֹךְ הַרְמָנִים עַל־שְׁוֹלֵי הַמְעַיל סְבִיב
בְּתוֹךְ הַרְמָנִים :²⁶ פְעָמָן וְרָמָן פְעָמָן וְרָמָן
עַל־שְׁוֹלֵי הַמְעַיל סְבִיב לְשִׁרְתָּ בְּאַשְׁר צָוָה
יְהוָה אֶת־מִשְׁׁה : ס

²⁷ וַיַּעֲשֵׂ אֶת־הַכְּתָנָת שְׁשׁ מִעַשָּׂה אַגְּבָלִיל
לְאַחֲרֵן וְלִבְנֵיו :²⁸ וְאֶת הַמְּכֹנֶפת שְׁשׁ
וְאֶת־פָּאֵר הַמְּגַבְעָת שְׁשׁ וְאֶת־מְכֹנֶסֶת

APPAREL (39:22–31)

In addition to the ritual items, Aaron and the other priests wear special garments. The description of these garments in this section includes somewhat more detail than in the earlier, prescriptive account (28:31–43), but it abbreviates the information about when these garments are worn (28:34, 41–43). These items of clothing may not have a direct role in what the priests do, but they contribute to the overall sanctity of the Tabernacle and its rituals.

22. The robe. The artisans make the special robe for the chief priestly officer. The full-length robe was blue, with bells and multicolored tassels in the shape of pomegranates on the skirt (see at 28:31–35).

24. pomegranates. The pomegranate was a symbol of fertility and a well-known decorative element in ancient Near Eastern art.

25. bells. The sound of the bells apparently was intended to ward off danger. In this case, the danger would have been the intense holiness emanating from the presence of God as the chief priestly official enters the holy zone of the Tabernacle (28:35).

27. tunics of fine linen. A tunic was the standard garment for both women and men in the eastern Mediterranean region for about a thousand years (in the Late Bronze and Iron Ages, from the mid-2nd to the mid-1st millennia B.C.E.).

28. headdress...decorated turbans. The headdress of Aaron's sons is actually more of a cap than a linen, and the linen breeches of fine twisted linen;

²⁹and sashes of fine twisted linen, blue, purple, and crimson yarns, done in embroidery—as יהוה had commanded Moses.

³⁰They made the frontlet for the holy diadem of pure gold, and incised upon it the seal inscription: “Holy to יהוה.” ³¹They attached to it a cord of blue to fix it upon the headdress above—as יהוה had commanded Moses.

³²Thus was completed all the work of the Tabernacle of the Tent of Meeting. The Israelites did so; just as יהוה had commanded Moses, so they did.

הבד שיש מושר: ²⁹ ואת-האבות שיש
משור ותכלית וארגמן ותולעת
מעשה רעם כאשר צוה יהוה אני
משה:

וַיַּעֲשֵׂו אֶת־עֵץ נֹרְהַקְדֵּשׁ וְרָב טָהֹר
וַיִּכְתְּבוּ עַלְיוֹ מְכֹתֶב פָּטוֹתִ חותֶם קָדֵשׁ
לִיהוֹה: ³¹ וַיִּתְנוּ עַלְיוֹ פָּתִיל תְּכִלָּת לְתַת
עַל־הַמְצֻנֶּת מִלְמָעָלה בְּאַשְׁר צָרָה יְהוָה
אֶחָמְשָׂה:

וְתָכַל בָּלְעֵבֶד מִשְׁפָּנָן אֲחֵל מוֹעֵד
וַיַּעֲשֵׂו בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּכָל אֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אַתְּ-מֹשֶׁה בֶן עַשְׁׂוֹ:

turban. The headgear of the chief priestly official is more elaborate and includes a crown or diadem (29:6); see also at 28:36.

linen breeches. Earlier in the text, God mandated these breeches to function as an undergarment worn by all priestly ranks, perhaps for reasons of modesty (28:42–43). Undergarments were not part of ordinary apparel in biblical times, nor were they sacral garments.

Summary of the Completed Components (39:32–43)

The completion of the vestments brings to an end the task of making all the components of the Tabernacle. The narrative proclaims this fact (39:32) and then describes how all the constituent parts are brought to Moses for him to see and bless (39:33–43).

ANNOUNCEMENT OF COMPLETION (39:32)

Although some consider this verse a concluding observation to the preceding unit on the vestments, the language seems to be quite general, referring to the completion of the components of the entire project.

32. completed. The term for completing the work is the same as that used in Genesis 2:1, 2 for the completion of God's creation of the world. This allusion to divine creation, in which the construction of God's earthly abode reflects aspects of the creation of the world, anticipates the profusion of such allusions in Exodus 40.

Tabernacle of the Tent of Meeting. These two designations, Mishkan and Ohel Mo'ed, are juxtaposed only here and in 40:2, 6, 29, thus bringing together the sacred shrine's two functions: the Tabernacle (Mishkan) as dwelling-place for God (see at 25:8), and the Tent of Meeting (Ohel Mo'ed) as the place where God will "meet" with priestly and prophetic leaders to communicate the divine will (see at 27:21).

The Israelites did so. Artisans have actually done the work, yet they represent the Israelites. All the people—women and men—contributed materials; and the edifice will serve them all.

as יהוה had commanded Moses. This clause is used to attribute the making of the Tabernacle's components to Moses' role as mediator of God's commands.

³³Then they brought the Tabernacle to Moses, with the Tent and all its furnishings: its clasps, its planks, its bars, its posts, and its sockets; ³⁴the covering of tanned ram skins, the covering of dolphin skins, and the curtain for the screen; ³⁵the Ark of the Pact and its poles, and the cover; ³⁶the table and all its utensils, and the bread of display; ³⁷the pure lampstand, its lamps—lamps in due order—and all its fittings, and the oil for lighting; ³⁸the altar of gold, the oil for anointing, the aromatic incense, and the screen for the entrance of the Tent; ³⁹the copper altar with its copper grating, its poles and all its utensils, and the laver and its stand; ⁴⁰the hangings of the enclosure, its posts and its sockets, the screen for the gate of the enclosure, its cords and its pegs—all the furnishings for the service of the Tabernacle, the Tent of Meeting; ⁴¹the service vestments for officiating in the sanctuary, the sacral vestments of Aaron the priest, and the vestments of his sons for priestly service. ⁴²Just as Yahoh had commanded Moses, so the Israelites had done all the work. ⁴³And when Moses saw that they had performed all the tasks—as Yahoh had commanded, so they had done—Moses blessed them.

³³וַיִּבְיאוּ אֶת־הַמִּשְׁכָּן אֶל־מֹשֶׁה אֲתָה־
הַאֲهָל וְאֶת־כֶּל־בְּלֵי קְרֻסִיו קְרֻשִׁיו בְּרִיחָו
בְּרִיחָיו וְעַמְפְּרוּ וְאַדְנָיו: ³⁴ וְאֶת־מִכְסָה
עוֹרָת הַאִילָם הַמְּאָדָמִים וְאֶת־מִכְסָה עֲרָזָה
הַתְּחָשִׁים וְאֶת פְּרַכְתַּת הַמִּסְךָ: ³⁵ אֲתָה־אַרְזֹן
הַעֲלָת וְאֶת־בְּרִיחָיו וְאֶת הַכְּפָרָת: ³⁶ אֲתָה־
הַשְּׁלֹחַן אֶת־כֶּל־בְּלֵי וְאֶת לְחֵם הַפְנִים:
³⁷ אֲתָה־הַמִּנְרָה הַטְּהָרָה אֲתָה־נְרָתִיה גְּרָתָה
הַמְּעָרָכה וְאֶת־כֶּל־בְּלֵיה וְאֶת שְׁמָנוֹ
הַמְּשָׁחָה וְאֶת קְטָרָת הַסְּמִים וְאֶת מְסָךָ
פָּתָח הַאֲהָל: ³⁹ אֲתָה מִזְבֵּח הַגְּחַשָּׁת וְאֲתָה־
מִכְבָּר הַגְּחַשָּׁת אֲשֶׁר־לֹו אֲתָה־בְּרוּ וְאֲתָה־
כָּל־בְּלֵי אֲתָה־הַכִּיר וְאֲתָה־כָּנו: ⁴⁰ אֲתָה קְלָעֵי
הַחֶצֶר אֲתָה־עַמְדֵיה וְאֲתָה־אַדְנִיה וְאֶת־
הַמִּסְךָ לְשֹׁער הַחֶצֶר אֲתָה־מִתְּחִרְיו וְיִתְּרִתְיךָ
וְאֶת כֶּל־בְּלֵי עֲבֹתַת הַמִּשְׁכָּן לְאֲהָל מוֹעֵד:
⁴¹ אֲתָה־בְּגָדֵי הַשְּׂרֵד לְשֹׁרֶת בְּקָדֵש אֲתָה־בְּגָדֵי
הַקָּדֵש לְאַהֲרֹן הַכֹּהן וְאֲתָה־בְּגָדֵי בָנָיו
לְכֹהן: ⁴² בְּכָל אֲשֶׁר־צִוָּה יְהוָה אֲתָה־מֹשֶׁה
בָנֵן בָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אֲתָה בְּלַהֲעֵבָה:
⁴³ וַיַּרְא מֹשֶׁה אֲתָה־כֶּל־הַמִּלְאָכָה וְהַנֶּאֱ
עָשָׂו אֲתָה כַּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה בָנֵן עָשָׂו
וַיָּבֹךְ אָתָם מֹשֶׁה: פ

GENERAL INVENTORY OF COMPLETED COMPONENTS (39:33–43)

Moses has commissioned all the components of the Tabernacle, which now are brought to him. The items are listed in the order in which they have been made.

33. Tabernacle. Here the term mishkan designates the entire complex, with its furnishings and installations, in contrast to 26:1–14 and 36:8–19, where the term denotes just the tent itself.

42. Just as Yahoh had commanded Moses. In somewhat abbreviated and rearranged fashion, this verse repeats v. 32, which began this inventory passage.

43. when Moses saw . . . Moses blessed them. This verse contains another echo of the first creation account of Genesis. Just as God saw all the created components of the universe in Genesis 1, so Moses sees all the components of the Tabernacle. And just as God offers a blessing at the end of creation (Genesis 2:3; see also 1:22, 28), so Moses blesses the people who have completed their creative tasks.

40 And יהוה spoke to Moses, saying:

²On the first day of the first month you shall set up the Tabernacle of the Tent of Meeting. ³Place there the Ark of the Pact, and screen off the ark with the curtain. ⁴Bring in the table and lay out its due setting; bring in the lampstand and light its lamps; ⁵and place the gold altar of incense before the Ark of the Pact. Then put up the screen for the entrance of the Tabernacle.

⁶You shall place the altar of burnt offering before the entrance of the Tabernacle of the Tent of Meeting. ⁷Place the laver between the Tent of מ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֲלֵיכָם לֵאמֹר:

²בִּיּוֹם הַחְדָשָׁה הַרְאֵשׁ בְּאֶחָד לְחַדֵשׁ
תְּקִים אֶת-מִשְׁכָן אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד: ³וְשָׂמַת
שֵׁם אֶת אָרוֹן הַעֲדֹות וְסְפִתְתַּת עַל-הָאָרֶן אֶת-
הַפְּרִכְתָּה: ⁴וְהַבָּאת אֶת-הַשְּׁלָחוֹן וְעַרְכָתָה
אֶת-עַרְבוֹן וְהַבָּאת אֶת-הַמִּנְחָה וְהַעֲלִיתָ
אֶת-נִירְתִּיה: ⁵וְנַתְתָה אֶת-מִזְבֵח הַזָּהָב
לְקַטְרָת לְפָנֵי אָרוֹן הַעֲדֹת וְשָׂמַת אֶת-
מִסְך הַפְּתַח לְמִשְׁכָן:
⁶וְנַתְתָה אֶת מִזְבֵח הַעַלְלָה לְפָנֵי פָתָח
מִשְׁכָן אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד: ⁷וְנַתְתָה אֶת-הַכְּבֵד בֵין

Erection and Consecration of the Tabernacle (40:1–38)

The last unit of this parashah mirrors Genesis 1, in which God's creative acts are first stated ("Let there be...") and then carried out ("...and so it was"). The first half of Exodus 40 is the equivalent of "Let there be...," in which God gives Moses a final set of instructions for erecting the sacred shrine (vv. 1–16). The next part of the unit reflects the "...and so it was" aspect of the Tabernacle (vv. 17–33). Thus the erection of God's earthly abode is tantamount to the creation of the world; indeed, as was the case for temple buildings in the ancient Near East, the Tabernacle is conceptually a microcosm of the universe. (See also Vayak'heil, Contemporary Reflection, p. 539.)

The last few verses of Exodus describe God's entry into the Tabernacle (vv. 34–38).

DIRECTIONS FOR ERECTING THE TABERNACLE COMPLEX (40:1–8)

The order of God's succinct instructions fits the logic of building construction.

2. first day of the first month. This refers to New Year's Day. Thus, the beginning of the existence of the shrine, which is a microcosm of the cosmos, is keyed to the creation of the world. It is as if God's role as omnipotent creator is mirrored in and signified by God's earthly abode. But the Tabernacle's existence is also keyed to the beginning of Israel's existence as a free people: it comes nine months after the people arrive at Sinai (19:1) and virtually on the first anniversary of the beginning of freedom, which was on the "fourteenth day of the first month" (12:6, 18). The month is not named, but it is probably Nisan. Thus the Tabernacle would be completed in time for the first celebration of Pesach (see Numbers 9:1–14).

set up. The priestly narrator frequently, as here, uses a causative form of the Hebrew verb (k-w-m, "to stand, rise") to indicate the establishment of the Mishkan. (On the "priestly" voice in the Torah, see p. 566.) In priestly texts, the root also occurs as part of the expression "to establish the covenant" with God (see 6:4). Using the same verb for the Tabernacle and the covenant provides a connection between these two foundational aspects of Israelite national life.

Tabernacle of the Tent of Meeting. This phrase is an inclusive term for the portable wilderness edifice (see at 39:32).

3–8. This is the briefest of all the listings of the fixed components of the sacred shrine, and it excludes the vestments.

Meeting and the altar, and put water in it.⁸ Set up the enclosure round about, and put in place the screen for the gate of the enclosure.

⁹You shall take the anointing oil and anoint the Tabernacle and all that is in it to consecrate it and all its furnishings, so that it shall be holy. ¹⁰Then anoint the altar of burnt offering and all its utensils to consecrate the altar, so that the altar shall be most holy. ¹¹And anoint the laver and its stand to consecrate it.

¹²You shall bring Aaron and his sons forward to the entrance of the Tent of Meeting and wash them with the water. ¹³Put the sacral vestments on Aaron, and anoint him and consecrate him, that he may serve Me as priest. ¹⁴Then bring his sons forward, put tunics on them,¹⁵and anoint them as you have anointed their father, that they may serve Me as priests. This their anointing shall serve them for everlasting priesthood throughout the ages.

¹⁶This Moses did; just as had commanded him, so he did.

אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וּבֵין הַמִּזְבֵּחַ וּנְתָת שֵׁם מִים :
⁸ וְשָׂמַת אֲתִיהָחָצֵר סְבִיב וּנְתָת אֲתִימָסֵךְ
 שַׁעַר הַחֲצֵר :
⁹ וְלִקְחַת אֲתִישָׁמֵן הַמְשֻׁתָּה וּמִשְׁחַת אֲתִ
 הַמְשֻׁבָּן וּאֲתִכְלֵל אֲשֶׁר־בָּו וּקְדַשְׁת אֲתִ
 וּאֲתִכְלֵל־בְּלֵיו וְהִיא קָדֵש : ¹⁰ וּמִשְׁחַת
 אֲתִמְזִבֵּחַ הַעַלְהָ וּאֲתִכְלֵל־בְּלֵיו וּקְדַשְׁת
 אֲתִהְמִזְבֵּחַ וְהִיא הַמִּזְבֵּחַ קָדֵש קָדְשִׁים :
¹¹ וּמִשְׁחַת אֲתִהְכִיר וּאֲתִכְבָּנו וּקְדַשְׁת
 אֲתִו :
¹² וְהַקְרְבַת אֲתִאָהָרָן וּאֲתִכְבָּנו אַלְפְּתַח
 אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וּרְחַצְת אַתָּם בְּמִים :
¹³ וְהַלְבָשַׁת אֲתִאָהָרָן אֲתָה בְגִדֵּי הַקָּדֵש
 וּמִשְׁחַת אֲתִו וּקְדַשְׁת אֲתִו וּכְהַן לֵי :
¹⁴ וּאֲתִכְבָּנו תְּקִרְבָּה וְהַלְבָשַׁת אַתָּם
 בְּתָנָת : ¹⁵ וּמִשְׁחַת אַתָּם בְּאַשְׁר מִשְׁחַת
 אֲתִאָבִיהם וּכְהַנו לֵי וְהִתְהַלֵּחַ לְהַלֵּחַ
 מִשְׁחַתְם לְכַהֵנָת עָולָם לְדוֹרָתֶם :
¹⁶ וַיַּעֲשֵׂה מֹשֶׁה בְּכָל אֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהֹוָה אֲתִו
 בֶן עֲשָׂה : ס

DIRECTIONS FOR ANOINTING THE TABERNACLE COMPLEX AND PERSONNEL (40:9–16)

Erecting the shrine does not in and of itself make it sacred. A special ceremony of consecration—in which all the components (including the vestments), as well as the priests themselves are anointed—will change the status of the entire complex from profane to holy.

9. anointing oil. Anointing brings about an elevation of status in the ancient Near East and in ancient Israel (see at 29:7).

consecrate. The allusions to creation continue, for the Hebrew here echoes the language of Genesis 2:3, when God blesses and consecrates the seventh day (in the present translation, “made it holy”).

12–15. This section discusses the same three procedures—washing, enrobing, anointing—as prescribed in Exodus 29. However, there is no hint of the elaborate sacrificial offerings detailed in that unit. Perhaps the Aaron-centered nature of the sacrifices would have been out of place in this Moses-centered conclusion.

15. throughout the ages. This is language typically used to justify a status or practice at the time of the narrator on the basis of its authoritative origin (as in 12:14).

16. Since Moses appears here and in 40:1, he frames the two sets of directives, thus intensifying his involvement with all these final tasks assigned by God.

¹⁷In the first month of the second year, on the first of the month, the Tabernacle was set up.

¹⁸Moses set up the Tabernacle, placing its sockets, setting up its planks, inserting its bars, and erecting its posts. ¹⁹He spread the tent over the Tabernacle, placing the covering of the tent on top of it—just as had commanded Moses.

²⁰He took the Pact and placed it in the ark; he fixed the poles to the ark, placed the cover on top of the ark, ²¹and brought the ark inside the Tabernacle. Then he put up the curtain for screening, and screened off the Ark of the Pact—just as had commanded Moses.

²²He placed the table in the Tent of Meeting, outside the curtain, on the north side of the Tabernacle. ²³Upon it he laid out the setting of bread before יהוה—as had commanded Moses. ²⁴He placed the lampstand in the Tent of Meeting opposite the table, on the south side of the Tabernacle. ²⁵And he lit the lamps before יהוה—as had commanded Moses. ²⁶He placed the altar of gold in the Tent of Meeting, before the curtain. ²⁷On it he burned aromatic incense—as had commanded Moses.

EXECUTION OF THE DIRECTIONS (40:17–33)

Moses now carries out God's commands to erect the Tabernacle and all its components. There is no mention, however, of the vestments or the consecration of the priests (see Leviticus 8). The clause “as יהוה commanded Moses” appears seven times in this passage (vv. 19, 21, 23, 25, 27, 29, and 32), echoing the seven units of time in the creation account of Genesis 1–2:4. As the world was created in seven days, so the Tabernacle—the microcosm of the world—is erected in seven stages. The exalted God-like role of Moses is reflected in the attribution to him alone of all the elaborate construc-

¹⁷ וַיְהִי בְּחَדֵשׁ הָרָאשׁוֹן בָּשְׁנִיהֶה הַשְׁנִית בְּאַחֲרֵי לְחַדֵּשׁ הַיּוֹם הַמִּשְׁבֵּן: ¹⁸ וַיַּקְרֵב מֹשֶׁה אֶת־הַמִּשְׁבֵּן וַיִּתְعַתֵּן אֶת־אַדְנֵיו וַיִּשְׂמַח אֶת־קָרְבָּנוֹ וַיִּתְعַתֵּן אֶת־בְּרִיחָיו וַיִּקְרֵב אֶת־עַמּוֹדָיו: ¹⁹ וַיִּפְרַשׁ אֶת־הַאֲדָל עַל־הַמִּשְׁבֵּן וַיָּשֶׂם אֶת־מְכֻסָּה הַאֲדָל עַלְיוֹ מִלְמָעָלה

כַּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אֶת־מְשָׁה: ס
²⁰ וַיַּקְרֵב וַיִּתְعַתֵּן אֶת־הַעֲדָת אֶל־הָאָרֶן וַיִּשְׂמַח אֶת־הַבְּדִים עַל־הָאָרֶן וַיִּתְعַתֵּן אֶת־הַכְּפָרָת עַל־הָאָרֶן מִלְמָעָלה: ²¹ וַיָּבֹא אֶת־הָאָרֶן אֶל־הַמִּשְׁבֵּן וַיִּשְׂמַח אֶת־פָּרָכַת הַמְּלָךְ וַיִּשְׂמַח עַל־אָרוֹן הַעֲדָות כַּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אֶת־מְשָׁה: ס

²² וַיִּתְعַתֵּן אֶת־הַשְּׁלֵחָן בְּאַדְלָל מוֹעֵד עַל יְרֵךְ הַמִּשְׁבֵּן צְפָנָה מִחוּזָה לְפָרָכָת: ²³ וַיַּעֲרֵב עַלְיוֹ עַרְךְ לְחַם לִפְנֵי יְהוָה כַּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אֶת־מְשָׁה: ס
²⁴ וַיִּשְׂמַח אֶת־מְשָׁה הַמְּנִירָה בְּאַדְלָל מוֹעֵד נִבְחָה הַשְּׁלֵחָן עַל יְרֵךְ הַמִּשְׁבֵּן נִגְבָּה: ²⁵ וַיַּעֲלֵל הַגְּרָתָה לִפְנֵי יְהוָה כַּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אֶת־מְשָׁה: ס ²⁶ וַיִּשְׂמַח אֶת־מִזְבֵּחַ הַזָּהָב בְּאַדְלָל מוֹעֵד לִפְנֵי הַפָּרָכָת: ²⁷ וַיַּקְטֵר עַלְיוֹ קָטוֹרָת סְמִים כַּאֲשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהוָה אֶת־מְשָׁה: ס

tion work, inconceivable without a team of workers.

17. first month of the second year, on the first of the month. The same information was given in 40:2, although here the year is added—presumably “the second year” after the departure from Egypt.

18–33. This passage presents a final listing of the components of the sacred shrine, including the initial use of all the ritual components. Moses eclipses Aaron once more in this parashah by initiating what are otherwise considered priestly assignments. Moses already possesses sanctity, which the priests do not gain until they have been sanctified by being washed, clothed, anointed, and daubed with ritual fluids—procedures not mentioned until Leviticus 8.

²⁸Then he put up the screen for the entrance of the Tabernacle. ²⁹At the entrance of the Tabernacle of the Tent of Meeting he placed the altar of burnt offering. On it he offered up the burnt offering and the meal offering—as had commanded Moses. ³⁰He placed the laver between the Tent of Meeting and the altar, and put water in it for washing. ³¹From it Moses and Aaron and his sons would wash their hands and feet; ³²they washed when they entered the Tent of Meeting and when they approached the altar—as had commanded Moses. ³³And he set up the enclosure around the Tabernacle and the altar, and put up the screen for the gate of the enclosure.

When Moses had finished the work,³⁴the cloud covered the Tent of Meeting, and the Presence of Yahweh filled the Tabernacle.³⁵Moses could not enter the Tent of Meeting, because the cloud had settled

²⁸וַיִּשֶּׂם אֹתֶם טָרֵךְ הַפְּתַח לְמִשְׁכָּן: ²⁹וְאַתָּה מִזְבֵּח הַעֲלָה שֶׁם פָּתַח מִשְׁבֵּן אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וַיַּעֲלֶה עַלְיוֹן אֹתֶה הַעֲלָה וְאֹתֶה הַמִּנְחָה בְּאֵשׁ כַּאֲשֶׁר צֹוָה יְהוָה אֹתֶה מִשְׁמָה: ס ³⁰וַיִּשֶּׂם אֹתֶה הַכְּבֵד בֵּין אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וּבֵין הַמִּזְבֵּח וּבֵין שְׁמָה וּמִים לְרִחְצָה: ס ³¹וַיַּחֲצֹז מִמְּנָיו מִשְׁמָה וְאֹהֶרֶן וּבָנָיו אֹתֶיךָם וְאֹתֶר גָּלִילָם: בָּבָם אֹלֶאָה לְמוֹעֵד וַיַּקְרְבָּתָם אֹלֶה הַמִּזְבֵּח יְרִחְצֹו בְּאֵשׁ צֹו יְהוָה אֹתֶה מִשְׁמָה: ס ³³וַיַּקְרְבָּם אֹתֶה הַחֶזֶר סְבִיב לְמִשְׁבָּן וְלְמִזְבֵּח וּתְנַתֵּן אֹתֶם שַׁעַר הַחֶצֶר וַיַּכְלֵל מִשְׁמָה אֹתֶה מֶלֶאכה: פ ³⁴וַיַּכְסֵה הַעֲלָה אֹתֶה אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וַיִּכְבֹּד יְהוָה מֶלֶא אֹתֶה הַמִּשְׁכָּן: וְלֹא יִכְלֵל מִשְׁמָה לְבוֹא אֹלֶה אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד בַּיַּשְׁבָּן עַלְיוֹן הַעֲלָה וַיִּכְבֹּד יְהוָה

30. He placed the laver between the Tent of Meeting and the altar. The laver, or wash basin, was made from mirrors donated by women (see at 38:8). Washing from it symbolized or effected the purification of the priests before they performed sacral rites.

33. When Moses had finished the work. In this edition of the Torah, this clause is considered the beginning of a new unit of thought. However, it could also be translated “and Moses finished his work,” thus completing the account of Moses erecting the shrine. Either way, the language echoes Genesis 2:2, “God finished the work” of Creation.

ENTRY OF GOD'S PRESENCE (40:34–38)

Moses has completed the creation of God's earthly abode; now the divine presence can enter the sacred shrine. This passage is the climax of this parashah, and indeed of the entire book of Exodus. The promise that God would dwell among the people and be their God can now be realized (see at 25:8; 29:45). What an enormous contrast: the homeless people who departed Egypt now have a glorious home for their deity!

34. cloud. The narratives of the wilderness, Sinai, and the Golden Calf all associate the cloud with the divine presence (see at 13:21). Its appearance here links these major elements of the book of Exodus with the Tabernacle project.

35. At first glance it seems surprising that Moses and God's presence could not be in the tent at the same time—especially in light of 33:9–11, where God spoke directly to Moses inside the Tent of Meeting (outside the camp) while the cloud hovered at the entrance. However, the present passage concerns the function of the cloud (and fire) in the journey to the Promised Land that is about to start up again, not the oracular function of the tent as expressed in Exodus 33.

settled. The verb comes from the root sh-k-n, which means “to dwell” as well as “to settle” (see at 25:8); it is the root for the noun mishkan (Tabernacle) as well as Shechinah (see T'rumah, Post-biblical Interpretations, p. 468).

upon it and the Presence of יהוה filled the Tabernacle.³⁶ When the cloud lifted from the Tabernacle, the Israelites would set out, on their various journeys; ³⁷but if the cloud did not lift, they would not set out until such time as it did lift.³⁸ For over the Tabernacle a cloud of יהוה rested by day, and fire would appear in [the cloud] by night, in the view of all the house of Israel throughout their journeys.

• •

36. When the cloud lifted. God does not permanently fill the shrine. When the cloud lifts, the people dismantle and pack up the Tabernacle and then travel onward. God is not confined to a single place or space, although God's imminence is more likely in the sacred space—Tabernacle or Temple—that the people construct according to divine specifications.

38. journeys. Heb. masa. It is fitting that Exodus ends with this word; its verbal root (n-s-e) was used frequently in Genesis for the movements of the ancestors, including their descent to Egypt

מֶלֶא אֶת-הַמִּשְׁבֵּן: ³⁶ וּבְהַעֲלוֹת הָעֵנָן מַעַל
הַמִּשְׁבֵּן יִסְעוּ בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּכָל מַסְעֵיהֶם:
³⁷ וְאִם-לَا יַעֲלֶה הָעֵנָן וְלֹא יִסְעוּ עַד-יּוֹם
הַעֲלָתוֹ: בַּיּוֹם יְהוָה עַל-הַמִּשְׁבֵּן יוֹמָם
וְאֶשְׁתְּחִווָּה לְלִילָה בְּזַעַפְתִּים כָּל-בֵּית-
יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּכָל-מַסְעֵיהֶם:

(Genesis 46:1). The same root then appeared in Exodus to indicate the stages of travel of the Israelites from Egypt to Sinai (12:37; 13:20; 16:1; 17:1; and 19:2). It is also found frequently in Numbers, in reference to the wilderness wanderings (as in Numbers 10:12). Thus, the word “journeys” situates the entire Exodus narrative within the larger story of the Torah. Just as important, the concluding verse of Exodus proclaims that the Israelites will not be alone on their long and difficult journey to the Promised Land. Rather, they are to be guided night and day by the luminous cloud of God’s presence.

—Carol Meyers

Another View

THIS PARASHAH DESCRIBES the priestly vestments: the ephod and breastpiece of gold, blue, purple, and crimson yarns of fine twisted linen, the pure blue woven robe with its pomegranates of blue, purple, and twisted crimson yarns on the hem, the tunics of fine linen woven work to be worn by Aaron and his sons, their headdress and decorated turbans of fine linen, and their sashes of fine embroidered blue, purple, and crimson linen yarns. Besides the priests' vestments, the text also mentions the hangings and curtains used to decorate the Tabernacle and to separate the rooms.

Producing textiles like these required a series of steps—carding, spinning, dyeing, and weaving the cotton, linen, or wool—tasks typically performed by women in the ancient Near East. Graves of women and girls often include weaving equipment such as bobbins and loom weights, whereas men's and boy's graves lack such equipment. Likewise, 4000-year-old graves of women in Turkmenia include specialized knives similar to those used by carpet weavers who live there today. An ancient Egyptian wooden model of a weaver's house shows women at work weaving, spinning, and winding the yarns. A relief found at Susa, dated to circa 1000 B.C.E., shows a woman sitting on a stool as she spins.

The objects described in this parashah were for use in the Tabernacle and later in the Jerusalem Temple. What kind of staff maintained those facilities? Consider that Mesopotamian and Egyptian temples were large estates that employed thousands of workers. Female workers associated with these large temples cared for the sick and served as midwives, cooks and pastry chefs, menial cleaners, and janitors, as well as spinners and weavers.

According to Exodus, women performed the skilled work involved in preparing the yarn and Women played a vital role in the construction of the Tabernacle.

weaving the fabrics for the Tabernacle (35:25–26). Although women are not mentioned explicitly in this parashah, archeological evidence and biblical references to women spinning and weaving (Proverbs 31:19; II Kings 23:7; compare Isaiah 19:9) allow us to reconstruct the vital role that Exodus presumes that women played in the construction of the Tabernacle and its elaborate objects.

—Lisbeth S. Fried

• • • • •

Post-biblical Interpretations

Now Bezalel, son of Uri son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, had made all that הִנֵּה had commanded Moses (38:22).

Although no women are mentioned in Bezalel's genealogy, rabbinic tradition connected him with Moses' sister Miriam. Hur's father was Caleb, and Caleb's wife was Ephrath (I Chronicles 2:19). But Midrash Sh'mot Rabbah 1.13 and 1.17 suggested that Ephrath was, in fact, another name for Miriam—who was also identified with Puah, one of the heroic midwives of Exodus 1. All of these conflated identities combined to make Miriam the great-grandmother of Bezalel. According to Sh'mot Rabbah 48.4, Miriam was not only Bezalel's great-grandmother; she was also the source of his inspiration. As one of the two midwives who saved the Israelite infants, Miriam was rewarded with special access to wisdom. This midrashic tradition is based on the biblical statement that God “established households [literally: houses]” for the midwives (1:21); according to the Rabbis, Miriam’s house was the house of wisdom. Since Bezalel, too, is associated with wisdom (35:31), the Rabbis assumed that the source of his special knowledge must have been Miriam. Thus, women played key roles at both the beginning and the conclusion of the book of Exodus: Moses could not have been saved without the ingenuity and bravery of women—including the midwives, his mother and sister, and Pharaoh’s daughter—nor could the Tabernacle have been built without the wisdom that Miriam bequeathed to Bezalel.

P'KUDEI

Women are able to discern when a cause is worthy of their generosity.

Then they brought the Tabernacle to Moses (39:33). For the Rabbis, the establishment of the Tabernacle represented the culmination of Israel’s relationship with God. In a metaphor often found in rabbinic literature, Sh'mot Rabbah 52,5 invokes the relationship between a man and a woman to reflect upon the bond between God and Israel. However, while most such interpretations envisioned a marital relationship in which God was imagined as the husband and Israel as the wife, here we see something different. Based on Song of Songs 3:11, “O maidens of Zion, go forth / And gaze upon King Solomon / Wearing the crown that his mother / Gave him on his wedding day, / On his day of bliss,” Rabbi Eleazar ben Rabbi Yose suggested that God first loved Israel like a father loves his daughter, and then, as God’s love increased, like a man loves his sister. Finally, God’s love for Israel reached the point where it was like the love a man has for his mother. Thus, each successive example represented a more intense love, including this striking idealization of the relationship between mother and son. Rabbi Eleazar then offered an interpretation based on the marital relationship; he concluded with a reflection on the destruction of the Temple and the promise that God would rebuild Jerusalem. Here, the proof text is Isaiah 51:3, and the image is of God comforting Zion in a time when “joy and gladness are found, thanksgiving and the strains of song.” Ultimately, we learn from this midrash that when we read about the Tabernacle, we are to imagine both its destruction and its ultimate rebuilding. Above all, we are to remember that the loving and intimate relationship between God and Israel—whichever relational imagery we use—remains intact.

In the first month...on the first of the month, the Tabernacle was set up (40:17). The rabbinic association of women with Rosh Chodesh, the celebration of the New Moon and the beginning of a month, has become well known. The usual explanation is that Rosh Chodesh was a reward for the Israelite women’s refusal to contribute their jewelry to the making of the Golden Calf (Midrash Pirkei D’Rabbi Eliezer 45). However, another rabbinic tradition also links women with Rosh Chodesh via the erection of the Tabernacle. As we read in this verse, the Tabernacle was erected on the first day of the first month, namely, Rosh Chodesh Nisan. According to the Shulchan Aruch and its commentaries (Orach Chaim 417.1), this day was the original women’s holiday, from which the idea of Rosh Chodesh arose. Women were connected with the erection of the Tabernacle because they were the first to contribute when the Tabernacle was being built (Nachmanides on 35:22). Women’s support of the Tabernacle strengthens the significance of their earlier refusal to contribute to the Golden Calf: it indicates that women are able to discern when a cause is worthy of their generosity.

—Lisa J. Grushcow

Contemporary Reflection

FOR THE FIRST TIME in the Torah, with the completion of the Mishkan, the presence of God has a regular home, an earthly residence. And this home is not only for God; it is a “Tent of Meeting” for Israel as well. When God’s presence enters the Mishkan, it is clear that Israel’s work in building this sacred structure has been blessed. For the first time, by learning from past mistakes, Israel—all Israel—has a place to experience God.

In other words, the same Israelites who once sought to contain power and divinity within the idol of the Golden Calf (Exodus 32) now create the Mishkan (Exodus 35–40), which, while made of the same materials and by some of the very same processes, emphatically does not attempt to contain God. Having been given an explicit opportunity to fall again into the trap of deifying something material, having been handed the opportunity to make a cage for God, the people instead create the Mishkan and regard it only as a space, not as a stand-in or a container for God (Avivah Gottlieb Zornberg, The Particulars of Rapture, 2001, pp. 480–481, 330–333). Once this purpose is established, God’s presence dwells in the Mishkan, in their midst; the process of t’shuva (repentance) is complete.

Given the prohibitions against making images of God, the disaster of the Golden Calf, and the lesson the Israelites have begun to learn that God cannot be represented physically, we might expect the presence of God in the Mishkan to be without form altogether, invisible. Wouldn’t God’s complete lack of form at this moment make perfect sense in light of the Israelites’ newfound awareness and understanding?

However, God’s presence is manifested in the Mishkan in not one but two different ways: as a cloud by day and fire by night. Why does God come to the Israelites (and to us, as we read) in these very common forms? Wouldn’t the lesson of the Golden Calf be more clearly enforced if now God’s presence remained untainted by any physical form?

Perhaps these manifestations exist precisely in order to teach the Israelites that an experience of God can exist within the visual and tangible realms. That is, the problem with worshipping the Golden Calf was not that the calf could be seen; it was that the Golden Calf was worshipped as if it contained God entirely, as if God was nowhere else. Here, the Israelites learn that an encounter with God does not have to be so abstract, so removed from their sensory experience that they are left without any means of comprehending or describing it. In other words, the divine experience can include things seen. However, it must also transform our grasp of the seen object, our understanding of God, and, by extension, the act of seeing and the seer.

We look for visual evidence of God’s presence in the world around us.

Remember the narrative of the Burning Bush that was on fire but not consumed (3:1–4). This phenomenon is contrary to our understanding of what happens when a bush catches on fire. For Moses, the very existence of the Burning Bush not consumed awakens the possibility that there is something divine in that fire. God could just have easily come to Moses without a Burning Bush; however, this is what enables Moses to find evidence of God’s presence. Before God even addresses Moses, he sees the fire acting differently and realizes that there is more to the world than what he knows.

Later, we read about two pillars that accompany the Israelites as they leave Egypt: a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night (13:20–22). The cloud is a signpost and the fire an illuminated guide in the darkness; both show Israel the path to follow on their journey through the wilderness. But note that neither object acts naturally. The cloud does not blanket and obscure, as we expect clouds to do; instead, it is contained in a pillar and provides direction for the Israelites. Similarly, the fire does not spread and destroy whatever is in its path, as we expect fire to do; like the cloud, the fire is contained, a giant torch. In both of these manifestations, the Israelites began to see, just as Moses saw in the bush, the possibility of natural things, things of-this-earth, being bent and shaped in unnatural, divine ways.

P'KUDEI

Focusing on our parashah (40:34–38), God's presence now dwells in the completed Mishkan, not as something invisible to Israel, but as something very familiar. Just as before, God's presence is manifested as a cloud by day and fire by night. Here, too, the familiar acts in an unusual way. The cloud remains in the Mishkan; it does not drift or dissipate. Even more remarkably, the fire burns night after night and does not consume anything; each morning, the Mishkan remains intact (Zornberg, p. 492). These manifestations—these miracles—allow Israel to find and perceive God's presence but still remain aware that their perceptions cannot begin to encompass the totality of that presence.

Had God dwelt invisibly in the Mishkan, had the Israelites never seen God's presence there, they might have assumed that seeking visual encounters with God is a form of idolatry. By appearing “in the view of all the house of Israel” (40:38), God teaches that the problem with worshipping idols is not the visual experience itself; the problem occurs when the act merely confirms our preconceptions about God (Zornberg, p. 482). The Israelites see God's presence in natural, familiar forms that then transcend and undermine those forms. This seeing, and this dissonance, tests their understanding of the world and leads to a more complex relationship with God.

So it is for us: We need not be wary of looking for visual evidence of God's presence in the world around us. Seeking God's presence with our eyes is not idolatrous; it is only idolatry when we “know” in advance what we will see, when our expectations restrain us. Unfortunately, we may have been so afraid of making idols that we have limited ourselves to divine experiences that are abstract and often detached, expecting ourselves to develop a relationship with God without using our eyes. What would happen if we started looking for God's presence in fire and clouds once more? How much do our relationships with God stand to gain from our actually seeing what may have been there all along? At the very least, we will benefit from the search alone, from our looking day and night. And at best, it is possible that if we look, we will see. And then, we will never see the same way again, for we ourselves will have changed.

—Noa Kushner

.
Voices
.

from Bezalel

Amy Blank

Exodus 38:22

It was almost a disaster.

Moses knew only my skill,
 my fingers fashioned by God.
 The great dreamer placed his dream into my hands—
 the given Word that should become the given form.

True, my fingers tingle
 on fine grain of wood, cool metals and thin-spun thread—
 but Moses knew only the artisan.
 I was silent before his fervor, silent before the glowing pile of copper,
 gold and silver from the mines;
 sweet-scented wood freshly cut from forests;
 the palette of scarlet, blue and purple threads;
 linens—woven and embroidered,
 wool and goatskins newly dressed,
 even porpoise hides bright from the sea.
 Was craftsman ever so endowed?

I heard his words:
 “Create,” he said, “the Tent of Meeting, House of God.” Words of command.
 Moses forgot I was an artist sudden in perception, proud in fulfillment.

 Even from Moses,
 even from him
 I would not take dictation.
 Overwhelmed by the riches (legacy of Egypt) and all the detail of the master-plan
 I stood there speechless.
 And it seemed that in the hollow of my hand
 I held the image of a simple cup clay-rounded to the palm—a cup to drink from;
 And I dreamed a perfect pitcher.

Moses, the artist of the Word, had instant intuition—
 “Then teach,” he cried.
 “Summon the artisans, make live to them the Word and let their fingers drag the dream into reality.”

So I did.
 I need not wallow in the gold, nor be entangled in the rainbow web nor fall prey to jewels.
 Each day brought quiet after-glow of sunsets and in my palm the perfect cup is fashioned, and in my hand,
 I hold the perfect pitcher.

Glory to God! The Tent is done.

P'KUDEI

At Blue Dawn IX

Kadya Molodowsky (transl. Kathryn Hellerstein)

Exodus 39:1

By the well they're sitting, spinning,
Seven women, seven women,
Ten threads, white on white, they're spinning,
Whispering the story, never-ending.

Says the first:

White goats are what I raise and keep
For rocking children fast asleep.

Says the second:

I plant the trees and sow the flowers
For children in the coming hours.

Says the third:

I sharpen arrows and bend bows
For amusement and repose.

Says the fourth:

I make chains, link part to part
For the binding of young hearts.

The fifth says nothing:

Red as sparks, the thread she pulls
And dips into the wells and cools.

Says the sixth:

I determine the weight
And measure
To measure fortune and weigh treasure.

Says the last:

This thread of mine
Is white, short-spun—
And with this thread, the story's done!

from In Place of Belief

Grace Schulman

Exodus 40:3–5

Tradition threatens. Far off, I heard bells, those pebbly ones that top scrolls in the ark.
Up ahead, gargoyles with toothy snarls glared from a synagogue on Central Park.

I'd read the place grew from a wooden house.
When razed, its holy innards were sent on to other temples: lamps, goblets for wine, pointers, and floorboards that soak up prayers.

Once, turning thirteen, called to the ark,
I touched a scroll whose black letters blurred like scuff marks on sand the sea had washed.
I listened for God's bass and heard instead chatter, a squeaky platform. Shuddering, how could I even mumble sacred songs.

Only now, through doors of a massive building whose ark is curtained shut, silver bells ring.

At the Tent of Meeting

Sherry Blumberg

Exodus 40:33–34

Finally, after long work, physical and mental,
I come to the opening of the tent.
I know, God—but do You know—what this work means?

You have always been in my thoughts always in my mind and even sometimes in my aching back as I worked and struggled on Your behalf.

Let the opening of the tent, encourage the opening of the text and let me, Your humble daughter, enter and not hold back.

Psalm 32: A Song of Endings and Beginnings

Debbie Perlman

Exodus 40:33–38

Let us sing of our completions, smooth, round,
Silvered voices to praise Your Name.

Every season holds starts and stops,
Years of trees and spirits and souls,
Days ripe with harmony and turning,
Circled, cycled, to order our lives.

Inside each completion,
We hear Your creation;
Inside our creations,
We resound with Your voice.

Let us mold a new shape for our completions,
Fluid and longing, subtle limbs
That lead us onward to praise Your Name.

Every season casts away its jagged edges.
Rubs away the torn moments
To rejoice in the realignment
Of old ways made straight.

Inside each refitting,
We renew again Your creation,
Pulling it taut against us,
A firm bound shield of Your affection.

Let us sing of our completions.
Your hand hovers, blesses,
Bids us move to new beginnings.
Your hand moves us forward,
Toward unimagined completions.

וַיּוֹקְרָא ✦ Vayikra

LEVITICUS

LEVITICUS AIMS TO shape the Israelites into a holy people and to safeguard the purity that it considers essential for contact with the holy. The Hebrew name, Vayikra (“and [God] called”), refers to God’s summoning Moses and giving him the instructions that constitute most of the book. The English name “Leviticus” refers to Levi, a son of Leah and Jacob and the ancestor of the priests.

Leviticus reflects the perception that God’s created world is fundamentally harmonious, good, and orderly (as in Genesis 1). To preserve God’s orderly world, where everything has an assigned place, Leviticus specifies what must be done whenever boundaries are wrongfully crossed, be they boundaries of the body, time, or space—such as between sacred and non-sacred, or between life and death. In this book’s worldview, anyone who breaks God’s ordained harmony can—and must—repair it.

Rituals, including sacrifices, serve to cancel or neutralize damage done to the created order and thereby restore the equilibrium.

In Leviticus, a person’s body, the sanctuary, and the community each constitute a microcosm of the universe in its sacred aspect.

This book shows how women contribute to Israel’s quest for a holy life.

Each reflects and has an impact upon the larger, integrated whole. Consequently, holiness and purity are relevant to all aspects of Israelite life; they apply not merely to the sanctuary, but also to the body and the home. Therefore, the book legislates laws about food (Leviticus 11), sexual relations (Leviticus 18 and 20), and ethics (Leviticus 19), in addition to providing extensive instructions about sacrificial offerings (Leviticus 1–7). Although the priests have a unique role, all Israelites must be holy, for God is holy (see at 19:2).

Contemporary scholars ascribe Leviticus to priestly circles also responsible for other portions of the Torah (such as Genesis 1, the Tabernacle accounts in Exodus 25–40, and most of Numbers). Such scholars often differentiate between two priestly writings: the Priestly collection (Leviticus 1–16) that they call “P,” and the Holiness Code (Leviticus 17–26) that they call “H,” with Leviticus 27 as an appendix. While P emphasizes the unique privileges and responsibilities of the priests (defined as Aaron and his sons), H widens the notion of holiness to apply to all Israelites. For P, the priests (kohanim) and the Tabernacle are the exclusive intermediaries (and guardians) with regard to God’s holiness; H, however, focuses on the people themselves as the vehicle for God’s holiness.

Although Leviticus mentions only one woman by name (the otherwise unknown Sheliomith; see at 24:11), many of its teachings clearly apply to women as members of the Israelite community. Like the men, women are bound by the book’s various laws and must refrain from actions that may contaminate God’s sanctuary or the community. In addition, Leviticus includes three types of laws uniquely relevant to women:

1. Regulations about the processes by which women regain access to the sanctuary after childbirth and menstruation. These conditions, like other conditions that pertain to the nexus between life and death (such as seminal emission for men), require ritual purification before normal life patterns may be resumed (see at Leviticus 12 and 15).

2. Laws about sexual relations. Regulations about prohibited sexual relationships demarcate for an Israelite male those women whose sexuality belongs to another man and are therefore forbidden to him; they also identify kinship structures that help locate women in the family constellation (see at Leviticus 18 and 20). Laws like these indicate that typically a woman’s sexuality is only partly under her control. For example, as Judith Wegner notes, “an unmarried girl’s biological function belongs legally to her father.” According to Wegner, this does not mean a man could do with his daughter as he pleased. Rather, “the Torah certainly expects a father to protect his daughter’s chastity until she reaches puberty and is married off” (“Leviticus,” 1992, p. 45; but see Acharei Mot, Another View, p. 694, as well as at 18:10–17 and 20:17).
3. Laws specifically concerning women in priestly families. These include regulations as to whom a priest may marry (see at Leviticus 21), as well as when women may partake of the special holy portions designated for the priests.

Through all of these regulations, Leviticus shows, even when not addressing women, how women contribute to Israel’s quest for a holy life.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

וַיִּקְרָא ◆ Vayikra

LEVITICUS 1:1–5:26

A Call to Approach God

PARASHAT VAYIKRA (“and [God] called”) introduces one of the most challenging texts for contemporary readers. This portion begins the instructions on how to approach God by means of sacrificial offerings. Animal sacrifices are foreign to most modern readers and offensive to many. They were, however, integral to most recorded worship practices in the ancient Near Eastern and Mediterranean regions. Sacrifice continued well into the Common Era as the major way to approach the gods and to thank or appease them. Provisions for animal sacrifice are also included in the Koran, the sacred text of Islam.

Scholars of religion, attempting to understand the practice of animal sacrifice in the ancient world, suggest a number of possible explanations for why the practice endured. The rationale most frequently expressed in extra-biblical sources is that gods need to be fed as well as propitiated. Furthermore, life and fertility are gifts from the gods—gifts for which humans must show appreciation by offering something precious in return. In agricultural societies, the intimate connection between livestock and persons fostered an understanding that certain domestic animals could substitute for a human life. While these suggested explanations pertain to explicit reasons, some scholars link the pervasiveness of sacrifices in antiquity with a community’s unacknowledged desire to reduce violence. Ritual slaughtering of animals as opposed to random killings, the explanation goes, would channel people’s aggression into a socially constructive function and away from other forms of violence.

Israelite religion officially rejected an older idea that God requires sustenance like human beings. Nevertheless, it kept the practice of offering sacrifices as a way of serving God. The

The legislation in this parashah applies equally to Israelite women and men.

Hebrew word usually translated as “sacrifice,” korban, implies coming close to God (the root k-r-b that forms korban also means “to come near”) and is better translated as “near-offering.” One underlying rationale for many biblical sacrifices is to express gratitude for one’s good fortune; another rationale is that it is a means of returning the best to God—much like the payment of rent to a venerable landowner. In addition, certain sacrifices are aimed at helping people deal with the guilt of wrongdoing and with the impurity of sin, so that Israel would be on good terms with their Deity.

Sociologically speaking, sacrificial rites in antiquity served to bind community by providing a common meal that made scarce and costly meat available to many. Certain sacrifices functioned like a neighborhood barbecue celebrating a modern holiday: an opportunity to socialize and to eat well. Leviticus, however, seems to sanction killing an animal and eating its meat only as part of a sacrificial offering.

Although sacrifices form the major focus of this parashah, the concluding section expresses a deep concern with social and economic justice (see 5:20–26). Defrauding another person constitutes a sin against God; yet one must make amends to the injured party before offering a sacrifice to God.

The legislation in this parashah applies equally to Israelite women and men. Its terminology is pointedly gender inclusive, implying that women are expected to bring offerings. A later passage, Leviticus 12:6–8, explicitly addresses a situation in which a woman must bring two of the sacrifices mentioned in this parashah. Other biblical texts also describe women's participation in sanctuary-centered activities. In I Samuel 1, Elkanah's wives—Hannah and Peninnah—regularly visit the sanctuary with him, as do his daughters. Moreover, he and Hannah present and slaughter the offering that she has brought there, as payment for a vow. Many scholars hold that women's religious activities were even more extensive than can be garnered from these texts (see Another View, p. 587; "Women in Ancient Israel—An Overview," p. xli). Nevertheless, Leviticus authorizes only men from the family of Aaron to serve as priests in the sanctuary (see in the next parashah at 6:2).

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

Outline—

I. PROCEDURES FOR THREE TYPES OF BASIC OFFERINGS (1:1–3:17)

- A. Burnt offering—olah (1:1–17)
- B. Meal offering—minchah (2:1–16)
- C. Well-being offering—sh'lamim (3:1–17)

II. PROCEDURES FOR OFFERINGS TO RESTORE ORDER (4:1–5:26)

- A. Purgation offering—chatat (4:1–5:13)
 - 1. Introduction (4:1–2)
 - 2. When the priest incurs guilt (4:3–12)
 - 3. When the congregation incurs guilt (4:13–21)
 - 4. When a leader incurs guilt (4:22–26)
 - 5. When anyone else incurs guilt (4:27–35)
 - 6. Specific cases that require offerings (5:1–13)
- B. Reparation offering—asham (5:14–26)

1:1

יְהוָה called to Moses and spoke to him from the Tent of Meeting, saying:

²Speak to the Israelite people, and say to them:

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים וְיַדְבֵּר יְהוָה אֲלֵיכֶם מִן־אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד לְאֹמֶר: 2 כֹּהֵן אֲלֹהִים יְשָׁרָאֵל וְאָמְרָתָם אֲלֹהִים

Procedures for Three Basic Offerings (1:1–3:17)

The first unit of Leviticus functions as an overview and describes the “what” and “how” of the most common sacrifices that Israelites must bring. The emphasis falls on the types of offerings and the procedures for conducting the sacrifices, rather than on the occasions calling for sacrifices.

This unit reads like an instruction manual, which it may have been. But note that these instructions are to be disclosed to all Israel, whereas in other cultures priests typically guard the knowledge about their professional rites of worship. Although Leviticus preserves the priests’ privileged monopoly regarding the service at the altar and its sacrifices, these instructions demystify the priests’ role by making knowledge about their activities known to every Israelite.

The anthropologist Mary Douglas observes that the arrangement of the offerings on the altar recreates a movement from the outside (of the animal’s body) to the center and toward greater holiness. A similar journey takes place as a person enters the Tabernacle, or as Moses ascends Mount Sinai (Leviticus as Literature, 1999, ch. 4). Douglas also notes the relationship between what is offered on the altar and what a person may eat (Leviticus 11):

The meat that one may offer God is the same as that which one may eat. The parallels make the human body an analogue to the Tabernacle: a holy place designated for serving God.

Sacrifice takes place at the altar located at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting. The procedure for most types of sacrifices is similar: First, someone brings a sacrificial offering either on their own behalf or on behalf of their household (some or all of whom may be present); that person presents the sacrificial offering to a priest. When the offering is an animal, the person lays a hand on it. Next, the animal is slaughtered, possibly by the person who provides the offering. (Most likely over time, the priests as experts assumed the task of slaughtering on the offerer’s behalf.) The priest collects the animal’s blood and dashes it on the four corners of the altar—apparently as a purifying substance. Afterward, the animal is skinned and sectioned (probably by the priest and his assistants), and its entrails and skin are washed. Finally, the priest prepares the fire and then lays down the appropriate pieces of the animal on the altar for the sacrifice. Burnt offerings are burned completely, while other offerings provide meat for the priests or the community as a whole. Eating the appropriate portions of the offering constitutes the final step of the ritual.

- Religious activities carried out only by women were part of Israelite household life.

ANOTHER VIEW ► 587

- The priests become feminized men—cooking and cleaning in God’s holy dwelling.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 589

- We realize our full potential through our bonds to the community of Israel.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 587

- But how to make one’s daily life maintain / a balance between plenitude and pain . . . ?

VOICES ► 591

When any of you presents an offering of cattle to יהוה: You shall choose your offering from the herd or from the flock.

אֶת־קָרְבָּנִים קָרְבָּן לִיהְוֹה מִן־הַבָּקָר וּמִן־הַצָּאן תִּקְרִיבְךָ אַתָּה קָרְבָּנֶם:

BURNT OFFERING—olah (1:1–17)

The Hebrew name of this offering, olah, comes from the root e-l-h, meaning “to go up,” and expresses the idea that the entire offering “goes up” to God as smoke, the substance into which the animal has been transformed by fire. The burnt offering is unique because all of it must be burned, except for the skin. The English term “holocaust” originally referred to this specific sacrifice. The text makes no mention of the purpose of the ritual. The idea seems to be that this gift of life belongs completely to God—who gives life. It may express a recognition that a part of what one has received from God must return completely to God. God demands of Abraham a burnt offering, namely, Isaac (Genesis 22). Leviticus 23 is one of several passages that describe occasions that require a burnt offering.

The fact that the burnt offering usually appears first in a series of sacrifices suggests that its purpose may be to open up communication with the Divine; if so, then that goal would be accomplished by manifesting generosity—giving part of one’s wealth to God (David Stein, personal communication).

1. יהוה called to Moses. This opening of Leviticus follows the conclusion of the book of Exodus (40:38), which describes the completion of the Tabernacle. Now that God’s abode is complete, Leviticus provides instructions for its proper use. The only other place in the Torah where God “calls,” rather than speaks, to Moses is when summoning him to the top of Mount Sinai (Exodus 24:16).

from the Tent of Meeting. The portable Tent, which will accompany the Israelites through the wilderness, symbolically replaces Mount Sinai as the source from which divine messages come.

2. Speak to the Israelite people. Leviticus begins with an address that is intended for the people as a whole, not only for an elite group of priests. In so doing, the book establishes the principle that priestly activities are open to scrutiny by the people as a whole. Just as this “manual” for priestly activities is to be taught to all Israel, so the legal precepts of the Torah are to be taught to all the Israelites (for example, Exodus 21:1).

When any of you. The Hebrew has “when an adam from among you.” Because the word adam refers to a human being in a generic sense (see at Genesis 1:26; 5:2), the language of this verse makes clear that the laws apply to both women and men. The subsequent verbs and pronouns appear in a masculine form only for the sake of agreement with adam as a grammatically masculine noun. (Hebrew has no neutral “it”; all verbs take a masculine or feminine form that matches the grammatical gender of the subject; in this case, as in many others, the noun’s grammatical gender has nothing to do with social gender. For example, “a table” is grammatically masculine and “a door” is feminine.) presents an offering. English has no good way of reproducing the important wordplay embedded in this phrase. The two Hebrew words translated as “presents” and “offering” (yakriv... korban) are derived from the same root, k-r-b, meaning “to come near.” Thus, the language of sacrifice carries a sense of coming close to the Divine, describing a safe way to interact with the supreme power. The precautions taken by ancient worshippers and priests (such as approaching only in specified ways and times) are analogous to those taken by modern technicians when handling radioactive material: potent energy that can heal and kill must be approached with maximum attention to protective procedures.

³If your offering is a burnt offering from the herd, you shall make your offering a male without blemish. You shall bring it to the entrance of the Tent of Meeting, for acceptance in your behalf before יהוה. ⁴You shall lay a hand upon the head of the burnt offering, that it may be acceptable in your behalf, in expiation for you. ⁵The bull shall be slaughtered before יהוה; and Aaron's sons, the priests, shall offer the blood, dashing the blood against all sides of the altar which is at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting. ⁶The burnt offering shall be flayed and cut up into sections. ⁷The sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire on the altar and lay out wood upon the fire; ⁸and Aaron's sons, the priests, shall lay out the sections, with the head and the suet, on the wood that is on the fire upon the altar. ⁹Its entrails and legs shall be washed with water, and the priest shall turn the whole into smoke on the altar as a burnt offering, an offering by fire of pleasing odor to יהוה.

³ אִם־עַלְהָ קָרְבָּנוֹ מִן־הַבָּקָר זֶכֶר תְּמִימִים יִקְרִיבָנוּ אֶל־פֵתַח אֲחֶל מוֹעֵד יִקְרִיב אֶת־זֶה רְצָנוֹ לִפְנֵי יְהוָה: ⁴ וְסֶמֶךְ יָדוֹ עַל רַאשׁ הַעַלְהָ וְנֶרֶץ הַלְּוֹ לְכַפֵּר עַל־לְוֹ: ⁵ וְשִׁתְּטַח אֶת־בָּנָיו הַבָּקָר לִפְנֵי יְהוָה וְהִקְרִיב בָּנָיו אֶחָרֶן הַכְהָנִים אֶת־הַדָּם וְוַיַּרְאֻ אֶת־הַדָּם עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ סְבִיב אֲשֶׁר־פֵתַח אֲחֶל מוֹעֵד: ⁶ וְהַפְּשִׁיט אֶת־הַעַלְהָ וְנִתְחַדֵּשׁ אֵת הַנִּתְחִידָה: ⁷ וְנִתְנַתָּנוּ בָנָיו אֶחָרֶן הַכְהָן אַשְׁר עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ וְעַרְכּוּ עַצְּים עַל־הָאָשׁ: ⁸ וְעַרְכּוּ בָנָיו אֶחָרֶן הַכְהָנִים אֶת־הַנִּתְחִידָה וְאֶת־הַפְּדָר עַל־הַעֲצִים אֲשֶׁר עַל־הָאָשׁ אֲשֶׁר עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ: ⁹ וְקָרְבּוּ וְכָרְעִיו יְרַחֵץ בְּפָמִים וְהִקְלִיר הַכְהָן אֶת־הַכְּלִיל הַמִּזְבֵּחַ עַל־אֲשֶׁר רִיחַ נִיחֹוח לִיהוָה:

3. If your offering is . . . from the herd. Different types of animals can be used as a burnt offering: cattle, sheep, or goats (1:10–13), or birds (1:14–17). The procedure is essentially the same for each one.

your. In Hebrew, a masculine third-person pronoun refers back to adam (see at v. 2). In this passage, the present translation conveys the gender-inclusive sense by rendering such pronouns in the second person.

male without blemish. It is not clear what the animal's sex symbolizes. Nicole Ruane, who examines the sacrificial system with regard to the sex of its victims, concludes that the highest level of holiness is symbolized in Leviticus by perfect masculinity. Femininity can express various gradations away from the ideal (Sacrifice, Purity and Gender in Priestly Law, forthcoming).

5. The bull shall be slaughtered. The Torah does not specify who slaughters the animal—the one who has brought the offering (hence either a woman or a man) or the priest. As Mayer Gruber points out, ancient Near Eastern texts and pictures portray sacrificial slaughter by women as well as by men ("Women in the Cult," 1992, n. 37). The story of the woman in En-dor, who slaughters a stall-fed calf in her home to feed King Saul, suggests that it was considered unremarkable that a woman slaughtered large animals (I Samuel 28:24).

blood. Blood represents life. Thus, Leviticus 17:11 states: "For the life of the flesh is in the blood. . . . It is the blood, as life, that effects expiation." In Leviticus, the blood of ritually slaughtered animals functions as the element that erases impurities, much like a disinfectant is used in the modern world to remove unwelcome bacteria.

9. In contrast to other sacrifices, the burnt offering is to burn completely. This feature may express a belief that all that one owns belongs to God, and thus a part of one's belongings must return completely to God.

turn the whole into smoke. The transformation of substance into smoke that rises into heaven seems also to convey the worshipper's communica-

¹⁰If your offering for a burnt offering is from the flock, of sheep or of goats, you shall make your offering a male without blemish. ¹¹It shall be slaughtered before יהוה on the north side of the altar, and Aaron's sons, the priests, shall dash its blood against all sides of the altar. ¹²When it has been cut up into sections, the priest shall lay them out, with the head and the suet, on the wood that is on the fire upon the altar. ¹³The entrails and the legs shall be washed with water; the priest shall offer up and turn the whole into smoke on the altar. It is a burnt offering, an offering by fire, of pleasing odor to יהוה.

¹⁴If your offering to יהוה is a burnt offering of birds, you shall choose your offering from turtle-doves or pigeons. ¹⁵The priest shall bring it to the altar, pinch off its head, and turn it into smoke on the altar; and its blood shall be drained out against the side of the altar. ¹⁶He shall remove its crop with its contents, and cast it into the place of the ashes, at the east side of the altar. ¹⁷The priest shall tear it open by its wings, without severing it, and turn it into smoke on the altar, upon the wood that is on the fire. It is a burnt offering, an offering by fire, of pleasing odor to יהוה.

2 When a person presents an offering of meal to יהוה: The offering shall be of choice flour; the offerer shall pour oil upon it, lay frankincense on tion to an invisible God. This ephemeral substance visibly travels heavenward, the space often associated with God's abode.

10. If...from the flock. See at 1:3.

14. birds. Offering a bird provides an alternative to livestock, no doubt to make the ritual more affordable to persons with meager means (compare 12:8).

17. pleasing odor to יהוה. This refrain concludes the descriptions of other offerings as well. It signals the belief that the smoke reaches God, who welcomes this offering. This anthropomorphism (representation of God as possessing human charac-

¹⁰ וְאַסִּימָנִי־הַצָּאן קָרְבָּנוּ מִן־הַכְּשָׁבִים אֹזֶן
מִן־הַעֲזֹום לְעֵלָה זָכָר תְּמִימָם יִקְרִיבָנוּ:
¹¹ וּשְׂתַטְתַּט אֹתָו עַל יְרֵךְ הַמְזֻבָּח צְפָנָה
לִפְנֵי יְהוָה וּזְרָקוּ בְּנֵי אַהֲרֹן הַכְּהֻנִּים
אֶת־דְּמוֹעַת־הַמְזֻבָּח סְקִיבָּה: ¹² וּנְתַח אֹתָו
לִנְתְּחִיו וְאֶת־רְאֵשׁוֹ וְאֶת־פְּדוּרָו וְעַרְבָּה הַפְּהָנוֹן
אֶתְּתָם עַל־הַעֲצִים אֲשֶׁר עַל־הָאָש אֲשֶׁר
עַל־הַמְזֻבָּח: ¹³ וְהַקָּרֵב וְהַפְּרִיעִים יִרְחַץ
בְּפִים וְהַקָּרֵב הַפְּהָנוֹן אֶת־הַכֶּל וְהַקְּטִיר
הַמְזֻבָּחָה עַלְּהָה הַזָּהָר אֲשֶׁר רִיחַ נִיחַח
לִיהְוָה: פ
¹⁴ וְאֶם מִן־הַעֲזֹף עַלְּהָה קָרְבָּנוּ לִיהְוָה
וְהַקָּרֵב מִן־הַתְּרוּםִים אֹזֶן מִן־בְּנֵי הַיּוֹנָה
אֶת־קָרְבָּנוּ: ¹⁵ וְהַקָּרֵבוּ הַפְּהָנוֹן אֶל־הַמְזֻבָּח
וּמְלָךְ אֶת־רְאֵשׁוֹ וְהַקְּטִיר הַמְזֻבָּחָה וּנְמַצָּה
דְּמוֹעַת־קִיר הַמְזֻבָּח: ¹⁶ וְהַסִּיר אֶת־מְרָאָתוֹ
בְּנַצְתָּה וְהַשְׁלִיךְ אֶתְּתָה אֶצְלָהָה קְרָמָה
אֶל־מָקוֹם הַדְּשָׁן: ¹⁷ וּשְׁלַע אֹתוֹ בְּכַנְפֵיו¹⁸
לֹא יִבְדִּיל וְהַקְּטִיר אֹתוֹ הַפְּהָנוֹן הַמְזֻבָּחָה
עַל־הַעֲצִים אֲשֶׁר עַל־הָאָש עַלְּהָה הַזָּהָר
אֲשֶׁר רִיחַ נִיחַח לִיהְוָה: ס

ב וּזְפַשׁ כִּי־תִּקְרֵב קָרְבָּן מִנְחָה לִיהְוָה
סָלַת יְהִיָּה קָרְבָּנוּ וִיצְקָעַלְיָה שְׁמַן teristics) reflects a level of comfort with references to God's physicality despite the theoretical rejection of God's corporeal nature.

MEAL OFFERING—minchah (2:1–16)

This section contains two parts. The first passage (vv. 1–13) discusses wheat offerings that can be made throughout the year. The second part (vv. 14–16) concerns a special offering at the start of the wheat harvest. The word minchah means “gift” and expresses the idea that an offering is a gift to God (compare Genesis 32:14).

it,² and present it to Aaron's sons, the priests. The priest shall scoop out of it a handful of its choice flour and oil, as well as all of its frankincense; and this token portion he shall turn into smoke on the altar, as an offering by fire, of pleasing odor to יהוה.³ And the remainder of the meal offering shall be for Aaron and his sons, a most holy portion from יהוה's offerings by fire.

⁴When you present an offering of meal baked in the oven, [it shall be of] choice flour: unleavened cakes with oil mixed in, or unleavened wafers spread with oil.

⁵If your offering is a meal offering on a griddle, it shall be of choice flour with oil mixed in, unleavened. ⁶Break it into bits and pour oil on it; it is a meal offering.

⁷If your offering is a meal offering in a pan, it shall be made of choice flour in oil.

⁸When you present to יהוה a meal offering that is made in any of these ways, it shall be brought to the priest who shall take it up to the altar. ⁹The priest shall remove the token portion from the meal offering and turn it into smoke on the altar as an offering by fire, of pleasing odor to יהוה.¹⁰ And the remainder of the meal offering shall be for Aaron and his sons, a most holy portion from יהוה's offerings by fire.

i–13. This passage describes a type of offering that can accompany animal sacrifices or be an independent offering. The ingredients for this minchah (“meal offering”) are semolina (the choice sifted granules from ground wheat kernels), olive oil, and frankincense. The offerer can prepare it in one of three ways: griddle, pan, or oven. According to Leviticus 5:11, a poor person can substitute this offering for more costly offerings in certain situations. This section does not specify the purpose of the offering or prescribe words to recite.

i. person. Heb. nefesh; like the word adam (see at 1:2), it is an inclusive term for a human being.

3. the remainder... shall be for Aaron and his sons. Unlike the burnt offering that is completely consumed by fire, the minchah offering is shared by the priests and their families. Priests were not to own land and thus were unable to grow crops or keep livestock. Their allocations from the sacrifices thus constituted their livelihood. (On the distinction between a priest's sons and his daughters, see Tzav, Another View, p. 608, and at Leviticus 22:12–13.)

a most holy portion. Heb. kodesh kodashim, which applies here to the remainder of the offering for the priests' use. Elsewhere, it also designates the holiest part of the Tabernacle (kodesh hakodashim, the Holy of Holies; for example, Exodus 26:34) and later of the Temple. The language creates an analogy between sacred space and food offerings.

וְנَתַן עֲלֵיכָה לְבָנָה: ² וְהַבִּיאָה אֶל־בְּנֵי
אַהֲרֹן הַפְּנִים וְקָמַץ מִשְׁמָךְ מִלְאָה קָמַץ
מִסְלְתָה וּמִשְׁמָנָה עַל כָּל־לְבָנָתָה וְהַקְטִיר
הַפְּנִים אֶת־אֶזְבְּרָתָה הַמּוֹבֵחָה אֲשֶׁר רִיחָ
נִיחַח לְיהוָה: ³ וְהַנוֹּתֶרֶת מִן־הַמְנֻחָה
לְאַהֲרֹן וְלְבָנָיו קָדְשִׁים מִאֲשֶׁר יהוָה: ס

⁴ וְכִי תִקְרַב קָרְבָּן מִנְחָה מִאֲפָה תְּנוּר סְלָת
חַלּוֹת מִצְטָה בְּלֹולָת בְּשָׂמָן וּרְקִיעִי מִצְטָה
מִשְׁחִים בְּשָׂמָן: ס

⁵ וְאִם־מִנְחָה עַל־הַמְחַבֵּת קָרְבָּנָה סְלָת
בְּלֹולָה בְּשָׂמָן מִצְחָה תְּהִיה: ⁶ פְּתֻוחָת
אַתָּה פְּתִים וַיַּעֲקֹת עַלְיכָה שָׂמָן מִנְחָה
הַוָּא: ס

⁷ וְאִם־מִנְחָה מִרְחַשָּׁת קָרְבָּנָה סְלָת בְּשָׂמָן
תַּעֲשֵׂה:

⁸ וְהַבָּאת אֶת־הַמְנֻחָה אֲשֶׁר יַעֲשֶׂה מִאָלָה
לְיהוָה וְהַקְרִיב אֶל־הַפְּנִים וְהַגִּישֶׁה אֶל־
הַמּוֹבֵחָה: ⁹ וְהַלִּים הַפְּנִים מִן־הַמְנֻחָה אֶת־
אֶזְבְּרָתָה וְהַקְטִיר הַמּוֹבֵחָה אֲשֶׁר רִיחָ נִיחַח
לְיהוָה: ¹⁰ וְהַנוֹּתֶרֶת מִן־הַמְנֻחָה לְאַהֲרֹן
וְלְבָנָיו קָדְשִׁים מִאֲשֶׁר יהוָה:

¹¹No meal offering that you offer to the Lord shall be made with leaven, for no leaven or honey may be turned into smoke as an offering by fire to the Lord.
¹²You may bring them to the Lord as an offering of choice products; but they shall not be offered up on the altar for a pleasing odor.¹³You shall season your every offering of meal with salt; you shall not omit from your meal offering the salt of your covenant with God; with all your offerings you must offer salt.

¹⁴If you bring a meal offering of first fruits to the Lord, you shall bring new ears parched with fire, grits of the fresh grain, as your meal offering of first fruits.¹⁵You shall add oil to it and lay frankincense on it; it is a meal offering.¹⁶And the priest shall turn a token portion of it into smoke: some of the grits and oil, with all of the frankincense, as an offering by fire to the Lord.

3 If your offering is a sacrifice of well-being—
 If you offer of the herd, whether a male or a fe-

14–16. The second type of minchah refers to ripe grain from the new crop that is roasted and then made into grits. The priest offers a token portion of the roasted grain mixture to God. This offering may represent the produce of the earth returned, in gratitude, to the God responsible for the fertility of the land.

WELL-BEING OFFERING—sh'lamim (3:1–17)

The offering of sh'lamim, translated here as “sacrifice of well-being,” resembles the burnt offering but with one main difference: only a portion of it “turns into smoke” (see below for details). The largest part of the sacrifice is distributed between priests and offerers, thus providing food for the Israelites. This passage does not mention a specific occasion, but subsequent instructions link the sh'lamim with celebrations and show that often this offering was to be brought after a burnt offering. It constitutes the basic form of sacrifice for feast days

¹¹כָל־הַמִּנְחָה אֲשֶׁר תְּקַרֵּיבוּ לְיהֹהָה לֹא־תַעֲשֶׂה חִמְצָן כִּי כָל־שָׂאָר וְכָל־דָבָשׁ לֹא־תַקְטִירוּ מִפְנֵנו אֲשֶׁר לְיהֹהָה: ¹²קְרֻבָּנוּ רְאִשְׁית תְּקַרֵּיבוּ אֶתְם לְיהֹהָה וְאֶל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ לֹא־יַעֲלִוּ לִרְיחָה נִיחָחָה: ¹³וְכָל־קְרֻבָּן מִנְחָתָה בְּמַלְחָה תִּמְלָחָה וְלֹא תְשִׁבְתָּה מַלְחָה בְּרִית־אֱלֹהִיךְ מַעַל מִנְחָתָךְ עַל כָּל־קְרֻבָּנְךָ תְּקַרֵּיבָה מַלְחָה: ¹⁴ס

¹⁴וְאִם־תְּקַרֵּיב מִנְחָת בְּכָורִים לְיהֹהָה אֲבָבָה קְלִי בְּאַשׁ גָּרְשָׁן בְּרֶמֶל תְּקַרֵּיב אֶת מִנְחָת בְּכָורִיךְ: ¹⁵וְנִתְתַּת עַלְיָה שְׁמַן וְשְׁמַתָּת עַלְיָה לְבָנָה מִנְחָה הוּא: ¹⁶וְהַקְטִיר הַכֹּהֵן אֶת־אַזְבְּרָתָה מִגְרָשָׁה וּמִשְׁמָנָה עַל כָּל־לִבְנָתָה אֲשֶׁר לְיהֹהָה: ¹⁷פ

ג וְאִם־זָבֵחַ שָׁלְמִים קְרֻבָּנוּ אֶם מִן־הַבָּקָר הַזֶּה מִקְרֵיב אִם־זָכָר אֶם

(Deuteronomy 12:11–12). This means that when Israelites brought sacrifices, some offerings were solely for God, as it were, and some to be eaten by community members.

This practice turns the eating of meat into a sacred act (17:1–7) and reflects the concern for taking life for human consumption; the sacrifice has nothing to do with atonement. As Jacob Milgrom observes, this ritual allowed the Israelites to acknowledge the miracles of their lives and express gratitude for them (Leviticus: A Book of Ritual and Ethics, 2004, p. 28).

i. your. See at 1:2.

well-being. Heb. sh'lamim, a word related to shalom or shalem, and which therefore means “wholeness,” “well-being,” or “peace.” Baruch Levine renders it as “a sacred gift of greeting,” an expression that enriches one’s awareness of the function of this offering.

of the herd. A variety of animals qualify for this sacrifice. (See at 1:3.)

male, you shall bring before יהוה one without blemish. ²You shall lay a hand upon the head of your offering and slaughter it at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting; and Aaron's sons, the priests, shall dash the blood against all sides of the altar. ³Then present from the sacrifice of well-being, as an offering by fire to יהוה, the fat that covers the entrails and all the fat that is about the entrails; ⁴the two kidneys and the fat that is on them, that is at the loins; and the protuberance on the liver, which you shall remove with the kidneys. ⁵Aaron's sons shall turn these into smoke on the altar, with the burnt offering which is upon the wood that is on the fire, as an offering by fire, of pleasing odor to יהוה.

⁶And if your offering for a sacrifice of well-being to יהוה is from the flock, whether a male or a female, you shall offer one without blemish. ⁷If you present a sheep as your offering, you shall bring it before יהוה ⁸and lay a hand upon the head of your offering. It shall be slaughtered before the Tent of Meeting, and Aaron's sons shall dash its blood against all sides of the altar. ⁹Then present, as an offering by fire to יהוה, the fat from the sacrifice of well-being: the whole broad tail, which you shall remove close to the backbone; the fat that covers the entrails and all the fat that is about the entrails; ¹⁰the two kidneys and the fat that is on them, that is at the loins; and the protuberance on the liver, which you shall remove with the kidneys. ¹¹The priest shall turn these into smoke on the altar as food, an offering by fire to יהוה.

¹²And if your offering is a goat, you shall bring it before יהוה ¹³and lay a hand upon its head. It a male or a female. It is not clear why either male or female animals may be used in this case.

bring. The Hebrew root is k-r-b, which also forms the words for both “sacrifice” and “nearness” (see at 1:2).

3-5. These verses describe the parts of the animal that are consumed in their entirety. The pro-

ונקבה תמים יקריבנו לפני יהוה: 2 ושם
ידן על־ראש קרבנו ושבתו פתח אهل
מועד וורקי בני אהרן הכהנים את־
העם על־המזבח סביב: 3 והקריב מזבח
השלמיםasha ליהוה את־החלב המכסה
את־הקרב ואת כל־החלב אשר על־
הקרב: 4 ואת שתי הכלויות ואת־החלב
אשר עלון אשר על־הכטלים ואת־
היתרת על־הכבד על־הכלויות יסירנה:
5 והקטירו אותו בני־אהרן המזבח על־
העלה אשר על־העצים אשר על־האש
אישיה ריח ניחח ליהוה: פ

6 ואמ־מן־הצאן קרבנו לזבח שלמים
לייהוה זכר או נקבה תמים יקריבנו:
7 אם־בשב הוא־מקריב את־קרבנו והקריב
אתו לפני יהוה: 8 ושם את־ידן על־ראש
קרבנו ושחת אותו לפני אهل מועד וורקי
בני אהרן את־דמו על־המזבח סביב:
9 והקריב מזבח השלמיםasha ליהוה
חלבו האליה תמיימה לעמת העצה
יסירנה ואת־החלב המכסה את־הקרב
וأت כל־החלב אשר על־הקרב: 10 ואת
שתי הכלויות ואת־החלב אשר עלון
אשר על־הכטלים ואת־היתרת על־הכבד
על־הכלויות יסירנה: 11 והקטירו הבهن
המזבח לחםasha ליהוה: פ

12 ואם עז קרבנו והקריב לפני יהוה:
13 ושם את־ידן על־ראשו ושחת אתו

cedures are similar to the burnt offering, except that only specified portions of the animal are placed on the altar to be burnt: certain fatty portions, including the fat that covers the entrails and the kidneys and is on the loins, as well as an appendage on the liver, and the two kidneys. The rest is divided between the priest and the one making the offering.

shall be slaughtered before the Tent of Meeting, and Aaron's sons shall dash its blood against all sides of the altar.¹⁴ Then present as your offering from it, as an offering by fire to יהוה, the fat that covers the entrails and all the fat that is about the entrails;¹⁵ the two kidneys and the fat that is on them, that is at the loins; and the protuberance on the liver, which you shall remove with the kidneys.¹⁶ The priest shall turn these into smoke on the altar as food, an offering by fire, of pleasing odor.

All fat is יהוה's.¹⁷ It is a law for all time throughout the ages, in all your settlements: you must not eat any fat or any blood.

4 spoke to Moses, saying: ² Speak to the Israelite people thus:

לֶפְנֵי אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד תַּזְרִקְנָו בְּנֵי אַהֲרֹן אֶת־צְדָמוֹ
עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ סְקִיבָּב: ¹⁴ וְהַקָּרֵב מִמֶּנּוּ קְרֻבָּנוֹ
אֲשֶׁר לִיהְוֹא אֶת־הַחֶלֶב הַמְכַסֵּה אֶת־
הַקָּרֵב וְאֶת בְּל־הַחֶלֶב אֲשֶׁר עַל־הַקָּרֵב:
¹⁵ וְאֶת שְׂתִּי הַבְּלִית וְאֶת־הַחֶלֶב אֲשֶׁר
עַל־הַן אֲשֶׁר עַל־הַבְּטָלִים וְאֶת־הַיְתָרָת עַל־
הַפְּגִיד עַל־הַפְּלִיטָה יִסְרָגָה: ¹⁶ וְהַקְטִירָם
הַפְּנֵן הַמִּזְבֵּחַ לְחַם אֲשֶׁר לִרְיָח נִיחַח
בְּל־חֶלֶב לִיהְוֹה: ¹⁷ חֲקַת עוֹלָם לְדָרְתֵיכֶם
בְּכָל מַוְשִׁבְתֵיכֶם בְּל־חֶלֶב וּבְל־קָם לְעַ
תָּאֵלָו: פ

ד וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לְאֹמֶר: ² דִּבֶּר
אֶל־בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל לְאֹמֶר

17. you must not eat any fat or any blood.
The prohibition against eating blood is explicitly linked elsewhere with the conviction that blood represents life (see at 1:5 and 17:11). However, it is not obvious why the fat is prohibited. Perhaps this is another way of offering the best to God, since fat is considered valuable in a number of passages (see, for example, the expression “the fat of the land” in Genesis 45:18).

Procedures for Offerings to Restore Order (4:1–5:26)

Leviticus 4 and 5 link two major types of offerings to offenses that undermine the balance of the created order. The book of Leviticus maintains that God has created a harmonious world and that persons must—and can—restore that harmony even when they have transgressed and thereby damaged such harmony. The earlier, conventional English terms for the two offerings in this unit are “sin offering” and “guilt offering” (based on the root meanings of the Hebrew names of these sacrifices; see below). But the more current terminology, which replaces “sin” with “purgation,” and “guilt” with “reparation,” better captures the function of these offerings: the purgation offering clears away the damaging substance; and the reparation offering reconstructs or restores the system to its normative, harmonious wholeness.

These offerings take place in a world in which the spiritual was perceived as integral to the physical—and thus directly affecting the physical. Israel’s neighbors (and no doubt many Israelites) believed in demons, a view that Leviticus rejects by ignoring it (see the lone, obscure mention of se’irim in 17:7).

Nonetheless, Leviticus regards (invisible) spiritual and moral transgressions as causes of physical (visible and invisible) harm that can be “managed” by proper rituals. At the most immediate level of priestly concern, the impurity of transgressions is considered capable of becoming airborne and contaminating the sanctuary. Thus, the purification offering aims to cleanse the sanctuary of such contamination, much like a disinfectant purges a hospital room from harmful bacteria.

When a person unwittingly incurs guilt in regard to any of יהוה's commandments about things not to be done, and does one of them—

³If it is the anointed priest who has incurred guilt, so that blame falls upon the people, he shall offer for the sin of which he is guilty a bull of the herd without blemish as a purgation offering to יהוה.⁴ He shall bring the bull to the entrance of the Tent of Meeting, before יהוה, and lay a hand upon the head of the bull. The bull shall be slaughtered before יהוה,⁵ and the anointed priest shall take some of the bull's blood and bring it into the Tent of Meeting.⁶ The priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle of the blood seven times before יהוה, in front of the curtain of the Shrine.⁷ The priest shall put some of the blood on the horns of the altar of aromatic incense, which is in the Tent of Meeting, before יהוה; and all the rest of the bull's

נֶפֶשׁ כִּי-תַחַטָּא בְּשֶׁגֶגֶל מִפְלֵל מִצְוֹת יְהוָה
אֲשֶׁר לֹא תַעֲשֵׂנָה וְעָשָׂה מִאָחֻת מִתְהָנָה :

³ אִם הַכֹּהן הַמְשִׁיחַ יְחִיטָא לְאַשְׁמַת הַעַם
וְהַקָּרֵב עַל חַטָּאתוֹ אֲשֶׁר חַטָּא פָּר בְּזַבְּכָר
תְּמִימָם לִיהוָה לְחַטָּאת :⁴ וְהַבִּיא אֶת-הַפָּר
אֶל-פָּתַח אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד לִפְנֵי יְהוָה וּסְמִךְ
אֶת-יְדוֹ עַל-רָאשׁ הַפָּר וְשִׁתֵּת אֶת-הַפָּר
לִפְנֵי יְהוָה :⁵ וְלֹקַח הַכֹּהן הַמְשִׁיחַ מִזְבֵּחַ
הַפָּר וְהַבִּיא אֹתוֹ אֶל-אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד :⁶ וְטַבֵּל
הַכֹּהן אֶת-אַצְבָּעָו בְּדָם וְהַהֵּן מִזְבְּחָת
שְׁבֻעָה פָּעִים לִפְנֵי יְהוָה אֶת-יְנִיפְרַת
הַקָּדֵשׁ :⁷ וְנֹתֵן הַכֹּהן מִזְבְּחָת מִזְבְּחָת
מִזְבְּחָה קָטְרָת הַסְּמִים לִפְנֵי יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר
בְּאֹהֶל מוֹעֵד וְאֶת כָּל-דָם הַפָּר יִשְׁפַּל

PURGATION OFFERING—chatat (4:1–5:13)

Introduction (4:1–2)

The name of this sacrifice, chatat, is derived from the same root as the word chet (sin); it means “that which cancels out sin.” The English term “purgation” (purification or decontamination) succinctly captures the ritual’s function. The analogy between the Tabernacle and the larger world—microcosm and macrocosm—means that such acts have even wider ramifications. In a symbolic sense, one is restoring order to the world as a whole.

The chatat follows upon any accidental—not deliberate—violation of certain ethical and ritual prohibitions, of things “not to be done” (4:2, 13, 22, 27). The person who brings the chatat then “shall be forgiven” (4:20, 26, 31, 35).

This offering takes different forms depending on the social status of the transgressor. The different steps indicate greater degrees of responsibility and culpability, with infractions by priests being subject to the most stringent procedures. The rules thus emphasize accountability rather than privilege.

2. person. Heb. nefesh, which indicates that the law applies equally to women and men (see at 1:2).

unwittingly incurs guilt. The concern is with inadvertent moral or physical violations.

When the Priest Incurs Guilt (4:3–12)

Impurity of the priest in charge of sacrificial rituals (see 6:15) puts everyone at the greatest risk because his impurity infects the sanctuary most directly. The procedure for this offering resembles that of the well-being offering, with one telling exception: the priest, who in other instances benefits from animal sacrifices (see Leviticus 3), is not permitted such gain in this case.

The priest’s purification ritual is more extensive than that of a layperson who transgresses (see below, vv. 27–31). In addition to offering a sacrifice, the priest must also purify the inner altar and other parts of the sanctuary, especially just in front of the Holy of Holies (see Exodus 25–26 for the arrangement of the Tabernacle and its furnishings).

5. the bull’s blood. See at 1:6.

blood he shall pour out at the base of the altar of burnt offering, which is at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting.⁸ He shall remove all the fat from the bull of purification offering: the fat that covers the entrails and all the fat that is about the entrails; ⁹ the two kidneys and the fat that is on them, that is at the loins; and the protuberance on the liver, which he shall remove with the kidneys—¹⁰ just as it is removed from the ox of the sacrifice of well-being. The priest shall turn them into smoke on the altar of burnt offering.¹¹ But the hide of the bull, and all its flesh, as well as its head and legs, its entrails and its dung—¹² all the rest of the bull—he shall carry to a pure place outside the camp, to the ash heap, and burn it up in a wood fire; it shall be burned on the ash heap.

¹³If it is the community leadership of Israel that has erred and the matter escapes the notice of the congregation, so that they do any of the things which by יהוה's commandments ought not to be done, and they realize guilt—¹⁴when the sin through which they incurred guilt becomes known, the congregation shall offer a bull of the herd as a purification offering, and bring it before the Tent of Meeting.¹⁵The elders of the community shall lay their hands upon the head of the bull before יהוה,

אל-יסוד מזבח הָעַלְהָ אֲשֶׁר-פִּתְחָ אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד: ⁸ וְאַתְּ-בֶּל-חִלְבָּ פָּר הַחֲטֹאת יְרִים מִמְּנָטוֹ אֲתִיד-הַחִלְבָּ הַמְּכֹסֶה עַל-הַקָּרְבָּן וְאַתְּ בֶּל-הַחִלְבָּ אֲשֶׁר עַל-הַקָּרְבָּן: ⁹ וְאַתְּ שְׂתִּי הַכְּלִיּוֹת וְאַתְּ-הַחִלְבָּ אֲשֶׁר עַל-יְהִינָּן אֲשֶׁר עַל-הַפְּסָלִים וְאַתְּ-הַיְתָרָת עַל-הַבְּבִדָּן עַל-הַפְּלִיוֹת יִסְרָאֵה: ¹⁰ כַּאֲשֶׁר יוּרַם מִשּׁוֹר זְבַח הַשְּׁלָמִים וְהַקְטִירָת הַפְּנִין עַל-מִזְבֵּחַ הָעַלְהָ: ¹¹ וְאַתְּ-עֹזֶר הַפְּרָר וְאַתְּ-בֶּל-בָּשָׂר עַל-אֶרְאָשׁוֹ וְעַל-כְּרָעִיו וְקָרְבוֹ וּפְרָשָׂו:

¹² וְהַזְׁעִיא אֲתִיד-בֶּל-הַפְּרָר אֶל-מִחוֹז לְמִחְנָה אֶל-מִקּוֹם טֹהוֹל אֶל-שְׁפָךְ הַדְּשֵׁן וְשְׁרֵךְ אָתוֹ עַל-עַצִּים בְּאַשׁ עַל-שְׁפָךְ הַדְּשֵׁן יִשְׁרָף: ¹³ פְּ

וְאָמַם בֶּל-עֲדָת יִשְׂרָאֵל יִשְׁגַּן וּנְעָלָם דָּבָר מְעֻנֵּי הַקָּהָל וְעַשְׂיו אֶחָת מִבְּלָמָדּוֹת יְהֹוָה אֲשֶׁר לְאַתְּ-עֲשִׂינָה וְאַשְׁמוֹ: ¹⁴ וּנוֹדָעָה הַחֲטֹאת אֲשֶׁר חָטָאוּ עַלְיָה וְהַקְרִיבוּ הַקָּהָל פָּר בָּנְ-בָקָר לְחַטָּאת וְהַבְּיאוּ אָתוֹ לִפְנֵי אֹהֶל מוֹעֵד: ¹⁵ וְסָמְכוּ וְקָנִי הַעֲדָה אֲתִיד-יִהְתָּם עַל-רֹאשׁ הַפְּרָר לִפְנֵי יְהֹוָה

12. the rest . . . outside the camp. The priest who unwittingly transgresses does not benefit from the offering. (Ordinarily, a portion of the well-being offering is not placed on the altar but rather is available to the priest and layperson for their consumption. Here, the entire animal is eventually burned; parts are placed on the altar, but the rest is burned away from the altar.)

When the Congregation Incurs Guilt (4:13–21)
This ritual of purification is essentially identical to the procedure for the offending priest: a bull is brought for sacrifice and the Tabernacle is purified, particularly the inner altar and the space separating the Holy from the Holy of Holies. On behalf of the community, the elders (persons who achieved distinction either due to age, experience, or wealth) place their hands on the bull at the beginning of the ritual. At the end, no one benefits from the animal's meat.

13. the community leadership. Literally, “the entire community”; this translation aims to clarify that the word for community, edah (which is related to the word eid, “witness”), refers more precisely here to a representative body of some kind, most likely made up of adult males.

congregation. Ezra 10:1 defines a congregation as “men, women, and children.” The same meaning most likely applies here.

and the bull shall be slaughtered before יהוה. ¹⁶The anointed priest shall bring some of the blood of the bull into the Tent of Meeting, ¹⁷and the priest shall dip his finger in the blood and sprinkle of it seven times before יהוה, in front of the curtain. ¹⁸Some of the blood he shall put on the horns of the altar which is before יהוה in the Tent of Meeting, and all the rest of the blood he shall pour out at the base of the altar of burnt offering, which is at the entrance of the Tent of Meeting. ¹⁹He shall remove all its fat from it and turn it into smoke on the altar. ²⁰He shall do with this bull just as is done with the [priest's] bull of purgation offering; he shall do the same with it. The priest shall thus make expiation for them, and they shall be forgiven. ²¹He shall carry the bull outside the camp and burn it as he burned the first bull; it is the purgation offering of the congregation.

²²In case it is a chieftain who incurs guilt by doing unwittingly any of the things which by the commandment of his God יהוה ought not to be done, and he realizes guilt—²³or the sin of which he is guilty is made known—he shall bring as his offering a male goat without blemish. ²⁴He shall lay a hand upon the goat's head, and it shall be slaughtered at the spot where the burnt offering is slaughtered before יהוה; it is a purgation offering. ²⁵The priest shall take with his finger some of the blood of the purgation offering and put it on the horns of the altar of burnt offering; and the rest of its blood he shall pour out at the base of the altar of burnt offering. ²⁶All its fat he shall turn into smoke on the altar, like the fat of the sacrifice of well-being. The priest shall thus make expiation on his behalf for his sin, and he shall be forgiven.

When a Leader Incurs Guilt
(4:22–26)

22. chieftain. Heb. nasi, which in Numbers refers to a tribal leader (for example, 2:3) and in Ezekiel to a king (for example, 34:24); both mean-

ושחת את-הפר לפני יהוה: ¹⁶ וְהַבִּיא הַכֹּהן הַמֶּשֶׁיחַ מִקְרָם הַפָּר אֶל-אַחֲל מוֹעֵד: ¹⁷ וְטוּבֵל הַכֹּהן אֶצְבָּעוֹ מִן-הַדְּבָרִים וְהַזָּה שְׁבֻע פָּעָמִים לִפְנֵי יְהוָה אֶת פָּנֵי הַפְּרָכְתָה: ¹⁸ וּמִן-הַדְּבָרִים וְתַנְךְ | עַל-קְרָנוֹת הַמִּזְבֵּחַ אֲשֶׁר לִפְנֵי יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר בְּאַחֲל מוֹעֵד וְאֶת בְּל-הָרָם יִשְׁפְּךָ אֶל-יְסֻוד מִזְבֵּח הַעַלְלה אֲשֶׁר-פָּתַח אַחֲל מוֹעֵד: ¹⁹ וְאֶת בְּל-חַלְבּוֹ יְרִים מִמְּנוֹ וְהַקְטִיר הַמִּזְבֵּחַ: ²⁰ וְעַשֵּׂה לִפְרֵבָר בְּאֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה לִפְרֵר הַחֲטָאת כֹּן יִعַשְׂה-לוֹ וּכְפַר עַל-הָרָם הַכֹּהן וְנִסְלַח לְהָמָם: ²¹ וְהַזְּעִיא אֶת-הַפָּר אֶל-מְחוֹזָל לְמִחְנָה וְשָׁרֵף אֶת-הַפָּר שָׁרֵף אֶת הַפָּר הַרְאָשׁוֹן חַטָּאת הַקְּהֻל הָוָא: ²² פ

אֲשֶׁר נִשְׁׁיא וְחַטָּא וְעַשֵּׂה אֶת-הַמְּלֵא-מִצְוֹת יְהוָה אֶל-הָיו אֲשֶׁר לְאַתְּעִשְׁׁיָּה בְּשֶׁגֶגָה וְאַשְׁם: ²³ אָז-הַזְׁדָּע אֶל-יְהִוָּה חַטָּאתוֹ אֲשֶׁר חָטָא בָּהּ וְהַבִּיא אֶת-קְרָבָנוֹ שְׁעִיר עַזְוִים זָכָר תְּמִימִים: ²⁴ וְסַמֵּךְ יְדוֹ עַל-רָאש הַשְׁעִיר וְשַׁחַט אֶת-הַזְּבָחָת בְּמִקְומָה אֲשֶׁר-יִשְׁחַט אֶת-הַעַלְלה לִפְנֵי יְהוָה חַטָּאת הָוָא: ²⁵ וְלִקְח הַכֹּהן מִנְםָה הַחֲטָאת בְּאֶצְבָּעוֹ וְנִתְנַח עַל-קְרָנוֹת מִזְבֵּח הַעַלְלה וְאֶת-דְמוֹזִיָּה יִשְׁפְּךָ אֶל-יְסֻוד מִזְבֵּח הַעַלְלה: ²⁶ וְאֶת-בְּל-חַלְבּוֹ יִקְטִיר הַמִּזְבֵּחַ בְּחַלְבּוֹ וְבְחַלְבּוֹ הַשְׁלָמִים וּכְפַר עַל-יו הַכֹּהן מִחְטָאתוֹ וְנִסְלַח לוֹ: ²⁷ פ

ings probably apply here, signifying a high—or the highest—political leader.

23. or the sin... is made known. The chieftain is responsible even when initially unaware of the violation and is only informed about it later by others. Ignorance does not absolve the offender.

²⁷If any person from among the populace unwittingly incurs guilt by doing any of the things which by יהוה's commandments ought not to be done, and realizes guilt—²⁸or the sin of which one is guilty is made known—that person shall bring a female goat without blemish as an offering for the sin of which that one is guilty.²⁹The offerer shall lay a hand upon the head of the purgation offering. The purgation offering shall be slaughtered at the place of the burnt offering.³⁰The priest shall take with his finger some of its blood and put it on the horns of the altar of burnt offering; and all the rest of its blood he shall pour out at the base of the altar.³¹The offerer shall remove all its fat, just as the fat is removed from the sacrifice of well-being; and the priest shall turn it into smoke on the altar, for a pleasing odor to יהוה. The priest shall thus make expiation for that person, who shall be forgiven.

³²If the offering one brings as a purgation offering is a sheep, that person shall bring a female without blemish.³³The offerer shall lay a hand upon the head of the purgation offering, and it shall be slaughtered as a purgation offering at the spot where the burnt offering is slaughtered.³⁴The priest shall take with his finger some of the blood of the purgation offering and put it on the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and all the rest of its blood he shall pour out at the base of the altar.³⁵And all its fat the offerer shall remove, just as the fat of the sheep of the sacrifice of well-being is removed; and this the priest shall turn into smoke on the altar, over יהוה's offering by fire. For the sin of

²⁷וְאִם־נֶפֶשׁ אַחֲתָה תְּחַטֵּא בְּשֹׁגֶגֶת מֵעַם הָאָרֶץ בְּעִשְׂתָּה אַחֲתָה מִמְצּוֹת יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר לֹא־תַּעֲשֶׂנִּיהָ וְאַשְׁם: ²⁸אוֹ הַזָּעַן אֱלֹהִים חַטָּאתוֹ אֲשֶׁר חַטָּא וְהַבִּיא קָרְבָּנוֹ שְׁעִירָה עִזִּים תְּמִימָה נִקְבָּה עַל־חַטָּאתוֹ אֲשֶׁר חַטָּא: ²⁹וְסָמֵךְ אֶת־יְדוֹ עַל רַאשׁ הַחַטָּאת וְשָׁחַט אֶת־הַחַטָּאת בָּمְקוּם הַעַלְלָה: ³⁰וְלִקְחַת הַכְּהֻן מִדְמָה בְּאַצְבָּעוֹ וְנִתְן עַל קָרְנוֹת מִזְבֵּחַ הַעַלְלָה וְאֶת־בְּלִדְמָה יִשְׁפַּךְ אֶלְיוֹן הַמִּזְבֵּחַ: ³¹וְאֶת־בְּלִדְמָה יִשְׁפַּךְ בְּאֵשׁ הַוְּסֵר חֶלְבָּה מִעַל זְבַח הַשְּׁלָמִים וְהַקְטִיר הַכְּהֻן הַמִּזְבֵּחַ לְרִיחַ נִיחַח לִיהוָה וּכְפַר עַלְיוֹ הַכְּהֻן וְנִסְלַח לוֹ: ³²כְּ וְאִם־בְּבֶשֶׂש יִבְיא קָרְבָּנוֹ לְחַטָּאת נִקְבָּה תְּמִימָה יִבְיאָה: ³³וְסָמֵךְ אֶת־יְדוֹ עַל רַאשׁ הַחַטָּאת וְשָׁחַט אֶת־הַחַטָּאת בָּמְקוּם אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁחַט אֶת־הַעַלְלָה: ³⁴וְלִקְחַת הַכְּהֻן מִדְמָה הַחַטָּאת בְּאַצְבָּעוֹ וְנִתְן עַל קָרְנוֹת מִזְבֵּחַ הַעַלְלָה וְאֶת־בְּלִדְמָה יִשְׁפַּךְ אֶלְיוֹן הַמִּזְבֵּחַ: ³⁵וְאֶת־בְּלִדְמָה יִשְׁפַּךְ בְּאֵשׁ יוֹסֵר חֶלְבָּה־הַפְּשֵׁב מִזְבֵּחַ הַשְּׁלָמִים וְהַקְטִיר הַכְּהֻן אֶת־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ עַל אֲשֶׁר

When Anyone Else Incurs Guilt (4:27–35)

The ritual for any ordinary individual resembles that of the chatat offering for a chieftain (see 4:22–26); however, the offerer may choose to bring either a female goat (v. 28) or female sheep (v. 32). No self-evident rationale accounts for the specified sex of the sacrificial animals. One could conclude that a female might represent a greater loss in terms of long-term investment (because more females than males are necessary for reproduction, and because females also produce milk). There is no mention as to what is to be done with the parts of the animal that are not burned on the altar. Usually, the remainder is shared by the priest and the offerer in the case of a well-being offering.

27. person. Heb. nefesh, an inclusive noun that refers to a woman or man. (See at 2:1.)

which one is guilty, the priest shall thus make expiation on behalf of that person, who shall be forgiven.

5 If a person incurs guilt—

When one has heard a public imprecation but (although able to testify as having either seen or learned of the matter) has not given information and thus is subject to punishment;

²Or when a person touches any impure thing (be it the carcass of an impure beast or the carcass of impure cattle or the carcass of an impure creeping thing) and the fact has escaped notice, and then, being impure, that person realizes guilt;

³Or when one touches human impurity (any such impurity whereby someone becomes impure) and, though having known about it, the fact has escaped notice, but later that person realizes guilt;

⁴Or when a person utters an oath to bad or good purpose (whatever a human being may utter in an oath) and, though having known about

יהוה זכְרֹעַ עַלְיוֹ הַפְּתָן עַל-חַטָּאתוֹ אֲשֶׁר-חַטָּא וְנִסְלַחَ לוֹ: פ

ה וּנְפֵשׁ בַּיְתְּחִלָּה
וּשְׁמַעַל קֹול אֱלֹהִים וְהַוָּעֵד אֲוֹ רָאָה אֶזְרָא
יְדֻעַ אַמְלֹא יְגִיד וְנִשְׁאָעָנוּ:
² אֲוֹ נֶפֶשׁ אֲשֶׁר תִּגְעַן בְּכָל-דָּבָר טָמֵא אֲוֹ
בְּנִבְלַת חַיָּה טָמֵא אֲוֹ בְּנִבְלַת בְּהַמָּה
טָמֵא אֲוֹ בְּנִבְלַת שְׂרֵץ טָמֵא וְנִعְלָם
מִמְּנוּ וְהַוָּעֵד טָמֵא וְאַשְׁם:
³ אֲוֹ כִּי יִגְעַן בְּטָמֵאת אָדָם לְכָל טָמֵאתוֹ
אֲשֶׁר יִטְמָא בָּה וְנִعְלָם מִמְּנוּ וְהַוָּעֵד
וְאַשְׁם:
⁴ אֲוֹ נֶפֶשׁ כִּי תִשְׁבַּע לְבִיטָא בְשִׁפְתָּים
לְהַרְעָא | אֲוֹ לְהַיְלִיב לְכָל אֲשֶׁר יִבְטַא

Specific Cases That Require Offerings (5:1–13)

This passage includes types of violations of which only the offender would be aware. These constitute what we might call ethical offenses, like withholding information in legal situations (v. 1), or ritual violations, like touching something considered impure (v. 2). The word yada ("have known" or "have learned of") appears in Hebrew with each of these transgressions (vv. 1, 3, 4) and the ritual includes making the transgression known, hitvada (a form of yada, translated in v. 5 as "confess"). This section also describes three options for the purgation offering, depending on a person's economic resources. The placement of more affordable options at the conclusion of the section on purgation offerings (4:1–5:13) could imply that these options also apply to the earlier cases that require purgation offerings, not only to those in 5:1–4. (However, this is not how the Rabbis understand it.)

1. has not given information. This is the first specific transgression that the book of Leviticus mentions. It refers to a person who has refused to disclose information that is needed to establish the facts of a legal case. Such an offense might seem minor, but in fact it compromises a person's integrity and also undermines the legal system. An after-the-fact ritual cannot change the external circumstances of the case, but it provides the transgressor with a means to amend symbolically a wrongdoing that has damaged the fabric of society and self.

2–3. Realizing later that one has touched a corpse does not undo the original damage of defilement, practically speaking; nonetheless, Leviticus offers a restoration of balance by means of a belated ritual.

4. This passage acknowledges the importance

it, the fact has escaped notice, but later that person realizes guilt in any of these matters—⁵upon realizing guilt in any of these matters, one shall confess having sinned in that way. ⁶And one shall bring as a penalty to יהוה, for the sin of which one is guilty, a female from the flock, sheep or goat, as a purgation offering; and the priest shall make expiation for the sin, on that person's behalf.

⁷But if one's means do not suffice for a sheep, that person shall bring to יהוה, as the penalty for that of which one is guilty, two turtledoves or two pigeons—one for a purgation offering and the other for a burnt offering. ⁸The offerer shall bring them to the priest, who shall offer first the bird for the purgation offering, pinching its head at the nape without severing it. ⁹He shall sprinkle some of the blood of the purgation offering on the side of the altar, and what remains of the blood shall be drained out at the base of the altar; it is a purgation offering. ¹⁰And the second bird he shall prepare as a burnt offering, according to regulation. For the sin of which one is guilty, the priest shall thus make expiation on behalf of that person, who shall be forgiven.

¹¹And if one's means do not suffice for two turtledoves or two pigeons, that person shall bring as an offering for that of which one is guilty a tenth of an eifah of choice flour for a purgation offering; one shall not add oil to it or lay frankincense on it, for it is a purgation offering. ¹²The offerer shall bring it to the priest, and the priest shall scoop out of it a handful as a token portion and turn it into smoke on the altar, with יהוה's offerings by fire; it is a pur-

הָאָרֶם בְּשַׁבָּעָה וּנְגַלֵּם מִפְנֵנו וְהוּא יִזְעַד
וְאָשָׁם לְאַחֲת מִאָלָה:
⁵ וְהִיה כִּי יִאֱשֹׁם לְאַחֲת מִאָלָה וְהַתְּנוּהָ
אֲשֶׁר חָטָא עֲלֵיכָה: ⁶ וְהַבִּיא אֶת־אַשְׁמָוֹן
לִיהָה עַל חָטָאתוֹ אֲשֶׁר חָטָא נִקְבָּה מִן־
הַצָּאן כְּשֶׁבֶת אֲוֹשֶׁבֶת עַזְּים לְחַטָּאת
וּכְפֵר עַלְיוֹ הַכְּהֵן מִחְטָאתוֹ:
⁷ וְאִם־לֹא תִגְיַע יְדוֹ תַּיְשֵׂה וְהַבִּיא אֶת־
אַשְׁמָוֹן אֲשֶׁר חָטָא שְׁתִּים תְּרִים אוֹשְׁנִי בְּנֵי־
יִזְחָק לִיהָה אֶחָד לְחַטָּאת וְאֶחָד לְעַלְלָה:
⁸ וְהַבִּיא אֶתְכָּם אֶל־הַכְּהֵן וְהַקְרִיב אֶת־
אֲשֶׁר לְחַטָּאת רָאשָׂוָה וּמֶלֶךְ אֶת־רָאשָׂוָה
מִמּוֹל עֲרָפָו וְלֹא יִבְדִּיל: ⁹ וְהַזֶּה מִדְםָם
הַחַטָּאת עַל־קִיר הַמִּזְבֵּחַ וְהַנְּשָׁאָר בְּלָם
יִמְצָה אֶל־יְסֻוד הַמִּזְבֵּחַ חַטָּאת הִיא:
¹⁰ וְאַתְּ הַשְׁנִי יַעֲשֵׂה עַלְלוֹתָה בְּמַשְׁפֵט וּכְפֵר
עַלְיוֹ הַכְּהֵן מִחְטָאתוֹ אֲשֶׁר־חָטָא וּנְסַלְחָ לוֹ: ס

¹¹ וְאִם־לֹא תִשְׁגַּג יְדוֹ לְשֹׁתֵּי תְּרִים אוֹ
לְשֹׁנֵי בְּנֵי־יִזְחָק וְהַבִּיא אֶת־קְרֻבָּנוֹ אֲשֶׁר־
חָטָא עֲשֵׂירָת הָאָפָה סָלָת לְחַטָּאת לְאֵי
יִשְׁים עַלְיָה שְׁמָן וְלֹא־יִתְּנַחַט עַלְיָה לְבָנָה כִּי
חַטָּאת הוּא: ¹² וְהַבִּיא אֶל־הַכְּהֵן וְקַבְץ
הַכְּהֵן וּמִמְּנָה מְלֹא קְמֹזָו אֶת־אַזְבְּרָתָה וְהַקְרִיב הַמִּזְבֵּחַ עַל אֲשֶׁר־יהָה חַטָּאת of treating promises to oneself (when expressed as an oath) as seriously as promises to another.

6. This verse first states the usual offering for persons in one of the foregoing situations: an animal from the flock. However, two more options will follow for persons in certain circumstances.

7. But if one's means do not suffice. Like 1:14–17, this passage lists a more affordable offering—this time, however, stating a rationale that was only implicit in the case of the burnt offering. This second option uses two birds, one of which is entirely consumed, as in a burnt offering (1:17).

ii. And if one's means do not suffice. A third option for a poor person is limited to a grain offering, which resembles the meal offering (see 2:1–16).

gation offering.¹³ For whichever of these sins one is guilty, the priest shall thus make expiation on behalf of that person, who shall be forgiven. It shall belong to the priest, like the meal offering.

¹⁴ And spoke to Moses, saying:

¹⁵ When a person commits a trespass, being unwittingly remiss about any of יהוה's sacred things: One shall bring as a penalty to יהוה a ram without blemish from the flock, convertible into payment in silver by the sanctuary weight, as a reparation offering.¹⁶ That person shall make restitution for the remission regarding the sacred things, adding a fifth part to it and giving it to the priest. The priest shall make expiation with the ram of the reparation offering on behalf of that person, who shall be forgiven.

¹⁷ And a person who, without knowing it, sins in regard to any of יהוה's commandments about things not to be done, and then realizes guilt: Such a person shall be subject to punishment.¹⁸ That person shall bring to the priest a ram without blemish from the flock, or the equivalent, as a reparation offering. For the error committed unwittingly, the

הוּא: ¹³ וְכַפֵּר עַלְיוֹ הַכֹּהן עַל-חֶטְאָתוֹ אֲשֶׁר-חֶטְאָ מִאַחֲת מֵאַלְמָה וְנִסְלַח לֹא וְהִתְהַלֵּךְ לְפָנָיו בְּמִנְחָה: ס

¹⁴ וַיַּדְבֵּר יְהוָה אֱלֹמֶשֶׁה לְאָמֵר: ¹⁵ נְפָשָׁה כִּי-תִּמְעַל מִעַל וְחַטָּאת בְּשֶׁגֶגֶת מִקְדְּשֵׁי יְהוָה וְהַבְיאָ אֶת-אֲשֶׁר לִיהוָה אַיִל תְּמִימָה מִן-הַצָּאן בְּעֶרֶב בְּסִף-שְׂקָלִים בְּשֶׁקְלָן הַקָּדֵש לְאַשְׁם: ¹⁶ וְאֵת אֲשֶׁר חֶטְאָ מִן-הַקָּדֵש יִשְׁלַّם וְאַת-חַמִּישָׁתוֹ יוֹסֵף עַלְיוֹ נִנְתַּן אָתוֹ לְפָנָיו וְהַכֹּהן יִכְפֵּר עַלְיוֹ בְּאַיִל הַאַשְׁם וְנִסְלַח לֹא: פ

¹⁷ וְאִם-נְפָשָׁה כִּי תִּחְטָא וְעָשָׂתָה אַחֲת מִפְלָמָדּוֹת יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר לֹא תַּعֲשֵׂנָה וְלֹא-יִדְעָ וְאַשְׁם וְנִשְׁאָ עָוֹנוֹ: ¹⁸ וְהַבְיאָ אַיִל תְּמִימָה מִן-הַצָּאן בְּעֶרֶב לְאַשְׁם אֶל-הַכֹּהן וְכַפֵּר עַלְיוֹ הַכֹּהן עַל שְׁגַגְתּוֹ אֲשֶׁר

REPARATION OFFERING—asham (5:14–26)

The name for this offering, asham, elsewhere means “guilt,” which is why in English it is sometimes called a “guilt offering.” The more recent term, “reparation offering,” more accurately reflects the purpose of the ritual, which is to repair the damage done in specified cases. In contrast to the earlier instructions in this parashah, the section on the reparation offering focuses on the nature of the transgression and on payment of reparations, not on the presentation and disposition of the sacrificial offering. Restoration involves directly compensating those who have been harmed by the act.

The section begins with reparation of damage done to sacred items and concludes with damage to persons. These laws echo the Decalogue (Exodus 20:2–14; Deuteronomy 5:6–18) in that crimes against another person are considered a crime against God and thus require similar reparation. The assertion that crimes against persons are also crimes against God also stands out as the central message of biblical prophets like Amos or Isaiah, and it constitutes a distinctive contribution of the Bible to Western ethics. Leviticus presents this idea, radical for its own time, as the final point in this parashah.

14–16. Mishandling items that belong to the sanctuary, considered to be an overt crime against God, requires a sacrificial animal (a ram) or its substitution rendered in silver. The person must make restitution for the damaged item, plus twenty percent interest.

17–19. It is not obvious why a reparation offering rather than purgation offering applies in the case of an inadvertent transgression of a prohibition.

priest shall make expiation on behalf of that person, who shall be forgiven.¹⁹ It is a reparation offering; guilt has been incurred before יְהוָה.

²⁰ spoke to Moses, saying:²¹ When a person sins and commits a trespass against יְהוָה—by dealing deceitfully with another in the matter of a deposit or a pledge, or through robbery, or by defrauding another,²² or by finding something lost and lying about it; if one swears falsely regarding any one of the various things that someone may do and sin thereby—²³ when one has thus sinned and, realizing guilt, would restore either that which was gotten through robbery or fraud, or the entrusted deposit, or the lost thing that was found,²⁴ or anything else about which one swore falsely, that person shall repay the principal amount and add a fifth part to it. One shall pay it to its owner upon realizing guilt.²⁵ Then that person shall bring to the priest, as a penalty to יְהוָה, a ram without blemish from the flock, or the equivalent, as a reparation offering.²⁶ The priest shall make expiation before יְהוָה on behalf of that person, who shall be forgiven for whatever was done to draw blame thereby.

שָׁגֵג וְהַוָּא לְאִירְעָע וְנִסְלָח לֹו: ¹⁹ אֲשֶׁר הַוָּא אֲשֶׁר אֲשֶׁר לִיהְוָה: פ
²⁰ וַיֹּאמֶר יְהֹוָה אֱלֹמֶשֶׁה לְאָמֵר: נִפְשָׁת
בְּתִחְתָּא וּמִעַל בִּיהְוָה וּכְחַשְׁבָּע
בְּעַמִּיתָנוּ בְּפֶקְדָּן אָוֹבְתָשָׂוּמָת יְל אֹו בְּגַנְלָה
אוֹ עַשְׁק אַתְּ-עַמִּיתָו: ²² אָוּמְצָא אֲבָדָה
וּכְחַש בָּה וְנִשְׁבַּע עַל-שְׁקָר עַל-אַתָּה מִפְלָא
אֲשֶׁר-יִיעָשָׂה הָאָדָם לְחַטָּא בְּהַנָּה: וְהַיָּה
כִּי-יִחְתָּא וְאַשְׁם וְהַשִּׁבָּא אַתְּ-הַגּוֹלָה אֲשֶׁר
גַּזְל אֹו אַתְּ-הַעֲשֵׁל אֲשֶׁר עַשְׁק אֹו אַתְּ
הַפְּקָדָן אֲשֶׁר הַפְּקָד אָתוּ אוֹ אַתְּ-הַאֲבָדָה
אֲשֶׁר מְצָא: ²⁴ אֹו מִפְלָא אֲשֶׁר-יִשְׁבַּע עַל-לִיו
לְשָׁקָר וְשָׁלָם אַתָּה בְּרָאשׁו וְחַמְשָׁתָיו יִסְפַּק
עַל-לִיו לְאַשְׁר הַוָּא לֹו יִתְּפַנְּנוּ בַּיּוֹם אֲשֶׁר-וְאַתְּ-אֲשֶׁר יִבְיא לִיהְוָה אֵיל תָּמִים מִן-
הַצָּאן בְּעַרְבָּה לְאַשְׁם אֱלֹהָהָה: ²⁶ וּכְפָר
עַל-לִיו הַכְּהֻן לְפָנֵי יְהֹוָה וְנִסְלָח לֹו עַל-אַתָּה
מִפְלָא אֲשֶׁר-יִיעָשָׂה לְאַשְׁמָה בָּה: פ

20–26. When a person sins and commits a trespass against יְהוָה—by dealing deceitfully with another. This parashah, which lingers so long on rites in the sanctuary, concludes with a list of offenses against another person, what we might call ethical and social or economic violations. Each of these wrongs requires first and foremost a restitution of the damage done to the other person. This section introduces the deep concern in Leviticus for social justice and equity, a concern often overlooked as a result of the book's detailed information about ritual.

21. trespass. Heb. maal; it can also be translated as “sacrilege,” a term that rightly highlights the religious component of what might otherwise be considered a civil matter.

against יְהוָה. Here Leviticus expresses the idea that crimes against another person are also crimes against God. This message, radical for its own time, also characterizes the message of Leviticus 19 and of prophets like Amos and Isaiah.

22. swears falsely. False testimony undermines the judicial system and makes a mockery of attempts at securing justice (see also Exodus 20:13 and Deuteronomy 5:17).

24. shall repay. These instructions insist on the equitable restoration of any ill-gained possessions, with an additional twenty percent compensation. Only after such recompense can a person approach the altar and offer a sacrifice.

25. Then that person shall bring. Only after restoring justice in the human realm should a person bring an offering to God. This emphasis on justice stands as the culmination of the parashah.

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

Another View

 ALL OF THIS PARASHAH and most of the next one contain instructions for sacrifices, offered by individuals (either women or men) and by households at the central shrine. Yet the extensive focus on communal rites of worship in this part of the Torah may create the impression that other religious practices were either non-existent or discouraged. However, that impression would be erroneous, for—as in traditional societies everywhere—religious activities carried out only by women were part of Israelite household life. Such practices are virtually invisible in the Bible. Nevertheless, archeological evidence, interpreted in light of ethnographic data and anthropological models, allows us to recognize this aspect of women's lives in the biblical period.

The gender-specific religious behaviors of women centered on the reproductive process. Women faced the possibility of infertility, complications of pregnancy, and insufficient lactation; they were also aware of high infant mortality. Today we deal with these reproductive problems medically. But in antiquity women carried out procedures—which we might view as superstitious—that were fundamentally religious in nature. That is, women performed rituals both to avert the evil forces (like Lilith) believed to be the cause of problems and also to attract benevolent spirits in order to achieve reproductive success.

Such practices were generally apotropaic (protective). Women might wear shiny jewelry or amulets to keep the “evil eye” away. They would tie a red thread around an infant’s limb for similar reasons, a practice that continues to this day among certain Jewish groups. They might keep a lamp burning in or near a birthing room, and they would salt and swaddle a newborn (see Ezekiel 16:4). Other practices, involving

Women were ritual experts no less than the priests.

votive figurines and fertility symbols known from other ancient cultures, can also be identified. Such religious behaviors focus on the welfare of child-bearing women and their offspring. No doubt women considered them necessary for the creation and safeguarding of new life. Carrying out such practices, which they believed could be effective, would have given women a sense of agency in dealing with considerable reproductive risk. This also means that they were ritual experts no less than the priests in charge of the official sacrificial regimen set forth in Vayikra. (See also “Women in Ancient Israel—An Overview,” p. xli.)

—Carol Meyers

Post-biblical Interpretations

 הַיְהוָה called to Moses (1:1). Midrash Vayikra Rabbah 7.3 addresses the custom of beginning children’s education with the book of Leviticus, asking why study commences with Leviticus instead of Genesis. The response is that “children are pure and the sacrifices [described in Leviticus] are pure; let those who are pure study that which is pure.”

הַיְהוָה called to Moses (1:1). “Vayikra,” the opening word of Leviticus, ends with an alef that in Torah scrolls is inscribed smaller than the other letters in the word. A number of commentators seek a reason for this. One argues that the small alef recalls the word adam (human being), and reminds individuals to “make themselves small,” that is, to avoid arrogance. Another sees a play on the word aluf (leader), spelled using the same letters as the word alef: Moses, who was extremely close to God, maintained his humility. A third commentator explains that the Torah does not include an exhortation to be humble because were humility to be commanded, it would no longer be humility. Rather, the commentator concludes, every person should cultivate true humility (Itturei Torah on Leviticus 1:1, IV, 1998, pp. 7–8).

Several commentators note that this is the only time in the Torah that the verb “to call” precedes the verb “to speak.” They point out that at the end of Exodus, Moses was unable to enter the Tent of Meeting when the cloud symbolizing God’s presence descended (40:35). Vayikra begins with God’s call to Moses, indicating that Moses had achieved permission to come before the divine Presence (Rashi and Rashbam on 1:1).

from the Tent of Meeting (1:1). One rabbi notes that until now, God had spoken to Moses in open places—such as the burning bush in the wilderness, Midian, and Sinai, where God’s presence was public and without bounds. Thus “a (lowly) maid servant saw at the Sea of Reeds what even the prophet Ezekiel was not privileged to see.” However, once the Tent of Meeting was erected, God chose concealment over openness. This is a sign of divine modesty, since what is private is seen by God as more precious (Itturei Torah on 1:1, IV, p. 8). According to Midrash Tanchuma, Vayikra 4 (ed. Buber, II, p. 475), God chose to leave the high heavens and descend to the earth, to the Tent of Meeting, for love of Israel.

When any of you presents an offering... to יהוה (1:2). This portion discusses a variety of ritual sacrifices. A number of interpreters take this opportunity to consider “sacrifice” in a broader, less material sense. Remarking on the Hebrew word for “presents an offering” (yakriv), one commentator says, “When we want to draw close (l’bitkarev) to God, we must offer something of our own, that is, our ‘evil inclination.’” Another suggests that this verse calls upon individuals to offer God their innermost strength and will, to submit to God, and to dedicate all of their acts to the service of God (Itturei Torah on Leviticus 1:2, IV, p. 10).

One commentator on this verse cites BT Kiddushin 40b, “Those individuals who perform a single mitzvah draw themselves and the entire world toward righteousness.” Responding to the mixing of the singular

To draw close to God, bring a sacrifice: offer up your “evil inclination.”

and the plural verb forms in Leviticus 1:2, another interpretation urges that we each acknowledge that we realize our full potential through our bonds to the community of Israel (Itturei Torah on 1:2, IV, p. 11).

You shall lay a hand upon the head of the burnt offering (1:4). While the Rabbis exempted women from the legal obligation to lay hands upon one’s burnt offering, some rabbis permitted them to participate in this mitzvah “if they choose” (BT Rosh Ha-Shanah 33a; Vayikra Rabbah 1.7). This view is one of those cited within the contemporary halachic community in support of expanding women’s roles in ritual.

The bull shall be slaughtered... and Aaron’s sons, the priests, shall offer the blood (1:5). The first verb of this verse is impersonal, and it mentions the priests only after the animal has been killed. Citing these details of wording, the Rabbis validated animal slaughter by any lay person—male or female—whether for a sacrificial offering or for purely human consumption (Midrash Sifra; BT Zvachim 32a; see also Mishnah Zvachim 3:1, Chulin 1:1). Late medieval historical sources document that Jewish women were slaughtering animals for kosher meat (sh’chitah) in various parts of Europe as a matter of course; in Italy, they did so from at least the Renaissance into the 20th century.

VAYIKRA

When a person presents an offering of meal to יהוה (2:1). Midrash Tanchuma, Vayikra 5 (ed. Buber, p. 475) notes that this is the only instance in the prolonged discussion of sacrifices in which the word for “person” is nefesh instead of ish (man) or adam (human being). The midrash says that the meal offering is a poor person’s donation, brought by an individual who cannot afford to present an animal or bird sacrifice. According to this view, God responds to the offering of the poor “as if that individual had offered his or her own life (nefesh).”

—Dvora E. Weisberg

Contemporary Reflection

“AND AARON’S SONS, the priests, shall offer the blood” (1:5). That is pretty much how parashat Vayikra introduces Leviticus, a book that sits smack in the center of the Torah like a tough vein of gristle that runs through a tender, juicy steak. Most of Leviticus is hard to digest. Vayikra is an instruction manual, and technical writing rarely yields compelling drama or inspiring ethical teachings. The language of our portion is formal, stylized, repetitive, precise. Yet the dryness of language cannot quite disguise the essential problem with what transpires here: the portion is slippery with blood. Rising up from the page are the screams of dying animals, the pungent stink of smoke and burning flesh.

The priestly passages in the Torah not only arouse anxiety in the squeamish—they often seem to be among the most irrelevant we encounter in our sacred text. After all, the major skills of Levites and kohanim (the priests), technicians of the sacred, became obsolete almost two thousand years ago when the Temple went up in flames. While Jews with the status of kohanim survive in our own day, their role is marginal even in traditional synagogues, and Reform Jews have virtually eliminated their special status. Yet the Torah promises that Israelites who are faithful to the covenant will become mamlechet kohanim—a kingdom of priests; it envisions an entire people which serves in a priestly role (Exodus 19:6).

No doubt many of us would have preferred that the Torah command us to become “a kingdom of prophets,” collectively denouncing the world’s inequities, speaking out for justice and defending the down-trodden. But it is to the priesthood that we Jews are taught to aspire, and the priesthood from which we must seek instruction in parashat Vayikra. What can we learn from the role of the priests—and from these methodical instructions for the slaughter and dismemberment of animals for ritual offering on the altar?

If human beings were gentle and benevolent by nature we might not need the stern, disciplinary teachings of the priesthood. The Torah’s insight is that priestly service is what our homicidal proclivities demand and deserve. So the descendants of Phinehas, a family whose origins are murderous and full of rage (see Numbers 25:1–14), are taught to (re)direct their zealous energies to the service of God. They turn from uncontrolled aggression to the discipline of ritual slaughter, hedged about with myriad laws and regulations. As officiants at the altar, their killing is tamed and domesticated, their dangerous proclivities neutralized. Stripped of the normal male prerogatives of land ownership and military service, they become, as my teacher Melila Hellner-Eshed suggests, “God’s housewives”—feminized men who dress in skirts and busy themselves with the domestic work of cooking and cleaning in God’s holy dwelling.

Sublimation of aggression may, in fact, underlie the entire sacrificial system of worship. A korban, an offering to God, is more than an act of violence. It is violence transmuted into something higher; it is God re-shaping a destructive human drive into productive, creative energy. Through bringing offerings to the altar, the fierce passions of the ego are not indulged but controlled and transcended. Animals, valued possessions and markers of wealth, are given selflessly to God—and thus the worshiper learns gradually to overcome narcissism and greed. Animal blood is dashed on the altar, but human blood may not be shed; substitution trains the worshipers to restrain their own innate savagery.

The opening of our parashah reads: Adam ki yakriv mikem korban l'Adonai—“When any of you presents an offering of cattle to הָרָה” (1:2). A Hasidic commentator offers an interpretive reading: “One who wants to become karov—close to God—must bring an offering mikem—that is, from oneself.” And what is the offering? It is the beast within ourselves—the part of ourselves that is capable of cruelty and brutality, even to those we love (Itturei Torah, IV, 1998, p. 10). The ritual of animal sacrifice, understood symbolically, conveys the struggle of flawed human beings to become more humane.

The Israelites approached the altar in order to attain closeness to the Divine—to experience what we today would call spiritual elevation, a consciousness of being lifted up to something higher than themselves. They drew nearer to God not by denying the body and its drives but by raising the physical to a sacred purpose. From the rituals of worship set forth in Vayikra we learn that aggression need not be extinguished in the personality in order to lead a holy life; it may instead be channeled in constructive directions and employed for the good.

A Talmudic passage reminds us that certain traits may be inborn, but character is never determined by fate. All human energies are ours to activate as we wish, in accordance with our freedom. Rav Nachman bar Yitzchak observed: “One who is born under the sign of Mars will be a shedder of blood.” Rav Ashi did not see such a prediction as necessarily bad, for as he pointed out, one could “shed blood” for a good cause—by becoming “either a surgeon, . . . a ritual slaughterer (shochet), or a circumciser (mohel)” (BT Shabbat 156a).

As a kingdom of priests, we can sanctify even the darkest forces within the psyche.

So we may aspire, even today, to be a kingdom of priests—a people committed to elevating and sanctifying even the darkest forces within the psyche. If we closely read the seemingly dry instructions and bloody details of parashat Vayikra, we learn that through the discipline of our faith we can redeem what is broken and flawed within ourselves, transforming barbaric urges into opportunities for blessing.

—Janet Marder

• • • • • Voices • • • • •

Psalm 50

Debbie Perlman

You are the Open Door
That beckons me in;
Peeking around the door frame,
I begin to enter into Your glory.

You move me forward, O Eternal,
To step beyond self-made boundaries;
Lift my foot over the threshold
That I might abide with You.

In the house of the Eternal,
I found my questions;
Waiting to be posed,
They filled me with wonder.

Through the doorway of the Eternal
Come jumbled sounds and mingled scents;
Warm sunlight falls across my lap:
All this, all this, Your creation.

Sit with me, Eternal Teacher,
Encourage my seeking;
As I fill my hours with Your mitzvot,
So shall I be filled.

Then send me through Your door
Stretching up to honor Your Name,
Sharing out this wonder,
Enriching myself in the giving.

A Mother's Morning Prayer

Hava Pincas-Cohen

(transl. Jules Harlow and Rochelle Furstenberg)

At this time as I stand cooking oatmeal,
Remove all sorts of alien thoughts from me
And when I touch the baby's back and take his temperature

May all sorts of problems disappear,
May they not confuse my thoughts.
And give me the strength to scrub my face
So that each one of my children
Can see his face in mine
As in a mirror washed for a festival.

And the darkness sunk within
My face—cover it with light
So that I don't lose my patience, and I won't be hoarse

From coarse, insistent screaming.
May I not experience weakness
Before the unknowable
And may it never end, even for a moment,
The touch of flesh upon flesh, my children's and mine.

Give me so much of Your love
That I can stand at the door and hand it out
With the simplicity of someone slicing bread
And smearing butter every morning.
Renew the sweet offering of boiling milk bubbling over and the smell of coffee hovering above
The thanksgiving sacrifice and the daily sacrifice
That I never learned how to give.

Coda

Rachel Hadas

The future's where we place our hope and fear.
What's done is done. The past cannot recur.
Anecdote, dream, and memory all refer to experience no longer there.
Yet look at what is rising through the air!
Fox fur, ginger, melting lemon ice successively appear. Can we live twice?
Is nothing lost? I reach a new conclusion:
leave the future to its own confusion.
My business is with what I find I know through story, memory, dream. Since this is so, I am a vessel full beyond the brim even as life leaks out, a steady stream of losses running toward oblivion.
But how to make one's daily life maintain a balance between plenitude and pain, such fullness and such unremitting waste?
Ginger offered in an outstretched hand.
A blond recorder resting in its stand.
Kippers. Pastries. A remembered taste.

How divine is forgiving?

Marge Piercy

Leviticus 5:10–26

It's a nice concept
but what's under the sculptured draperies?
We forgive when we don't really care because what was done to us brought unexpected harvest, as I always try to explain to the peach trees as I prune them hard, to the cats when I shove pills against the Gothic vaults of their mouths.

We forgive those who betrayed us years later because memory has rotted through like something left out in the weather battered clean then littered dirty in the rain, chewed by mice and beetles, frozen and baked and stripped by the wind till it is unrecognizable, corpse or broken machine, something long useless.

We forgive those whom their own machinations have sufficiently tangled, enshrouded, the fly who bit us to draw blood and who hangs now a gutted trophy in a spider's airy larder; more exactly, the friend whose habit of lying has immobilized him at last like a dog trapped in a cocoon of fishing line and barbed hooks.

We forgive those we firmly love because anger hurts, a coal that burns and smoulders still scorching the tissues inside, blistering wherever it touches so that finally it is to ease our own pain that we bury the hot clinkers in a mound of caring, suffocate the sparks with promises, drown them in tears, reconciling.

We forgive mostly not from strength but through imperfections, for memory wears transparent as a glass with the pattern washed off, till we stare past what injured us.
We forgive because we too have done
the same to others easy as a mudslide; or because anger is a fire that must be fed and we are too tired to rise and haul a log.

Tzav

LEVITICUS 6:1–8:36

The Priestly Torah and the Priests' Ordination

PARASHAT TZAV ("issue a command") continues with instructions about sacrificial offerings that began in Leviticus 1–5. However, whereas 1:1–2 began with instructions to all the people of Israel, 6:1 starts with a command specifically addressed to the priests. The first section of the parashah (Leviticus 6–7) contains instructions about the priests' portions from the sacrificial rituals. The second section (Leviticus 8) records the ordination of the priests.

In establishing a sacrificial system and a professional priesthood, biblical Israel resembled other ancient cultures. One notes, however, two differences. First, priests in most cultures in the ancient world kept the secrets of their profession away from the public eye and transmitted them privately from generation to generation. In contrast, Leviticus reflects a commitment to keep the rules of the trade, as it were, in public view.

A second difference is that neighboring cultures such as Mesopotamia included women priests (even though they did not perform the same rituals as male priests), whereas the Bible recognizes only male priests. Scholars concur, however, that women played an important role in many facets of popular religion in ancient Israel (as did men), even though the priestly teachings in Leviticus do not acknowledge or discuss such roles.

Although parashat Tzav does not mention women explicitly, it treats three areas that do involve women. The first pertains to the roles and possible privileges of women as members of priests' families. Such women apparently benefit from the priests' share of sacrificial foods. There is a question, however, whether they may eat the part of the offering designated as "most holy" (see Another View, p. 608).

The second area concerning women pertains to the highly valued, formal priestly garments (see Exodus 28 and Leviticus 8). Archeological and biblical evidence shows that women excelled in weaving, spinning, and sewing (see at Exodus 35:25; T'tzaveh, Another View, p. 489; P'kudei, Another View, p. 560). Therefore, we may assume that women made the priestly garments. According to the book of Samuel, each year Hannah made and brought a special garment for her son Samuel who served at the sanctuary at Shiloh (I Samuel 2:19). Plausibly priests' mothers and wives likewise made clothing for their family members.

The Bible stands out by placing the priestly trade in public view and restricting it to men.

The third area to consider is whether women were among those who offered the sacrifices that these passages discuss. Biblical references elsewhere do suggest that Israelite women, like Israelite men, worshipped and sacrificed in the shrines—often as part of their households. For example, according to Leviticus 12:6 and 15:29, women are obligated to offer sacrifices after childbirth and irregular bleeding. Proverbs 7:14 presents a female persona who mentions her need to offer the well-being offerings. And in I Samuel 1, Hannah and her husband present and slaughter the offering that she has brought—together with a portion of flour and a jar of wine—to the shrine in Shiloh as payment for a vow.

(On the widespread ancient practice of offering sacrifices and its rationale, and on the role of sacrifices in ancient Israel, see the introduction to the previous parashah, pp. 569–71.)

—Tamara Cohn Eskenazi

Outline—

I. SUPPLEMENTAL INSTRUCTIONS TO THE PRIESTS REGARDING SACRIFICES (6:1–7:38)

- A. Instructions for the burnt offering (6:1–6)
- B. Instructions for the meal offering (6:7–16)
- C. Instructions for the purgation offering (6:17–23)
- D. Instructions for the reparation offering (7:1–6)
- E. Concluding instructions for the preceding offerings (7:7–10)
- F. Instructions for the well-being sacrifice (7:11–21)
- G. Prohibitions regarding the fat and the blood (7:22–27)
- H. Further details regarding the well-being sacrifice (7:28–36)
- I. Affirmation of the Sinaitic origin of the sacrificial practices (7:37–38)

II. THE ORDINATION OF THE PRIESTS (8:1–36)

- A. God’s instructions regarding the ordination of the priests (vv. 1–3)
- B. Moses’ ordination of the priests (vv. 4–30)
- C. Final preparatory steps: seven days of priests’ isolation (vv. 31–36)

6:1

יְהוָה spoke to Moses, saying: ²Command Aaron and his sons thus:

This is the ritual of the burnt offering: The burnt offering itself shall remain where it is burned upon the altar all night until morning, while the fire on the altar is kept going on it. ³The priest shall dress in linen raiment, with linen breeches next to his body; and he shall take up the ashes to which the fire has reduced the burnt offering on the altar and place them beside the altar. ⁴He shall then take

וַיֹּאמֶר יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים לֵאמֹר: ² צְבָא אֶת־
אַהֲרֹן וְאֶת־בָנָיו לֵאמֹר
זֶאת תُורַת הָעֹלָה הַוְאָה עַל־מִזְבֵּחַ
עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ כָּל־הַלִּילָה עַד־הַבָּקָר וְאַשׁ
הַמִּזְבֵּחַ תַּוקְדֵּחַ בָּזֶה: ³ וְלֹבֶשׂ הַכֹּהֵן מִזְבֵּחַ בְּדַיִלְתָּן
וּמִכְנֶסֶת־בְּדַיִלְתָּן יְלֹבֶשׂ עַל־בְּשָׂרָוּ וְהַרְגִּימָא אֶת־
הַרְגִּימָא אֲשֶׁר תַּאֲכִל הַאֲשָׁר אֶת־הָעֹלָה עַל־
הַמִּזְבֵּחַ וְשָׁמוֹ אֶצְלַ הַמִּזְבֵּחַ: ⁴ וְפָשַׁט אֶת־

Supplemental Instructions to the Priests Regarding Sacrifices (6:1–7:38)

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE BURNT OFFERING (6:1–6)

Detailed instructions about this offering appeared in Leviticus 1, indicating that the entire animal is to be “turned into smoke” (see 1:9). The additional details here focus on the activity of the priests, instructing them concerning the permanent fire that must burn on the altar, and concerning the clothing the officiating priest must wear at different stages when disposing of the offering’s remains.

2. Command Aaron and his sons. Whereas Moses is charged with communicating most other laws to the people, here God directs Moses to convey these laws specifically to Aaron and his sons. (Because the laws apply to the priests themselves, it is reasonable to translate the plural noun banim here as “sons” rather than as “children.”) ritual. Heb. torah, which more widely means an “instruction” or “teaching” (see the introduction to Deuteronomy 6:20–25). Rendered as “Torah” (capitalized), this term comes to represent the entire first five books of the Bible (see at Deuteronomy 31:9). This is the first time that this term is employed in Leviticus.

3. The priest shall dress in linen raiment. The fabrics that the “skilled women” wove for the Tabernacle (Exodus 35:25) were nearly identical to the material specified for the priestly garments (Exodus 28:5). Thus women probably also wove the fabrics for the priestly garments such as those mentioned here. Weaving is one of the household crafts or tasks typically carried out by women in traditional cultures (see T’rumah, Another View, p. 467; P’kudei, Another View, p. 560).

4. The change of clothing allows the priest to leave the sacred precinct of the altar and dispose of the remains of the offering.

- Why can the females in Aaron’s line not partake of these offerings?

ANOTHER VIEW ► 608

- Women became the ritual specialists for temple sacrifice in its domestic transformation.

CONTEMPORARY REFLECTION ► 610

- The Midrash lists examples where the value of peace is deemed higher than the value of truth.

POST-BIBLICAL INTERPRETATIONS ► 608

- Modest, I know, the offerings / of your daughter: / Only an outburst of song...

VOICES ► 612

off his vestments and put on other vestments, and carry the ashes outside the camp to a pure place.
⁵The fire on the altar shall be kept burning, not to go out: every morning the priest shall feed wood to it, lay out the burnt offering on it, and turn into smoke the fat parts of the offerings of well-being.
⁶A perpetual fire shall be kept burning on the altar, not to go out.

⁷And this is the ritual of the meal offering: Aaron's sons shall present it before יהוה, in front of the altar. ⁸A handful of the choice flour and oil of the meal offering shall be taken from it, with all the frankincense that is on the meal offering, and this token portion shall be turned into smoke on the altar as a pleasing odor to יהוה. ⁹What is left of it shall be eaten by Aaron and his sons; it shall be eaten as unleavened cakes, in the sacred precinct; they shall eat it in the enclosure of the Tent of Meeting. ¹⁰It shall not be baked with leaven; I have given it as their portion from My offerings by fire; it is most holy, like the purgation offering and the reparation offering. ¹¹Only the males among Aaron's

בְגַדְיוֹ וְלִבְשׁ בְגָדִים אֶחָדִים וְהוֹצִיא אֹתָהּ
הַדְשֵׁן אֶל־מִחוֹז לְמִחְנָה אֶל־מִקְוָם טָהֹר
⁵ וְהַאֲשָׁר עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ תַּוקְדִּיבָּו לֹא תַכְבֵּה
וּבְעֵר עַלְיהָ הַפְּתֻחָה עַצְוִים בְּבָקָר בְּבָקָר
וּבְעֵר עַלְיהָ הַעֲלָה וְהַקְטִיר עַלְיהָ חָלְבִי
הַשְׁלָמִים: ⁶ אַשׁ תִּמְיד תַּוקְדֵּעַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ
לֹא תַכְבֵּה: ס

⁷ וְזֹאת תֹוֹתֶת הַמִנְחָה הַקָּרְבָּן אֹתָהּ בְנֵי־
אַהֲרֹן לְפָנֵי יְהֹוָה אֶל־פָנֵי הַמִזְבֵּחַ: ⁸ וְהַרְיָם
מִפְנֵנו בְקָמָצֹו מִסְלַת הַמִנְחָה וּמִשְמְנָה וְאֶת־
בְּלַהֲלֵבָה אֲשֶׁר עַל־הַמִנְחָה וְהַקְטִיר
הַמִזְבֵּחַ רִיחַ נִיחַח אַזְבְּרָתָה לְיְהֹוָה:
⁹ וְהַנּוֹתְרָת מִמְנָה יַאֲכִלוּ אַהֲרֹן וּבָנָיו
מִצּוֹת תְאַכֵל בָמִקּוֹם קָדֵש בְחֵצֶר אֲחֶלֶת
מוֹעֵד יַאֲכִלוּה: ¹⁰ לֹא תִאֱפֵה חַמֵץ חַלְקָם
נִתְתִּי אֹתָהּ מִאֲשִׁי קָדֵש קָדְשִׁים הַוָא
בְחַטָאת וּבְאַשְׁם: ¹¹ כָל־זִכְרָב בְבָנֵי אַהֲרֹן

5. The fire on the altar shall be kept burning.

The fire both consumes the offerings and cleanses the altar from any leftover meat.

6. perpetual fire. The priest keeps the sanctuary's fire going. He takes care of the altar in the ways that homemakers—typically women—take care of the home. On the priests as “God's housewives,” see Vayikra, Contemporary Reflection, p. 589.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE MEAL OFFERING (6:7–16)

This section repeats some of the information from Leviticus 2 but adds a few details, namely who can eat the offering and what to do with it when a priest is being ordained. On this type of offering, see Leviticus 2.

7. ritual. Heb. torah; see at 6:2.

10. most holy. This term, also translated “holy of holies,” typically designates the innermost sacred section of the Tabernacle (see Exodus 26:34). The sacred status of food consumed in the Tabernacle highlights the analogy between the Tabernacle and the body (see the introduction to Vayikra, p. 569).

11. Only the males. The translation here restricts eating of this sacrifice to Aaron and his sons. However, if one construes the Hebrew words as “every male” or “all males” (which is how this same translation understands the phrase in 24 out of 27 cases; see, for example, Numbers 1:20), the statement would permit all priests—not only the officiating priests—to partake in the offering. The purpose of the instruction may be to clarify that priests who are otherwise disqualified from officiating in the sacrificial ritual (because of characteristics described descendants may eat of it, as their due for all time throughout the ages from יהוה's offerings by fire. Anything that touches these shall become holy.

¹² spoke to Moses, saying: ¹³This is the offering that Aaron and his sons shall offer to יהוה on the occasion of his anointment: a tenth of an eifah of choice flour as a regular meal offering, half of it in the morning and half of it in the evening, ¹⁴shall be prepared with oil on a griddle. You shall bring it well soaked, and offer it as a meal offering of baked slices, of pleasing odor to יהוה. ¹⁵And so shall the priest, anointed from among his sons to succeed him, prepare it; it is יהוה's—a law for all time—to be turned entirely into smoke. ¹⁶So, too, every meal offering of a priest shall be a whole offering: it shall not be eaten.

¹⁷ spoke to Moses, saying: ¹⁸Speak to Aaron and his sons thus: This is the ritual of the purgation offering: the purgation offering shall be slaughtered before יהוה, at the spot where the burnt offering is slaughtered: it is most holy. ¹⁹The priest who offers in 21:16–23; compare 22:1–7) nonetheless may eat of these portions. See also Another View, p. 608, and at 10:12–14.

Anything that touches these shall become holy. “These” refers to the kodesh kodashim (“most holy”), which in this context means the portion of the offering designated for the priests. This statement conflicts with Haggai 2:12–13, which claims that only impurity, not holiness, is contagious when touched. In either case, the notion of holiness in the Bible can be likened in modern terms to electric energy or radiation, either of which has the power to heal or to kill, depending on how it is handled. Jacob Milgrom uses the analogy of “high voltage” (Leviticus: A Book of Ritual and Ethics, 2004, p. 64). It is also possible that the statement means that a person must be in a state of purity before touching this offering.

12–16. These verses essentially constitute a recipe

יאכלנה חק-עלם לדרתיכם מashi יהוה
כל אשר-יגע בהם יקדש: פ
12 וידבר יהוה אל-משה לאמר: זה
קרבן אהרן ובניו אשר-ינקיבו ליהוה
ביום המשח אותו על-שלחת האפה שלת
מנחה תמיד מחתימה בבקר ומחתימה
בערב: ¹⁴ על-מחבת בשמן תעשה
מרובכת תביאה תפניל מנחת פתים
תקריב ריח-ניחח ליהוה: ¹⁵ והבחן
המשיח תחתיו מבניו יעשה אתה חק
עולם ליהנה כליל תקטר: ¹⁶ וכל-מנחת
פָּהֵן כָּלִיל תְּהִיא לֹא תַּאכְלֶל: פ

17 וידבר יהוה אל-משה לאמר: דבר
אל-אהרן ואל-בניו לאמר זאת תורה
החתאת במקומ אשר תשחט העלה
תשחט החתאת לפנינו יהוה קדש קדשים הוא: ¹⁹ הבחן המחתא אתה יאכלנה

for preparing the grain for the special meal offering on the occasion of a priest’s ordination. The priest offers it on his own behalf.

16. Ordinarily the priest eats the meal offerings; however, at ordination, the priest does not eat this special offering.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE PURGATION OFFERING (6:17–23)

These verses amplify the laws in Leviticus 4 by focusing on the different procedures regarding contact with the offering. They describe which portion of the sacrificial animal belongs to the priest and how priests must handle the dedicated food. While sometimes translated as “sin offering,” this sacrifice aims to cleanse the sanctuary from visible and invisible impurities that contaminate it. See further at Leviticus 4.

it as a purgation offering shall eat of it; it shall be eaten in the sacred precinct, in the enclosure of the Tent of Meeting.²⁰ Anything that touches its flesh shall become holy; and if any of its blood is spattered upon a garment, you shall wash the bespattered part in the sacred precinct.²¹ An earthen vessel in which it was boiled shall be broken; if it was boiled in a copper vessel, [the vessel] shall be scoured and rinsed with water.²² Only the males in the priestly line may eat of it: it is most holy.²³ But no purgation offering may be eaten from which any blood is brought into the Tent of Meeting for expiation in the sanctuary; any such shall be consumed in fire.

7 This is the ritual of the reparation offering; it is most holy.² The reparation offering shall be slaughtered at the spot where the burnt offering is slaughtered, and the blood shall be dashed on all sides of the altar.³ All its fat shall be offered: the broad tail; the fat that covers the entrails;⁴ the two kidneys and the fat that is on them at the loins; and the protuberance on the liver, which shall be removed with the kidneys.⁵ The priest shall turn them into smoke on the altar as an offering by fire

בָּמִקְוֹם קָדֵשׁ תַּאֲכֵל בְּחִזְרָה אֶתְّהָל מוֹעֵד:
²⁰ כֹּל אֲשֶׁר יִגְעַשׂ בְּבָשָׂרָה יִקְדַּשׁ וְאֲשֶׁר יוֹהֵד מִדְמָה עַל־הַבָּגֵד אֲשֶׁר יוֹהֵד עַלְיָה תִּכְבַּסְתָּ בָּמִקְוֹם קָדֵשׁ:²¹ וְכָל־חֶרֶשׁ אֲשֶׁר תִּבְשַׁלְךָ בּוֹ יִשְׁבַּר וְאַס־בְּכָלִי נְחַשֵּׁת בְּשָׁלָה וּמְרוֹק וְשָׁטָף בְּמִים:²² בְּלִזְכָּר בְּפְנֵים יִאֲכֵל אָתָּה קָדֵשׁ קָדְשִׁים הוּא:²³ וְכָל־חַטָּאת אֲשֶׁר יוֹבֵא מִדְמָה אֶל־אֶתְّהָל מוֹעֵד לְכַפֵּר בְּקָדֵשׁ לֹא תִּאֲכֵל בְּאַשׁ תִּשְׁרַף:

וְזֹאת תֹּוֹתֵת הַאֲשָׁם קָדֵשׁ קָדְשִׁים הוּא:
² בָּמִקְוֹם אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁחַטוּ אֶת־הַעַלְלה יִשְׁחַטוּ אֶת־הַאֲשָׁם וְאֶת־ידָמוֹ יִזְרַק עַל־הַמִּזְבֵּחַ סְבִיבָה:³ וְאֶת בְּלִחְלָבוֹ יִקְרַב מִמְּנוֹ אֶת־הַאֱלֹהִים וְאֶת־הַחֶלֶב הַמִּבְסֵה אֶת־הַקָּרְבָּן:⁴ וְאֶת שְׁתִּי הַכְּלִיּוֹת וְאֶת־הַחֶלֶב אֲשֶׁר עַל־יְהוָה אֲשֶׁר עַל־הַכְּסָלִים וְאֶת־הַיְתָרָה עַל־הַכְּבֵד עַל־הַכְּלִילִת יִסְרְנָה:⁵ וְהַקְטִיר אֶתְּם הַכְּהֻן הַמִּזְבֵּחַ אֲשֶׁר לִיהְוָה אֲשָׁם

20. Anything that touches its flesh shall become holy. See at v. II.

21. An earthen vessel...a copper vessel. Vessels in which the meat is prepared must be purified. Since earthenware is porous, it cannot be completely “disinfected” and therefore has to be destroyed; metal vessels, however, can be washed. While these rules may correspond to safety measures intended to remove bacterial contamination, the official basis for these precautions in Leviticus is religious, not medical.

22. Only the males. Or “every male.” See at v. II.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE REPARATION OFFERING (7:1–6)

The instructions about reparation offerings in Leviticus 5 focused in large measure on who needs to bring it, and on the alternate offerings that depend on the circumstances of the transgressor. The present section supplements those earlier instructions by focusing on the priest’s role and on his share of the offering. While sometimes translated as “guilt offering,” this type of sacrifice aims to restore the system to a normative wholeness (see at 5:14–26).

1. ritual. Heb. torah; see at 6:2.

to יהוה; it is a reparation offering.⁶ Only the males in the priestly line may eat of it; it shall be eaten in the sacred precinct: it is most holy.

⁷The reparation offering is like the purgation offering. The same rule applies to both: it shall belong to the priest who makes expiation thereby.⁸ So, too, the priest who offers a person's burnt offering shall keep the skin of the burnt offering that was offered.⁹ Further, any meal offering that is baked in an oven, and any that is prepared in a pan or on a griddle, shall belong to the priest who offers it.¹⁰ But every other meal offering, with oil mixed in or dry, shall go to the sons of Aaron all alike.

¹¹This is the ritual of the sacrifice of well-being that one may offer to יהוה:

¹²One who offers it for thanksgiving shall offer, together with the sacrifice of thanksgiving, unleavened cakes with oil mixed in—unleavened wafers

6. most holy. Heb. kodesh kodashim, which also means “holy of holies”; see at 6:10.

CONCLUDING INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE PRECEDING OFFERINGS (7:7–10)

This section completes the earlier discussion of these sacrifices by designating explicitly what the priests are to receive in these cases. The officiating priest is to receive the benefit from both purgation and reparation offerings (7:7). The animal's skin goes to the officiating priest in the case of the burnt offering (7:8). Presumably that skin would be made into leather used for clothing, footwear, and possibly writing material. One type of meal offering goes only to the officiating priest (7:9), whereas the other kind (7:10) goes to all priests. For more about these sacrifices, see Leviticus 1–5.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE WELL-BEING SACRIFICE (7:11–21)

Leviticus 3 described the sacrifice of well-being הוּא: ⁶ כָל־זִכְרָבֶןְיָם יַאֲכִלֵנוּ בָמָקוֹם קָדוֹשׁ יַאֲכִל קָדְשָׁקְרָשִׁים הוּא:

⁷ בְּחַטָאת בְּאָשָׁם תֹרַה אַחֲת לְהֵם הַפְּנֵן אֲשֶׁר יַכְפְּרֵבּוּ לוּ יְהִיָה: ⁸ וְהַפְּנֵן הַמְּקֹרֵיב אֶת־עַלְתָא אִישׁ עֹור הַעַלְלָה אֲשֶׁר הַקְרִיב לְפָנָן לוּ יְהִיָה: ⁹ וּכְלִמְנְחָה אֲשֶׁר תָאַפֵּה בְתֻנוֹר וּכְלִנְעָשָׂה בְמְרַחַשָת וּלְמַחְבָת לְפָנָן הַמְּקֹרֵיב אַתָה לוּ תְהִיָה: ¹⁰ וּכְלִמְנְחָה בְלוֹלָה־בְשָׂמְן וּחֲרֵבָה לְכָל־בְּנֵי אַהֲרֹן תְהִיָה אִישׁ בְּאַחֲיוֹ: פ

¹¹ וְזֹאת תֹרַת זְבַח הַשְׁלָמִים אֲשֶׁר יַקְרִיב לְיְהֹוָה:

¹² אִם עַל־תּוֹדָה יַקְרִיבָנוּ וְהַקְרִיב | עַל־זִבְחַת הַתֹּוֹדָה חֲלוֹת מַצּוֹת בְלוֹלָת בְשָׂמְן וּרְקִיקִי in great detail, focusing on the types of animal to be offered. This section supplements those instructions by discussing the occasions and different types of well-being sacrifices, as well as the manner in which they are to be distributed and eaten. Well-being offerings include thanksgiving offerings, votive offerings, and freewill offerings. The Bible elsewhere presumes that women are among those who bring these types of offerings (Numbers 30:4; I Samuel 1:3–4, 21, 24–28; Proverbs 7:14.)

11. ritual. Heb. torah; see at 6:2.

12. thanksgiving. Heb. todah (“thanks”) designates the first type of well-being sacrifice. Whereas Leviticus 3 described the procedures regarding the sacrificial meat, this section describes the grain portion that accompanies the eating of the sacrifice.

unleavened wafers. Heb. challot matzot, combining the terms for two types of “breads”: the challah and the matzah. (Subsequently, both terms come to be associated specifically with rituals for the Jewish home: matzah for Passover, and challah for Shabbat.) Women in the ancient world were the ones typically responsible for household baking. In spread with oil—and cakes of choice flour with oil mixed in, well soaked.¹³ This offering, with cakes of leavened bread added, shall be offered along with one's thanksgiving sacrifice of well-being.¹⁴ Out of this the person shall offer one of each kind as a gift to יהוה; it shall go to the priest who dashes the blood of the offering of well-being.¹⁵ And the flesh of the thanksgiving sacrifice of well-being shall be eaten on the day that it is offered; none of it shall be set aside until morning.

¹⁶If, however, the sacrifice offered is a votive or a freewill offering, it shall be eaten on the day that one offers the sacrifice, and what is left of it shall be eaten on the morrow.¹⁷ What is then left of the flesh of the sacrifice shall be consumed in fire on the third day.¹⁸ If any of the flesh of the sacrifice of well-being is eaten on the third day, it shall not be acceptable; it shall not count for the one who offered it. It is an offensive thing, and the person who eats of it shall bear the guilt.

¹⁹Flesh that touches anything impure shall not be eaten; it shall be consumed in fire. As for other

מְצֻוֹת מִשְׁחִים בְּשָׂמֵן וּסְלַת מִרְבֶּכֶת חִלְתָּה בְּלֹלוֹת בְּשָׂמֵן: ¹³ עַל-חֲלֹת לְחֵם חִמֵּץ יִקְרַב קְרָבָנוּ עַל-זָבֵחׇ תֹּודַת שְׁלָמִיו: ¹⁴ וְהַקְרִיב מִפְנֵיו אֶחָד מִפְלָקְרָבָן תְּרוּמָה לִיהְוָה לְכָהֵן הַלְּרָק אֶתְדִּים הַשְּׁלָמִים לְזִיהְיָה: ¹⁵ וּבְשָׂרֵזֶבֶחׇ תֹּודַת שְׁלָמִיו בַּיּוֹם קְרָבָנוּ יִאֱכָל לְאִינִיחַ מִפְנֵו עַד-בָּקָר: ¹⁶ וְאַס-נְגָר | אָוֹ נְדָבָה זָבֵחׇ קְרָבָנוּ בַּיּוֹם הַקְרִיבּוּ אֶת-זָבֵחׇ יִאֱכָל וּמִמְּחֹרֶת וְהַנּוּתֶר מִפְנֵן יִאֱכָל: ¹⁷ וְהַנּוּתֶר מִבְשָׂר הַזָּבֵחׇ בַּיּוֹט הַשְּׁלִישִׁי בְּאַשׁ יִשְׁרָף: ¹⁸ וְאִם הַאֱכָל יִאֱכָל מִבְשָׂר-זָבֵחׇ שְׁלָמִיו בַּיּוֹם הַשְּׁלִישִׁי לֹא יִרְצָחַ הַמִּקְרִיב אֶתְוֹ לֹא יִחְשָׁב לֹא פָגֹל יִהְיָה וְהַנּוּתֶר הַאֱכָלת מִפְנֵן עֲוֹנָה תְּשָׁא: ¹⁹ וְהַבָּשָׂר אֲשֶׁר-יִגְעַז בְּכָל-טָמֵא לֹא יִאֱכָל בְּאַשׁ יִשְׁרָף וְהַבָּשָׂר בְּלִטְחוֹר יִאֱכָל

Genesis 18:6–7 Abraham instructs Sarah to bake cakes for the unexpected guests while a male servant prepares meat. Jeremiah 7:18 condemns women for kneading dough to make cakes for the worship of the “Queen of Heaven,” whom they presumably viewed as the female consort of Israel’s (male) God. See at Exodus 16:3 and 25:30 and at Leviticus 26:26 for more details about women and baking.

13. cakes. Heb. challot, the plural form of challah; in the Bible, this term does not refer to the braided bread associated with today’s use of this term.

